The Word is also taken for a Client or Vassal, especially one that holds his Lands by serving his Lord on Horseback: But it is now become a Title of Honour, bestow'd by the King on Persons whom for their eminent Worth or Valour, he thinks fit to single out from the ordinary sort of Gentlemen; and to raise them to a higher Degree of Dignity. Of Knights there are many sorts, but the most usual amongst us are these, viz.

Knights Bachelors, the lowest, but most ancient Order of Knighthood, deriv'd from the Germans; amongst whom it was an old Custom, That as soon as the State judg'd any of their young Men fit to manage Arms, and to undertake Martial Enterprizes, then in a full Assembly or Council, either one of the Princes, or the Father, or some other Relations of the young Man, furnish'd him with a Shield and Javelin, as the Romans us'd to give the Virile Gown to those whom they thought capable of Publick Employment; so that thenceforth from part of a Private House, he was accounted a Member of the Commonwealth. It was also an ancient Ceremony to honour Men with the Girdle of Knighthood, which he who receiv'd was solemnly to go to Church, and offering his Sword upon the Altar, to vow himself to the Service of God: Afterwards it became customary for Kings to send their Sons to the Neighbouring Princes, to receive Knighthood at their Hands. In Process of Time, besides the Sword and Girdle, gilt Spurs were also added for greater Ornament; whence in Latin they are styl'd Equites Aurati. The Word Bachelors some derive from the French Bas Chevaliers, as it were Knights of the lowest Degree; and others from Battailer, to combat or fight: They are also call'd Knights simply, without any other Addition.

Knight Banneret, from the Dutch Word Bannether, i. e. Lord or Master of the Banner, is a Knight made in the Field, with the Ceremony of cutting off the Point of his Standard, and making it as it were a Banner. These Knights are allow'd to display their Arms in the King's Army; and such as are created under the Standard, by the King personally present, take Place of Baronets. This Dignity was conferr'd at first by the Kings of England and France, on such Gentlemen as signaliz'd their Valour in two Royal Battels, or such as had Ten Vassals, and Means to maintain a Troop of Horse at their own Charge. Some say the first Original of it was from King Edward III.

Knight Baronet, a Combination of Title in regard the Baronetship is generally accompany'd with that of the Knighthood; but the latter was made a distinct Order by K. James I. who for certain Disbursements towards the Plantation in Ulster, advanc'd several Persons to this Dignity, and made it Hereditary by his Letters-Patents. These Baronets were to have Precedency in all Writings, Sessions and Salutations, before all ordinary Knights Banneret, Knights of the Bath, and Knights Batchelors.

Knights of the Bath, an Order of Knights made within the Lifts of the Bath, and girded with a Sword in the Ceremonies of their Creation: These Knights were oblig'd to bath themselves the Night before, and observ'd several Religious Rites which usually belong to Hermits, and other Holy Orders. They take Place of Knights Batchelors, but come after Baronets.

Knights of the Carpet, are another Sort of Knights made out of the Field, and so call'd, because in receiving their Order, they commonly kneel upon a Carpet.

Knights of the Chamber, such Knights Batchelors as are made in Time of Peace, being usually Knighthood in the King's or Queen's Chamber, and not in the Field of Battel.

Knights of the Garter, or of St. George, an Order of Knighthood established by K. Edward III. as some say, upon Occasion of good Success in a Skirmish, wherein the King's Garter was us'd for a Token. Others affirm, That the King after many great Victories, dancing one Night with the Queen and other Ladies, took up a Garter that happen'd to fall from one of them; whereat some of the Lords smiling, the King said, That e'er long he would make that Garter be of high Reputation; and accordingly he founded this noble Order, giving them a Blue Garter decked with Gold, Pearl, and precious Stones, and a Buckle of Gold to be worn on the Left Leg only, with a Kittle, Crown, Cloak, Chaperon, Collar, and other magnificent Apparel: Afterwards King Charles I. for a farther Ornament, enjoind all the Companions of the Order, to wear on the Left Side of their upper Garment the Cross of England, incircled with the Garter and Motto, from whence round about are cast Beams of Silver, like the Rays of the Sun in full Lustre.

Line, Part of a Writing: also the Twelfth Part of an Inch; also the Flax Plant. In Geometry, it is a Quantity stretch'd out in Length, but suppos'd to be void of Breadth and Depth, being made by the Motion of a Point from one Place to another.

Right Line or Straight Line, is a Line whose Points are equally plac'd between the two Extremes, or Ends, or it is the nearest Distance between any two Points.

Crooked Line or Curve, is a Line, the Points of which are not equally plac'd between its two Extremes.

Line of Measures, (according to Mr. Oughtred) is the Diameter of the Primitive or Original Circle in the Projection of the Sphere in Plano, or that Line in which the Diameter of any Circle to be projected, does fall.

Line of Numbers or Gunter's Line, so call'd from its Inventor, is usually plac'd on a Ruler, or on the Back of a Sector, which running parallel with it, shews the Artificial Lines; as they are commonly call'd.

In the Art of War, Lines signify the Posture of an Army drawn up for Battel, so as its Front may be stretch'd out as far as the Ground will allow, to prevent its being Flanked: These Lines are three in Number, viz. 1. The Van, or advanc'd Guards; 2. The Main Body; 3. The Rear-Guard, or Reserve.

In Astronomy, according to the Ptolemaick System, the Line of the Anomaly of a Planet, is a Right-Line drawn from the Center of the Excentrick, to the Center of the Planet.

Line of the Apogee of a Planet, is a Right-Line drawn from the Center of the World thro' the Point of the Apogee, as far as the Zodiack of the Primum Mobile.

Line of the Apsis, is a Line passing thro' the Center of the World, and that of the Excentrick; whose two Ends are, one the Apogee, and the other the Perigee of the Planet.

Line Horizontal, is a Right-Line parallel to the Horizon.

Line of greatest or least Longitude of a Planet, is that Part of the Line of the Apsis, which reaches from the Center of the World, to the Apogee or Perigee of the Planet.

Line of Mean Longitude, is one drawn thro' the Center of the World at Right Angles to the Line of the Apsis, and its extreme Points are call'd the Mean Longitudes.

Line of Mean Motion of the Sun, is a Right-Line drawn from the Center of the World as far as to the Zodiack of the Primum Mobile.

Line of Mean Motion of the Sun in the Excentrick, is a Right-Line drawn from the Center of the Excentrick to the Center of the Sun, and parallel to the former.

Line of Real Motion of the Sun, is a Line drawn from the Center of the World to the Center of the Sun, and produced or lengthen'd as far as the Zodiack of the Primum Mobile.

Line of the Nodes of a Planet, is a Right-Line from the Planet of the Sun, being the common Place of Intersection of the Plane of the Planet's Orbit, with that of the Ecliptick.

Line Synodical, (with respect to some Appearances of the Moon) is a Right-Line suppos'd to be drawn thro' the Centers of the Earth and Sun.

Line of the mean Syzygies, is a Right-Line imagin'd to pass thro' the Earth's Center, and the mean Place of the Sun.

Line of the Mean or True Syzygies, a Right-Line said to be drawn thro' the Center of the Earth, and the real Place of the Sun.

In Dialling, the Equinoctial Line is the common Place where the Equinoctial, and the Plane of the Dial, mutually intersect, or cut one another.

Lines Hourly or Hour-Lines, are the common Intersections of the Hour-Circles of the Sphere, with the Dial-Plane.

Line Horizontal, is the common Intersection of the Horizon, and the Dial-Plane.

Line Subsistat, is that Line on which the Style or Cock of the Dial is set up, and represents such an Hour-circle as is perpendicular to the Plane of that Dial.

In Fortification, a Line is that which is drawn from one Point to another, in making a Plan or Draught upon Paper, or on the Ground in the Field, it is sometimes taken for a Trench with a Breast-work; and sometimes for a Row of Gabions, or Bags full of Earth, set out in length, to cover Men from the Enemies Fire.

Lines of Approach or of Attack, are the Ways of Trenches dug along in the Earth, towards a Town that is besieged, in order to gain the Moat and the Body of the Place.

Line of the Wall, is a Right-Line which joins the Points of the two nearest Bastions.

Line Capital, a Line drawn from the Angle of the Gorge, to the Angle of the Bastion.

Line of Circumballation, a Line or Trench, with a Parapet or Breast-work made by the Besiegers, quite round their Camp, within Cannon-shot of the Place, to oppose any Army that may come to relieve it, and to stop Deserters.

Line Cogital, a Line drawn from the Angle of the Center, to that of the Bastion.

Lines of Communication, are those that run from one Work to another: But the Line of Communication more especially so call'd, is a continued Trench with which a Circumvallation, or Contravallation, is compass'd, so as to maintain a Communication with all its Forts, Redoubts, and other Works.

Line of Contravallation, is a Trench with a Breast-work, which the Besiegers make next the Place besieged, to secure themselves against the Sallies of the Garrison; so that an Army that forms a Siege, lies between the Lines of Circumvallation and Contravallation.

Line of Defense, a straight Line which shews the Course of a Bullet, especially a Musket-ball, according to the Situation it ought to have, to defend the Face of the Bastion.

Line of Defense Fichant or Fired, is a Line drawn from the Angle of the Courtin, to the flanked Angle of the opposite Bastion, nevertheless without touching the Face of the Bastion.

Line of Defense Razant, is that which is drawn from the point of the Bastion along the Face, till it comes to the Courtin, which shews how much of the Courtin will clear or scour the Face: It is also call'd, The Line of Defense Stringant or Flanking.

Line forming the Flank, a Line drawn from the Angle made by the two Demi-Gorges of the Bastion, to the Angle at the Flank.

Lines within Siege, are the Moats or Trenches cut towards the Place besieged, to prevent Sallies.

Lines

Lines without Side, are Trenches towards the Field, to hinder the bringing of Succours to the Besieged.

In Perspective, Line of the Front, is any Right-Line parallel to a Terrestrial Line.

Line Geometrical, is a Right-Line drawn after any Manner, on the Geometrical Plane.

Line Horizontal, is the common Section of the Horizontal Plane, and that of the Draught or Representation; which also passes thro' the principal Point.

Line of Incidence, (in Catoptricks) a Ray starting from some luminous or light Body, and ending in a Point of some Surface, the Knowledge of which is chiefly necessary, for finding out the Greatness and Continuance of an Eclipse.

Line Objective, (in Perspect.) is the Line of an Object; from whence the Appearance is sought for in the Draught or Picture.

Line of Station, the common Section of the Vertical and Geometrical Planes; Others mean by it, the perpendicular Height of the Eye above the Geometrical Plane: Other take it for a Line drawn on that Plane, and perpendicular to the Line that expresses the Height of the Eye.

Line Terrestrial, is a Right-line in which the Geometrical Place, and that of the Picture or Draught, intersect or cut one another.

Line Vertical, is the common Intersection of the Vertical Plane, and of the Draught.

In Philosophy, Line of Direction of a Body in Motion, is that Line according to which it moves or which directs and determines its Motion.

Line of Gravitation of an heavy Body, is a Line drawn thro' its Center of Gravity, and according to which it tends downward.

Line. See Cordeau.

To Line, to put a Lining to: In Masonry, to Case a Wall, &c. with Stone. In Fortification, to surround and strengthen a Rampart, Breast-work, or Moat, with a good Wall, or good Turf.

To Line Hedges, (in the Art of War) to plant Musketeers along them under their Covert, in order to fire upon an Enemy that comes open, or to defend themselves from the Horse.

Mastura Terra, a Quantity of Ground, containing about four Oxgangs; which see.

Mat. See Mats.

Matashin, or Matashin, a kind of antick French Dance.

Match, an Agreement for several Persons to meet; a Party to be marry'd; an Equal: Among Hunters, a Wolf at Rutting-time, is said To go to Match, or to Mate.

In Military Affairs, Match is a sort of Rope made on purpose, which being once lighted at the end, burns on by degrees and regularly, without ever going out, as long as any of it is left. It is us'd for the firing firing of Matchlock Muskets, and all Sorts of great Guns; for setting Fire to the Trains of Mines, &c.

To Match, to be like, to pair, or couple; to marry.

Matchable, that may be matched, or equalized.

Matchless, that has not his Match; incomparable, excellent.

Mate, a Companion or Assistant; a Word much in Use among Seamen; as The Master's Mate, the Surgeon's Mate, &c.

Mate or Check-mate, (at Chess-play) is when the Game is brought to that pass, that there is no way left for the King to escape.

To Mate, (Sax.) to amaze or astonish, to daunt, dash, or put out of Countenance; to match, or equal.

Mater, (Lat.) a Mother, a Woman that has brought forth a Child: Also the same as Matrix, the Mother or Womb.

Mater Dura, or Peniny Crassa, (in Anat.) a Membrane or Skin, that sticks close to the Scull on the in side in some Places, and mediately covers the Brain, and the Cerebellum, or lesser Brain; having Four Cavities, or hollow Parts, which supply the Place of Veins.

Mater Perlarum, Mother of Pearl. See Margaritifera Concha.

Mater Pia or Peniny Tenuis, a Skin which immediately cloaths the Brain and Cerebellum. It is extremely full of Blood-Vessels; and design'd, as some think, to keep in the Spirits there bred, and to prevent their flying away. These Skins are call'd Matres, i. e. Mothers, by the Arabians, as if all the other Membranes of the Body took their Rise from, or were propagated by them.

Mater Metallorum, (i. e. the Mother of Metals) a Term us'd by Chymists for Quicksilver.

Materia Medica, whatever is us'd in the Art of Physick, for the preventing or curing of Diseases; whether prepar'd for Plants, Living-Creatures, Minerals, &c. according to the Galenical or Chymical Method.

Material, consisting of Matter or Substance; also being of some Weight or Concern; principal, main.

Materials, Tools, or Stuff proper for Workmanship.

Materiality, a being material, the Subsistence of Matter.

Maternal, belonging to a Mother, motherly; as Maternal Tenderness, maternal Care, &c.

Maternity, Motherhood, the Quality of a Mother.

Math. See After-math.

Mathematical, (Gr.) belonging to the Mathematicks.

Mathematical Composition. See Composition Mathematical.

Mathematical Horizon, the same with the True Horizon. See Horizon.

Mathematician, one that is skill'd in the Mathematical Arts.

Mathematicks, originally signifies any kind of Discipline or Learning; but the Word is now generally taken for certain noble Sciences, taught by true Demonstration, and exercis'd about Quantity, i. e. whatever is capable of being number'd or measur'd, which is compris'd under Numbers, Lines, Superficies, and Solids: These Sciences are distinguish'd into Pure and Mixt, Speculative and Practical.

Pure or Simple Mathematicks, are Arithmetick and Geometry; which only treat of Number and Magnitude, consider'd abstractedly from all kind of Matter; to these also may be refer'd mechanical Motion, likewise consider'd separately, and as capable of different Degrees of Swiftnes.

Mixt Mathematicks, are those Arts and Sciences which treat of the Properties of Quantity, apply'd to material Beings, or sensible Objects; as Astrono- my, Geography, Navigation, Dialling, Surveying, Gauging, &c.

Speculative Mathematicks; only imply the simple Idea or Knowledge of the Matters propos'd, with the bare Contemplation of Truth or Falthood, with respect to them.

Practical Mathematicks, shew how to demonstrate something useful, or to perform somewhat propos'd that may tend to the Benefit and Advantage of Mankind.

Mathildis. See Mand.

Mathurius, a religious Order founded by Pope Innocent III. for the Redemption of Christian Captives out of Turkish Slavery.

Matracium, (Lat. in Chymistry) a little Bag, in which is put calcined Tartar, and the like; having Holes prick'd in it here and there, to let out the Liquor.

Matrass or Bolt-head, a long straight-necked Glass-vessel, often us'd by Chymists in Distillations; which when fitted to the Nose of an Alembick, or Still, is call'd, a Receiver; and when one of these is by its Neck well luted, or join'd to the Neck of another, they term it a Double-Vessel.

Matricaria, (Lat.) Medicines proper for Diseases of the Matrix, or Womb.

Matricaria, Mother-wort, White-wort, or Feverfew; an Herb much us'd in those Diseases; a Decoction of it drives out the After-birth, cures Mother-fits, Fevers, &c.

Matrice or Matrit, the Mother, or Womb.

Matrices, certain Moulds or Forms, in which Printing-Letters, or Characters, are cast by the Letter-founder.

Matricide, the Murderer of his Mother; or the Act of him that kills his Mother.

Matricula, (Lat.) a Register, Roll, or List, in which the Names of Persons are enter'd: In the ancient Church, there was Matricula Clericorum, i. e. a List, or Catalogue of the Officiating Clergy; and Matricula Pauperum, which was an Account of the Poor to be relieved.

Matricular, belonging to such a Register; as A matricular Book, i. e. a Book, in which the Names of young Scholars newly admitted into the University, are usually enter'd.

To Matriculate, to set down in the Matricular Book.

Matriculation, the Act of Matriculating, or Registering the Names of Students in a College.

Matrimonial, belonging to Matrimony; as matrimonial Articles, the matrimonial Vow, &c.

Matrimony, Wedlock, Marriage.

Matrit, the Matrice or Mother; that part of the Womb, where the Child is conceiv'd: Also the Pith in Trees or Herbs; the same that Herbalists otherwise call Cor; which see.

Paulette, (Fr.) a kind of Mavis, or Thrush; a Bird.

Pauroworms, certain Worms in a Horse's Body, being of a reddish Colour like Earth-Worms, and about the Length of one's Finger.

Pawkish, sick at Stomach, squeamish.

Pawks, as A great Mawk, i. e. a dirty nasty Slut.

Parilla Superior, (Lat. in Anat.) the upper Cheek-bone or Jaw-bone, consisting of Twelve Bones, Six on each Side; whereto some add a Thirteenth call'd Vomer; which see.

Parilla Inferior, the Lower Jawbone, which is moveable, and wherein the Under Teeth are set.

Parillar or Parillary, belonging to the Jawbone.

Parim, (in any Art or Science) is a Proposition or Principle generally received, grounded upon Reason, and not to be denied, which is also call'd an Axiom: Maxims in Law, are Conclusions of Reason, and universal Propositions, so perfect and sure, that they may not be oppos'd or disput'd.

Parimilian, the Name of Two Emperors of Germany, compounded of those Two famous Roman Generals, viz. Q. Fabius Maximus, and Scipio Aemilianus.

Parimis & Minimis or Methodus de Parimis & Minimis, that Method which Mathematicians make use of for the resolving of a Problem, which require the greatest or least Quantity attainable in that Case.

May, the Fifth and most pleasant Month of the Year, so call'd by Romulus, in respect of his Senators and Noblemen, stiled Majores; [as the following Month was nam'd June, in Honour of the Juniores, who serv'd him in the Wars: Others will have its Name deriv'd from Maia, the Mother of Mercury, to whom Sacrifices were offer'd in that Month.]

May-bug, a kind of Insect.

May-bush, an Herb.

May-fly, an Insect so call'd, because it is bred in the Month of May of the Water-cricket, which creeping out of the River, turns to a Fly: It usually lies under Stones near the Banks, and is a good Bait for some Sort of Fish.

May-games, certain Sports on the first Day of May, which took rise from a like Custom among the ancient Romans, who perform'd them in Honour of Maia or Flora, the Goddess of Flowers.

May

May-Lilly, or Lirioconcy, a Flower. See Lilium Convallium.

May-weed, an Herb like Camomile, but of a stinking Smell, and ulcerating Quality; but that without Scent, and with a double Flower, is counted a Rarity.

Mayhem. See Maibem.

To May Hawk, (in Falconry) to pinnion their Wings.

Mayor, the Chief Magistrate of a City, or Corporation; the same as Meyr among the ancient Britains, deriv'd from the British Word Miret, which signifies, To keep and preserve, and not from the Latin Major, i. e. Greater. King Richard I. chang'd the Bailiff of London into a Mayor.

Meager, (Fr.) lean, poor in Flesh, thin, scraggy, mere Skin and Bone: Figuratively a Style or Subject is said to be meager, i. e. barren or dry.

Meak, an Instrument to mow or hack Pease, Brake, &c.

Meal-rents, certain Rents heretofore given in Meal to make Food for the Lord's Hounds, by some Tenants in the Honour of Clun, which are still so call'd, altho' now paid in Money.

Meals, or Males, the Shelves or Banks of Sand on the Sea-coasts of Norfolk: Whence Ingon-meals, the Name of a Sandy Shore in Lincolnshire.

Mealy-mouthed, that is afraid to declare his Mind; over-bashful.

Mealy-Tree, or Wild-Tine, a sort of Plant.

Mean, low, poor, pitiful, indifferent.

Mean, the middle between two Extremes, either in Time or Dignity. In a Law-sense, the Interim, or middle Time; as his Action was mean betwixt the Disseisin made to him and his Recovery. There is also a Lord Mean or Mesne. See Mesne.

Mean, or Mean Part, (in Musick) is the Tenor, or middle Part.

Mean Axis, a Term in Opticks. See Axis.

Mean Diameter, (in Gauging) is a Geometrical

Mean between the Diameters at Head and Bung, in any Close Cask.

Mean and Extreme Proportion. See Extreme and Mean Proportion.

Mean Motion, or Mean Longitude of the Sun; (in Astron.) according to the Ptolemaick System, is an Arch of the Ecliptick, reckon'd from the Beginning of Aries to the Line of the Sun's mean Motion; which see.

Mean Proportional, (in Geom.) when in three Quantities there is the same Proportion of the First to the Second, as of that Second to a Third; the Second is call'd a Mean Proportional; as in 2, 4, 8, there is the same Proportion of 2 to 4, as of 4 to 8; and 4 is the Mean Proportional. In Arithmetick Musick, the Second of any three Proportionals is termed the Mean.

To Mean, to intend or resolve, to design or purpose, to signify, to understand.

Means, Methods, Ways, or Devices, which one endeavours to attain an End or do a Thing: Also the Wealth or Estate that any Man is possess'd of.

Continual Means, (in Arithmet.) when one Root or first Number is multiply'd by it self, and the following Numbers likewise by themselves, the Numbers taken between 1 and the Number last produc'd, are call'd Continual Means. Thus 2 being given for the Root, and multiplied by it self, has 4 for the Product; which being again multiply'd by it self, produces 16, and 16 in like manner squared, produces 256: In this Case, 2, 4, and 16, are continual Means between 1 and 256.

Meer, a Balk or Furrow in a Field, to part one Man's Land from another; also a marshy Ground. See Meer.

Meer-stones, Stones set up for Land-Marks, or Boundaries in open Fields.

Mearl, a Black-bird.

Mease, (a Law-Term) a Messuage or Dwelling-House; in some Places corruptly call'd a Mise or Mis-place.

Mease, or Mese, a Measure of Herrings, containing Five Hundred.

Measles. See Meazles.

Meason-due, (i. e. House of God) a Word us'd in several Statutes for a Monastery, Religious House, or Hospital.

Measurable, that may be measured, moderate.

Measure, that which serves to make known the Greatness, Extent, and Quantity of any Thing. In Arithmetick and Geometry, it is said of a certain Number or Quantity, which being several times repeated, equals another bigger to which it has Relation; as 4 is the Measure of 20 taken five times.

In Philosophy, Time is the Measure of Motion; but in Mechanicks, Motion is the Measure of Time: In Musick, Measure is a Space of Time, set out by a constant equal Motion of the Hand or Foot, down and up successively; which is sometimes swifter, sometimes slower, according to the Nature of the Musick.

Measure-note, Master-note, or Time-note, the Semibreve, a Musical Note, so call'd, because it is of a certain determinate Measure, or Length of Time by it self; and all the other Notes are measur'd by, or adjusted to its Value.

Measure of Time, (in Astron.) a Matter much to be regarded in handling Nativities, that when the Artist has a Direction, he may know how long it will be before it operates; for the computing of which Space of Time there are different Methods laid down, and Tables made by several Authors, who treat of that Subject.

Measurer of Cloth. See Alnager.

Measures, Ways, Means, Purposes, or Designs; as, He broke all my Measures.

Measuring

Measuring Money, a certain Duty formerly laid upon Cloth, besides Alnage.

Meath, as, I give you Meath of the buying, i. e. full Power to buy; a Phrase us'd in Lincolnshire.

Meatus, (Lat.) a Movement, or Course; a Passage, or Way; also the Pores of the Body.

Meatus Auditorius, (in Anat.) the Auditory Passage, which begins from the Hollow, and winds toward the inner Part of the Ear, being cloath'd with a thin Skin, as far as the Brim of the Tympanum, or Drum.

Meatus Urinarius, the Urinary Passage, by which the Urine is convey'd from the Bladder.

Meazled, full of Meazles, Spots, or Blotches.

Meazles, or Measles, a Disease somewhat like the Small-Pox, sometimes occasioned in Children by the Foulness of the Mother's Blood.

Mecca, the chief City of Arabia Felix, noted for the Sepulchre of the false Prophet Mahomet.

Mechanical, or Mechanick, belonging to the Mechanicks: Also pitiful, base, mean; in regard that the Mechanick Arts or Handicrafts are inferior to the Liberal and more Noble Sciences.

Mechanical Philosophy, the same as the Corpufcular, which explains the Phenomena or Appearances of Nature, from Mechanical Principles, i. e. from the Motion, Rest, Figure, Size, &c. of the small Particles of Matter: And these Principles are often call'd Mechanical Causes, and Mechanical Affections of Matter.

Mechanical Solution of a Problem, (in Mathem.) is either when the Proposition or Question is resolv'd by repeated Trials, or when the Lines made use of to that Purpose, are not truly Geometrical.

Mechanick Powers, or Principles, are commonly reckon'd Six, viz. the Balance, the Leaver, the Pulleys, the Screw, the Wedge, and the Wheel; to some of which the Force of all Mechanick Inventions must be reduc'd.

A Mechanick, a Handycrafts-man, or Tradesman.

The Mechanicks, the Science of Motion, or that Part of the Mathematicks, which shews the Effects of Powers, or moving Forces, and applies them to Machines or Engines, demonstrating the Laws of Motion, &c. 'Tis also commonly taken for those Handy-crafts, in which the Labour of the Hands is requisite, as well as the Study of the Brain.

Mechoacan, an Indian Root like Jalap, but white in Colour, and of great Efficacy in the Dropsy; for it draws away Water and Phlegm, and also strengthens the Liver, and other inward Parts.

Mecenas, a Roman Knight, descended from the Kings of Etruria, and Favourite of the Emperor Augustus. He was the Patron of the Learned Men of his Time, and had a singular Kindness for Virgil and Horace: Whence all Benefactors to Learning, and Friends to Scholars, are at this Day call'd Mecenas's.

Mecon, (Gr.) Poppey, a Flower, of which the Powder, the distilled Water, the Conserve, and especially the Syrup, are much us'd in Physick.

Meconis, a kind of Lettice.

Meconitis, a precious Stone, like Poppey.

Meconium, an Opiate, or the thicken'd Juice of Poppeys. Also the Ordure of a young Child, which sticks to the Entrails after the Birth, so call'd from its Colour, resembling that of Poppy-juice.

Meconologia, a Discourse, Description, or Treatise of Poppey.

Medal, a Piece of Metal like Money, stamp'd upon some extraordinary Occasion, to preserve the Memory of some Illustrious Person, or of some notable Victory, or other Publick Benefit to a Nation.

Medallion, a large Medal.

Medica, (Lat.) a Medicine, or Remedy; a Cure, or Method of curing.

Medera, (in old Records) a Mead-House, or Place where Mead or Metheglin was made.

Medewife, (Sax.) a Woman of Merit, or Worth: Whence our Word Midwife.

Medfer, a Bribe, or Reward; also Compensation given in Exchange, where the things exchanged are not of equal Value.

Medial Allegation. See Allegation Medial.

Median Vein, (in Anat.) the middle Vein in the bending of the Elbow, betwixt the Cephalick and Basilick; which may be safely open'd, because there is neither Nerve nor Artery under it.

Mediastina, (Lat.) a Branch of the Subavian Vein, which usually arising from the Trunk of the Cava, or great hollow Vein, goes to the Mediastinum, and Thymus.

Mediastinum, the double Skin, or folding of the Pleura, which proceeds from the Vertebra's, or Turning-joints of the Back, and divides the whole Breast from the Throat to the Midriff into two hollow Bosoms.

To Mediate, to procure by one's Means; as, To mediate a Peace.

Mediation, an interceding, making Suit, or intertreat in any one's Behalf. In Arithmetick, Division by 2, or taking the half of any Number or Quantity; it is otherwise call'd Bipartition and Bissection, with respect to Lines.

Mediator, a Manager between two Parties, an Intercessor; one that endeavours to reconcile Persons at Variance, or undertakes Business betwixt them.

Mediators of Questions, six Persons empower'd by Stat. 2. Ann. 27. E. 3. who upon any Question or Debate risen among Merchants, about any unmarketable Wooll, or undue Packing, were to settle the same before the Mayor and Officers of the Staple.

Mediatry, a Woman that mediates.

Medica, (Lat.) the Pomecitton-tree: Also a kind of Clover-grass, very good for Cattel, which being once sown, lasts Ten Years; Spanish Trefoil, or three-leaved Grass of Spain.

Medicable, that may be healed, or cured.

Medicament, a Medicine or Physical Composition, whereby Diseases are subdu'd, and Health restor'd.

Medicamentum, the same as Medicinal.

Medicaster, a peddling Physician; a Quack.

Medicated, as Medicated Meats or Drinks, i. e. such as have medicinal Ingredients mingled with them.

Medicina, (Lat.) Physick; an Art, according to Galen, to preserve present Health, and restore that which is lost; or, as Hippocrates defines it, an adding of that which is wanting, and a taking away what is superfluous.

Medicinal, or Medicinal, belonging to Physick; Physical.

Medicinal Days. See Critical Days, & Vacui Dies.

In Navigulion, Point is the 2d part of the Mariner's Compass, containing 11 Degrees, 15 Minutes; the half of which, viz. 5 Degr. 38 Min. is call'd a Half-point; and the half of this last, being 2 Degr. 49 Min. is termed a Quarter-point: So that sailing by the Compass, is sailing upon a Point.

The Sea-men also call the utmost End of any Cape, or Head-land, running out into the Sea, a Point; and when tis said, Two Points are one in another, the meaning is, they are just so in a right Line one against another, that the Innermost is hinder'd from being seen by the Outermost.

Point of Concourse, (In Opticks) is that Point where the visual Rays, inclining towards each other, and being insufficiently lengthen'd, meet together, are united in the middle, and cross the Axis: This Point is commonly call'd the Focus, and sometimes the Point of Convergence.

Point of Concurrence, (In Perspective) is the same as the Principal Point: Which See.

Point of Divergence. See Virtual Focus.

Point of Incidence, (In Opticks) is that Point on the Surface of a Glass or other Body, on which any Ray of Light falls.

Point of Inflection of a Curve. See Inflection-Point.

Point Principal, a Term in Perspective. See Principal Point.

Point Sensible, (according to Mr. Lock) is the least Particle of Matter, or space that can be discern'd, and which to the quickest Sight is about thirty Seconds of a Circle, whereof the Eye is the Center.

Recredentials, an Answer to the Credential Letters of an Ambassador.

Recrement, any superfluous Matter in the Blood, or in any part of the Body: In Chymistry, the Word is us'd when any Liquor is distilled over again several times.

Among Physicians and Anatomists, Recrements are also taken for such Juices as are separated in the several Glands of the Body for certain peculiar Uses; as the Spirits, the Lympha, the Gall, the proper Ferments of the Stomach, Guts, &c. These are distinguish'd from Excrementis which are thrust out of the Body, as being of no farther Use to it.

To Recriminare, to return an Accusation or Reproach.

Recrimination, the Act of recriminating, whereby the Party accused charges his Accuser with the same Fact.

Recrudescens, a growing fresh, raw or sore again; a rankling or festering; Among Physicians, it is us'd when a Disease being about to end, begins to invade and grow worse again.

Recruit, (Fr.) new or fresh Supply: In the Art of War, Recruits are new Men raised to strengthen the Forces on Foot; either to make the Troops and Companies more numerous than they were at first, or to fill up the Places of Men kill'd or deserted.

To Recruit, to supply or fill up, to re-enforce.

Rectangle, (in Geom.) a right or straight Angle, made by the falling of one Line perpendicular upon another: Also a Right-lined Figure consisting of four Sides, and as many Right Angles; but it is most commonly taken for a Parallelogram, that has Right Angles but unequal Sides; especially the Oblong or Long Square.

In Arithmetick, Rectangle is the same with the Fact or Product; which See.

Rectangled or Right-angled Triangle, a Triangle that has one Right Angle.

Rectangular, A plain Figure is said To be rectangular or Right-angled, when one or more of its Angles are Right: 'Tis also apply'd to Solids in respect of their Situation; so that if their Axis be perpendicular to the Horizon, they are accounted Rectangular or Right Cones, Cylinders, &c.

Recta pila Regis, (in ancient Latin Deeds) the King's Right to a Prize or taking of one Butt or Pipe of Wine before the Mast, and another behind the Mast, as Custom for every Ship loaded with Wines.

Retratio, a Claim of Right, or appeal to Law for Recovery of it.

Rectification, a rectifying, making right, or correcting: In Chymistry, it is either the drawing off the Dregs, or the refining of any Liquor by repeated Distillations.

Rectifier, a Person that rectifies: In Navigation, an Instrument consisting of two Circles either laid one upon, or let into the other, and so fasten'd in their their Centers that they represent two Compasses, one fixed, the other moveable, each of them divided into the 32 Points of the Compass, and 360 Degrees: Its Use is to find the Variation of the Compass, and to rectify the Ship's Course, having the Amplitude or Azimuth given.

To Rectify, to set to rights again, to redress, correct, mend, or better: Among Chymists, to distill any Spirit over again, in order to bring it to a more pure state, by separating the Parts of a different Kind that might be drawn along with it.

To Rectify the Globe, is to bring the Sun's Place in the Ecliptick on the Globe, to the side of the Brass-Meridian, that is marked with Degrees; to raise the Pole above the Horizon, as much as the Latitude of the Place; to fit the Hour Circle exactly to the Point of twelve at Noon; and (if there be Occasion) to screw the Quadrant of Altitude to the Zenith: All this is to be done before any Problem can be wrought on the Globe.

To Rectify a Flativity, (in Astrol.) is to bring the estimated and supposed Time of a Person's Birth, to the real and true one.

Rectifying of Curves (in Mathem.) is the finding a Strait Line equal to a curved or crooked one, or a Plane equal to a curved Surface.

Rectilinear Angle, (in Geom.) an Angle, that consists of Right-Lines.

Rectilinear, or Right-lined Figures, such as have their Extremities or Ends all Right lines.

Recti-Minores, (in Anat.) two small Muscles of the Head, which appear both in light at once: They arise from the hinder part of the first Vertebra of the Neck, and are let into the middle of the Os Occipitis, in two shallow Depressures or sinking Parts of the said Bone.

Recti Interni Minores. See Annuate Musculi.

Reduct, a Chymical Term signifying a Powder by which calcin'd Metals and Minerals are dissolved and reduc'd again to their Regulus or pure Substance: Also a Term in Fortification. See Reduit.

Reductio ad Impossibile. See Apagogical Demonstrations.

Reduction, a reducing or bringing back. In Arithmetick, Reduction is a particular way of reducing Money, Weights, Measures or the like into their least or greater Parts, which are in common use, in order to find how many Pieces of one kind are equal in Value, to a given Number in another; and this Rule is either Descending or Ascending.

Reduction Descending, performed by Multiplication, is when some Integers of a Number of a greater Denomination being given, it is requir'd to find how many Integers of a lesser Denomination are equal in Value to that given Number of the greater: As when it is propos'd to find how many Shillings are contain'd in 30 Pounds, likewise how many Pence in 320 Shillings, or how many Hours in 355 Days, &c.

Reduction Ascending, is when some Integers of a lesser Denomination being given, it is demanded to find how many Integers of a greater Denomination are equal in Value, to that given Number of the lesser: As when it is requir'd to find how many Pence are contain'd in 500 Farthings, how many Shillings in 348 Pence, or how many Days in 864 Hours, &c. and this is performed by Division.

In Astronomy Reduction is the Difference between the Argument of Inclination, and the Eccentric Longitude, that is to say, the Difference of the two Arches of the Orbit, and the Ecliptick, comprehended between the Node, and the Circle of Inclination.

Reduction of Equations, (in Algebra) is the reducing them into a proper Disposition, in order to their Solution; by clearing them from all superfluous Quantities and separating the known Quantities from the unknown, to the end that at length every respective Equation may remain in the fewest and simplest Terms; the known Quantity or Quantities possessing one part of it, and the unknown the other.

Reductibe, that serves to reduce, as, A reductive Salt, made use of by Chymists.

Reduit, (Fr.) a By place, Nook or Corner in an Apartment. In Fortification, Reduit or Reduct, is an advantageous piece of Ground, intrenched and separated from the rest of the Place, to retire to in case of Surprize.

Refracted Angle, (in Opticks) is the Angle contained between the Refracted Ray, and the Perpendicular.

Refracted Dial, a kind of Dial drawn in a concave, or hollow Bowl, so that the Hour Lines may shew the true Hour, when the Bowl is fill'd with Water, or some other Liquor.

Refracted Vision. See Vision.

Refraction, (in Philos.) is the bowing, and bending, or change of Determination in the Body moved; which happens to it, whilst it enters or pierces thro' any Medium.

In Dioptricks, Refraction, is the variation of a Ray of Light, from that Right line in which its Motion would have continu'd, were it not for the resistances made by the thickness of the Medium thro' which it passes, so as to hinder its straight Course, and turn it aside.

Refraction from the Perpendicular, is when a Ray falling inclined from a thicker Medium into a thinner, as from Glass into Air; in breaking, departs farther from that Perpendicular.

Refraction to the Perpendicular, is when a Ray falling inclined from a thinner or more transparent Medium, upon a thicker or less transparent, as from Air upon Water; in breaking, comes nearer the Perpendicular, drawn from the Point of Incidence, at Right Angles on the Surface of the Water, in which the Refraction is made.

Astronomical Refraction, is a Refraction caus'd by the Atmosphere, or Body of the Air; so that a Star seems risen higher above the Horizon, than really it is.

Horizontal Refraction, is that which makes the Sun or Moon appear just on the Edge of the Horizon, when they are as yet somewhat below it.

Angle of Refraction See Angle.

Spatha, (Gr.) a two-handed or battard Sword, a Skimmer or Ladle: Among Apothecaries, an Instrument broad at the lower end, to take up Con-serves, Electuaries, &c.

Spatula or Spatula, a Spattle or Slice made of Silver or Steel, with which Surgeons and Apothecaries spread their Salves and Plaisters: Also a wooden Instrument us'd by Confectioners and Cooks to stir Syrups or Liquors.

Spatter-dashes or Spatter-plashes, a sort of light Boots, without Soles.

Spattling-poppy, a Flower.

Spatula fœtida, a sort of Orrice, a Plant.

Spatum, the Mineral, call'd Spat.

Spavin, a Disease among Horses, a swelling of stiffness in the Ham that causes them to halt.

Speaker of the Parliament, an Officer in that High Court, who is as it were the common Mouth of the rest: And as the Parliament consists of two Houses, so there are two Speakers, viz. one styled, The Lord Speaker of the House of Peers, and the other, The Speaker of the House of Commons. The first is usually the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, and the the other a Member of the House of Commons, chosen by the whole House, and approved by the King.

Spear-men. See Pensioners of the King.

Specht or Speight, a kind of Bird

Spical, (Lat.) singular, particular, excellent, extraordinary.

Specialty, (Law-word) a Bond, Bill, or such like Deed under Hand and Seal. Specialitas or Specialty, was also heretofore taken for special or particular Acquaintance with any Person.

Species, kind, sort; Money or Coin paid in Tale; also Images or Representations of Objects: In Logic, one of the five Predicables, viz. that which is predicated or declared after the Term Quid or What; as if it be asked, What is Socrates? answer, He is a Man. In Metaphysics, it is also an Idea, that relates to another more general one, to which it is subservient, having under it Individuals and Singulars.

In the Art of Physick, Species properly signify the simple Ingredients in the Druggs and Apothecaries Shops, out of which Compound Medicines are made: But the Writers of Pharmacy usually give that Name to some Aromatick or purging Powders, because they were formerly kept ready prepared in the Shops, to make up Electuaries, Tablets, Pills, &c.

In Algebra, Species, are those Letters, Characters, Notes, or Marks, which represent the Quantities in any Equation or Demonstration: Whence the Literal Algebra is often styled Specious Arithmetick, or Algebra in Species: This short and useful Method of Notation was first brought in by Francis Vieta about the Year 1590, and by it he made many new Discoveries in that admirable Art.

Visible-Species, are those wonderfully fine superficial Images of Bodies, which the Light produces and draws in their due Proportion and Colours in the bottom of our Eyes.

Specification, a specifying, expressing, or declaring.

Specific or Specifick, special, particular; that belongs to the Character of a thing, and distinguishes it from another of a different Species or kind.

Specifick Gravity, (in Philos.) is the appropriate and peculiar Gravity or Weight, that any Species of Natural Bodies have, and by which they may be plainly distinguished from all other Bodies of different kinds.

A Specifick or A Specifick Medicine, is a Remedy that has a peculiar Virtue against some Disease; as Quinquina, or the Jesuits Powder, has to cure Agues or Intermitting Feavers.

To Specify, to particularise, to mention in express Terms, to express in particular.

Spicillum, (Lat.) a little Looking-glass: Also a Surgeon's Instrument commonly call'd a Probe.

Specimen, an Essay, Trial or Proof; a Model, or Pattern.

Specious, fair in Appearance, seemingly just and allowable, plausible.

Specious Algebra, the modern Algebra practised by Species or Letters of the Alphabet. See Algebra and Species.

Spectacle, a publick Shew or Sight.

Spectator, a Beholder or Looker on.

Spectatrix, a Female Beholder.

Spectre, a frightful Apparition, a Vision, Ghost, or Spirit

To Speculate, (properly to spy or watch in a high Tower) to contemplate, observe, or view; to consider seriously, to meditate upon.

Speculation the Act of Speculating, contemplating, &c. an Espial, a Notion: Also the Theory, or Study of an Art or Science without regard to the Practice.

Speculative, belonging to Speculation, apt to speculate, studious in the Observation of things Divine or Natural; Speculative is also more especially opposed to Practical.

Speculum, (Lat.) a Looking glass; also the Surface of an Opacous or dark Body, well polished and made capable of reflecting the Sun beams falling on it: Also a kind of Table framed by Astrologers, after they have erected the Figure of a Navvity; containing the Planets and Cuipts, with their Aspects, Terms, &c.

Speculum lucidum. See Septum lucidum.

Speculum Patricis, a Surgeon's Instrument to open the Womb. See Dilatatorium and Dioptra.

Speculum Uculi, the Pupil, Apple, or Ball of the Eye.

Speculum Oris, an Instrument to screw up the Mouth, that the Surgeon may discern the diseased Parts of the Throat, or for the conveying in of Nourishment or Medicines.

Speedwell, an Herb otherwise call'd Fluellin.

Spears or Spikes, (Sea-word) great and long Iron-nails with flat heads and of divers Lengths; some being a Foot or two long, and some ragged, so that they cannot be drawn out again: They are us'd in many parts of a Ship for the fastening of Timbers and Planks.

Speeking up of the Ordnance, is when a Coin or the like, is fasten'd with those Nails, close to the breech of the Carriages of the great Guns, to keep them firm up to the Ship's Sides.

Spell, (Sax.) a Word or Saying: But it is now commonly taken for a sort of Charm to drive away a Disease, by hanging a Sentence or Word written on a slip of Paper, about the Patient's Neck.

To Do a Spell, (in Sea-Language) signifies to do any Work by Turns, for a short Time, and then leave it. A fresh Spell, is when fresh Men come to Work, especially when the Rowers are reliev'd with another Gang: To Give a Spell, is to be ready to Work in such a one's room.

To Spell, to name or write down the Letters of a Syllable or Word: Among Sea-men, it is to let go the Sheats and Bowlings of a Sail, and Brace the Weather-Brace, that the Sail may lie loose in the Wind: The Word is chiefly us'd about the Miszen-Sail; for there instead of Saying Take in the Miszen and peek it up, they say in one Word, Spell the Miszen.

Spelt, a kind of Corn growing in Italy and Flanders.

Spelter, a sort of imperfect Metal.

To Spend, to lay out, to consume or waste, to pass away time: Among Mariners, when a Ship's Mast or Yard is broken down by foul Weather, or any other Accident, they say, It is spent; but if it be done by the Enemies Shot in a Fight, the usual Phrase is, Such a Mast or Yard is shot by the Board.

Spene. See Seen.

Sperage or Asparagus, a well known Plant.

Spergula, (Lat.) an Herb call'd Spurry, or Frank; Wood-rose, a kind of Liver-wort.

Sperma, (Gr.) Sperm, the Seed of any Living-Creature; the Spawn or Milt in Fishes.

Sperma Ceti, (i. e. Whales Seed) an oily Substance drawn from the Brains of large Whales, and afterwards well purified: It is an excellent Remedy in several Diseases, and commonly call'd Pharmacy.

Spermatical or Spermatick, belonging to, or full of Sperm.

Spermatick Parts and Vessels, (in Anat.) are those Arteries and Veins, which convey the Blood to the Testicles; also those Vessels thro' which the Seed passes: Also all whitish Parts of the Body, which by reason of their Colour, were anciently thought to be made of the Seed; as Bones, Sinews, Gristles, &c.

To Spermatize, to eject or throw out Sperm
Spermatocete, a Rupture caus'd by the contraction or drawing together of the Vessels that discharge the Seed, and its falling down into the Scrotum.

Sphacelismus, the gangreening or corrupting of any Part of the Body; also the blasting of Trees.

Sphacelus, (in Surgery) a perfect Mortification of a part, when the Native Heat is wholly extinguish'd, and all Sense taken away, not only in the Skin, Flesh, Nerves and Arteries, but also in the very Bones: It is distinguish'd from a Gangrene, by the entire Corruption and Stench, it being also insensible of the Knife and Fire: 'Tis otherwise call'd Necrosis and Sideratio.

Sphæra, a Sphere or Globe, a Ball, Bowl, Rundle, or any thing that is round.

Spharitis, a Plant that has round Heads.

Sphærocephalus, a sort of Thistle having such Heads.

Sphæromachia, a playing at Tennis, Hand balls or Howls.

Sphagitides, the Jugular Veins according to some Anatomical Writers; being two great Veins on each side of the Throat, which nourish all the Parts of the Neck and Head.

Sphendammus, the Maple tree; also a sort of Hemp.

Sphenoidals Sutura, (in Anat.) a Suture or Seam in the Skull, that surrounds the Bone nam'd Os Sphenoides separating it from the Os Occipitis, from the Os Petrosum, and from the Os Frontis.

Sphenoides, a Bone of the Cranium; common both to the Skull and upper Jaw. It is seated in the middle of the Basis of the Skull, and is join'd to all the Bones of the Cranium by the Sphenoidal Suture, except in the middle of its Sides, where it is continued to the Ossa Petrosa, as if they were but one Bone.

Sphenosis. See Os Cuneiforme.

Sphenopalatinus, a Muscle of the Gurgareon or Wind-pipe Cover, which arises from a Process of the Os Sphenoides, between the Ala Vespertilianis and Processus Styloides; and is inserted to the hinder part of the Gurgareon.

Sphenopharyngæus, a pair of Muscles that take rise from the inner Wing of the Os Cuneiforme, and pass obliquely downwards into the Gullet, which they serve to widen.

Sphenopterygopalatinus. See Pterygopalatinus.

Sphere, any solid round Body, which according to Geometrical Rules, is made by the Circumvolution or turning of a Semi-circle about its Diameter. It is also figuratively taken for the compass or reach of one's Power or Knowledge.

In Astronomy, Sphere signifies the whole Frame of the World, as being of a Spherical or round Figure, and more strictly the Primum Mobile which encloses all the other Orbs and Heavenly Bodies: The Sphere is also considered with respect to its three different Positions, viz. Right, Olique and Parallel.

A Right or Direct Sphere, is when both the Poles of the World are in the Horizon, and the Equinoctial passes thro' the Zenith, so that the Equator and all its Parallels, such as the Tropicks and Polar Circles make right Angles with the Horizon, and are divided by it into two equal Parts; whence it is that the Sun, Moon and Stars, ascend directly above, and descend directly below the Horizon; as at the Island of St. Lawrence and all other Places situated just under the Equinoctial Line.

An Oblique Sphere, is such a Situation of the World, as that the Axis of it inclines obliquely or a-flaunt to one of the Sides of the Horizon; one of the Poles being rais'd any Number of Degrees less than 90 above it, and the other depressed as much below it; so that the Sun and Stars ascend and descend obliquely, and some of them never ascend at all; This Position happens to all Places wide of the Equator.

A Parallel Sphere, is when one Pole is in the Zenith, and the other in the Nadir, the Equator falling in with the Horizon, and all the Parallels of the Equator, being also parallel to the Horizon: In this Case all the Stars in their Course, neither ascend above the Horizon, nor descend below it; but move in a Road parallel to it: This Position is peculiar to those Places that lie directly under the North and South Pole.

Sphere or Material Sphere, a Mathematical Instrument made of Silver or Brass hoops or Rings, representing the Principal Circles of the Sphere, for the more easy conceiving the Motions of the Heavens and the true Situation of the Earth; which is also termed an Armillary Sphere.

Sphere of Activity of any Natural Body, is that determinate Space or Extent all round about it, to which and no farther the Effluvioms or flowing Particles continually sent forth from that Body, do reach, and where they operate according to their Nature: Thus where ever a Neele is plac'd so as that it can be mov'd by a Load stone, it may be said, To be within the sphere of Activity of the Stone.

Sphere of a Planet, (in Astron.) the Orb or Compass, wherein it is conceived to move.

Sphere of a Planet's Activity, (in Astron.) the extension of a Planet's Light and Virtue, so far as it is capable of making or receiving a Platick Aspect. See Platick.

Spherical or Sphærick, belonging to or round like a Sphere.

Spherical Numbers. See Circular Numbers.

Sphærick Geometry or Diopostion, is the Art of describing on a Plane the Circles of the Sphere, or any parts of them in their just Position and Proportion; and of measuring their Arches and Angles when projected.

Sphærick or Spherical Triangles. See Triangles.

Spherion, (in Geom.) a Solid Figure, made from the Plain of a Semi-Ellipsis, turned about one of its Axes: If the Circumvolution or Rolling be perform'd about the longest Axis, it is call'd an Oblong Spheroid, but if about the shortest 'tis termed a Prolata Spheroid; such is the Figure of the Planets, and of the Globe of our Earth.

Sphincter, (in Anat.); s. e. Binder, a Name common to several Muscles that bind, straiten, or draw together the Anus, Bladder, Gullet, &c.

Sphincter Ani, a large, thick, fleshy Muscle, that encompasses the Anus, or end of the Strait Gut, and serves to keep in the Excrement; being much larger in Man than in other Animals, in regard that a greater Force is requisite for that purpose, by reason of the upright Position of their Bodies.

Sphincter Gulae. Oesophagus Gulae

Sphincter Vaginae, a Muscle that lies immediately under the Clitoris, and straitens the Vagina, or Neck of the Womb, which it encloses with Circular Fibres three fingers in-breadth.

Sphincter Vesicae, a Muscle seated in the upper part of the Neck of the Bladder, immediately above the Glandula Prostata; so that being straiten'd, it hinders the involuntary discharge of the Urine.

Sphingium, a Monkey.

Sphinx, a Beast like an Ape, a Monkey, a Marmolet: Also a monstrous Witch, or Hag, near Thebes, said to have had a Head and Face like a Girl, the rest of the Body like a Dog, the Wings of a Bird, and Claws of a Lion; she put forth Riddles, and kill'd those Passengers that could not expound them.

Sphynople, (Gr.) the Andever or Whirl worm; an Insect.

Sphondyl

Spondylium or Spondylium, Holy Ghost's Root or Cow-Parinip; also a Vertebra, or Turning-joynt of the Back Bone.

Spygnica, that part of Physick which treats of, or else Medicines that move the Pulse.

Sphygmus, the Pulse, the beating of the Heart and Arteries.

Sphyra, the Sea-Pike or Spit-fish.

Spica, (Lat.) the Ear of Corn, the long tops of Herbs, as of Lavender, &c. Spica Celtica, a kind of Moss, call'd Wolves-claw. Spica Ciliata, the Saffron-flower.

Spica Indica. See Nardus Indica.

Spica Parvi, Lavendar-spike, Spikes-nard.

Spice, the beginning or remains of a Distemper; also several sorts of Indian Drugs or Grocery-Wares as Cinnamon, Cloves, Mace, &c.

Spicery, a Place where Spices are kept.

Spicknel or Spignel, an Herb good against Cartarrhs and Rheums, which is otherwise call'd Mum, Baldmony and Bear wort.

Spider, a well known Insect, of which there is a monstrous sort in the Island of Nevis in America, with ten Feet that have every one four Joynts. and are horny at the ends; so that when they crawl, their Feet are spread as wide as a Man's Hand: These Spiders have each two solid, sharp, black Tusks, big enough for a Tooth-pick, and often apply'd to that Use: They prey upon Flies, and other Vermin of the like Nature, and their Webs are so strong, that a small Bird can scarce break thro' them.

Spigurnel, a Term anciently us'd for the Sealer of the King's Writs; which Office together with the Sergeancy of the King's Chappel John de Bobun resign'd to K. Edward I.

Spike or Spiknard, a sweet-smelling Plant, the Oil of which is much us'd in Physick, being of a warming and ripening Quality.

Spikes, a Sea-Word. See Specks.

Spiked, sharp pointed: Among Mariners, the Touch-hole of a Gun is said To be Spiked, when Nails are purposely driven into it, so that no Use can be made of that Gun by an Enemy.

Spina, (Lat.) a Thorn or Prickle, a Prickle or Brittle of an Hedge-hog; also the Spine or Chine-bone of the Back.

Spina acuta, the White-Thorn or Haw-thorn; also part of the Shoulder-blade, so call'd by some Anatomical Writers.

Spina alba or Spina regia, the wild Artichoke, or Ladies Thistle. Spina appendix, the Gooseberry-bush. Spina Christi or Spina Judaica, Christ's Thorn. Spina Fallonia, Fullers Teazel. Spina peregrina, Globe Thistle, or Cotton-Thistle.

Spina Dorsi, (in Anat.) the hinder Prominences or Knobs, or the Vertebra or Turning joynts of the Back. Spina Sacra, the Rump.

Spina Dentata, an Ulceration in which the Bones are eaten by a Malignant Humour, without any Pain of the Periosteum or Skin that covers the Bone; whence often follows a necessity of cutting off the diseased Part.

Spinachia, Spinage, an Herb of great Request in Cookery, both for Broths and Sallets; it is also good for Feavers, and loosens the Belly.

Spinialis Colli, (in Anat.) a Muscle so call'd from its accompanying the Spines of the Neck: It arises from the five upper Transverse Processes of Vertebra of the Chest, as also from the lower ones of the Neck; and has a large Insertion to the lower part of the Vertebra of the Neck Side-ways.

Spinatus Lumborum. See Sacer.

Spinialis Medulla. See Medulla Spinalis.

Spinati, certain Muscles, whose Office is to stretch out and bend the Body backward, and to move it obliquely.

Spindle, an Instrument us'd in Spinning; also the main Body of the Capstan or Draw-beam in a Ship. Also the Axis of the Wheel of a Clock or Watch, is call'd the Spindle, and its ends the Pevers.

Spindle-Tree or Drick-Timber, a kind of Shrub.

Spine, (Lat.) the Back-bone, or long-joynted Chine-bone that goes down the Back; also the upper part of the Os Pectinis, or Share bone. See Pectinis Os.

Spinellus, (Lat.) the Spinel-Ruby a precious Stone somewhat softer, and not so bright as the true Ruby.

Spincola or Spinæa, a kind of Rose.

Spinet, a Musical Instrument, a sort of small Harplichord.

Spingard, (old Word) a kind of Brass-Gun.

Spink, a Bird otherwise call'd a Chaffinch.

Spinner, a Person that spins; also a small sort of harmless Spider.

† Spinosity, (Lat.) intricate Point, Difficulty.

Spinner, (Law-Term) a Title usually given to all unmarried Women from the Viscount's Daughter downward in all Deeds, Bonds, &c. Spinning being figuratively taken for all sorts of Work that Maids or unmarried Women are supposed to be employ'd in.

Spinturnix, (Gr.) a Bird that anciently us'd to come to the Altars, and carry'd away a Live-coal, as a Token of ill Luck, or burning to the House where it lighted: Also a four-footed Beast with Wings like the Spinx.

Spinus, (Lat.) the Sloe-tree, or Bullace-tree; Buck-Thorn, or Snag-tree; also a Bird call'd a Siskin.

Spiral or Spiral Line, (in Geom.) a crooked Line that winds and turns round, seeming to be almost a Circle, only it does not meet or run again into its self; but keeps on at a proportionate Distance; like the coiling of a Rope, or the folds of a Serpent, when she lies close in several turns; whence it is sometimes call'd a Serpentine Line and Helix.

Proportional Spirals, are such Spiral Lines as the Rhumb-lines on the Terrestrial-Globe.

Spiration, breathing.

Spire, a Steeple that rises tapering by degrees, and ends in a sharp Point at the top; also a heap of Corn or Grass.

To Spire, to grow up into an Ear, as Corn does.

Spirit, (Lat.) an immaterial Being, a Substance distinct from Matter: Also Virtue or supernatural Power that enlivens the Soul, or the Soul it self, the Ghost of a dead Body: It is also taken for Genius, Disposition, or Nature; Wit, Liveliness, Courage, Pride, &c.

Spirit or Mercury, (among Chymists) is one of the five Principles that may be separated from a mixt Body by Fire: It is subtil, light, piercing and active, and has its Particles in a very quick Motion; as being probably that which causes the growth and encrease of all Bodies.

This Principle, when it comes over wrapt up as it were in a little Oil, is call'd an Ardent Spirit, such as Spirit of Wine; and therefore should rather be termed an Exalted Oil: Whence it has in it a little Volatile Salt dissolved, 'tis call'd a Volatile Spirit; as the Spirit of Harts horn, Urine, &c. If it be mixt with Acid Salts, its Volatility is then check'd, and 'tis styl'd an Acid or Fixed Spirit; as Spirit of Salt, Vitriol, Allum, &c.

Spirit of Nitre, is made by mingling one part of Salt-peter with three times as much Potters Earth dried, and distilling the Mixture in a large Earthen Earthen Retort set in a close Reverberatory Fire. This Spirit is the best Aqua fortis, and is chiefly us'd for the dissolving of Metals; but when dulcify'd or sweeten'd, it is a good Medicine to be taken inwardly in many Cases.

Spirit of Salt, is made by drying and powdering the Salt, and then mixing it with thrice its Weight of Potters Earth powder'd: Afterwards a Paste is made of these with a little Rain-Water, which being roll'd up into little Balls or Pellets about as big as Nuts, is to be distilled according to Art.

Spirit of Salt dulcified, is when equal Parts of this Acid Spirit and Spirit of Wine are mingled together, and digested by a gentle heat for about three or four Days.

Spirit of Sulphur, is only the Acid part of Sulphur or Brimstone changed into a Liquor by Means of Fire: It is commonly call'd Oil of Sulphur per Campanam, from the Vessel's shape, being like a Glass-bell, in which it is usually drawn.

Spirit of Wine. See Wine.

Universal Spirit, is the first Principle of Chymistry, that can be admitted for the Composition of Mixt Bodies; which being spread out thro' all the World, produces different Things, according to the several Matrices or Pores of the Earth, in which it settles.

Spirits, (in the Body of Living-Creatures) were reckon'd of three Sorts, viz. The Animal Spirits in the Brain, the Vital in the Heart, and the Natural in the Liver: But modern Authors distinguish them only into two kinds, the Animal in the Brain, and the Vital or Natural in the Mass of Blood.

The Animal Spirits, are a very thin Liquor, which distilling from the Blood in the outward or Barky Substance of the Brain, are there exalted into Spirit; from whence being convey'd into the Nerves and Spinal Marrow, they perform in those Parts all the Actions of Sense and Motion.

The Vital or Natural Spirits, are the most subtil parts of the Blood, which cause it to act and ferment; so as to make it fit for Nourishment.

To Spirit away Children, is to entice or steal them privily from their Parents or Relations in order to convey them beyond Sea, especially to the Plantations in the West Indies.

Spiritual, that consists of Spirit without Matter; also devout, Religious, or Godly: Also the same as Ecclesiastical oppos'd to Temporal; as a Spiritual Living, or Benefice, that belongs to a Clergy-man.

Spiritualities, the Profits which a Bishop receives from his Spiritual Livings, and not as a Temporal Lord; which are the Revenues that arise from his Visitations, the Ordaining and Instituting of Priests, Prebend money, &c. These are usually oppos'd to Temporalities; which see.

Spiritualization, (in Chymistry) an extracting or drawing of the most pure and subtil Spirits out of Natural Bodies.

To Spiritualize, to explain a Passage of an Author in a spiritual manner, to give it a Godly or Mystical sense: Among Chymists to reduce a compact mixt Body into the Principle call'd Spirit.

Spirituous, full of Spirits

Spirititude or Spiritity, a Philosophical Word for Thicknes or Grossnes.

Spit-deep, (among Husband-men) is as much Ground as may be digged up at once with a Spade.

Spitbrock-Cel, a sort of large Eel that is usually roasted.

Spithama, (Gr.) the Measure of a Span, from the Thumb's end to the end of the little Finger.

Spitter, one that spits and spawls: Among Hunters, a red Male Deer, near two Years old, whose Horns begin to grow up sharp and spit-wise; it is also call'd a Brocket or Pricket.

Spittle-House. See Hospital.

Splanchnica, Medicines that are proper against Diseases of the Bowels.

Splanchnology, a Discourse, Treatise, or Description of the Entrails of a Humane Body.

Splanchnon, an Entrail, or Bowel.

To Splat a Pike, a Term us'd in Carving at Table, for to cut it up.

Splay that Wyeam, i. e. cut up that Fish.

Splaying of the Shoulder, a Disease in Horses occasioned by some Slip, so that the Shoulder parts from the Breast, and leaves a rift or rent in the film under the Skin; which makes the Horse trail his Legs after him.

Splen or Lien, the Spleen or Milt, a Bowel under the left short Ribs over against the Liver, being a Receptacle for the Salt and earthy Dregs of the Blood; where by the help of the Animal Spirits, they are refin'd, and returning to the Blood, promote its farther Fermentation.

Spleen, is also a Distemper in that Part, and figuratively taken for Spite, Hatred, or Grudge.

Spleen-wort, an Herb that takes Name from its Quality; as being very efficacious in Diseases of the Spleen: It is otherwise call'd Ceterach and Milt-waste.

Spleget, a kind of Tent for a Wound. See Pledget.

Splendent, (Lat.) shining, or bright.

Splendid, glorious, magnificent, stately, noble.

Splendour, Brightness, great Light, as of the Sun and Stars; also Glory, Magnificence, Pomp.

Splenetic, belonging to the Spleen; also Spleen-sick, troubled with a Disease or ill Humours in that Part.

Splenium, a long Plaister or Cloth to be laid on the Body of one that is sick of the Spleen. In Surgery, a Bolster made of Linnen several times doubled, even to the thicknes of the Spleen, which is us'd upon Wounds, Ulcers, and Fractures: Also the Herb call'd large Spleen wort.

Spleniatick Artery, (according to some Anatomists) is the greatest Branch of the Celiaca, that goes from thence to the Spleen, and ends in it.

Splenic Vena, the left Branch of the Vena Portae, which is bestowed upon the Stomach and Caul, a part of the Gut Colon, and the Spleen.

Splenic Medicines, such Remedies as are proper to remove the Distempers and stoppages of the Spleen.

Spleni Musculi, certain Muscles so call'd from their Figure somewhat resembling an Ox's Spleen: They arise partly from the five lower Vertebrae of the Neck, and partly from the points of five of the upper Vertebrae of the Chest: The Fibres of these Muscles are fasten'd to the hinder part of the Head, and serve to draw it backwards.

Splent, a kind of hard Swelling without Pain, that grows on the Bone of a Horse's Leg.

Splents or Splints, the pieces of a broken Bone; Also certain flat pieces of Wood us'd by Surgeons in the binding up of broken Limbs; also Harness or Armour for the Arms

Splice, a Word us'd by Seamen, when to make an Eye at the end of any Rope, the ends of the Strands or several Twists, are drawn into those of the other Rope's Strands with a Tool call'd a Fidd; and this is termed a round Splice: There is also another sort, when the Strands of either Rope are put one into another, at a good Distance from the Ends, and those Ends left out unspliced.

To Splice, to make fast the ends of Ropes one into another, by opening the Strands or Twists at the ends of both Ropes, and then with a Fidd, to lay every Strand in order one into another. Among Husband-men, Splicing, is a particular way of Grafting; when the stock of one Tree and the top of another are cut sloping and fasten'd together.

To Split, to cleave or cut asunder; to perplex a Cause or Law-Suit, by raising new Difficulties: Among Sea-men, a Sail is said To be Spilt, when it is blown down.

Spodium, (Gr.) the Cinders after the melting of Iron or Brass; also a sort of Soot, which rising from tried Brass, falls down to the bottom, whereas Pompholyx still flies upwards: It is also taken for burnt Ivory, or the black Pieces which remain after Distillation, calcined in an open Fire, till they become White.

Spoilation, (Lat.) properly a robbing or spoiling, the Name of a Writ that lies in the Spiritual Court, for one Incumbent against another, when the Right of Patronage does not come into Debate.

Spondæus or Spondæe, (Gr.) in Grammar, a Foot of a Greek or Latin Verse, consisting of two long Syllables; as Cælum.

Spondylis, a kind of Serpent.

Spondylion. See Spondylion.

Spondylus, a Knuckle, or Turning joynt of the Chine or Back bone; also the head of the Artichoke-thistle; also the whirl of a Spindle.

Spongia, Spunge, a kind of Sea moss growing on the Rocks.

Spongites, a Stone found in Spunges.

Spongoidea Ossis, (in Anat.) the same with the Cribiform, or Sieve like Bones. See Ethmoides.

Sponk. See Spunk.

† Sponsio, (Lat.) a Promise, Engagement, or Obligation.

Sponsor, Surety, an Undertaker for another, a God-father.

Spontaneous, voluntary, free, that acts of its own accord.

Spontaneous Action. See Action.

Spooning or Spooning before the Wind, (among Mariners) is when a Ship being under Sail at Sea, is put right before the Wind; which is generally done in some great Storm, when they find the Ship too weak to indure the lying under the Sea; and when there is Danger lest she should bring her Masts by the board, by her violent Seeling or rolling about, and so founder; they usually set up the Fore sail, to make her go the steadier, which is termed Spooning the Fore Sail.

Sporades, (Gr.) certain Islands that lie scatter'd up and down in the Egean Sea or Archipelago: Among Astronomers, such Stars as were never as yet rank'd in any particular Constellation, nor had peculiar Names given them.

It proceeds from the melting away the Substance of the Body by a violent hot Distemper of the solid Parts; such as sometimes happens in an Inflammation of the Bowels, or in a vehement Burning, or Pestilential Fever.

Syntenosis, (in Surgery) the joyning of one Bone to another, by a Tendon; as the Knee-pan to the Thigh bone and Tibia.

Synteresis, Remorse, Prick or Sting of Conscience.

Synteretica or Syntereticks, that part of Physick, which gives Rules for the Preservation of Health.

Syntesis, a lingering Sickness; a deep Consumption and Dissolution of the Body in which first the Flesh is wasted, and afterwards the Substance of the more solid Parts.

Synthesis, a compounding or joyning together:

In Grammar, a Figure, in which a Noun Collective Singular is joynd to a Verb Plural, or to a Participle Plural, and of a different Gender; as Parsumersi tenuere ratem: This Figure is call'd in Latin, Compositio.

In Surgery, Synthesis is that Method whereby the divided Parts are re-united, as in Wounds;

Also

Alto the Structure or Frame of the whole Body, or more strictly that of the Bones.

Among Mathematicians, Synthesis is taken for Composition, or a particular way of demonstrating Propositions from their first Principles; and it is oppos'd to Analysis, or Resolution: Thus,

The Synthetic Method of Enquiry or Demonstration, is when the Artist pursues the Truth chiefly by Reasons drawn from Principles before established, and Propositions formerly proved; proceeding by a long regular Chain, till at last he comes to the Conclusion. This Method is follow'd in Euclid's Elements, as also in almost all the Demonstrations of the Ancients, and is contradistinguished from the Analytical; which See.

Synuloticks, Medicines that bring Wounds, or Sores to a car: the same with Cicatryzantia.

Synuresis, (in Surgery) the uniting of Bones together by a Membrane, or Skin: as in Infants, the Bones of the Sinciput, or hinder part of the Head, are joyn'd to those of the Forehead.

Syrupus, Syrup, a Composition or Liquor of a somewhat thick Consistence, made of Sugar boil'd up, with the Juice of Herbs, Flowers, or Fruits.

Syrtacolis, (in Surgery) a Connexion, or joining of Bones by the means of Flesh.

Syrtieteris, an Herb of good Fellowship, causing Mirth and Merriment.

System, properly signifies a regular orderly Collection, or Composition of many things together; a compleat Treatise, or Body of any Art or Science.

System of Philosophy, is a regular Collection of the Principles and Parts of that Science into one Body, and a treating of them Dogmatically, or in a Scholastical Method: which is termed The Systematical Way, in contradistinction to the Way of Essay, in which the Writer delivers himself more loosely, freely and modestly.

System of the World, (among Astronomers) is taken for the general Fabrick, Constitution and Harmony of the Universe, or any orderly Representation of it according to some noted Hypothesis, in which the Heavenly Bodies are so dispos'd among themselves, as their Situation, Order, Motions and Properties may in such an Author's Opinion best answer Appearances and Philosophical Demonstrations. Of these Systems the most considerable were advanc'd by Ptolemy, Copernicus and Tycho Brahe.

The Ptolemaick System, is that wherein the Globe of the Earth and Sea is fixed as the Center of the Universe, whilst the Sun, Moon and Stars perform their Course round it every Day, each in their several Orbits and different Distances from it:

So that the Moon is plac'd nearest the Earth, next to the Moon Mercury, then Venus, the Sun, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn; beyond those, the Firmament or Orb of the fixed Stars, the Second Crystalline Heaven, the First Crystalline; and Last of all that call'd Primum Mobile, or the First Mover.

The Copernican System, the same with the most ancient or Pythagorean System, reviv'd by Nicholas Copernicus, is now much improv'd, and generally maintain'd by Astronomers. In this System, the Sun is suppos'd to be plac'd in the Center, or middle of the World; next to him, Mercury in about three Months Time makes his Ellipsis, or Oval Course; next to Mercury, is the Orbit of Venus, whose Period is 7½ Months: Next to Venus, our Earth and its Attendant the Moon perform a joynt Course, and measure out the Yearly Period: Next to the Earth, Mars alone, without any visible Satellite, or Guard, rolls about the same Center in about two Years Time: Next to Mars, (tho' at a vast distance) Jupiter with his four remarkable Satellites, or secondaries, takes his round in twelve Years: And lastly, Saturn accompany'd with his five little Moons, is said to describe the most remote, or farthest Orbit in the space of 30 Years.

The System of Tycho Brahe, was propos'd by a famous Danish Noble man of that Name, who makes the Earth the Center of both the Luminaries, and of the Orb of fixed Stars; but the Sun the Center of the other four Planets, which he counts Eccentric to the Earth, and constantly moving in the liquid Ether, or Sky, about the Sun, &c.

In Musick, System is an extent of a certain number of Chords, having its Bounds toward the Grave and Acute; which has been differently determined by the different Progress made in that Science, and according to the different Divisions of the Monochord.

The Solar System, (in the New Astronomy) is the joynt Union or orderly Disposition of all the Planets that move round the Sun as their Center, in determined Orbits, and never go farther from it than their proper and usual Bounds.

Systema, (Gr.) a System, the Body of a Science, the compass of a Song: In Surgery, it is the same as Synthesis; which See.

Systematical, belonging to, or reduced to Systems.

Systematical Way. See System of Philosophy.

Systole, a Contraction, a drawing, straitning, or pressing together: In Grammar, a Figure of Prosodia, whereby a long Syllable is made short; as —tulerunt fastidia Menses, Virg.

In Anatomy, Systole is the contraction or straitning of the Ventricles of the Heart, by which the Blood is forcibly driven into the great Artery; as the Dilatation, or widening of those Parts is termed Diastole; which See.

Systiplos or Systyle, in Architect. a Building wherein the Pillars stand thick, the Intercolumniation, or distance between them being only two Diameters of the Column; but this Order is not allowed so close as the Pycnostyle; which See.

Syrehundnemen. See Twelfthende.

Syzeugmenon, a Musical Note call'd B-fa-b-mi.

Syzygia, a joining, yoking, or coupling together: Among Grammarians, the coupling or clapping of different Feet together in Greek or Latin Verse: In Anatomy, the pairs of Nerves that convey Sense from the Brain to the rest of the Body.

In Astronomy, Syzygie, is the same as the Conjunction of any two Planets or Stars; or when they are both suppos'd to be in the same Point in the Heavens; or when they are referred to the same Degree of the Ecliptick, by a Circle of Longitude, passing thro thro' them both. Among Astrologers, Syzygie is taken for the Intercourse of the Planets one with another, or the mingling together of their Beams, either by Bodily Conjunction, or other Aspects.

T A

Tabacum, (Lat.) Tobacco, an Herb that grows in the West-Indies, and is now smoked in Pipes almost all the World over. See Tobacco.

Tabanus, the Burrel-fly, Stowt, or Breez; an Insect.

Dis Ablativa, is the forcible taking away of moveable Things. Vis Compulsiva, is that Force whereby a Man is compelled to do that, which otherwise he would not do of his own free Will. Vis Expulsiva, is when one is cast out of his Possession by Force and Arms. Vis Inquietativa, is when one Man will not suffer another quietly to enjoy his Right, or to do any thing within his own Limits, or Bounds. Vis Turbativa, is that Disturbance which is given to a Man in his Possession, as when two strive to possess the same thing: And from all these some sort of Action will arise.

Dis Centrifuga, (in Philos.) is the Force by which any Natural Body rolling, or turning round about another, endeavours to fly off from the Axis of the Motion, in a Tangent to that Curve.

Dis Centripeta, is that Force by which a Body, from any Cause whatever tends towards any Point as to its Center: Of this kind is Gravity, whereby Bodies tend towards the Center of the Earth; and such is the Magnetical Force by which Iron tends towards the Center of the Magnet.

The Quantity of this Centripetal Force is of three kinds, viz. Absoluta, Acceleratrix, and Motrix.

Dis Centripetæ Quantitatis Absoluta, is its Measure greater or less, according to the efficacy of the Cause that produces it, and which exerts it self on all Bodies in the Regions round about; as the Magnetical Virtue in some Magnets is greater than in others of the same Dimensions.

Dis Centripetæ Quantitatis Acceleratrix, is its Measure proportionable to the Swiftnes which it produces in a given Time: Thus the power of a Loadstone is greater at a less, and lesser at a greater distance from the Stone.

Dis Centripetæ Quantitatis Motrix, is its Measure proportionable to the Motion which it causes in a given time: As the Weight is greater in a greater Body and less in a lesser; and in the same Body, it is greater near the Earth, and less in remote Regions.

Dis impetiva, is an Impulse, Force, or Action, communicated to and exercised upon any Body, in order to change its present State, either of Rest or Motion uniformly forward in a Right-Line.

Dis insita Materię, or Dis Inertię, is the bare Power of Resistance only, by which every Body, as much as it may, endeavours to continue in that State in which it is, either of Rest or Motion; likewise uniformly forward in a Right Line.

Dis Motrix, is the Power which produces the Motion of a Body from place to place. Thus Gravity is a Vis Motrix downwards, or towards the Center of the Earth.

Zodiack, (in Astron.) one of the greater imaginary Circles in the Heavens, which passes obliquely between the two Poles of the World, and takes Name from the Figure of the Living-Creatures representing the Twelve Constellations or Divisions call'd Celestial Signs, which are contained in it:

'Tis cut into two equal Parts by the Equator, one of which comprehends the six Northern Signs towards the Arctic Pole, and the other the six Southern Signs towards the Antarctic Pole. The Sun goes about this Circle once every Year, and the Moon once a Month, and in the middle of it is the Ecliptick Line, from which the Sun never departs; but the Moon and the Planets wander up and down for the space of eight Degrees, and sometimes more on both Sides; upon which Account, the Zodiack is supposed to reach 20 Degrees in Breadth. See Astronomical or Celestial Signs.

Zodiack of the Comets, a certain Tract in the Heavens, within the Bounds of which, according to Mr. Cassini, most Comets, tho' not all, have been observed to move: This he makes as broad as the other Zodiack, and likewise places several Signs or Constellations therein like the former; which are Anti-

Zona, a Belt, a Girdle, a Purse on a Girdle, particularly such a Girdle as Maids anciently wore about their Middle, when they were Espoused, and which the Bridegroom unty'd the first Night of their Marriage: By some Writers that treat of the Art of Physick, it is taken for that Part of the Body, where one is Girt; also for a kind of Herpes, or shingles call'd Holy Fire.

Zones, (in Astron. and Geog.) are certain Spaces or Divisions of the Heavens or earth, bounded by the lesser Circles of the Sphere, that is to say, the two Polar Circles, and the two Tropicks: These Zones have Names given them according to the different Temperature of the Air, and are five in Number, viz. one Torrid, two Temperate, and two Frigid.

The Torrid Zone, bounded by the Tropicks of Cancer and Capricorn, lies in the middle of the two Temperate ones, and is divided by the Equator into two equal Parts, one Northern and the other Southern; its breadth being 47 Degrees, or about 2820 Miles: 'Tis call'd Torrid, i. e. parched or burning hot, because being just under the Sun's Road, its Beams fall directly on it, and continually cause so excessive a Heat, that the Ancients believ'd it to be uninhabitable.

The Temperate Zones, owe their Name and Advantages to their Situation between the Torrid and the two Frigid ones: One of them in which we live, lying between the Tropick of Cancer and the Arctick Polar Circle is call'd the Northern; and the other between the Antarctick Polar Circle and the Tropick of Capricorn, is termed the Southern; each of them taking up 43 Degrees, or about 2580 Miles in Breadth.

The Frigid or Frozen Zones, have the two Polar Circles for their Boundaries, so that one takes in the North, and the other the South Pole; each of them containing 23 Degrees, and a half, or 1410 Miles: These Zones are call'd Frigid, i. e. exceeding Cold or Frozen, in regard that being extremely remote from the Sun's Course in the Ecliptick, they partake but little of its Heat: Inasmuch, that they as well as the Torrid Zone, were esteem'd uninhabitable by the Ancients; but their Mistakes in both respects have been discover'd by later Navigations.
