

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/> 30253 - e. b.

C. Foote Jun.
March 18

COMPLETE AND UNIVERSAL ENGLISH DICTIONARY:

179

INCLUDING NOT ONLY

I. A FULL EXPLANATION OF DIFFICULT WORDS and TECHNICAL TERMS in all FACULTIES and PROFESSIONS

WHETHER IN ALGEBRA ANATOMY ARCHITECTURE ARITHMETIC ASTRONOMY

BOTANY CHEMISTRY
DIALLING
DIVINITY GARDENING GEOGRAPHY

GEOMETRY
GRAMMAR
HERALDRY HISTORY HUSBANDRY
HYDROSTATICS
LAW
MATHEMATICS MECHANICS MILITARY ART MUSIC

NATURAL HISTORY NAVIGATION
OPTICS
PAINTING PERSPECTIVE
PHILOSOPHY
PNEUMATICS POETRY RHETORIC SCULPTURE
SURVEYING &c.

BUT ALSO

II. A PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY,

- In which the proper SOUNDS of ENGLISH WORDS are given in a Manner so plain and simple, that both NATIVES and FOREIGNERS may correct an IMPROPER or acquire a RIGHT PRONUNCIATION.
- III. The ORIGIN of each WORD; its different Meanings or Applications explained; and illustrated by AUTHORITIES, properly ACCENTED; and followed by INITIAL LETTERS denoting the PART of SPEECH to which it is appropriated.
- IV. The DIFFERENCES between WORDS esteemed SYNONIMOUS pointed out; and the proper Choice of them determined.
- V. An EPTOME of the HISTORY of ENGLAND; including all the most remarkable EVENTS from the Time of EGERT to the Year 1791, arranged alphabetically under every SOVEREIGN'S Name and including the Character of each, with the State of the ARTS and SCIENCES during the different Reigns.
- VI. An HISTORICAL and GEOGRAPHICAL DESCRIPTION of the various EMPIRES KINGDOMS, STATES, REPUBLICS, PROVINCES, CITIES and CHIEF TOWNS of the Known World.
- VII. A short STATEMENT of the PRIMITIVE and MODERN SECTS and DIVISIONS in the CHRISTIAN CHURCH; their OPINIONS and PRACTICES; together with a brief HISTORY of the PROPHETS and APOSTLES.
- VIII. An authentic ACCOUNT of the COUNTIES, CITIES, and MARKET TOWNS in ENGLAND, WALES and SCOTLAND; and their exact Distances from LONDON, carefully corrected from the latest Measurements.

To which are prefixed,

A FREE INQUIRY into the ORIGIN and ANTIQUITY of LETTERS;
An ESSAY on the ORIGIN and ANTIQUITY of the ENGLISH LANGUAGE,
With a Sketch of the CONSTITUTION, GOVERNMENT, and TRADE of ENG-LAND; besides a New Compendious GRAMMAR of the same TONGUE.

To the Whole is added,

An OUTLINE of ANTIENT and MODERN HISTORY;

Including a CHRONOLOGICAL SERIES of REMARKABLE EVENTS, DISCOVERIES and INVENTIONS, from the CREATION to the PRESENT PERIOD, together with a LIST of the GRECIAN, ROMAN and ENGLISH CLASSICS.

A New EDITION corrected and improved.

By the Rev. JAMES BARCLAY,

CURATE of Edmonston, in Middlesex, and many Years MASTER of an ACADEMY in Greenwich and at Tottenham.

LONDON:

Printed for J. F. and C. RIVINGTON; B. LAW and SON; G. G. J. and J. ROBINSON; J. SEWELL; H. L. GARDNER; W. RICHARDSON; W. OTTIDGE; J. BEW; W. LOWNDES; S. BLADON; J. MATHEWS; S. HAYES; T. HOOKHAM; P. MACQUEEN; G. and T. WILKIE; SCATCHERD and WHITAKER; C. FORSTER and W. MILLER. 1792.

N. B. In this Edition s. stands for Substantive, a. for Adjective, ad. for Adverb, v. for Verb, v. a. for Verb Active, v. n. for Verb Neuter, part. for Participle, prep. for Preposition, k. for King, q. for Queen, p. for Prince, &c.

P R E F A C E.

AMONG the number of Dictionaries already published, it must be confessed that many of them are possessed of great merit and utility; and yet it will not be denied by proper judges, that the general plan of those Publications will still admit of further improvement.

It is by no means our design to decry the labours of former Lexicographers, to point out their defects, or to endeavour to set off the merits of our own by any invidious comparison with their works. We shall content ourselves with laying before the Reader the outlines of our plan, and submit its execution to his judgment and candour.

The improvements peculiar to the Dictionary now offered to the Public, and which we believe to be, for the greatest part, entirely new, are the following:

1. A PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY, of which the Title-page explains the use. We have only to observe here, that as the pronunciation of our language is too often arbitrary, (so much, indeed, that the inhabitants of one county can scarce understand those of another) we have taken all possible care to adopt the best, most plain and useful modes of speaking, without perplexing or puzzling the Reader with the almost endless and unintelligible niceties of what are pedantically called Orthoepical Rules, or rules for right pronunciation. The only Rule that can be given in this case, of general use, is, carefully to attend to the best speakers; to the general, plain, and easy pronunciation used in the Pulpit, in the Senate, and at the Bar; and therefore the greatest attention has been paid to the proper placing of the Accent; for upon this depends, in a great measure, the right and just pronunciation of our language. Peculiar care has also been taken, that the Initial Letters denoting each part of speech should be correct; an advantage not to be found in many Dictionaries possessed of this distinction*.

* Under this article of Pronunciation, the Reader will be pleased to observe, that as the final tion, with very few exceptions is always pronounced soon, we have only distinguished those exceptions; as marking the variation stion would have occurred so often, as to have crowded and deformed the page.

P R E F A C E.

II. The Synonymous part of our Dictionary we modestly assert to be entirely new; the use of which, both in speaking and writing, must at first view appear to every intelligent Reader; and we have endeavoured to execute it without running into any whimsical notions, or fantastic affected niceties.

III. Instead of a very few Lives of Statesmen, Authors, Poets, &c. which other similar Publications, very often with little propriety, contain; we have presented our Readers with a concise though comprehensive Epitome of the Annals of this Country, exhibiting the characters of its several Monarchs, their most remarkable actions, and the most distinguished events of their reigns; with a brief account of the progress of the Arts and Sciences under each Monarch, as well as of the most eminent personages, whether Statesmen, Men of Letters, Authors, &c. who flourished in each respective period.

This department of our Dictionary will certainly prove of great utility to two kinds of Readers: First, to those who have not time, abilities, nor inclination to study the History of their Country in larger volumes. Secondly, To youth at Schools it will be found very serviceable in a double respect. By this Epitome they may be instructed in that necessary and useful part of knowledge, the History of their own Country, even imperceptibly; for it will prove rather an amusement than a task for them to turn to and find out those historical articles in the Dictionary, which would escape their attention, perhaps, in reading the best written History, especially if imposed upon them by way of task. The skilful Teacher may, in this case, find out methods of playing (if we may use the expression) his pupils into this valuable branch of knowledge.

Again: These Historical Anecdotes may be given as very proper and useful Exercises to Youth at Schools. Let the Master prescribe to his pupils, as he judges proper, any one Reign, or any part of it, to be fairly transcribed by them. Let him next, according to their capacities, set them to point out the several parts of it; the character of the Monarch, whether a good or a bad prince; for what actions and exploits he was remarkable; what great events happened during his reign; with the other particulars as mentioned before. This will serve as a whetstone to sharpen and try their their wit and ingenuity, and put them upon exercising their judgment concerning facts which come within the sphere of their capacities.

P R E F A C E

But this is not all: The Master may advance one step farther with his pupils. Let him next put them upon drawing up, from the several parts of it, as they lie scattered in the Dictionary, a complete History of England, beginning with King Egbert, the Saxon, and taking every reign, in its chronological order, down to the present period. This will prove both a pleasing and profitable exercise to young lads of any ingenuity, and will by easy degrees lead them into such a knowledge of this part of Literature, as will prepare them for reading the English Historians with advantage.

The same method may with equal facility and benefit be pursued with other articles—such as Geography, in particular; which part of our Work we will venture to pronounce to be more copious, better arranged, and more uniform, than in any other Dictionary of this kind, and will therefore prove very useful to Youth, in facilitating the knowledge of the Globes and Maps, which every one knows to be a necessary and pleasing branch of Polite Literature.

It may not be unnecessary to observe on this part of our plan, that the Distances of the different Places, Cities, Towns, &c. of England and Scotland, from London, have been taken with the greatest care from the latest and most accurate measurements.

The CITIES, TOWNS, BURGHS, and MARKET TOWNS of SCOTLAND, are to be found in no other Dictionary; an article which, we hope, will render this Work peculiarly acceptable to our Readers in that country.

The short, but clear accounts of the several RELIGIOUS SECTS, both in the JEWISH and CHRISTIAN CHURCH, are more copious and numerous than are given in the very few Publications of this kind which have adopted them, and must therefore be acceptable to those Readers who desire information in this particular, but have neither time nor inclination to search for it in other Books.

The Outlines of Natural History, i. e. of Beasts, Birds, Fishes, &c. and the terms of Chymistry, Painting, Medicine, &c. which are occasionally explained in this Work, will not only serve to assist the memory, but may also, together gether with the articles comprizing the History of the HEATHEN MYTHOLOGY, be used as Exercises to Youth at Schools, according to the discretion of the Master.

P R E F A C E.

We shall conclude this Preface with recommending to the special attention of our Readers the following articles, all of which, except the 3d and 6th, are peculiar to this Dictionary.

I. A FREE INQUIRY into the ORIGIN and ANTIQUITY of LETTERS.

II. A Short ESSAY on the ORIGIN and ANTIQUITY of the ENGLISH TONGUE.

III. A Compendious ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

IV. An ESSAY on the CONSTITUTION, TRADE, and GOVERNMENT of ENGLAND. This Essay was thought necessary to accompany, and in some degree to illustrate, the History of England.

V. An OUTLINE of ANTIEN and MODERN HISTORY: Containing a chronological series of remarkable events, discoveries, and inventions, from the Creation to the present time: Together with a complete list of the GRECIAN, ROMAN, and ENGLISH CLASSICKS. This article is entirely new, and will be found extremely useful to almost every class of Readers.

VI. The List of the most usual Christian Names of Men and Women, with the abbreviations of them used in common discourse, will certainly serve both to amuse and instruct several sorts of Readers, and is therefore no improper conclusion of a Work calculated for those purposes.

In a word, we submit the whole Work, both as to plan and execution, to the candid judgment of the Public, and shall esteem ourselves much obliged to any Gentleman who will point out to any of the Publishers the errors and defects of this Edition, that they may be rectified in the next.

A FREE

A

F R E E I N Q U I R Y

I N T O T H E

O R I G I N A N D A N T I Q U I T Y O F L E T T E R S .

By the ABBOT ANSELM,

Member of the Royal Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres at Paris.

NOTWITHSTANDING it would be a concern of no small moment or importance, to be capable of rightly informing you, at what particular time the Art of Writing, or Use of Letters, was first found out; yet I must ingenuously acknowledge my insufficiency to resolve so abstruse, so mysterious a secret. All that I shall pretend to do, is to collect, out of various conjectures, those opinions on so critical a topic, to which some of the most learned and judicious Antiquarians have paid a more than ordinary deference and regard.

Nothing doubtless could be of greater service; nothing could possibly be more entertaining to human life, than an ability of recollecting what was past, and of giving an established Being, as it were, to the sentiments of the Soul, by virtue whereof, we might transmit them down to latest posterity, without the least variation.

Thus, one would imagine, indeed, Nature might have prompted Mankind to have accomplished; and yet, it must be allowed, it was an arduous task, a discovery of the last importance.

We are sensible, however, as profound as the secret was, it has been found out; and it is self-evident, that Custom, from its being first brought to light, not only received, but established and confirmed it.

Such Authors, as give the least antiquity at all to the Invention of Letters, ascribe the Honour of it to Moses. Others, however, will not admit, that it could ever possibly be discovered by any Human Penetration, by any Dint of Thought, how profound, how deep secret; and for that reason give God alone the Glory of it; and peremptorily insist, that the Knowledge of Letters had never been found out to the final dissolution of all things, had not the Almighty condescended to have written the Decalogue, or Ten Commandments, on two Tables of Stones, with his own right-hand, in which are interspersed (as they very fluently observe) all the letters in general of the Hebrew Alphabet, the Teth only excepted.

And on what reasons that conjecture is grounded, we shall remark by the bye; though we cannot allow them to be conclusive.

Thus far we will admit, indeed, that the Art of Letters was known only by a few, and but very little practised before the Law was delivered to Moses upon Mount Sinai; and we will further admit, that divers nations have been, time immemorial, without it: and this has been the main, if not the sole occasion of those confused and absurd accounts that we find, not only in the Ancient Stories of those Nations, but in the Religion and Genealogies of their Gods.

These concessions, however, are no convincing evidence, that the Art of Letters was altogether unknown, that Moses had no Manuscripts, no Historical Memoirs in his custody, which had been preserved, as an invaluable treasure, with the utmost care and circumspection, as the families of his predecessors.

Now those who peremptorily assert, that the Art of Letters was a human, and not a divine Invention, and that we are indebted to the superior knowledge and profound penetration of Moses for that inestimable blessing, produce the following arguments to strengthen their assertion:

Moses, say they, never quotes any book prior to his Law: that not the least hint is given either of Letters, or the Art of Writing, in such places, where, had it been discovered at all, the notice had doubtless been taken of it; and again, that if the commemoration of former great and heroic actions has been preserved, such Memoirs, or Historical Accounts, could have been transmitted to their descendants no otherwise than by word of mouth; or, in other words, by oral tradition.

How.

How plausible, or how convincing soever, this argument may possibly be to the abettors of that opinion, I shall not take upon me to determine; yet there are some very eminent and learned Antiquarians, who strenuously oppose it; and insist, that Moses himself has quoted a book anterior to his own Pentateuch: for, in the xxist chapter of his Book of Numbers, (after having given a succinct account of the several places where the Children of Israel had pitched their tents in the Wilderness, which was before Moab) he proceeds thus: "Wherefore, it is said in the Book of the Wars of the Lord, what he did in the Red-Sea, and in the brooks of Arnon, and at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and lieth upon the border of Moab."

Now tho' it must be granted, that many of the most judicious Literati are much divided in their opinions concerning that Treatise, as being a work, of which but very few have the least transient idea; yet St. Austin imagines, in his Commentaries on the Book of Numbers, that it was not the composition either of any Patriarch or Prophet, but written by those very nations themselves that had been conquered by their enemies, and looked upon that War so fatal to them, as to deserve the title that it bore. And then that great Author goes on, and tells us, That when Moses makes mention of that book, he bestows no greater authority upon it, than St. Paul has given to a Grecian Poet, when he had quoted a short passage from his works: this, however, notwithstanding the gloss that is put upon it, is, in our humble opinion, a self-evident proof, that that Treatise was written long before the birth of Moses.

Furthermore, those who insist, that we are indebted to Moses for the invention of Letters, pretend, that not the least notice is taken of this Art, in divers circumstances of such moment and importance, as that, had there been any prior knowledge of it, it is highly probable, they would have been committed to writing. When Abraham, say they, sent Eliezer into Mesopotamia, to settle and adjust the marriage articles between Isaac and Rebecca, not one line was written; no credentials had that faithful servant to shew from his Master, even on so solemn an occasion. Again, say these Advocates for Moses, when Isaac had those Wells dug up, which the Philistines had filled with earth and stones; we have no other account of that remarkable occurrence than this, That after they were opened by his orders, he gave them the same name that his father had done before him. Again, say they, when the Patriarch Jacob had erected, at Bethel, the stone which he had made use of as a pillow, in commemoration of his Vision in that place, there is not the least account of any inscription having been made upon it.

Once more, when Joseph's Brethren, say they, went down into Egypt, as we find it recorded in the xxviii chapter of Genesis; and when Joseph sent for his dearly beloved brother Benjamin, as we find that affectionate circumstance told in the xliid chapter of the same book, not a word was written, either from the Son to the Father, or vice versa, on so momentous an occasion. And, from this presumption, the admirers of Moses infer, that Letters, or the Use of Writing, was not known in those days: but, with submission, those plausible arguments seem to me to be no ways conclusive.

Job lived, it is universally allowed, long before Moses had any existence; and his History must, in all probability, have been written long before Moses composed his Pentateuch.

Some, however, deny, that the last conjecture is just; for, if that had been matter of fact, say they, Moses would never have omitted such an illustrious example of patience to the incessant murmurs and complaints of his discontented Israelites. Nay, farther, it is imagined, that Job laboured under his severe afflictions, even at that very time, when the Israelites were under Egyptian bondage; for there is not so much as one word mentioned either of the Law, or of the Prophets, in the long dialogues which passed between Job and his most miserable Comforters, siled his Friends; neither is there, indeed, the least hint concerning the one or the other, throughout the long conference which God Almighty vouchsafed to hold with that most upright, though distressed Prince.

To the above allegation our reply is this: It would be very presumptuous to fix the time when that history was wrote, or by whom; though it be received as canonical, and consequently as composed by Divine Inspiration. For it is mere conjecture, and nothing more, that some ascribe it to Moses; some again to the Prophet Isaiah; and others, with more probability, to King Solomon, who, it is well known, was thoroughly versed in dialogical discoveries and prudential maxims.

It is universally allowed, likewise, that he was Master of the most sublime Poetry, and no stranger to the stile of the Arabians, as may rationally be presumed from his conversation with the Queen of Sheba.

It cannot, I think, fairly be denied, however, but that Job was acquainted with the Art of Writing, or the Use of Letters, and the various methods, that in his time were made use of in engraving both on lead and stone:—for, in the sixth chapter of that book, is the following very remarkable expostulation; "Oh, that my words were now written! Oh, that they were printed in a book! That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rocks for ever!"

Now

Now he could not, doubtless, have talked in that stile, or expressed himself in such direct terms, had the Use of Letters, or the Art of Writing, been absolutely unknown in his days.

But to proceed;—The Knowledge of this Art must needs be very ancient; since the Apostle St. Jude takes peculiar notice of the Book of Enoch, who was the seventh Patriarch after Adam, and prophesied of these, says the inspired Penman, that is to say, of those false Teachers, against whom he had before pronounced his Anathema, in the 11th verse; “Wo! wo! wo! say he; for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gain-saying of Core.” And, after this, he quotes the following very remarkable passage from the Book of Enoch, in the 14th, 15th, and 16th verses; “And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these; saying, Behold! the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his Saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them, of all their ungodly deeds, which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches, which ungodly Sinners have spoken against him. These are Murmurers, Complainers, walking after their own lusts; and their smooth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration, because of advantage.” And Tertullian is of opinion, that the Book of Enoch was either preserved in the Ark, or restored by Noah, who was perfectly well acquainted with the contents of it.

Now though we are ready to acknowledge that the Book of Enoch, thus quoted by St. Jude, is not canonical; yet, we humbly conceive, it is a proof sufficient for our present purpose; since it is agreed, that not only that Book, but divers others, cited in the Book of Kings, were not received either by the Jews or Christians (as St. Austin assures us) as canonical, for no other reasons, but because they were so very ancient; because many faults might probably have crept into them through the succession of ages. And, lastly, because we cannot be satisfactorily assured, that they were the authentic works of those Holy Men whose names they bear.

As this Book in particular, however, as well as divers others, are quoted by the inspired Penman of the Sacred Scriptures, it cannot fairly be denied, but that they are very old; and from thence we conceive, it may justly be concluded, that the Use of Letters, or the Art of Writing, was well known before the publication of the Pentateuch by Moses.

Josephus assures us, that we are beholden to the Children of Seth for the Science of Astronomy; and because Adam had given them previous notice, that the world would in time be dissolved by Water and Fire, they were so solicitous lest their favourite Science should be lost, before men might have sufficient time to become Masters of it, that they were determined to erect two Columns or Pillars, one of Brick, and the other of Stone, on each of which the learning they had acquired was accurately engraven; that, in case the deluge should destroy the former, the latter, however, might possibly stand its ground, and transmit to posterity those useful and important articles, which they had inscribed upon it with such unwearied diligence and application. And to this account Josephus adds, that in his time one of those Pillars was actually to be seen in Syria.

Though there are some learned men, who deny this to be matter of fact, because 'tis very uncertain whether the Children of Seth were ever inhabitants of Palestine, or not; yet it proves thus far, that, even from that time, the Art of Engraving, or Inscription, was in some measure known; though not carried to that pitch of perfection, as it afterwards was, in the Land of Egypt.

Vossius proposes the following shrewd question; “If the Use of Letters, or the Art of Writing, says he, had not been known before the Decalogue was delivered to Moses, which way could the Israelites have read the Law, as they were obliged to do by divine Command?”

Those who insist that Moses was the first inventor of Letters, argue from what St. Austin asserts, that Moses appointed Masters to teach them.

But we freely appeal here to the impartial and unprejudiced Reader, whether such a weak answer as that, is sufficiently convicting against Vossius's Inquiry; and whether those Masters, whom St. Austin supposes only to be appointed by Moses, be any proof at all, that there were no such things as Characters, nor any such Art as that of Writing, known before the two Tables of Stone were engraven by the Finger of God; or, indeed, before Moses himself was born?

And forasmuch as all the people were obliged, not only to read the Law, but to transcribe it likewise, a great many Masters must inevitably be wanted for the instruction of every man, as they are, even at this day, absolutely necessary to qualify mankind for the most easy Sciences, and for such affairs as are of the least moment or importance.

All that can be said, in short, amounts to no more than this, namely, That the Use of Letters was but very little known amongst a nation, whose principal employment was Husbandry, and who were unacquainted with any other profession than that of a Shepherd.

It is an established notion amongst the Greeks, that they are indebted to the Phœnicians for their Knowledge of Letters.—Herodotus assures us, that the Ionians gave the title of Diphteri to all their books, because they were written upon goats-skins; and that they called all Letters Phœnician, because it was a received opinion amongst them, that one Cadmus had brought them out of the country of Phœnicia. And here we cannot forbear introducing the subsequent beautiful passage, extracted from Lucan's Pharsalia:

“ Phœnices primi, fame si creditur, ausi
 “ Mansuran rudibus vocem signare figuris;
 “ Nondum flumina Memphis contexere biblos
 “ Noverat; et faxis tantum volucresque seræque
 “ Sculptaque servabant magicas animalia linguas.”

Thus accurately paraphrased by the late ingenious Mr. Rowe:

“ Phœnicians first, if ancient fame be true,
 “ The sacred mystery of Letters knew;
 “ They first, by sound, by various lines design'd, “ Express'd the meaning of the thinking Mind;
 “ The pow'r of Words by Figures rude convey'd,
 “ And useful Science everlasting made.”

From this passage it is evident, that the Egyptians, long before the common way of writing was found out, were accustomed to inscribe upon rocks the figures of a great variety of brutes, a dumb sort of language, to which arbitrary meanings were ascribed.

Moreover, Quintus Curtius, having occasion to expatiate on the celebrated city of Tyre, assures us, that the Phœnicians were the first Inventors of Letters, and the first that ever communicated the knowledge of them to others.

However, whether that be absolutely fact or not, it must be allowed, that Letters were very ancient among them, for Tully peremptorily insists, that Greece had poets before Homer; and Eusebius gives us a long Catalogue or List of ancient Authors, whose works were never transmitted down to us; such, for instance, as Linus, Philonon, Thamirus, Amphion, Orpheus, Museus, Epimenides, and divers others too tedious here to enumerate.

Those Letters, which Cadmus had taught the Greeks, were carried, as is supposed, into Italy by one Evander, an Arcadian. And thereupon Petrus Crinitus, who flourished in the year 1304, and was pupil to one Politianus, in his Poems on Education; and Lilius Giraldus, who lived in the fifteenth Century, and Vossius, likewise, quote the following verses, which were found in an old manuscript; namely,

“ Primus Hebræas Moses exaravit Literas; “ Mente Phœnices sagaci condiderunt Atticæ;
 “ Quas Latini scriptitamus edidit Nicostrata.”

That is to say, Moses was the Inventor of the Hebrew Characters;

The Phœnicians taught the Greeks their Letters;

And Nicostrata (who was the mother of Evander) was the first that introduced them amongst the Italians.

We are assured likewise, by Pliny, that Cadmus bestowed Sixteen Letters, or Characters, upon the Greeks; that the ancient Ionic Letters bore a near resemblance to those made use of by the Phœnicians, and that those Ionic Characters were near the same with those made use of by the Latins.

And Scaliger, in his Critical Remarks on Eusebius, peremptorily asserts, that the Assyrian and Phœnician Letters bear a very near affinity to the Samaritan characters, which were made use of by the Jews in general, before the Babylonish captivity.

But be that as it may, we may boldly assert, that the Knowledge of Letters was very ancient in Egypt. If we may credit Diodorus Siculus, he tells us, that the Egyptians laid claim to that grand, that important Invention, which some insist was beyond the power of Man to contrive (as we have hinted before); but then they themselves acknowledge, that it was long after they had made use of Living Animals to express their thoughts.

That the Art of Writing was very ancient amongst them, is very evident: for Tacitus informs us, that one Germanicus paid a visit to ancient Thebes, where incontestible marks of its former grandeur and opulency were even then to be read in Egyptian Characters, engraved on Obelisks for that purpose. On them were inscribed the several important articles here under-mentioned; namely, First, The tribute which was annually paid by the inhabitants; secondly, The weight of their gold and silver; thirdly, The number of their horses and their arms; fourthly, The ivory and perfumes that were peculiarly devoted to the service of their temples; and lastly, The taxes or imposts that were laid on all kinds of grain in particular, and on every commodity in general, either imported or exported.

It must be confessed, that he could not read them himself; but they were explained to him by an ancient Priest; for, according to Diodorus Siculus, none but the Egyptian Priests could interpret such Inscriptions.

Now all this is, in our humble opinion, a proof beyond all contradiction, of the great antiquity of the Use of Letters, and the Art of Inscriptions.

To conclude: We are assured by Valerius Maximus, that Pythagoras, when he visited Egypt, made himself Master of their Characters, by the instruction of more Egyptian Priests than one; and that having consulted several books, which were intrusted to their care, he found the History of a great number of ages comprehended in them.

A

S H O R T E S S A Y

O N T H E

O R I G I N A N D A N T I Q U I T Y O F T H E E N G L I S H T O N G U E :

A N D

I T S S U P E R I O R E X C E L L E N C E T O A N Y O T H E R M O D E R N L A N G U A G E .

ALL Languages in general have their Infancy, their Nonage, and their State of Perfection, like all the polite Arts and Sciences, to the Knowledge whereof we attain in process of Time, and by slow Degrees; so by the same slow, and almost imperceptible Gradations, they lose their prime Beauties; they fade, they droop, they decay, till at length they sink into perpetual Oblivion.

This is a Truth too self-evident to be denied; for the Gothic Language, to which the English Tongue owes its Existence, is now no more, and altogether unknown; and the Saxon, which succeeded it, is grown so obsolete, so darkly expressed, and hardly to be understood; that only a few of our British Virtuosi, whose Taste or Genius naturally leads them to make their Researches into the Arcana of Antiquity, can form the least adequate Idea of its Beauties.

However, notwithstanding we Natives of England owe our Mother-tongue to the Goths; yet the ancient Britons, our truly heroic Ancestors, who were first possessed of these our happy Islands, spoke a Language widely different from ours, before they were conquered by Julius Cæsar, being a People whom we now call the Welsh, and may, with propriety enough, be looked upon by us as the Aborigines of Britain; since CÆSAR himself acknowledges, in the fifth Book of his universally admired Commentaries, "That they were the Inhabitants of its interior Parts;" and the Language, which was first spoken there, had a quite different Origin from ours; though from whence it had its Source we confess ourselves at a loss to determine.

No sooner, however, had Cæsar and the Romans in general abandoned the British Islands, but our Ancestors, in their Distress, gave an Invitation to the Saxons to aid and assist them against the Scots and Picts, who had not only greatly harrassed and perplexed them, but had actually invaded their Country.

By the Assistance of the Saxons, it is true, those Enemies, whose too frequent Excursions they so much dreaded, were totally defeated; but then, soon after that glorious Conquest was gained, these false Friends, whom they so highly respected and caressed, played the ungrateful Part; and not only turned their Arms upon their Benefactors, but were so successful in their treacherous Proceedings, that the unconquered Part of those Britons were reduced to the Necessity of flying to the Mountains of Wales for Shelter and Protection, insomuch that the Welch Language was no longer understood in these our British Islands; and the Saxon only universally prevailed.

It is morally impossible, indeed, to trace out the Form of that Language, when it was first introduced into England, that is to say, so far back as the Year 450; for at that Time, the Saxons were a People so barbarous, so illiterate, and artless, that some of our Antiquarians have much doubted whether they ever had any established Alphabet for the Instruction of their Youth. Neither have we any just Grounds to imagine, that they ever made any considerable Proficiency in the Study of the Arts and Sciences, till an hundred and thirty Years afterwards; at which Time St. Austin came amongst them, with the praise-worthy View of prevailing on them, if possible, to embrace the Christian Faith; and met with Success beyond his warmest Expectations.

After

After this their happy Conversion, indeed, they began to apply their Minds to Study, and by slow degrees improved themselves in polite Literature; insomuch that about One Hundred and Thirty Years afterwards, one Bishop Eadfride, who was at that Time universally admired for his unaffected Piety and Sanctity of Manners, wrote a well-received Comment on the inspired Writings of the Four most Holy Evangelists.

In the Year 871, Alfred the Great came to the Crown of England, when the Danes were in the very Heart of his Dominions, and all the Sea-ports were filled with their Fleets. After divers Battles with various Success, finding himself at last over-powered by Numbers, he was reduced to the Necessity of dismissing his very Attendants; and having committed his Wife and Children to the Care of some of his most loving and loyal Subjects, he went in Disguise to the little Island of Athelney, in the County of Somerset, and there lived concealed for some Years.

During that long Interregnum, as he was not only one of the greatest and most pious Princes upon Earth, but the best Scholar of the Age in which he lived; it is a received Opinion, and in all probability it was Fact, that he translated the Saxon Families in that rural Retreat, and composed divers other Books of Devotion for the religious Improvement of his Subjects, which were soon published after his happy Restoration, though not with his Majesty's Name prefixed.

In the Year 900, we are informed, that a Translation of the Gospels made its first Appearance; but by whom the elaborate and praise-worthy Undertaking was accomplished, the learned and judicious Antiquarian, to whom we are indebted for our most essential Remarks, has not made mention of his Name.

In the Year 1066, the Saxon Government ended by a very remarkable Battle between Harold the Second, and William the Bastard, then Duke of Normandy, in which no less than Sixty Thousand of the English were slain. Upon this total Defeat, the ancient Inhabitants of the Island withdrew into Wales, where they preferred barren Mountains, with the Possession of Liberty, to the most fertile Plains of England.

Soon after this Revolution, the Saxon Language began to lose its ancient Form, and grow out of Repute; and, by slow Degrees, to exhibit some Traces of the English Language, as it now stands; notwithstanding, but a very few Norman Words were adopted for near an Hundred Years after the Conquest.

About the Year 1130, several Compositions both in Prose and Verse made their Appearance in Public; upon the Perusal whereof, notwithstanding the Language was greatly altered, both in its Constructions and Terminations; yet it still, with Propriety enough, might be termed the Saxon Tongue.

In the 13th Century, however, a sort of Language, partly Saxon, and partly English, was introduced; at which Time the Miscellaneous Writings of one Robert of Gloucester were held in high Esteem.

Among many other fugitive Pieces, he inserted a poetical Encomium on King Alfred, which at that Time was received with universal Applause.

In the 14th Century, one Sir John Mandeville, who was a very learned Gentleman, and an able and experienced Historian, obliged the Public with an accurate and elaborate Account of his own Travels.

Hitherto our Language was widely different from that now spoken at present: Two great Poets, however, flourished in this Century, namely, Sir John Gower and Jeffrey Chaucer. Though the former published some few poetical Pieces first; yet the latter is for the most part stiled the Father of all the English Bards that succeeded him. If the Account given of him, by Leland, may be relied on, "He was not only a very facetious Poet, but an acute Logician, a great Philosopher, a profound Mathematician, and a pious Divine;" but how that last part of his Character may be fully vindicated, I shall not presume to determine; since there are too many of his Tales, which, though facetious and entertaining, are not, in my humble Opinion, ever instructive; since some of them can scarcely be read without a Blush. And the late Lord Roscommon has made the following very just Observation; namely,

"Immodest Words admit of no Defence;
"For want of Decency is want of Sense."

In 1468, one Caxton brought the Art of Printing into England, and (amongst other Books) published one, intitled, Recueil of the Histories of Troy.

About Two and Twenty Years afterwards, he published a Translation of the Book of Eneydas, compiled by Vyrgyle. The Preface or Introduction to which plainly shews, that the Readers in those Days were highly disgusted with the Innovations which were then made in the English Language.

About the Year 1500, the celebrated Sir Thomas More made a flourishing Figure in the English Court; and by many Authors has been highly applauded, as the politest and most accurate Writer of the Age in which he lived.

In the Year 1533, Thomas Sackville, then Earl of Dorset, published several fugitive Poems, and was universally admired, not only for the Elegance of his Style, but the Beauty of his Compositions.

In 1573, our Ripio Lever published a Treatise, intitled, the Art of Reason; and not long after the celebrated Sir Philip Sydney wrote his Arcadia, which is universally allowed to be the most entertaining and instructive Novel, that ever appeared in Public at that Time of Day. He likewise published an accurate Translation of Philip Lord Mornay du Plejiss Marj's inimitable Defence of the Truth of the Christian Religion; which, in his Time, met with the universal Approbation of the Public, which it justly deserved.

About the year 1579, that is to say, in the Beginning of King Henry the VIIth's Reign, our William Tridel published a Translation of the New Testament; but soon after one Cuthbert Tunhal, then Bishop of London, sent a very severe Prohibition of it to the Archdeacons of his Diocese, with his reasons annexed.

In the 17th Century, however, Sir Francis Bacon was the first Author, whose Style was capable of entertaining and instructing the Readers of the present Age. To him succeeded Melton, Waller, Agreman Sydney, Lord Clarendon, &c. &c. who made great Improvements upon his Style. We are indebted, however, to Mr. Dryden, Addison, Budgell, Steele, Swift, and Pope, for the inimitable Beauties with which our Language shines at present; and by whom I humbly conceive, it was carried to its Acme, or utmost Pitch of Perfection.

To conclude; As the present Undertaking is immediately calculated for the Service of such English Readers as are supposed to be unlettered, and not so happy as to have had the Benefits and Advantages of a very liberal Education; it would be foreign to our Purpose to embellish this short Essay with any ancient Quotations to shew the gradual Improvements of our English Authors, in their Style, according to the State of our Language at their respective Periods.

Having thus said all we think absolutely necessary, and consistent with our intended Bre- vity, we shall proceed to the last Topic proposed; namely, the Excellency of the English Language.

Now its Beauties are most conspicuous in the Four particular Articles here undermentioned that is to say, it is free and easy; and in short more sweet and harmonious, and by consequence preferable to any living Language whatsoever.

In Freedom and Facility, in the first Place, is demonstrable, since it is in a great Measure exempt from that Multiplicity of Cases and Flexions, which clog or incumber almost all others, and render them for that Reason extremely intricate, difficult, and absurd. Our Adjectives being all invariable, make their Concordance with their Substantives remarkably plain and easy: Our English Pronouns, likewise, are not half so confused and perplexed as either those of the Latin or the French. And scarce any thing can more easily be conquered than the Conjugation of our English Verbs: Besides, our Language is burdened with no such Thing as Verbs reciprocal, which render the French Tongue in particular very dark and obscure; and very often discourage Foreigners from the Study of it.

To illustrate its Copiousness, very little need be said, since it is too manifest and self-evident to be denied; for besides the ancient Dutch, which the English retain in the Saxon Moros, &c. habits, the Literati of England, like so many industrious Bees, have collected the Quintessence of divers foreign Languages, and rejected their Refuse or Dross; by which artful Management, and their Assiduity, they have improved their Mother-Tongue to that prodigious Degree, that all such Foreigners as have an adequate Idea of the Genius of it, are perfectly charmed to observe, that neither their own, nor any other Language whatsoever, can stand in Competition with it; and at the same Time, to find a great Variety of their own Terms so happily transplanted and blended with it, that they seem to thrive better in England than in their own native Soil.

And whereas the French is too much limited and constrained, and through its Over-niceness is grown in some Measure barren, spiritless, and insipid; the English, on the other hand, is become prodigiously copious and luxuriant, through its innate power of making such Comounds and Derivatives as are very comprehensive, emphatical, and proper to contract any Expression into a narrow Compass; it must be allowed, that neither the Greek itself, nor the Latin can compound, or join many Words together, in a more agreeable Manner, which is one of the most shining Beauties that any Language can possibly boast of. In a Word, there is no Sentiment or Thought that can be expressed in a greater Flow of Words, or with more Propriety and a better Grace, than in the English Tongue.

As to its Energy or Significance, there is scarce any Variety, that any other Nation can boast of, but what the English have almost with equal Happiness made its own. With what Propriety has the celebrated Lord Bacon taught us to speak all the Terms of Art in our Mother-tongue, which was looked upon as impracticable, till we saw it actually carried into Execution! What inimitable Pieces of Oratory or Elocution, of our own Growth, have we seen published within these few Years; And what Collection of Poems bears a more sublime Sense, is more manly and majestic, more strong and nervous, than what has been exhibited to the Public by those universally admired Poets, Mr. Milton, Mr. Addison, and Mr. Pope?

is

As to its Harmony and Sweetness, it must be confessed, that the Italian abounds with Vowels, as the Dutch does with Consonants, which renders the first too effeminate, and the last too rugged and uncouth; whereas the English has, through a happy Intermixture, the Advantage of them both. We cannot but allow that the Italian Language is peculiarly delicate, soft and pleasing to the Ear; but then it glides along like a purling Stream. The French, doubtless, is very nice and courtly, but then it has too much in it, that favours of Effeminacy and Affectation. The Spanish, it is true, is very solemn and majestic; but then it is too apt to be stormy and tempestuous, and carries a Kind of Terror along with it. The German is very manly indeed, but then it is harsh and unpolite; whereas the English by judiciously borrowing a little here and a little there, from each of them, gives strength of Consonants to the Italian, the full and perfect Sound of Syllables to the French, the Variety of Terminations with much gentler Accents to the Spanish, and dissolves the Dutch Consonants with greater Facility and Ease.

Now what can possibly be wanting to the Perfection of that Language, where Substance and Solidity combine with Pleasure; where Copiousness unites with Delicacy, Beauty with Majesty, and Expedition with Gravity and Sedateness?—And such doubtless is the Composition of the English.

That all these Advantages are inherent in our Mother-tongue, all Foreigners in general are become at length highly convinced; and notwithstanding indeed, in former Days, they spoke of it with an Air of Indifference at least, and looked upon it with an Eye of Contempt; yet as those groundless Prejudices are now removed, they stand in Admiration at the Sound of it.

The principal Objection that some Hyper-critics have urged against it, are these two; namely, Its being a Language compounded of divers others; and its being subject and liable to frequent Variations. The former, however, is so very natural to all Languages in general, that we have never heard hitherto of any one entirely free from it, the Hebrew only excepted, as some say; but whether that be real Factor not, we ingenuously acknowledge our Inability to determine. The Latin Language has a great Mixture of that which was spoken by the Greeks and Goths; the French is a Composition of Latin, Dutch, and the ancient Gallie; the Spanish, of Latin principally, with some Spice or Smattering of the Gothic and Morisco; and the German itself, tho' by some peremptorily insisted upon to be an Original, has some Savour of the Roman Empire, and its neighbouring Nations.

As to its being subject to various Changes and Mutations, the Objection is altogether as groundless as the former: For it is universally allowed, that all Languages, as well as Kingdoms, have their Infancy and Age, their Perfection and Decay.

I shall now conclude this succinct Account, this transient View only of the Excellency of our Mother-tongue, with the Observations of two very judicious Critics, who, tho' Masters of divers Languages, held our English Tongue in the highest Veneration.

“As the English Language (says the first) is at this present Juncture arrived at so great a Pitch of Perfection, is so very copious and expressive, by the Accession of the Life and Spirit of divers other Tongues with which it is blended, it were greatly to be wished, that a Stop might be put to that boundless Practice of naturalizing foreign Words, of which the English seem too extravagantly fond; and that for the future all neological and factitious Terms should be laid aside, except some few that might possibly be introduced with Judgment and Precaution.”

“Was the English Nation, (says the last) but contented with making Improvements on that Grain which they have already, without over-stocking themselves by Importations from foreign Ports, and putting their Language in a perpetual Ferment, it would contribute greatly to its future Credit and Reputation.”

And to confess ingenuously, it is our humble Opinion, that there is already as much in it, as is any ways useful or necessary; and as much, in a Word, as the English soil is capable of bearing.

THE COMPENDIOUS BRITISH GRAMMARIAN: OR,
 AN EASY INTRODUCTION
 TO THE STUDY OF THE ENGLISH TONGUE.

GRAMMAR is the Art of expressing our Thoughts justly, with a due Accent in the Pronunciation, and with all the true and proper Letters of each Word in Writing, according to the Practice of those who are universally allowed to be the best Judges in that Language which we propose to study, be it what it will.

To speak English therefore, is to explain our Sentiments reciprocally to each other, in the English Language, by those Signs which the Learned have invented for that great and important purpose: and we find by experience, that Sounds and the Voice are the fittest and most convenient of any; but because such Sounds are too transient, and pass away too soon; other Signs have been found out, and so contrived, as to render them, not only more permanent and lasting, but more capable of striking the eye; and these are the Marks, or Characters in Writing, called by the Greeks Grammata, a Term to which that of Grammar owes its derivation.

There are two things principally to be considered in these Signs; namely, what they are, in the first Place, in their Nature as Characters; and in the next, their true Meaning or Signification; that is, the Manner in which they are made use of by Mankind, in order to convey their Ideas with as much ease and freedom as possible, one to another.

Some divide Grammar into four Parts only; namely, Letters, Syllables, Words, and Sentences; and this division, in my humble opinion, is not only the shortest, but the most easy and natural; and comprehends, in reality, every thing that can possibly be produced on the subject.

In the first Place, then, we shall treat as briefly as possible of Letters.

Of Letters.

A LETTER is a Mark, or Character, which denotes a simple and uncompound'd, though an articulate Sound: for such as are inarticulate, for instance, the roaring of a Lion, the beat of a Drum, the purling of a Stream, or the melodious notes of the Nightingale, are altogether impossible to be expressed by any Characters, or Marks whatsoever.

Notwithstanding the English Alphabet is, for the most Part, said to consist of twenty-four Letters only; and for this reason, because i and j and also u and v, were, some centuries ago, expressed by the self-same Characters; yet as the ja and væ, for the generality termed i and u Consonant, are now quite different in regard to their Sound, as well as Form, they may, with great propriety, be termed two distinct Letters; and for that reason, there are six-and-twenty Letters made use of in the English Tongue. These, however, differ in their form, according to the various types in which they are printed, as will manifestly appear by the following

xvi AN EASY INTRODUCTION TO THE A L P H A B E T.

No.	Roman.	Old English.	Italic.	Their Powers or Sounds.
I.	A a	Ǻ a	A a	ā
II.	B b	Ɓ b	B b	bēē
III.	C c	Ɔ c	C c	ſēē
IV.	D d	Ɗ d	D d	dēē
V.	E e	Ǝ e	E e	ēē
VI.	F f	Ƒ f	F f	ēf
VII.	G g	Ɠ g	G g	ghēē
VIII.	H h	ƕ h	H h	aitch
IX.	I i	Ɣ i	I i	i
X.	J j	ƕ i	J j	jā
XI.	K k	ƕ k	K k	kā
XII.	L l	ƕ l	L l	ēl
XIII.	M m	ƕ m	M m	ēm
XIV.	N n	ƕ n	N n	ēn
XV.	O o	ƕ o	O o	ō
XVI.	P p	Ƒ p	P p	pēē
XVII.	Q q	Ƒ q	Q q	kū
XVIII.	R r	ƕ r	R r	ār
XIX.	S s	Ƒ s	S s	ēſ
XX.	T t	Ƒ t	T t	tēē
XXI.	U u	ƕ u	U u	yū
XXII.	V v	ƕ v	V v	vēē
XXIII.	W w	ƕ w	W w	double yū
XXIV.	X x	Ƒ x	X x	ēx
XXV.	Y y	Ƒ y	Y y	wy
XXVI.	Z z	Ƒ z	Z z	zēē

The preceding Letters, Marks, or Characters, in regard to their respective Powers or Sounds, are divided into Vowels and Consonants.

A Vowel is a letter, that denotes a full and perfect sound of itself, without the least aid, or assistance of any other letter whatsoever.

As to the number of them, they are, in the opinion of the most accurate Grammarians only five; namely, a, e, i, o, and u.

The Vowels i and u, indeed, sometimes are made use of as Consonants, but then they change their form; as for instance, the i is converted into iod. or y; as in the words jus, jelly, juice; youth, years, yesterday, &c. and the u into vēē; as in virtue, vice, vanity, &c.

I, however, when it has the same sound or power as i; and w, when it is substituted in the room or stead of u; i. e. when either of them follow a Vowel, in any syllable or word, they may, with propriety enough, be termed assistant, or casual Vowels; but, on the other hand, when they precede a Vowel, though they never change their form, are actually Consonants, and used as such.

As to the use of the preceding Vowels, they are intended to make either Syllables or Words; for neither the one nor the other can be formed without them.

Each distinct Vowel frequently constitutes a Syllable; as in the following words: a-muſe-ment, e-vent, f-mage, ſ-live, and u-ni-ty, &c.

Moreover, the Article A, the Pronoun I, and the Interjection O, are perfect Words, as well as Vowels; and the two last are always printed in capitals.

Before we proceed any farther, however, it will be highly requisite to take the various powers or sounds of each Vowel into particular consideration.

It is to be observed, that all the Vowels, in general, have not only two distinct Sounds, namely, a long and short one, but some of them more; that sometimes they absolutely lose their Sound; and their Powers, at other times, are very imperfect or obscure; and sometimes again they borrow Sounds of one another.

of

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Vowel A.

To begin the regularly with the Vowel a, which has four distinct sounds.

In all Monosyllables, or Words of one Syllable, where a is the first and e the last Vowel, the former is always long; as in bate, âte mâte, &c.

But when the Syllable ends with a single Consonant, the Vowel a is always short; as in fat, mid, plid, &c.

It is observable, that the Vowel a is the easiest to be pronounced; and is the first and the last sound that is uttered; the former is â long, and the latter ä open; as in the interjection a! which we shall take the liberty to illustrate by the following distich:

Ā, Ā, the Infant in the cradle cries;
But when grown old, he sighs out äb! and dies.

A retains this open sound, when it precedes the Consonants, fi, lf, or lm; as in dfi, hif, fofi; caif, hulf; pfalm, bâlm, &c. The sound of a is open likewise in words ending in ancr; as dance, prance, advauce; which are sounded dabnce, prabnce, advabnce, &c. as also in the two following words, fâ-ther, lough-ter, which are sounded or pronounced, fah-ther, loh-ter, &c.

And lastly, a is broad, and sounds like the Diphthong ai in Monosyllables ending in ll s as in mill, bill, &c. or in ld or lt; as in feld, bâld, mâll, fâllt, &c.

A retains this broad sound when it casually occurs between the Consonants w and r; or between w and t, as in the words war, water, which are pronounced wahr, wâdter.

In the pronunciation of divers words, the sound of a is either totally lost, or at least very obscure; as in diamond, parliament, captain, chaplain, &c. which are pronounced diamand, parli-ment, cap-tin, châp-lin; and in measure, treasure, pleasure, which are sounded meazur, treazur, pleazur; and marriage, carriage, &c. which are sounded marriage, carriage.

In the improper Diphthong aa, which frequently occurs in proper names, the sound of one of them is lost; as in Iſaac, Balaam, Canaan, &c. which are pronounced Iſac, Bâlam, Canaan.

There are but very few words in the English language, that end in a, except the following Monosyllables, ſea, pea, tea, &c. and then the sound of it is entirely lost; as it is likewise in all words where the Vowels e or o precede it; as in beat, meat, feat, which are sounded bêit, mêit, fêit; and throat, coat, boat, pronounced as ô long, viz. thrôte, côte, bôte.

In most words, however, where the sound of a is final, the Vowel y is added to it to make it a Diphthong; as in the words dây, plây, wây, &c. and then the a is always long.

In the proper names, however, where a is final, no y is added, and the a retains its sound; as in Phrygia, Pamphylia, Cappadocia, &c.

In the words want, want, wanton, willow, watch, swan, &c. it assumes the sound of ä, and is pronounced as such; namely, wân, wânt, &c.

There are divers other cursory remarks on the letter a, that might properly be here introduced; but for brevity's sake, I shall refer the Reader to the Dictionary annexed.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Vowel E.

E, for the most part, has a short sound, when one or more Consonants follow it in the same Syllable; as in the words following, viz. bêm, gîm, bên, wbên, flêſh, frêſh, &c. If, however, e be final, or joined with either of the Vowels, a, i, or o, it is then long; as for instance in the following Monosyllables, bê, ſê, wê, mê, mêre, bêre, bêaſt, teaf, fêaſt & ſhêld, yêld, ſêld; decêit, peôple, &c.

E, when final, loses its sound in the following words, câke, lâke, awâke, forſâke, &c. and only serves to lengthen the sound of the preceding Vowel. E final, however, in the following Monosyllables, is short, and an exception to the general rule, viz. côme, fôme, ôme, lêe, inc, dânce, &c.

E loses its sound in many words, where the Vowel a immediately follows it; as in the Monosyllables heart, beart, &c. which are pronounced hârt, bârt.

And lastly, the Vowel e assumes the sound of â long, in the word ſwear, which is pronounced fôwêr.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Vowel I.

The Vowel i is always short, when l, m, n, or p, immediately follow it; as for instance; bill, will, gill; imp, pump, ink, wink, lip, bip, &c.

i, however, has a long sound before such words as end in gb, gbt, gn, ld, or nd; as in figh, nigh, fight, nigh, sign, refign, child, mild, mind, find, bind, &c.

i is altogether lost, when the Vowel e immediately follows it; as in field, shield, wield, &c. which are found fēild, šēild, wēild; and if not perfectly lost, its sound is very obscure in the words evil, devil, civil, &c.

In words borrowed from the French, the Vowel i assumes the sound of e, as in machine, magazine, capuchin, which are founded maščen, magazčen, capuščen. It assumes likewise the sound of u in fir, šir, &c.

In the words venison, business, &c. the Vowel i, if not altogether lost, is very obscure, and is founded venzon, biznefs.

N. B. As there are no words in the English Language that end in i, the assistant Vowel y is always made use of to supply its place, be the number of Syllables more or less; as for instance, in Monosyllables, as my, thy, fy, &c. in Disyllables, as in city, mercy, piety, &c. in Trissyllables, as in glorify, justify, dignify, &c. and Poly-syllables, as in obstinately, amiably, mathematically, &c.

y is likewise made use of in the room or stead of i, both in the first Syllable and the last of such words as are derived from the Greek; as in the words hypocrisy, sympathy, symphony, &c.

As also in the first, second, or last Syllable of Proper Names; as in Phrygia, Pamphylia, Egypt, &c.

y is once more made use of instead of i in such Particles, whose Verbs end in y; as in flaying, from the Verb fly; crying, from the Verb cry; and sanctifying, from the Verb sanctify, &c.

This y, however, when it begins a Syllable, or Word, and precedes a Vowel, is always accounted a Consonant.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Vowel O.

The Vowel o sounds long before ll, ld, ll, st, and rd; as in the following words, poll, roll, bold, bald, boli; oak, goat, boat, ford, word, &c. but short in all such Monosyllables as end in a single Consonant, as boat, lot, not, pot, of, on, rod, &c.

The sound of o, though not absolutely lost, indeed, is very obscure in the following words; baron, capon, mutton, glutton, button, &c.

In several words it loses its own sound, and assumes that of the Vowel u; as in ounce, which is pronounced wūnce; son, done, founded šun, dūn; come and comfort, pronounced cūm and cūmfort; condult, founded cūndult, &c.

Note. The Vowel o has seldom the privilege of concluding words; but the assistant Vowel w is made use of to convert it into a Diphthong; as in the Monosyllables, blow, crew, flow, grow, know, &c.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Vowel U.

The Vowel u has always a long sound, before a single Consonant, in words of more Syllables than one; as in ū-nit, ū-nity, ū-nion, &c. but if the word be a Monosyllable, and a single Consonant immediately follows it; as in gūn, šūn, nūn, jūst, dūst, crūst, &c. then the power or sound of it is short.

When the Vowel u immediately follows the Consonant g, it not only loses its own sound, but contributes towards the hardening of the preceding letter; as for instance, in the words guilt, guelt, guard, guardian, &c. which are pronounced gilt, gēst, gārd, gārdian.

In some words, particularly the Verb bury, with all its derivatives, the Vowel u assumes the sound of the Vowel e, and is pronounced berry.

As none of the preceding Vowels (the e only excepted) have the free liberty of concluding words; so very few words end with the Vowel u. Thou and you are the only two English words; and the French terms beau, lieu, and adieu, which we have, as it were, adopted, are the only instances of this kind that can be produced; except, indeed, the word jet d'eau, a water-spout, may be added to the number.

For the generality, therefore, in such words, where the sound of u is final, the Vowel e is either added to it, as in the words blue, true, rue, &c. or else the improper Diphthong eu is substituted in its room or stead; as in the words following, viz. crew, blow, dirow, &c. which are pronounced crew, blū, dru.

Note. The assistant Vowel w, is frequently made use of instead of the u, at the end of a syllable or word; as in po-w-er, sho-w-er, to-w-er, &c. or in the words, flaw, stew, frw, frow, &c. in which case, the w is then an assistant Vowel, and forms a Diphthong; and when added to the improper Diphthong ie, it forms a Triphthong, as in the word view.

Note likewise, That the letter w, when it precedes a Vowel, or the Letter b, it is always accounted a Consonant, as in the words wall, well, will.

Of the Diphthongs, or Double Vowels.

A Diphthong, or Double Vowel, is the union, meeting, or coalition of two Vowels into one and the same Syllable. And these, for the generality, are divided into proper and improper.

The former are these that follow: $\left. \begin{array}{l} ai \\ or \\ ay \end{array} \right\} \left. \begin{array}{l} au \\ or \\ aw \end{array} \right\} \left. \begin{array}{l} ee \\ oy \end{array} \right\} \left. \begin{array}{l} oo \\ ow \end{array} \right\}$

As may be illustrated by the following words;

Ai, in frail, pair, fair; which are founded only as a long, viz. frāle, pāre, fāre.

Ay, in day, play, way, pronounced likewise only as a long, viz. dā, plā, wā.

Note. Ai is written in the beginning and middle of words; but ay always at the end; except in the word eye, when used by way of answer, instead of yes.

Ee, as in enter, esteem, August, &c.

Aw, as in swal, lawful, lawyer, &c.

Note. Au may begin a word, but never ends one; and for that reason aw is substituted in its stead, when final.

Ei, as in wēed, fēed, indēed, &c. like e long.

Oi, as in oil, voice, rejoice, &c.

Oy, as in boy, joy, cloy, &c.

Note. Oi is for the most part used at the beginning of words, but oy at the end.

Oo, as in good, wood, food, &c.

Sometimes, however, it changes its sound to ō long, as in door, floor, sounded dōre, fōre; and sometimes to ū short, as in blood, flood, pronounced blūd, flūd.

Ow, as in cloud, proud, aloud, &c.

But sometimes it is sounded as ō long, as in seal, control, &c.

Uw, as in blow, grow, crew, &c.

Note. The above are called proper Diphthongs; because both the Vowels are sounded in them: but when a proper Diphthong loses its natural sound, and changes to any other simple sound of some one single Vowel, it becomes an improper Diphthong.

The improper Diphthongs are these that follow, viz. ae, ea, eo, eu, ew, ei, ie, oa, oi, and or; which are so called, because the sound of one of the two only is distinctly heard; and for the most part, it is the last that is lost; and these may be illustrated by the words following, viz.

Ae, as in Aeneas, Aegypt, Aetna, Aiber, Caesar, &c. but as ae is no English Diphthong, the words above are written for the most part with a single e; as Aeneas, Egypt, Aetna, Aiber, and Caesar, and are always long.

Ea, as in peace, cease, increase, &c. where the ea is sounded like e long, or the Diphthong ēē.

Ei, as in leopard, jeopardy, people, &c. pronounced lēpard, jēpardy, pēple.

Eo, as in romance, rhem, rbeubarb, &c. sounded eknack, rime, rubarb.

Ew, as in draw, crew, knew, &c. pronounced dū, crū, knū.

Ei, as in receive, conceive, sounded as ēē, viz. recēēve, conceēve.

Ie, as in field, shield, thief, grief, &c. sounded fēld, shēld, thēf, grief.

Oe, as in oat, boat, throat, &c. which are pronounced as ō long, viz. cōt, bōt, thōt.

Ui, as in guilt, built, quilt, &c. sounded as i short, viz. gilt, blit, quilt; and as ū long, in juice, fruit, &c.

Oe, as in Edipus, sounded Edipus, and Oecome and economy, pronounced as ē long, viz. Eene, economy. But in English words, as ō long, as in tor, doe, foe, &c. pronounced, tō, dō, fō.

To these may be added ew, and oe; as in threw, drew, knew, pronounced as ū long, viz. thrū, drū, knū; and due, sue, and spue, &c. founded in the same manner, dū, sū, spū.

Of TRIPHTHONGS.

When three Vowels meet together in one and the same Syllable, it is called a Triphthong. Of these there are very few occur in the English tongue; however, we have the following, viz. Oeuv, pronounced quail, eyes, and view; as for the words beau, sounded bō, as ō long, and beau, pronounced bōe (from whence our word beauty is derived); jet d'eau, sounded jet dō; lieu and adieu, sounded as ū long, lū, and adū; are properly French terms, and only adopted.

Of CONSONANTS.

A Consonant is a letter that can never be pronounced without the addition of a Vowel before or after it; as b is sounded bēē; c, fēē; f, ef; and m, emm, &c.

The Consonants, as they stand in order, are these that follow, in number twenty-one, namely.

b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, w, x, y, z.

In the pronunciation of these Consonants, there is no great difficulty; because other Nations agree with us, and sound them the same way.

There are several of the above Consonants, however, which, tho' very different in their forms, bear a near affinity to each other, in regard to their respective powers or sounds. These, for instance, are as follow:

b } b { c, k, } f, v, { g } h, l, { z } And this method of teaching them to and } and { q, and } and { and } m, n, { and } Children, I conceive, to be the easiest and
p. } t. } x. } ph. } j; } and r, { s. } the best.

Note. All the small Consonants retain their form, the long f and the short s only excepted. The former is for the most part made use of at the beginning, and in the middle of words; and the last only at their terminations.

Printers have of late years made use of divers combined letters; as for instance, æ for ae, and œ for oe; ct, ft, fl, fl, sh, sk, ff, ffi, fl, fi, ffi, fi, and ffi: as also of the following abbreviations, namely, ¶ for and, and ¶c. for and so forth, or for the rest.

Note. The above Consonants are divided into Mutes, and Semi, or Half-Vowels; the former are b, c, d, g, j, p, q, t, v, and are thus named, because they cannot be pronounced without the addition of a Vowel, as bee, fee, dee, &c. The Semi-Vowels are f, l, m, n, r, s, x, z, which are so called, because they yield an imperfect sound of themselves, as some infix; to me, however, this seems to be a mistake; since they cannot be pronounced at all, unless some Vowel be prefixed; as for instance, ef, el, em, &c.

Four of these Semi-Vowels, viz. l, m, n, r, are for the generality termed liquids; because they flow very smoothly in a Syllable after a Mute; as in class, smell, gnat, brass; but they cannot be sounded before a Mute, if a Vowel follows.

These Consonants once more are distinguished into single and double. The former, as b, c, d, &c. have but one simple sound; w, x and z, however, are complex Consonants, and have manifestly the sound of two or more single ones in one: thus w is a compound of vw, x is compounded of ex, and z is sounded as dz.

The following letters, though apparently two, are allowed to be but one single mark or character, viz. ch, gh, ph, sh, th, and wh.

We shall now proceed methodically to their respective powers or sounds.

Of the Power or Sound of the Consonant B.

This Consonant has one invariable sound; though in some few words, indeed, its sound is absolutely lost; as in the word bdellium, which is pronounced dellium. It is mute in words where t immediately follows; as in debts and debtors, which are sounded dezz, dettors; it is silent likewise when it follows the letter m; as in climb, sounded clim; lamb, lambkin, pronounced lām and lāmkīn. And thumb, plumb, dumb, sounded as ū short, viz. tbum, plūm, dūm; and as ō long, in the word comb, which is sounded cōm.

The Consonant b likewise is frequently made use of before the liquids l and r, as in the words black, blood, bloom, &c. and in bread, breast, bride, broad, brute, &c.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonants C and Ch.

The genuine and natural sound of this Consonant is hard, like that of k; and is always pronounced as such, when it precedes the Vowels a, o, or u; as in cure, calf, cart; comb, cold, cock; curd, curl, carfe, &c.

It is hard likewise when it precedes the Liquids l or r, as in clock, cloud, clafs, &c. or crack, crow, cruff, &c.

When this letter c, however, precedes the Vowels e, i, or y; or is made use of before an Apostrophe ('); that is to say, where that mark is substituted in the room or stead of the Vowel e, it is always sounded soft; as for instance, in the words ceremony, citron, cyder; and in plac'd, grac'd, desac'd, &c.

In the words Aceldama and Cis, or Kiss, though the one precedes the Vowel e, and the other an i, they are exceptions to the general rule; and are sounded hard like k.

When the letter c is written immediately after the letter s, it is, for the most part, entirely mute or lost; as in the words, scene, scion, science, sceptres, &c. Sometimes, however, it is pronounced hard, like k, as in scarce, sceptic, scold, scurrilous, &c.

C loses its sound, whenever it precedes k, as in back, crack, pack, quack, &c.

This letter c might very well be omitted, could the etymology of words be equally well preserved without it.

C being (as we have hinted before) only one letter, though two marks or characters, is sounded like k, in most foreign words, as in chemist, chyle, cholera, &c. as also in such proper names as occur in the Sacred Scriptures, as in Baruch, Malachi, Arch-bislaus, &c. When the syllable arch comes before a Vowel, it is sounded hard, like ark; as in architect and archangel; but if a Consonant immediately follows it, then it retains its original soft sound, as that of arch; as for instance, archdeacon, archbishop, &c.

C retains likewise its original soft found, in the words church, chin, child, charm, chair, &c. and in some proper names, as in cherubim, Rachel, Charles, &c.

In divers words immediately derived from the French, ch is sounded soft, like sh: As for instance, in chaise, campaign, chevalier, chagrin, capuchin, machine, &c.

Ch is sometimes, though corruptly, sounded like qu: as in choir and choirifer, which are vulgarly sounded quair and quairifer; though the proper found of them is that of k, and they ought to be pronounced kair and kairifer, as the word chorus, from whence they are derived, is sounded koro.

Of the Power or Sound of the Consonant D.

D, like B, has but one invariable sound; as in the words diamond, dye, did, &c. and is frequently used before the liquid r; as in dread, dress, drink, drove, drub, &c. as also before the double Consonant w, as in dwarf, dwell, dwindle, &c.

When the termination ed is abbreviated, and an apostrophe (') substituted in the room or stead of the e, it is converted into the letter t, to which, as we have above hinted, it bears a near affinity; as will appear in the following instances, though this mode of spelling is not so much in use:

Burned, burnt; blessed, blest; tossed, tost; and crossed, cross.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant F.

The letter F, as we have before observed, bears a near affinity to the letters ph and v; as evidently appears in the word phial, which is sounded vial; as also in the particle of; as, "George the Third King of (that is ou) Great Britain;" and phlegm is pronounced slim.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Letters G and Gh.

The Consonant g, is always sounded hard before the Vowels a, o, and u; as in the words game, gale, garter; goose, goblin, gospel; gut, gun, gizzard; but when it precedes the Vowels e, i, or y, it has, for the most part, a soft found, like the Consonant j; as in the words gender, genitive, gentle; gin, ginger, giant; and in the word giddy.

There are some exceptions, however, to this general rule, for it is pronounced hard in the words grace, get, gelding, gild, gimp, gimlet, &c. It is hard likewise in such proper names as are derived from the Hebrew language; as Gethsemane, Geba, &c. and in some English proper names; as in Gilman, Gibson, Gilbert, &c.

It is always hard likewise, when it precedes the letter b; as in the words gibb, &c.

G loses its sound, when it precedes either the letters m or n, in the same syllable; as in phlegm, reign, &c. It loses its sound when it precedes n, at the beginning of a word; as in gnat, gnaw, gnash, which are sounded nat, naw, nash. Gh is lost in the middle and at the end of divers words; as in might, fight, night, flight, which are sounded mîte, fîte, nîte, flîte; as also in though, through, dough, which are pronounced tô, trû, dô; and figh, nigh, high, are sounded fî, nî, bî.

Gh at the end of some words is pronounced as ff; as in rough, tough, enough, which are sounded rûff, tûff, enûff.

G is often used before the liquids l and r; as in glass, gleam, gleam, &c. Grass, grave, grass, grind, &c.

Of the Power or Sound of the Consonant H.

The letter h is a note of aspiration, which intimates that the Vowel immediately following is to be pronounced with a peculiar strength; as in the words hat, help, hill, house, hat, &c.

Nat.

Note. It seldom begins any Syllable, except the first; and for the most part is uttered with a full emission of the breath.

However, it loses its sound when the letter r immediately precedes it; as in rheubarb, rbeum, rbine, rbeniß, rhetorician, &c. As also its sound is lost at the end of words; as in Jehovah, Messiah, Goliath, &c.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant J.

This Consonant has always an uniform sound, like the soft g, and is put before Vowels only; as in Jack, jest, jilt, John, June, &c. This letter, like the preceding one of c, might very well be omitted, could the etymology of words be duly preserved without it; as in the words joyous, joyial, joy, ejaculation, &c.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant K.

This letter k, when it precedes either the Vowel e or i, has the sound of hard c, where, according to the analogy of the English, the e would be soft; as in the words cellar, cistern, &c. The k, however, has always a hard sound when it begins a word, and precedes a Vowel; as in the words keys, keep, kept; kill, kind, kite, &c. but when k precedes the letter n, its sound is either lost, or at least very obscure; as in the words knot, knob, knowledge, &c. and totally lost when it follows c; as in the words back, crack, lack, &c.

Note. The letter k is never used double in any word whatever; but in the middle of words c always precedes it; as in tickle, fickle, pickle, &c. in order to shorten the Vowel before it.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant L.

This letter l has the same sound in English, as it has in other languages.

In Monosyllables ending in l, another is for the most part added to it; as in all, fall, call, &c. in order to give a kind of force to the preceding Vowel; but in words of more syllables than one ending in l, such l is always single, as in civil, civil, evil, &c. Critical, ubimiscal, political, &c.

Sometimes the sound of this letter l is almost lost; as in the words calfs, half, and their plurals, calves, halves; as also in could, would, should, talk, walk, chalk; psalm, calm, qualm, &c.

This l being a liquid, will follow almost any of the Consonants; but will stand before none of them; as for instance, blood, cloud, flood, gloom, plumb, slay, stew, fly, slow, slut, &c.

The sound of l is always distinctly heard in words where the l is final; as in excel, cancel, counsel, &c. but in words ending with le; as table, fable, cable, fable, &c. the sound of it is obscure, or weak, and the final e almost mute.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant M.

This letter m has an unvaried sound; as in man, men, mine, mean, moon, &c.

It suffers no other Consonant but the n to follow it, in the beginning of a word or syllable; as for instance, amnesty, solemnity; and in the name of the Greek Muse, called Mnemolyne.

If either the letter b or n, follows it, at the end of a word; the sound of that b or n is always lost; as in stumb, plumb, autumn, solemn, &c.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant N.

This n, like m, has always an uniform sound; as in name, neat, night, note, nut, &c.

In the beginning of words or syllables, it admits of the letters g, k, and f, sometimes before it; but no Consonant whatever after it; as for instance, gnat, gnaw, groomer; knave, knife, knot, knowledge, &c. and snake, snail, snow, snuff, &c.

When n follows m and closes a word, it is always either mute, or very obscure; as in autumn, solemn, condemn, hymn, &c.

Of the Powers and Sounds of the Consonants P and Ph.

The letter p (as we have hinted before) bears a near affinity with b, and has an uniform sound; as for example, pain, peal, pile, pool, pond, purse, &c. and the letters ph bear a near affinity to the letters f and v; as in Philip, sounded filip; Philosopher, pronounced filisopher; and pbial, sounded vial.

When p precedes another Consonant in the beginning of words, its sound is always either lost or very obscure; as in the words psalm, psalmist, psalter, Ptolomy, psuedo-prophet, pohstise, peisan, ppchng, &c.

When p immediately follows m, in the middle of words, it is then perfectly quiescent; as in the words empty, contempt, attempt, except, &c.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant Q, or Cu.

q is always followed by the Vowel u, in all other languages, as well as the English, by some it is accounted a superfluous letter, as being nothing more than cu.

In words of English extraction its sound is generally soft; as in quake, quell, quill, quote, &c. but in such words as are derived from the French, it bears the sound of k, or hard c; as in liquor, liquorish, conqueror, masquerade, &c.

Note. The letter q never ends a word, but the Diphthong ue is added to it; as in the words antique, oblique, &c. which are sounded antike, or anteek; oblike, or obleek; and ripe, which is pronounced riſh.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonants R, and Rh.

This letter has the same harsh sound in English, as in other languages. The Saxons, at the beginning of words, used to put the letter b before it. In words derived from the Greek, the letter b immediately follows it both at the beginning and end of words; as for instance; rheticoric, rhinoceros, rhyme, rhenum, rhapſody; and the word myrrh.

When words end in re, as in fire, wire, hire, desire; they are all sounded as ur short; as fir, wiur, biur, desiur.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant S, and Sh.

This letter s has a variable sound. Sometimes it has a hissing, or soft sound; and a^t others a hard sound, like that of z. As for instance, it has the former, at the beginning of words; as in sake, seal, sole, sool, &c. same, shell, soine, stone, span, &c. And the latter, in substantives of the plural number ending with s; as in trees, seas, bees, eyes, flies, pirs, &c. And in the third person singular of verbs; as, he or she reads, bleeds, succeeds, &c. It has likewise a strong sound in the Monosyllables this, yes, thus, us; his, ours, yours, &c. When words end in son, and a Vowel precedes the s, it is sounded hard like z, as in confusion, deduction, occasion, irruption, division, &c. But if a Consonant precedes son, it sounds like ſ; as in diversion, immersion, conversion, &c. This distinction is regularly marked throughout the DICTIONARY.

It sounds like z, likewise, where e final follows s; as in wife, rise, advise, &c. rose, poise, praise, applause, &c. and this variation is distinguished throughout the DICTIONARY. But its usual ending is in ſ, as in grass, mass, class, pass, &c.

Once more, it has the sound of z, when long s occurs in the middle of words; as in desert, present, prison, wisdom, advertisement; another variation which is carefully marked. But if the s be doubled, it assumes the hissing sound; as in assume, assert, assign, &c.

In some words, however, where the single long s occurs in the middle of them, the s is quiescent; as in wiscount, island, isle, Liste, Carlisle, and in demesne, &c. all which variations are regularly marked.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonants T, and Th.

T has its proper sound in most words where it either begins or ends them; as in tame, ten, time, tune, tame; mat, met, fat, set, fit, fat; glut.

When the letter t, however, precedes the Vowel i, and another Vowel immediately follows it, the syllable ti is always sounded like ſ; as in vacation, inclination, contemplation, meditation, &c. and this variation is carefully distinguished throughout the DICTIONARY.

But when a Consonant precedes the t, it retains its own natural sound; as in fast, fract, ſt, fract, ſt, &c.

Th has nearly the hard sound of d in the words following, viz. Then, thence, there, thus, thy, thine, there, them, those, &c. As also, in all words where the th occurs between two Vowels; as in whither, whether, whether, gather, rather, &c.

It has a hard sound likewise when it either begins or ends a word; as in thought, thiſt, third, thunder; death, breath, wildth, worth, &c. but when e final follows th, it softens the sound of it; as from the substantive breath, the verb to breathe; from cloth, to clothe; from wreath, to wreath, &c.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant V.

This Consonant (as we have observed before) bears a very near affinity to the letters f and ph.

This Consonant v is placed before no other Consonant, but before all the Vowels in general; as in the words, vale, vest, vice, voice, volume, vulture, &c.

Note. Both its shape and sound are as distant from the Vowel u, as any two other letters in the alphabet.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonants W, and Wh.

Though the letter w, or double u, where it is used instead of the Vowel u, is undoubtedly a Vowel itself; yet it is at times indisputably a Consonant; and for this reason, because it will precede any of the Vowels without the least hesitation or difficulty in the utterance or expression of it; as in war, west, wind, world, worst, &c.

When the Vowel o immediately follows the letters wb, the sound of the w is altogether mute or quiescent; as in the following words, wborn, whorish, wboredom, wbofe, and wbolefome

It is lost likewise when the liquid r immediately follows it; as in wratb, wretch, wrish, wrong, &c.

In most English words, however, wb has a peculiar sound, as if the b was placed before it; as in the words, where, when, whence, wbole, white, wish, whiff, &c.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant X.

This letter x begins no word in the English tongue, and but very few in any other language.

It begins, however, some proper names; as Xenophon, Xanthus, Xantippe, &c.

In English words, some one of the Vowels always precedes it; as in ax, or axe, axle, excellent, example, ox, oxen, &c.

As also in several English proper names, as in Axbridge, in Somersetshire; Axminster, in Devonshire; and Exeter, its capital; Oxford, in the county so called, &c.

Note. This letter x is a double Consonant, and contains in it the sound of cs, or ks.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant Y.

Though this letter, when it follows a Consonant, is doubtless a Vowel; as in the words, twenty, thirty, forty, &c. yet, when it precedes a Vowel or Diphthong, it is converted into a Consonant, notwithstanding it never changes its form.

It may be observed of this Consonant y, as it was above of the Consonant w, that it precedes most of the Vowels without the least hesitation or difficulty in the utterance or expression of it; as in the following words, yard, yarn, year, yeoman, you, youth, youthful, &c.

Of the Powers or Sounds of the Consonant Z.

This z is a double Consonant (as we have hinted before) and contains in it the sound of dz, or rather f hard.

It begins very few words, except what are derived from foreign languages; as Zany, zest, zeal, zealous, zone, zodiac, and zenith.

The sound of it, in short, is expressed in its name, izzard; or f hard; and this letter is never placed before a Consonant.

Note. The preceding cursory remarks on the English Alphabet are peculiarly calculated for the aid and assistance of young, unlettered students; but such as are more advanced in years, may be farther instructed and improved by a diligent inspection of the succeeding DICTIONARY.

PART II.

Of SPELLING: Or, the DIVISION of SYLLABLES.

THE Art of SPELLING consists in writing correctly, or naming the several letters whereof any Syllable or Word is, according to the established custom, properly composed.

A Syllable is an articulate sound, which is formed of any one Vowel, or more letters included in the English alphabet. As for instance; a-mi-ty, e-ve-ry, i-vo-ry, a-live, u-nit.

Sometimes a Syllable is composed of two Vowels united, for a Diphthong; as in A-mes, a-conny, Oedipus, &c. It must be remembered, however, that these are Latin and Greek Syllables, or Diphthongs, and are expressed in English (as we have before hinted) by the Vowel (e) only; as Eneas, economy, Edipus.

Sometimes, again, it consists of one Vowel, or double Vowel, and one Consonant; as in em, or en; aid, or paid: Sometimes of a Diphthong alone, as au-tbor, au-tumn, &c. Or sometimes of one Vowel, and two or more Consonants; as in aEt, egg, ink, old, aEt, egg, &c.

Not. No number of Consonants can be pronounced articulately, without the aid or assistance of one or more of the Vowels.

A Word, for the generality, is composed of as many Syllables as there are either Vowels, or double Vowels found in it.

No Syllable can consist of more letters than eight; and there are very few that will admit of that number.

Not. All words, which express the name, action, quality, or mode of any thing, are nothing more than an assemblage of Letters and Syllables.

Some words, therefore, if they consist of one Syllable only, are termed Monosyllables; as in just, good, great, &c. If of two Syllables, as in justice, goodness, greatness, &c. they are called Disyllables; if of three, as in a-mi-ty, en-mi-ty, en-vi-ous, &c. they are termed Trisyllables; and all such words as consist of four, or more Syllables, are distinguished by the name of Poly-syllables.

Not. Moreover, as no Monosyllable will admit of more Letters, than eight; so no English words will admit of more Syllables than eight.

Once more observe, that all words are either simple or compound; as, pious, im-pious; holy, un-holy; active, in-active, &c. And the rules for the division of each, must be such as are derived either from the analogy of all languages in general, or from the established custom of pronouncing any one language in particular.

The general rules, therefore, for spelling English words correctly, are these that follow: And as there is no general rule without some exceptions, more or less; such exceptions are best attained by an habitual use or practice.

The first then that occurs is this; namely, when a Consonant comes between two Vowels, it must be joined, for the most part, with the last; as for instance, in a-bun-dance, e-qui-ty, i-mo-gine, a-pu-lent, u-ni-ty, &c.

If, however, the letter x happens to fall between two Vowels, it is then an exception, and must be joined to the first; as in the words, ex-ample, ex-amine, ex-ecute, ex-istence, ex-en, six-en, boxes, &c.

Such Consonants as precede either the liquid l or r, when the Vowel e immediately follows, can never be divided; as in a-ble, ta-ble, fa-ble, tri-ple, ri-ple, mitre, mire, &c.

This rule, however, seems to be included in that of initial Consonants, because bl, fl, and tr, can begin words; but if two Consonants come together which cannot begin words, then they must be divided; and one must be joined to the first Vowel, and the other to the latter; as for instance, in in-justice, im-piety, infi-nity, tem-ple, ten-der, &c.

All double Consonants must be divided; as in plat-ter, mat-ter, let-ter, fet-ter, glit-ter, bit-ter, cut-ter, rot-ten, flat-ter, mat-ter, &c.

Not must two Consonants be parted as can begin words in spelling; and of these there are no less than thirty-four in number, as will more plainly appear by the catalogue, or table of them, as is particularly specified in the next page, namely,

Bl.

Bl.	} as in {	Black, bleed, blind, blot, blue, &c.
Br.		Bread, breast, brick, brook, brush, &c.
Ch.		Chance, cheek, child, choice, church, &c.
Cl.		Claw, clerk, cliff, clock, club, &c.
Cr.		Crape, cream, crime, crow, crust, &c.
Dr.		Drake, dread, drink, drop, drunk, &c.
Dw.		Dwarf, dwelling, dwindle, &c.
Fl.		Flame, flea, flight, floor, flute, &c.
Fr.		Frail, fresh, friend, frost, fruit, &c.
Gh.		Ghost, Ghiterra, &c.
Gl.		Glass, glebe, glimpse, gloss, glue, &c.
Gn.		Gnat, gnaw, gnomon, &c.
Gr.		Grass, green, grift, gross, grudge, &c.
Ka.		Knake, knee, knife, knob, knurl, &c.
Ph.		Phases, pheasant, phial, phoenix, &c.
Pt.		Place, pleasure, plight, plat, plumb, &c.
Pr.		Praise, press, priest, proof, prude, &c.
Pf.		Psalms, psalter, pseudo, flora, &c.
Pt.		Parmics, pteron, ptisan, Ptolemaic, &c.
Rh.		Rhapsody, rheum, rhyme, rhinoceros, rhumb, &c.
Sc.	Scar, scene, sceptre, science, scoff, scorn, scum, &c.
Sh.	Shaft, sheaf, shift, share, shutter, shy, &c.
Sk.	Skate, sketch, skiff, skue, sky, &c.
Sl.	Slave, sleep, sling, sloe, slut, &c.
Sm.	Smack, smelt, smile, smoke, smut, &c.
Sn.	Snake, sneer, snipe, snow, snuff, &c.
Sp.	Spade, spear, spire, spoon, sponge, &c.
Sq.	Squall, squeak, squib, squint, squirts, &c.
St.	Staff, star, steed, stick, stork, stump, styl, &c.
Sw.	Swan, sweat, swine, sword, &c.
Th.	Thank, theft, thief, thought, thus, &c.
Tr.	Trance, trench, tripe, trope, troop, &c.
Tw.	Twang, tweag, twig, twist, two, &c.
Wh.	What, where, when, whilst, whole, &c.

To these add the following words, which begin with three Consonants; as for instance,

Chr.	} as in {	Chrism, chrifoms, Christ, Christian, Christmas, chromatic, chronic, chrysalis, chrystal, &c.
Phr.		Phrase, phrensy, phrenetic, Phrocion, and Phrygia, &c.
Sch.		Schedule, scheme, schism, school, scholar, &c.
Scr.		Scrag, scraps, screen, scribe, scroll, scrub, &c.
Shr.		Shrew, shewe, shrine, shroud, shrub, &c.
Skr.		Skream, skrew, &c.
Sph.		Sphere, spherics, sphincter, sphinx, &c.
Spl.		Splay, spleen, splice, split, splinter, &c.
Spr.		Sprain, sprat, spread, spring, sprout, spruce, &c.
Str.		Straw, stream, strike, stroke, struggle, &c.
Thr.		Thrall, thread, thrice, through, throne, thrush, &c.
Thw.		Thwack, thwart, &c.—And the two following words beginning with and		four Consonants, namely,
Phth.		Phthitic, and Phthifical.

Note. Any single Consonant in the Alphabet may end a word (the g and v only excepted) the former of which assumes to it the Diphthong ue silent to close it; as in antique, oblique, &c. and the latter assumes e silent, as in glove, love, dove, &c.

Note. Some words end with two Consonants, others with three, and some with four. As for instance :

Words ending with two Consonants; as in Plumb, dumb, tumb, block, flock, lock, &c.

Words ending with three Consonants; as in Wench, teach, wrench, wright, night, fight, &c.

And Words ending with four Consonants; as in Eighth, weight, freight, length, strength, &c.

Note.

Note. As the Monosyllables, which are numerous, are the Springs (if I may be allowed the expression) or Roots of the English Language; the art of spelling correctly principally consists in the knowledge of their several powers or sounds.

A D D I T I O N A L R U L E S

To be observed in the DIVISION of SYLLABLES.

I. All grammatical endings, commonly called Terminations, must be separated in Spelling; as for instance, in the following Verbs.

To charm—charm-eth, edst, ed, ing; and in the Substantive—charm-er; and in the Adverb—charm-ing-ly.

To abound—abound-eth, est, ed, ing; and in the Adjective—abund-ant; in the Substantive—abund-ance; and the Adverb—abund-ant-ly, &c.

II. When two Vowels come together, and both of them are distinctly sounded; that is, when they are not Diphthongs, they must be separated in the spelling of them; as for instance, in the words, co-equal, co-eternal, co-essential, cre-ator; usu-al, mutu-al, &c.

As also, in proper names, namely, No-ab, Si-na-i, Si-lo-e, &c.

And lastly, all compound words must, in spelling, be resolved into their simple, or component words; as in see-to, up-on, not-with-stand-ing, ne-ver-the-less, &c.

Note. In some Poly syllables or words of several syllables, the sound of final is expressed sometimes by (tial), as in the words es-sen-tial, imp-tial, par-tial, mar-tial, &c. and at others by (cial) as in com-mer-cial, pre-ju-di-cial, arti-fi-cial, &c.

Such Poly syllables likewise as end in (tian) or (cian) have the sound of (sbian) as in Egypt-ian, Gre-cian, &c.

Some Poly syllables, again, ending in (tiate) or (ciate) have the sound of (sbiate) as in gra-tiate, de-pre-ciate, &c.

Some Poly syllables, moreover, ending in (scient) (cient) or (tient) assume the sound of (sbient) as in con-sci-ent, pro-fi-cient, pa-tient, &c.

And to conclude, many words ending in (tion) (sion) are sounded as (sbön) as in ver-a-tion, con-fer-ence, con-fu-sion, &c. All these distinctions, however, are marked as they occur in the DICTIONARY.

P A R T I I I .

O f W O R D S .

FROM mere articulate Sounds, that is, from the various manner of writing or pronouncing Letters and Syllables, which were the subject matter of the two preceding Parts; we shall now, according to our plan at first laid down, proceed to an account of Words.

And in order to denote the diversity of our sentiments; or, in other terms, to convey our ideas to one another either in Writing, or Speaking, divers kinds of words must unavoidably be used to answer that important end; and these, by most Grammarians, are called the eight Parts of Speech hereunder mentioned, namely,

Noun, Pronoun, Verb, Participle,		Adverb, Conjunction, Preposition, Interjection.
---	--	--

These eight parts, however, for brevity's sake, may with propriety enough be reduced, as they are distinguished throughout the Dictionary hèreto adjoined, to these four only; namely, Nouns Substantive, Nouns Adjective, Verbs, and Particles; for all Pronouns, or as they are termed by some, Adnomins, are nothing more than certain commodious Names, or Words, which are substituted in the room either of Substantives or Adjectives, in order to prevent a disagreeable repetition of the foregoing Nouns or Nouns; and all Participles are no more than what may, with propriety, be termed Verbal Adjectives; and forasmuch as the

the four last mentioned Parts are too inconsiderable, in my humble opinion, to deserve such a distinct separation or division, they may all very naturally and properly be included under the general term of Particles.

Before we enter, however, upon this our new division, thus purposely abbreviated; it will, we imagine, be highly necessary to make some few previous remarks on those little words, which we chuse to call Articles, rather than Particles, (though both may be proper) which, in our Mother-tongue, are certain kinds of limitations prefixed to our Nouns or Names; and these are no more than two in number; namely, a, or an, and the.

An, indeed, is the original Saxon Article, has an indefinite, or unlimited sense, and is, in reality, as much an Adjective as the Pronoun one, with regard to more; and so indeed is a; as for instance, a scholar, an artist; that is to say, some one scholar, some one artist in general.

Note. A or an, is only used in the singular Number, but the in both.

Note. The article a is always used, when a consonant, or an aspirate b, immediately follows; as, a king, a queen; a board, a horse, a bare, &c. But an is always substituted in the room or stead of a, when a vowel follows it, or an b that is not aspirated; as in the words an emmet, an elephant, an ox, an ass; an heir, an hour, an heir, &c.

Note likewise, where a and an are used in the singular Number, there is no article at all made use of in the Plural; as, "These are well-built houses; Those are sweet-scented herbs," &c.

The article (the) however, is frequently made use of both in the Singular and Plural; as, the hour, the hours, the day, the days, the month, the months, &c.

Sometimes, indeed, it is not used. And first, it is never prefixed to proper Names; as John, William, Thomas, &c. nor, in the second place, to virtues, or vices; as love, honour, honesty, injustice, anger, hatred, &c. nor, in the third, to metals or minerals; as tin, copper, brass, silver, gold, &c. nor is it, in the last place, used before such words wherein the mere existence of any thing is only implied; as for instance, "This is not water, but wine; That is not ale, but small-beer," &c.

After these cursory hints, it will be incumbent on us to distinguish words into their respective kinds, or classes; and afterwards take the accidents of each into our consideration, which in every language is the essential part of Grammar.

Words, then, are properly referred to four Kinds, or Classes, namely, 1. Noun Substantives. 2. Noun Adjectives. 3. Verbs, or Affirmations, and lastly, Particles.

Of these we shall treat in their proper order. And first,

Of Nouns Substantive and Adjective.

A Substantive is the name of the thing itself; as, a King, a Queen, a Horse, a Dog; a Chair, a Table, a Looking-glass, &c.

An Adjective is a word, which expresses the particular qualities, or properties, of the thing first mentioned; as great, small, black, white, fair, brown, fat, lean, wise, foolish, &c.

In order, therefore, to discover which are Substantives, and which are Adjectives; I must consider whether the thing mentioned be plain and intelligible of itself; or whether it wants some additional word to make it so: Thus, if I say, "I saw yesterday the king, the queen, the lord-mayor; an ox, a stag, a horse," &c. the sense is complete, and I am clearly understood; but if I say, "I visited an amiable, a prudent, a beautiful, a deformed," &c. my meaning is dark and unintelligible; so that some Substantive must be put to it, such as man, woman, boy, girl, &c. without which it will never be sense, or rightly understood.

Substantives are distinguished into Proper and Common. The former belongs to some individual, or particular person, or thing; as Thomas, William, Mary, Susan, &c. the Thames, the Humber, the Severn, &c. London, Oxford, Cambridge, &c. The latter belongs to all of the particular species; as man, woman, horse, bound, river, city, mountain, province, kingdom, &c.

As proper names of men, women, or children, denote persons; so those which we make use of to denote the three-fold distinctions of persons are in a peculiar manner expressed, and called (as we have before hinted) either Pronouns or Adnouns; and these are different, according as the persons of whom we speak are one only, or more than one; or in other terms, of the Singular or Plural Number.

If I speak of myself only, then the Pronoun is I; if I speak of others as well as myself, the Pronoun is we.

In case I speak directly to any one person, that is called the second person; and the Pronoun in that case, is thou; but, if I speak immediately to more persons than one, the Pronoun is ye; if, however, I speak of a person, or thing, that is termed the third person, and the Pronoun, if it be of one male, it is he; if of one female, it is she; if the thing spoken of be neither male nor female, but a thing inanimate, i. e. of the Neuter Gender, then we use the word it. In the Plural Number, indeed, if we speak of persons or things, we use the word they, be the Gender what it will.

Of

Of the Manner of making Singulars Plurals.

For the generality, Singulars are made Plurals by adding only an s, as band, bands; cock, cocks, bird, birds; noun, nouns; verb, verbs, &c.

When the Singular, however, ends in ce, se, ze, x, si, ch, sh, or ge, when sounded soft like je, we must add either s or es, and make an additional syllable; as in place, or places; horse, horses; razz, razzes; box, boxes; fox, foxes; lass, lasses; glass, glasses; church, churches; watch, watches; wish, wishes; bush, bushes; page, pages; age, ages, &c.

And Nouns ending in y make (ies) in the Plural, as in body, bodies; glory, glories; ruby, rubies, &c.

Frequently the Plural is formed by the termination (en), as in man, men; woman, women; child, children; brother, brethren, &c.

These Nouns, again, which end their Singulars in either f, or fe, form their Plural by (ves), as half, halves; chief, chiefs; calve, calves; leaf, leaves; wife, wives; knife, knives, &c.

In the English Tongue, however, the manner of forming the Plural is very irregular; for there are many words which can be reduced to no rule at all; as will manifestly appear from the following Catalogue or Table.

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
Die	Dice	Brother	Brethren
Child	Children	Laufe	Lice
Ox	Oxen	Goose	Geese
Moose	Mice	Penny	Pence, &c.

In many words there is no difference in regard to Number; as in sheep, deer, fern, horse, swine, &c.

Some words, again, admit of no Singular Number; as for instance,

Sawyers	Tongs
Scissors	Lungs
Branches	Bellows
Wages	Albes, &c.

Others, on the other hand, admit of no Plural Number; as for instance, the names of Virtues, as justice, prudence, goodness, &c.

Vices, as envy, malice, revenge, &c.

Corns, as wheat, oats, barley, &c.

Herbs, as thyme, rue, rosemary, &c.

Countries, as England, Scotland, France, &c.

Cities, as London, York, Bristol, &c.

Towns, as Leicester, Steyning, Arundel, &c.

Rivers, as Thames, Trent, Humber, &c.

In the English Tongue, moreover, the distinction of Genders is shewn by different words;

Masculine.	Feminine.	Masculine.	Feminine.
Boy	Girl	King	Queen
Man	Woman	Brother	Sister
Boar	Sow	Lad	Lass
Stag	Hind	Buck	Doe
Nephew	Niece	Bull	Cow
Lord	Lady	Cock	Hen
Wizard	Witch	Uncle	Aunt
Master	Mistress	Father	Mother.
Ram	Ewe

Some Masculine Nouns, however, make the Feminine by the addition of (ess) as in the words here under mentioned, viz.

Masf.	Fem.	Masf.	Fem.
Author	Authress	Poet	Poetess
Doctor	Doctress	Heir	Heiress
Governor	Governess	Duke	Duchess, &c.

And some in (ix) as executor, executrix, administrator, administratrix, &c.

Most Nouns have six Cases, viz.

The Nominative	Accusative
Genitive	Vocative
Dative	Ablative.

The Nominative Case is that in which we barely mention the thing, whether animate or inanimate; and is known by the Particle, or Article, the, or a; as, the king, or a king; the queen, or a queen; a, or the horse; an ox, or the ox; the house, the stable, the yard, &c.

The

The Genitive Case denotes possession of property, and is distinguished by the Particle of, or by an Apostrophe, (') as for instance "The integrity of Job, or, Job's integrity. The proclamation of the king, or, the king's proclamation."

The Dative Case denotes the gift of something, or something done to a person or thing; and is known by the particle (to), as for instance; "To pay the tribute of adoration to the Almighty. To pay taxes to the public collectors. To turn rebels to the Government," &c.

The Accusative Case immediately follows the Verb, and is the subject of its affirmation; as, "I worship no God, but one; I read no book, but the Bible; Yesterday, I wrote a letter to my father. This day, the king made a most gracious speech to both houses of parliament," &c.

The Vocative Case is that which calls upon a person or thing, and is known by the exclamatory Particle (O) As, "I appeal to you, O citizens, whether what I have said be true or false!—O times! O manners! O Lord God!—O most merciful Father," &c.

The Ablative Case is known by the following Prepositions, viz. in, with, through, for, from, by, or than, &c.

All which Cases are hereunder expressed in both numbers.

Singular.		Plural.
A or the King,	} King,	The Kings,	} Kings. of the King,		of the Kings,
to the King,		to the Kings,
the King,		the Kings,
O King,		O Kings,
From, by, or	} King,	From, by or	} Kings.
with the		with the

The Pronouns, or Ad nouns, assume a different form in all the Cases after the Nominative, both Singular and Plural; as is evident, and clearly demonstrated by the scheme below, viz.

Nom.	I	Thou	He	She
Gen.	of me	of thee	of him	of her
Dat.	to me	to thee	to him	to her
Sing. Acc.	me	thee	him	her
Voc.	O me	thou
Abl.	from or by me	from or by thee.	from or by him.	from or by her.
Nom.	We	Ye	They
Gen.	of us	of you	of them
Dat.	to us	to you	to them
Plur. Acc.	us	you	them
Voc.		O ye
Abl.	from or by us	from or by you	from or by them.

The Pronoun Adjectives, which denote our property or possession, are in each person in the Nominative Case before the Noun, my, thy, his, in the Singular Number, and in the Plural our, your, their; as for instance, "my horse, thy horse," &c. But my and thy are changed into mine and thine, when they come after the Noun; and add s to the Plurals above-mentioned; as, "That horse of mine, that mare of thine," &c. "These tenements of ours; those farms of yours," &c.

The Interrogatives who, for a person, and what, for a thing, make whom, after the verb; and in every case, but the Nominative and the Genitive Plural, whose.

The Indicative Pronouns, this and that, in the Singular, make these and those in the Plural; the first whereof has reference to something near, or present; and the other, to such things as are either at some considerable distance, though in sight, or actually absent.

In Nouns Adjectives, or names of quality, there are three degrees of comparison, namely the simple, or positive degree; as, sweet, sharp; swift, slow; soft, hard; black, white, &c. In this degree, the quality is mentioned, but nothing more. The comparative degree is formed by adding the termination (er) to the positive; as, sweeter, sharper; swifter, slower; softer, harder; blacker, whiter, &c. the third, or last degree of comparison, is termed the superlative; where we express the highest degree imaginable; and this is done by the termination (est) as, sweetest, sharpest; swiftest, slowest; softest, hardest; blackest, whitest, &c.

In the comparison of Adjectives, however, there is great irregularity; and the different degrees are sometimes expressed by so many different words, as, bad, worse, worst; good, better, best; little, less, least.

We frequently, again, make comparisons by using the terms more and most; as more glorious, most glorious; more magnificent, most magnificent, &c.

Note.

Note. These words more and most are generally used, where the Adjective is a Poly syllable, or a word of three or more Syllables; but in Monosyllables, or Disyllables, the terminations a and o, as above specified, are principally used.

There is one thing more to be observed in regard to Adjectives; and that is, that many of them are converted into Substantives; as for instance, we say a general, for a general commander; a particular, for a particular article.

Sometimes, again, Adjectives are used adverbially; as exceeding great, mighty strong, prodigious high, &c.

Of Verbs, or Words; otherwise termed Affirmations.

A Verb, or Word, which (if we may be indulged the expression) is the soul, or most essential part of a Sentence, is a part of Speech that is conjugated with Mood and Tense, and becomes either doing, suffering, or being.

Of these Verbs or Affirmations, there are eight different sorts, which are distinguished as hereunder written, viz.

Active Passive Nester
Substantive

Auxiliary Regular Irregular, and Impersonal.

1. An Active Verb is that which expresses an Action that passes on another subject or object; as for instance, "I adore the Almighty; I honour the king; I abhor a hypocrite," &c.

2. A Passive Verb is that which expresseth bearing, or suffering; as, "I am honoured, beloved, feared, hated," &c.

3. A Nester Verb is such a word as expresses an Action which has no particular object whom to fall; as, "I sleep, I dream, I stand still, I run," &c.

4. A Substantive Verb, is such a word as expresses the Being or Substance which the mind brings to itself, or supposes to be in the object, whether it actually be or not; as, I am, thou art, he is, &c.

5. An Auxiliary Verb is such a one that serves in the conjugation of both Active and Passive Verbs, as, am, was, have, had, &c.

6. A Regular Verb is such a one as is conjugated after some one particular manner or rule.

7. An Irregular Verb is such a one as has something singular in its termination, or the formation of its Tenses. And,

8. An Impersonal Verb is such a one as has only the third person; as, it rains, it snows, it freezes, it thaws, it thunders, it lightens, &c.

Note. Were all Verbs regular, and formed their positive Participle by (ed) there would be very little trouble or difficulty to the learners, in acquiring a tolerable idea soon of the English Grammar; but there is scarce any language that is more irregular than ours, in forming the positive Participle; and this renders the acquisition of them very troublesome to Foreigners.

As Verbs are thus distinguished, the Accidents to them are the four following, namely; Person, Number, Mood, and Tense.

By the 3rd, we mean only those particular terminations, whereby the Person, either acting, or suffering, in each Number is denoted; as, I sing, thou singest, he or she singeth, &c.

As to the second (namely Number), that, in all Verbs, follows in course; for the Agent or Patient must be one or more: The Plural, however, in the English Language, is expressed entirely by those personal Adverbs, we, ye, and they.

As to the third, that is to say, the Moods; or, in other terms, the Modes, or manner of speaking, are four only; namely, the Indicative, the Imperative, the Subjunctive, and the Infinitive.

The first indicates the action only, and nothing more, without any regard to the Modus, or manner in which it is done: as, "I pipe, you dance, or thou dancest; he or she sings, they walk. Laugh or sing," &c.

The second, or the Imperative, intreats, exhorts, or commands. As, "fear God; honour thy king; love your neighbours as yourselves," &c.

The Subjunctive Mood is that, wherein the Verb either depends on, or is subjoined to, some other Verb in the sentence. As, "You will meet with applause, if you follow a virtuous course of life: If you will be intemperate, and indulge your appetites without controul, you will severely repent the consequences, sooner or later."

The Infinitive Mood is that in which the Action of the Verb is expressed in an indefinite or unconnected manner; as to pipe, to dance, to play, &c.

Some, indeed, add to these the Optative and Potential Moods. The latter is known by the Particles may, might, can, could, would, should, &c. As, "I may write, if I will; you might improve, if you would; he can sing, if he please," &c.

As to the Optative Mood, it is the same as the Subjunctive, or Potential, with the addition only of the exclamatory particle O! whereby we testify our inclination, wish, or desire to do any thing. As, "O! that I may, might, or could, be master of the English, Latin or French languages," &c.

It is manifest, however, that all the English Words are expressed by little auxiliary or subservient Particles, and not by any different Terminations of the principal Verb itself, as is usually done in most other Languages.

As to the Tenses of Verbs, we mean by that grammatical term, the several Times wherein their respective Actions are performed; and of these there are, properly speaking, three only; that is to say, the present, the past, and the future, or, time to come. As, for instance, "I love, I hate;" or, "I do love, I do hate; I loved, or hated; or did love or hate;" and, "I shall or will love, or hate."

The Preter-tense, however, or the time past, is, for the generality, subdivided into three; namely, the Preter-imperfect, which denotes the time past, but not actually finished; as "I was writing a letter to my father, but was hindered in completing it;" the Preterperfect, which denotes the time absolutely past; as, "I sent a messenger to my sister three hours ago;" and the Preter-pluperfect, which denotes the time past, before the time of some other past action; as, "I had heard that the king of Prussia had gained an entire conquest over the Austrians, some time before the publication of it in the Gazette."

From whence it is manifest, as we hinted before, that the Tenses, or Times, are not formed in the English Language by different terminations of the Verb itself, as it is in most others; but by the aid and assistance of the auxiliary Verbs do, did; have, had; shall and will.

Of the Method made use of to know whether a Word be a Verb or not.

Suppose the Words to be sit, stand, walk, &c. place some personal Pronoun before them, and they will be good sense, if they are in reality Verbs; as, "I sit; you stand, or thou standest; they walk;" but otherwise nonsense.

To distinguish a Verb Active from another Verb, place the Particles do, or did, before it; and if it be sense, it will be an Active Verb; as, "I do walk, I did work, I do, or did make, &c."

To distinguish a Verb Passive from another Verb, place the Particles am, art, or are, before the Participle ending in (ed), and in case it be good sense, it will be a Passive Verb; as, loved, hated, hurried, tired; "I am loved; thou art hated; he is hurried; we, ye, or they, are tired."

When 'tis in the Subjunctive Mood, the auxiliary Word, be, must be used; as, "If I be weary, I cannot sleep; If I be hurried, I cannot write," &c.

Of PARTICIPLES.

A Participle is an Adjective formed of a Verb; and has that denomination, from its taking part of a Noun, as Gender, Case, and Declension; and part of a Verb, as Tense, or Time, and Signification; and part of both, as Number and Figure.

Of PARTICLES.

These are generally distinguished by the four last parts of Speech, called Adverb, Conjunction, Preposition, and Interjection.

As these, however, are too inconsiderable, in my opinion, to be made distinct Parts of Speech, I shall include them all under the general denomination of Particles; and shall dismiss this Head with the few following cursory remarks on each.

As to Adverbs, they are a kind of Words which are joined in a Sentence to the Noun, or Verb, in order to shew the particular circumstance of their respective significations.

Of these there are four kinds. And

1. All such as express the Manner or Quality: And these are formed of Adjectives, by the addition only of the Particle (ly), as for instance, from prudent comes prudently; from slow comes slowly; and from quick comes quickly. And that these are nothing more than a species of Nouns Adjective, is plainly manifest, not only from their sense or signification; but from their admission likewise of Degrees of Comparison; as, prudently, more prudently, most prudently; slowly, more slowly, or slowlier, most slowly, or slowliest; and quickly, quicker, or more quick, quickest, or most quick.

2. The second Sort are those of Time; as for example,

now	seldom
presently	daily
yesterday	never
lately	always , &c.

3. The next Sort are those of Place; as for instance,

here	hither
there	thither
within	hence
without	thence
upwards	above
downwards	below , &c.

The

The fourth and last Sort are those of Number, or Order; as, once, first,
 twice, secondly,
 thrice, thirdly,
 finally, lastly, &c.

Of those Particles which Grammarians, for the generality, term Conjunctions,

- Of these there are various Sorts. As for Instance,
 1. Copulatives, 4. Illatives,
 2. Disjunctives, 5. Conditionals,
 3. Concessives, 6. Expletives, &c.

Of the first Sort, }
 Of the second, }
 Of the third, }
 Of the fourth, }
 Of the fifth, }
 Of the sixth, } are { and, with, for, by, &c. or, either, nor, neither, &c.
 yet, tho', altho', albeit, &c.
 seeing, since, therefore, wherefore, &c.
 if, provided always, nevertheless, &c.
 yes, indeed, forsooth, &c.

Of those Particles which Grammarians, for the most part, term Prepositions; or, in other Words, such Particles as are prefixed to Nouns in order to point out the Case, State, or Relation, wherein they are respectively used.

Of these likewise there are various Sorts; as for example; the two articles a, or an, and the.

To these add

of	by	about	at	till, or	} &c.
to	from	after	between	until in	than	against	beyond	toward, or with	above	among or	on, or	towards amongst	upon within without

Of those Particles which Grammarians usually term Interjections, which are but few in number, and make the smallest Part of the English Language, or, indeed, of any other Language whatsoever.

Of these last there are two Sorts, viz.

Solitary and Social and Passive Active.

The former are so distinguished from their being used when we are alone, and the result of pain, sorrow, or any other token of surprize or admiration; and sometimes are marks of our duplicature and resentment; and these are,

Heigh! hem! ah! alas! oh! pish! fie! phough! &c.

The latter are these,

Ho! holo! hush! hiss! hark! and ha ha, he! to expres laughter, or a superior degree of pleasure.

To conclude. Notwithstanding these Particles are called little Words, and used for the several purposes above particularly expressed; and notwithstanding we have mentioned them as too inconsiderable to be termed distinct Parts of Speech, yet it must be acknowledged, at the same time, that they are Words of the last importance, and that the beauty and elegance of a Discourse, in a great measure, depend upon a judicious use of them; for notwithstanding it is no difficult task merely to point out a Thing, or Action; yet to give a particular description of it, and to set it in the fairest and most advantageous point of light, requires more art and judgement in the use of the above Particles, than most people would, without mature reflection, ever imagine.

PART IV.

Of SENTENCES.

A Sentence is either Simple or Compound.

The former (according to the grammatial idea of the term) is a Period, or Set of Words, in which some perfect sense, or sentiment of the mind is fully comprehended; as, "Jesus wept.—Christ died.—Vice is odious.—Virtue is a beauty," &c.

The examples above produced are called simple Sentences, as being nothing more than Noun Substantives, or names in the Nominative Case, and proper Verbs or Affirmations joined to them; without which they could never be understood.

A Compound Sentence is, where two, or more simple Sentences are joined together by proper Particles; as, "there is a time to pipe, and a time to dance; a time to work, and a time to play."

Of the Concord between the Substantive and the Verb.

The Noun Substantive, or name, is the thing, or person, that either is, does, or suffers; and this, for the most part, is set before the Verb; as for instance, "William is fast asleep; Thomas is awake; I am at work; You are at play; He, or she, is gone to market; We, ye, or they, are gone a fishing," &c.

This rule, however, is inverted in the four several cases hereunder particularly mentioned; viz. When a question is asked;—When any word of command is given;—When a sentence is conditional;—and when the Particle (there) or (its) precedes the Affirmation.

In the first place, we say, "Could William ever be so careless?—Could any servants ever be more insolent?—Does the tea-kettle boil?—Is supper ready?" &c.

In the second case, that is to say, in point of any positive command: As, "Mind your business—Read your book.—Hold your tongue," &c.

Where the sentence is conditional, we express ourselves thus: "Had I been apprehensive of the man's insincerity, I would never have trusted him with a shilling.—Were I a man of fortune, I would advance all my poor relations," &c.——

In the last place, we say; "There was a committee of the Bank of England sat yesterday.—There was a great debate in the house of parliament this morning.—It was the husband, not the wife, that was found guilty.—It was a mare, and not a horse, that won the race."

Tho' a Noun or Name is, for the most part, the Nominative Case to the Verb; yet this rule is not always observed; for, in the first place, a Verb, or Affirmation, put into the Infinitive Mood, is sometimes substituted instead of a Noun or Name; as for instance, "To laugh at church is very indecent.—To speak disrespectfully of a benefactor, is most shamefully ungrateful.—To die for the good of one's country, is a truly heroic action," &c.

Sometimes, again, a whole sentence is made use of as the Nominative Case to the Verb; as for example, "A hearty zeal, and an ardent inclination, to serve our great Creator, is our best fence against all mistakes of importance in points of religion," &c."

Now the general rule for finding out the Nominative Case to the Verb, is, to ask the question, who, or what? And the word that answers to who or what is, does, or suffers, is the Nominative Case. As in the preceding questions.——"What is very indecent? To whisper at church.—What is most shamefully ungrateful? To speak disrespectfully of a benefactor.—What is our best fence? &c. A hearty zeal, &c."

Again, I sing.—You dance.—He plays.—We, ye, or they work.—Here ask the question,—" Who sings, dances, plays, or works?"—" I, you," &c.

Here 'tis to be observed, that the Verb must always agree with the substantive Noun or Name, in number and person; as, I love, thou lovest, he loveth, or loves; we, ye, or they love.—Here, we must not say, I loves, or we loves, &c.

When two substantives of the Singular Number precede the Verb, then the Verb must be in the Plural; as for instance, "My brother John and my sister Mary were at the play last night," (not was).—" My father and I were at dinner together, in Guild-hall, last Lord Mayor's day, (not was). " The Lord Mayor and his Lady are to be at St. Paul's this morning," (not is), &c.

Note. If a collective Noun, that is to say, a Name, which expresses a great number of persons, though itself be singular, precedes the Verb, the Verb must be in the Plural Number; as, "The mob were very outrageous in the streets last night, (not was).—" Never mind what the vulgar say, or do," (not says, or does).—" The English army are now in Germany, (not is), &c.

Of the Concord between the Substantive and the Adjective.

In the English Tongue, when we apply an Adjective to a Substantive, we make no distinction (as Grammarians do in Latin) of Case, Gender, or Number; for we say, a modest man; an insolent woman; an affected sop: or, in the plural; modest men; insolent women; affected sops, &c.

Note. The Pronoun This, in the Singular Number, makes These in the Plural: as "This hat is mine; but these two are yours.—This chair is broken, but these are whole and sound."

Again, the Pronoun That, in the Singular Number, makes Those in the Plural: as, "That pair of gloves in the window are yours, but those on the table are mine.—That silver tankard is my landlord's, but those silver candlesticks were borrowed," &c.

Note, once more, that the English Adjective, for the most part, indeed, precedes the Substantive: as, a delightful prospect; a new-built house; a pacing horse, &c. but there are some exceptions to this general rule.

And, in the first place, the Adjective is frequently parted from the Substantive, when a Verb intervenes; as, "Truly brave and heroic is the man, who dies in the defence of his country." —Very richly and gaily dress are the ladies when they go to Court.—Infallibly true are all the doctrines of the sacred scriptures,” &c.

Sometimes, again, the Adjective follows the Substantive, when the Article (the) comes between; as, “George the Third, King of Great Britain, &c.—Lewis the Fifteenth, King of France,” &c.

The Adjective follows the Substantive in the following grammatical expression; as, a Verb active; a Verb passive; a Verb neuter, &c.

To conclude: Adjectives, as we have hinted before, are often made use of as Substantives; as, the general, for the general commander; the subalterns, for the inferior officers. All, for all men; some, for some men; and others, for other men. As for instance; “All were found guilty of high-treason; some were beheaded, and others hung up at Tyburn.”

Of the Concord between the Relative and the Antecedent.

A relative Sentence is one that has in it the relative Adjective who, or which; as, “This is the lady who sate at Bath.—That is the happy man who is the lady’s bridegroom.—This is the mighty horse which threw me into the river.—That is the ship which brought me home safe from Holland,” &c.

The Relative must always be of the same number and person, as the Antecedent; as, “Thrice happy is he who is beloved by his Maker.—Unspeakably unhappy are they who die in their sin.”

Sometimes, indeed, the Relative is suppressed; as, “This is the man I am infinitely obliged to; for, to whom I am oblig’d.—That is the lady I love beyond my life; for, whom I love.” &c.

There are divers figures made use of in some sentences; but, as they rather belong to the Art of Rhetoric, than that of Grammar, we shall purposely decline saying any thing about them; as being, in some measure, foreign to our present purpose.

OF PUNCTUATION.

Of Sentences both single and compound are formed Periods, which as they cannot consist of less than two Members, so they should not have more than four; for dissertations where the Periods are long, we attended not only with great difficulty to the person who delivers them, but with confusion and reluctance to those who hear them: And for that reason, they seldom meet with favour and applause.

As the Members, therefore, of a complete Period are four; so they are distinguished by four several marks; which are commonly called Points or Stops;—that is to say, the Comma, marked thus (,) ; the Semicolon, thus (;) ; the Colon, thus (:); and the Period, Full-point or Stop, marked thus (.) . And the reason that these distinctions are thus made, is this; because no whole period is to be pronounced in one breath, but requires more or less pause, as the nature of the subject requires.

The first Mark, or Comma, is used, when we make so small a pause, as whilst only we can tell one; and is made use of, for the most part, in order to distinguish particular names and things; as the names of the four most holy Evangelists, Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John—the four seasons of the year, vis. Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter—the twelve months, as. January, February, March, &c.—and the three divisions of virtue; namely, the human, social, and divine,” &c.

The second Mark, or Semicolon, is made use of to denote a pause whilst we can tell two, and is most frequent, next to the Comma.—This is affixed to such parts of a Period, as have one or more Commas in them, and contain only a part of the declaration of the subject; as in the following Period; “If they be tempted, they resist; if molested, they suffer it patiently; if praised, they humble themselves; and attribute it to the Almighty.”

The third Mark, or Colon, makes three times the pause of a Comma; and is made use of to such parts of a Sentence or Period only, wherein the sense, or assertion, is perfectly finished. As for example; “In the beginning, God created the heavens, and the earth: And the earth was without form, and void: And darkness was upon the face of the deep.”

And here, the reader may observe, that the subject of the Period differs, where the two Colons are regularly placed.

A Full-point, or Stop, is placed no where but at the end of a Period; that is to say, when the whole declaration upon any particular topic, whether long or short, is perfectly finished.

Besides these, however, there are divers other notes, characters, or marks, made use of in the Orthography of most languages, as well as the English; and which frequently occur. And these are;

First, A Note of Interrogation, marked thus (?)

Secondly, A Note of Admiration, marked thus (!)

The former is always made use of when any question is asked. As, “Who is there?—Where are you going?—When will you return?—What o’clock is it? &c.”

The latter is made use of indeed, not only in cases of Admiration, but Exclamation likewise. As, "O for shame!—Was the like ever seen!—Was ever age so corrupt!—O times!—O manners!"—O heaven!" &c.

An Accent, marked thus (´), denotes that syllable in a word, whereon the stress of the voice is to be laid:—As to tormént (the V. rb), to distinguish it from the Substantive, which is accented on the first syllable, thus, tórmént.

An Apostrophe, marked thus (´), denotes that there are two words contracted into one; as I'll, for I will; you mayn't, for you may not; be sha'nt, for be shall not, &c.

It is used likewise in the genitive case of Nouns, by way of contraction; as, God's glory, for the glory of God; Job's integrity, for the integrity of Job, &c.

An Asterisk, or Asterisk, marked thus (*); and an Obelisk, marked thus (†); are used for references to some note, either in the margin or the foot of the page.

A Paragraph marked thus (¶); and a Section marked thus (§); are frequently used, but more particularly in the Sacred Scriptures, when a new subject or section is begun.

A Quotation, which is generally marked thus ("); that is, two commas inverted; is used to denote some passage extracted from some author, worthy of the reader's particular notice.

A Hyphen, marked thus (-) is used for the separation of compound words; as, Christ-mas-day, Lady-day, Mal-content, Water-mill, &c.

A Parenthesis, marked thus (); or a Crotch, marked thus []; is made use of to include an expression in the midst of a sentence, of a different import; as in the following text; "For to their power (I bear record) they were willing;"—where the sense of the sentence is complete without the words so included.

A Dialysis, marked thus (.), when placed over two Vowels, denotes that they are not a diphthong, but two distinct syllables.

An Index, marked thus (⸫), points to some particular passage, that is of more importance, and more remarkable than ordinary.

Besides these, there are divers other characters, or marks, made use of, by way of abbreviation, by tradesmen, mathematicians, astronomers, physicians, &c. which are needless here, we humbly conceive, to be particularly specified.

Having said thus much concerning Points or Stops, we come now to the use of Capital Letters, which are to be used only, first, in the beginning of words, and never in the middle. Secondly, after a period or full-stop, either in Prose or Verse. Thirdly, at the beginning of all proper Names; as of Men, Women, Countries, Cities, Rivers, &c. Fourthly, at the beginning of every emphatical Word; such as God, Jesus Christ, the King, the Queen, &c. And lastly the Pronoun I, and the exclamatory O, must always be Capital Letters.

N. b. All books are printed either in Roman Characters or Types, the Black Letter, or the Italic; But the two last are now very sparingly used.

T H E

C O N C L U S I O N .

Of Prose and Verse; as also, of the Variety of Styles peculiar to some Authors.

WHATEVER we speak, or write, is either naturally in Prose, or artificially in Verse.

The former, being the common and general way, is a natural and proper connexion of words thrown into perfect sentences, without being confined by any poetical measures, in opposition to Verse.

The latter consists in a number of words which have a certain cadence, and determined measure; the like being also reiterated in the course of a Poem, in opposition to Prose. Or, in other terms, verses are a particular method of delivering our thoughts, either without or with an harmonious rhime; which rhime consists in a certain proportion of feet, or syllables in each verse, or line, and a conformity of sound at the close of several verses.

O f S T Y L E S .

A Style (in any language) is nothing more, than a particular manner of delivering a man's thoughts in writing, agreeable to the rules of Syntax.

Now Styles are as various as men's faces, or voices; and every one has a Style that is proper and peculiar to himself. However, the Stile ought always to be adapted to the Subject; and be either plain, moderate, or sublime.

The first is that, which is often called, the low or simple; or, in other terms, the ordinary and familiar Style; which requires little or no ornament, but that of a natural or common expression : and this is proper for any epistolary correspondence, dialogues, and such books as are calculated for the instruction of youth in any of the arts and sciences.

By a moderate Style, or, in other terms, an equable or intermediate Style, I mean that which keeps a medium betwixt the plain and sublime ; is that which goes something beyond the one, but aims not at the loftiness of the other. And this is properly used for narratives, chronicles, histories, and annals.

The sublime Style is that which consists in pompous words and sentences ; which, by its noble boldness, attracts, or rather commands the attention of the hearer, and extorts admiration and applause, even from such as are unwilling to give it. It is adorned with abundance of rhetorical figures, artfully introduced to move the passions. In a word, it shimmers, as it were, and lightens. For which reason, this is peculiarly used in tragedies, orations, and other persuasive discourses on subjects of the highest importance.

There are two other Styles, which, without any impropriety, may be termed the two extremes ; namely the Laconic, and Asiatic Styles.

The former (so called from Laconia, a city of the Lacedemonians, where it was used to an association or excess) is a concise style that comprehends a great deal of matter in a narrow compass.

The latter (so called from the people of Asia, who affected to write and speak in the florid way) is a Style that is very redundant and prolix ; or where abundance of words are made use of to express but a little matter.

There is another Style, indeed, called the dry, or jejune Style, which is destitute of all ornament, and spirit ; and this I imagine, but few affect, and no one would recommend.

Having thus given my young readers a transient idea of the various Styles which they will probably meet with in the prosecution of their studies ; I might here not only naturally, but pertinently enough, lay down some select rules for their observance, in their future practice of the Art of Composition ; but as remarks of that kind are of no immediate concern ; and as brevity, consistent with perspicuity, is professedly aimed at throughout the whole of this present undertaking, I shall close this Compendious English Grammar, with a few general instructions for reading and speaking our Mother-tongue justly ; or, in other terms, with elegance, propriety, and a good grace ; as being an accomplishment more immediately requisite, and a concern of the last importance.

In order, therefore, that the young reader may attain so laudable a qualification, he must have an adequate idea of, and perfectly understand, the several Articles hereunder particularly mentioned.

And, in the first place, he must have a competent notion of the nature and ground-work of accenting his words. As this, however, is a concern of no small importance, so it is not to be attained any otherwise, than by an assiduous care, and daily practice. And for that reason, the judicious Compiler of the Dictionary annexed has been peculiarly careful in this respect, in order to prevent a vicious pronunciation. And it is further evident, that the very same word is frequently a noun and a verb likewise ; and that the sense of it is to be determined only by the different accent, or stress of the voice that is put upon it ; for if it be a noun or name only, the accent must be laid on the first syllable ; but when 'tis an affirmation, or verb, and signifies action, the stress of the voice must be placed on the last : As will more fully appear by the short table hereunder written.

The T A B L E.
Nouns.	Verbs.		Nouns.
A'b-sent	To ab-sent		A'c-cent
Cé-ment	To ce-mént		Cón-vert
Fér-ment	To fer-mént		In-cense
O'bject	To objéct		Pré-sent
Ré-cord	To re-córd		Súb-ject
			To ac-cént
			To con-vért
			To in-cense
			To pré-sent
			To sub-ject

Here we must observe, that as the above dissyllables have sometimes an accent on the first, and sometimes on the last : so in trissyllables, or words consisting of three syllables, the accent or stress of the voice lies sometimes on the first, sometimes on the second, and often on the last ; as will appear by the following tables. Tho', in this case, it is true, the accent makes no alteration in the sense, as it does above.

T A B L E I.
Accent on the first.	Accent on the first.	Accent on the first.
A'-va-ri-ce	I'-mi-tate	Quá-li-ty
Bóun-ti-ful	Kná-ve-ry	Rí-vu-let
Chá-ri-ty	Lí-ber-ty	Sé-cre-fy
Dí-li-gence	Mó-def-ty	Tém-pe-rance
F'-ne-my	Nár-ra-tive	Vá-ni-ty
Fa'-mi-ly	O'-mi-nous	Wíl-der-ness
Grá-ti-tude	Pa'-ra-dise	Yé-ter-day.
Hár-mo-ny

TABLE

T A B L E II.

Accent on the second Syllable.

A-bún-dance
Bra-vá-do
Ca-thé-dral
De-mó-lísh
Em-plóy-ment
Fa-ná-tic
Gi-gán-tic
Im-pér-fect

Accent on the second Syllable.

La-có-nic
Ma-jéf-tic
No-vém-ber
Oc-tó-ber
Pre-cép-tor
Re-mém-ber
Sep-tém-ber
To-bá-co.

T A B L E III.

Accent on the third Syllable.

Ap-pre-hénd
Bri-ga-diér
Ca-va-liér
Dis-ap-péar
E-ver-mòre
Gre-na-diér
Here-to-fóre
In-cor-réct

Accent on the third Syllable.

Mis-ap-ply'
O-ver-cóme
Per-se-vére
Re-com-ménd
Su-per-híne
Un-be-liéf
Va-lun-teér
Yef-ter-níght.

Note, most Polyfyllables, or words of four or more syllables, have sometimes two and sometimes three Accents: as for instance, in ar'-bi-trá-tor, bé'-ne-fac'-tor, com'-men-tá-tor, múl-ti-pli-cá-tion, trán-sub-stán-ti-á-ti-on.

Note, likewise the double Accent, marked thus (") is used to denote, that a certain letter, in many syllables, tho' wrote but once, is sounded as if it were double, or wrote twice; as in the words á-ni-mal, é'-le-ment, i''-mi-tate, ó'-ra-cle, &c. And unless a reader or speaker be very careful in this particular, his expression or delivery will prove not only vicious, but harsh and disagreeable to those who listen to his discourse.

And as the business of accenting aright is thus requisite in prose; it is much more so in poetry.

It is in this, indeed, that their specific difference principally consists in the English Tongue: for an English Verse, for the most part, is nothing more than a line of ten feet, each consisting of a short and a long syllable, alternately throughout, as in the following. Dybbich:

Immodest words admit of no defence;

For want of decency is want of sense.

This distinction, indeed, of short and long syllables in Latin Poetry, is called Quantity; but in English Poetry, it is nothing more than what we call Accent in Prose.

Here, however, it is to be observed, that there is a kind of harmony of notes and sounds, in Prose as well as Verses, which depends on the quantity of expression, as to long and short, loud and low, grave and acute; in much the same manner as there is in music itself, which is nothing but a just modulation of sounds, abstracted from verbal. And it must be allowed, that a notion of the ground of harmony, and a musical ear, are, in a great measure, necessary to enable him that either reads or speaks, to deliver himself with propriety and a good grace.

In the art of reading and speaking justly, there is another article of great importance to be well observed; namely, that which grammarians usually call Emphasis; that is to say, the pronunciation of some particular words with a peculiar energy, and strength of expression; for according as this Emphasis is placed on the several words which compose it, the sense may be capable of quite different significations.

And from what we have here advanced, we may observe, how highly requisite it is to avoid, with the utmost precaution, that vicious manner of delivery or utterance, commonly called a Monotony; that is to say, such an even and invariable tone of the voice, which neither rises nor falls; and consequently wherein no such thing as Accent, Quantity, or Emphasis, can possibly be; by which disagreeable manner of pronunciation, scarce any sense can be made of what such a miserable Orator either reads or speaks. In a word, without a proper accent or emphasis the discourse is lifeless, unaffecting, and insipid; and nothing can possibly be more irksome to a judicious ear.

To conclude: There is no possibility of any persons reading justly, or speaking with propriety, unless he be a perfect master of the Subject on which he presumes to harangue; for if the full force and true sense of each word and sentence be not thoroughly understood; it cannot, of course, be expressed with a proper emphasis and accent. And, in a word, to descant upon any topic without having a competent knowledge of it, presumption to the last degree, is not folly in the abstract,

OF THE
C O N S T I T U T I O N,
G O V E R N M E N T A N D T R A D E
O F
E N G L A N D.

ONE of the most useful branches of Knowledge, and of which no BRITON should be ignorant, is that of the Constitution of his Native Country. This is absolutely necessary in a nation where all are Politicians, and where all are governed only by those laws which they, or their Fathers, either personally, or by their representatives, were instrumental in forming.

The Government of England was founded on principles of Liberty; its Constitution is the work of a brave and wise People, who, considering that all power was derived from them, and was to be subservient to their happiness, committed it into the hands of the Three Estates, who were to be a mutual support, and a mutual check to each other, and yet so ordered, that the interest of each is best promoted, by each confining itself within its proper bounds.

The King, who is here invested with the highest prerogative, has all the honours, and all the splendor of Majesty, and is only limited where Power might become Tyranny, and where he might be capable of injuring either himself or his People. By this means, we reap all the advantages, without any of the evils of a Monarchical Government. "A King" (says a noble Author) has a divine right to govern well. A divine right to govern ill, is "an absurdity; and to assert it is blasphemy." The King of England has the power of doing good in its fullest extent. This is the only power that can give him true dignity and distinguished honour: for it is not the least diminution to his glory, that he is confined from doing what would tarnish his reputation, and render him infamous to posterity: on the contrary, this is a circumstance that renders him truly great, and raises him above all the Tyrants of the Earth: "Our King (says a modern Patriot) in the trust and dignity of his office, transcends all other Kings and Emperors on the globe, as far as we excel all other Subjects in Liberty, so that he may not unjustly be called a KING OF KINGS, while most of the mighty Monarchs of other nations are no more than the Masters of some herds of Slaves." The King of England receives all his honour, power, and authority from the Laws; and therefore, at his mounting the Throne, he binds himself by a solemn oath to make them the rule of his conduct, and before he receives one oath of allegiance, is obliged to swear to observe the Great Charter of the English Liberties, and thus, at his Coronation, renews the original compact between the King and his Subjects. He then becomes the Head of the State, the supreme earthly Governor, and is himself subject to none but God and the Laws, to which he is as much bound to pay obedience, as the meanest Subject. Though he has not the power of making Laws, yet no Law can be enacted without his consent; and though the execution of them is always entrusted to his care, he cannot seize the property of the most inconsiderable man in his dominions, except it be forfeited by Law. On the contrary, the Subject may, without the least danger, sue his Sovereign, or those who act in his name, and under his authority; he may do this in open Court, where the King may be cast, and be obliged to pay damages to his Subject. He cannot take away the Liberty of the least individual, unless he has by some illegal act forfeited his right to Liberty; or except when the State is in danger, and the Representatives of the People think the public safety makes it necessary that he should have the power of confining persons, and seizing their papers on a suspicion of guilt; but this power is always given him only for a limited time. The King has a right to pardon, but neither he nor the Judges, to whom he delegates his authority, can condemn a man as criminal, except he be first found guilty by Twelve Men who must be his Peers or his Equals. That the Judges may not be influenced by the King, or his Ministers, to misrepresent the case to the Jury, they have their salaries for life, and not during the pleasure of the Sovereign. Neither can the King take away, or endanger the life of any Subject without trial, and the persons being first chargeable with a capital crime, as treason, murder, felony, or some other act injurious to society; nor can any Subject be deprived of his liberty for the highest crime, till some proof of his guilt be given, upon oath, before a Magistrate; and he has then a right to insist upon being brought, the first opportunity, to a fair trial, or to be restored to liberty on giving sufficient bail for his appearance. If a man is charged with a capital offence, he must not undergo the ignominy of being tried for his life, till the evidences of his guilt are laid before the Grand Jury of the town or county in which the fact is alleged to be committed, and not without twelve of them agreeing to find the bill of indictment against him. If they do this, he is to stand a trial before twelve other men, whose opinion is definitive. In some cases, the man (who is always supposed innocent till there is sufficient proof of his guilt) is allowed a copy of his indictment, in order to help him to make his defence. He is also furnished with the panel, or list of the Jury, who are his true and proper Judges, that he may learn their characters, and discover whether they want abilities, or whether they are prejudiced against him. He may, in open Court, peremptorily object to twenty of the number*; and to as many more as he can give any reason for their not being admitted his judges, till at last twelve unexceptionable men, the neighbours of the party accused, or living near the place where the supposed fact was committed, are sworn, to give a true verdict according to the evidence produced in Court. By challenging the Jury, the Prisoner prevents all possibility of bribery, or the influence of any superior power: by their living near the place where the fact was committed, they are supposed to be men who know the Prisoner's course of life, and the credit of the evidence. These only are the judges, from whose sentence the Prisoner is to expect life or death; and upon their integrity and understanding, the lives of all that are brought in danger ultimately depend, and from their judgment there lies no appeal: they are therefore to be all of one mind, and after they have fully heard the evidence, are to be confined without meat, drink, or candle, till they are unanimous in acquitting or condemning the prisoner. Every Jurymen is, therefore, invested with a solemn and awful trust. If he, without evidence, submits his opinion to that of any of the other Jury, or yields in complaisance to the opinion of the Judge; if he neglect to examine with the utmost care; if he question the veracity of the witnesses, who may be of an infamous character; or, after the most impartial hearing, has the least doubt upon his mind, and yet joins in condemning the person accused, he will wound his own conscience, and bring upon himself the complicated guilt of perjury and murder. The freedom of Englishmen consists in its being out of the power of the Judge † on the bench to injure them, for declaring a man innocent, whom he wishes to be brought in guilty. Was not this the case, Juries would be useless; so far from being judges themselves, they would only be the tools of another, whose province it is not to guide, but to give a sanction to their determination. Tyranny might triumph over the lives and liberties of the Subject, and the Judge on the bench be the Minister of the Prince's vengeance.

These are the glorious privileges which we enjoy above any other Nation upon earth. Juries have always been considered as giving the most effectual check to Tyranny; for in a nation like this, where a King can do nothing against Law, they are a security that he shall never make the Laws, by a bad administration, the instrument of cruelty and oppression; was it not for Juries, the advice given by Father Paul in his Maxims of the Republic of Venice might take effect in its fullest latitude. "When the offence is committed

* The party may challenge thirty-five in case of Treason, and twenty in case of Felony, without shewing any cause, and as many more as he can assign cause against.

† Some have been fined for having fruit in their pockets when they were withdrawn to consider of their verdict, though they did not eat it. Leon. Dyer. 137.

‡ "Some Jurymen (says Mr. Clare, in his English Liberties) may be apt to say, that if we do not find as the Judge directs, we may come into trouble, the Judge may fine us, &c. I answer, No Judge dares offer any such thing; you are the proper Judges of the matters before you, and your souls are at stake; you ought to act freely, and are not bound, though the Court demand it, to give the reason why you bring it in thus or thus; for you of the Grand Jury are sworn to the contrary, viz. to keep secret your fellows council and your own: and you of the Petty Jury are no way obliged to declare your motives, for it may not be convenient. In Queen Elizabeth's days a man was arraigned for murder before Justice Anderson; the evidence was so strong, that eleven of the twelve were presently for finding him guilty; the twelfth man refused, and kept them so long that they were ready to starve, and at last made them comply with him, and bring in the Prisoner not guilty. The Judge, who had several times admonished him to join with his Fellows, being surprized, sent for him, and discoursed with him privately, to whom, upon a promise of indemnity, he at last owned, that he himself was the man that did the murder, and the Prisoner was innocent, and that he was resolved not to add perjury, and a second murder to the first."

" by

by a Nobleman against a Subject, (says he) let all ways be tried to justify him; and if that is not possible to be done, let him be chastised with greater noise than damage. If it be a Subject that has affronted a Nobleman, let him be punished with the utmost severity, that the Subject may not get too great a custom of laying their hands on the Patrician Orders." In short, were it not for Juries, a corrupt Nobleman might, whenever he pleased, act the Tyrant; while the Judge would have that power which is now deputed to our Kings. But by our happy Constitution, which breathes nothing but Liberty and Equity, all imaginary injustice is allowed to the meanest as well as the greatest. When a Prisoner is brought to take his trial, he is freed from all bonds; and though the Judges are supposed to be partial to the Prisoner, yet, as he may be incapable of vindicating his own cause, other Counsel are allowed him; he may try the validity and legality of the indictment, and may set it aside, if it be contrary to Law. Nothing is wanting to clear up the cause of Innocence, and to prevent the Sufferer from sinking under the power of corrupt Judges and the oppression of the Great. The racks and tortures that are cruelly made use of in other parts of Europe, to make a man accuse himself, are here unknown, and none punished without conviction, but he who refuses to plead in his own defence.

But, after all this, does the King lose any part of his real dignity, by not having the power to interfere, to rob and murder at pleasure? No: his Honour results from the safety of his Subjects, and the God-like power of diffusing only happiness, by a strict observance of the Laws, and in sometimes softening the rigour of them with mercy. The Royal Prerogative consists in the right of declaring war and making peace; in giving his assent to such new laws as he apprehends will be for the good of his Subjects, and withholding it, when he believes that they will be hurtful; he is invested with the power of assembling, adjourning, proroguing, and dissolving the Houses of Parliament, and consequently of putting a stop to the consultations of both, when he believes that they are acting inconsistent with the rights of each other, and the good of the community. He has the liberty of coining money. He is the fountain of Honour; but though he gives Nobility, their independence is secured by his not having it in his power to take it away. He has the right of commanding the army, and the Militia is under his controul. His person is sacred; and a Subject, for a single act of Treason, not only loses his life, but his heirs are deprived of his estate. He is allowed a Privy Council to assist him with their advice, and the persons of those Members of which this Council is composed, are also sacred. He has the supreme power in all causes, Ecclesiastical as well as Civil, by which the Clergy are divested of all dominion over the conscience, which is wisely left to him to whom it properly belongs—to that God, who alone can search the heart; and by this means Persecution is prevented, and Religious Liberty secured.

In every kingdom, and in every state, there are always persons distinguished by birth, riches, and honours; advantages which give them such a considerable weight in the Government, that were they to be confounded with the multitude, they would have no interest in preserving Liberty; for as most of the popular resolutions would be made to their prejudice, the Public Liberty would be their Slavery. The share they are therefore allowed in the Legislature, is in proportion to the interest they have in the State; and from hence it is that they form a body of Nobles, that has a right to put a stop to the enterprizes of the People, to counterbalance the right which the People enjoy, of putting a stop to their encroachments.

The Legislative Power is committed to these two Bodies, to that of the Nobles, and that of the Representatives of the People, each of which have separate views and interests. But here there is this essential difference; for while the individuals who compose the House of Commons enjoy their power but for a limited time, and can only be restored by new powers given them by their Constituents, the privileges enjoyed by the Members of the House of Lords are in their own nature hereditary. And this is the more necessary, as their high prerogatives render them subject to popular envy, and consequently their privileges must, in a free State, be always in danger. The only disadvantage that can possibly arise from this is, that as their power is hereditary, they might be tempted to pursue their own interest to the prejudice of the Public; and therefore to prevent this, where they might receive the greatest pecuniary advantages from being corrupt, as in the case of granting supplies, they have only the power of refusing, while the Commons alone have that of enacting.

The Great, we have already said, are always exposed to popular envy; and therefore, were they to be judged by the People, they might be in the greatest danger from their Judges; they would then want the privilege of being tried by their Peers, a privilege enjoyed by the meanest Subject. They are therefore not to be tried by the ordinary Courts of Judicature, but by that part of the Legislature of which each is a member. As all human compositions must be defective, and the best laws in some instances too severe; and as the national judges are mere passive beings, incapable of moderating either the force or rigour of the Laws, this part of the Legislature is here, as well as in the former case, a necessary Tribunal, to whom it belongs to moderate the Law. In their decisions, they give not their opinions upon oath; but each laying his right hand on his heart, gives his verdict upon the single testimony of his Honour. Thus are the Lords invested with every outward mark of dignity, and with all the privileges necessary to maintain their rank in all its splendour; and yet are so limited, that they have not the power to encroach upon the Rights and Liberties of the inferior Subjects.

part

But while the privileges of the Lords are preserved, and other wise purposes answered by their having a share of the Legislative Power, the privileges of all inferior persons are secured by every man's having, either in person or by his representative, a share in the Legislature, by which means no Laws can be enacted or repealed, without the consent of the Representatives of the majority of the nation. Thus the Liberties of the Commons are as strongly secured as the Royal Prerogatives, or as the Privileges of the Lords. The Commons are the Guardians of the Public Liberty; they are the Deputies sent up from all quarters to make such laws as shall best promote the interest of the whole Collective Body. And though they have not the power of examining the meanest Subject upon oath, yet they can search into the conduct of the highest Peer in the realm, and, in the name of the People, impeach the Favourite or Minister of the King. They can call the Judges to an account for the maladministration of their office, and bring all those to Justice who make an ill use of their power. Thus the Commons are the Grand Jury of the Nation; but as it would be improper that those who are impeached in so high a Court should be tried by a lower, which might be intimidated and over-awed by the power of the Commons, therefore to preserve the dignity of the Peers, and the security of the Subject, those whom they impeach are tried by the Lords, whose superior dignity sets them above all influence, and who have neither the same interests nor the same passions.

Thus our happy Constitution consists of Three States, each of which has separate privileges, each is a check upon the other, and yet each is equally dependent. The first, which is the executive Power, has the privilege of assembling, adjourning, proroguing, and dissolving the two Legislative Bodies: because, these are supposed to have no will, except when they are assembled; and when they were assembled, if they had the right to prorogue themselves, they might never be prorogued; they might encroach on the executive power; they might become despotic, and even one of these might destroy the Liberties of the other. But as the executive power might make an ill use of this privilege, by never assembling the Legislative, it is rendered dependent on these Bodies, by their holding the sinews of Government in their hands, and the granting the necessary supplies only from year to year. The King, indeed, has a power to raise what forces he pleases; but the Representatives of the People, who grant the supplies, can only determine what number he shall be enabled to pay.

But while the Representatives of the People have thus the important charge of watching over the preservation of our Liberties, our Trade, and our Property, what care ought every county, city, and borough to take, to chuse such only as are qualified for performing this important task; for chusing such whose integrity will render them superior to the temptation of a bribe, whose wisdom is capable of managing our interests, and whose greatness of soul will make them think that they can never do too much for their Country, and for their Constituents. He who parts with his vote, and for a lucrative or selfish consideration, is instrumental in chusing one whom his conscience disapproves, and who is unqualified or corrupt, is a fool and a madman; is unworthy the name of a Freeman, since he, as much as in his power, sells himself and his Country, and can never have the least reason to complain, if he should live to see this happy Constitution overturned, and our Liberty and all our Privileges destroyed.

Having thus given a view of the British Constitution in general, we shall now present the Reader (by way of supplement to it) with a general sketch of the Government and Trade of England. The Reader will find some few particulars, respecting our Courts of Justice, and Ecclesiastical Government, interspersed under different heads in different parts of the DICTIONARY. It was thought, however, that the very few repetitions it may occasion, will be amply compensated by the comprehensive but complete view this sketch will afford the young Reader of the internal Government of these Kingdoms.

Of the Ecclesiastical Government and Courts.

The Convocation formerly, at least, had the principal part of the Ecclesiastical Government; for this is a national synod of the Clergy assembled together, to consider of the state of the Church, and to call those to an account who have broached new opinions, inconsistent with the Doctrines of the Church of England. But in a late reign, they having

having been thought to proceed with too great severity against the delinquents of this kind, they have not been permitted to sit any long time since. However, they are called together at the same time as the Parliament, by the authority of the King, who directs his writs to the Archbishop of each province to summons all Bishops, Deans, Arch-deacons, &c. to meet at a certain time and place. The Convocation consists of one Proctor sent from each Cathedral and Collegiate Church, and two from the body of the inferior Clergy of each Diocese. The Upper House in the province of Canterbury consists of the Archbishop, who is President, and twenty-two Bishops; and the Lower House is composed of all the Deans, Arch-deacons, and Proctors, as above; in all, one hundred and sixty-six. The Archbishop of York may likewise hold a Convocation at the same time.

King Henry the VIIIth's Chapel at Westminster is generally the place of meeting for the province of Canterbury; and York for the province of York. The first business of the Lower House is to chuse a Prolocutor, who is presented to the Upper House by two of the members; one of them making a speech in Latin, and the Prolocutor another; to which the Archbishop returns an answer in the same language.

Under these two Archbishops there are twenty-four Bishops; that is, twenty-one in the Province of Canterbury, and three in the province of York. These have all the title of Lords, on account of the Baronies annexed to the Bishoprick; and they take place of all other Barons, as well in Parliament as in other assemblies. The first of these is the Bishop of London, who is Dean of the episcopal church of that province; the next is Durham, and then Winchester; but all the rest take place according to the seniority of their consecration.

The business of a Bishop, according to his Episcopal Order, is to ordain Priests and Deacons, to consecrate Churches and Burying-places, and to administer the rites and ceremonies of Confirmation.

The jurisdiction of a Bishop relates to the Probation of Wills; to grant Administration of Goods to such as die intestate; to take care of perishable goods, when no one will administer; to collate Benefices; to grant institutions to livings; to defend the Liberties of the Church; and to visit his own diocese once in three years. Besides these, there are many other particulars which our room will not permit us to mention.

The Court of Arches is the most ancient Consistory of the province of Canterbury, and all Appeals in Church Matters are directed to this Court. The Processes run in the name of the Judge, who is called Dean of the Arches; and the Advocates who plead in this Court must be Doctors of the Civil Law. The Court of Audience has the same authority as this, and the Archbishop's Chancery was formerly joined to this. The Prerogative Court is that wherein Wills are proved, and Administrations taken out.

The Court of Peculiarities, relating to certain parishes, have a jurisdiction among themselves for the probate of Wills; and therefore are exempt from the Bishop's Courts. The See of Canterbury has no less than fifty-seven of these Peculiarities.

The Court of Delegates is so called, because it consists of Commoners delegated or appointed by the Royal Commission; but it is no standing Court.

Besides these, every Bishop has a Court of his own, which is held in the Cathedral of his diocese, and is called the Consistory-court. Likewise, every Archdeacon has his Court, as well as the Dean and Chapter of every cathedral.

Of the Parliament of Great-Britain.

This Ancient Body consists of Two Houses, one of which is called the House of Lords and the other the House of Commons. Before the Union, the House of Lords consisted of the spiritual and temporal Peers of England; and the House of Commons of 513 Knights, Burgesses and Citizens. But since the Union, there are sixteen Peers of Scotland added to the House of Lords, and 45 Commoners to the House of Commons. The first of these are chosen before the sitting of every new Parliament, by the Peers of Scotland, out of their own body.

The design of Parliaments is to maintain the Constitution, to support the dignity of the Crown, and to keep inviolable the privileges of the People. They are also to raise subsidies, to make laws, and to redress all public grievances. The power of calling a Parliament, and of adjourning and proroguing the same, is entirely lodged in the Sovereign.

The fixing of the Parliament is appointed by the King's proclamation, with the advice of the Privy Council; and in chusing a new one, writs are issued out by the Lord Chancellor to the Lords to appear at the time and place appointed. Writs are also sent to the Sheriffs of every county, commanding them to summon the Electors, to chuse as many Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, in their respective counties, as are to sit in the House of Commons.

The

The writs for Scotland are directed to the Privy Council, for summoning the 16 Peers, and for electing 45 members.

No Judge, Sheriff, or Clergyman, can be elected; and no Gentleman can be elected for a County unless he has 600*l.* a year; nor for a City or Borough, unless he has 300*l.* a year. Formerly Parliaments met at different Places in the kingdom; but of late they assemble at Westminster, at what was formerly called St. Stephen's chapel.

When the King comes to Parliament, the Usher of the Black Rod is ordered to call the Commons up to the House of Lords, where they stand without the Bar; and the King commands them, by the Lord Chancellor, to chuse one of the Members for their Speaker; and to present him such a day. The choice being made by a majority of votes, at the day appointed he is presented to the King in the House of Lords, between two Members, for his approbation. The Lord Chancellor, or Keeper for the time being, is always Speaker for the House of Peers. Since the Reformation, no Roman Catholic can sit in either House, till he has first taken the oaths.

Though the number of the House of Commons is so great, yet 300 are commonly reckoned a full House; and there can be no business done if there are less than forty. At the first meeting of the Parliament, they always appoint Standing Grand Committees, for Privileges, Elections, Grievances, Trade, and Religion.

The chief business of the Parliament is to revive and abrogate old Laws, and to make new ones; but whenever a new Law is proposed, it must be first put in writing, and then it is called a Bill; but the Commons only have the power of introducing Money-Bills. Before any Bill can pass into a Law, it must be read three several times in each House, except a Bill of Indemnity, which requires only once reading. The leave of the House must be obtained to bring in any Private Bill, and the House must be acquainted with the substance of it, either by motion or petition. After it has been read the first time, the Speaker recites an abstract of the Bill, and puts the question, whether it shall be read a second time or not. But if a Bill comes from the House of Lords, so much favour and respect is shewn, that if it be spoken against in the first reading, the Speaker puts the question for the second reading before it is rejected, if that should be the case. Bills are seldom read twice the first day, unless upon very extraordinary occasions, and require the utmost expedition. Upon the second reading, if none speak against the Bill, and several for it, the Speaker may put the question for engrossing it.

When debates arise upon the second reading, and they are over, the House commonly calls for committing the Bill to the Committee of the whole House, or to a Select Committee. Sometimes it may happen, the Bill may be recommitted before the Speaker puts the question for engrossing. After a Bill has been engrossed, it is to be read a third time, in order to have it passed. But when any debate happens, after it is over, the Speaker holds the Bill in his hand and says, "As many as are of opinion that this Bill should pass, say yes, and as many as are of the contrary opinion, say no." Upon which he informs the House, whether the yea's, or no's have it. But when the thing is doubtful, two Tellers are appointed for each side, one to number the yea's, and the other the no's; however, the question is first put, which of these shall go out of the House, and this is called dividing the House. After the numbering them is over, the Tellers declare to the Speaker the number of yea's and no's; upon which all return to their places. If the no's have it, the Bill is said to pass in the negative. But if it passes in the affirmative, they order it to be sent to the House of Lords for their concurrence.

When a Bill is sent by the Lords to the Commons, they send none of their Members, but only Masters in Chancery, who deliver the Bill to the Speaker. When there is a disagreement in the Houses about a Bill, a conference is demanded, which is held in the Painted Chamber. In voting in the House of Lords, they begin with the lowest Baron, and so proceed to the highest Peer; who each for himself says content, or not content; and if the voices are equal, the negative carries it. After an adjournment of either House, they may resume the business they were upon, but after a prorogation they cannot, for then the Session is ended. Every one knows, that after a dissolution of the Old Parliament, a New One must be elected in the manner mentioned above.

Of the Courts of Justice.

The Courts of Justice, sitting at Westminster, are open four times a year; that is, at Easter, Trinity, Michaelmas, and Hilary terms. There are four Courts, namely the Court of Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas, and the Court of Exchequer; not to mention that of the Duchy of Lancaster, because that only takes cognizance of all the causes relating to the revenue of this Duchy, which has been long annexed to the Crown; the chief Judge of this Court is called the Chancellor of this Duchy.

The

The Court of Chancery is a court of equity, and designed to relieve the Subject against Cheats, breaches of trust, and other oppressions, to temper the rigour of the law. However, the remedy has often proved worse than the disease, on account of the length of time before the cause has been determined. The Chief Judge is the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper; and the form of proceeding is by bills, answers, and decrees; and the witnesses are examined in private: however, it must be observed, that the decrees of this court are only binding to the persons of those concerned in them; for they do not affect their lands and goods; and consequently, if a man refuse to comply with the terms, they can do nothing more to him than send him to prison. This Court is not like others, which have no power except in term-time; for this is always open; and if a man be sent to prison, the Lord Chancellor, in any vacation, can grant a Habeas Corpus, if he sees there is reason to do. He may also at these times grant prohibitions.

The Lord Chancellor has twelve Assistants, called Masters in Chancery, whose business is to take affidavits or depositions upon oath, concerning any matter for which an oath is required by the rules of the Court, and they have an office in Chancery-lane. They also examine accounts depending on this Court, of which they make their report in writing. Besides these, there are several Masters Extraordinary, to take affidavits in the country.

The Master of the Rolls is the principal of the twelve, and he has the custody of all charters, customs, commissions, deeds, and recognizances; which being made on rolls of parchment gave occasion to his name, and the repository of them is called the Rolls; here all the rolls are kept since the beginning of the reign of Richard III. This is a great officer, and usually hears causes in Chancery, when the Chancellor himself is absent. He keeps a Court at the Rolls, where he hears and determines causes that come there before him; he has the gift of the Six Clerks Offices, and those possessed of them are next in degree to the Masters in Chancery. Their business is to enroll all patents, commissions, licences, pardons, and other instruments that pass the Great Seal. When the Master of the Rolls sits in the House of Lords, his place is next the Lord Chief Justice of England, upon the second wool-sack. Besides what is said above, the Court of Chancery has the power of sending out commissions for charitable uses, and enquiring into all the frauds and abuses which have been committed in the disposal of all charities throughout the kingdom, and can oblige the Trustees to perform their trust, according to the intent of the respective donors. Under the Six Clerks there were formerly sixty, but now there are ninety; and these, with their Under-clerks, perform the business of their office.

The Court of King's Bench is the highest Court in England, in common law, except the House of Lords in Parliament. All pleas are brought into this Court between the King and the Subject, such as treasons, felonies, breach of peace, and any kind of oppression. This Court has also the power to examine and correct the errors of the Judges and Justices of England, in their judgments and proceedings; this not only in pleas of the Crown, but in those that are really personal and mixed, except only in the Exchequer. There are four Judges belonging to this Court, the chief whereof is styled the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench; and, according to an act of Parliament lately passed, all Judges are to hold their places, notwithstanding the demise of the Crown, but with the same restriction as formerly; that is, while they do nothing to occasion the forfeiture of their places. None can be a Judge in this Court except a Serjeant at Law. All matters of fact, relating either to civil or criminal causes, are determined in the Court of King's Bench by a Jury.

The Court of Common Pleas is so called, because the pleas usually here debated are between Subject and Subject. None but Serjeants at Law may plead in this Court; and here all civil causes real and personal are usually tried, and real actions are pleadable in no other Court. Likewise, no fines can be levied, or recoveries suffered, except in this Court at Westminster, at a Judge's chamber, at the assizes, or by a special commission out of Chancery. There are four Judges also belonging to this Court, the first of whom is called Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

The Court of Exchequer consists of two Courts, one of which tries Causes according to Law, and the other according to Equity. The Court of Equity is held in the Exchequer Chamber, before the Lord Treasurer, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Lord Chief Baron, and the three Barons of the Exchequer; besides a curiatur Baron. But the two first sit very seldom, and the five last almost always. Here are tried all causes relating to the King's revenue, namely, such as relate to accounts, disbursements, customs, and fines imposed. All judicial proceedings according to Law are only before the Barons; but the Court of Equity is held as above.

There are assizes and sessions held in the different counties of England, for the more easy distribution of justice; and the assizes are Courts kept twice a year. The twelve Judges are commissioned by the King for this purpose, and this they call going the Circuit. At these assizes all civil and criminal causes may be determined: the first is called Lent Assizes, soon after after Hilary Term; and the other called the Summer Assizes, after Trinity Term. There are six of these circuits, besides those in Wales, in which principally two distinct Judges are appointed; and both in England and Wales all causes are determined by a jury. The jury are chosen by the Sheriff of the county, and they are only directed in points of law by the Judges.

The commitment of malefactors is generally made by a Justice of the Peace, who examines witnesses to the fact upon oath. If the evidence is plain, he makes a mittimus, and sends the malefactor to the county goal, where he continues till the next assizes or sessions.

There are Justices of the Peace in every county, designed to keep the peace thereof: and such of them that the King is supposed to have greater confidence in, are called Justices of the quorum; because in their dedimus's there are these words, quorum A. B. unum esse volumus; the meaning of which is, that no business of consequence must be transacted, unless with the concurrence of one of these. Their office is to call before them, examine, and commit to prison, all thieves, murderers, vagabonds, and all disturbers of the peace, of what kind soever.

That Quarter Sessions are so called from the meeting of the Justices every quarter of a year, at the shire or other chief town in their respective counties, where they have the power of trying all criminal causes in the same manner as at the assizes, though they commonly confine themselves to facts of a lesser degree of guilt.

There is a Sheriff appointed for the execution of the laws in every county, except Westmoreland and Durham, who is nominated by the King every Michaelmas term. His office is to execute the King's mandates, and all writs directed to him out of the King's courts. He also impanels juries to bring causes and criminals to trial, and is to take care that the sentences both in civil and criminal affairs be duly executed. He appoints an Under-sheriff, stewards of courts, bailiffs of hundreds, constables, and jailors, and has many men in rich liveries, to attend upon him on horseback at the reception of the Judges, and during the assizes.

The office of high-constable, petty-constable, head-borough, or third-borough, is to execute the warrants and orders of the Justice of the Peace; but the high-constable only differs them upon some occasions to the petty-constables.

Every city and corporation in England may chuse their own magistrates, which may be either a mayor, or a bailiff, with aldermen, common-councilmen, or capital burgeses; and these regulate all affairs which immediately belong to their respective corporations. Likewise, some cities have counties, and a power of trying all malefactors taken in their counties; but this is seldom undertaken without the assistance of one or more of the twelve Judges. Some of these officers during their magistracy are Justices of the peace: these are commonly the mayor and an alderman, or two; but they cannot exercise their power out of their own liberties.

The Lord-lieutenants and Deputy-lieutenants had formerly a more considerable power and influence than they have at present, and they are chosen by the King himself out of the principal Peers of this kingdom. Their business was to arm, array, and form companies, troops, and regiments; and the men so raised were called the Militia. But this having been seldom done of late, on account of the standing forces kept continually in pay, these forces became in a great measure useless. However, it having been found necessary, during our last war with France, to have a militia properly regulated and disciplined, for the defence of the country against all foreign invasions, an Act of Parliament was made, by which they are put under new regulations, and in consequence whereof a new Militia has been actually raised in most parts of the kingdom. The officers are to be men of fortune, and the private men to be raised by balloting; but these last are to be changed every three years. This has put the kingdom into such a state of defence, that we can now venture to send our regular forces abroad upon any emergent occasion; and it is not improbable but these last, in times of peace, will become entirely useless.

Besides the Courts already mentioned, there are Court-Leets, and Court-Barons, which properly belong to the Lords of the Manors, who appoint stewards to hold them in their name. The first is a Court of Record, it being reputed the King's Court, because its authority is derived from the crown. It is kept twice a-year, and in it enquiry may be made of riots, and other criminal matters; but all great offences must be certified to the Justices of Assize.

A Court Baron is incident to every Manor, though the other is not so, and is so called from the Lord of the Manor, who was anciently styled Baron; all tenants belonging to the Manor are summoned to this Court; here part of them are sworn for a jury, and here the steward sits as Judge. The jury is directed to enquire after the decease of copyholders and free-holders, and to bring in their next heir, and also of the encroachments of any tenant. Likewise here they make orders and laws among themselves, with a penalty for for transgressors, payable to the Lord of the Manor. There are also Sheriffs Courts, and Hundred Courts, held every month in all parts of England, where small causes are determined. A Court of Conscience has been long held in London, for recovery of small debts under forty shillings; there has been some erected in Westminster, and other out-parts about London; as also in several towns in the country, and it is thought from time to time they will be erected elsewhere. The officers called bailiffs of the hundred, and other bailiffs and serjeants, are appointed by the sheriff to execute writs, to distrain goods, and to summon to the county sessions and assizes.

Of Trade and Navigation.

Navigation in this kingdom was formerly greatly neglected to what it is at present, notwithstanding its vast advantage; for it enables the inhabitants of the country where it flourishes to export what they have, and to import what they have not. While we were strangers to Navigation, our country was thin of people, because we lived as it were upon the main stock. We had, indeed, a few staple commodities, and a very few manufactures, which were sold to Foreigners at their own rates; but when Navigation began to flourish, and we had vessels of our own, the face of affairs soon began to change; and we brought home the product of their countries at a small expence, in comparison to what they cost us formerly: we likewise disposed of our own commodities at much higher rates.

At present a trade is carried on to the Turkish dominions and the Levant, by the Turkey Company, and the commodities we send to those parts are lead, iron, broad-cloth, and long silks; not to mention French and Lisbon sugars, as well as bullion. We take in return great quantities of raw silk, which serves for making stockings, galloons, gold and silver lace; and it is also proper for the warp of any kind of silk. We import also grogam, yarn, dying stuffs of various kinds, drugs, soap, leather, cotton, fruits, and oil.

To Italy we carry tin, lead, pilchards, herrings, salmon, cod, and various kinds of East-India goods; besides some of our own manufactures, such as broad-cloth, long-ells, bays, druggs, camblets, leather, and other things. We import from thence wine, oil, soap, dyes, dying-stuffs, as well as silk, raw, thrown, and wrought.

We send to Spain such the same kind of commodities as to Italy, many of which are exported from thence to their colonies in America. In return we have oil, fruits, wool, indigo, cochineal, and other drugs; and in times of peace, gold and silver, in specie or bullion.

The kingdom of Portugal takes from us almost all kinds of our commodities; we take from thence, wine, oil, salt, and fruits.

In times of peace, we export to France tin, lead, corn, and almost every other article of commerce, agreeable to a late commercial treaty between Great Britain and that country.

We send to Flanders tin, lead, iron-wares, sugar, tobacco, ferges, flannel, and a few stuffs, for which we receive fine laces, linen, tapes, inkles, and other goods of that kind.

We send to Germany, tin, lead, tobacco, sugar, ginger, woollen manufactures of every kind, as well as all sorts of East-India goods. In return, we have from thence tin plates, linen, and several other things.

With Denmark and Norway we have very little trade, except for a few coarse woollen goods; for which reason we are forced to pay for most things we have of them. We have also a decaying trade with Sweden, for they buy little of us, and we purchase of them copper, iron, and naval stores.

We send to Russia, tin, lead, coarse cloths, long ells, worsted stuffs, and a great quantity of tobacco; and we import from thence tallow, furs, iron, pot-ashes, hemp, flax, linen, coarse Russia cloth, and leather; this trade is carried on by a particular company, in a manner very beneficial to this kingdom.

To Holland we send almost all sorts of commodities, and manufactured goods, whether of our own, or imported from abroad; and from thence we receive vast quantities of linen, tapes, inkles, whale-bans, all sorts of spices, and various kinds of dying stuffs.

The African trade is of great advantage, for we not only send many of our own and the East-India manufactures, for the purchase of slaves, but we supply our several Plantations with the salt; and we also have from thence gold dust, red-wood, ivory, palm-oil, malingo, gum-seneca, and many other valuable commodities.

The East-India trade is of very great consequence to this nation, and there have been several hot disputes about it, relating to its advantage or disadvantage; however, it is certain they purchase their goods at a very low rate, which are sold extremely high.

Our trade to America, notwithstanding they have gained their independence, is still very considerable; and it is probable, that the Americans will continue to trade with us, as there is no market in Europe to which they can carry their commodities with such a certainty of sale,

THE following DICTIONARY having been submitted to the Perusal and Examination of the GENTLEMEN whose Names are hereunto subscribed, they have been pleased to favour the Author and Proprietors with their Approbation both of the Plan and Execution of the Work, and to recommend it to all Masters of Schools, Academies, &c. as the most useful Dictionary of the Kind hitherto published ; as likewise to all others who desire to have a thorough Knowledge of the ENGLISH LANGUAGE, and a comprehensive View of the History, Government, Topography, &c. of the BRITISH Empire in particular, and of the Geography, Governments, and History of the World in general.

The Rev. WILLIAM PINKNEY, M. A. Vicar of Edmonton.

The Rev. ROBERT CRANMER, A. M. Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

The Rev. PETER BURFORD, A. M. of the Academy, Chigwell.

The Rev. S. P. JONES, Master of the Free School, at Northwalsingham, Norfolk.

The Rev. JAMES DALTON, A. M. Master of the School, at Great Stanmore, Middlesex.

The Rev. CHARLES STODDART, A. B. Master of the Academy, at Wandsworth, Surrey.

The Rev. JAMES GREET, A. M. of Chelsea.

The Rev. S. HARDY, Lecturer of Enfield.

Mr. ELIEZER BURCHELL, Master of the Grammar School, at Hatfield.

Mr. WILLIAM CANTON, of the Academy, Spital Square.

Mr. JOSEPH SMITHER, of the Academy, Lothbury.

Mr. W. COTTON, Master of the Academy, Enfield.

Mr. SAMUEL DRAPER, Master of the Free School, Edmonton.

Mr. WILLIAM BARCLAY, Master of the Academy, at Tottenham.

BARCLAY'S

ENGLISH DICTIONARY.

A B

A Is the first letter of the alphabet in all known languages, except the Æthiopic, in which it is the thirteenth. In our language it is one of the five vowels, and has three different sounds. The broad sound; as, all, wall: the open, as, father, rather: the slender a is peculiar to the English; and is to be found in place, face, waste. When placed before nouns of the singular number, it denotes one, as a man, i. e. one man; or signifies something indefinite, as, a man may pass this way, that is, any man. Before a word beginning with a vowel, we write an, as an ox, and likewise before an b silent, as an herb; but when the b is sounded, we then write a, as a horse. Before a participle it denotes some action not yet finished, as, I am a walking. Formerly it was a contraction of at. Sometimes it signifies to. It has likewise a peculiar signification implying each; as, he gains a hundred pounds a year. In abbreviations, with a stroke over it thus [A], it stands for good among the Romans. With logicians, it denotes an universal affirmative proposition. Among merchants, if set alone after a bill of exchange, it signifies accepted, and is used by them to distinguish their sets of accounts instead of a figure: thus, A, B, C, are instead of 1, 2, 3. a, or aa, is used by physicians instead of ans, and signifies that the proportions of the ingredients, to which it refers, are to be equal. In abbreviations it stands likewise for Artium, or Arts, as A. B. artium baccalaureus, or bachelor of arts; when applied to time, for anno: A. C. ante Christum, before Christ; A. M. anno mundi, the year of the world; A. D. anno domini, the year of our Lord. A in music, is that note which lies between the 2d and 3d line in the treble; or upon the top, or 5th line in the bass. ABP. is an abbreviation of Archbishop.

AB, at the beginning of English Saxon names, is generally a contraction of abbot, or abbot, and shews that they either had an abbey, or belonged to one, as Abingdon.

ABA'FT, P. [abaftan, Sax.] is that part of the ship which is towards the stern; the same as ast.

ABALIENATION, f. [abalienatio, Lat.] an alienation, or estrangement from.

A B

To ABA'NDON, v. a. [abandonner, Fr.] to forsake utterly; to cast off; to give up one's self wholly to any prevailing passion or vice. To abandon, is more applicable to things; leave to persons. He was under a necessity of abandoning his possessions, and compelled to leave his friends. To forsake, implies in resentment or dislike; to relinquish, quitting any claim; to desert, leaving meanly or treacherously. To quit, implies the breaking off from, and may be either voluntary or involuntary.

ABARTICULATION, f. [ab and articulus, Lat.] a good construction of the bones, whereby they are apt to move easily and strongly; such as is in the arms, hands, thighs, feet &c.

To ABA'SE, v. a. [abaissier, Fr.] to lower, bring down, or humble.

ABA'SED, a. humbled; brought down. In Heraldry, it means when the top of the vol or wings of an eagle are turned downwards towards the point of the shield.

To ABA'SH, v. a. [verbaesssen, Dutch] to affect with sudden shame, or confusion; to dash. The passive is followed by the particles at or of.

To ABA'TE, v. a. [abattre, Fr.] to make or grow less; to diminish or decrease.—These words are nearly synonymous. To abate implies a decrease in action; diminish, a waste in substance; decrease, a decay in moral virtue; lessen, a contraction of parts.

ABA'TEMENT, f. in general, signifies the lessening or diminishing something. In Heraldry, it is something added to a coat of arms, in order, to lessen its true dignity, and point out some defect or stain in the character of the person who bears it. In Law, it is the rejecting a suit, for some fault discovered, either in the matter or process, upon which a plea in abatement is grounded; and if the exception to the writ or declaration is proved, the plaintiff abates or ceases, and the process must begin anew. Among Traders, it is the same as rebate, or discount.

A'BBA, f. [כבא, Syr.] a Syrian word used in Scripture, signifying father.

A'BBACY, f. [abbatia, Lat.] the rights and privileges of an abbot.

A'BESS, f. a governess of nuns.

ABBEY,

ABBEY, f. [abbatia, Lat.] a monastery, or convent; a house of religious persons.—To bring an abbey to a grange, a proverbial phrase, to bring a noble to nimpence. We apply it to a spend-thrift. At the dissolution of the abbeys in England, under K. Henry VIII. no less than 190 were dissolved, of between 200l. and 35000l. yearly revenue, which, at a medium, amounted to 2,853,000l. per annum; an immense sum in those days!

A'BBOT, f. [abbod, Sax.] the chief ruler of a monastery or abbey, of the male kind. At first they were laymen, and subject to the bishop and ordinary pastors, their monasteries being built in remote and solitary places. They were by degrees allowed to have a priest of their own body, who was the abbot.

A'BBOTS-BROMLEY, a town in Staffordshire. It has a market on Tuesdays, and is 129 miles distant from London.

A'BBOTS-BURY, a market town in Dorsetshire, 128 miles from London. The royalty of this town belongs to the family of Strangeways, who have a noble swannery here, a curiosity that invites abundance of strangers to go and see it. Thursday is its market day.

A'BBY-HOLM, [abby-home] in Cumberland. The market on Saturday. Distance from London 295 miles.

A'BBY-MILTON, a town in Dorsetshire; 112 miles from London.

To ABBEVIATE, v. a. to abstract from, shorten, or reduce to a less compass.

ABBREVIATION, f. a contraction or abridgement of a word or passage, by leaving out part of the letters, or substituting other marks or characters in the room of words; as l s d for pounds, shillings, pence, &c.

ABBREVIATURE, f. the same with abbreviation; also, a mark made for shortening; likewise a compendium or abridgement.

ABBU'TTALS, f. [abbuto, cor. Lat.] in Law, the buttings or boundings of lands, shewing on what other lands they are bounded.

To ABDICATE, v. a. [abdico, Lat.] to give up a right; to resign.

ABDICATION, f. the act of abdicating; resignation.

ABDOMEN, f. [from abdo, Lat.] a cavity, commonly called the lower venter, or belly. It contains the stomach, guts, liver, spleen, bladder, and is within lined with a membrane, called the peritonæum.

To ABDUCE, v. a. [abduco, Lat.] to draw to a different part; to withdraw one part from another.

ABE'D, ad. from a or at, in bed.

A'BER, [S.] an old British word, signifying the fall of a lesser water into a great, as of a brook into a river, and a river into the sea; also the mouth of a river, from whence several rivers, and towns built at or near their mouth, derive their names, as Aberconway, Aberdeen, Abergavenny, &c.

ABERAVON, a town of Glamorganshire, in Wales, that had a market which is now disused. It is seated at the mouth of the river Avon, 19 miles S. W. of Cowbridge, and 195 W. of London.

ABERBRO'THIC or ABERBROTHOC, a town of Scotland, in the shire of Angus, seated on the river Tay. It had a monastery, which was demolished at the time of the Reformation; but there are yet magnificent ruins to be seen. There are two churches, one of which is half ruined. It has a pretty good harbour, advantageous for trade, and stands on a fertile plain. It is 15 miles N. E. of St. Andrew's, and 40 N. N. E. of Edinburgh.

ABERCONWAY, a town in Carnarvonshire; a market on Friday: distant from London 235 miles.

ABERDEEN, a maritime place in the North of Scotland, divided into two towns, the Old and the New. It was formerly a bishop's see; is now capital of the country; and has an university, which has produced several famous men. It has a harbour at the mouth of the river Don, which belongs to Old Aberdeen, and another on the river Dee that appertains to the New. There is a stone-bridge of seven arches over this last river. It is 84 miles N. E. of Edinburgh, and 58 N. E. of St. Andrew's.

A'BERFORD, a small town in the West Riding of Yorkshire, noted for pin-making; its market is every Wednesday; 184 miles from London.

A'BERFRAW, a town of North Wales, in the Isle of Anglesey, formerly a place of great account, the kings of North Wales having then a palace here. Now reduced to a small village, though it has four fairs. It is 263 miles from London.

ABERGAVENNY, a large, populous town in Monmouthshire, noted for flannels: it has a market on Tuesdays, and is 143 miles distant from London.

ABERGE'LY, a village of North-Wales, in Denbighshire, that has four fairs. It is 223 miles from London.

ABERGUILLY, or ABERGE'RLICH, a village of South Wales, in Carmarthenshire, with two fairs. It is 12 miles N. by E. of Carmarthen.

A'BERISTWITH, a town in Cardiganshire, has a great market weekly on Monday: distant from London 203 miles.

ABE'RRANCE, f. [from aberro, Lat.] a deviation from the right way: an error.

ABE'RRANT, part. wandering from the right or known way.

ABERRATION, f. [aberratio, Lat.] the act of deviating from the common tract.

To ABERUNCATE, v. a. [aberruncos, Lat.] to pull up by the roots.

ABERWINGREGIN, [P. N.] a town in Carnarvonshire; distant 250 miles.

To ABE'T, v. a. [betan, Sax.] to push forward another; to support him in his designs by connivance, encouragement, or help.

ABE'TMENT, f. the act of abetting.

ABE'TTOR, f. he that abets; the supporter to encourage of another.

A B L

To ABHOR, v. a. [abhorres, Lat.] to hate with acrimony; to loath.

ABHORRENCE, f. struck with abhorrence. Contrary to, foreign, inconsistent with.

ABHORRER, f. a hater, detester.

To ABIDE, v. n. [abidian, Sax.] to dwell in a place; not to remove; to dwell; to bear or support the consequences of a thing; to live without aversion.

ABIDER, f. the person that abides or dwells in a place.

ABJECT, f. [abjectus, Lat.] low, mean, beggarly. These words are synonymous. By abject is understood that forlorn situation in life that a man brings himself into by ill conduct; by low, that in which Providence has placed him: the first is voluntary, the latter involuntary; mean signifies a man's readiness to perform a dirty or illicit action, whereas beggarly is more particularly expressive of a narrow, groveling spirit.

To ABJECT, v. a. to throw away.

ABJECTION, f. meaness of mind; servility; baseness.

ABJECTLY, ad. meanly.

ABILITY, f. [abul, Sax.] capacity or power to do any thing. Capacity has more relation to the knowledge of things; ability to their application. The one is acquired by study; the other by practice. When it has the plural number, abilities, it signifies the faculties or powers of the mind, and then it is synonymous with ingenuity, cleverness, parts. Ingenuity relates more to the invention of things; cleverness to the manner of executing them; ability to the actual execution of them; and parts to the discernment.

A BINGDON, a corporation town, in Berkshire, 56 miles from London. Its market is on Monday, chiefly for barley and malt; and it has the right of choosing one burgess.

ABINTESTATE, a. [ab and intestatus, Lat.] in the Civil Law, one who dies without making his will.

To ABJURE, v. a. [abjuro, Lat.] to swear not to do some thing; to recant, or abnegate, a position upon oath.

ABJURATION, f. the oath taken for renouncing, disclaiming, and denying the Pretender to have any manner of right to the throne of these kingdoms. In our old customs, it implied a voluntary banishment of a man's self from the kingdom for ever, which in some cases was admitted for criminals, instead of putting them to death, provided they could shelter themselves in a church. Also the solemn renunciation of some doctrine, as wicked and heretical.

ABLACTATION, f. [ablactatio, Lat.] is what gardeners call grafting by approach.

ABLAQUEATION, f. [ablaqueatio, Lat.] is opening the ground about the roots of the trees; an operation which the gardeners call hoing of trees.

ABLATION, f. [ablatio, Lat.] the act of taking away.

ABLATIVE, f. in Latin Grammar, is the sixth case, and is opposed to the dative; the latter expressing the action of giving, and the former that of taking away.

A B O

A'BLE, a. [abal, Sax.] endued with, or having power sufficient. Metaphorically, great powers arising from knowledge or wealth. When joined with for, it implies qualified.

ABLEGATION, f. [ablegatio, Lat.] a sending abroad.

A'BLEPSY, f. [ἀβλεψία, Gr.] want of sight.

A'BLUENTS, f. [from abluo, Lat.] with Physicians, are diluting medicines, or such as dissolve or carry off acrimonious and stimulating salts in any part of the body, and especially in the stomach and intestines.

ABLUTION, f. [ablutio, Lat.] signifies the washing or purifying something with water. A ceremony in use among the Ancients, and consisted in washing the body before sacrificing, or even entering their temples; and still practised by the Mohammedans. In the church of Rome, a small quantity of wine and water, which the Communicants formerly took to wash down and promote the digestion of the host. Among Chemists and Apothecaries, it is used for washing away the superabundant salts of any body; an operation they call Educoration. See the word. Physicians use it for washing the external parts of the body by baths; or by cleansing the bowels with thin diluting liquids.

ABNEGATION, f. [abnegatio, Lat.] denial, renunciation.

ABNODATION, f. [abnodatio, Lat.] in Gardening, the pruning, paring, or cutting away knobs, knots, or any other excrescences from trees.

ABOARD, ad. [à bord, Fr.] in a ship.

ABODE, f. place of residence; continuance in a place.

ABODEMENT, f. a secret anticipation of something future.

ABOLISH, v. a. [abolere, Lat.] to repeal, destroy, extinguish, and utterly erase any thing, so that no part of it remain.

ABOLITION, f. [abolitio, Lat.] in Law, denotes the repealing any law or statute; also the prohibiting some custom, usage, or ceremony, that had been long established. Sometimes it signifies the leave granted by the king, or judge, to a criminal accused to forbear any farther prosecution. Also, for the remission of a crime; and for cancelling or discharging a public debt.

ABOMINABLE, a. [abominabilis, Lat.] that excites horror, joined with aversion and detestation. In conversation, this term is used to convey an idea of something superlative.

ABOMINABLENESS, f. the quality which renders any thing odious.

ABOMINABLY, ad. extremely, superlatively, in an ill sense, and a word of low language.

To ABOMINATE, v. a. to abhor, detest, or have an extreme aversion to.

ABOMINATION, f. an object causing extreme trême aversion. When used with the auxiliary verb to have followed by the participle in, to reckon, or look upon as an object of detestation.

ABORIGINES, f. [Lat.] the ancient inhabitants of a country whose origin is unknown.

ABORTION, f. [abortio, Lat.] a miscarriage, or the exclusion of a child from the womb before the due time of delivery: in irrational animals, it is termed sinking or casting their young. In gardening, the word signifies such fruits as are produced too early.

ABORTIVE, a. [abortivus, Lat.] that which is brought forth before its time; figuratively, any thing or design which miscarries, is frustrated, or comes to nothing.

ABORTIVELY, ad. born before due time; immaturely, untimely.

ABOVE, prep. [super, Sax.] higher in place, or position; before nouns of time, it denotes more, or longer than. Figuratively, it signifies superiority, or higher in rank, power, or excellence; likewise beyond, or more than.

ABOVE, ad. [this is distinguished from the prep. by the manner in which it is used, because that is followed by nouns, but this is not; and has a relation not to the words which precede, but those which follow it] a high place; and, figuratively, the heavens. In allusion to the method of writing anciently on scrolls, it denotes before.

To ABOUND, v. n. [abundo, Lat.] when used with the particles in, or with, to have an excessive great number, or quantity of any thing; when used without the particles, to increase prodigiously, to be great in number, plenty, or excess.

ABOUT, prep. when applied to time or place, it denotes near, or within compass of; and when used before words implying measure. Its most simple acceptation is that of round, surrounding, or encircling, according to the Saxon, from whence it is derived. Figuratively, annexed, or appendant to a person, as cloaths, &c. concerning of, relating to.

ABOUT, ad. in circumference, or compass. "Two yards about." Merry W. of Windsor. Figuratively, the longest way, in opposition to the shortest, alluding to the difference between the circumference and diameter of a circle. When joined with go, it signifies from place to place, or every where. "He went about doing good." Acts. When prefixed to other verbs, it implies that the action or thing affirmed will soon happen; as "about to fight." When following the verb to be, it denotes being engaged, or employed in: "What are you about?"

ABOUT, ad. [à bout, to an end, Fr.] a certain point, period, or state: "He has brought about his purposes;" i. e. he has accomplished them. When joined with come, it implies the thing arrived at a certain state or point: "When the time was come about." 1 Sam. i. 20. When joined with go, it implies preparation or design: "Why go ye about to kill me?" John viii. 9. In familiar discourse, we say, "to go about a man;" i. e. to circumvent him.

To ABRA'DE, v. a. [abrado, Lat.] to rub off, or waste by degrees.

ABRE'AST, ad. [breast, Sax.] side by side; in such a position that the breasts may bear against the same line.

To ABRI'DGE, v. a. [abriger, Fr.] to shorten in words, sc. a. to retain the substance; to express a thing in fewer words. Figuratively, to diminish, lessen, or cut short. Followed by the particles from or of, to deprive.

ABRIDGEMENT, f. [abrigement, Fr.] the contraction of a larger work into fewer words, and less compass, a lessening, or diminution, in a secondary sense.

ABRO'ACH, ad. running out, in allusion to liquor, which is broached or tapped; to be in such a position that the liquor may easily run out. Figuratively, to undertake with a sure prospect of success.

ABRO'AD, ad. [a and brad, Sax.] without confinement, at large, out of the house, in a foreign country; in all directions; from without, in opposition to within.

To A'BROGATE, v. a. [abrogare, Lat.] to take away from a law its force; to repeal; to disannul; to abolish; to revoke. Abrogate and repeal are terms rather to be used with respect to laws; abolish with regard to customs; disannul and revoke, to private contracts.

ABROGATION, f. the act of repealing, or the repeal of a law, used in opposition to rogation; distinguished from derogation, which implies the annulling only part of a law; subrogation, which denotes the adding a clause; from adrogation, which implies the limiting or restraining it: from dispensation, which sets it aside, only in a particular instance; and from antiquation, which is the refusing to pass a law.

ABRU'PT, part. or a. [abruptus, Lat.] craggy, broken; sudden, unexpected, without the customary preparations; unconnected, when applied to compositions.

ABRUPTION, f. [abruptio, Lat.] breaking off, separation.

ABRUPTLY, ad. in a hasty, unexpected, rude manner.

ABRUPTNESS, f. a hasty, unexpected, unceremonious manner; suddenness, the state of unconnectedness, ruggedness, craginess.

A'BSCISS, f. [abscissus, Lat.] a critical discharge of humours, which collects itself so as to form a tumour, or swelling, and break or corrode the vessels, if not dissolved: the matter thus collected is sometimes included in a cyst or bag, and appears curdy; and is then termed an encysted tumour. Hippocrates and Galen use this word, abscissi, for the change of one species of fever into another; as an intermittent into a continual; and sometimes they substitute it for any critical evacuation.

To ABSCI'ND, v. a. [abscindo, Lat.] to cut off. Not often used.

ABSCISSION, f. [abscissio, Lat.] the act of cutting off, the state of being cut off.

To ABSCOND, v. n. [abscendo, Lat.] to keep one's self from the view or knowledge of the public; to hide; applied to those who fly from from the commerce of mankind, to escape the law, whether on account of debt or criminal actions.

ABSENCE, f. [absentia, Lat.] distance, which renders a person incapable of seeing and conversing with another; used in opposition to presence; figuratively, inattention to the present object; hence a person in that state resembles one who is absent. It is used with the particle from, which limits its signification.

ABSENT, a. [absens, Lat.] at a distance from, out of the sight and hearing of a person. Figuratively, inattentive to, or regardless of something present.

To ABSENT, v. a. to withdraw, or decline the presence of a person, or thing.

ABSENTEE, f. in law, he that is absent from his station, or country; most generally applied to the Irish refugees.

ABSINTHIUM, f. wormwood. There are 33 species of this plant; but that used in physic is the absinthium vulgare majus of Bauhine, or common wormwood: the leaves and flowers have a very bitter taste, and a very strong smell. The virtues of this herb, according to Boerhaave, are immortal; as curing all dropsies not attended with a rupture of the viscera; a conserve made of the tender tops of the leaves is of great service to persons labouring under a cancer; and an infusion of them in wine is very good for the worms.

To ABSOLVE, v. a. [absolvo, Lat.] to acquit of a crime; to free from an engagement, or promise; to pardon, in allusion to the absolutio of a priest; to perfect, accomplish, or complete, applied to time.

ABSOLUTE, a. [absolutus, Lat.] perfect, complete, without conditions: independent, without relation; without restraint, or limitation.

ABSOLUTELY, ad. completely; without mixture; without limits or dependence.

ABSOLUTION, f. [absolutio, Lat.] in common law, a full acquittal of a person, by some final sentence; a temporal discharge from some further attendance upon a mesne process; in ecclesiastical law, a juridical act, whereby a priest pronounces a pardon for sins so such as, upon confession, seem to have the necessary qualifications.

ABSONANT, part. [absonans, Lat.] sounding harshly. Figuratively, contrary to reason, absurd, foreign to the purpose.

To ABSORB, v. a. [preter. absorbed, part. pres. absorbed or absorpe, from absorbo, Lat.] to suck up.

ABSORBENT, f. [absorbens, Lat.] in physic, medicines which dry up redundant humours, whether applied internally or externally; likewise the lacteals, which absorb the chyle; the cutaneous vessels, which suck the water in baths or fomentations; or those vessels which open into the cavities of the body, and imbibing the extravasated juices, convey them to the circulating blood.

To ABSTAIN, v. n. [abstinere, Lat.] to forbear, to refrain from, or decline any gratification.

ABSTEMIOUS, a. [abstemius, Lat.] temperate in the enjoyment of sensual gratifications. Figuratively, the cause of temperance. Sometimes used substantively, for those who practise the virtue of temperance.

ABSTEMIOUSNESS, f. the quality of being temperate, or declining the gratifying of our sensual appetites.

ABSTEMIOUSLY, ad. temperately; soberly.

To ABSTERGE, v. a. [abstergo, Lat.] to wipe clean, to cleanse: used mostly by medical writers.

ABSTERGENT, a. [abstergens, Lat.] endowed with a cleansing quality: used substantively in medicine, it signifies medicines which abrade and wipe away such mucous particles as they meet with: their most usual name is that of Detergents.

ABSTINENCE, f. [abstinentia, Lat.] in a general sense, the refraining from anything to which we have a propensity: used with the particle from. In a more limited sense, fasting, or the forbearance of necessary food: distinguished from temperance, as that implies a moderate use of food, but this a total avoiding of it, for a time.

To ABSTRACT, v. a. [abstracto, Lat.] to take one thing from another. Figuratively, to separate, followed by the particle from: used absolutely, the exercise of the faculty of the mind, named abstraction; or separating ideas from one another. When applied to writings, to reduce their substance to less compass.

ABSTRACT, part. [abstractus, Lat.] separated from something else; generally applied to the operations of the mind. Abstract terms, are those which signify the mode or quality of a being without any regard to the subject in which it inheres: it is used with the particle from. Abstract mathematics, those branches which consider the quantity, without restriction to any particular species of it. Abstract numbers are assemblages of units, considered in themselves, without being applied to any subject.

ABSTRACT, f. a compendious view of a treatise, more superficial than an abridgement. Figuratively, applied to persons, those who comprehend all the qualities, good or bad, to be found in the species.

ABSTRACTED, part. separated, refined, or abstruse: a disposition of mind, whereby a person is inattentive to external objects, though present.

ABSTRACTION, f. [abstractio, Lat.] an operation or faculty of the mind, whereby we separate things that are in themselves inseparable, in order to consider them apart, independent of one another; whereas precision separates things distinct in themselves, in order to prevent the confusion which arises from a jumble of ideas. Sometimes it is used for the exercise of this faculty. The state of being inattentive to external objects, or absence of mind. In Pharmacy, the drawing off, or exhaling a menstruum from the subject it was intended to resolve.

ABSTRACTLY,

ABSTRA'CTLY, ad. simply, separately.
ABSTRU'SE, a. [abstrusus, Lat.] obscure, dark, not easy to be understood; deep, hidden, or far removed from the common apprehensions or ways of conceiving.

ABSTRU'SELY, ad. obscurely, not plainly.
ABSTRU'SENESS, or ABSTRU'SITY, f. difficulty, darkness, obscurity, hard to be understood, or comprehended.

ABSURD, a. [absurdus, Lat.] 1st, not agreeable to reason, or common sense, or that thwarts, or goes contrary to, the common notions, and apprehensions of men. adly, Inconsistent, contrary to reason.

ABSURDNESS, or ABSURDITY, f. [absurditas, Lat.] a contradiction to common sense; an inconsistency with reason.

ABSURDLY, ad. improperly, unseasonably.

ABUNDANCE, f. [abundantia, Lat.] 1. great plenty. 2. a great many, vast numbers: as, abundance of people. 3. a great quantity. 4. more than sufficient.

ABUNDANT, a. [abundans, Lat.] plentiful, exuberant, numerous, well stored with, replete, or abounding.

ABUNDANTLY, ad. amply; liberally.

To ABU'SE, [abuse] v. a. [abutor, Lat.]

1. To make a bad use of. 2. To impose upon, or deceive. 3. To affront, or treat rudely.
ABU'SE, f. 1st, the ill or improper use of a thing. 2. A vicious practice or bad custom. 3. Unjust censure. 4. Carnal knowledge, either with or without violence.

ABU'SER, [abuser] f. the person who makes an ill use of any thing. An impostor, seducer, ravisher; one who makes use of reproachful language, or is guilty of rudeness towards another.

ABU'SIVE, a. [abusivus, Lat.] insolent, offensive, injurious.

ABU'SIVENESS, f. the use of reproachful language; or the exercise of rude and unmerited incivility.

ABU'SIVELY, ad. reproachfully.

To ABU'T, or ABU'TT, v. n. [abuter, Fr.] to terminate, bound, or border upon another place or thing.

ABU'TMENT, f. that which abuts or borders upon another.

ABY'SS, f. [abussos, Gr.] 1. A bottomless pit or Gulf, or any prodigious deep where no bottom can be found, or is supposed to have no bottom: a vast unfathomable depth of waters. 2. In a figurative sense, that in which any thing is lost. 3. The vast collection of waters, supposed to be inclosed in the bowels of the earth. 4. Among divines, it is often used to signify hell.

ABYSSINIA, a kingdom of Africa. The land is fertile in many places, and the air is very hot, except in the rainy season, when it is very temperate. For four months in the year there are greater rains fall than perhaps in any other part of the world, which occasion the swelling of the river Nile, that has its source in this country. It contains mines of all sorts of metal except tin; but the inhabitants make no great advantage thereof. The emperor, or king, is called Negus; and he has been commonly taken for Prester John. His authority is absolute, and he often dwells with his whole court in tents. The inhabitants are black, or very near it; but they are not so ugly as the negroes. Their religion is a mixture of Christianity and Judaism. The habit of persons of quality is a silken vest, with a sort of scarf; but the common people wear nothing but a pair of drawers.

AC, AK, or AKE, at the beginning or end of a name of a town or place is the Saxon word ac, which signifies an oak; as Aston is as much as to say oak-town, and Austin's ac, Austin's oak; and as for the names of persons of the same form, they are for the most part derived from the places of their birth, or some achievement there.

ACA'CIA, in Botany, Egyptian thorn, or binding bean tree. The Acacia styled Vera, i. e. true, is the tree from whose branches exudes the Gum Arabic, and from whence the Succus Acaciaz, or juice of Acacia, is drawn and stiled.

ACADE'MIC, ACADE'MICK, f. in a large sense, signifies a member of an university or school, where languages and other branches of polite education are taught.

ACADE'MIC, or ACADE'MICK, a. [academicus, Lat.] belonging to the academy.

ACADEMI'CIAN, or ACADEMI'AN, f. a name used for members of modern Academies, or instituted societies of learned men.

ACADEMY, f. [academia, Lat.] It was originally a public place planted with trees at Athens, so called from one Academus, who presented it. A place where learned men met to confer upon the discoveries already made in the sciences, or to try experiments for their further improvement. It is sometimes used for a college, or university; a place where persons are taught the liberal arts and sciences, &c. It is also used for a particular society of ingenious persons, established for the improvement of learning, &c. and for a sort of collegiate school, or seminary, where young persons are instructed in a private way, in the liberal arts and sciences.

ACA'DIA, f. or Nova Scotia, or New Scotland, one of the British colonies in North America, situated between 41 and 51 degrees of North latitude, and between 63 and 70 degrees of West longitude. It is bounded by the river St. Lawrence, and the Atlantic Ocean on the east, and by the bay of Fundy, and the seas of Acadia on the south, and by Canada and the United Provinces on the west. The French ceded it to the English by the treaty of Utrecht, who have planted a colony there. It is a very fruitful country, and affords plenty of game. In 1784, it was divided into two governments, one of which is now called New Brunswick.

To ACCE'DE, v. n. [accedo, Lat.] to come to, to draw near to, to enter into, or to add one's self to something already supposed to take place.

To ACCE'LERATE, v. a. [accelero, Lat.] to hasten, to quicken, to spur on with superadded motion and expedition.

ACCELERATION, f. the act of quickening motion, &c. With Philosophers, a continual increase of velocity in any heavy bodies, tending towards the center of the earth by the force of gravity. With the ancient astronomers, a term used in respect to the fixed stars, which signified the difference between the revolution of the primum mobile and the first revolution: it was computed at 3 minutes and 56 seconds.

To ACCE'ND, [accendo, Lat.] to set on fire.

ACCENSION, f. in Philosophy, the kindling or setting any natural body on fire.

ACCENT, f. [accentus, Lat.] the rising or falling of the voice, a tone and manner of pronunciation, contracted from the country in which a person was bred, or resided a considerable time. With Rhetoricians, a tone or modulation of the voice, used sometimes to denote the intention of the speaker, with regard to energy or force, and expressive of the sentiments and passions. Grave Accent, is this mark (´) over a vowel, to shew that the voice is to be depressed. Acute Accent, is this mark (´) over a vowel, to shew that the voice is to be raised. Circumflex Accent, is this mark (˘) over a vowel in Greek, and points out a kind of undulation in the voice. The Long Accent, shews that the voice is to dwell upon the vowel, and is expressed thus (ˉ). The Short Accent, [in Grammar] shews that the time of pronouncing ought to be short, and is marked thus (ˊ). In Music, it is a certain undulation or warbling of the voice, to express the passions either naturally or artificially.

To ACCENT, v. a. [accino, Lat.] 1. To mark with an accent. 2. To pronounce with regard to the accents.

To ACCENTUATE, v. a. [accentuer, Fr.] to place the proper accents in reading, speaking, or writing, on the vowels or syllables of any word.

ACCENTUATION, f. a pronouncing or marking a word, so as to lay a stress of the voice upon the right vowel or syllable.

To ACCE'PT, v. a. [accipio, Lat.] to receive favourably or kindly, to take with particular approbation, either with or without the particle f.

ACCEPTABLE, a. [acceptabilis, low Lat.] that may be favourably or kindly received, agreeable.

ACCEPTABLY, ad. in an acceptable manner.

ACCEPTANCE, f. an accepting or receiving favourably or kindly; sometimes the meaning or manner of taking a word, with the accent promiscuously on the first or second syllable. In Law, it is the tacit agreement to some act done by another before, which might have been avoided, if such agreement or acceptance had not been made. In Commerce, it is the subscribing or signing an inland bill of exchange, which makes the person debtor for the sum of its contents, and obliges him to discharge it at the time which it mentions.

ACCEPTATION, [acceptation, Fr.] 1. The received meaning of a word, or the sense in which it is usually taken. 2. Reception of any person or thing, either agreeably or not. 3. Particular regard as to acceptableness and manner of regard.

ACCE'PTER, f. in Commerce, the person who accepts a bill by signing it, and therefore obliges himself to pay the contents when due.

ACCESS, f. [accessus, Lat.] 1. Admission, approach or passage to a place or person. 2. Licence or means to approach any thing. 3. Accession to any thing, additional increase. 4. The return, or fit of an ague or other distemper.

ACCESSIBLE, a. [accessibilis, Lat.] that may be approached, reached, or come to. It is used with the particle to before the object. Accessible Height, is either that which may be measured mechanically, by applying a measure to it; or else it is a height whose base can be approached to, and from thence a length measured on the ground.

ACCESSION, f. [accessio, Lat.] 1. Addition or increase; the act whereby a thing is superadded to another; joining one's self to any thing else. 2. Coming to, as the coming of a king to the crown. In Physic, the beginning of a paroxysm.

ACCESSORY, or ACCESSARY, f. [in Civil Law] any thing that of right belongs or depends on another, although it be separated from it; as if tiles be taken from an house to be laid on again; they are an accessary, if the house be to be sold. By Statute, a person who commands, advises, or conceals an offender, guilty of felony by statute. In Common Law, a person guilty of felony, though not principally, as by advice, command, concealment; and this may be either before or after the fact.

ACCIDENCE, f. [accidentia, Lat.] a little book, containing the first principles of the Latin tongue.

ACCIDENT, f. [accidens, Lat.] a casualty or chance; a contingent effect, or something produced casually, or without any fore-knowledge or destination of it in the agent that produced it, or to whom it happens. A thing is also frequently stiled an accident in reference to its cause, or at least to our knowledge of it, and by this an effect either casually produced, or which appears to have been so to us, is commonly understood. In Grammar, the property of words, such as their division into substantives and adjectives, their declensions, cases, numbers, and genders of nouns; the conjugations, moods, tenses, numbers, persons, &c. of verbs. In Physic, it is an effect which is not produced immediately from the first cause, but by some other intervening incidents, and is analogous to the word Symptom. In Heraldry, accidents are the principal points in the escutcheon; and with the Astrologers, the most extraordinary circumstances that have occurred in the course of a person's life.

word

ACCIDENTAL, a. [accidentalis, Lat.] pertaining to accidents, happening by chance.

ACCIDENTALLY, ad. casually; fortuitously.

ACCI'DIOUS, a. [accidius, Lat.] slothful.

ACCIDITY, f. [acciditas, Lat.] slothfulness.

ACCI'NCT, a. [accinctus, Lat.] girded, prepared, ready.

ACC'PIENT, part. [accipiens, Lat.] 1. Receiving. 2. A Receiver.

ACCLAMATION, f. [acclamatio, Lat.] a shouting for joy; expressing applause, esteem, or approbation.

ACCLIVITY, f. [acclivitas, Lat.] the ascent of a hill; and among Geometers, the slope of a line or plane inclining to the horizon upwards.

ACCLIVOUS, a. [acclivus, Lat.] rising upwards with a slope.

To ACCLO'Y, v. a. 1. To crowd, or overflow. 2. To surfeit or satiate.

ACCLOY'D, part. [with Farriers] denotes a horse's being pricked in shoeing.

To ACCO'IL, v. n. to bustle, crowd, or be in a hurry. See COLL.

ACCOLENT, f. [accolens, Lat.] he who inhabits near, or a borderer on any place.

ACCOMMODABLE, a. [accommodabilis, Lat.] that which may be fitted to another thing, in its primary signification; in its secondary, that which may be reconciled to, is consistent with, or may be applied to.

To ACCOMMODATE, v. a. [accommodo, Lat.] to provide or furnish with conveniences; to agree, compose, make up, or adjust a matter in dispute; to adapt, fit, or apply one matter or thing to another.

ACCOMMODATE, a. [accommodatus, Lat.] when used with the particle for, it denotes convenient or proper; with the particle to, it implies suitable.

ACCOMMODATELY, ad. suitably; fitly.

ACCOMMODATION, f. [accommodatio, Lat.] 1. An adapting, fitting, adjusting, &c. 2. The composing or putting an end to a difference, quarrel, &c. 3. Convenience.

ACCOMPANIMENT, f. the adding of one thing to another by way of ornament. In Heraldry, the mantlings, supporters, &c. In Music, the instrumental part playing or moving, while the voice is singing.

To ACCOMPANY, v. a. [accompagner, Fr.] 1. To go or come with, to wait on, to keep company with. 2. To join or unite with. To accompany a voice, i. e. to play to it with proper instruments.

ACCOMPLICE, f. [complice, Fr.] one who has a hand in a matter, or who is privy to the same crime or design with another.

To ACCOMPLISH, v. a. [accomplir, Fr.] 1. To perform, finish, or fulfill. 2. To execute or bring a matter or thing to perfection. 3. To complete a period of time.

4. To obtain or acquire. A person well accomplished, one who has extraordinary parts, and has acquired great accomplishments in learning.

ACCOMPLISHMENT, f. the perfecting, ending, fulfilling, or achieving of any matter or thing entirely or completely. Also an acquirement in learning, arts, sciences, or good behaviour.

ACCOMPT, [pronounced akount] [compte, Fr.] all computations made arithmetically. In Commerce, all those books in which merchants and other traders register their transactions. Merchants accounts are those which are kept by double entry. Account in Company, is between two merchants or traders, wherein the transactions relative to their partnership are registered. Account in Bank, is a fund deposited either at some banker's or the Bank, by traders, as running cash, to be employed in the payment of bills. Account of Sales, is an information given by one merchant to another, or by a factor to his principal, of the disposal, net proceeds, &c. of goods sent for the proper account of the sender or senders who consigned the same.

ACCOMPTANT, [akountant] [accountant, Fr.] one who is not only well skilled in calling up accounts, but in book-keeping.

ACCOMPTANTSHIP, [akountantship] f. the qualifications necessary for an accountant.

ACCO'RD, f. [accord, Fr.] 1. Agreement or compact. 2. Agreement of mind.

3. Mutual harmony or symmetry. 4. Self-motion; as "It opened of its own accord." In Common Law, agreement between several persons or parties to make satisfaction for an affront or trespass committed one against another. In Music, it is the production, mixture, and relation of two sounds, of which the one is grave, and the other acute.

To ACCO'RD, v. n. [accorder, Fr.] to agree, to hang together. Actively it implies, 1. To tune two or more instruments, so as they shall sound the same note when touched by the hand or bow. 2. To harmonize.

ACCO'RDANCE, f. friendship, conformity, confidence, or agreement with.

ACCO'RDING, prep. 1. Agreeable to, in proportion. 2. With regard to.

ACCO'RDINGLY, ad. conformable, or consistent with. In the beginning of a sentence it refers to what went before, and implies a deduction from it.

ACCO'RPORATED, part. [accorporatus, Lat.] joined or put to, embodied.

To ACCO'ST, v. a. [accoster, Fr.] to make or come up to a person, and speak to him.

ACCO'UNT, f. 1. A computation of the number of certain things; a reckoning. 2. The total or result of computation. 3. Estimation or value. 4. Rank, dignity or distinction. 5. Regard, consideration, for the sake of: as, "Sempronius gives no thanks on this account." 6. Reason or cause. 7. Narrative Narrative or relation. 8. Opinion or belief. 9. Review or examination. 10. Explanation, or assignment of causes. 11. The reasons of any thing collected. 12. Profit, gain, or advantage. In a Law Sense, a particular detail or computation delivered to a court or judge. See what a man has received or expended in another, in the management of his office. Also in Common Law, a writ or action in law against a man, who by his office is obliged to give an account to another (as a bail to his master) and refuses to do it. Upon an Account, or by no means. Upon all Accounts. 1. By all means. 2. In every respect.

To ACCOUNT, v. a. to compute; in the passive voice, to be reckoned or esteemed. With the particle for, it denotes to explain, by assigning the cause and reasons. With the particle to, it implies to be charged, applied, appropriated, or assigned to. With the particle of, to estimate, or to be valued. Lastly, to be imposed.

ACCOUNTABLE, a. liable to give an account, answerable.

ACCOUNTANT, f. in Law, a person who is obliged to render an account to another. Account General, is an officer belonging to the court of chancery, appointed by Parliament to receive all money lodged in court, and convey it to the Bank of England.

To ACCOUPLE, v. a. [accoupler, Fr.] to link or join together.

To ACCOUTRE, v. a. [accoutrer, Fr.] to dress, attire, trim, especially with warlike accoutrements.

ACCOUTREMENT, f. 1. Dress. 2. Equipage, furniture, or habiliments of war. 3. Ornaments.

ACCRETION, f. [accretio, Lat.] growing to another, so as to augment it. With Naturalists, an addition of matter to any body externally; but it is frequently applied to the increase of such bodies as are without life; and it is also called apposition.

ACCRETIVE, f. [from accretio, Lat.] that by which growth is increased; that by which vegetation is augmented.

To ACCROACH, v. a. [accrocher, Fr.] a law term, to encroach, to draw away another's property.

ACCROACHMENT, f. the act of invading the property of another.

To ACCRUE, v. n. [accruire, Fr.] 1. To be increased, or added to. 2. In a commercial sense, to arise or proceed from.

To ACCUMULATE, v. a. [accumulo, Lat.] to heap up, or pile one thing upon another; to gather or amass together in great quantities.

ACCUMULATION, f. [accumulatio, Lat.] repeated acquisitions and additions; an amassing; the state of a thing amassed.

ACCUMULATIVE, a. that which increases, or that which is added to; additional.

ACCURACY, f. [accuratio, Lat.] exactness; justice or nicety.

A'CCURATE, a. [accuratus, Lat.] done with care, exact either as to persons or things.

A'CCURATELY, ad. exactly; nicely. To ACCURSE, v. a. to blait or load with a curse; to doom to destruction; to imprecate curses upon.

ACCURSED, part. 1. Lying under a curse, or excommunicated. 2. Execrable, that which deserves execration.

ACCUSABLE, part. [accusabilis, Lat.] that which is liable to be found fault with, censured, or blamed.

ACCUSATION, f. the charging with some defect or crime. In Law, the preferring a criminal action against any one before a judge. ACCUSATIVE, [accusativus, Lat.] in Grammar, the 4th case of nouns. It denotes the relation of the noun, on which the action of the verb terminates.

ACCUSATORY, a. [accusatorius, Lat.] of or belonging to accusation.

To ACCUSE, [accuse] v. a. [accuso, Lat.] to charge with a crime, to inform against, indict, or impeach; to censure. It has the particle of, and sometimes for, before the matter of censure or accusation.

ACCUSER, [accuser] f. the person who accuses.

To ACCUSTOM, v. a. [accoutumer, Fr.] to inure or use one's self to any thing. It hath the particle to before the thing accustomed to.

ACCUSTOMABLE, part. that which a person has practised or been used to for a continuance.

ACCUSTOMABLY, ACCUSTOMABLY, ad. according to use or custom.

ACCUSTOMARY, a. commonly practised, customary, usually done.

ACE, f. a single point or speck on cards or dice. Figuratively, the least quantity, or the smallest distance, i. e. within an ace of it.

ACE'PHALI, certain ecclesiastics so called, who, making profession of extreme poverty, would not acknowledge any chief, whether layman or ecclesiastic.

ACE'PHALOUS, a. something without a head. Naturalists apply this term to worms, which have been supposed formerly to have no head. Figuratively, those who have no superior, chief, or leader.

ACE'RB, a. [acerbus, Lat.] that which hath a compound taste between sour and bitter, such as most unripe fruits have.

ACE'RBITUDE, or ACE'RBITY, f. 1. The rough sour taste of unripe fruit. 2. Severity of temper, roughness of manners.

ACERO'SE, a. [acerosus, Lat.] chaffy, full of, or mixed with chaff.

To ACE'RVATE, v. a. [acervo, Lat.] to raise up in heaps.

ACE'SCENT, a. [acrescent, Lat.] tending to sourness.

ACE'TOUS, a. [from acetum] having the nature of vinegar, or being somewhat like vinegar in quality.

ACE'TUM, f. vinegar in general; any sharp liquor, as spirit of salt, nitre, vitriol, &c.

ACHA'IA,

ACHA'IA, [ákaiá] now LIVADIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, containing the famous city of Athens, Delphi, Pythia; the mounts Parnassus, Helicon, and other places celebrated in ancient writers.

ACHE, [ak'] f. [acc, Sax. or άχος, Gr.] a continued pain or smart in any part of the body. With Farriers, a disease in horses, causing a numbness in the joints.

To ACHE, [ake] v. n. to be affected with pain.

A'CHERON, [ák'eron] f. a river of Epirus, over which the poets feigned departed souls were ferried. Also a stinking fen or lake in the Terra di Lavoro of Naples, between Cuma and Miseno, named Tenebrosa Palus by Virgil, on account of the blackness of its waters. Figuratively, it is used for the state of departed souls, or the grave.

To ACHIEVE, v. a. [acbever, Fr.] 1. To finish, to accomplish, to perform some notable exploit with success. 2. To gain or procure.

ACHIEVEMENT, f. 1. The finishing of a notable action. 2. The ensigns armorial of a family.

ACHIEVER, f. he who acquires; or obtains, or performs some great exploit.

ACHRO'NICAL, a. [άχρονικός, Gr.] a term in Astronomy, signifying the rising of a star when the sun sets, or the setting of a star when the sun rises: in which cases the star is said to rise or set achronicaly.

A'CID, a. [acidus, Lat.] sour, sharp.

ACIDITY, or A'CIDNESS, f. [aciditas, Lat.] keenness, sharpness; that taste which acid or sharp bodies leave in the mouth. With Chemists, the acidity or keenness of any liquor that consists in sharp particles of salts dissolved, and put into a violent motion by the means of fire.

A'CIDIS, f. all things that affect the organs of taste with a pungent sourness. But the Chemists call all substances acids, that make an effervescence with an alkali. This however, does not seem to be a true characteristic of acids, because some acids will make an effervescence upon being mixed with acids of another kind, and also with natural bodies. Another mark of acids is, that they change the colour of the juices of the heliotropium, roses and violets, red; whereas alkali's, especially those extracted from animals, turn it green. Natural Acids, with Physicians, are such as have a proper sharpness of their own, as juice of lemons, &c. Artificial Acids, with Chemists, are such as are prepared by the fire in chemical operations. Manifest Acids, are such as affect the tongue with a sense of sharpness and sourness. Dubious Acids, are such things as have not enough of the acid nature, to give sensible marks to the taste; but yet agree with the manifest acids in other properties.

ACI'DULATED, a. medicines that have been mixed or tinged with some acid.

To ACKNO'WLEDGE, v. a. 1. To confess or own. 2. To be grateful or thankful for any benefit. 3. To own or profess a former acquaintance with a person. 4. To approve.

ACKNO'WLEDGMENT, f. 1. Confession of any thing. 2. Thankfulness, gratitude. 3. Confession of a fault. 4. Belief, attended with open profession. It supposes a question asked, whereas confession favours a little of self-accusation. We acknowledge what we had an inclination to conceal: we confess that which we were blamable in doing.

A'CME, f. [with Physicians] is used to denote the third degree or height of distempers of which many have four periods. 1. The arche, or beginning. 2. Anabasis, or growth. 3. The Acme, when the distemper is at the height. 4. The paracme, or declension of the disease.

ACO'LOTHIST, f. [from ακολουθία, Gr.] one of the lowest order in the Roman Church, whose office is to prepare the elements, to light the church, &c.

A'CONITE, or ACONI'TUM, f. [aconitum, Lat.] 1. Properly the herb wolfsbane. 2. With poets, poison in general. There are several species of it, and most of them are deadly poison.

A'GORN, f. the fruit or seed of the oak.

ACOU'STIC, a. that which belongs to the organ of hearing. Acoustic nerve, in anatomy, the same as auditory nerve.

ACOU'STICS, [άκουσικά, Gr.] 1. The doctrine of sounds. 2. Either instruments or medicines that help the sense of hearing.

To ACQUAINT, v. a. 1. To inform. 2. to be accustomed, or habituated to. 3. To know perfectly. 4. To make one's self agreeable to, to insinuate one's self into the favour of. 5. To acquire a perfect and intimate knowledge of.

ACQUAINTANCE, f. [acquaintance, Fr.] applied both to persons and things, and followed by the particle with. 1. Application productive of knowledge. 2. Personal knowledge arising from familiarity. 3. An intimate friendship and alliance. 4. A familiar and constant companion. 5. Without the preposition, something to which one has been accustomed, when applied to things; applied to persons, a slight or superficial knowledge.

ACQUAINTED, part. 1. Informed. 2. Accustomed, or habituated. 3. Familiar, or having perfect knowledge of; and when followed by the particle with, signifies perfect knowledge by application.

To ACQUIESCE, v. n. [acquiesco, Lat.] to yield to, to comply with, to rest satisfied with, used with the particle in.

ACQUIESCENCE, f. 1. A tacit consent, submission, or yielding to. 2. Approbation, excluding all repining.

To ACQUIRE, v. a. [acquiro, Lat.] to attain, to purchase by one's labour.

ACQUIRER, f. a gainer.

ACQUIREMENT, f. gain; attainment.

ACQUISITION, f. [acquisitio, Lat.] an obtaining, the thing obtained.

ACQUISITIVE, a. that which is acquired, A'QUIST,

ACQUIST, f. [from acquiris, Fr.] additional increase, something acquired or gained, acquisition. In Law, goods not held by descent or inheritance, but obtained by purchase. In Politics, something gained by conquest.

To ACQUIT, v. a. [acquitter, Fr.] 1. To discharge or free from. 2. To clear from guilt, not to condemn, with of, or from, before the crime. 3. To discharge from any obligation.

ACQUITMENT or ACQUITTAL, f. [in Law] a setting free from the suspicion of guilt, or an offence; also a tenant's discharge from or by a mesne landlord, from some service to, or being disturbed in his possession by any superior lord, or paramount. Also when two persons are indicted, the one is principal, and the other as accessory; the principal being discharged, the accessory of consequence is acquitted.

ACQUITTANCE, f. 1. A discharge or release given in writing for a sum of money, or other duty paid or done. 2. The writing itself.

ACRE, f. [ager, Lat. or ἄγρος, Gr.] a measure of land containing forty perches in length, and four in breadth; or four thousand eight hundred and forty square yards.

ACRID, a. [acridus, Lat.] tasting hot and bitter, leaving a painful heat on the tongue and palate.

ACRIMONIOUS, a. abounding with sharp or corrosive particles, when applied to things. Figuratively, sharp and austere, applied to behaviour.

ACRIMONY, f. [acrimonia, Lat.] 1. Sharpness, turned, corrosive quality. 2. Severity of disposition; sharpness of temper.

ACRITUDE, f. [acritudo, Lat.] a quality in a body, which affects the taste with a sensation of rough, pungent, and hottish sour.

ACROAMATICAL, a. [from ἀκροαματις, Gr.] of or pertaining to deep learning, used in opposition to coterial.

ACROSPIRE, f. a shoot or sprout from the end of seeds before they are sown.

CROSS, ad. [See CROSS] cross-wise, thwart-wise.

ACROSTIC, f. [ἀκρος and στιχος, Gr.] a poetical composition, the initial letters of which, when added together form a particular sense.

ACROTERIA, f. in Architecture. 1. Little pedestals, commonly without bases, placed at the middle and both extremes of frontispiece; or pediments, which serve to support statues. 2. Those sharp pinnacles, or spiry embellishments, standing in ranks about flat buildings, with rails and ballusters. 3. The figures, whether of stone or metal, which are placed as ornaments, or crownings, on the tops of temples and other edifices.

To ACT, v. a. [ago, Lat.] 1. To be active, to exert one's active powers. 2. To exercise its active powers, to perform its proper functions. 3. To perform the functions of life, to be excited to action. 4. To perform, in allusion to the theatre. 5. To counterfeit, in allusion to the office of a player. 6. To be impelled, forced, or incited to or by action. 7. To exert action, or produce effects upon a subject. 8. To actuate, or be incited to action. 9. To perform a character in a play.

ACT, f. [actum, Lat.] 1. A deed, a performance. 2. A part in a play. 3. The power of producing an effect. 4. A deed, or decree of parliament, or other court of judicature. 5. In Physics, an affective application of some power or faculty. 6. With Metaphysicians, that by which a being is in real action. 7. In Law, an instrument, or other matter in writing, to declare or justify the truth of a thing. In which sense records, decrees, sentences, reports, certificates, &c. are called acts. 8. Matters of fact, transmitted to posterity in certain authentic books and memoirs. 9. At the university of Oxford, the time when degrees are taken. The word act signifies something done which is remarkable. The word action is applicable indifferently to every thing we do, whether common or extraordinary. An elegant speaker will not say a virtuous act, but an act of virtue; whereas to say a virtuous action is proper and elegant. Act of Faith, [in the Inquisition] is a solemn day held by the Inquisitors, for the punishment of such as they declare heretics, and the absolution of the innocent accused, called by them auto da fe.

ACTIAN, a. belonging to Actium. Actian games, games instituted according to some, by Augustus, in memory of the victory obtained over Antony, near the promontory and city of Actium; though others say, that Augustus only restored them. Actian years, or Actiac æra, in Chronology, a series of years beginning from the conquest of Egypt by Octavius, called also the æra of Augustus.

ACTION, f. [actio, Lat.] 1. The exerting or employing any active powers in opposition to rest. 2. Something done, or performed, a deed. 3. Power, influence, agency, or operation. 4. In Metaphysics, the exercise of an ability, which a being has to begin or determine a particular train of thought or motion. In Ethics, the voluntary motion of a reasonable creature. In Painting, or Sculpture, the posture, attitude, expressive of the passion the painter or carver would convey to the mind of a spectator. In Horsemanship, the action of the mouth, the motion of the tongue and champing on the bit, which is discovered by an abundance of white foam, and is a token of mettle. With Orators, Actors, &c. it is the accommodating the person, voice, and gesture to the subject. In Poetry, an event or series of occurrences, mutually connected and depending on each other, either real or imaginary, which makes the subject of a dramatic or epic poem. In Law, a legal demand of, or the form of, a suit given by law, for the recovery of a person's right. Actions are either criminal or civil. Criminal are such as have judgment of death.

Under

Under this head are included, 1st, Actions penal, which lie for some penalty, corporal or pecuniary. 2. Actions upon the statute, brought on breach of any statute, and which did not lie before, as an occasion of perjury. 3. Actions popular, given on breach of some penal statute, for which any person has a right to sue. In the plural number, Actions, in Commerce, imply the moveable effects: thus, a merchant's creditors have seized upon all his Actions, i. e. they have seized upon all the debts owing to him. Action upon the case. In Law, a general action given for redress of wrongs done without violence, and not provided against by a law. Action on the case of words, is where a person is injured in his reputation by words maliciously spoken. Action of a Writ, in Law, is when it is pleaded that the plaintiff has no cause to have it brought, though he may have another for the same.

ACTIONABLE, [action and abel, Sax.] in a Law Sense, that which will subject a person to an action; punishable, blameable, or culpable.

ACTIVE, g. [activus, Lat.] that which has the power of acting, as opposed to passive; busy in acting, as opposed to idle; practical, not merely speculative, or in theory; nimble, quick, apt, or forward to act. Active Principles, in Chemistry, are spirit, oil, and salt, so named, because when their parts are briskly in motion, they cause action in other bodies. Active, in Grammar, applied to verbs that affirm action of the word going before them. If in Medicine, it implies such a dose, as operates quick and with some force, as emetics, cathartics, and cordials.

ACTIVELY, ad. busily; nimbly.

ACTIVITY, f. propensity, readiness, nimbleness to do a thing. Applied both to persons and things, a power of acting, operation, influence, continual exertion of our active powers, in opposition to indolence.

ACTION, the name of two villages, called E. and W. Action, six miles from London, which derive their names from the oaks that grew there formerly. See Ac.

ACTION BURNEL, a place in Shropshire, which takes its name from the Burnels, who had a castle here. In Law, it signifies the statute merchant for the recovery of debts, so called from this place, where it was held.

ACTOR, f. [actor, Lat.] he that does any thing: he that practises, in opposition to theory. A player.

ACTRESS, f. [actrice, Fr.] a woman who personates a character on the stage. A female who performs any thing.

ACTS, [in Dramatic Poetry] the divisions or principal parts of a play.

ACTUAL, a. that which includes or implies action. That which is real, or has an existence in nature.

ACTUALITY, f. 1. The power of exerting action or operating, activity. 2. Reality, or certainty.

ACTUALLY, ad. in effect; really.

ACTUALNESS, f. a quality which denotes the reality of the operation, existence, or truth of a thing.

ACTUARY, f. [actuarius, Lat.] in law, the register or clerk who compiles the minutes of the proceedings of a court, particularly the clerk that registers the acts and proceedings of the convocation.

To ACTUATE, v. a. [from ago, Lat.] to excite to action, to move, to quicken.

To ACUATE, v. a. [acuo, Lat.] to sharpen. ACU'LEATE, a. [aculeatus, Lat.] prickly; that which terminates in a sharp point.

ACUMEN, f. [Lat.] sharpness; applied either to material objects, or the faculties of the mind.

ACUMINATED, part. [acuminatus, Lat.] sharp-pointed.

ACUTE, a. [acutus, Lat.] sharp-pointed, sharp-witted, subtle, ingenious, vigorous in operation, or effect. Acute, in Geometry, that which terminates in a sharp point. Acute angle, that which is less than ninety degrees. Acute-angled triangle, is that whose three angles are acute. Acute-angular sections of a cone, the same as an ellipsis. Acute, in Music, shrill, sharp, or high in respect of some other note, opposed to grave. Acute, in Grammar, an accent which teaches to raise, or sharpen the voice. In Physic, applied to diseases, are those that are very violent, and terminated in a few days.

ACUTE'LY, ad. sharply.

ACUTENESS, f. sharpness, applied to matter. Sagacity, or quickness of discernment. Capacity of distinguishing, or receiving impressions. Vehement, productive of a speedy crisis in a disease. Shrillness, applied to sound.

AD, at the beginning of English proper names, signifies the same with ad or apud amongst the Latins. So Adston signifies at or near some stone; Adbill, at or near some hill.

AD'PAGE, f. [adagium, Lat.] a maxim or principle received as self-evident. A proverbial saying.

ADA'GIO, f. [Ital.] slow, grave, solemn. In Music, a slow movement, or time: when it is repeated twice, as adagio, adagio, it implies a very slow motion, or movement.

ADAMANT, f. [adamans, Lat.] a stone, imagined of impenetrable hardness. The diamond, the loadstone. Figuratively, something that has any strong attraction.

ADAMANTINE, a. 1. Made of adamant. 2. Endued with the properties of adamant, not to be broken.

ADAMITES, a set of heretics, who imitated the nakedness of Adam during his residence in Paradise, and contented marriage, because he is not said to have known Eve before the Fall.

To ADAPT, v. a. [adapto, Lat.] 1. To fit one thing to another, to proportion. 2. To make one thing correspond with another, to suit.

ADAPTA'TION, f. the art of fitting one thing to another, or the fitness, suitability, or or correspondence of one thing with another.

ADAPTION, f. the act of fitting, or suitability.

To ADD, v. a. [addo, Lat.] to increase by joining something new; to enlarge, to aggrandize. To perform the operation of joining one member to another.

ADDALE, or ADDIBLE, part. that may be added.

ADDER, f. [adder, Sax.] a kind of serpent whose poison is to quick and fatal, that few remedies are strong enough to overcome it.

ADDER'S GRASS, commonly called Ad-der's tongue, f. a plant without any flower; its fruit is oblong, and of an oval shape. It is esteemed a vulnerary, and applied internally or externally; the juice of it is given for internal wounds, and the ointment that is made of it is applied to those that are external.

ADVICE, or ADZE, f. a cooper's instrument, to chop or cut with.

To ADDICT, v. a. [addico, Lat.] to give up one's self wholly to a thing, to apply one's mind wholly to it. It is mostly used in a bad sense.

ADDITION, f. [additamentum, Lat.] a thing added, or addition.

ADDITION, f. [additio, Lat.] the act of adding or joining one thing to another, in order to increase its quantity or dimensions. 2. The thing which is added, increase. 3. Interpolation, or the corrupting of writings, or texts, by inserting something new, or spurious. In Arithmetic, one of the five principal rules. In Law, a title given to a man, besides his christian, or surname, implying his estate, degree, occupation, age, or place of residence.

ADDITIONAL, a. that which is added; that which increases. With respect to arguments, a great number, or more forcible ones.

A'DDLE, a. [adel, Sax.] empty, rotten; commonly said of eggs that produce no chicks, though laid under the hen; and hence it is applied to a brain that produces nothing.

To ADDRESS, v. a. [addresser, Fr.] 1. To prepare for use. 2. To make ready, to prepare one's self for any action. 3. To present a petition to. 4. To make application to a person. 5. To direct one's speech to a particular person, or body of men.

ADDRESS, f. [adresse, Fr.] 1. An application in order to persuade. 2. The suit or application of a lover. 3. Behaviour, or general carriage. 4. Quickness of understanding, presence of mind. 5. An application from an inferior to a superior. 6. The direction of a letter, or the method in which a person is directed to.

ADDRESSER, f. the person who carries the petition and delivers the address.

ADDU'CENT, part. [adducens, Lat.] that which draws to, or close. In Anatomy, applied to muscles that bring forward, close, or draw together the parts of the body to which they are fixed.

ADEMPITION, f. among Civilians, is the privation, or revocation of some donation or favour.

A'DEPT f. [adeptus, Lat.] one that understands all the secrets of his art, originally appropriated to chemists, but now applied to persons of any profession.

ADEPT, a. thoroughly skilled in any thing, well versed in any matter.

A'DEQUATE, a. [adequatus, Lat.] 1. Equal or proportionate to. 2. Full, perfect, proper, sole, and entire.

A'DEQUATENESS, f. equality, perfect resemblance; justness of correspondence, exactness of proportion.

ADE'SSENARII, f. those who hold the corporal presence of Christ at the sacrament, but in a manner different from the Papists.

To ADHERE, v. a. [adherere, Lat.] to stick to, like any glutinous matter; figuratively, to hold together, join, or unite with. To persist in, or remain firm to a party, person, or opinion.

ADHERENCE, or ADHERENCY, f. the quality of sticking to, strong attachment, steady perseverance.

ADHERENT, part. or a. clinging or sticking to. In Logic, something added, or not essential to a thing.

ADHERENT, f. one who is firmly attached to any person, party, or opinion.

ADHERER, f. one who is tenacious of any tenet, or sharply attached to any person, party, or profession.

ADHESION, f. the act of cleaving, or sticking to. Adhesion to a natural body is used, and adherence to a party; but sometimes promiscuously.

ADHESIVE, a. remaining close attached, sticking, or keeping to, without any deviation.

ADJA'GENCY, f. 1. State of lying near to. 2. The thing itself so lying.

ADJA'CENT, part. or a. lying near, or bordering upon, contiguous, or touching each other.

ADIA'PHORISTS, f. [ἀδιάφοροι, Gr. indifferent] a name given to the moderate Lutherans in the sixteenth century, who adhered to the sentiments of Melancthon.

A'DJECTIVE, f. [adjectivum, Lat.] a word which denotes the qualities of a subject, as a great minister; the word great is an adjective, as denoting only the qualities of the minister. It derives its name from its being joined or added to another word, either expressed or understood, in order to limit the sense.

ADIEU' ad. [Fr.] farewell, God be with you.

To ADJOIN, v. a. [adiungo, Lat.] to join, to unite to, to add to; also, to be contiguous to, to lie for near as to touch or join to.

To ADJO'URN, v. a. [adjurner, Fr.] to appoint a day, to put off to another time; used chiefly of juridical proceedings, and the meeting of parliament.

ADJO'URNMENT, f. the deferring or putting putting off to another day; delay, or procrastination.

A-DIPOUS, a. [adiposus, Lat.] fat; greasy.

A'DIT, f. [aditus, Lat.] a passage, or entry, the shaft or entrance into a mine.

ADITION, f. [aditio, Lat.] a going or coming nigh to.

To ADJU'DGE, v. a. [adjudico, Lat.] 1. To give judgment or sentence in a court of justice, with to before the person. 2. To award, to sentence. 3. Simply to determine or judge.

To ADJU'DICATE, v. a. to determine any claim at law; to give or assign the right of something controverted to one of the claimants.

ADJUDICATION, f. [adjudicatio, Lat.] the act of judging, or giving to a person by a judicial sentence.

ADJUNCT, part. [adjunctum, Lat.] 1. Something united, but not essential. 2. One joined to another as a companion, or assistant. In Philosophy, something added to a thing not essentially belonging to it; a mode that may be separated from its subject. Adjuncts, in Grammar and Rhetoric, are adjectives or epithets added to enlarge or augment the energy of a discourse.

ADJUNCTION, f. [adjunctio, Lat.] the act of joining things together; or state of a thing joined.

ADJURATION, f. [adjuratio, Lat.] the form of an oath taken by any person; or an oath administered to any person, whereby he is under a necessity of speaking the truth without disguise.

To ADJU'RE, v. a. [adjuro, Lat.] to bind a person to do or not to do any thing, under the penalty of a dreadful curse. To entreat earnestly by the most pathetic topics. To swear by. To oblige a person to declare the truth upon oath.

To ADJU'ST, v. a. [adjuſter, Fr.] to make consistent, to regulate. To settle, to reduce to a standard, or criterion. To reconcile.

ADJUSTMENT, f. a just description, an explication and obviation of difficulties in a subject. A just disposition of parts, wherein they conspire to promote and assist each other's motion.

A'DJUTANT, f. [adjutus, Lat.] in the Military art, an helper, or assistant. More particularly an officer in the army, who assists a superior, particularly the Major, in distributing the pay, and overseeing the punishment of the inferior men. Adjutant General, is one who attends the General, assists in council, and carries the orders from one part of the army to the other.

ADJUTOR, f. [Lat.] a helper; one who gives assistance.

ADJUTRIX, f. [Lat.] a female helper, or a woman who assists.

ADMEASUREMENT, f. the measuring or finding the dimensions and quantity of a thing by the application of a standard or rule: in Law, a writ brought against such as usurp more than their due.

ADMENSURATION, f. [admensuratio, Lat.] the act of determining or finding out the length and other dimensions by a standard, rule, or measure.

To ADMINISTER, v. a. [administro, Lat.] to afford, including the idea of help or service; to give. In Politics, to manage, or conduct the affairs of Government, including the idea of subordination. In judicial courts, to render, or apply to a person to take his oath. "To administer an oath." In Church government, to perform the office of a minister, or priest, in giving the elements of bread and wine, &c. in the sacrament. "To administer the sacrament." In Physic, to dispense medicines, prescribe and apply remedies. "Administering physick." To be subservient to; to contribute to; with the particle to. In Law, to take possession of the goods and chattels of a person dying without will, to give in an inventory thereof on oath at the Commons, and oblige one's self to be accountable for them.

To ADMINISTRATE, v. a. [administro, Lat.] to apply or make use of, "Inwardly administered." A term peculiar to physick.

ADMINISTRATION, f. [administratio, Lat.] the act of enforcing, or applying, or giving sentence according to the sense of a law. The discharge of one of the chief officers of state, which respects the direction of public affairs. The active or executive part of Government. Those who are entrusted with the care of public affairs. The due discharge of an office. The performance of the necessary rites, the act of distributing bread and wine, &c. in the eucharist. In Law, the act or state of a person, who takes charge of the effect of one dying intestate, and is accountable for them, when thereto required. The bishop of the diocese, where the party dies, is to grant administration; but if the deceased has goods in several dioceses, termed in law bona notabilia, it must then be granted by the archbishop in the prerogative court. The persons to whom administration may be granted, are, 1st, to the husband, of his wife's goods and chattels: 2d, to the wife of the husband's: but in default of either of these 3dly, to the children, of either sex: in case there be none, 4thly, to the father and mother; after them, 5thly, to a brother or sister of the whole or half blood: in default of these, 6thly, to the next of kin, as uncle, aunt, or cousin: and for want of all these, 7thly, to any other person, at the discretion of the Ordinary, &c. Administration cum testamento annexo, [with a testament or will annexed] in Law, is where an executor refuses to prove a will, and, on that account, administration, with the will annexed to it, is granted to the next of kin.

ADMINISTRATIVE, a. that which aids, supports, or assists.

ADMINISTRATOR, f. [Lat.] the person who officiates as a minister or priest in a church. He that has the chief management of of national affairs. In Law, he who has the goods of a man dying without will committed to his charge, and is accountable for them, when required by the Ordinary. The office of administrator is the same as that of executor, with regard to the burial, discharging funeral expences, and payment of the debts, &c. of the deceased; but as this power is commenced by administration, he can do nothing before that is granted.

ADMINISTRATORSHIP, f. the office of an administrator.

ADMINISTRATRIX, f. [Lat.] a female who has the goods and chattels of a person dying intestate, committed to her charge.

ADMIRABLE, a. [admirabilis, Lat.] worthy of admiration.

ADMIRABLENESS, f. the quality which is capable of exciting wonder, admiration, and including the idea of worth, excellence, and unexpected perfection.

ADMIRABILITY, f. [admirabilitas, Lat.] the quality or state which causes admiration.

ADMIRAL, f. [amiral, Fr.] an officer who has the chief command of a fleet. According to Du Cange, the Sicilians were the first, and the Genoese the next, who gave this name to the commander of their naval affairs; and it is supposed that Philip of France introduced the name into Europe in 1214; and the first mention of this name among us was in the reign of Edward I. Lord high-admiral, one invested with power to determine by himself, or deputies, all crimes committed on the sea, and its coasts. James, duke of York, and afterwards king, bore this office; but at present it is divided amongst several persons, who are styled lords commissioners of the admiralty. Under the admiral is a rear-admiral, who commands a third squadron of men of war, and carries his flag, with the arms of his country, in the mizzen-top of his ship; and a vice-admiral, who commands the second squadron, and carries his flag on the ship's fore-top. Vice-admiral, also denotes one who is invested with the jurisdiction of an admiral, within a certain county or district upon the sea-coast; who is to aid and assist persons that are shipwrecked within his jurisdiction, and to save and secure their goods. They are authorized to hear and determine disputes relating to maritime affairs arising within their limits; but an appeal lies from their sentence to the admiralty-court in London. There are upwards of twenty such vice-admirals in Great-Britain.

ADMIRALSHIP, f. the office of an admiral.

ADMIRALTY, f. [amiralte, Fr.] the office or power of the lord high admiral, or lords commissioners. It usually consists of a first commissioner, who presides at the board, and six others, which take place in the order their names are set down in the commission. They have the chief direction of the affairs of the navy; their jurisdiction is over Great-Britain, Ireland, Wales, and the dominions and isles thereto belonging. All warrants for building and providing ships with warlike stores, are signed by them. Court of Admiralty, is a sovereign court, held by the lord high admiral, or commissioners of the admiralty; and has cognizance in all maritime affairs, civil as well as criminal. All crimes committed on the high seas, or in great rivers, below the bridge next the sea, are cognizable in this court only, which, by statute, is obliged to try the same by judge and jury. Civil actions are determined according to civil law, because the sea is without the jurisdiction of the common law. Under this court is also a court of equity, for determining differences among merchants. The Court of Admiralty was first erected by king Edward III.

ADMIRATION, f. [admiratio, Lat.] a passion excited, when we discover a great excellence in an object. In such a manner as to excite wonder. Surprise, including the secondary idea of something culpable. In Grammar, a point or stop, which denotes that the sentence before it implies wonder or astonishment; marked thus (!).

To ADMIRE, v. a. [admiror, Lat.] to look upon with some wonder, including esteem; and arising from the discovery of unexpected and inexhausted excellence.

ADMIRED, part. that which occasions great surprize and astonishment.

ADMIRER, f. a person who feels the passion of admiration rising at the sight, or contemplation, of any thing surprizingly excellent. He who wonders, or regards with admiration.

ADMIRINGLY, adv. with admiration.

ADMIRSSIBLE, a. [from admitto, Lat.] that which may be granted or admitted.

ADMISSION, f. [admissio, Lat.] liberty or permission of entering. Access or liberty of approaching. A power of entering. The granting a proposition not fully proved. In Law, is when the bishop, after examination, allows a priest to enter into a benefice to which he is presented, saying, Admitto te habilem. "I admit you as a person properly qualified."

To ADMIT, v. a. [admitto, Lat.] to grant access to. To permit or suffer a person to enter upon an office. To grant, in a general sense; to allow.

ADMITTABLE, a. that which may be admitted, applied both to persons and things.

ADMITTANCE, f. a permission of a person to take and exercise the functions of any office. Access, passage, or power of entering. A prerogative, or right of finding a ready access to the great. The acceding to, granting, or concession of, any position.

To ADMIX, v. a. [admisco, Lat.] to join to, or mingle with something else.

ADMIXION, f. the joining, blending, or incorporating one body or fluid with another by mixing.

ADMIXTURE, f. the blending or mingling one body with another.

To ADMONISH, v. a. [admonco, Lat.] to exhort, exhort, or give advice, with the preposition against. To reprove. To give a person a hint, to warn. To put in mind of a fault.

ADMO'NISHER, f. the person who reminds another of his duty, and reproveth him for his faults.

ADMO'NISHMENT, f. admonition; notice of faults or duties.

ADMONITION, f. [admonitio, Lat.] a hint of duty. A reminding a person of his duty, or reproof for the neglect of it.

ADMONITIONER, f. a general adviser. A ludicrous term.

ADMO'NITORY, a. [admonitorius, Lat.] that which exhorts and excites us to the performance of a duty.

To ADMO'VE, v. a. [admoveo, Lat.] to move towards, to approach, or bring nearer to.

ADO', f. difficulty, when following much. With the preposition about, bustle, noise, or tumult. With the words great, or more, it signifies a greater appearance or show of business than what is real, and is taken in a ludicrous sense.

ADOLE'SCENCE, f. [adolescencia, Lat.] the state of a growing youth, commencing from his infancy, and ending at his full growth; and lasting as long as the fibres continue to increase in dimensions or firmness; commonly computed to be between fifteen and twenty-five, if not thirty years of age. The Romans computed it from twelve to twenty-five in males, and to twenty-one in females.

To ADO'PT, v. a. [adoptio, Lat.] to substitute another person's son instead of one's own, and make him capable of inheriting, as if so by nature. To acquire, in opposition to what is inherent by nature. To rely or confide in, and make use of as if our own.

ADO'PTEDLY, ad. after the manner of something adopted.

ADO'PTER, f. he who gives some one by choice the right of a son.

ADO'PTION, f. [adoptio, Lat.] the act by which a person takes the child of another for his own son.

ADO'PTIVE, a. [adoptivus, Lat.] that which is adopted, in opposition to a son by procreation.

ADO'RABLE, a. [adorabile, Fr.] that which is worthy of, and ought to receive divine honour.

ADO'RABLENESS, f. the quality which renders a being worthy of divine honours.

ADO'RABLY, ad. in a manner worthy of divine worship.

ADORA'TION, f. [adoratio, Lat.] the act of worshipping, including in it reverence, esteem, and love. The external act of homage paid to God, distinguished from mental worship. Homage paid to persons in high posts, or in great esteem.

To ADO'RE, v. a. [adoro, Lat.] to reverence, to honour with divine worship. To pay a high degree of regard, reverence, esteem, and homage.

ADO'RER, f. one who pays divine honours to the Deity. One who has a great and reverential regard. In common conversation, lover, who almost idolizes the object of his affections.

To ADO'R'N, v. a. [adorno, Lat.] to be off with dress. To deck with ornaments. To convey splendor, or pomp. To be embellished or graced with oratory and elegance of language.

ADO'R'NMENT, f. the advantage of ornament, applied both to dress and the faculties of the mind.

ADO'WN, prep. towards the ground, downwards, or down.

A'DRAGANTH, f. [in Medicine] Gum Dragon. It distils by incision from the trunk or great roots of a plant, which is small and thorny, with thin slender leaves, and grows in several parts of the Levant. The gum is of different colours, as white, red and black. It must be chosen clear, smooth, and twisting. It is of great use in medicine. Skinners and curriers use great quantities of it in preparing their leather, and prefer the red and black, though all others use the white or grey.

ADRE'AD, ad. in a state of fear.

ADRI'FT, ad. [adrisan, Sax.] driven at the pleasure of a torrent. In a figurative sense, at random, without restraint, or following the first impulse.

ADRO'IT, a. [Fr.] one who is very active or skilful; dexterous.

ADRO'ITNESS, f. dexterity; readiness, activity; assiduity. Johnson observes, that neither this nor the preceding word seem to be perfectly naturalized.

ADRY', ad. in want of drink; thirsty.

ADSCITI'IOUS, a. [adscititius, Lat.] taken in to supply or complete; added unnecessarily. Spurious; interpolated, and not genuine; borrowed, or counterfeited.

ADSTRI'CTION, f. [adstrictio, Lat.] the act of binding together; contracting into a lesser compass; applied to medicines which have the power of contracting the parts.

To ADVA'NCE, v. a. [avancer, Fr.] to bring forward, with relation to place. To raise to a higher post; to prefer. To exalt, by improvement. To adorn, heighten, to communicate honour. To hasten the growth; applied to vegetables. To propose; to offer to the public; to produce. In a mercantile sense, to pay the charges of an undertaking before the time of reimbursement arrives. To give or lend a person money or commodities, before he begins the business which is to reimburse it.

To ADVA'NCE, v. n. to come forward, To make a progress:

ADVA'NCE, f. the act of coming forwards; to approach. Gradation, or gradual increase. Raising to a higher degree of dignity or perfection. Advance Guard, is the first line of an army in battle array next to the enemy.

ADVA'NCEMENT, f. the act of gaining ground, progress. Promotion to a higher station; preferment. Raising to a greater pitch of perfection, improvement.

ADVA'NCER,

ADVANCER, f. he that promotes or forwards.

ADVANTAGE, f. [avantage, Fr.] used with of or over before the person, the better of a person, or superiority. Used with make, take, or get, it implies superiority acquired by stratagem or cunning. A favourable opportunity. In mercantile affairs, a premium, or profit greater than what can be claimed by law.

To ADVANTAGE, v. a. to benefit. To improve, promote, or forward. To acquire profit: to profit.

ADVANTAGED, part. possessed of advantages.

ADVANTAGEOUS, a. that which conduces to profit. Useful or serviceable.

ADVANTAGEOUSLY, ad. in a manner conducing to convenience or profit.

ADVANTAGEOUSNESS, f. service or convenience.

To ADVENTURE, v. n. [advenio, Lat.] to become a part of a thing, including the idea of something superadded, and not essential.

ADVENTIENT, part. that which is superadded; additional, incidental.

ADVENT, f. [adventus, Lat.] signifies coming, particularly the coming of Christ, and in the Calendar denotes the time immediately preceding Christmas, or the nativity of our Saviour. It includes four Sundays or weeks, which begin either on St. Andrew's day, or on the Sunday before or after it.

ADVENTINE, a. [from advenio, Lat.] that which is acquired, in opposition to that which is natural.

ADVENTITIOUS, a. [adventitius, Lat.] that which is superadded, or acquired in opposition to natural. That which is not of the same nature. Additional, or increased.

ADVENTUAL, a. relating to the season of Advent.

ADVENTURE, f. [aventure, Fr.] an incident which is not under our direction; a hazard. Hazarding all dangers. An attempt, in which some risk is run. An incident, or occurrence. In Commerce, a parcel of goods, sent by sea, at a person's own risk, to foreign parts. Bill of Adventure, in the mercantile way, is a bill of writing signed by a merchant, obliging that the goods mentioned in it to be shipped on board such a vessel, belong to another person, who is to run the hazard; the merchant being only to account for the produce of them, be it more or less.

To ADVENTURE, v. n. to stand the chance, to run the risk. In an active sense, to endanger.

ADVENTURER, f. [aventurier, Fr.] one who seeks occasions of a hazard; one who exposes himself to danger; a knight errant.

ADVENTUROUS, a. that is ready to expose himself to the greatest dangers.

ADVENTUROUSLY, ad. in a hazardous, daring and bold manner.

ADVENTURESOME, a. [from adventure, and some, or sum, Sax. These words were formerly wrote like the Saxon, from whence they derive their termination, as tail-sum] in a manner subject to hazard.

ADVERB, f. [adverbium, Lat.] is a word joined to verbs, to express the manner, time, &c. of an action; as, be fought bravely: here bravely is an adverb. Adverbs are likewise ad'ed to nouns, and even to other adverbs, in order to modify, or ascertain their meaning. Thus be did the business extremely well: the word well qualifies the action of doing, and the word extremely does the same in regard to well.

ADVERBIAL, a. that which is used in the sense of an adverb.

ADVERBIALLY, ad. like, or in the manner of, an adverb.

ADVERSA'RIA, f. [Lat.] a sort of common-place book, used by students, to enter any remarkable observation or occurrence they meet with in reading or conversation.

ADVERSARY, f. [adversarius, Lat.] one who sets himself in opposition to another. An enemy, or one who seeks to do another an injury.

ADVERSATIVE, a. [adversativus, Lat.] a word which makes some opposition or variety.

In Grammar, it expresses some difference between what goes before and what follows; as in the phrase, he loves money, but takes no pains to get it, the word but is an adverbative conjunction.

ADVERSE, a. [adversus, Lat.] contrary. Acting in opposite directions. Figuratively, contrary to the wish or desire. Applied to condition, unsuccessful; calamitous, in opposition to prosperous.

ADVERSELY, or ADVERSLY, ad. in an adverse or unhappy manner; disagreeably.

ADVERSITY, f. [adversitas, Lat.] a state which is opposite to our wishes, and the cause of sorrow.

To ADVERT, v. n. [adverto, Lat.] to take notice of; to regard, observe, or attend to; with the particle to before the object.

ADVERTISE, f. attention to; regard to; consideration of.

ADVERTENCY, f. attention; regard; consideration; heedfulness.

To ADVERTISE, [advertize] v. a. [advertit, Fr. now accented on the last, but by Shakespeare on the second syllable] to determine a thing in suspense. To give a person notice or information. To publish a thing lost, found, or wanted, in the news-papers, or by hand-bills, with a description of its peculiarities; now practised instead of crying it.

ADVERTISEMENT, [advertizement] f. [accented sometimes on the second syllable] admonition; instruction; advice. Publication, a notice of a thing in a news-paper: or an article, containing the description of a thing lost, &c.

ADVERTISER, [advertizer] f. he that brings or gives intelligence or information. The paper which contains advertisements.

ADVERTISING, [advertizing] part. active in giving intelligence, advice, or admonition.

ADVICE, f. [avis, Fr.] opinion or counsel;

fel; instruction; the result of judicious reflection; prudence, or discretion. Followed by the particle with, consultation, deliberation. Used with the word receive or have, information, news, or intelligence.

ADVICEABLE, [adviseable] a. that which may, or is fit to be advised; prudent.

ADVICEABLENESS, [adviseableness] f. the quality which renders a thing proper to be advised; fitness, propriety.

To ADVISE, [advise] v. a. [avisor, Fr.] to recommend a thing as useful. To give a person an idea or hint of; to remind. To inform, or give intelligence of an action transacted at a distance.

To ADVISE, [advise] v. n. used with the particle with before the person, to consult. To consider; to examine; to give one's opinion.

ADVISED, [advised] part. deliberate; guided by prudence after a due examination of the nature and consequences. Done on purpose.

ADVISEDLY, [advisedly] ad. in a deliberate manner; with due consideration: prudently. With any peculiar design; on purpose.

ADVISEDNESS, [advisedness] f. a state wherein a person has taken the advice and counsel of others; deliberation, caution.

ADVISEMENT, [advisement] f. [avisement, Fr.] advice, or counsel. Prudence and circumspection.

ADVISER, [advisor] f. he that gives advice, or counsel; an adviser, or counsellor.

ADULATION, f. [adulatio, Lat.] the act of bestowing more praise upon a person than is due; including in it too high a commendation of his virtues and excellencies, and an entire neglect of his defects.

ADULATOR, f. [adulator, Lat.] a flatterer; one who pays a higher compliment to another than he deserves.

A'DULATORY, a. [adulatorius, Lat.] in a flattering or complimentary manner.

ADULT, part. [adultus, Lat.] grown up; arrived to the age of discretion.

ADULT, f. one who is arrived at the intermediate age between infancy and manhood.

ADULTERANT, part. [adulterans, Lat.] the person who is guilty of adultery; or thing which debases by admixture.

To ADULTERATE, v. a. [adultero, Lat.] to violate the bed of a married person by unlawful knowledge. To corrupt or debase by some foreign mixture.

ADULTERATE, a. flowing from, or owing to the crime of adultery. Counterfeit; though resembling in appearance, yet inferior in value. Debased by mixture.

ADULTERATENESS, f. the quality or state of being adulterate; counterfeit.

ADULTERATION, f. [adulteratio, Lat.] the act of corrupting by a foreign mixture; or endeavouring to make things pass for more than their intrinsic value, by its resemblance to something better.

ADULTERER, f. [adulter, Lat.] the person guilty of lying with his neighbour's wife.

ADULTERESS, f. a woman guilty of the crime of violating her husband's bed, by lying with another man.

ADULTERINE, f. [adulterine, Fr.] in common law, a child got in adultery.

ADULTEROUS, a. [adulter, Lat.] guilty of adultery. Base and corrupted; idolatrous.

ADULTERY, f. [adulterium, Lat.] in its primary signification, the crime of being false to the marriage-bed. Figuratively, idolatry.

To ADUMBRATE, v. a. [adumbro, Lat.] to shadow; to give a slight resemblance or faint likeness, alluding to that of shadows, with respect to the bodies by which they are formed.

ADUMBRA'TION, f. the act of giving a slight representation, or illustration. An imperfect resemblance, like that of a shadow. A faint glimmering, a distant and confused likeness. In Heraldry, when any figure in a coat is so obscured, that nothing but the bare profile, or outline, is visible.

ADUNATION, f. union, the junction of two or more bodies.

ADUNQUE, a. crooked.

A'DVOCATE, f. [advocatus, Lat.] in the general import of the word, one who has the pleading or management of a cause; in a more confined sense, the patron of it. One who vindicates, or answers objections made against any tenet or action. This term is in Scripture applied in both the first senses to Christ. Used with the particle for, before the person or thing for which the plea is used. Lord Advocate, one of the officers of state in Scotland, who gives his advice in all cases about making or executing laws; defends the king's rights in all public meetings; prosecutes all capital crimes before the judiciary; concurs in all pursuits wherein the king has interest; and is at liberty to plead all causes, unless when acting as an ordinary lord of sessions; in which case he can plead only the king's.

ADVOCATION, f. the office of an advocate.

ADVOWE', f. [advowé, Fr.] he that has the right of advowson.

ADVO'WSON, or ADVO'WSEN, f. a right to present to a benefice, in the Common Law, because those who had obtained the right of presenting to a living were generally great benefactors to it.

To ADU'RE, v. n. to consume by fire, to burn up.

ADU'ST, part. [adustus, Lat.] burnt up, scorched, and thereby rendered brittle. Able to burn, scorching hot. In Medicine and Philosophy, those humours and that habit of body which arises from a fermentation of choler and bile, and betokens warmth of temper; choleric.

ADU'STED, part. burnt, or set on fire. Warm, with respect to the humours of the body or temper.

ADU'STIBLE, a. that which may be burnt or scorched up.

ADU'STION,

AUSTION, f. the act of burning up, or drying. Applied to the blood, is the evaporating its most subtle particles by heat, and leaving the grosser as half parched. In Phlegm, an inflammation about the brain and its membranes, attended with a hollowness in the eyes, a pale colour and a dryness of the body.

Æ, a diphthong, wherein the sound of the A is very obscure, used by the Romans and Sæmons, but seems now quite out of use among modern writers, being changed for the simple A, as Æneas, Æquinoctial, and even in Æneas.

ÆMILE, f. [ædilis, Lat.] a Roman magistrus, deriving his name from being surveyor of the buildings, both public and private; such as baths, aqueducts, bridges, and roads; he inspected the weights and measures; took cognizance of disorderly houses; revised all plays before their being exhibited; had the care of the acts of the senate, and the examination of all books which were intended for publication.

ÆGIS, f. in Mythology, the name given to the shield or buckler of Jupiter, or Pallas. It derives its name from Jupiter's covering his shield with the skin of the goat Amalthea, which he is reported to have suckled. This buckler he afterwards gave to Minerva, whose shield is called by this name.

ÆNIGMA, f. [ainygos, Gr.] a proposition put in obscure, and often contradictory terms, in order to exercise the sagacity of a person; or an obscure description of a thing, delivered in such terms as render the explanation difficult, and the meaning not intelligible at first sight.

ÆRA, f. [Lat.] in Chronology, a series of years, commencing from a certain fixed point of time, called an Epocha. Thus, the Christian Æra is the number of years since the birth of Christ. Authors, however, generally use the terms Æra and Epocha synonymously, for the time from which the computation commences.

ÆRIAL, a. [ærius, Lat.] consisting of air. Produced by the air. Inhabiting the air, Placed in the air; lofty; high.

ÆRIANS, f. a religious sect in the fourth century, who derived their name from Ærius their founder.

ÆRIE, f. [aire, Fr.] a nest appropriated to hawks, and other birds of prey.

ÆRO'LOGY, f. [æip and λόγος, Gr.] a discourse on the nature and properties of the air.

ÆRO'MANCY, f. [æip and μαντις, Gr.] the art of divining and foretelling by the air.

ÆROMETRY, f. [æip and μετρον, Gr.] the art of measuring the air, comprehending the laws of motion, gravitation, pressure, elasticity, rarefaction, condensation, &c. See PNEUMATICS.

ÆROSCOPY, f. [æip and σκοπεω, Gr.] the observation of the air.

ÆRUGINOUS, a. [from ærugo, Lat.] resembling or belonging to the rust of copper. Applied to colour, it is by some described as a green, and by others as a brown.

ÆRUGO, f. [Lat.] rust, particularly that of copper; verdigrise.

ÆSTUARY, f. [æstuarium, Lat.] In Pharmacy, a vapour bath.

ÆTHÉR, f. [αιθηρ, Gr.] in Physics, a thin subtle matter, finer and rarer than air, commencing from the limits of our atmosphere, and expanded through all the regions of space.

ÆTHÉRIAL, a. [ætherius, Lat.] something which belongs to, or partakes of the nature of æther. Ætherial space, or region, is that space in the heavens, where the pure unmixed æther is supposed to be found; and figuratively, is used for heavenly. Ætherial oil, in Chemistry, named likewise essential, is a fine, subtle, essential oil, approaching nearly to the nature of a spirit. The pure liquor, which rises next after the spirit, in distilling turpentine, is termed the ætherial oil of turpentine.

ÆTHIO'PSMINERAL, [compound word, deriving its name from its colour, which is black, and supposed to resemble the complexion of the Æthiopsians] in Pharmacy, a preparation of equal quantities of quicksilver and flour of brimstone, ground in a stone or iron mortar, till they become black, and no particles of quicksilver remain visible.

ÆTNA, f. a burning mountain, the highest of any in Sicily. The inhabitants call it Monte Gibello, or by contraction, Monte Gibello, i. e. the mount of mounts; for the Saracens, when masters of Sicily, called it Gibel; pronounced by the Germans Gebel, or Gipfel, the summit of a hill; so that the name Monte, Italian for a mount, seems, when joined to the Saracen, to denote the great impression its ravages made on their minds. Its ascent from Catania is 30,000 paces, but on the side next Randazzo, only 20,000; its circumference, at the bottom, is about 100,000; it is of a circular form, and terminates in a peak, resembling a sugar-loaf. The bottom is planted with corn and sugar-canes, the middle with woods, olive-trees, and vines, and the top is covered with snow all the year. The prodigious quantity of burning matter ejected, and the earthquakes attending its eruptions, have occasioned terrible devastations and calamities. During the eruption of 1693, fifteen or sixteen towns, eighteen estates, with men and cattle, besides villages, and 93,000 souls, were destroyed.

ÆFA'IR, ad. at a distance. Figuratively, foreign or strange. Distant, in opposition to intimate friendship.

ÆFER, f. the South West wind.

ÆFFABILITY, f. [affabilitas, Lat.] a quality which renders a person easy to be spoken to; including modesty, good-nature, and condescension; generally applied to superiors.

ÆFFABLE, verbal a. [affabilis, Lat.] easily to be spoken to, on account of complaisance, good-nature, and condescension.

ÆFFABLENESS, f. courteousness; civil and complaisant behaviour. See ÆFFABILITY.

AFFABLY, ad. in an affable, courteous, and complaisant manner.

AFFAIR, f. [affaire, Fr.] something done, or to be done. Employment. The concerns and transactions of a nation. Circumstances or the condition of a person. Business.

To AFFECT, v. a. [afficio, Lat.] to produce an effect, to cause, used with the particle with. To act upon. To influence. To excite, stir up, or work upon the passions. To aim at, to endeavour after, applied to persons. To have a tendency; to assume; to tend to. To be fond of, or long for. To assume a character not real, or natural: and to support it in an awkward manner.

AFFECTATION, f. [affectatio, Lat.] an artful, or hypocritical assuming of a character, or appearance, which is not our own, and to which we have no claim.

AFFECTED, part. having the affections excited. To be peculiarly fond of. Disposed, with the word ill. Personated, or appearing unnatural.

AFFECTEDLY, ad. in a manner which has more of appearance than reality.

AFFECTEDNESS, f. the quality of assuming an unnatural or false appearance. Distinguished from hypocrisy by its object, that being religion, and this politeness, grandeur, learning, &c.

AFFECTION, f. [affectio, Lat.] state of being affected, or wrought upon by any cause. Passions in general. Love, fondness, regard, or good-will. Zeal; a desire of obtaining. In Logic, an attribute peculiar to some subject, and arising from the very idea or essence of it; styled by the schoolmen, proprium quarto modo. Affections of the body, in Physics, are certain modifications occasioned by motion. In Medicine, it implies a morbid, or preternatural state of the body, or some of its parts.

AFFECTIONATE, a. [affectioné, Fr.] zealous, or a strong and longing desire; warm. Strongly inclined, or disposed to. Fond, tender, with all the glowings of paternal love.

AFFECTIONATELY, ad. in an affectionate, fond, endearing, and benevolent manner.

AFFECTIONATENESS, f. the quality or state of exercising the social, benevolent, kind, and endearing passions.

AFFECTIONED, a. full of affection, conceited, affected; mentally disposed.

AFFECTIVE, a. that which acts upon, or excites a disagreeable or painful sensation.

AFFERORS, or AFFEE'RORS, f. in Law, persons appointed to tax, assess, and confirm such fines as are set in inferior courts; in court leets, to settle the fines of those that are guilty of faults, which have no express penalty assigned by the statute; in courts baron, to moderate amerciaments.

AFFIANCE, f. [affiance, Fr.] to confirm one's own by plighting of faith; betrothing. Figuratively, trust or confidence, the effect of the mutual vows persons make each other; a firm trust, and unshaken reliance,

To AFFIANCE, v. a. [affiancer, Fr.] to bind one's self to marry. Figuratively, To give confidence.

AFFIDAVIT, f. [Lat.] an oath in writing, sworn before an authorized person; which contains the time, residence, and addition of the person who makes it.

AFFI'ED, part. [affé, Fr.] joined by contract: affianced; betrothed.

AFFILIATION, f. [affiliatio, Lat.] adoption, or the making a son.

AFFI'NED, part. [from affinis, Lat.] joined by affinity, or marriage to another; related to.

AFFINITY, f. [affinitas, Lat.] relation by marriage, in opposition to that which is by blood. Connexion; resemblance, applied to things.

To AFFI'RM, v. a. [affirmo, Lat.] to confirm a thing as truth; to declare; to assert; to tell confidently. It is synonymous with the following words: To declare signifies to tell any thing simply, but seriously. To præst implies a solemn affirmation; to aver signifies a positive declaration: to assert, that declaration defended. To maintain, implies a support of such assertion. To swear, is to ratify it by an oath.

AFFI'RMABLE, a. that which may be affirmed, or asserted.

AFFI'RMANCE, f. [in Law] confirmation; opposed to repeal.

AFFI'RMANT, f. [affirmans, Lat.] the person who affirms, or makes a positive declaration.

AFFI'RMATION, f. [affirmatio, Lat.] the act of strengthening or supporting any opinion; confirmation. Assertion; or tenaciousness of any thing or position asserted. Confirmation, in opposition to repeal. In Grammar, what is otherwise called a verb, because it expresses what we affirm or assert of any subject. In a legal sense, the method allowed by law to the Quakers as a pledge of their truth in judicial courts, instead of an oath. If they make a false affirmation, they are subject to the penalties of the law; but this is only with regard to oaths of allegiance, and on public occasions; for in criminal cases their affirmation is not taken in evidence.

AFFI'RMATIVE, a. that which positively affirms or asserts a thing. Applied to persons, positive; obstinate in opinion; dogmatical; or one that would affirm any thing. Affirmative, in Algebra, applied to quantities, are those which express a real magnitude, in opposition to those which are negative, or less than nothing. Affirmative sign, in Algebra, is that which shews that the quantity it is prefixed to, is affirmative, and is marked thus +.

AFFI'RMATIVELY, ad. in an affirmative or positive manner, in opposition to negative.

AFFI'RMER, f. that person who asserts a thing to be true; he that affirms; he who takes the affirmative side of a question in a dispute.

To AFFIX, v. a. [affigo, Lat.] to be fixed or united to. To connect with, to subjoin, to establish.

AFFIX, f. [affixum, Lat.] in Grammar, some letter or sentence joined to a word.

AFFIXION, f. the art of affixing, or state of a noun that has an affix.

AFFLATUS, f. [Lat.] divine inspiration. In Physic, a vapour, or blast, which is prejudicial to the health.

To AFFLICT, v. a. [affligo, Lat.] to use such barbarity as may occasion a deep sorrow. To mortify, or practise all the duties of sincere repentance. To punish. To be in adversity, or involved in temporal unhappiness.

AFFLICTION, f. [afflictio, Lat.] that which causes a sensation of pain; a very disagreeable circumstance; calamity.

AFFLICTIVE, a. that which occasions torment, misery, or a sensation of pain on account of its disagreeableness; that which conveys sorrow.

AFFLUENCE, f. [affluentia, Lat.] in its primary sense, the flowing to any place; resort, or concourse. It is almost always used figuratively. Abundance of wealth; plenty.

AFFLUENT, part. [affluens, Lat.] in its primary sense, flowing to any part. In its secondary, abundant in wealth; plentiful; exuberant; wealthy.

AFFLUENTNESS, f. the quality of being wealthy, or abounding with all the conveniences of life.

AFFLUX, f. [affluxus, Lat.] the act of flowing, or thing which flows.

To AFFORD, v. a. [afforrorer, Fr.] to yield or produce. To supply, cause, or grant. To be able to sell, without losing.

To AFFOREST, v. a. to turn ground into a forest.

AFFRAID, part. [from affrayer, Fr.] to be timorous; to be affected with fear, either by a present object which may endanger our safety, or by the prospect of a distant, or future evil. It is generally spelt with a single f; but this is more consistent with analogy.

To AFFRANCHISE, v. a. [affranchir, Fr.] to make free.

To AFFRAY, v. a. [affrayer, Fr.] to strike with terror or fear; to fright.

AFFRAY, or AFFRAYMENT, f. in Law, formerly an affright caused to one or more, by persons appearing in unusual armour. At present, a skirmish or fighting, wherein some blow is given, or some weapon drawn. It differs from an assault, as this is a public, but that a personal wrong.

AFFRICTION, f. [affritio, Lat.] the act of rubbing two bodies together, or one thing on another. Friktion is the word now in use.

To AFFRIGHT, v. a. [from a and fribere, Sax.] to affect with fear, including in it the idea of something dangerous and mischievous, something that can deprive us of pleasure, or affect us with pain; and that the impression of this passion is sudden. To intimidate, and dishearten.

AFFRIGHT, f. terror, fear, denoting a sudden impression, in opposition to fear, which implies a long continuance.

AFFRIGHTFUL, a. abounding in such qualities as may cause fear.

To AFFRONT, v. a. [affronter, Fr.] In its primary signification, to meet face to face, to confront. Figuratively, to injure a person before his face, including in it the secondary ideas of contempt, disdain, and entire neglect of decorum.

AFFRONT, f. an insult, or injury offered to the face; including the ideas of contempt and rudeness. Indecent behaviour, outrage.

AFFRONTER, f. the person who offers the affront.

AFFRONTING, or AFFRONTIVE, part. a. that which occasions or causes an affront.

AFFUSION, f. [affusio, Lat.] the act of pouring one thing upon another.

AFIELD, ad. to the field.

AFLOAT, ad. [from flotter, Fr.] borne up by the water; floating. Figuratively, fluctuating.

AFOOT, ad. walking, in opposition to riding. Figuratively, in agitation: commenced.

AFORE, prep. See BEFORE.

AFORE, ad. applied to time, that which is past; antecedent to a thing mentioned.

AFOREGOING, part. that which precedes any thing in order or motion.

AFORE-NAMED, part. that which has been mentioned in a former part of a work.

AFORE-SAID, part. that which has been said or mentioned prior to the time and place in which it is referred to.

AFORETIME, ad. in times past, or those which have preceded that in which they are referred to.

AFRESH, ad. a-new; again; a second time.

AFRICA, f. one of the four principal parts of the world; bounded on the N. by the Mediterranean sea; on the W. and S. by the Ocean; on the E. by the Red Sea and the Isthmus of Suez. It is in the form of a pyramid, whose base, from Tangier to the Isthmus of Suez, is about 2000 miles. From the top of the pyramid, that is to say, from the Cape of Good-Hope to the most northern part, is 4600 miles; and in the broadest part, that is, from Cape Verd to Cape Guardafui, it is 3500. The greatest part of it is within the Torrid Zone, which renders the heat almost insupportable in many places. However, the coasts in general are very fruitful, the fruits excellent, and the plants extraordinary. The flesh of the animals is in general very good; and there are more wild beasts than in any other part of the world; such as lions, tigers, leopards, panthers, rhinoceroses, and elephants. There are also some animals peculiar to this country; such as the hippopotamus, or the sea-horse, whose teeth are are so large that they serve instead of ivory, and are much better; the rhinoceros, with two horns on its nose; and the most beautiful striped Zebra, which is esteemed a fine present for the greatest princes. As for the crocodiles, which were thought formerly to be peculiar to Africa, they are now met with in other places, or at least, creatures so much like them, that it is hard to know the difference. Besides these, they have ostriches, camels, various sorts of monkeys, and many other animals not to be met with in Europe. There are several deserts, particularly one of a large extent, which is almost without water; and whose sands are so loose, that, by means of a strong wind, they will sometimes bury whole caravans at a time. However, this is not quite without inhabitants, for there are wild Arabs, and other people, who rove from place to place, partly in search of pasture, and partly to lie in wait for the rich caravans that travel from Barbary and Egypt to Negro-land and Abyssinia. There are many large rivers; but the principal are the Nile and the Niger. There are very high mountains in divers parts, particularly in Abyssinia and Barbary; in which last country is Mount Atlas, that separates Barbary from Beledulgerid, and runs from E. to W. Their religion is Mahometanism and Paganism, though there are Christians in some parts, as in Abyssinia, and among the European settlements. Africa is variously divided, according to different geographers: however, the best distinguish them by the names of Egypt, Barbary, Guinea, Congo, Caffreria, Abyssinia, Nubia, and Nigritia, with the islands that surround it. Africa, in painting, is represented by a black woman, almost naked, with frizzled hair, and an elephant's trunk for a crest, a fierce lion on one side, and a viper and serpent on the other; with other emblems of the produce of the country.

A'FTER, prep. [afier, Sax.] is applied both to time and place. Applied to time, it denotes that something had been done before. Joined with verbs, it has a reference to time, with succeeding or following. Applied to place, behind, or following. Concerning. According to; agreeable to, in imitation of.

A'FTER, ad. [it is distinguished from the preposition, because it has a relation to that which goes before it; but not to the sentence which follows it] succeeding or following in time. Second or following in place, in opposition to before.

A'FTER-AGES, f. ages which are to come, or future.

AFTER-ALL, taking every thing into consideration; in fine; notwithstanding all that has been said; at last.

A'FTER-CLAPS, f. some unexpected incident after an affair is supposed to be ended. It is used in an ill sense, but seems a low expression.

A'FTER-COST, f. expences which are incurred after the original bargain or plan is finished.

A'FTER-CROP, f. the second crop or produce of a ground in one year.

A'FTER-GAME, f. an expedient after the original plan or first attempt has miscarried.

A'FTER-MATH, f. second crop of grass mown in autumn.

A'FTER-NOON, f. that space, or interval, which is from twelve at noon till the evening. Figuratively, in the decline.

A'FTER-PAINS, f. pains after birth.
A'FTER-THOUGHT, f. an expedient formed too late; reflection, or thought arising after the finishing of a thing: Repentance.

A'FTER-TIMES, f. [seldom used in the singular] future ages; in time to come.

A'FTERWARD, or A'FTERWARDS, ad. in succeeding or future time; referring to something which preceded, and which it is supposed to follow.

A'FTER-WIT, f. an unseasonable expedient; or a contrivance which is too late.

AGAIN, ad. [agen, Sax.] a second time, implying the repetition of the same action. On the other hand, denoting a correspondence or reciprocation of action. After ask, a return of a thing being. Return, by way of recompence; or reimbursement. After much, or words implying dimension, a repetition of the same quantity which preceded.

AGA'INST, prep. [aggeen, Sax.] used of persons in opposition, alluding to the position of two armies ready to attack each other. After speak, to be represented in a bad light. Applied to motion, contrary direction; or that in which one body meets with another. Close to, joining, or contiguous. Immediately preceding; previous to, or near.

A'GAPE, f. [ἀγαπή, Gr.] love-feasts, exercised by the primitive Christians.

AGA'PE, ad. a stupid kind of admiration; wondering, as expressed by the ignorant, with open mouths.

A'GARICK, f. [agaricum, Lat.] in Botany an excrescence growing in the shape of a mushroom upon the trunk and great branches of the oak and other trees, but the larch-tree especially. Mineral Agarick, is a kind of stone found in the clefts of rocks in Germany.

A'GATE, f. [ἀγαθή, Gr.] a precious stone of the flint kind, much harder than jasper, and receives a better polish. Its colours are various, and in some of them represent such figures as are very surprising.

AGA'ZED, part. struck with a sudden terror: terrified to stupidity.

AGE, f. the time of man's life; a succession or generation of men; a century, or the space of an hundred years.

AGES OF THE WORLD, f. The time preceding the birth of Christ has generally been divided into six ages: the first comprehends the time from the beginning of the world to the deluge, and consists of 1656 years: the second, from the deluge to the time of Abraham's coming into the land of promise in 2082, comprehends 426 years: the third age age of the world, from Abraham's entrance into the promised land to the deliverance of the Hebrews out of Egypt, in the year of the world 2523, includes 430 years: the fourth age, from their going out of Egypt to the laying the foundation of the temple, in the year of the world 2992, comprehends 479 years: the fifth age of the world, from laying the foundation of Solomon's temple to the Babylonish captivity, in the year of the world 3216, contains 424 years; the sixth age of the world comprises the time from the Babylonish captivity to the birth of Jesus Christ, which happened in the year of the world 4000, and 284 years before the vulgar Æra, including 584 years. Another division of the ages of the world is, the age of the law of nature, which comprehends the whole time between Adam and Moses; the age of the Jewish law, which takes in all the time from Moses to Christ; and lastly, the age of grace, or the number of years elapsed since the birth of Christ. Ancient historians have likewise divided the duration of the world into certain periods, called Ages: the first, reaching from the creation to the deluge which happened in Greece, during the reign of Ogyges, is called the obscure or uncertain Age; the history of mankind, during that period, being very uncertain: the second, called the fabulous or heroic Age, terminates at the first olympiad; where the third, or historical Age commences. The poets have likewise made four divisions of the ages of the world, namely, the golden Age, the silver, the brazen, and the iron Age. There are also four degrees, or periods in human life, namely, infancy, youth, manhood, and old Age; the first extends to the 14th year, the second to the 25th year, the third to the 40th, and the fourth to the 75th year; or, rather, as long as a man lives. In Law, a man at twelve years of age ought to take the oath of allegiance to the king in a leet; at fourteen, which is his age of discretion, he may marry, choose his guardian, and claim his lands held in socage. His full age is twenty-one, in man or woman. A woman is dowable at nine years of age, may marry at twelve, and at fourteen choose her guardian. At fourteen, a man may dispose of his personal estate by will, but not of lands; and at this age a man or woman is capable of being a witness.

AGE OF THE MOON, f. the space of time, or interval, since her last conjunction with the sun.

AGED, a. that which has lived a long course or series of years, generally applied to animals. Figuratively, that which, has stood for many years; decayed by length of time, applied to inanimate things.

AGEDLY, ad. after the manner of a person advanced in years, or in the decline of life.

AGEN, ad. [agen, Sax.] a repetition of the same deed; something by way of reply to what had been said. This is the true spelling, though now used only by poets for the sake of rhyme. See AGAIN.

A'GENCY, f. the quality of acting; action; the state of being in, or exerting action.

A'GENT, part. that which acts, or is active, in opposition to patient, or passive.

A'GENT, f. a being endued with the power of action. In Physics, that which is endued with power to act on another, and to produce a change or alteration by such action. The schools divide agents into natural or free. Natural, are those which are determined by the great Author of nature to one sort of effect, with an incapacity to perform any other, as fire to heat only, not to cool. A free agent is that which may do or not do any action, and has the conscious perception that his actions are caused by his own will, without any external necessity or determination whatever. In Commerce, an agent is a person entrusted with transacting business for another at a distance, or the negotiation of the affairs of a state or corporation. Agent and Patient, in Law, is a person who does or gives something to himself, being both the doer of a thing and the party to whom it is done. Thus a creditor being left executor, he may retain so much of the estate of the deceased as will pay his debt, and by that means become both agent and patient, i. e. the party to whom the debt is due, and the person who pays it.

To AGGLOMERATE, v. a. [agglomeratio, Lat.] to gather up in a ball; to gather together.

AGGLUTINANTS, f. [from agglutino, Lat.] in its primary signification, those substances which have a quality of glewing, or sticking any bodies together. In Physic, strengthening medicines, which adhering to the solids in the human body, recruit and supply what is wasted in the animal action.

To AGGLUTINATE, v. a. to unite one part to another, as it were with glue; to make one part stick to another. Used with the particle to.

AGGLUTINATION, f. in its primary signification, to join two bodies fast together.

AGGLUTINATIVE, a. in Medicine, that which has the power of thickening the animal juices, so as to render them fit for nourishing.

To AGGRANDIZE, v. a. [aggrandisere, Fr.] to exalt, prefer, or make considerable by the addition of pots and pensions. To enlarge, exalt, or ennoble, applied to the faculties and sentiments of the mind.

AGGRANDIZEMENT, f. the act of promoting to a high place in a state; or the act of conferring power, honour, and wealth on a person.

AGGRANDIZER, f. the person who confers honour and riches on another.

To AGGRAVATE, v. a. to increase the weight of a thing; in its primary sense. In its secondary or figurative sense, to add to the enormity, applied to crimes.

AGGRAVATION, f. the act of making worse, worse, applied to the demerit of actions. Some circumstance which heightens the guilt of any crime, &c.

AGGREGATE, a. an assemblage or collection of the particles into one mass.

AGGREGATE, f. [from aggrego, Lat.] an assemblage formed of several particulars. The sum total or result of several things added together.

To AGGREGATE, v. a. [aggrego, Lat.] to collect together several particulars into one sum, or several parcels or particles into one mass.

AGGREGATION, f. a whole made up of several parts added together. In Arithmetic, the sum total, formed by the addition of several units together. In Physics, an assemblage of several things which have no natural connection with each other.

To AGGRESS, v. a. [aggredior, Lat.] to commit the first act of hostility; to make the first attack; to occasion or begin a quarrel.

AGGRESSION, f. [aggressio, Lat.] the act of beginning a quarrel, or being guilty of the first attack.

AGGRESSOR, f. the person who commits the first act of hostility or injury.

AGGRIEVANCE, f. an action which causes pain or uneasiness in the person to whom it is done, and includes in it the secondary idea of injury, or something undeserved.

To AGGRIEVE, v. a. to do or say something which shall make a person uneasy. To offer an injury, which shall occasion vexation.

AGHA'ST, a. [from a and ghast, Sax.] all the signs of a person terrified by an apparition, like one who had seen a ghost.

AGILE, a. [agilis, Lat.] active; acting with great speed and readiness; nimble. Applied to the mind, alert, vigorous, in opposition to slow and stupid.

AGILENESS, f. the quality of performing without pain or any other impediment.

AGILITY, f. [agilitas, Lat.] a capacity of moving without pain or any other impediment.

AGIO, f. [Venet. aid or assistance] in Commerce, the exchange or difference between bank and current money, or cash. Thus if a bargain be made to pay either 100 livres bank or 105 cash, the agio is said to be 5 per cent. The agio varies almost every where; at Amsterdam it is usually from 3 to 5 per cent. at Rome near 25 per 100; at Venice 10 per cent. fixed; and at Genoa from 15 to 16. It likewise signifies the profit which arises from money advanced, and is the same as premium.

AGISTMENT, f. in Common Law, the feed of other people's cattle, taken into any ground, at a certain rate per week. In a large sense, it extends to all manner of common or herbage, or the profits arising from thence.

AGITABLE, a. [agitabilis, Lat.] that which may be put in motion.

To AGITATE, v. a. [agito, Lat.] to move by repeated actions. To actuate, act upon, or give motion to. To disturb, or disorder by the distractions of different motives.

To toss from one to another, to discuss or controvert with great warmth.

AGITATION, f. [agitatio, Lat.] the act of shaking or putting the particles of a body into motion. Disorder of the mind, arising from the violence of different passions. Consideration, or deliberation of several persons.

AGITATOR, f. the person who projects any scheme, occasions any disturbance, or causes any motion. He who manages and conducts the affairs of another.

AGLET, f. a tag of a point carved into some representation of an animal. The pendants at the ends of the chives of flowers, AGNAIL, f. [Sax.] a whitlow.

AGNATI, f. [Lat.] in the Roman law, the male descendants from the same father, distinguished from cognati, which includes the female descendants.

AGNATION, f. in the Civil Law, the relation between the descendants from the same father, including only males.

AGNITION, f. [agnitio, Lat.] an acknowledging.

To AGNI'ZE, v. a. [from agnosco, Lat.] to own; to avow; to acknowledge.

AGNOETÆ, f. [from aynois, Gr.] in Church History, a set of heretics, who held that Christ, with respect to his human nature, was ignorant of some things, and especially the day of judgment.

AGNOMEN, f. [Lat.] an addition or name added to the surname of a person on account of some peculiar action or circumstance; as the addition of Africanus to the name of Scipio, on account of his exploits in Africa; and of Cicero to that of Tully, on account of a protuberance on his nose, like a vetch, which Cicero signifies.

AGNOMINATION, f. [agnominatio, Lat.] the resemblance or allusion of one word to another both in sound and sense.

AGNUS DEI, f. [Lat. the Lamb of God] in the Roman church, a flat piece of white wax of an oval form, stamped with the figure of the lamb, and consecrated by the pope.

AGO, ad. [from agan, Sax. past; whence some counties still pronounce it agone] past. When we reckon past time, towards, or ending with the present, we use since; as, "It is a year since it happened." But when we reckon from the present, and end with the past, we use ago; as, "It happened three nights ago." This is a nicety which foreigners ought peculiarly to attend to.

AGO'G, ad. [agogo, Fr.] eager for the possession of something; longing. To set one's fancy or affections on.

AGONE, ad. [agan, Sax.] past, with respect to time; formerly.

AGONISTES, s. [ayonicus, Gr.] one who used to exhibit at the public games of Greece and Rome, being a candidate for the prizes awarded for superiority of strength, &c.

To AGONI'ZE, v. n. [ayonizo, Gr.] to be affected with acute and excessive pain.

AGONY, f. [from ayon, Gr.] excessive pain, pain, wherein all the powers of Nature are convulsed, and the struggles, as it were, with Death for the mastery.

AGONYCLITES, f. [from a neg. yoos, and clites, Gr.] a sect in the seventeenth century, who derived their name from their distinguishing principle, never to kneel, but to say their prayers standing.

AGRA, f. [Pers.] the principal kingdom of the empire of the Mogul. It has Bando on the W. Dely on the North, Sambal on the E. Guacar and part of Narvar on the S. Its num of forces to the Mozul's army, is 15,000 horse, and 30,000 foot; and its revenue is computed at near three millions sterling. Agra, its capital, founded in 1566, by Elebar, or Elebarah, is a place of great traffic, having merchants from China, Persia, all parts of India, and from England and Holland. Its indigo is reckoned the very best in the world, besides which, they export a great many silks and linens, tissues, lace, rice, and cotton. The number of its modians, or public bazars, covered bazars, or quarters for merchants, some of which are a quarter of a league long, together with its caravanierahs, which are about eighty, are sufficient to convince us both of the prodigious extent, and of the immense trade which is carried on in this city. Lat. 26 deg. 29 min. N. Long. 79 deg. 12 min. E.

AGRIARIAN, a. [agrarius, Lat.] in the Roman Law, a term applied to such laws as relate to the division and distribution of lands.

To AGREE v. a. to be friends, or in concord, i. e. a state wherein the sentiments of one person are similar to, or the same as those of another. To consent to do a thing upon certain conditions; to bargain. To resemble: to be like. To match, applied to colour. To tally with; to be consistent with.

AGREEABLE, a. [agreeable, Fr.] suitable; conformable to, or consistent with. Pleasing; grateful; as suitable to our inclinations or faculties.

AGREEABLENESS, f. the quality which renders a thing grateful to the taste. The quality which renders a thing pleasing, below rapture, and less than admiration. Likeness; affinity; resemblance.

AGREEABLY, ad. in a manner consistent with, or conformable to. In a manner which affords a pleasing satisfaction.

AGREE'D, part. settled by mutual consent.

AGREEMENT, f. [in Law Latin agreementum,] friendship; alliance, concord. A contract, bargain, or compact. Resemblance.

AGRICULTURE, f. [agricultura, Lat.] the art of tilling and manuring the ground, so as to make it fruitful and bear plants; consisting in manuring, fallowing, sowing, harrowing, reaping, mowing, &c. the management of the productions of different soils, and planting; together with the culture of forests, timber, &c. The highest encomium that could be given a man in Rome, was, that he cultivated his own spot of ground well; the most illustrious senators applied themselves to it, and their Dictators were taken from the plough. Agriculture, or husbandry, is the original source of most of our treasures, and the great fountain of all materials for commerce.

AGROUND, ad. a marine term, stranded; stuck fast upon shore, so as not to be got off, and pursue a voyage; hindered by the ground from passing further. Figuratively, meeting with some impediment or obstacle, which renders it impossible to advance in, or go on with, an affair.

AGUE, f. [aigu, Fr.] a periodical species of fever, beginning with a cold shivering, which is succeeded by heat, and terminates in a sweat. When the cold fit is scarcely perceptible, and there is a return of the hot one only, it is called an intermitting fever. According to the returns of the fit, it is differently denominated. If it returns every day, it is then called a quotidian; if every third day, a tertian; and if every fourth day, a quartan.

AGUED, part. struck, or affected with an ague. Figuratively, cold, shivering, trembling, in allusion to the effects of this disorder.

AGUE-PIT, f. the cold, shivering, trembling fit, which affects people in the ague.

AGUISH, [pron agueish] a. like, or having the properties of an ague.

AGUISHNESS, [pron agueishness] f. the quality which resembles an ague.

AH! interj. a word made use of to denote some sudden dislike, and occasioned by the apprehension of evil consequences.

AHA, an interjection denoting the triumph of contempt; intended to express joy at the calamities of others, and to increase the uneasiness which they themselves experience.

AHEAD, ad. a sea term; beyond; implying a greater degree of swiftness. Applied to persons, to contract an inveterate habit, which is not to be easily surmounted by advice or instruction.

AHEIGHT, ad. on high; a great distance above us.

To AID, v. a. [aider, Fr.] to give assistance or succour to; to deliver a person in danger, or distress, out of it, by giving him all the assistance, help, or succour in one's power. To support, when applied to the means used to free a person from want.

AID, f. [aide, Fr.] that which contributes to render a thing more easy. Assistance. Support given to a person. In Politics, a subsidy, or money given to support the necessities of the state.

AID-DE-CAMP, f. in the army, an officer who receives and carries the orders of a general officer to the rest of the army.

AIDER, f. one who assists, or helps; one who takes part with a person, and endeavours to promote his undertaking.

AIDLESS, ad. deprived, or in want of help or assistance to render an undertaking successful, or a misfortune supportable. Without aid, or assistance from another.

To AIL, v. a. [eglan, Sax.] to disturb; to affect with a disagreeable sensation.

AIL,

AIR, f. a distemper.

AIR'LING, part. one of a weak constitution, subject to disorders; valetudinary.

AIR'LEMENT, f. indisposition; disorder; diminution of health.

To AIR, v. a. to put a weapon in such a direction or position as to hit any object; to throw a thing at an object, in such a manner, as to render the striking of it possible. To endeavour to strike. Figuratively, to direct the edge of satire against a particular person.

AIR, f. the position or direction of a weapon, in order to strike an object. The point which is intended to be hit; or the object designed to be struck. Figuratively, an endeavour to obtain any thing; intention; purpose; or design.

AIR, f. [ἀήρ, Gr.] in Philosophy, a thin elastic fluid, surrounding the globe of the earth; imperceptible to all our senses, except feeling. Mr. Boyle supposes it to be made up of three different kinds of corpuscles, namely, 1. Of those numberless and minute particles, which, in the form of vapours, or dry exhalations, ascend from the earth, water, minerals, vegetables, animals, &c. in short, of whatever substances are elevated by the celestial or subterraneous heat, and thence diffused into the atmosphere. 2. Of a still more subtle matter, consisting of those exceedingly minute atoms, the magnetical effluvia of the earth, with other innumerable particles sent from the bodies of the celestial luminaries, and causing, by their impulse, the idea of light in us. 3. Of an elastic substance, which is the basis of all the other parts, and constituting the true essence of air, concerning the structure of which various hypotheses have been framed. Some have resembled these elastic particles to the springs of watches coiled up, and endeavouring to restore themselves; others to flocks of wool, which being compressed, have an elastic force; and others to slender wires, of different substances, consistencies, &c. yet all springy, expansible, and compressible. In Music, it is the melody of the tune, light or grave. In Poetry, a song, catch, &c. In Painting, it denotes the manner and very life of action, and expresses the indisposition of the agent. Also the mien or manner of a person; a clownish or genteel air. In a figurative sense, a discovery made of a thing not known before. Posture, attitude, mien, manner of behaviour. "He gave himself airs." An affected, or laboured, and awkward manner of address or behaviour.

To AIR, v. a. to expose to the air. To enjoy the benefit from the air. To expose to the fire, in order to free from the inconveniences of damp and stagnating air.

AIR-BLADDER, f. a bladder found among the entrails of fish, which serves, by its contraction or dilatation, to enable them to rise, or dive in the water.

AIR-BUILT, a. built in the air; chimerical; without any solid foundation.

AIR-DRAWN, a. chimerical; imaginary.

AIR-GUN, f. an instrument invented to shoot with, purely by means of compressed air.

AIR-HOLE, f. a hole made to admit, or let out, the air; a vent, or vent-hole.

AIR'INESS, f. applied to situation, exposed to a free current of air, in opposition to confined; openness. Figuratively, applied to a person's manner, or behaviour; levity, gaiety.

AIR'ING, f. a short walk or ride abroad; so called, because we then enjoy the fresh and open air.

AIR'LING, f. a youthful, light, gay, and thoughtless person.

AIR-PUMP, f. in Philosophy, an instrument or machine used for extracting air, consisting of a receiver made of glass, wherein the objects are placed; two brass cylinders or pistons to extract the air with; a gage to determine the rarefaction of the air during any experiment; a tube called the Swan's Neck, communicating with the receiver and the pistons; and a winch that gives motion to the whole.

AIR-SHAFT, f. in Mining, a passage made for the air by digging.

AIRY, a. the subtle parts of bodies. On high, or in that space of the system above the earth, assigned to the air. Figuratively, chimerical, wanting solidity or foundation. Applied to dress, that which exposes to the weather, in opposition to warm, close, or confined. Applied to temper or behaviour, gay, sprightly, full of vivacity.

AISLE, f. [pronounced ile] the side-walks or paths of a church, running parallel to the greater in the center, called navis; representing, in that respect, the wing of a building erected on each side the center.

AIT, f. a small island in a river.

To AKE, v. n. to feel a dull and continual pain, in opposition to smart, which is an acute one, and of a short continuance.

AKIN, a. related by blood or descent, Figuratively, resembling; having the same properties; having a near relation to.

A'LABASTER, f. a kind of soft marble, being elegant stones of great brightness, but brittle, and not giving fire with steel; they ferment with acids, and readily calcine in the fire. Dr. Hill enumerates three species of alabaster. 1. A white kind, called Lygdinum marmor by the ancients. 2. A yellowish-white kind, called by the ancients Phengites. 3. A yellow and reddish kind, called simply alabaster by the ancients, which being a very beautiful stone, is sometimes called onyx, and onychites by the ancients.

A'LABASTER, a. something made of alabaster.

ALA'CK, interj. an expression of sorrow, or something which causes it.

ALA'CK-A-DAY, interj. a sudden cry on feeling present, or seeing approaching calamity; and signifies that the person labours under the burthen of misery.

ALA'CRIOUSLY, ad. [from alacer, Lat.] with with great cheerfulness.

ALACRITY, f. [alacritas, Lat.] cheerful activity.

ALA-MODE, ad. [according to the fashion] a French phrase, used to imply that a thing is the reigning taste or fashion.

ALA-MODE, f. [Fr.] a thin, light, glossy, black silk.

ALARM, f. [from d'alarm, Fr.] a military signal, either by beat of drum or sound of trumpet, by which men are now called to arms, but before the invention of those instruments it was done by a loud cry or shout. It generally includes in it an idea of approaching or sudden danger. Figuratively, the notice signifying the approach of any sudden danger. Tremor, or disturbance, causing fear, or apprehension of danger.

To ALARM, v. a. to give an army the signal of fighting, or preparing themselves to encounter any sudden danger. In a secondary sense, to cause fear or apprehension of some approaching mischief.

ALARMING, part. that which occasions terror, fear, or apprehension, from the idea of approaching danger.

ALARM-POST, f. the place appointed for the several companies of an army to repair to, in case of any sudden and unforeseen danger, which occasions an alarm to be beat or sounded.

ALARUM, f. a clock, calculated to give notice to a person of any particular time it is set to, by the running down of its weight, which is extended in its descent by a continual striking of its hammer on the bell.

ALAS! interj. when used of ourselves, it implies lamentation, occasioned by the idea of some calamity. When applied to others, it implies pity, caused from an idea of their distress.

ALATE, ad. lately.

ALAY, f. [in Hunting] the adding fresh dogs into the cry.

ALB, f. [albus, Lat.] a vest or garment of white linen, reaching down to the feet, worn by priests; a surplice.

St. ALBANS, a town in Hertfordshire, with the title of a duchy, and two markets, on the Wednesdays and Saturdays. It is seated on the river Coln, arose from the ruins of the ancient city Verulam, and receives its name from a monastery dedicated to St. Alban, a Roman martyr. The monastery is now used as a parish church, and in it were buried several persons of royal blood, particularly the famous duke Humphrey, whose body was discovered not many years since. It is 12 miles S. E. of Dunstable, and 21½ N. W. of London. It sends two members to parliament.

ALBERT, ad. although; notwithstanding; granting.

ALBION, f. the ancient name of England.

ALBRIGHTON, a village in Shropshire, on the edge of Staffordshire. Distant from London 131 miles.

ALBU'NEOUS, a. [from albugo, Lat.]

something belonging to that part of an egg which is called its white; or something which resembles it.

ALCAHEST, f. See ALKAHEST.

ALCAID, f. the government of a castle. In Spain, the judge of a city.

ALCALI, or ALCALY. See ALKALY. ALCALIZATION, f. See ALKALIZATION.

ALCA'NNA, f. [Arab.] a drug used in Dying, which comes from the Levant. In powder it is green, but the tincture it makes differs according to the difference of the liquor in which it is steeped; when soaked in water, it is yellow; but when in vinegar, citron-juice, or allum-water, it is red.

ALCHYMICAL, a. according to the processes or method made use of by alchemists.

ALCHYMI'IST, f. one who professes or pursues the science of alchemy.

A'LCHYMY, f. [from al, Arab. and χημια, Gr.] the more sublime chemistry, which proposes the transmutation of metals. The principal objects of alchymy are these, 1. The making of gold. 2. An universal dissolvent, or alkahest. 3. An universal medicine, or panacea. As to the making of gold, it has been attempted three several ways; by separation, maturation, and transmutation; which last they pretend to effect by the philosopher's stone. Alchymy is likewise a mixed metal, used in making some sort of spoons.

A'LCOHOL, f. [Arab.] in Chemistry, the purest spirit of wine, rectified by frequent distillations, to its utmost subtilty. Likewise, a very fine impalpable powder.

ALCOHOLIZATION, f. the act of rectifying spirits; or of reducing bodies to an impalpable powder.

To ALCOHOLIZE, v. a. to make an alcohol; or to rectify spirits by frequent distillations, so that, when set on fire, they shall consume away, without leaving any moisture or dregs behind them.

ALCONBURY, a town in Huntingdonshire; distant from London 66 miles.

A'LCORAN, f. [Arab. to collect or read] the book of the Mahomedan law, composed by Mahomet, with the assistance of Baturas, a Jacobin, Sergius, a Nestorian monk, and some Jews: it is divided into four parts, called by the name of some animal, as the cow, the emmet, the spider, and the fly. Though written by a person of no learning, it is by the Mahomedans extolled for the elegance of its style, and, on that account, urged to have been a divine composition. It abounds not only in absurdities but contradictions, which last they vindicate, by saying, that it was three and twenty years in composing; and that the circumstances of things altering in that interval, the Deity himself repeated and altered several precepts, to suit them with the nature of things. It was originally in loose sheets, which Mahomet reported he received singly from God. This book is held in such veneration by its professors, that it is death for a Christian or a Jew to to touch it: and equally fatal to a Muffulman himself, if he handles it with unwashed hands.

ALCOVE, f. among Builders, a recess, or part of a chamber, separated by an estrade, or partition of columns and other ornaments, in which is placed a bed of state, or seats for the repose of company. Also, small open summer-houses or seats in gardens, with a circular dome or covering.

ALDBOROUGH, [pron. Aldbora] a seaport town in Suffolk, with a market on Saturdays. It is pleasantly seated in a dale, between a high hill to the westward and the sea to the east; a river runs on the S. W. and the old church stands on a hill. It is 93½ miles from London. It sends two members to parliament, and is governed by a bailiff, 12 aldermen, and 24 common-council. The harbour is tolerably good, but small; and there is here a fort of nine guns. The town was formerly much longer; but the sea has taken away whole streets.

ALDBOROUGH, a town in the west-riding of Yorkshire; it stands on the river Ouse, had formerly a market, and still sends two members to parliament. It is 205 miles from London.

ALDER, f. a genus of English trees. The wood is much used for making household furniture, &c.

ALDERLIE'VEST, a. superl. [from ald and lievest, Sax.] most beloved.

ALDERMAN, f. [elderman, Sax.] in its original signification it implied a person, who, on account of his years and experience, was proper to preside over the affairs of a nation, and to assist a prince with his counsel; in this respect it signified the same as a privy-counsellor, or parliament-man. But this will appear more plain, if we recollect, that the three states of the kingdom were divided into Abeling, which included the nobility; Alderman, the second rank; and Tbane, the last: till Athelstan's time, the term was used for an earl or count, which after his reign were substituted instead of it. In the time of Edgar it implied a judge or justice. But the term is now appropriated to the twenty-six persons who preside over the twenty-six wards into which the city of London is divided; out of which the lord-mayor is generally chosen by rotation. They are all qualified to act as justices of the peace at present; though formerly, only such aldermen has had been lord-mayors, and the three eldest, or next to the chair, were invested with that honour. But they have not only the management of the civil, but likewise the military government of the city, are officers in its militia, and members of the artillery company. Aldermen preside in other cities besides London.

ALDERNEY, an island in the British Channel, separated from the coast of Normandy by a strait called the Race of Alderney, which is a very dangerous passage, on account of the rocks under water. It is a healthful island, and fruitful in corn and pasture; but has only one church. The inhabitants live together in a town of the same name, the island being but eight miles in circumference.

A'LE, f. [eale, Sax.] a liquor, the common drink of the English; made of an infusion of malt and hops in boiling water; afterwards fermented with yeast or barm: It is distinguishable from beer in respect of its strength and age; owing to its having a less quantity of hops and malt than beer has, in proportion to the same quantity of water.

A'LE, (GILL), f. a liquor made of ground-ivy leaves, steeped in ale.

A'LE-CONNER, f. [from ale and con, of common, Sax.] an officer of the city of London, whose business it is to inspect the measures of the public-house.

A'LEHOOF, f. [from ale and hof, Sax.] in Botany, the ground-ivy; so called by the Saxons, because a chief ingredient in their malt liquors, instead of hops.

A'LE-HOUSE, f. [ealhouse, Sax.] a house where ale is sold. Distinguished from a tavern, because that is appropriated to wine. Nothing is more common than the general use of the terms alehouse and public house to express one and the same thing, but with great impropriety: though every alehouse is undoubtedly a public house, it does not follow that every public house is an alehouse.

ALEMBIC, f. thus described by Mr. Boyle: a vessel used in distilling, consisting of a vessel placed over a fire, in which is contained the substance to be distilled, and a concave closely fitted on, into which the fumes arise by the heat; this cover has a beak or spout, into which the vapours rise, and by which they pass into a serpentine pipe, which is kept cool by making many convolutions in a tub of water; here the vapours are condensed, and what entered the pipe in fumes comes out in drops.

ALENGTH, ad. at full length; along; stretched upon the ground.

ALE'PPO, or Haleb, the principal town of Syria, in Asia. It was taken by the Arabs in 1637, and is inhabited by Turks, and four sorts of Christians, who have each a bishop, a church, and the free exercise of their religion. There are 16,000 Greeks, 12,000 Armenians, and 10,000 Jacobites, besides Maronites, or Roman Catholics. The city and suburbs may contain 200,000 persons in all. Next to Constantinople and Cairo, it is the most considerable town in the Turkish empire. It stands on four hills, in the middle of a pleasant fruitful plain, being of an oval figure, and about three miles in circumference. The castle stands on the highest hill, in the middle of the city; and the houses are better than in other places in Turkey. They have a great many stately mosques and caravanseras, with fountains and reservoirs of water, and vineyards and gardens well planted with most kinds of fruits. The Christians have their houses and churches in the suburbs, and carry of a very considerable trade in silks, camblets, and Turkey leather. Several European nations have factories here; and the English live in a quadrangle resembling a college, having their chapel and chapel; and at leisure hours divert themselves with hunting and fowling. The beggary of Aleppo commands all the country between the Levant sea and the river Euphrates; but the governor of the castle is independent of him.

ALERT, a. [alorte, Fr.] watchful, active, eager; ready on any emergency: brisk, pert, sharp.

ALERTNESS, f. the quality of being alert, brightly, pert, active, or vigilant.

ALESBURY, AYLESBURY, or AILSBURY, f. the largest and best borough town in Buckinghamshire, as ancient as the times of the Saxons, who took it by force in 571. In the time of William the Conqueror it was a royal manor; and he gave several yard lands, on condition that the owner should find litter or straw, for his bed, whenever he came that way. William of Ailsbury held it by this charter, with this addition, that he should likewise straw the king's chamber, and provide him three eels if he came in the winter; but if in summer, besides straw for the bed, he was to provide two green geese. This he was to repeat three times a year, if the king came thither so often. It has given the title of earl to the noble family of the Bruces; Charles II. having conferred that title in 1664 on Robert Bruce, earl of Elgin in Scotland, descended from the kings of that country, to which their motto, finimus, "we have been," seems strongly to allude. It was made a town incorporate by Q. Mary, in 1553; consisting of a bailiff, ten aldermen, and twelve capital burgessees: at present, its chief officer is termed a constable. It has a market on Saturdays, sends two members to parliament, and is 40 measured miles N. W. of London.

ALESHAM, f. a town in Norfolk, very much peopled by knitters of stockings, and has a market on Saturdays. It lies 121 miles N. of London.

ALEXANDRINE, f. [from Alexander Paris, the inventor of this metre] a kind of metre borrowed from the French, consisting among them of twelve or thirteen syllables in alternate couplets, and among us of twelve. They were formerly pretty much used by our poets to dinch their verses, and generally were the last of three ending in the same rhyme; but are now discarded on account of their want of harmony, and their suspending the mind too much by their extraordinary length.

ALEXIPHARMICK, a. [from ἀλεξίω and φάρμακον, Gr.] in its primitive sense, something which has the virtue of expelling poisons taken internally; and is the same as an antidote. Used substantively, by modern practitioners, it means remedies adapted, or proper to expel that malignancy with which the animal spirits are affected in acute distempers, through the pores of the skin, by sweating.

ALEXITERIAL, ALEXITERICAL, or ALEXITERICK, a. [from ἀλεξίω, Gr.] that which repels poison, or the malignant humours of fevers.

A'LFORD, a town in Lincolnshire. The market is on Tuesday; it is distant 128½ miles from London.

A'LFRED the Great, son of Ethelwulf, succeeded his brother Etheldred, though that prince left several children. His virtues and distinguished bravery had been shewn in his brother's life-time, and now endeared him to his subjects. He was crowned in 871, when the Danes were in the very heart of his dominions, and all the sea-ports were filled with their fleets. After several battles, with various success, Alfred was obliged to dismiss his very attendants; and having committed his wife and children to the care of some trusty subjects, disguised himself, and lived concealed in the little island of Athelney, in Somersetshire, at length, the Danes finding that they had no enemies to oppose them, grew negligent. This incited Alfred's friends to repair to their prince, who resolving to be satisfied, boldly entered the Danish camp in the disguise of a musician, and even staid there several days; then returning to his friends, his troops were secretly assembled, and he came up with, attacked, and routed the Danes with incredible slaughter. Those who escaped fled to a castle, but were soon compelled to submit. Alfred agreed to let them depart, on condition that their leader, Guthrun, should embrace Christianity. This they readily complied with, and Alfred gave Guthrun the government of East-Anglia in Essex. Alfred now increased his navy, grew formidable at sea, and beat many of the Danish fleets. He fortified his kingdom with walled towns and castles, propagated the civil arts, encouraged polite learning, made many excellent laws, instituted juries, and established the plan of a civil constitution in England; and in his reign justice was so strictly observed, that we are told, bracelets of gold being hung in the highways over night would be found safe in the morning. He was an excellent scholar; he wrote books for the instruction of his people, and was one of the greatest, wisest, and most pious princes upon earth. After a glorious reign of twenty-eight years, he died on the 28th of October, A. D. 900.

ALFRE'TON, a town in Derbyshire, whose market is of a Monday; it is 141½ miles from London.

A'LGEBRA, f. [from al and geber, Arab. the reduction of broken numbers to whole] a branch of Arithmetic, which takes the quantity sought, as if granted; and, by means of one or more quantities given, proceeds by consequence till the quantity at first only supposed to be known, or some power of it, is found to be equal to some quantity or quantities known, and, consequently, itself known likewise.

ALGEBRA'IC,

ALGEBRA'IC, or ALGEBRATCAL, a. something relative, or belonging to algebra.

ALGEBRA'IST, f. a person conversant in the operations of algebra.

ALGIERS, a. a kingdom of Africa, bounded on the E. by the kingdom of Tunis, on the N. by the Mediterranean, on the S. by mount Atlas, and on the W. by the kingdoms of Morocco and Taffilet. It extends 600 miles from E. to W. along the Barbary coast. The air is very temperate, and the land toward the N. very fertile in corn; the valleys are full of fruit; but a great part is dry, mountainous, and barren. The Turks, who have the government in their hands, are not above 7000 in number; and yet the Moors or natives of Africa have no share in it. It is only a kind of republic under the protection of the Grand Signior, who keeps a bashaw or viceroy there; but he can do nothing of consequence without the council of the Janissaries. The dey of Algiers is an absolute monarch; but elected by the Turkish soldiers, and frequently deposed and put to death by them. Their religion is Mahometanism, and their language a dialect of the Arabic. They have likewise a jargon, composed of Italian, French, and Spanish, called Lingua Franca, that is understood by the common people and merchants. The complexion of the natives is tawny, and they are strong and well made. Algiers, the capital of this kingdom, is so very populous, that the foreign merchants amount to at least three thousand families; and the Jews to no less than eight thousand: almost the whole trade passes through their hands. It stands on the sea side over-against Minorca, 300 miles W. of Tunis, Lon. 3. 30, E. Lat. 36. 40. N.

ALIAS, ad. [Lat.] otherwise; used in law to specify the different names of a man, as Fritib, alias Worley, alias Smith: that is, Fritib, otherwise Worley, otherwise Smith.

ALIBLE, a. [alibilis, Lat.] that which nourishes; or that which may be nourished.

ALIEN, a. [alienus, Lat.] not of the same kind. Inconsistent with; estranged from; at enmity with.

ALIEN, f. [alienus, Lat.] something adverse to, or at enmity with. A foreigner, or one of another country. Not of the same profession, party, or sect.

To ALIEN, v. a. [alieno, Lat.] to transfer our own property to another. To grow averse to; to dislike.

ALIENABLE, a. [from alien & abal, Sax.] that which may be transferred to, and become the property of another.

To ALIENATE, v. a. [alieno, Lat.] to transfer property to another. To grow averse to, by transferring our affections to some other person or thing.

ALIENATE, a. [alienatus, Lat.] averse, or enemies to.

ALIENATION, f. [alienatio, Lat.] in Law, the act of transferring property to another. Change of affection from approbation to dislike.

To ALI'GH, v. a. [aliban, Sax.] to descend from a higher situation to a lower. To descend from, or get off an horse.

ALI'KE, ad. equally, or in the same manner. Both; without difference or distinction. Resembling.

ALIMENT, f. [alimentum, Lat.] food, or that which nourishes, or satisfies the calls of hunger.

ALIMENTAL, a. that which can increase the dimensions of plants or animals, by being taken in food.

ALIMENTARINESS, f. the quality which renders a thing capable of affording nourishment.

ALIMENTARY, a. that which hath relation, or belongs to aliment; that which nourishes, or is eaten for diet. Alimentary Ducts, the intestines, so called on account of the food's passing through them. It is sometimes used for the thoracic duct.

ALIMENTA'TION, f. the quality, action, or power of affording nourishment; or the increasing of the dimensions of a body, by converting food into its own substance.

ALIMONY, f. [alimonia, Lat.] in its primary sense, nourishment; but now appropriated to the law, wherein it implies that allowance which a married woman sues for, and is entitled to, upon any occasional separation, provided it be not for elopement or adultery.

ALIQUNT, a. [aliquantus, Lat.] in Arithmetic, is that part of a number, which, however repeated, will not make up the exact number, but will leave a remainder; as 3 is an aliquant part of 10, 3 times 3 is 9, and 1 remaining.

ALIQUNT, a. [Lat.] in Arithmetic, such part of any number or quantity as will exactly measure it without any remainder; as, 3 is an aliquot of 12, and 6 of 18.

ALIVE, a. [from a and liban, Sax.] in animals, denotes sense and feeling; in vegetables, when the sap circulates; in liquors, when they taste brisk on the palate. Figuratively, cheerful, sprightly, gay, and full of spirits; without diminution or lessening.

AL'KAHEST, f. among Chemists, denotes an universal menstruum, capable of resolving all bodies into their first matter, and yet retains its seminal power and natural form intire.

ALKALE'SCENT, part. that which resembles the qualities of an alkali.

ALKALI, f. [from kali, Arab. glasswort; which having been burnt to ashes, they boiled in water; and after evaporating, called the white salt remaining sul kalli, or alkali] in Medicine, by some writers defined to be that which will cause an effervescence when mingled with an acid; but Boerhaave explodes this definition as defective, and shews, that too great a dependence on it may be productive of dangerous consequences.

ALKALINE, a. that which has the qualities of alkali.

To ALKA'LIZATE, v. a. to make bodies alkaline alkaline by chemical process; or to draw out the latent alkaline virtues of a body, by reducing it to a different form.

ALKALIZATE, a. that which has the powers and qualities of a body which is termed an alkali by medical writers.

ALKALIZATION, f. in Chemistry, the act of impregnating, or mingling, a fluid with an alkaline salt, either to make it a better solvent, or to load the phlegm so that it may not arise in distillation.

ALKERMES, f. [Arab.] in Medicine, a term borrowed from the Arabs, denoting a rich cardiac electuary, consisting of several warm and aromatic ingredients, of which kermes is the basis.

ALL, ad. entirely, completely; exclusive of any other.

ALL, a. applied to a number, it sometimes is used collectively for the whole or every one of the parts without exception. Applied to quantity, every parcel; or every particle. Applied to time, the whole space or interval. Applied to place, its whole extent.

ALL, f. the whole, opposed to a part, or nothing.

ALLA, f. the name by which Mahometans call God. In Arabic, it is derived from the verb alab, to adore; and is the same with the Hebrew elohab, which signifies the adorable Being.

To ALLAY, v. a. [alloyer, Fr.] to mix one metal with another, to render it fit or proper for coinage. In this sense some spell it alloy, in order to keep more closely to the French, from whence it is borrowed. To abate, or lessen any quality. To quiet, pacify, or reduce a boisterous tempest into a calm.

ALLAY, or ALLOY, f. [alloy, Fr.], in its primary sense, a mixture of divers metals, or of divers parcels of the same metal of different fineness. Minters never strike any gold or silver without alloy; brass coin is made of an alloy of copper: Jewellers, Wire-drawers, and Gold-beaters, are obliged to use an alloy in the gold they work; and the Brass-founders have their alloy of copper. Alloy is used in a secondary sense for something which lessens or diminishes the properties of the thing with which it is mixed. That which depreciates, or renders base, by diminution or lessening.

ALLAYER, f. the person or thing which is endued with a power of allaying, lessening, debasing, corrupting, or diminishing.

ALLAYMENT, f. a diminishing, or lessening, applied to the passions.

ALL-BEARING, a. that which is fully, entirely, and perfectly fruitful; that which produces all things.

ALL-CHEERING, a. that which imparts comfort and cheerfulness to all; that which perfectly possesses the power of communicating gaiety, or satisfaction, to every one.

ALL-COMMANDING, a. that which over-rules all; that which governs with uncontrollable sway.

ALL-COMPOSING, a. that which is en-dued with a power of composing or ending any anxiety, or disturbance.

ALL-CONQUERING, a. that which subdues every thing.

ALL-CONSUMING, a. that which perfectly consumes; that which destroys every thing in its power.

ALL-DEVOURING, a. that which perfectly devours; that which eats up every thing.

ALLEGATION, f. affirmation, declaration, excuse, plea. In Law, the producing instruments, deeds, or vouchers, to authorize or justify proceedings.

To ALLEGE, v. a. [allego, Lat.] to declare, or affirm; to plead an excuse; to produce in defence.

ALLEGIBLE, a. any thing that may be charged; any thing that may be pleaded in excuse.

ALLEGER, f. he that asserts or declares any thing.

ALLEGIANCE, f. [allegiance, Fr.] in Law, that natural, sworn, or legal obedience every subject owes to his prince, and is an incident inseparable, or that which follows a person whereforever he goes. Oath of allegiance is that which is taken to the king in quality of a temporal prince, and is distinguished from that of supremacy, which is taken to him in quality of supreme head of the church.

ALLEGORICK, a. something which must be understood figuratively, in opposition to literal.

ALLEGORICAL, a. that which consists of expressions purely figurative, where something else is meant than what is expressed.

ALLEGORICALLY, ad. figuratively, in opposition to literally.

ALLEGORICALNESS, f. the quality of being figurative.

ALLEGORY, f. [ἀλληγορία, Gr.] a figurative speech, in which something else is contained than what the literal meaning conveys. Thus the Roman commonwealth is addressed by Horace under the picture of a ship. The Fables of Æsop, the Iliad and Æneid of Homer, and the Æneid of Virgil may be included under this species of writing.

ALLEGRO, f. [Ital.] in Music, one of the six distinctions of time, expressing the quickest motion, excepting presto. If it be preceded by poco, it must be played in a slower or graver manner than when allegro stands alone; if by più, it must then be fastest of all. It will not be improper to add, that the six divisions of time are as follow; grave, adagio, largo, vivace, allegro, presto.

ALLELU'IAH, f. [a corrupt spelling, instead of halleluiab,] a word signifying praise the Lord, to be met with at the beginning or end of some Psalms. So much energy has been observed in this term, that the Ancient Church thought proper to preserve it, without translating it either into Greek or Latin, for fear of impairing the genius or softness of it.

ALLEMA'NDA, or ALLEMA'ND, f. [Ital.] in music, a grave air, composed in common time, consisting of two parts or strains.

ALLERTOWN, in Northumberland; It is 8 miles S.W. of Hexham.

To ALLEVIATE, v. a. [allevio, Lat.] Figuratively, to lighten, or make lighter or less, in allusion to the diminishing the pressure of a heavy load. To lessen, mitigate, or diminish the enormity of a fault.

ALLEVIATION, f. the act of making a thing lighter; ease from pain; extenuation of a fault.

ALLEY, f. [allet, Fr.] in Gardening, a strait walk, bounded on each side with trees or shrubs. Alleys are distinguished from paths, as being broad enough for two people to walk abreast. The word is in towns applied to narrow passages, to distinguish them from streets, which are wider. Alley in perspective, is that which is larger at the entrance than at the opposite extremity, in order to make it seem long.

ALL-FOU'RS, f. in Gaming, a particular play, wherein the whole sum a person gains each deal is limited to four, which are the highest, lowest, and the knave of trumps, and the game, or the greatest number to be made from tens and court cards; the latter of which are reckoned four for an ace, three for a king, two for a queen, and one for the knave; and he who has all these particulars, is said to have all-fours.

ALL-HAI'L, interj. a salutation or invocation made use of in acknowledgement of benefits, or in testimony of gratitude and goodwill.

ALL-HA'LLOW-TIDE, f. [compounded of all, hallow, and tide, from tid, Sax. a week; hence Whitson-tide, or Whitson-week.] that space of time which is near All-Saints-day, or the 2d of November.

ALLIANCE, f. [alliance, Fr.] the union or connection of two persons or two families by marriage. In a political sense, the leagues or treaties between different states for their mutual defence.

ALLI'CIENCY, [allibiciency] f. [from allicia, Lat.] the quality of attracting, or drawing to; attraction.

ALLIGATION, f. the act of uniting, or the state of things united, linked, or joined together. In Arithmetic, the rule, wherein questions are resolved relating to the mixtures of different commodities, with their value, effects, &c. when so compounded.

ALLIGATOR, f. a species of crocodile in the West Indies; it is an amphibious creature, and grows as long as it lives; they smell so strong of musk, that the air and water they are in is affected by them to a considerable distance.

ALL-JU'DGING, part. that which exercises judgment without controul or partiality.

ALLI'SION, [allixyon] f. [alixio, Lat.] the act of striking one thing against another.

ALL-KNOWING, part. that which is intimately acquainted with every thing that is the object of knowledge; or whose knowledge is perfect without defect.

ALLOCATION, f. [allocatio, Lat.] the act of putting one thing to another. In Commerce, the admission or allowance of an article to an account, and the passing it as such. In the Exchequer, it is an allowance made upon an account.

ALLO'DIAL, a. [from alodium, Teut.] in Law, that of which a person has an absolute property, without paying any acknowledgment or service, and is opposed to feudal.

ALLO'DIUM, f. [Teut.] a possession which a man holds in his own right without any dependence, charge, service or homage to be paid to a superior lord.

To ALLOO' or HALLOO' v. a. [pronounced boloo, or baller, Fr. to make a noise] to set a dog on; or excite his courage, so as to seize one of his own or any other species.

To ALLO'T, v. a. [blot, Sax.] to distribute by lot; to assign a share; to grant.

ALLOTTING, f. in Commerce, is when a ship's goods are divided into different parcels, to be purchased by persons whose names are wrote on pieces of paper, which are indifferently affixed to each of such lots, and the goods thus divided without any partiality.

ALLOTMENT, f. the parcel, share, lot, office, or condition assigned to any one.

To ALLO'W, v. a. [allow, Fr.] to confess, to yield, admit, grant, acknowledge, or assent to a principle, in opposition to contradiction. To yield, or permit. To confer an honour on a person. To approve as just, or consistent with one's duty. To give, to bestow, to pay as a debt.

ALLOWABLE, a. that which may be granted, or permitted. That which does not imply an error or contradiction. That which may be suffered, as repugnant or inconsistent with no laws.

ALLOWABLENESS, f. the quality of a thing, which denotes it to be lawful, proper to be granted or permitted, and no ways inconsistent with the rules of reason, or the customs of a place.

ALLOWANCE, f. the granting, concession, or yielding assent to any doctrine, opinion, or principle. Permission, licence, or consent, applied to superiors. Liberty, freedom from restraint, used with the word give. Concession.

ALLOWED, part. [from allow] universally acknowledged; established with respect to character. In Commerce, it is written in the margin of an account of expences, opposite to such articles as are granted.

ALLO'Y, f. See ALLAY.

ALL-POWERFUL, a. a power capable of operating without defect or controul, and of producing every thing that is consistent with infinite wisdom.

ALL-SAINTS-DAY, f. the day set apart by the Church to commemorate the exemplary glory lives and noble fortitude of all the saints and martyrs; added as a supplementary day to the rest of the festivals, that those who were worthy of remembrance might not be passed over without notice, and that the human mind might be more strongly excited to exemplary piety, or pious martyrdom, by considering the number of those who have preceded in these shining paths.

ALL-SEEING, a. endued with the power of seeing every thing.

ALL-SOULS-DAY, f. a festival observed by the church of Rome, on the 2d of Nov. with a particular service relating to the souls supposed to be in purgatory.

ALL-SUFFICIENT, [all-sufficiens, Lat.] a. capable of procuring every thing which is the object of power or wisdom; absolutely perfect in himself. Perfectly adapted to; applied to enticement, capable of producing all that conviction, or conviction for which it is intended.

To ALLUDE, v. n. [alludo, Lat.] to have a distant respect to a thing, without mentioning it expressly; to hint at.

ALLUM, f. [alumen, Lat.] fossil salt, or white mineral, separated from the earth by washing it with water, which being impregnated with its salts, is afterwards boiled and evaporated. Italy produces the greatest quantity and the best allium of any country. That of Rome or Civita Vecchia is reddish, because the earth from whence it is taken is of that colour. The allium of England is in great pieces or lumps, clear and transparent like crystal; and is more or less fine, according as it is well or ill purified. It is made of a stone of a bluish colour found in Yorkshire, urine, and sea-weed. The Allum of Liege, or Meziere, is of the same nature as the English, excepting that it is somewhat fatter. Allum of the Levant differs but little from those already mentioned: the large is the best, and the same has about three or four days journey from Smyrna. Dr. Johnson spells this word Alum.

ALLUMINOUS, a. [from alumen, Lat.] that which has the properties of allum; or that which is mixed with allum. Waters of this kind are prepared by dyers, to make their stuffs take their colours the better; and those which are to be crimson, must be steeped in water made very strong with this ingredient.

To ALLUMINATE, v. a. to beautify, decorate, adorn. Before the invention of Printing, certain persons, called Alluminers, made it a trade to paint the initial letters of manuscripts in all sorts of colours, and to gild them with silver and gold.

To ALLURE, v. a. [lavorer, Fr.] to entice, or attract, either in a good or bad sense; to persuade or draw, by the addition of something besides the intrinsic value and advantages of the object.

ALLURE, f. originally some artificial hook made use of by bird-catchers, to entice birds into their traps. Figuratively, any thing that entices, or draws a person into the power of another.

ALLUREMENT, f. that which has the power of enticing by its charms; temptation; enticement.

ALLURER, f. the person who tempts, or seduces by fair speeches, enticements, or inveiglements.

ALLURINGLY, ad. in a manner proper to entice, tempt, inveigle, or seduce.

ALLURINGNESS, f. a quality whose charms have such effect upon the mind, as to prevail upon it to engage in any action, either good or bad.

ALLUSION, [alluzio, Lat.] f. [allusio, Lat.] something spoken with reference to a thing already known, and on that account not expressed. A reference; hint, or implication.

ALLUSIVE, a. that which does not mention a thing expressly, but comprehends it by implication; that which hints at something not fully expressed.

ALLUSIVELY, ad. in a manner wherein a reference is made to something not expressed, but implied.

ALLUSIVENESS, f. the quality of expressing a thing by implication, or by reference, opposed to expressly, or directly.

ALLUVION, f. [alluvio, Lat.] in its primary sense, a flowing or swelling of waters near any land.

ALLUVIOUS, a. that which is washed away from one place, and carried to another.

ALL-WISE, a. that which is endued with absolute, perfect, or infinite wisdom.

To ALLAY v. a. [allier, Fr.] to join together, or unite by kindred, friendship, or interest. To resemble, or be like, in the passive.

ALLY, f. [in the plural allies, allie, Fr.] one who is joined to or has connexions with another, owing to some contract, whether that of marriage or treaty; and is applied both to persons and kingdoms.

ALMACANTAR, f. [Arab.] in Astronomy, a circle drawn parallel to the horizon. It is generally used in the plural, and signifies a series of parallel circles drawn through the several degrees of the meridian. Almacantar's staff, a mathematical instrument, made of pear-tree or box-wood, with an arch containing 15 deg. formerly used to find the altitude of the sun at its rising, in order to discover its amplitude, and the variation of the compass.

ALMAGEST, f. [Arab.] the name of a celebrated work of Ptolemy, containing a collection of geometrical problems and astronomical observations made by the ancients.

ALMANAC, or ALMANACK, f. a table, or calendar, wherein the days of the weeks, fasts, festivals, changes of the moon, variation of time between clocks and the sun, eclipses, time of high water, beginnings and endings of terms, &c. are noted for the ensuing year.

ALMIGHTINESS, f. that attribute of the Deity wherein he is considered as able to perform every thing that is the object of absolute, perfect, uncontroulable, and infinite power.

ALMIGHTY, a. [formerly spelt, all-mighty, aelmichtig, Sax.] that which is possessed of perfect, absolute, uncontrollable, or unlimited power; that which can do every thing that infinite wisdom can dictate, or infinite power can execute.

ALMOND, f. [amandola, Ital.] a fruit contained in a stone full of little cells, which is inclosed in a tough skin. They are divided into sweet and bitter, on account of their different tastes. The French lapidaries give name, Almonds, or Amandes, to those pieces of rock crystal which are cut with a wheel into forms resembling this fruit, and are used to adorn chandeliers of glass, and other pieces of furniture made of glass or crystal.

ALMONDS OF THE THROAT, or TONSILS, improperly stiled Almonds of the ears. See TONSILS.

ALMONER, f. an officer appointed to distribute alms to the poor. The Lord Almoner or Lord High Almoner of England, is usually a bishop, who has the forfeitures of all deadlands, and the goods of Felos de se, which he is to distribute among the poor.

ALMONRY, f. the place wherein the almoner keeps his office, or distributes the alms to the poor.

ALMOST, ad. [al-mest, Belg.] applied to action, near performing it. "They be almost ready to stone me." Exod. xvii. 3. Applied to number or multitude, a considerable majority, little less than the whole. "Came almost the whole city together." Acts xiii. 44. Applied to time, very near the period mentioned. "When seven days were almost ended." Acts xxi. 27. Applied to the effect of an argument, not far from persuading, or conviction. "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." Acts xviii. 28.

ALMS, f. [never used but in the plural, alms, or elmisse, Sax.] money, or other necessities given to relieve the necessities of the poor and distressed, including in it a tender sympathy in their afflictions, and a pious readiness to relieve them.

ALMS-DEED, f. an act of charity; or something done out of compassion, to relieve the distressed and want of others.

ALMS-GIVER, f. one who is charitable; or fond of relieving the necessities of the poor.

ALMS-HOUSE, f. a house endowed by legacies, or other donations, for the lodging and support of the decayed and poor.

ALMS-MAN, f. a man who is supported by charity or alms; one who belongs to an alms-house.

ALNAGE, f. the measuring of woollen manufactures by the ell. Alnage was first intended as a proof of the goodness of the commodity, and a seal was invented, the affixing of which to a commodity was a sign that such commodity was made according to law. But now these seals may be bought, and affixed to any goods, at the buyer's pleasure, to the great prejudice of our trade with foreigners.

ALNAGER, f. a public officer, whose business is to examine into the affize of all woollers cloths made throughout the kingdom, and fix seals upon them; likewise to collect an alnage duty to the king. There are now three officers relating to the alnage, namely, a searcher, measurer, and alnager, all which were formerly comprized in the last, till, by his own neglect, it was thought proper to separate them into three offices.

ALNWICK, a thotoughfare town of Northumberland, on the road to Berwick, with a market on Saturdays. It is a populous, well-built town, with a town-house, where the quarter-sessions and county-courts are held. It has three gates, which remain almost entire, and shew that it was formerly surrounded by a wall. It is defended by an old stately Gothic castle, the seat of the Duke of Northumberland. It is 305½ miles from London.

ALOES, f. [aloe, Lat.] This word is applied to a tree, a plant, and a medicinal juice, extracted from the plant. The wood grows in China, in the kingdom of Lao, and in Cochinchina. It is a large tree, or at least about the size of the olive, resembles it likewise in its leaves, and its fruit is red, like a cherry. The wood of the trunk is of three colours; under the bark it is black and heavy; the next wood is of a tanned colour, light, and resembles rotten wood; but the heart is the tamberac, or calcambac, which is dearer in the Indies than gold itself, and was reckoned by the Siamese the most valuable present they could make to Louis XIV.

ALOE'TICK, a. that which consists of aloes.

ALOFT, ad. [from loft, Dan.] in the air, in opposition to the ground; on high; above.

ALONE, a. [alleen, Belg.] without a companion. Without any assistance. Exclusively of all others; solely.

ALONG, ad. [au longue, Fr. or al lunga, Ital.] at full length; prostrate on the ground. Motion or progression, measured lengthwise. Used with all, for a continuance, or during a whole space of time. Throughout, or from one end to the other, applied to writings. After come, it implies attendance, and encouragement to proceed.

ALOO'F ad. [from all and off, Sax.] used with the particle from, at a distance which is within sight. When applied to persons, it implies a distance occasioned by caution and circumspection. At a distance, so as not to appear as a principal, or party in any design. Not connected with, having no relation to.

ALOE'CIA, f. [from ἀλωπιζ, Gr.] a distemper wherein all, or a great part of the hair falls off.

ALOU'D, ad. with an increased strength of voice, so as to affect the ear more strongly, or to be heard at a great distance.

ALOW, [alo] ad. in a low place; near the ground, in opposition to aloft, or above.

ALPHA, f. the first letter in the Greek alphabet, answering to our A, and is therefore used to signify the first, as omega the last; both which which together denote the eternity of God.

ALPHABET, f. the letters or elements of speech; the whole collection of letters of any language digested in that series or order to which the people have ever been accustomed.—Alphabets of different nations vary in the number of their constituent letters. The English alphabet contains 24 letters, to which if y and z consonant be added, the sum will be 26; the French 23; the Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, and Samaritan, 22 each; the Arabic, 28; the Persian, 31; the Turkish, 33; the Georgian, 36; the Coptic, 32; the Muscovian, 43; the Greek, 24; the Latin, 22; the Sclavonic, 27; the Dutch, 26; the Spanish, 27; the Italian, 20; the Ethiopic, as well as Tartarian, 302; the Indians of Bengal, 21; the Baramas 19; the Chinese, properly speaking, have no Alphabet, except we call their whole language their Alphabet: their letters are words, or rather Hieroglyphics, and amount to about 80,000.

ALPHABETIC, or ALPHABETICAL, a. placed in the order of the alphabet.

ALPHABETICALLY, ad. in the same order as in the alphabet.

ALPINE, a. [Alpinus, Lat.] that which may be met on the Alps.

ALPS, the highest mountains in Europe, separating Italy from France and Germany.

They begin on the side of France towards the coast of the Mediterranean, between the territory of Genoa and county of Nice, and they terminate at the Gulph of Carnero, which is part of the gulph of Venice. There are few passes over them, and those of difficult access, which are the chief security of Piedmont against the attempts of France. Swisserland takes up a good part of these mountains, or rather the valleys between them, and for that reason are secure against the Germans and French. The famous Hannibal attempted to cross the Alps on the side of Piedmont, in the winter season, when he invaded Italy, and lost most of his elephants amongst them.

ALPHINGTON, or AFFINGTON, a village in Devonshire, two miles S. of Exeter.

ALREADY, ad. pronounced as if the a was dropped, [from all and ready, Sax.] the time present; even now.

ALRESFORD, a town in Hampshire, with a market on Thursdays, 18 miles E. N. E. of Southampton, and 57 W. S. W. of London. It is governed by a bailiff, has one church, about 200 houses, two principal streets, which are large and broad, and a small manufacture of buckles.

ALSO, conjunct. [alsua, Sax.] used to show, that what had been affirmed of one sentence or person, holds good of the succeeding part of the period, and of another person. In the same manner; likewise.

ALSTON-MOOR, a town in Cumberland, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on a hill, at the bottom of which runs the river Tyne, with a stone bridge over it, and near it is plenty of lead ore. It is 20 miles E.

by S. of Carlisle, and 303½ N. N. W. of London.

ALT, a. in Music, a term applied to the highest notes in the scale.

ALTAR, f. [altare, Lat.] a kind of table or raised place, whereon the ancient sacrifices were offered. Since the establishment of Christianity, that place in the church where the communion is received, or the table on which the vases and the elements of bread and wine are placed. Figuratively, Christ himself, to whom we bring all our offerings and services. Among the ancient Romans the altar was a kind of a pedestal, either square, round, or triangular, adorned with sculptures and inscriptions. In Astronomy, a constellation of the southern hemisphere, consisting of seven stars.

ALTARAGE, f. denotes the profits arising to the priest from the oblations on the altar.

To ALTER, v. a. [alterer, Fr.] to change; to make a thing different from what it is; used both of a part and the whole of a thing, and applied both in a good and bad sense. Used neuterly, to change; to become different from what it has been.

ALTERABLE, a. [from alter and abil, Sax.] that which may be changed, or be made to appear different from what it is.

ALTERABLENESS, f. the quality of being changed; or liable to have its present properties and appearance changed by external or internal causes.

ALTERABLY, ad. in a manner that will admit of changes.

ALTERANTS, or ALTERATIVES, f. such medicines as correct the bad qualities of the blood and other animal fluids, without occasioning any sensible evacuation.

ALTERATION, f. [alteratio, Fr.] the act of changing the form or purport of a writing; the shape and other qualities of a body; the properties and faculties of the mind, and making them different from what they were.

To ALTERCATE, v. n. [altercor, Lat.] to wrangle, or contend with another; to dispute.

ALTERCATION, f. [altercatio, Lat.] a debate or dispute on any subject between friends, including a warm epoual or defence of the contrary side of a question, but not so great as what is involved in the idea of a quarrel.

ALTERN, a. [alternus, Lat.] that which succeeds another by turns; successive, or alternately; that which follows by succession.

ALTERNACY, f. the succession or following of one action after another in its turn.

ALTERNATE, a. [alternus, Lat.] things which succeed or follow one another by turns; successive. In Botany, applied to the position of the leaves of a plant, it implies that the leaves on each side of the stalk, or branch, do not stand directly opposite, but between, or a little higher, than each other. In Geometry, applied to angles, it signifies the internal one, and is made by a line cutting two parallels, parallels, and lying on opposite sides of it. Alternate, in Heraldry, is applied to the situation of the quarters of a coat; thus, in quarterly, ecartelé, the first and fourth are alternate, and of the same nature.

ALTERNATELY, ad. in such a manner that the thing which precedes it all follow that which comes after it. Thus, when we say that darkness follows light, and light darkness, they are said to follow each other alternately.

ALTERNATENESS, f. the quality of being alternate; the reciprocal succession of things.

ALTERNATION, f. in Arithmetic, the different changes, alterations of place, or combinations, that any proposed numbers are capable of; which is found by a continual multiplication of all the numbers beginning at unity, and ending with the last number of the things to be varied.

ALTERNATIVE, f. [alternatif, Fr.] a choice of two things, whereby if one be rejected, the other must be accepted.

ALTERNATIVELY, ad. by turns; mutually; reciprocally.

ALTERNITY, a. a state wherein there is a continual succession, change, or vicissitude.

AL'THORNE, a town in Essex. Dist. 45 miles from London.

ALTHOUGH, conj. [pronounced as if written alibá, from all and thcab, Sax.] used to imply that a thing or conclusion may be allowed and maintained, notwithstanding something seemingly inconsistent had been allowed, admitted, or granted: notwithstanding.

ALTI'METRY, f. [altimetria, Lat.] the art of taking or measuring heights, whether accessible or inaccessible.

AL'TITUDE, f. in Geometry, one of the three dimensions of body, namely, Height. In Optics, it is the height of an object above a line, drawn parallel to the horizon from the eye of the observer. In Astronomy, it is the arch of a vertical circle, intercepted between the stars and the horizon. Also, the elevation of any of the heavenly bodies above the horizon. This Altitude is either true or apparent, according as it is reckoned from the rational or sensible horizon, and the difference between these is called by Astronomers the Parallax of Altitude. Near the horizon this Altitude is always increased by means of refraction.

AL'TO RELIEVO, f. See RELIEVO.

AL'TOGE'THER, ad. [all and together, Sax.] entirely, without any exception, applied to number and quality. In all respects; perfectly. In company; without separating; in a body.

AL'TON, a town in Hampshire, 47½ miles from London; and has a market on Saturdays.

AL'TRINGHAM, a town in Cheshire, 180½ miles from London; it has a market on Tuesdays.

A'LUDEL, f. in Chemistry, a range of earthen pots without bottoms, fitted into each other without luting.

A'LUM, f. See ALLUM.

A'LUM-STONE, f. a stone or calx of a corrosive nature, used to consume the fungous excrescences, or proud flesh of wounds.

A'LWAYS, ad. [allemwege, Sax.] applied to action, without ceasing or intermission.

AM, v. f. [eam, Sax.] when used singly, it implies existence: following what, it implies nature: "Knowing what I am." Prior. Applied to place, it signifies preference: "Where I am, there shall my servants be." John xii. 27. Applied to truths, it implies affirmation: "Jesus said, I am the bread of life." John vi. 35. When repeated it implies self and independent existence, or a being which is the uncreated source of the existence of all other beings.

AMA'IN, ad. [a and mægg, Sax.] with all one's force, or strength, applied to action. Applied to the voice, extremely loud, or as loud as possible. Also a sea-term, importing to lower or let fall the topails; to let down any thing into the hold, as a word of command to do it gently and by degrees.

AMA'LGAM, or AMA'LGAMA, f. [Gr.] in Chemistry, a substance produced by incorporating quicksilver with a metal; which is expressed by the Chemists thus A. A. A.

To AMA'LGAMATE, v. n. to incorporate metals with quicksilver.

AMALGAMA'TION, f. the mixing or incorporating quicksilver with other metals.

AMANUE'NSIS, f. [Lat.] a person who writes down what is dictated by another; likewise a person who copies writings, or writes extracts from books.

A'MARANTH, f. [amarantus, Lat.] the name of a plant. In poetry, the name of a flower unfading.

To AMA'SS, v. a. [amasser, Fr.] to gather together, so as to form a mass or heap. Figuratively, to lay up or store in the memory, with great assiduity, and little discretion. To collect together in quantities.

AMA'SSMENT, f. a collection of things heaped together.

AMAURO'SIS, f. [from ἀμαυρόω, Gr.] in Medicine, a dimness of sight, wherein the eye, to external appearance, seems to be unaffected.

To AMA'ZE, v. a. [from mase, Sax.] to strike with astonishment. To be confused, or thrown into perplexity, by some sudden change or address.

AMA'ZE, f. astonishment, or perplexity, caused by an unexpected object, whether good or bad; in the former case it is mixed with admiration, in the latter with fear.

AMA'ZEDLY, ad. in a manner expressive of surprize or astonishment on the appearance of something unexpected.

AMA'ZEDNESS, f. the state of a person's mind when affected with surprize, astonishment, confusion, or perplexity.

AMA'ZEMENT,

AMAZEMENT, f. confusion; perplexity; admiration; surprise.

AMAZING, part. that which causes surprise, astonishment, or admiration.

AMAZINGLY, ad. in a manner capable of exciting astonishment, wonder, or admiration; prodigiously; surprizingly.

AMAZONS, f. a nation of women inhabiting that part of Lesser Asia now called Anatolia. They are said to have killed all their male children, and to have cut off the right breasts of their females, to fit them for martial exercises. However, it has been a matter of great dispute among the learned, whether there ever was such a nation. Mr. Petit has writ a treatise on purpose to prove the affirmative. We read also of Scythian, German, Libyan Amazons, and Amazons of America, living on the banks of the great river which bears their name, said to be governed by a queen, no men being permitted to live among them, only at certain seasons those of the neighbouring nations are suffered to visit them, for the sake of procreation. The Amazons of Libya are famous for their wars with another female nation, called Gorgons.

AMBA'GES, f. [Lat.] a round-about way of expression; a method of relating any subject wherein the narrative is not conducted directly to the point. Circumlocution.

AMBA'SSADE, f. [Fr.] the office of a person who is commissioned to negotiate the affairs of a state in foreign parts.

AMBA'SSADOR, f. [ambassadeur, Fr.] a person sent by a prince or state into that of a foreign one, as their representative, to transact such affairs as concern the public. Their persons have been esteemed inviolable; and, by the civil law, their moveables, especially such as are deemed an accession to their person, cannot be seized on, either as a pledge or payment of a debt, by order of execution or judgment, or by leave of the state wherein they reside. In a secondary sense, it implies any person sent on a message, even by a private person; a messenger. Ambassadors are not supposed to stay long at the court to which they are sent, their office being to transact some state affairs between the two powers. Residents are supposed to reside for some considerable time, as a testimony of the good harmony between the two states.

AMBA'SSADRESS, f. [ambassadrice, Fr.] in its primitive sense, the wife or lady of an ambassador; in a secondary one, a woman sent on a message.

AMBASSAGE, f. [ambassade, Fr.] the employ or office of a person acting as an ambassador.

AMBER, f. [amber, Arab.] a kind of gum, or resin, found in the Baltic, on the coast of Prussia. The physical qualities of this substance have recommended it in fumigation to remove delusions, and in powder as an alternative, absorbent, sweetener, astringent, lithontriptic, diuretic, &c. It is highly endowed with the property of electricity.

AMBERGRIS, f. a fragrant drug, that melts almost like wax, commonly of a greyish or ash-colour, used both as a perfume and a cordial. Various have been the opinions concerning the nature and origin of Ambergris; but it is now well known to be a bitumen, but was formerly imagined to be a mixture of wax and honey, which being hardened by the sun, and falling into the sea, was there brought to perfection. What gave rise to this opinion was, that from a mixture of wax and honey, an essence very similar may be extracted, and that large pieces have been found before it reached its full maturity, which upon being broken, were found to contain wax and honey in the middle of them. Amberris is found on the sea coasts, particularly those of Africa, from the Cape of Good Hope to the Red Sea, sometimes in very large lumps, in the middle of which we frequently meet with stones, shells, and bones.

AMBERSBURY, a town in Wiltshire, which has a market on Fridays. Distance from London 78½ miles.

AMBIDE'XTER, f. one who has equally the use of both hands, or who can use both hands with the same facility, and for the same purpose; also, one who is ready to engage on either side in party disputes.

AMBIDEXTE'RITY, f. the power of being able to use both hands equally. Double-dealing.

AMBIDE'XTROUS, a. he who can make use of either hand indifferently.

AMBIDE'XTROUSNESS, f. the quality of being able to use either hand with equal ease, or the engaging with different parties without scruple; double-dealing.

AMBIENT, part. [ambiens, Lat.] that which covers every part; that which encompasses or surrounds.

AMBIGU, f. [Fr.] an entertainment, wherein the dishes are set on the table in a promiscuous manner, without any regard to order, so as to perplex the guests.

AMBIGU'ITY, f. [ambiguitas, Lat.] the quality of a word or expression, received in different senses; words whose significations are doubtful or uncertain. We make use of an equivocation to deceive, of an ambiguity to keep in the dark from all, and of a double entendre to conceal from some.

AMBI'GUOUS, a. [ambiguus, Lat.] applied to expressions having more senses than one, which are not easily determined.

AMBI'GUOUSLY, ad. uttered in equivocal terms, or words having two senses.

AMBI'GUOUSNESS, f. the quality which renders the signification of a word uncertain.

AMBI'LOGY, f. discourse of an ambiguous signification.

AMBI'LOQUOUS, a. using ambiguous expressions.

AMBIT, f. a term in Geometry, signifying the boundary, outline, or circumference of any figure, regular or irregular; the compass or circuit of any thing.

AMBI'TION,

AMBITION, f. [ambitio, Lat.] is generally used in a bad sense, for an immoderate and illegal pursuit of power, a vehement desire of greatness or fame; a restlessness that cannot bear any competitor either in government or honour.

AMBITIOUS, a. [ambitiosus, Lat.] desirous, longing after, and industrious to obtain a greater degree of power, an advancement in honour, or a more extensive dominion. Proud, lofty, aspiring; elegantly applied to inanimate things, and implying their being not contented with their present dimensions, or situation.

AMBITIOUSLY, ad. in a manner which shews a desire or thirst after greater dignity, power, riches, dominion, or preferment.

AMBITIOUSNESS, f. the quality of being desirous of a greater degree of honour, riches, or power.

To A'MBLE, v. n. [ambulo, Lat.] to move upon an amble; to move with a gentle motion; to move with an affected motion.

A'MBLE, f. in Horsemanship, a pace wherein the two feet of a horse on the same side move at the same time, or together.

A'MBLER, f. a horse that has been taught to amble; sometimes called a pacer.

AMBLESI'DE, a town in Westmoreland, 27 miles from London. The market is on Wednesdays.

A'MBLINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to perform that pace by jockies called the amble.

AMBRO'SIA, [ambrosia,] f. [Gr.] the imaginary food of the heathen deities, which preserved them immortal. Figuratively, applied to any delicious fruit, by way of hyperbole, and signifying, that it was fit for the gods, or that it would communicate immortality.

AMBRO'SIAL, [ambrosial] a. [ambrosialis, Lat.] heavenly, delicious, or something beyond the possession of mortals.

A'MBS-ACE, f. in gaming, when two aces are thrown at one time.

AMBULATION, f. [ambulatio, Lat.] the act of walking.

AMBULATORY, a. the power of walking; moveable; a term applied to courts that were not fixed, but held sometimes at one place and sometimes at another. Thus the court of parliament, and that of the King's-bench, were formerly ambulatory.

AMBUSCA'DE, f. [ambuscade, Fr.] a place wherein men are hid in order to surprize an enemy. Applied with great elegance to luxurious foods, which teem with latent diseases.

AMBUSCA'DO, f. [amboscada, Span.] a private place wherein men are hid to surprize an enemy.

A'MBUSH, f. [embusche, Fr.] a place wherein soldiers are hid, in order to surprize an enemy. A snare laid by a private person to assassinate.

A'MBUSHED, a. lying in wait, hid in order to surprize.

A'MBUSHMENT, f. a concealment in order to surprize.

AMBU'STION, f. [pron. as 'spelt] [ambustio, Lat.] in Medicine the effect which fire, or bodies heated by it, have on the flesh; when caused by fire immediately, termed a burn; when by boiling liquors, a scald.

A'MEL, f. a term Mr. Boyle frequently uses as synonymous with Enamel; which see.

AME'N, P. in Hebrew signifies true, faithful, certain: It is likewise made use of to affirm any thing, and was a sort of affirmation frequently used by our Saviour, Amen, Amen, verily, verily, I say unto you. It is also understood as expressing a wish, as Amen, so be it, Numb. v. 22; or an affirmation, Amen, yes I believe it, 1 Cor. xiv. 16. The Hebrews end the five books of Psalms, according to their way of distributing them, with the words Amen, Amen, which the Septuagint and Latins have translated be it so. The Greeks and Latins have preserved this in their prayers, as well as Alleluiab, and Hosannab, because they observed more energy in them than in any terms they could use in their own language.

AME'NABLE, a. [amenable, Fr.] in Law, responsible, or subject to enquiry and examination. Likewise tractable or easily governed.

To AME'ND, v. a. [amender, Fr.] to alter something faulty for the better. Applied to manners or behaviour. To grow from a more infirm state to a better; to recover.

AME'NDABLE, a. the possibility of an error's being corrected.

AME'NDE, f. [Fr.] a fine by which a compensation is made for a fault committed. A-mende honorable, is an infamous kind of punishment in France, inflicted on traitors, parricides, and other capital offenders, consisting in stripping the malefactor to his shirt, and leading him with a rope round his neck into court, to beg pardon of his king, court, and country; sometimes death or the galleys are annexed to it.

AME'NDER, f. the person who makes the changes or alterations in a thing for the better.

AME'NDMENT, f. [amendement, Fr.] an alteration which makes it better; a correction. A change from vice to virtue. It signifies a change from sickness towards health; a recovery.

AME'NDS, f. [amende, Fr.] something paid to make good a damage done. Atonement, or satisfaction.

AME'NITY, f. [amoenitas, Lat.] a situation or prospect which affects the mind with pleasure or delight.

To AME'RCE, v. a. [amerrier, Norm.] in Law, to inflict a pecuniary punishment, or fine a person a sum of money for an offence.

AME'RCIER, f. the person who sets the fine upon an offender; or settles the value of the satisfaction or fine which is to be paid.

AME'RCEMENT, or AMERCIAMENT, f. in Law, the fine imposed on an offender against the king, or other lord, who is convicted, and therefore stands at the mercy of either.

AME'RICA,

AMERICA, one of the four parts of the world, and by much the largest. It is bounded on all sides by the Ocean, as appears from the latest discoveries; it being formerly supposed to join to the North-East part of Asia. It took its name from Americus Vespucius, a Florentine, who is said to have discovered that part of this country situated under the line; but several good authors have proved this to be a mistake. America was first discovered by Christopher Columbus, a Genoese, in 1491. Some call it the New-World, and with a great deal of propriety; for not only the men, but the birds and beasts differ in some respect from those known before. It has likewise a great number of trees, shrubs and plants, that grew so where else before they were transplanted to other places. All the men, except the Eskimoes, near Greenland, seem to have the same original; for they agree in every particular from the Straits of Magellan in the S. to Hudson's-bay in the N. Their skins unless dressed with grease and oil, are of a red copper colour; and they have no beards, or hair on any other parts of the body, except the head, where it is black, straight, and coarse. Many are the conjectures about the peopling this vast continent, and almost as various as their authors. We have not room to enter into a detail of these particulars, and therefore shall only observe, that when the original of the Negroes is settled, we may also be pretty certain from whence these people descended. America is so long, that it takes in not only all the Torrid, but also the Temperate and part of the Frigid Zones. It is hard to say how many different languages there are in America, a vast number being spoken by the different people in different parts; and as to their religion, there is no giving any credible account of it in general, though some of the most civilized among them seem to have worshipped the sun. The principal motive of the Spaniards in sending so many colonies here was the thirst of gold; and indeed they and the Portuguese are possessed of all those parts where it is found in greatest plenty. It is divided into N. and S. America, and the principal kingdoms in these are Mexico and Peru; but the Portuguese are in possession of Brasil in S. America. Besides these, in S. America, there are Paraguay within land, Chili on the S. Sea, and Terra Magellanica to the N. of the Straits of Magellan, whose bounds are not certainly determined. The names of the English settlements are New-Britain, or Labrador, Canada, and Nova-Scotia. The islands that belong to Great-Britain are Newfoundland, St. John, and Cape Breton, in the North; and in the West Indies, Bermudas, the Bahama Islands, Jamaica, Barbadoes, St. Vincent, Granada, and the Granadines, St. Christopher, Antigua, Nevis, Montserrat, and Dominica. The most fruitful provinces of North-America now belong to the Americans, who have erected them into thirteen united and independent states, comprehending New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantation, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia.

A'MERSHAM, a town in Buckinghamshire, with a market on Tuesdays. It consists of a long street, lying in the road; about the middle is a cross one, and in the intersection the church. The town-hall, or market-house, is a brick building, supported by arched pillars, with a lantern and clock at the top, and freestones at the corners. It sends two members to parliament, chosen by the lord's tenants of the borough, who pay scot and lot, about 130 in number. It is 26 miles N. W. of London.

A'METHYST, f. a gem of a purple colour, which seems composed of a strong blue and deep red; and, according as either of these colours prevails, affording different tinges of purple, sometimes approaching to violet, and sometimes even fading to a pale rose colour. Though the Amethyst be generally of a purple colour, it is nevertheless sometimes found naturally colourless; and may at any time be easily made so, by putting it into a fire; in which pellucid, or colourless state it so well imitates a diamond, that its want of hardness is the only way of distinguishing it. In Heraldry it is a term for a purple colour in the coat of a nobleman, in use with those who blazon by precious stones instead of metals and colours. This in a gentleman's escutcheon is called Purple, and in those of sovereign princes Mercure.

AMETHYSTINE, a. of a fine violet purple colour, resembling that of an amethyst.

A'MIABLE, a. [amabilis, Lat.] that which is an object of love. That which is able to attract the affection of love or delight.

A'MIABLENESS, f. the quality which renders a person or thing an object of delight, pleasure, or love.

A'MIABLY, a. in such a manner as to gain love.

AMIA'NTHUS, f. a sort of stone like alum, by some called Earth-flax, and by others Salamander's Hair; a fibrous, flexile, and elastic mineral substance, composed of short and abrupt filaments. It has these surprising properties, that it will neither give fire with steel, nor ferment with aqua fortis; if thrown into the fire, it will endure the most extreme heat without the least injury to its texture. It is found in Egypt, Tartary, Siberia, Anglesea in Wales, Scotland, and other parts.

A'MICABLE, a. [amicabilis, Lat.] endowed with all the qualities, kindness, and social benevolence, which can knit the tie of friendship.

A'MICABLENESS, f. that quality which is exerted in performing acts of kindness, and in exercising the offices of friendship.

A'MICABLY, ad. in such a manner as is consistent with the warmest affection.

A'MICE, f. [from amicus, Lat.] the first or undermost of the six garments worn by priests, and next to the albe.

AMI'D, or AMI'DST, ad. [a and mid, Sax.]

in the middle, with respect to situation; applied to things, placed in a straight line, between or in the center.

AMI'SS, ad. [a and mis, Sax.] wrong or contrary to any law, divine or moral. Improper, blameable, or inconsistent with the dictates of reason.

A'MITY, f. a state wherein there is the greatest concord, harmony, or a mutual intercourse between two or more persons. Applied to nations, peace, wherein states are employed in promoting the good of each other.

AMLWICH, or AMLWOCH, a village of Wales, on the North-side of the isle of Anglesey.

AMMONIAC (GUM) f. with Physicians, is a Gum, or more properly a Gum-resin, extracted from a ferulaceous plant growing in some parts of Asia and Africa.

AMMONIAC (SAL) f. is a volatile salt of two kinds. The ancient was a native salt, generated in inns, where pilgrims travelling from the temple of Jupiter Ammon used to lodge; whose camels, urining in the stable, a salt arose out of it, denominated Ammoniac. The modern Sal Ammoniac is intirely factitious, and made in Egypt, with foot, a little sea-salt, and the urine of cattle. This our chemists imitate, by adding one part of common salt to five of urine; with which some mix that quantity of foot.

AMMONIACAL, a. that which has the properties of ammoniac, as above described.

AMMUNITION, f. [munio, Lat.] such arms, instruments, and stores, as are necessary to carry on a war; military stores.

AMMUNITION-BREAD, f. bread provided to an army or garrison.

A'MNESTY, f. [ἀμνηστία, Gr.] an act wherein a prince promises pardon to criminals for offences past; an act of oblivion.

AMO'NG, or AMO'NGST, prep. [among, Sax.] present, or residing with.

A'MORIST, f. [from amor, Lat.] one who is captivated with the charms of a female; one who is in love; a lover.

A'MOROUS, a. [amoureux, Fr.] fond. Smitten with love at the sight of an amiable object.

A'MOROUSLY, ad. with great appearance of affection or love; in a fond or loving manner.

AMOR'T, a. [à la mort, Fr.] immersed so deeply in the thought of some present calamity, as to appear quite stupified; spiritless.

AMORTIZATION, AMORTIZEMENT, f. [amortissement, Fr.] in Law, a transferring of lands to a corporation, &c. to remain in their possession for ever; called an alienation of lands or tenements in mortmain.

To AMOR'TIZE, v. a. [amortir, Fr.] to alien or transfer lands to any corporation, guild, or fraternity for ever.

To AMO'VE, v. a. [amovere, Lat.] in Law, to remove a person from his post or station.

To AMOUNT, v. n. [monter, Fr.] applied to arithmetical process, to make up, to come to, when all the separate parts or figures are added together. To compose when united.

AMOUNT, f. in Arithmetic, the sum produced by the addition of several numbers or quantities; the product of several quantities, added together. The consequence, result, or value.

AMO'UR, f. [amour] [amour, Fr.] a love intrigue; including the secondary idea of something vicious.

AMPELITES, f. Cannel-coal, a solid, dry, opaque, hard fossil, not fusible, but easily inflammable, and burning with a white, vivid, and bright flame, found in many parts of England; it is of a very good black, though not near so deep and shining as jet, and in the thinnest pieces is not the least transparent.

AMPHIBIOUS, a. [ἄμφι and βίος, Gr.] that which can live both upon the earth and in the water, as if either element was natural to it. The beaver, frog, otter, tortoise, sea-calf, crocodile, &c. are of this species.

AMPHIBOLOGY, f. [ἀμφιβολία, Gr.] in Rhetoric, an abuse of language, wherein words are so placed in a sentence, that they will admit of a different sense according to the different manner of combining them; as in the following sentence: Noli regem occidere timere bonam est. Which may either be rendered, "Do not fear to kill the king; it is a good action; or, Do not kill the king; for it is good to fear, or decline it."

AMPHISBÆ'NA, [ἀμφισβῆναι, Gr.] a serpent, supposed to have two heads.

AMPHIS'CI, those people that live between the tropics; so called, because according to the sun's coming up to the two solstices, the shadow changes and falls sometimes on the right, and sometimes on the left hand.

AMPHITHEATRE, f. in Antiquity, a large edifice, either round or oval, with seats or benches rising one above another, upon which the people sat to behold the combats of gladiators or wild beasts, and other sports. They were at first only built of wood, but in the reign of Augustus there was one erected of stone.

A'MPLE, a. [amplus, Lat.] applied to extent, wide or spacious. Applied to bulk, large, great, or big. Applied to permission, or liberties granted, full; without restraint. Applied to gifts, large, liberal. Applied to writings, full, minute, containing all the circumstances.

A'MPLENESS, f. largeness; splendor. To A'MPLIATE, v. a. [amplio, Lat.] to enlarge, extend, to make additions to.

AMPLIATION, f. [ampliatio, Lat.] applied to rumors, increasing their sense by additional circumstances; an exaggeration, or enlargement. Enlargement, or dwelling long upon a subject.

To AMPLIFICATE, v. a. [amplifico, Lat.] to enlarge, to dwell long upon a subject.

AMPLIFICATION, f. [amplificatio, Lat.] enlargement, or increase of dimensions, applied to a body; but generally speaking it is used aid for whatever consists in a heightening of a description, commendation, definition, or the blame of a thing by such an enumeration of particulars as most forcibly affect the passions. Hyperbatical expression.

AMPLIFIER, f. one who enlarges.

To AMPLIFY, v. a. [amplius and fito, Lat.] to increase the dimensions, or number of parts, applied to matter or body. To increase or heighten, applied to quality. To extend, or enlarge, applied to power or dominion. To amplify complex, or increase by additions, applied to writings. To expatiate, to treat fully, to enlarge upon. To represent in a pompous, amplified, and hyperbatical manner.

AMPLITUDE, f. [amplitudo, Lat.] compass or extent. Greatness, or largeness. Capacity, endued with powers sufficient. Amplitude, in Astronomy, is an arch of the horizon, intercepted between the east and west part thereof, and the center of the sun, star, or planet, at its rising or setting; at the rising it is called Orive, and at the setting Ocasive.

AMPLY, ad. largely, liberally; at large; copiously.

AMPTHILL, a market town in Bedfordshire, distant from London 45½ miles. The market is on a Thursday.

To AMPUTATE, v. a. [amputo, Lat.] in Surgery, to cut off a limb.

AMPUTATION, f. [amputatio, Lat.] in Surgery, the cutting off a limb of the body.

AMSDORFIANS, in Church history, a sect of Protestants in the sixteenth century, who took that name from Amisdorf, their leader. They maintained that good works were not only unprofitable, but even opposite and pernicious to salvation.

AMSTERDAM, a large, rich, populous, trading, handsome city of the United Provinces, and capital of all the Dutch Netherlands. It was formerly a lordship belonging to the lords of Amstel; was ruined in 1300, but afterwards rebuilt. The walls are high, and well fortified; and the bridge which joins the rampart is built over the river Amstel, one of the finest pieces of architecture in those parts. Few cities have their public buildings so fine, numerous, and well kept. Here are many handsome churches, and hospitals for persons of all ages, sexes, religions, and countries. One great cause of the populousness of Amsterdam is their tolerating all religions, who have the use of churches and bells; though the reigning religion is the Protestant. The Exchange is one of the principal ornaments of the city, and the harbour is one of the largest and finest in Europe, where a vast number of merchant-ships may always be seen; though there is a bar at its entrance, which is, however, a great security against foreign enemies. The foundation of this town is laid upon piles, driven into a morass, and under the stadthouse there are 13000. The houses are brick and stone, the streets spacious and well-paved, and most of them have canals, with rows of trees on each side. With regard to its magnitude, it is computed to be about half as big as London, and none of the inhabitants are idle. It is governed by a college of 30 senators, who hold their places for life, and 12 burgo-masters, four of whom are always sitting. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Amstel and Wye, 65 miles N. of Antwerp, 175 E. by N. of London, 240 N. of Paris, 330 W. of Copenhagen, 560 N. W. of Vienna, and 870 N. W. of Rome.

A'MULET, f. a charm or preservative usually hung about the neck as a defence against mischief, witchcraft, or as a cure for some disease.

To AMU'SE, [amuse] v. a. [amuser, Fr.] to employ a person's thoughts on some object that may engage them from wandering into any other, including the idea of something trifling. To entertain with something agreeable, which has not force enough to divert; and wants importance to please.

AMUSEMENT, [amusement] f. an employment, in order to avoid the tediousness of inaction. Any thing which engages the mind, or is the object of the senses; an entertainment. The general idea of diversion and amusement is innocent recreation; but that of amusement implies tranquil entertainment, that of diversion, tumultuous merriment; card-playing, concerts, plays, &c. are amusements; cricket, cudgel-playing, horse-races, &c. are diversions.

AMUSER, [amuser] f. one who deludes; or engages the attention of another, by specious or false promises.

AMU'SIVE, a. that which engages the attention to something trifling, specious and delusive.

AMYGDALINE, a. [from amygdala, Lat.] resembling almonds.

AN, article, [ane, Sax.] an indefinite article put before nouns of the singular number, which begin with a vowel, or an b, when not sounded or aspirated, as an eye, an hour; but if aspirated, the b then is looked on as having the power of another consonant, and a is used, as a hand, a hare. Applied to number, it signifies one, in a loose and undetermined sense.

A'NA, f. a term used by Physicians to denote an equal quantity of ingredients to be used in compounding a medicine; and in their recipes is thus abbreviated, a or aa.

ANABAPTISTS, f. [from anà and βαπτίζω, Gr.] a religious sect, whose distinguished tenet is, that persons are not to be baptized before they come to years of discretion, and are able to give an account of the principles of their profession. The first founders of this sect were originally disciples of Martin Luther, whose names were Nicholas Storch, Mark Stubner, and Thomas Munzer: they first broached their principles in 1521. In England, they differ but very little from other Protestant Dissenters, except in rejecting infant baptism: as appears from their confession of faith, published in 1689.

ANACAMPTIC,

ANACA'MPTIC, a. [from ἀνακάμπτω, Gr.] that which is returned; beat back again; reflected. In the plural, Anacamplices is a term applied to that part of Philosophy which treats of the reflection of the rays of light, called likewise Catoptrics.

ANACATHA'R'TIC, a. [from ἀνω and καθάρω, Gr.] in Medicine, that which purges upwards, as a vomit.

ANA'CHORET. See ANCHORITE.

ANA'CHRONISM, f. [from ἀνά and χρόνος, Gr.] in Chronology, the misplacing an action with respect to the time in which it was performed; a mistake in computing the time when an event happened.

ANACLA'STICS, f. the doctrine of refracted light; dioptrics.

ANA'CREONTIC, a. verses in imitation of Anacreon, a famous poet, who flourished in the 6th Olympiad, about 400 years before Christ, wrought in the jovial or bacchanial strain. In English, they consist of seven syllables, and in Latin of three feet and a half.

ANAGOGICAL, a. mysterious, transporting. This word is seldom used, but with regard to the different sense of scripture. The anagogical sense is, when the sacred text is explained with a regard to eternal life, the point which Christians should have in view. Thus the rest of the Sabbath, in an anagogical sense, signifies the repose of everlasting happiness.

A'NAGRAM, f. the transposition of the letters of some name, whereby a new word is formed either to the advantage or disadvantage of the person or thing to which the name belongs.

ANALECTA, or A'NALECT, f. the remains or fragments taken off the table. In Literature, it is used to denote a collection of small pieces, as Essays, Remains, &c. A Miscellany.

ANALECTICKS, a. [ἀναλεπτικά, Gr.] in Physic, medicines proper to restore the body when emaciated either by the long continuance of a disorder, or want of food.

ANALOGICAL, a. applied to words, a term which signifies any particular idea as attributed to several others, not by way of resemblance, but on account of some evident reference to the original idea.

ANALOGICALLY, ad. in a manner wherein there is some resemblance to the thing compared, though it may not hold good with respect to all its properties.

ANA'LOGISM, f. reason. In Logic, an argument drawn from the cause to the effect, and importing an unanswerable necessity.

To ANA'LOGIZE, v. a. to turn into an analogy; to form a resemblance, or run a parallel between things which differ; to interpret a thing as if it had a reference or resemblance to something else.

ANA'LOGOUS, a. that which bears a resemblance to a thing in some particulars; but not in all.

ANA'LOGY, f. [ἀναλογία, Gr.] a reference which one thing bears to another in some of its properties or qualities, though not in all. When we speak to the Divine Being, we are obliged to have recourse to this method of expressing ourselves, because divine matters are not the object of our senses, and cannot be conceived any other ways than by their similitude, proportion, or connection with sensible things; so that analogy means a resemblance in kind or sort, but a difference with respect to manner. Among Geometricians, it denotes a similitude of ratios. In Medicine, it is the similitude observable among several diseases, which, accordingly, are treated in nearly the same manner. By Grammarians, it is used to signify the agreement of several words in one common mode; as love, loud, bate, bated. In Rhetoric, it is a figure of speech, otherwise called comparison.

ANALYSIS, f. [ἀνάλυσις, Gr.] a separation of a compound body into several parts. Among Logicians, it is a method of tracing things backward to their source, and resolving knowledge into its original principles. With Mathematicians, it is the art of discovering the truth or falshood of a proposition; or its possibility or impossibility; by supposing the proposition, as it stands, to be true; and examining what follows from thence, until we arrive at some evident truth, or some impossibility, of which the first proposition is a necessary consequence; and from thence establish the truth or impossibility of that proposition. In Chemistry, it is the reduction of a mixed body into its principles; which is done principally by fire. The ancient Chemists admitted only three principles or elements, salt, sulphur, and mercury; to which the moderns have added water and earth; into these all bodies are resolvable by a chemical analysis, though no operation, no human art, can exhibit them pure and elementary. In Anatomy, it is the dissection of an animal. In Grammar, it is the explaining the etymology, construction, and other properties of words. In Rhetoric, it is the stripping an oration of all its flowery dress of tropes and figures; or, shewing what use the orator has made of them, to embellish and set off every thing to the best advantage.

ANALY'TIC, a. [ἀναλύτικός, Gr.] the resolving a thing into its primary, elemental or constituent parts; the reducing a book into the several topics which it treats of.

ANALY'TIC, a. that which pretends to resolve things into their first principles.

ANALY'TICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to separate a thing into the parts of which it is composed, to resolve a subject into its first principles.

To ANALY'ZE, v. a. [ἀναλύω, Gr.] in Chemistry, to resolve a compound into its first principles. To investigate or trace a thing to its first principles or motives.

ANALY'ZER, f. that which can reduce a thing into its first principles.

ANAMORPHO'SIS, f. [from ἀνά and μορφή, Gr.] in Perspective, the describing a figure, figure, which in one point of view shall appear to be deformed, and monstrously misshapen, but is another regular, and in due proportion; or a delineation of an object which shall appear monstrous to the naked eye, but when viewed in a cylindrical mirror, shall appear regular and harmonious: there are several pieces of this kind in the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford.

ANA'NAS, f. in Botany, the pine-apple, so called from its resemblance to the cones of pines.

ANAPLEROTIC, f. [from ἀναπληρωτός, Gr.] in Medicine, that which incarns, or fills up any wound with flesh.

ANARCH, [ἀναρχή] f. [α and ἀρχος, Gr.] one who is the author or promoter of confusion, or sedition; a rebel.

ANARCHICAL, [ἀναρχικαί] a. that which is not subject to rule, laws, or government; rebellious; or seditious.

ANARCHY, [ἀναρχία] f. [ἀναρχία, Gr.] a state wherein there is not, or no one will acknowledge, a supreme magistrate; a state wherein people are without the enforcement of laws, and will not submit to them; rebellion; sedition; and confusion.

ANASARCA, f. [from ἀνά and σαγή, Gr.] in Physic, a kind of universal dropsy, wherein the skin appears bloated, and yields to the impression like dough.

ANASTOMOSIS, f. from ἀνά and κόμμα, Gr.] in Anatomy, the inoculation, or opening of two vessels into each other.

ANATHEMA, f. [ἀνάθεμα, Gr.] among the Jews signified, First, something dedicated to the service of the Deity; Secondly, something devoted to destruction; Thirdly, a person who was the object of universal aversion; and Fourthly, One who, on account of some offence, was denied the privileges of society, and banished from the synagogue.

ANATHEMATICALLY, ad. in the manner of an anathema, or sentence of excommunication.

To ANATHEMATIZE, v. a. to pronounce the sentence of excommunication against any person.

ANATOMICAL, a. that which is used in anatomy to separate the parts of an animal or substance to be dissected. That which is discovered by anatomy, or in the dissection of a body. That which is separated, applied to the small and constituent particles of a body.

ANATOMIST, f. [anatomiste, Fr.] one who dissects the body of human creatures, brutes, or plants; dividing every one of the parts from each other; enquiring into their several uses and properties; their various affections; the wonder of their structure, &c.

To ANATOMIZE, v. a. [ἀνατομίζω, Gr.] to dissect, or separate, by means of instruments, every part of the body; to discover all the properties of a truth or thing; to lay open the secret motives, affections, or dispositions of a person's mind.

ANATOMY, f. [ἀνατομία, Gr.] the dissecting, or separating the parts of a human or vegetable body, in order to discover its structure, and the different uses of its several parts.

A'NCESTOR, f. [ancestre, Fr.] the person from whom one is descended by birth. It is distinguished from predecessor, because that is used to signify those whom we succeed in dignity and office; but ancestor those whom we follow by natural descent, and as men, whether by father or mother's side.

A'NCESTRAL, a. in Law, that which may be claimed in right of our ancestors, or that which has been done by them, A'NCESTRY, f. such persons of a family from whom a person is descended; family, lineage; progenitors; pedigree, descent, or birth.

A'NCHOR, [ἀγκυρά] f. [ancora, Lat.] an instrument formed of a strong piece of iron, with a double hook or two bars at one end, and a ring to hold a cable with in the other, used to keep ships or other vessels from driving with the wind, tide, or currents. It is used with the following verbs, to drop, or cast, which imply the letting down; and to weigh, which signifies the pulling up of the anchor. There are several kinds of anchors, 1. The sheet-anchor, which is the largest, and never used but in violent storms. 2. The two bow-ers, used in a harbour. 3. The stream-anchor. 4. The grapnel. In Heraldry, it is the emblem of Hope, and taken for such in a spiritual as well as temporal sense.

To A'NCHOR, [ἀγκυρά] v. n. to be secured from danger; to be kept from driving by means of an anchor. Figuratively, to fasten; to stop.

A'NCHORAGE, [ἀγκυρά] f. the effect which an anchor has, so as to hold or keep a ship from driving; the anchors themselves, or the duty paid for anchoring in a port.

A'NCHORET, or A'NCHORITE, f. [ἀγκυροῦ or ἀγκυριτε] one who goes into deserts and unfrequented places, in order to practise the greatest austerities, and put himself out of the reach of temptation.

ANCHO'VY, f. [anchova, Span.] a small fish, much used for sauce, fished for on the coast of Provence, generally in the night-time, with a light at the stern of the vessel.

A'NCIENT, or A'NTIENT, f. the flag or streamer of a ship, or the bearer of a flag. Also, old men, who have served the several offices of their parish, and are casually called upon to give their opinions on public occasions. Also those that lived in old times. Among the Lawyers in the Temple, such as are passed their reading are called Ancients; and in Gray's Inn, it is one of the four classes that compose the society, which consists of Ancients, barristers, benchers, and students.

A'NCIENT, a. [ancien, Fr.] that which has endured for some time; that which has been formerly, or some time ago; opposed to modern; but not to new. Applied to life, or the duration of things.

A'NCIENTLY, ad.

A'NCIENTLY, ad. in former times, in times long past, or before the present instant.

A'NCIENTRY, f. a pedigree which can be traced a great many years backwards; or a family which has been noted for a long course of years.

AND, conjunct. [and, Sax.] a particle, by which sentences are joined together, signifying that what was affirmed or denied of the sentence before it, holds good, or may be affirmed likewise of that which comes after it.

ANDA'NTE, f. a Musical term, signifying that every note must be played very distinctly, especially in thorough basses.

A'NDES, otherwise called CORDILLERA, a great chain of mountains, which run almost the whole length of South America, parallel to the sea-shore, and terminating at the Straits of Magellan. They are the highest and most remarkable mountains in the world; for those within the Torrid Zone are always covered with snow; and in passing over the lowest part of them, you are in danger of being starved with cold. There are a great many volcanoes, which break out sometimes in one place and sometimes in another; and by melting the snow, occasion such a torrent of water, that numbers of men and cattle have perished.

AND'RONS, [andhorns] f. irons placed at each end of a grate, in which a spit turns; or irons on which wood is laid to burn instead of a grate.

A'NDOVER, a market town in Hampshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is a large town, sends two members to parliament, and is a great thoroughfare on the western road, and 65 miles W. by S. of London.

A'NDREWS, St. a town in Scotland, in the county of Fife, with an university; formerly the metropolis of Scotland, and the see of an archbishop, but the cathedral church is now in ruins. It is seated in a plain, which has a prospect of the German Ocean. The University consists of three colleges, the Old College, St. Leonard's, and the New College. The houses, though built of stone, are gone to decay, there being no manufactures here to support the numerous inhabitants; nor is the harbour in a very good condition, though there passed an act of parliament in 1728 to repair it. It is 30 miles N. E. of Edinburgh, and 46 E. N. E. of Stirling.

ANDRO'GYNOUS, a. an epithet given to those animals or persons which have the distinction of both sexes in the same individual.

A'NECDOTE, f. [ἀνέκδοτον, Gr.] an article relating to a secret transaction of a person's life, whether it be that of a prince or a private person; a piece of secret history.

ANEMO'GRAPHY, f. [ἀνεμος and γράφω, Gr.] a description of the winds.

ANEMO'METER, f. [ἀνεμος and μέτρον, Gr.] a machine or instrument, to measure the force of the wind.

ANEMOSCOPE, f. [ἀνεμος and σκόπος, Gr.] an instrument or machine which foretels the changes of the wind.

ANENT, prep. a Scotch word, signifying about, concerning; over-against, opposite to.

ANES, f. the beads or spires of corn.

A'NEURISM, f. [from ἀνευρίσις, Gr.] in Surgery, a tumour or swelling caused by the weakness of an artery; or by blood extravasated and spread under the flesh by a wound, or a rupture of an artery.

ANE'W, ad. [newe, Sax.] again; over again; once more.

ANFRACTUO'SITY, or ANFRACTUOUSNESS, f. the quality of winding and turning like a maze, or labyrinth. Seldom used.

ANGEL, f. [ἄγγελος, Gr.] a name given to those spiritual beings who are employed by God in the government of the world. The word signifies a messenger. We read of evil angels, the ministers of God's wrath; as the destroying angel, the angel of death, the angel of Satan, the angel of the bottomless pit. Angel is likewise the name of an ancient gold coin in England, having the figure of an angel engraved on it, of the value of 10s. Figuratively, a person of exquisite beauty, and superior to the common run of mortals.

ANGELIC, a. something resembling, belonging to, or partaking of, the nature of angels.

ANGELICA, f. a plant of great esteem among Physicians, being reputed stomachic, cordial, alexipharmic, and of great use in pestilential fevers and contagious distempers; but now chiefly regarded as a carminative.

ANGELICAL, a. that which resembles angels; or which belongs to, or partakes of the property or nature of angels.

ANGER, f. [anger, Sax.] a desire of thwarting the happiness of another, on account of an injury received. The word anger implies a passion more internal and lasting; whereas the expression in a passion carries in its idea a sudden external guilt of anger, short but violent.

To ANGER, v. a. to injure or offend a person, so as to provoke him to resentment, or to desire to thwart one's happiness.

ANGERLY, ad. in the manner of, or like, a person who resents an injury.

ANGI'NA, f. a disease or swelling in the throat, called the quinsey.

ANGIO'GRAPHY, f. [ἀγγεῖον and γράφω, Gr.] a description of the vessels or tubes of the human body.

ANGIO'LOGY, f. [ἀγγεῖον and λογία, Gr.] a treatise or discourse of the vessels of the human body.

ANGLE, f. [angulus, Lat.] in Geometry, the meeting of two lines which incline to each other, and meet in a point.

ANGLE, f. [angel, Sax.] an instrument to catch fish with, consisting of a line, hook, and rod.

To ANGLE, v. a. to fish with a hook, line, and rod. Figuratively, to entice by some allurements or artifice.

ANGLE.

ANGLE-ROD, f. the rod to which the line and hook are fastened in angling.

ANGLER, f. he that fishes with a rod, hook, and line.

ANGLES, f. the nation from whence our island and people are named, who are supposed to have come from a city formerly called Angel, in the kingdom of Denmark; in Latin they were called Genus Anglorum, the nation of the Angles; and in their own language, Engla.

ANGLESEA, or ANGLESEY, the isle of, is the most western county of North Wales. It is 24 miles in length, 14 in breadth, and sends one member to parliament. It is separated from the continent by the river Menai, which divides it from Carnarvonshire, and on every other side surrounded by the sea. It is a fertile spot, and abounds in corn, cattle, fish, fowl, and fowls, with very good mill-stones and grind-stones. The chief town is Beaumaris, which is 24½ miles distant from London.

ANGLICISM, f. [from Anglus, Lat.] a method of expressing peculiar to the English language.

ANGLING, verbal noun, the diversion of fishing by a rod, line, and hook, armed with a bait.

ANGRILY, ad. in a manner which betrays resentment on account of some injury.

ANGRY, a. desirous of revenge, on account of some affront; highly displeased.

ANGUIISH, f. [angoisse, Fr.] excessive pain, applied to the body. Immoderate, or the highest degree of sorrow, anxiety and torture, applied to the mind.

ANGUIISHED, a. to be affected with the profoundest anxiety, torture and sorrow, on account of some calamity.

ANGULAR, a. [from angulus, Lat.] that which has corners or angles.

ANGULARITY, f. the quality of having angles or corners.

ANGULARLY, ad. with angles and corners, like an angle.

ANGULATED, a. [from angulus, Lat.] that which has angles or corners.

ANGULOUS, a. [from angulus, Lat.] that which has corners or angles.

ANGUS, a shire of Scotland, having Meras on the N. the German Ocean on the E. the Frith of Tay, which divides it from the shire of Fife, on the S. and the shires of Perth and Cowry on the W. It has many lakes and hills, but is fruitful in corn and pastures.

ANHELATION, f. [from anelo,] a shortness of breath, or quickness of breathing, occasioned by running, or going up any high and steep place.

ANIGHTS, ad. in the night-time, or every night.

ANILITY, f. [anilitas, Lat.] old age, considered as it respects a woman.

ANIMADVERSION, f. [animadversio, Lat.] a taking notice of a fault with some degree of anger, severity, or dispatch.

ANIMADVERSIVE, a. [from animadversio, Lat.] that which has power to make the mind attend to, or consider any particular object; that which has the power of judging.

To ANIMADVERT, v. n. [animadverte, Lat.] to censure, to blame, including the secondary idea of defect in the person animadverted on, together with authority, displeasure, and severity in the animadverter.

ANIMADVERTER, f. he who inflicts punishment, or passes censure on crimes.

ANIMAL, f. [animal, Lat.] a being, consisting of a body and a soul; distinguished from pure spirit, with respect to its corporeal part, and from mere matter by its spiritual. Animal secretion, is the act whereby the juices of the body are separated and secreted from the common mass of the blood by means of the glands. Animal spirits, are a fine subtle juice, supposed to be the great instrument of muscular motion and sensation. Animal System, denotes and includes the whole class of beings endowed with animal life; or, in general an animal kingdom.

ANIMALCULE, f. [animalcula, Lat.] an animal so small as to be invisible to the naked eye. Animalcules are seen only by the assistance of the microscope, and are vastly more numerous than any other part of the creation; but the species, on examination, are found to be extremely few. The most obvious distinction among them is, that some have, and some have not tails; that some have, and others have not any visible limbs. Animalcules are discovered by microscopes in most liquors, as water, wine, vinegar, &c. in several chalybeate waters, in oats, barley, &c.

ANIMALITY, f. [from animal, Lat.] the state of existence.

To ANIMATE, v. a. [animare, Lat.] to give life to; to quicken; to join, or unite, a soul to a body. Figuratively, applied to musical instruments, to enliven, to make vocal, to inspire with the power of harmony; to communicate boldness to; to encourage, or excite.

ANIMATE, a. [animatus, Lat.] that which is endowed with a soul; that which has life, or the properties of an animal.

ANIMATED, part. that which has a great deal of life; vigorous; spirited.

ANIMATION, f. the act of bringing into existence, or enduing with life both vegetable and animal. The state wherein the soul and body are united.

ANIMATIVE, a. that which has the power of communicating a soul or principle of life; that which has the power of enlivening, encouraging, or making vigorous.

ANIMATOR, f. that which enlivens, or confers the principle of life.

ANIMOSE, a. [animosus, Lat.] full of spirit; violent; courageous; vehement.

ANIMOSITY, f. [animositas, Lat.] a disposition of mind wherein a person is inclined to hinder the success, thwart the happiness, or disturb the tranquillity of another; it includes in in it a degree of enmity, and is opposite to friendship or benevolence.

A'NISE, f. is a small seed, of a hot nature, good to expel wind out of the bowels and stomach, and is used by confectioners in sugar-plums, &c. By distillation there is extracted from it an oil, which, as well as that expressed from it when bruised, answers all the purposes of the seed itself; and during the distillation there comes off a water called anised water, a well-known cordial and carminative.

A'NKLE, f. [ancleow, Sax.] the joint which unites the leg to the foot. Ankle-bone, the protuberant bone at the ankle.

A'NNAND, the capital, and a parliament town of the shire of Annandale, in Scotland. It stands in a fertile country, about three miles N. of Solway Frith, and 70 S. of Edinburgh.

A'NNALIST, f. one who writes or composes annals.

A'NNALS, f. [it has no singular, annales, Lat.] a narrative wherein the transactions are digested into periods, consisting each of one year; or relations which contain the public occurrences of a single year.

A'NNATES, f. [annates, Lat. it has no singular] first fruits; or a year's income of a spiritual living. In ancient times they were given to the pope throughout all Christendom, on the decease of a bishop, abbot, or parish clerk, and paid by his successor. In England the pope claimed them first of such foreigners as he conferred benches upon, by way of provision; but afterwards they were demanded of all other clerks, on their admission to benefices. At the Reformation they were taken from the pope, and vested in the king; and lastly, queen Anne restored them to the church, for the augmentation of poor livings.

ANNE, queen of Great Britain. This amiable and illustrious princess was descended from a race of kings, the most ancient of any in Europe. She was second daughter of James duke of York, afterwards king James II. by Mrs. Anne Hyde, eldest daughter of Edward Earl of Clarendon. The duke was privately married to this lady during his first exile, in 1659. In 1660, she was, by an order of council, declared duchess of York, and to have the precedency of the princess of Orange and the queen of Bohemia. The duchess died at the palace of St. James's, March 15, 1671; she had issue by the duke 4 sons and 4 daughters; Charles, born Oct. 22, 1660; Mary, born Ap. 30, 1662; James, born July 12, 1663; Anne, born Feb. 6, 1664; Charles, born July 4, 1665; Edgar, born Sept. 14, 1667; Henrietta, born Jan. 13, 1669; and Katherine, born Feb. 9, 1670: of whom Charles, James, Charles, and Henrietta died in her life time; and Edgar and Katherine did not survive her a year; but Mary and Anne lived to be queens of England. Princess Mary was about 9 years old, and princess Anne about 7, at the death of their mother. On the death of king Will. III, who died on Sunday, March 8, 1702, about 8 in the morning, princess Anne was, about 3 the same afternoon, proclaimed queen of Great Britain, France and Ireland, in the cities of London, Westminister, and was crowned April 23 following. The most remarkable events in her reign were, War declared against France and Spain, May 4, 1702.—Prince George made lord high admiral.—The earl, afterwards duke of Marlborough, generalissimo.—An unsuccessful attempt on Cadiz—Vigo taken by the English and Dutch, Oct. 12, 1702.—Admiral Bembow betrayed.—The great storm, Nov. 1703.—Order of the Thistle revived.—Victory at Schellenburgh.—The great battle at Hochstet or Blenheim, wherein the French lost 30,000 men, had 10,000 men taken prisoners, and marshal Tallard their general, Aug. 1704.—The sea-fight off Malaga, in the same year, Aug. 13.—The battle of Ramilies, May 12; the union between England and Scotland, signed July 22; and the battle of Turin, all in 1706.—The battle of Almanza, April 14, 1707.—Sir Cloudesly Shovel wrecked on the rocks of Scilly.—The battle of Oudenard, June 30; Minorca taken by general Stanhope, Sept. 18: the action of Wynnendale, Sept. 28: the city of Lisle taken, Oct. 12, 1708.—The battle of Malplaquet, Sept. 11, 1709.—Dr. Sacheverell sentenced, March 2: queen Anne changes her ministry, Aug. 8: the battle of Saragossa, Aug. 9: general Stanhope taken prisoner at Brihuega, Nov. 26; and the battle of Villa Viciosa, Nov. 29, 1710.—The duke of Ormond separates the British forces from the Allies, July 5; and the action of Denain, July 13, 1712.—The peace of Utrecht signed March 30, 1713.—Sunday, at a little after 7 o'clock in the morning, Aug. 1, 1714, the queen died, having lived 49 years 5 months and 6 days, and reigned 12 years and 5 months wanting 7 days. There had been a new vault made on the S. side and towards the E. end of Henry VIII's chapel, to deposit the body of king Charles the II. in which that prince, queen Mary, king William III. and prince George of Denmark were laid. Here the remains of queen Anne were likewise deposited; and there being no more room left, the vault is closed with brick work. She had been married to his royal highness prince George, brother to the then king of Denmark, July 28, 1683, by whom she had a daughter still-born, May 12, 1684; lady Mary, born June 2, 1685, died Feb. 1690; lady Anne Sophia, born May 12, 1686, died Feb. following; William duke of Gloucester, born July 24, 1689, and lived till 11 years of age; Mary, born Oct. 1690, and lived long enough to be baptized; and George who died soon after he was born. Prince George her husband, died Oct. 28, 1710. This princess was the glory and happiness of her people, and famous for her piety and unlimited charity.

To ANNEAL, [annell v. a. [aneln, Sax.] to heat glass so as to make it retain the colours laid on it. To heat glass after it is blown, to prevent its breaking; to heat any thing so as to give it answer.

To ANNEX, v. a. [annexo, Lat.] to join, or to join as a supplement; to connect, to unite with. To belong to, to join as a property.

ANNEXION, f. the adding of something as an endorsement, supplement, or aid.

ANNEXMENT, f. something which is joined to another.

To ANNIHILATE, v. a. [annihilo, Lat.] to reduce to nothing; to deprive of existence. To put an end to; to extinguish; to destroy utterly.

ANNIHILATION, f. the act by which the very existence of a thing is entirely destroyed.

ANNIVERSARY, f. [anniversarius, Lat.] the return of any remarkable day in the calendar. Some public rejoicing performed in honor of the anniversary day.

ANNIVERSARY, a. [anniversarius, Lat.] that which falls but once in the regular course of every year; annual, or yearly.

ANNO DOMINI, [Lat.] expressed by abbreviation, A. D. 1791, i. e. in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one.

ANNOTATION, f. [annotatio, Lat.] explanations of the difficult passages of an author, written by way of notes.

ANNOTATOR, f. [Lat.] a person who explains the difficult passages of an author; a commentator.

To ANNOUNCE, v. a. [annuncer, Fr.] to proclaim; to reveal publicly. To pronounce; to sentence.

To ANNOY, v. a. [annoyer, Fr.] to disturb; to vex; to make a person uneasy.

ANNOY, f. an attack. Trouble, misfortune, or anxiety which is productive of anxiety.

ANNOYANCE, f. that which occasions any trouble, inconvenience, dislike, injury, or hurt; the state wherein a person is affected with the sight, hearing, feeling, &c. of a disagreeable object.

ANNOYER, f. the person who causes any annoyance, dislike, trouble, or loathing.

ANNUAL, a. [annuel, Fr.] every year, or yearly. For the whole duration of a year; that which endures only one year.

ANNUALLY, ad. every year, yearly.

ANNUITANT, f. [from annuus, Lat.] he that pays or receives an annuity.

ANNUITY, f. [annuité, Fr.] a yearly return paid every year during a person's life, or some term of years; a yearly allowance.

To ANNULL, v. a. [from nullus, Lat.] applied to laws, to deprive them of their force; to abrogate; to abolish. Made imperceptible, or as if deprived of their existence, was annihilated.

ANNULAR, v. [annulus, Lat.] round, circular, having the form of a ring; also an appellation in Anatomy, given to several parts of the body; thus the annular is the second cartilage of the larynx, or throat; the annular process, that which encompasses the wrist, and binds the bones of the arm together; annular process, or protuberance, a part of the medulla oblongata. The fourth or ring finger is likewise called annular.

ANNULARY, a. [from annulus, Lat.] in the form of rings.

ANNULET, f. [annulus, Lat.] a small ring. In Heraldry, used for a mark that the person is the fifth brother. Sometimes indeed a part of the coat of several families, reputed a mark of dignity. In Architecture, the small square member in the Doric capital, under the quarter round; likewise a flat moulding common to the other parts of the column, which derives its name from its surrounding the column.

ANNU'LLING, part. noun. the revoking, abolishing, or repealing of an act, &c.

To ANNU'MERATE, v. a. [annumerer, Lat.] to reckon or count a person or thing into a list, or part of a number.

ANNUMERATION, f. something added to a number.

To ANNU'NCIATE, v. a. [annunciatio, Lat.] to bring tidings; to declare something unknown before.

ANNUNCIATION, f. the tidings brought by the angel Gabriel to the Virgin Mary of the incarnation of Jesus Christ; in memory of which a festival has been instituted by the church, and solemnized the 25th of March.

ANODYNE, f. [an and odyne, Gr.] a remedy which abates the force of pain, and renders it more tolerable.

To ANOINT, v. a. [oindre, Fr.] to rub with some fat, or greasy preparation. To consecrate by unction.

ANOINTER, f. the person who anoints.

ANOMALISTICAL, a. irregular. Anomalistical year, in Astronomy, the space of time wherein the earth passes through her orbit, and differing from the common year, on account of the precession of the equinoxes.

ANOMALOUS, a. [an and ἀμαλός, Gr.] in Grammar, such words as are not consistent with the rules of declining, &c. In Astronomy, that which seemingly deviates from its regular motion.

ANOMALOUSLY, ad. in a manner not consistent with established laws or rules; in an irregular, uncommon, or extraordinary manner.

ANOMALY, f. [anomalie, Fr.] a deviation from the established rules and laws, whether those of nature, societies, or particular branches of science. In Astronomy, applied to a planet, is that whereby it differs from the aphe- lion or apogee.

ANOMOE'ANS, in Church History, ancient heretics, who held, that the Son was of a different nature from, and in no sort like that of, the Father. This was the name by which the Pure Arians were distinguished, in contradistinction to the Semi-Arians, who acknowledged a likeness of nature in the Son, at the same time that they denied, with the Pure Arians, the consubstantiality of the Word. The Semi-Arians condemned the Anomoeans; gersans in the council of Seleucia; and the Anomæans, in their turn, condemned the Semi-Arians in the council of Constantinople.

ANO'N, ad. soon after any time expressed; quickly. When applied to vicissitude, revolution, or change of action, it signifies then, afterwards, or sometimes.

ANONYMOUS, a. [α and ὄνομα, Gr.] that which has not yet received a name. Applied to books or publications, that which is without a name, or that which has not the author's name.

ANONYMOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to be without a name.

ANOREXY, f. among Physicians, a loathing of food, or want of appetite, proceeding from indigestion.

ANOTHER, pron. applied to things, something not like that which is mentioned; different. Applied to number, or succession, one more; an addition; besides. Applied to identity, not the same. Joined with one, it implies a thing mutually performed; something reciprocal.

To ANSWER, [in pron. the w is dropped] v. a. [andswarian, Sax.] to speak in return to a question. To reply to an objection; to obviate or give a solution; to assign reasons; to be accountable for, or satisfy any claim or debt; to pay; to bear a proportion; to be proportionate to. To vindicate; or be received as a witness, testimony, or voucher in a person's behalf.

ANSWER, f. [answare, Sax.] an information, or reply to a question; a solution of any difficulty, or objection.

ANSWERABLE, a. that which will admit of a reply.

ANSWERABLY, ad. in proportion; in a manner which corresponds with, or is suitable to.

ANSWERER, f. one who gives such information as a question requires; he that solves, obviates, or clears up the objections of an adversary. He who writes against another in any controversy.

ANT, f. [anett, Sax.] small insects, remarkable for their industry, tenderness and economy.

ANTAGONIST, f. [ἀντι and ἀγωνίζω, Gr.] applied to persons as such, one who contends with another. Applied to writers, one who opposes the opinions or sentiments of another; an opposite.

To ANTAGONIZE, v. a. [ἀντι and ἀγωνίζω, Gr.] to strive, or contend against another.

ANTALGIC, a. in Medicine, that which softens or mitigates pain.

ANTAPHRODITIC, a. in Pharmacy, efficacious against the venereal disease.

ANTAPOPLECTIC, a. in Pharmacy, remedies for the apoplexy.

ANTARCTIC, a. [ἀντι and ἀρκτος, Gr.] that which is opposite to the arctic, applied in Astronomy, to the southern pole and circle. The antarctic pole, in Astronomy, is the south pole, or that part of the heavens to which the south end of the earth's axis points. The antarctic circle is one of the lesser circles of the sphere, parallel to the equator, and 23 deg. 30 min. distant from the south pole. The antarctic pole, in Geography, is the southern extremity of the earth's axis.

A'NTE, [Lat.] a particle signifying before, and frequently used in composition; as, antediluvian, that which existed before the Flood; ante-chamber, a room which must be passed through before you can enter into a chamber; or a room which leads to a chamber.

To ANTECE'DE, v. n. [antece, Lat.] to have a prior existence; to precede, or go before.

ANTECE'DENCE, f. priority of existence; existence before some period or being.

ANTECE'DENT, a. [antece, Lat.] prior; before; or existing before. Used substantively, it implies the thing which is prior in time, or which must have gone before. "It is indeed the necessary antecedent." South. In Grammar, the noun which, in the order of construction, goes before a relative; as, "Christ who redeemed us." The word Christ is the antecedent which goes before the relative who. In Logic, the first part, or proposition, of an enthymeme, or syllogism, consisting of two propositions only; as "Christ is risen from the dead; therefore we are redeemed;" the words in Italic are the antecedent.

ANTECE'SSOR, f. [Lat.] one who precedes, or is before another in the order of time.

ANTECHAMBER, f. [written generally but improperly, anticchamber] a chamber which leads to a state room, or chief apartment.

To ANTEDATE, v. a. [ante and da, datum, Lat.] to place too early, or before its real period. To enjoy a thing in imagination before it exists.

ANTEDILUVIAN, a. [from ante and diluvium, Lat.] that which existed, or had a being before the flood. Used substantively for the persons who lived before the flood.

A'NTELOPE, f. [ἀντι and λέπος, Gr.] in Natural History, a kind of goat with curled or wreathed horns.

ANTEMERIDIAN, a. [ante and meridies, Lat.] before noon.

ANTEMUNDANE, a. that which was before the creation of the world.

ANTEPENU'LT, or ANTEPENU'LTI-MA, f. [Lat.] in Grammar, the last syllable but two of a word; as the syllable mal in the word antepenultima.

ANTE'RIOR, or ANTE'RIOUR, a. [Lat.] that which is before another with regard to time or place.

ANTERIO'RITY, f. [from anterior, Lat.] the state of being before another, with respect to time or place.

A'NTES, f. large pillars that support the front of a building; also a term used by gardeners for the foremost or lowest ranks of vines.

ANTHELMINTHIC, a. [ἀντι and ἕλμινθος, Gr.] in Medicine, that which kills worms; a vermifuge.

A'NTHEM, f. [ἀνθιμος, Gr.] a hymn performed ferred in two parts, by the opposite members of a choir. Socrates says, Ignatius was the inventor of it among the Greeks, and St. Ambrose among the Latins.

ANTHOLOGY, f. a treatise of flowers; a collection of the most beautiful passages of one or more authors; whence the collection of Greek epigrams is titled Anthologia.

St. ANTHONY'S FIRE, f. a kind of erysipelas; which see.

ANTHRAX, f. [Gr.] a burning coal; a carbuncle, encompassed with fiery, sharp, and painful swellings.

ANTHROPOLOGY, f. [from ἄνθρωπος and λογος, Gr.] a discourse or treatise upon men, or human nature, considered as in a state of health, including the consideration both of the body and soul, with the laws of their motion.

ANTHROPOMANCY, f. [from ἄνθρωπος and μαντεία, Gr.] a species of divination, from inspecting the entrails and viscera of a human body.

ANTHROPOMORPHITES, a sect of ancient heretics, who taking every thing spoken of God in the Scripture, in a literal sense, particularly that passage in Genesis, God made man after his own image, maintained that God had a human shape. They are likewise called Anthropoi, from ἄνθρωπος their leader.

ANTHROPOMORPHOUS, a. an appellation given to whatever resembles the human form; thus the mandrakes, among the plants; the monkeys, among animals, &c.

ANTHROPOPHAGI, f. [never used in the singular] savages who eat human flesh.

ANTHROPOPHAGIANIAN, a. like one of the Anthropophagi; in a terrifying, terrible, or savage manner.

ANTHROPOSCOPY, f. that part of physiology which judges of a man's character, temper, humour, &c. from his complexion, the lineaments of his face, features, &c.

ANTHYPNOTICS, f. Medicines given to prevent sleeping.

ANTI, [Gr.] a particle, which in compositions signifies contrary or opposite; and in works of literature, is prefixed to the answers wrote in opposition to an author; as Anti-Cato, the name of the answers Julius Cæsar wrote to the objections made against him by Cato.

ANTIACID, a. that which is of a nature contrary to acid; an alkali.

ANTIARTHRITICS, f. remedies against the gout.

ANTIC, f. [antiquat, Lat.] one who plays tricks, and makes use of odd and uncommon phrases; Merry Andrew; a buffoon.

ANTICAMBER, f. See ANTR-CHAMBER.

ANTICHRIST, a name given by way of contempt by St. Paul to the man of sin, and son of perdition, who is to precede the second coming of our Saviour, and who is represented in the scripture, and in the Fathers, as the epitome of every thing that is most impious, cruel and abominable. His reign is supposed to continue three years and a half, during which time there will be a terrible persecution.

ANTICHRISTIAN, a. contrary, or opposite to Christianity.

ANTICHRISTIANISM, f. any doctrine, or opinion, contrary to Christianity.

ANTICHRONISM, f. [ἄντι and χρόνος, Gr.] contrary to the right order of time.

ANTIICIPATE, v. a. [anticipo, Lat.] to be beforehand with another in taking, so as to disappoint him that comes after. To do or enjoy a thing before its fixed period.

ANTICIPATION, f. the dating a thing earlier than its due period. The enjoyment of a thing in imagination, before its real existence; a foretaste.

ANTICLI'MAX, f. a sentence, in which the last part is lower than the first.

ANTICKLY, ad. in the manner of an antic or buffoon; with odd gesticulations and grimaces.

ANTICONVULSIVE, a. in Physic, medicines against convulsions.

ANTICOR, f. among Farriers, is an inflammation in a horse's throat, the same as quinsy with us.

ANTICOURTIER, f. one who opposes the measures of the court.

ANTIDOTAL, a. that which has the quality of preventing the effects of any contagion or poison.

ANTIDOTE, f. [ἀντιδοτω, Gr.] a medicine given to expel poison, or prevent its effects, and to guard from contagion.

ANTIEPILEPTIC, a. [from ἀντι and ἐπιληψία, Gr.] in Medicine, remedies against convulsions.

ANTI'LLES, f. [properly Antilles, from their smallness] a small cluster of islands in the West Indies, extending from 18 to 24 degrees N. Lat. and are distinguished into Windward and Leeward Islands.

ANTILOGARITHM, f. the complement of a logarithm, or its difference from one of 90 degrees.

ANTI'LOGY f. [ἀντι and λογος, Gr.] contradiction in its primary sense, applied to those passages of an author, wherein there seems to be, or really is, a manifest contradiction.

ANTI-MONARCHICAL, a. [ἀντι and μοναρχία, Gr.] that which is contrary to monarchy, or that species of government wherein the chief rule is invested in a single person.

ANTIMONIAL, a. that which consists of, or has the qualities of antimony.

ANTIMONY, f. is a mineral substance of a metalline nature. Mines of all metals afford it. Its texture is full of little shining veins or threads, like needles; brittle as glass. It destroys and dissipates all metals fused with it, except gold. In Physic, its uses are so various, that, according to its preparation, Mr. Boyle says, That alone, or in company with one or two associates is sufficient to furnish an Apothecary's shop, answering the Physician's desire, whether he wants cathartics, emetics, diuretics, &c. Anciently it was used as a paint to blacken men's and women's eyes, and in the eastern countries it is used for that purpose to this day.

ANTINEPHRITICS, f. Medicines for diseases in the reins and kidneys.

ANTINO'MIANS, in Church History, certain Heretics who first appeared about the year 1535, and so called because they rejected the law, as of no use under the gospel dispensation; that good works do not further, nor evil works hinder salvation; that the child of God cannot sin; that murder, adultery, drunkenness, &c. are sins in the wicked, but not in them; and therefore Abraham's lying and dissembling was no sin; that the child of grace being once assured of salvation, never doubteth afterwards; that no man should be troubled in conscience for sin; that no Christian should be exhorted to perform the duties of a Christian; that an Hypocrite may have all the graces which were in Adam before his fall; that Christ is the object of all grace; that no Christian believeth or worketh any good, but Christ only believeth and worketh; that God does not love any man for his holiness; that sanctification is no evidence of justification.

ANTINOMY, f. [ἀντι and νόμος, Gr.] a contradiction between two laws, or two articles or parts of the same law.

ANTIPARALY'TIC, a. [ἀντι and παραλύω, Gr.] in Medicine, remedies for the palsy.

ANTI'PATHY, f. [ἀντι and πάθος, Gr.] a natural aversion to any particular object; which operates so strongly, as neither to be controuled by the will nor reason.

ANTIPERISTASIS, f. [ἀντι and ἐπιπέταμα, Gr.] in Philosophy, the action of two contrary qualities, whereby the force of the one is increased by the opposition of the other. This doctrine was espoused by the Peripatetics; but is exploded by Mr. Boyle, in his history of cold.

ANTI'PHONY, f. the answer made by one side of the choir to the other, when a hymn or anthem is sung alternately, or between them.

ANTI'PHRASIS, f. is a figure in Rhetoric, whereby the use of words is applied in a sense opposite to their true meanings. Also an ironical manner of speaking, that intends the contrary to the plain meaning of the words made use of.

ANTI'PODAL, a. those who are antipodes with respect to their situation.

ANTI'PODES, f. [by some accented on the last syllable but one, and viciously pronounced as if a word of three syllables, ἀντι and πόδες, Gr.] in Geography, those who live on the contrary side of the globe, with their feet directly opposite to ours; or those who live so diametrically opposite to each other, that if a right line were continued through the earth, each of its extremities would touch the feet of one of the parties.

ANTIQUARY, f. [antiquarius, Lat.] one who applies himself to the study of antiquities; whether they be mottoes, inscriptions, or ancient manuscripts; and makes collections for that purpose.

To ANTIQUATE, v. a. [antiquo, Lat.] to render uselefs; in the passive, to be grown out of use.

ANTIQUATEDNESS, f. the state of being out of vogue or use; the being obsolete.

ANTI'QUE, a. [antike or antek] [antique, Fr.] that which was in vogue in ancient times, in opposition to modern. That which is really old; whose antiquity is genuine and indisputable. Old-fashioned; out of the fashion; uncouth, and ridiculous for its antiquity. Used substantively, for a genuine piece of antiquity, or a relic of the ancients. A fashion is old when it ceases to be in use; ancient when its use has been some time past; antique when it has been a long time ancient.

ANTI'QUITY, f. [antiquitas, Lat.] that time or period which has long preceded the present. Antient writers, those who lived in former times; the histories wrote at a great distance before the present period. Long life; or old age.

ANTI'SCIL, f. the people who have their shadows projected opposite ways. The people of the Northern hemisphere are Antiscil to those of the Southern; the one projecting shadows at noon towards the North, the other towards the South.

ANTISCORBUTICAL, a. [ἀντι, Gr. and scorbutum, Lat.] in Medicine, remedies against the scurvy.

ANTISEPTICKS, f. among Physicians, all substances that resist putrefaction are so denominated; and are of use in all putrid, malignant and pestilential cases.

ANTI'SPASIS, f. the revulsion of any humour.

ANTISPASMODIC, a. that which has the power of giving relief in the cramp.

ANTISPASTIC, a. Medicines which cause a revulsion.

ANTISPLENE'TIC, a. in Medicine, remedies against the spleen.

ANTI'STROPHE, f. the second stanza in every three, in an ode sung in parts. Also a figure in Grammar, by which two things mutually dependent on one another are reciprocally converted; as, the servant of the master, and the master of the servant.

ANTISTRUMATICKS, a. in Medicine, remedies against a scrophulous humour, or the king's evil.

ANTI'THESIS, f. [Gr. in the plural antitbesis] in Rhetoric, a figure wherein opposite qualities are placed in contrast, or compared with each other, in order to illustrate, amplify, and adorn the speech of an orator, or piece of any author; a beautiful instance of this is in the following verse of Denham—"Tho' deep, yet clear; tho' gentle, yet not dull," &c.

ANTI'TYPE, f. in Divinity, that which is formed according to a model or pattern; a general similitude or resemblance of circumstances.

ANTI'TYPICAL, a. that which answers to some type.

ANTIVENE'REAL, a. in Medicine, remedies medicines against venereal complaints.

ANTLERS, f. [andouiller, Fr.] among Hunters, the first pearls which grow about the bar of a deer's horns: sometimes used in a more general sense for any of the branches.

ANTOECL, f. [has no singular, from ἀντι and ὄσση, Gr.] in Geography, those who live under the same semi-circle of the meridian, but in different parallels, the one being as far distant from the equator S. as the other are N. Their seasons is the same, as are likewise their noon, midnight, and all their days; but their seasons are contrary, it being autumn with the one, when it is spring with the other, &c. The inhabitants of Peloponnesus are the Anteici to those of the Cape of Good Hope.

ANTONOMASIA, f. a figure of Rhetoric, by which the proper name of one thing is applied to several others. Thus we say the Caesar for Cicero; a man extremely cruel, we call a Mero; and we say the Philosopher to denote Aristotle.

A'NTRE, f. [antre, Fr.] a cavern; a den.

A'NVIL, f. [anvil, Sax.] in its primary signification, a large mass of iron, on which blacksmiths lay their work to forge, or beat it into its designed shape. In a secondary sense it implies any thing which is subject to blows. Figuratively, used with the particle upon, it implies, that a thing is in agitation, is in readiness, or under consideration.

A'NVUS, f. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the orifice of the intestine thro' which the excrements are discharged by stool; likewise a small hole in the third ventricle of the brain. In Botany, the posterior, or back opening of a membranous flower, or that which has but one petal.

ANXIETY, f. [anxietas, Lat.] an uneasiness of the mind, caused by its apprehension of the consequence of some future event.

A'NXIOUS, a. [anxius, Lat.] uneasy on account of the uncertainty of some event. Very solicitous about any future event.

ANY, a. [any, Sax.] applied to time, it denotes either of the parts of which it is composed. Applied to space, either of its parts without restriction. One, in opposition to none.

AORTA, f. [ἀορτή, Gr.] the great artery rising immediately out of the left ventricle of the heart; the trunk out of which all the other arteries spring, and the great canal from whence the blood is conveyed to every part of the human body.

A'PACE, ad. applied to things in motion, swiftly; applied to time, quickly or speedily; and applied to the transition from one state to another, in haste, with speed.

APAGOGICAL, a. a sort of demonstration, or indirect way of proof, by shewing the absurdity of the contrary.

A'PANAGE, f. in France, a settled portion of lands assigned by the sovereign for the subsistence of his younger sons, which revert to the crown in failure of male issue of that branch.

A'PART, ad. [apart, Fr.] separate, or at a distance. Aside, or for a particular use.

APA'RTMENT, f. [apartment, Fr.] a part of a house. By apartmen is understood a set of rooms convenient to dwell in.

A'PATHY, f. [α and πάθος, Gr.] a freedom from all passion; a state of insensibility.

APE, f. an animal resembling the human form, of which there are a variety of species; the toes of their feet are as long as their fingers; they have pockets on each side their jaws, which serve them as store-places. The females have but a single young one, which they carry on their back; and, when they suckle it, take it in their arms, and give it the breast, in the same manner as a woman does to her child: they are very remarkable for their mimicking the actions of human creatures; hence the word is used in a secondary sense, for one who uncouthly, or affectedly, imitates another.

To APE, v. a. to mimic or imitate.

APEAK, [apiek] ad. in a posture to pierce; a-tilt.

APELITES, a sect of Heretics in the second century, who held, that Christ received a body from the four elements, which at his death he rendered back to the world, and so ascended into heaven without a body.

A'PEPSY, f. in Physic, is that disorder in the stomach called indigestion; a loss of natural concoction.

APENNINES, a chain of mountains which divide Italy throughout its whole length, as far as the southern extremity of the kingdom of Naples. From hence proceed all the brooks and rivers which water Italy, and render the land fruitful.

A'PER, f. one who mimics or imitates the actions of another. An imitator; a mimic.

APE'RIENT, part. [from aperio, Lat.] in Medicine, that which has the quality of opening; applied to gentle purges.

APE'RTION, f. [from apertus, Lat.] an opening; a passage; a gap; an aperture; or the action of making an opening or passage.

A'PERTURE, f. an opening, passage, gap, or hole. In Geometry, it is the space between two right lines that form an angle. In Optics, a round hole in a turned bit of wood or plate of tin, placed within-side of a telescope or microscope, near to the object glass, by means of which more rays are admitted, and a more distinct view of the object is obtained. In the Civil Law, the loss of a feudal tenure by default of issue of him to whom the fee was first granted, is called apertura feudi; and the breaking up or opening the last will or testament of any person, that was sealed up, is called apertura tabularum.

APE'TALOUS, a. [α and ὑπέταλον, Gr.] in Botany, without petals, or flower-leaves.

A'PEX, [in the plural apices] f. [Lat.] the top point, or summit of any thing. In Geometry, the angular point of a cone, or any like figure.

APHE'RESIS, f. [ἀφαιρέσις, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure wherein a word or syllable is taken away from the beginning of a word, as in the ingenious motto of Sir John Phillips, Amore, more, ore, re.

APHE'LION, or APHE'LIUM, f. [ἀπὸ and ἥλιος, Gr.] in Astronomy, that point of the earth, or a planet's orbit, in which it is at its greatest distance from the sun.

A'PHORISM, f. [ἀφορισμὸς, Gr.] a maxim, or principle, in any science; a sentence comprehending all the properties of a thing in a concise manner.

APHORISTICAL, a. that which is composed in the manner of aphorisms or maxims.

APHORISTICALLY, ad. in the manner of an aphorism.

APHRON'TRE, f. [ἀφρον and ἄτρον, Gr.] in Natural History, a kind of natural salt-petre, gathering like froth on old walls, now called salt-petre of the rock.

A'PIARY, f. [apiarium, Lat.] the place where bees are kept; which should be sheltered from high winds, and defended from poultry, whose dung is very offensive to these animals.

API'ECE, ad. each; or separately taken.

A'PIS, an ox or bull worshipped by the Egyptians under this name. The god Osiris was worshipped under the form of this animal, whose whole body was to be black, except a white square spot on the forehead, on his back the figure of an eagle, and on his tongue that of a beetle. When a calf was found with these marks, it was carried with great joy to the temple of Osiris, where it was fed, kept, and worshipped instead of the god, as long as it lived, and at its death was buried with great solemnity and mourning. This done, they looked out for another with the same marks. Sometimes it was many years before they found one; but when they had, there was a great festival kept all over the country.

A'PISH, a. This word has various significations, on account of its being applied to the different qualities of an ape; thus it signifies mimicking, or imitative; affected or foppish; silly, insignificant, empty, specious.

A'PISHLY, ad. full of wantonness, mimicry; uncouth and affected imitation.

APOCALYPSE, f. Revelation, the last book of the New Testament, and of canonical scripture, written by St. John according to Irenæus, about the year of Christ 96, in the isle of Patmos, whither St. John had been banished by the emperor Domitian. But Sir Isaac Newton fixes the time of writing this book earlier, viz. in the time of Nero. Sir Isaac Newton observes, that the Apocalypse of St. John is written in the same style and language with the prophecies of Daniel, and have the same relation to them which they have to one another; so that all of them together make but one consistent prophecy, pointing out the various revolutions that would happen both to church and state; and at length the final destruction and downfall of the Roman empire.

APOCALYPTICAL, a. that which contains the revelation of any thing mysterious.

APOCOPE, f. [ἀπόκοπή, Gr.] in Grammar, a figure wherein the last letter or syllable of a word is cut off; as, thro' for through; byp' for hypochondriac.

APO'CRYPHA, f. [from ἀποκρύπτω, Gr.] in its primary signification, something which is not known. Applied to books, it denotes that their authors are not certainly known; and consequently their authority and genuineness uncertain. In Theology, books appended to the sacred writings of uncertain authority, and rejected as uncanonical.

APO'CRYPHAL, a. of doubtful and uncertain authority; not inserted in the canon of Scripture.

APO'CRYPHALLY, ad. in a manner which is in want of authority, or the marks of authenticity.

APODICTICAL, a. [from ἀποδίδωμι, Gr.] demonstrative, or so plain and convincing that no person can refuse his assent to it.

A'POGEE, or ΑΡΟΓΕ'ΙΟΝ, in the old Astronomy, that point in the heavens, in which the sun or a planet is at the greatest distance possible from the earth in its whole revolution.

APOLLINA'RIANS, a sect in the fourth century, who were the followers of Apollinaris, bishop of Laodicea, who, after he had wrote many useful books, especially to younger Christians, fell into strange enthusiastic notions, and taught that the Divinity of Christ was instead of a soul to him; that his flesh was pre-existent to his appearance on earth, and that it was sent down from heaven, and conveyed through the Virgin as through a channel; that there were two sons, one born of God, the other of the Virgin; that Jesus Christ was conceived a pure substance, and that afterwards the Word descended into him, and had such operation in him as in the prophets, but was not united to his nature; that it was only by his good works he became great and perfect; that God was crucified; and that Jesus Christ has now no body; with many other strange doctrines.

APO'ILLO, f. [Lat.] in Mythology, the son of Jupiter and Latona; born at Delos; one of the heathen deities, to whom they attributed the art of divination, and the patronage of physic, and is the Sun. Said to have killed the serpent Pytho, because its heat exhales pestilential vapours; represented with long hair, in allusion to the sun-beams. The fable reported of his feeding Admetus's sheep, denotes that all creatures are sustained by his genial warmth; and his killing the Cyclops for forging Jupiter's thunderbolts, his dispersing those pestilential vapours which are fatal to mankind. He is called the Sun in heaven, Bacchus on earth, and Apollo in the infernal regions, and represented with an harp, to shew the harmony of our system; with a buckler, to denote his defending the earth; and with arrows, to signify his power of life and death.

APOLOGE'TICAL, a. [from ἀπολογία, Gr.] that which is said or written in defence of of any person or opinion.

APOLOGE TICALY, ad. in the manner of an answer, defence, or apology.

APOLOGIST, f. the person who writes or speaks in vindication of the sentiments of another; one who endeavours to extenuate the faults of another.

To APOLOGIZE, v. a. to plead in favour of a person or thing; to defend or excuse a person or thing.

APOLOGUE, [ἀπόλογος] f. a story, or fiction, turned to convey some moral and interesting truth to the mind, under the images of beasts, and other irrational animals; a fable.

APOLOGY, [ἀπολογία, Gr.] in its primary sense, implies a discourse made by a defendant, to clear himself from a charge of guilt brought against him. At present, the term is used to imply rather an excuse than a vindication; and an extenuation of a fault, rather than a proof of innocence.

APOMETROLOGY, f. [ἀπομέτρος, and μετρολογία, Gr.] the art of measuring things at a distance, to know how far they are from us.

APONEUROSIS, [ἀπὸ νεύρου, Gr.] the expansion of a nerve or tendon into a membrane; and the cutting off of a nerve.

APOPLEGMATISM, [ἀπὸ πλῆθους, Gr.] a remedy which evacuates serous or phlegmatic humours by the nostrils.

APOPHTHEGM, [ἀποφήμη] f. [ἀποφθίγημα, Gr.] a sententious expression uttered without deliberation; or a sentence containing some important truth, moral or divine, which bursts unexpected from the speaker.

APOPLECTIC, or APOPLECTICAL, a. that which is of the nature of an apoplexy.

APPROPLEXED, a. affected or seized with an apoplexy.

APOPLEXY, [ἀποπληξίς, Gr.] a sudden deprivation of all sensation; while a strong pulse remains, with a deep respiration, attended with a stertor, and the appearance of a profound sleep. It is caused generally by repletion; the head's being naturally large, and the neck short; the person's being corpulent and fat, or of a plethoric habit of body, and redundant in pituitous humours.

APOSTACY, [ἀπίστασις, Gr.] the abandoning and renouncing a religion one has before professed; used always in a bad sense.

APOSTATE, [ἀποστάτης, Gr.] one who has forsaken and repudiated the religion or principles he formerly professed.

To APOSTATIZE, v. a. to abandon or renounce one's religion.

To APOSTEMATE, v. n. to turn to an aposteme; to form an abscess to collect and swell with corrupt matter.

APOSTEMATION, f. in Surgery, the forming an abscess.

APOSTEME, or APOSTUME, f. [ἀποστήμα, Gr.] a hollow swelling filled with purulent or corrupt matter; an abscess.

APOSTLE, [ἀπόστολος, Gr.] in its most limited sense, one who was an attendant and disciple of Christ on earth, and commissioned by him, after his resurrection, to preach the gospel to the world.

APOSTLESHIP, f. the dignity or office of an apostle, which consisted in preaching the gospel, baptizing, working miracles, and ordaining ministers.

APOSTOLIC, or APOSTOLICAL, a. that which was taught or authorized by the apostles.

APOSTOLICALLY, ad. after the manner of an apostle.

APOSTROPHE, f. in Rhetoric, a figure, by which the orator, in the vehemence of his passion, turns himself on all sides, and applies to the living and dead, to angels and men, rocks, groves, &c. Thus Milton, in Paradise Lost,

*O woods, O fountains, hillocks, dales and bowers,
With other echoes, &c.*

In Grammar, it is a comma placed over a letter to shew that the word is contracted by the cutting off a vowel; as esse'm'd for esteemed, to' employment for the employment.

To APOSTROPHIZE, v. a. to interrupt the thread of discourse, in order to introduce some foreign subject.

APOTHECARY, f. one who practises the art of Pharmacy, prepares and sells medicines. In London, the Apothecaries are one of the city companies, and by an act which was made perpetual, 9 Geo. I. are exempted from serving on juries, or in ward or parish offices. They are obliged to make up their medicines according to the formulas prescribed in the College Dispensatory, and are liable to have their shops visited by the censors of the College, who are empowered to destroy such medicines as they think not good.

APOTHEOSIS, f. [from ἀπὸ and θεός, Gr.] deification, a ceremony by which the ancient Romans complimented their emperors and great men after their death. It is thus described: After the body of the deceased had been burnt with the usual solemnities, an image of wax representing him was placed on an ivory couch, where it lay for seven days, was visited by the Senate, and ladies of the highest quality in mourning, and then the young senators and knights bore the bed of state through the Via Sacra to the old Forum, and from thence to the Campus Martius, where it was deposited upon an edifice of a pyramidal form. The bed being thus placed amidst a quantity of spires and other combustibles, and the knights having made a procession in solemn measure round the pile, the new emperor with a torch in his hand, set fire to it; whilst an eagle, let fly from the top of the building, and mounting in the air with a fire-brand, was supposed to convey the soul of the deceased to heaven, and from that time he was ranked among the gods.

APO'TOME, f. [from ἀποτίμω, Gr.] in Mathematics, the difference between a rational line and one only commensurable in power to the whole line. In Music, the remaining part of an entire tone, after a greater semitone has been been taken from it. Its proportion in numbers is that of 2048 to 2187.

A'POZEM, f. [from a'pō and ζῆν, Gr.] in Pharmacy, a medicine made by boiling roots, plants, &c. in water, called likewise a decoction.

To APPA'L, [appaill] v. n. [appallir, Fr.] to strike with terror or fear; to affright; to damp a person's courage; to dishearten, including in its secondary idea, the sudden appearance of some terrible object.

APPALMENT, [appaillment] f. sudden affright, which robs a person of his courage, and renders him inactive.

APPANAGE, See APANAGE.

APPARA'TUS, f. [Lat.] a collection of instruments necessary to accomplish any design, and applied to the tools of a trade; the instruments used in philosophical experiments; the bandages, &c. of a surgeon; the furniture of a house; the ammunition for war.

APPAREL, f. [it has no plural, apparel, Fr.] the clothing worn for ornament or decency; dress. Figuratively, appearance, or ornament.

To APPAREL, v. a. to cloath; to dress; to adorn; to set out or embellish.

APPARENT, part. [apparent, Fr.] applied to truth, plain, and indubitable. Applied to shape or form, seeming, in opposition to real. Applied to actions, or qualities, visible; manifest or known, opposed to secret.

APPARENTLY, ad. plainly; evidently; manifestly.

APPARITION, f. [from apparere, Lat.] the appearance of a thing, so as to become visible to the eyes, or sensible to the mind; a visible object; a spectre; a ghost, which is the most common acceptance at present. In Astronomy, a star's becoming visible, which before was below the horizon.

APPARITORS, f. [from apparere, Lat.] persons who are at hand to execute the orders of the magistrate in any court of judicature; the beadle who carries the mace before the masters, &c. in our universities.

APPEACHMENT, [apprechment] f. an information made against a person; an accusation.

To APPEACH, [apprech] v. a. to accuse; to censure.

To APPEAL, [appell] v. a. [appello, Lat.] to transfer a cause or dispute from one to another.

APPEAL, [appell] f. the removal of a cause from an inferior to a superior court or judge, when a person thinks the inferior has not done him justice. Also, a call upon any as witness. In Ecclesiastical Causes, if an appeal is brought before a bishop, it may be removed to the archbishop; if before the archdeacon, to the court of Arches, and thence to the archbishop; and from thence to Chancery. In Common Law, it is taken for the accusation of a murderer by one who is a friend or an accomplice.

APPELLER, [appeller] f. one who makes an appeal.

To APPEAR, [appet] v. n. [apparere,

Lat.] to become an object of sight, or visible to the eye; to make its appearance, like a spirit or ghost; to be in the presence of another, so as to be seen by him; to answer a summons, by attending a court of justice.

APPE'ARANCE, [appéarance] f. the exterior surface of a thin; or that which immediately strikes the senses or imagination, which on a nearer inspection, may appear in a different light. In Law, it signifies a defendant's bailing common, or giving special bail, on any process issued out of a court of judicature. In Perspective, it denotes the projection of a figure or body on the perspective plane. In Optics, direct appearance is the sight of an object by direct ray, without refraction or reflection. In Astronomy, it imports the same as phenomena or phases; and in Physiology, the same as phasmata. See those articles.

To APPE'ASE, [appéize] v. a. [appaiser, Fr.] to bring a person that is angry to a calm and even temper; to pacify; to allay the ravings of a disordered mind. Figuratively, to quiet any noise, outrage, or violence; beautifully applied to inanimate things.

APPE'ASEABLE, [appéizable] a. that which may have the violence of passion lessened or softened; that which is reconcilable.

APPEA'ZEMENT, [appézeement] f. a state of reconciliation; a state of peace and calmness.

APPEA'SER, [appézeur] f. one who prevails on another to stifle his anger; or brings about a reconciliation between parties.

APPELLANT, f. [from appello, Lat.] in Law, the party who brings an appeal against another; one who appeals from a lower to a higher court.

APPELLATION, f. the name, dignity, or title, by which one man is distinguished from another.

APPELLATIVE, f. [appellativum, Lat.] in Grammar, words which stand for universal ideas, or a whole rank of beings, whether general or special; as man, horse, or dog; and stand opposed to proper names, which belong to one only; as, Thomas, Robert, Charles.

APPELLATIVELY, ad. after the manner of nouns appellative.

APPELLATORY, a. that which contains an appeal.

APPE'LEE, f. the person against whom an appeal is brought.

To APPE'ND, v. a. [appendo, Lat.] to hang on another; to join something as an additional not as a principal part.

APPE'NDAGE, f. [from appendo, Lat.] any thing that being considered as lets principal, is annexed or added to the principal.

APPE'NDANT, a. hanging to something else; annexed. In Law, any thing that is inheritable, belonging to some more worthy inheritance; as, an advowson, common, or court may be appendant to a manor, land to an office; but not land to land, both being corporeal inheritances.

APPEN-

APPENDICATION, f. any thing which is added as an ornament or convenience, not as necessary to another.

APPENDIX, f. [Lat. its plural appendices] something added or appended to another, not as constituting a necessary part of it, but only as an embellishment or convenience. Applied to actions, eminent circumstances. Applied to books, a kind of supplement, or an addition, in order to supply some omissions, and render them complete.

To APPERTAIN, v. n. [appartenir, Fr.] to belong to as a right, by nature and appointment; to relate, or be confined to.

APPERTAINMENT, f. that which relates, belongs to, or is a property of, any rank or dignity.

APPERTENANCE, f. [appertenence, Fr.] that which belongs or relates to a thing; the qualities or properties of a body.

APPERTINENT, a. [appertinens, Lat.] that which is requisite, or has a relation to.

APPETIBILITY, f. the quality which renders a thing the object of desire.

APPETITE, f. [appetitus, Lat.] a desire of enjoying something under the appearance of sensible food; a propensity to an object on account of the good it is imagined to possess; a vehement longing after any thing.

APPETITIVE, a. that which desires; that which has the power of desiring.

To APPLAUD, v. n. [applaudo, Lat.] to testify one's approbation by clapping of hands; to praise or then deem for a person's merits.

APPLAUDER, f. one who publicly shews his approbation; or highly commends or praises the merits of another.

APPLAUSE, f. [applausus, Lat.] approbation expressed with all the testimonies of turbulent joy; praise bestowed on merit by public and private testimonies of approbation and rapture.

APPLE, f. [appel, Sax.] any kind of large fruit of a round form, but appropriated at present to that of apple-tree. Apple of the eye, see PERIL.

APPLEBY, a. small market town in West-merland, 1664 miles from London. The market is on Mondays. It sends two members to parliament.

APPLEDORE, a. town in Kent, distant from London 64 miles.

APPLESHAW, a. town in Hampshire. Distance 50 miles from London.

APPLIANCE, f. the act whereby one thing is applied to another; or the thing applied. Application is the word now used.

APPLICABILITY, f. the placing or applying one thing to another; the quality which renders a thing fit to be applied.

APPLICABLE, a. [from applico, Lat.] that which is agreeable, suited, or may be affirmed of a thing.

APPLICABLY, ad. in such a manner as to suit, agree with, or be conformable to, and consequently may be affirmed of, or applied to, any thing.

A'PPPLICATE, f. in Mathematics. See ORDINATE.

APPLICATION, f. [applicatio, Lat.] the act of applying one thing to another, either by making them touch, or bringing them nearer to each other. Intenseness of thought or study. The employment of a means to produce a particular end; the address, suit or request of a person.

APPLICATIVE, a. that which applies or makes the application.

A'PPLICATORY, a. that which exerts the art of applying.

To APPLY, v. a. [applico, Lat.] to put one thing to another; to lay remedies or emplasters on a wound; to use as relating or conformable to any person or thing; to employ; to put to a certain use; to use as a means to some end; to fix the mind or attention upon any particular object; to study; to have recourse to; to work upon; to address as a petitioner. In Mathematics, to transfer a given line into any figure, particularly a circle; to fit quantities whose areas are equal; but figures different.

To APPOINT, v. a. to authorize one person to act for another; to fix any thing; to set a person a task; to equip, to furnish a person in all points.

APPOINTER, f. he who settles or fixes any time, thing, or place.

APPOINTMENT, f. [appointement, Fr.] a thing settled between two or more; an agreement to perform something future.

To APPORTION, v. a. [from partio, Lat.] to allot or divide into two or more parts; to set out in just proportions.

APPORTIONMENT, f. a dividing into portions. In Law, the division of a rent into parts, in the same manner as the land out of which it issues is divided. Thus, if a person leases three acres of land, and afterwards grants away one acre thereof to another, the rent shall be apportioned between them.

APPOSE, [apozze] v. a. used by Chaucer to imply an examination of a scholar, by embarrassing or puzzling him with questions. For this we now use the word pose, which is a contraction of this word.

A'PPOSITE, a. [oppositus, Lat.] proper, fit, suitable, well adapted to the purpose for which it was intended. Applied to time, seasonable, or conformable. Applied to opinions or sentiments, proper, reasonable, or agreeable to the subject which they treat of.

A'POSITELY, ad. fitly, suitably, conformably, properly.

APPOSITION, f. a comparing or laying things one by another. In Grammar, the placing two or more substantives together, in the same case, without any copulative conjunction between them; as, her beauty has captivated my eyes, my heart, my reason, my understanding, my whole soul. Among Naturalists, it is the same with accretion, or the external addition of matter to a subject.

To APPRAISE, [appraise] v. a. [apprici- ier, Fr.] to rate, value, or set a price on goods intended for sale.

APPRAISER, [appraiser] f. one who sets a value upon goods, who is sworn to do justice between party and party; from whence he is termed a sworn appraiser, and is obliged to take the goods at the price which he appraises them at, provided no other will purchase them at that rate.

To APPREHEND, v. a. [apprehendo, Lat.] to lay hold on, to seize a person as a malefactor, in order to bring him to justice; to think on with some degree of anxiety or terror. Applied to the operations of the mind, to conceive superficially; to have an imperfect or inadequate idea of a thing.

APPREHENDER, f. one who conceives a thing imperfectly; one who seizes a malefactor in order to bring him to justice; a conceiver; a thinker.

APPREHENSIBLE, a. [apprehensibilis, Lat.] that which may be apprehended, or conceived, though not comprehended.

APPREHENSION, f. [apprehensio, Lat.] among Logicians, the mere contemplation of things, without affirming or denying any thing concerning them; the faculty by which we perceive those ideas which are present to the mind; fear or anxiety; suspicion of something future. In Law, the seizing of a malefactor, or taking him into custody, in order to bring him to justice.

APPREHENSIVE, a. that which is quick to understand, or conceive; fearful; or suspicious. Want of courage makes us fear; doubt of success makes us apprehensive; distrust of strength makes us dread; imagination itself will often make us afraid.

APPREHENSIVELY, ad. after the manner in which the apprehension exercises itself, with respect to its ideas.

APPRENTICE, f. one who is bound by covenant to serve another man of trade, upon condition that the tradesman shall, in the mean time, endeavour to instruct him in his art. By the laws of England, a master may be indicted for not providing for, or for turning away his apprentice; and, on a complaint made by the master, that he neglects his duty, an apprentice may be committed to Bridewell, or be bound over to the sessions. A duty of six-pence in the pound is granted for every sum of 50*l.* or under, or 1*sd.* in the pound for sums exceeding 50*l.* given with all apprentices, except those placed out by churchwardens, &c.

To APPRENTICE, v. a. to bind a person for a certain number of years to one who is to teach him his trade, &c.

APPRENTICESHIP, f. the time for which a person is bound to continue with another, in order to learn and practise his trade; or the office of an apprentice.

To APPRIZE, v. a. [from appris, Fr.] to give a person notice of what he is a stranger to.

To APPROACH, [in the pronunciation

the a is dropt and the o founded long] v. n. to shorten the distance between objects; to draw nearer, or go towards. Applied to time, to be nearer its completion; to be nearer at hand. Figuratively, to come near; to resemble; to bring nearer to; to lessen the distance between objects.

APPROACH, f. the act of coming nearer to any object; access; means used to come nearer to a distant object. In Fortification, used in the plural, works thrown up by the besiegers, in order to advance nearer to the place besieged. Lines of approach are trenches cut in the ground, the earth of which is thrown up in the form of a parapet, on the side towards the enemy, in order to approach the covert way, without being exposed to the cannon of the besieged. In Mathematics, the curve of equable approach, is that wherein a body descending by the sole power of gravity, shall approach the earth equally in equal times.

APPROACHER, f. that person who comes nearer to another, or advances towards a distant object.

APPROACHMENT, f. the act whereby the object draws nearer to another.

APPROBATION, f. [approbatio, Lat.] the acknowledging a thing to be worthy of assent, and of esteem, either by a tacit consent or public confession; the act of approving, liking, or esteeming any thing; the confirmation or support of a thing.

To APPROPERATE, v. a. [approprio, Lat.] to quicken a thing, with respect to motion; to hasten action, applied to the time in which it is expected.

To APPROPINQUE, [appropinque] v. n. to draw near to. Not in use.

APPROPRIABLE, a. that which may be confined or restrained to something particular.

To APPROPRIATE, v. a. [approprio, Fr.] to dedicate, or confine to a particular use; to claim an exclusive right to. In Law, to annex as a property.

APPROPRIATE, g. peculiar; confined, restrained, or limited to some particular sense or use.

APPROPRIATION, f. applied to things, the application of them to some peculiar use. Applied to qualities, the claiming as belonging to one's self, in an extraordinary, if not exclusive manner. Applied to words, the restraining them to a particular sense, or confining them to signify a particular idea. In Law, the annexing a benefice to the proper and perpetual use of some religious house.

APPROPRIATOR, f. one who is possessed of an appropriated benefice.

To APPROVE, [approve] v. a. [approvo, Fr.] to be pleased with; to be delighted with from a conviction of merit; to make worthy of approbation.

APPROVEABLE, [approveable] a. that which, on account of its merits, appears worthy of approbation.

APPROVEMENT, [approvemen] f. consent, sent, including liking or approbation.

APPROVER, [approver] f. is one who, confessing himself guilty of a felony, accuses one or more of his accomplices. Approvers also signify bailiffs of lords in their franchises, sheriffs, and likewise such persons as have the bearing the king's demesnes in several manors.

APPROXIMATE, a. [from ad and proximus, Lat., near; that which approaches near to.

APPROXIMATION, f. the coming or approaching near to any thing. In Arithmetic, a continual approach to a root or quantity sought, without being able ever to arrive at it exactly.

A PRIL, f. [Aprilis, Lat.] the fourth calendar month in the year; represented by ancient painters as a young man in green, with a garland of myrtle and hawthorn buds; in one hand brand roses and violets, and in the other the sign Taurus.

A PRON, f. [from aspron, Sax.] a part of dress consisting of cloth, &c. which hangs from the middle downwards, worn by the ladies for ornament, by artificers to keep their cloaths clean. In a goose it signifies the fat skin which covers the belly. In Gunnery, a piece of lead which covers the touch-hole of a great gun.

APRON-MAN, f. a man who wears an apron; a mechanic; a word of reproach.

APT, a. fit; a relative term, implying the fitness of a thing to procure some end; that which has a tendency to. Ready or quick, applied to the mind.

APTITUDE, f. [aptitudo, Fr.] fitness to bring about the desired end; tendency.

APTLY, ad. with great propriety; justly, or pertinently; readily or quickly.

APTNES, f. a relative term, implying the fitness of any means to procure its end. Applied to bodies, tendency; to minds, disposition, or inclination; to the understanding, quickness, facility, or ease in conceiving.

AQUA, f. [Lat.] water. Aqua fortis, or strong water, a corrosive liquor, made by dissolving purified nitre, with calcined vitriol, or redified oil of vitriol, in a strong heat. Aqua marina, aqua marina, in Natural History, a precious stone, which takes its name from its sea-green colour. Aqua mirabilis, or the wonderful water, is distilled from spices, infused in spirit of wine, and is a very good cordial. Aqua regia, the royal water, a strong corrosive spirit, which dissolves gold, and is composed of spirit of nitre and spirit of sea-salt. Aqua vite, or water of life, in a general sense, brandy or spirit of wine; but in a more confined sense, retained to that spirit which is drawn from malt; the other term brandy being appropriated to that which is drawn from wine only.

AQUARIUS, f. [Lat.] in Astronomy, a constellation that makes one of the 12 signs in the zodiac, which the sun enters in the beginning of January, and derives its name from the supposed quantity of rain which falls while the sun is in it; in allusion to which it is described in the Zodiac on globes, in the form of a man inclining on an urn flowing with water.

AQUATIC, or AQUATICA, a. [aquaticus, Lat.] applied to animals or vegetables, which live and grow in the water.

A'QUEDUCT, or A'QUÆDUCT, f. [aqueductus, Lat.] a channel formed of stone, bricks, or timber, to convey water from one place to another. An Anatomy, the bony passage of the drum that reaches from the ear to the palate.

A'QUEOUS, a. [from aqua, Lat.] watery particles. Aqueous humour. See Ev.

A'QUILINE, a. [aquilinus, Lat.] resembling an eagle. Applied to the nose, hooked, or like an eagle's beak.

AQUO'SE, a. [from aqua, Lat.] watery; abounding with particles of water.

AQUO'SITY, f. wateriness; or the quality so named from its abounding with particles of water.

ARABIA, a country of Asia, having Judea on the north, Persia and the gulph of Persia on the east, the Indian ocean on the south, and the Red Sea and the isthmus of Suez on the west; a country of very great extent; situated between 35° and 60° east longitude, and between 12° and 30° north latitude. Though subject to a great many different princes, it is only considered by Geographers as subdivided into the three grand divisions of Arabia Felix, Arabia Deserta, and Arabia Petraea.

A'RABIC, f. the tongue of the Arabians, a branch of the Hebrew. Arabic is likewise applied to a gum, which distils from a thorny plant in Arabia.

A'RABIC, a. that which belongs to, or is used in Arabia. Arabic characters, are the figures which we make use of at present in arithmetic.

A'RABISM, f. [Arabismus, Lat.] a method of expression, or idiom peculiar to the Arabs.

A'RABLE, a. [from aro, Lat.] that which is fit for plowing, and to produce corn.

A'RA, or A'RRAC, f. [pronounced raek] an excellent spirituous liquor, made by the Chinese from cocoa, rice, or sugar; the former of which is the best: there are two sorts imported into England, viz. the Goa and Batavia.

ARÆOMETER, f. [from ἀραξ and μετρίον, Gr.] in Hydrostatics, an instrument used to discover the weight or gravity of fluids.

ARÆOTICS, f. [from ἀραιός, Gr.] in Pharmacy, medicines which rarefy or thin the blood.

ARAI'GNEE, [Fr.] in Fortification, a branch, return, or gallery of a mine.

ARA'NEOUS, a. [from aranea, Lat.] that which resembles a cobweb.

A'RBITER, f. [Lat.] a person chosen by mutual consent between two or more parties, to decide the subject of their disagreement; one who is invested with a power to decide any difference.

A'RBITRABLE, a. [from arbitror, Lat.] arbitrary, voluntary; determined purely by the will, without regard to any other motives.

ARBITRATOR,

ARBI'TRAMENT, f. [from arbitror, Lat.] choice; or the exercise of the will in choosing or assenting to any thing.

ARBITRARILY, ad. in such a manner as implies a bare exertion of the will, without any regard to motives or consequences; in a despotic, tyrannical, or absolute manner.

ARBITRARIOUS, a. [arbitrarius, Lat.] depending entirely on the will; precarious.

ARBITRARIOUSLY, ad. arbitrarily; according to the mere and obstinate determination of the will.

ARBITRARY, a. [arbitrarius, Lat.] not restrained or determined by any law, or reasons; capricious, positive, despotic, and dogmatic.

To ARBITRATE, v. a. [arbitror, Lat.] to decide or determine a difference; to judge of. Used neuterly, to give judgment, or pronounce sentence.

ARBITRATION, f. [from arbitror, Lat.] the determination of a cause by a judge chosen by the parties at difference.

ARBITRATOR, f. [Lat.] a person chosen by contending parties to determine a difference between them; a determiner.

ARBITREMENT, f. [from arbitror, Lat.] decision, or determination pronounced by an umpire; a compromise.

ARBOR, [Lat.] in Botany, a tree. In Mechanics, that part of a machine which supports the rest; likewise the spindle or axis on which a machine turns.

ARBORIST, f. [arboriste, Fr.] a naturalist, who applies himself peculiarly to study the nature and cultivation of trees.

ARBOUR, f. [from arbor, Lat.] a kind of shady bower, or cabin, formed of the branches of trees, and contrived so as to admit the air, and keep off the sun and rain.

ARC, f. [arcus, Lat.] a segment, or part of a circle, not exceeding a semi-circle; an arch.

ARCADE, f. [Fr.] a continued arch, or walk, consisting of several arches united together.

ARCANUM, f. [Lat. in the plural arcana] a secret; generally applied to the nostrum of a quack.

ARCH, f. [arcus, Lat.] the sky. In Mathematics, part of any curve line; whether it be ellipsis, circle, &c. Arch, in Architecture, is a vault, or concave building, bent in the form of an arch, or a curve, and is divided into circular, elliptical, and straight. Circular arches are either such as are exactly semi-circle, or whose center is in the middle of a line drawn from one foot to the other, which are called semi-circular arches. Elliptical arches are those which consist of a semi-ellipsis, and were formerly used instead of mantle-trees in chimnies. Straight arches have straight edges, both upper and under parallel; but both their ends and joints pointing towards a certain center. Arch of a bridge is the vaulted interval between its piers. A triumphal arch is a gate built with stone, &c. and richly ornamented with trophies, &c.

To ARCH, v. a. [from arcus, Lat.] to build or form into arches; to cover with arches.

ARCH, a. [ἄρχος, Gr.] used in composition, to express something of the first rank or order, applied to dignity, as archbishop: but something superlative, applied to quality, as an arch-heretic, and is pronounced soft before a consonant, like cb in choice, but hard before a vowel, like the Greek χ, or as if the b was dropped. It sometimes implies a person endowed with a great deal of low cunning, or triflingly mischievous.

ARCHAIO'LOGY, [arkhailogy] f. a discourse on antiquity; or a treatise on the opinions, &c. of the ancients.

ARCH-ANGEL, [ark-angel] f. ἀρχαγγελος and ἀρχάγγελος, Gr.] one of the superior order of angels.

ARCHBISHOP, f. the chief or metropolitan bishop, who has several suffragans under him. This title was first introduced in the East, about the year 340, but then was only honorary, and given to some bishops of great cities. England is divided between two, him of Canterbury, and him of York, who are called primates and metropolitans. Canterbury is the first peer of England, and, next to the royal family, has precedence of all dukes and great officers of the crown. The archbishop of York has the same power in his province with that of Canterbury, has precedence of all dukes not of the royal blood, and all officers of state, except the lord high chancellor.

ARCHBISHOPRIC, f. the state or jurisdiction of an archbishop.

ARCH-BUTLER, f. one of the great officers of the German empire, who presents the cup to the emperor on solemn occasions. This office belongs to the king of Bohemia.

ARCH-CHAMBERLAIN, f. an officer of the empire, not unlike the great chamberlain in England. The elector of Brandenburg was appointed to this office by the Golden Bull.

ARCH-CHANCELLOR, f. in ancient times, presided over the secretaries of the court, under the two first races of the kings of France; and when their territories were divided into Germany, Italy, and Arles, there were three arch-chancellors, and hence the three arch-chancellors still subsist in Germany, the arch-bishop of Mentz being arch-chancellor of Germany, the arch-bishop of Cologne of Italy, and the arch-bishop of Treves of Arles.

ARCH-CHANTER, f. the president or chief chanter of a church.

ARCHDEACON, f. [archidiaconus, Lat.] a priest, vested with authority or jurisdiction over the clergy and laity, next to the bishop, either through the whole diocese or only a part of it. There are sixty in England, who visit every two years in three, wherein they enquire into the reparations and moveables belonging to churches, reform abuses, suspend, excommunicate, in some places prove wills, and induct all clerks into benefices within their respective jurisdictions.

ARCHDEACONRY, f. the jurisdiction, office, or province of an archdeacon.

ARCH.

A R C

ARCHDEACONSHIP, f. the office or dignity of an archdeacon.

ARCHDUCHESS, f. [arch and duchesse, Fr.] the title of the sister or daughter of an archduke.

ARCHDUKE, f. [archidux, Lat.] a duke ranked with some greater privilege, or authority, than others.

ARCHÉ, [arche] f. [ἀρχή, Gr.] in Medicine, the beginning, first period, or first attack of a disease.

ARCHED, part. crooked, or bent in the form of an arch.

ARCHER, f. [archer, Fr.] one who shoots with a bow; or one who uses a bow in battle.

ARCHERY, f. the art or exercise of shooting with a bow.

ARCHES-COURT, f. [so called from Bow-Church, in London, where it was kept; which likewise received its name from its top being raised on pillars, built bow or archwise] the chief and most ancient consistory or court of the archbishop of Canterbury, for debating spiritual causes. The judge of the court is called the dean of the arches.

ARCHETYPE, [archetype] f. [archetypum, Lat.] the original model, or pattern of any thing.

ARCHETYPAL, [archetypal] a. original; that which has something which may serve as a pattern to copy from.

ARCHÆUS, [archæus] f. [from ἀρχή, Gr.] a word used by Paracelsus and other chemists to express a principle of motion, the cause of all the visible changes and operations of bodies.

ARCHIDIACONAL, [archidiaconal] a. [from archidiaconus, Lat.] that which belongs, or relates, to an archdeacon.

ARCHIEPISCOPAL, [archiepsopal] a. that which belongs to, or is exercised by, an archbishop.

ARCHITECT, [architect] f. [architectus, Lat.] a person skilled in building; who draws plans and designs, conducts the work, and directs the artificers employed in carrying it on.

ARCHITECTIVE, [architective] a. that which relates to building or architecture.

ARCHITECTONIC, [architectonic] a. that which has the skill and power of an architect.

ARCHITECTURE, [architecture] f. [architectura, Lat.] the art of building: divided into three branches, civil, military, or naval. The Civil consists in erecting habitations for men, or temples for worship. The Military consists in strengthening and fortifying places, named fortification. Naval architecture is that which teaches the construction of ships or vessels floating on the water, and is named ship building.

ARCHITRAVE, [architrave] f. [from ἀρχή, Gr. and trabe, Lat.] in Architecture, the lowest member of the entablature, which lies immediately upon the capital. In Timber-building, it is filled the reason-piece, or master-beam. In Chimnies, the mantle-piece; and over jambs of doors, or windows, hyperthyron.

A R E

ARCHIVES, [archivum] f. [archivus, Lat.] the places wherein records or ancient manuscripts are preserved. Figuratively, the records and manuscripts themselves.

ARCHON, [archon] f. [ἀρχων, Gr.] in Antiquity, the chief magistrate at Athens.

ARCH-TREASURER, f. the great treasurer of the German empire.

ARCHWISE, a. in the shape or form of an arch.

ARCTIC, a. [from ἀρκτικός, Gr.] northern; lying under, or near the north star, called Arctos. Arctic Circle, a lesser circle of the sphere, parallel to the equinoctial, and 66 deg. 30 min. distant from it towards the north pole. Arctic Pole, the northern pole of the world, of both the heavens and the earth; so named of Arctos, a cluster or constellation of stars near it.

ARCUATE, a. [arcuatus, Lat.] bent in the form of an arch.

ARCUATION, f. [from arcuo, Lat.] the act of bending any thing; the state of being bent. In Surgery, a bending of the bones, which appears in the case of the rickets; the protuberance of the fore parts of the body, with the bending of the bones of the sternum.

ARDENCY, f. applied to the affections, warmth; applied to study, activity.

ARDENT, a. [ardens, Lat.] applied to the qualities of body, hot, burning, inflaming; applied to those of the mind, fierce, vehement, violent, passionate, inflamed.

ARDENTLY, ad. warmly, eagerly, passionately.

ARDOR, f. [ardor, Lat.] heat, applied to the quality of body; warmth, violence of affection, applied to the mind.

ARDUOUS, a. [arduus, Lat.] a thing which is both lofty and difficult to ascend. Figuratively, something which is both important, sublime, and difficult to comprehend.

ARE, the third person plural of the verb Am, used when we speak of two or more persons.

AREA, f. [Lat.] the surface contained between any lines or limits. Any surface, such as the floor of a room, the vacant part or stage of an amphitheatre. In Geometry, the space contained within the lines bounding it, reckoned in the square part of any measure.

AREFACTION, f. [from arefacio, Lat.] the act of making dry, or the state of drying.

ARENA'CEOUS, f. [from arena, Lat.] composed of sand; sandy.

ARENA'TION, f. [from arena, Lat.] in Medicine, a dry bath, wherein the patient sits with his feet upon hot sand, and has it cast upon different parts of his body.

ARENO'SE, a. [from arena, Lat.] sandy, or abounding with sand.

ARENULOUS, a. [from arenula, Lat.] consisting of small sand.

ARE'OLA, f. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the coloured circle surrounding the nipple.

ARE'OPAGUS, f. a sovereign tribunal at Athens, famous for the justice and impartiality validity of its decrees, to which the Gods themselves are said to have submitted their differences. Authors are divided as to the reason and origin of this name; nor are they more agreed about the number of judges that sat in it; some reckon thirty-one, others fifty-one, and others five hundred. In short, their number seems not to have been fixed, but to have been more or less in different years. At first, this tribunal consisted only of nine persons, who had all discharged the office of archons, had acquitted themselves with honour in that trust, and had likewise given an account of their administration before the logistæ, and undergone a rigorous examination. Their salary was equal, and paid out of the public treasury; they had three oboli, that is, three halfpence, for each cause. The Arcopagites were judges for life. They always sat in judgment in the open air, and in the night time; that their minds might be the more present and attentive, and that no object of pity or aversion might make any impression upon them; and all the pleadings before them were in the simplest and most naked terms. At first, they took cognizance of criminal causes only; but in course of time, their jurisdiction became of great extent.

AREO'TICS, f. medicines that open the pores.

A'RGAL, or A'RGOL f. the hard lees sticking to the sides of wine vessels, called Tartar.

A'RGENT, a. [argentum, Lat.] that which resembles silver; silvered. In Heraldry, the white colour in the arms of gentry; expressed by engravers by a total omission of lines in a shield.

A'RGIL, f. [argilla, Lat.] the white earth used by the potters in making their white ware.

ARGILLA'CEOUS, a. [argilla, Lat.] of the nature of potter's clay.

ARGI'LLOUS, a. consisting of clay; of the nature of clay.

A'RGOSY, f. [from Argo, the name of Jason's ship] a large vessel for merchandize.

To A'RGUE, v. n. [arguo, Lat.] to evince the truth or falshood of any thing by proofs. Figuratively, to persuade; to bring reasons for or against; to plead, or handle; to debate.

A'RGUER, f. one who makes use of reasons in order to evince any truth, or raise conviction in the mind of another; a reasoner; a disputer.

A'RGUMENT, f. [argumentum, Lat.] a reason brought to prove or disprove any thing; the subject of any discourse or writing; a concise view of the heads of any discourse. In Law, a cause; debate, or suit; a controversy.

A'RGUMENTAL, a. that which is formed upon the deductions of reason; belonging to argument; reasoning.

A'RGUMENTA'TION, f. the evincing the truth or falshood of any proposition by reasoning; the act or effect of reasoning.

A'RGUMENTATIVE, a. consisting of argument, or the deduction of reason; containing reasons.

ARGUTE, a. witty, sharp, subtle.

A'RIA, f. [Ital.] in Music, an air, a song, a tune or a lesson.

A'RIANS, f. in Church History, a sect of ancient heretics, who denied the three persons in the Trinity to be of the same essence, and affirmed Christ to be a creature; that he was inferior to the Father as to his deity; that he was neither co-eternal, nor co-equal with him; also that the Holy Ghost was not God, but a creature of the Son. Their leader, Arius, lived in the beginning of the fourth century.

A'RIANISM, f. the principles maintained by the Arians.

A'RID, a. dry, parched up, withered.

A'RIDITY, f. [ariditas, Lat.] a want of moisture, or dryness. In Divinity, a state of insensibility, or want of ardency in devotion.

A'RIES, f. [Lat.] in Astronomy, a constellation of fixed stars, the first of the twelve signs in the zodiac which the sun enters; hieroglyphically represented by the ram, because it is then the teeming time for that kind of animal.

To A'RI'ETATE, v. n. [arieto, Lat.] to butt; or to attack with the head, like a ram.

A'RIETA'TION, f. [arietatio, Lat.] the act of butting like a ram; the attacking with a battering ram.

A'RIE'TTA, f. in music, a short air, song, or tune.

A'RIG'HT, ad. [ribe, Sax.] truly, justly, or consistent with law; properly, or in such a manner as to attain the desired end.

A'RIO'LATI'ON, f. [from bariolus, Lat.] footherfaying.

To A'RIS'E, [arise] v. n. [its prot. arose, part. arisen] to ascend; to move upwards from the earth; to get up as from sleep; to change the posture from sitting to standing; to come in view; to become visible; to come out of the grave; to flow or proceed from.

ARISTO'GRACY, f. [ἀριστος and αριστος, Gr.] in Politics, a form of government wherein the supreme power is lodged in the nobility.

ARISTOCRA'TICAL, a. that which partakes of aristocracy, or includes a government administered only by nobles.

ARISTOCRA'TICALNESS, f. that quality which makes a government resemble an aristocracy.

A'RITHMANCY, f. [ἀριθμος and μαντεία, Gr.] a sort of divination, or foretelling things by numbers.

A'RITHMETIC, f. [ἀριθμος and μετρούμεν, Gr.] the science of numbers; the art of computation. The fundamental rules or operations of Arithmetic are four, namely, Addition, Subtraction, Multiplication, and Division; the practice of which is given under their respective heads. Besides which, there are other rules contrived for the facilitating computations of all kinds; as will be seen in the course of this work.

ARITHMETICAL, a. that which is performed by numbers, or agreeable to some rule in arithmetic.

ARITHMETICALLY, ad. that which is performed performed according to some rule of arithmetic, and consists of figures.

ARC, f. [from arca, Lat. a chest] a chest, or coffer, applied in Scripture to the vehicle in which Moses was exposed to the Nile; the chest wherein the two tables of the covenant, the pot of manna, and Aaron's rod, were kept; but more particularly the vessel built by Noah, to preserve himself, family, and the whole race of terrestrial and aerial animals, from the Flood.

ARM, [arma, Sax.] a limb of the human body, reaching from the shoulder to the hand. Anatomists divide the arm into two parts, calling only that part the arm which is inclosed between the shoulder and the elbow; the rest, from the elbow to the wrist, being taken into the greater hand, is called the fore-arm. The arm, in this acceptation, has only one large bone, called the os humeri, or the shoulder-bone. The other part consists of two bones, namely, the radius and cubitus, or ulna. In Geography, it denotes a branch of the sea, or a river. It is also figuratively used for power; as, the secular arm. Likewise, for a large branch or bough of a tree.

To ARM, v. a. [armare, Lat.] to furnish with weapons; to cap, case, or cover with metal, applied to the load-stone, or the shoes of a horse.

To ARM, v. n. to take arms; to be provided against any attack, either of an enemy or casualty.

ARMADA, f. [Span.] a fleet of men of war, applied by way of eminence to that great one fitted out by the Spaniards, with an intention to conquer this island, in 1588.

ARMADILLO, f. [Span.] a four-footed animal of the Brazils:

ARMAMENT, f. [armamentum, Lat.] any place wherein arms are placed; great provisions of military stores. Figuratively, an army, but most commonly applied to a fleet of men of war.

ARMATURE, f. [armatura, Lat.] a military dress to defend the body from the attack of an enemy in battle; any thing to defend the body from external injuries.

ARMED, a. in Heraldry, applied to beasts and birds of prey, when their teeth, horns, feet, beak, talons, or tusks, &c. are of a different colour.

ARMIGER, f. [Lat.] an esquire, one that bears arms.

ARMILLARY, a. [from armilla, Lat.] something that is circular, in allusion to the surrounding of a bracelet. Armillary sphere, is composed of several brass circles, which represent those of the horizon, meridian, ecliptic, &c. drawn on the globe.

ARMINGS, f. [plural] in a ship, are white or red cloths hung fore and aft on the outside of a ship; those on the tops are named top armings.

ARMINIANS, f. [from Arminius] the followers of Arminius, a famous minister at Amsterdam; who in the 16th century separated from the Calvinists, holding that predestination was not absolute, but conditional; that Christ has not only redeemed all, but that there is an universal grace given to all mankind; that grace is not an irresistible principle; that man is a free agent, always at liberty to obey all the motions of the Holy Ghost, or resist them; that with respect to perseverance, a man may, after justification, fall into new crimes.

ARMIPOTENCE, f. [arma and potentia, Lat.] power, or powerfulness in war.

ARMIPOTENT, a. [armipotens, Lat.] powerful, or strong in the field, in arms, or at war.

ARMISTICE, f. [armistitium, Lat.] a short truce or cessation from arms for a short time.

ARMLET, f. a small arm of the sea. Figuratively, a bracelet, or some ornament worn on the arm.

ARMO'NIACK, f. [erroneously so written for Ammoniack.] See AMMONIACK.

ARMO'RIAL, a. [armorial, Fr.] that which belongs to the coat or escutcheon of a family.

ARMOUR, f. [armure, Fr.] a cover for the body, to defend it from the instruments of war, warlike harness.

ARMOURER, f. [armurier, Fr.] one who makes, forges, or sells armour; one who dresses another in armour.

ARMOURY, f. [armoire, Fr.] a place where arms are kept. Figuratively, arms.

ARMOUR-BEARER, f. he that carries the arms of another.

ARMS, f. [not used in the singular, arma, Lat.] all kinds of weapons, whether offensive or defensive. Figuratively, a state of hostility between two nations; war. In Heraldry, the badges of distinction, escutcheons, or other marks of honour, given by sovereigns, and borne on banners, shields, or coats.

ARMY, f. [armée, Fr.] a collection of men armed, commanded by their proper officers. Figuratively, a great number.

AROMA'TIC, } a. spicy; fragrant;
AROMA'TICAL, } strong-scented, or smelling like spices.

AROMA'TICS, f. [not used in the singular] spices, or any strong-scented, fragrant, or high-tasted body.

To AROMA'TIZE, v. a. [from aroma, Lat.] to mix or scent with spices. Figuratively, to make any thing agreeable, which in its own nature would be loathsome.

AROUND, ad. [à la ronde, Fr.] in a circle; in a circular manner; on all sides. Used as a preposition, encircling; encompassing; round about.

To AROU'SE, [arouze] v. a. [arisen, Sax.] to wake from sleep; or excite an indolent person to action; to raise up; to stimulate.

ARPE'GGIO, f. [Ital.] in Music, the making the notes of a chord to be heard distinctly one after another, by a purling or rolling of the hand on stringed instruments, beginning at the lowest note, and rising gradually upwards.

ARQUEBUSE, f. a hand-gun, carbines fusée, or caliver.

ARQUEBUSIER, f. one who carries, or makes use of, an arquebuse.

ARRACK, f. See ARACK.

To ARRAIGN, [arrain] v. a. [arranger, Fr.] in Law, to set a thing in order, or fit it for a trial. Applied to writings, to indict; to accuse; to charge with crimes.

ARRAIGNMENT, [arraigment] f. the act of trying a person upon an indictment, accusation, or charge.

To ARRANGE, v. a. [arranger, Fr.] to dispose or put in order, including the secondary idea of art or skill.

ARRANGEMENT, f. the act of putting or placing things into order, including the idea of skill, or judgment.

ARRANT, a. [errant, Fr.] notorious, infamous.

ARRANTLY, ad. in a notorious, infamous, or shameful manner.

ARRAS, f. the richest sort of tapestry, so called from Arras, a town in Flanders where it was first made.

ARRAY, f. the order in which an army is drawn up to give battle; dress, or external ornaments.

To ARRAY, v. a. [arroyer, old Fr.] in Military affairs, to place an army in proper order to engage. To deck, embellish, or adorn with dress.

ARRAYER, f. officers that had the care of soldiers, and saw that they were properly accoutred.

ARREAR, [arrier] f. [arriere, Fr.] that which remains unpaid. Applied to rent, it signifies that which has been due some time, and is not discharged.

ARREST, f. [from arrestor, Fr.] in Law, the seizing or apprehending a man, thereby depriving him of his liberty by legal process, either for debt or any offence against the law; a stopping or restraint from proceeding in an undertaking.

To ARREST, v. a. [arrestor, Fr.] to apprehend by virtue of a writ from a court of justice; to seize any thing by law; to seize upon; to stop, with-hold, or bind; to stop a body in motion.

ARRET, f. [Fr.] the decision of a sovereign court, or court of judicature; resembling our acts of parliament.

ARRIERE-FIEF, f. [Fr.] a fief dependent on another.

ARRIVAL, f. the coming to any place, either by sea or land. Figuratively, the attainment of any design.

ARRIVANCE, f. company expected to come.

To ARRIVE, v. n. [arriuer, Fr.] to come to any place by water or land. Figuratively, to attain or come to.

ARROGANCE, or ARROGANCY, f. [arrogantia, Lat.] the assuming or claiming to one's self more honour or merit than is our due.

ARROGANT, part. [arrogans, Lat.] self-conceited, haughty.

ARROGANTLY, ad. in an arrogant, selfconceited or haughty manner.

To ARROGATE, v. a. [arrogare, Lat.] to lay claim to a thing or quality which does not belong to us.

ARROW, f. [arrows, Sax.] a slender piece of round wood, pointed, barbed, and shot out of a bow; distinguished from a dart, because that was thrown by the hand. Arrow-head is the sharp point of an arrow, which was usually armed with steel.

ARSE, f. [arsis, Sax.] the posterior. Figuratively, the hind part of any thing. To hang an arse, a low phrase, to loiter or stay behind; to be sluggish or tardy.

ARSENAL, f. [arsenale, Ital.] a royal or public magazine; or place wherein all warlike stores are kept, or forged.

ARSENIC, f. [arsenicum, Gr.] in Natural History, a ponderous, volatile, uninflamable, mineral substance, which gives whiteness to metals by infusion, but destroys their malleability; is extremely corrosive, caustic, and a strong poison.

ARSENICAL, a. consisting, or having the properties, of arsenic.

ART, f. [ars, Fr. ars, Lat.] an abstract or metaphysical term, implying a collection of certain rules: from observation and experience, by which any thing may be performed, or any end obtained; distinguished from science by its object. If the object be attended by the application of rules, or require practice, then it is an art; but if contemplated only with respect to its different appearances, the collection of observations relative thereto is a science. A trade; cunning; artfulness; speculation. We have likewise the division of arts into liberal and mechanic. The liberal arts are those which consist in the application or exercise of the mind; the mechanic, those which consist in the exercise of the body or hand, and make use of machines to attain their ends.

ARTERIAL, a. that which belongs to, or is contained in, an artery.

ARTERIO-TOMY, f. [from arteria and tomos, Gr.] in Surgery, the opening an artery with a lancet, in order to draw blood from thence.

ARTERY, f. [arteria, Lat.] in Anatomy, a membranous, elastic, conical tube, internally smooth, without valves, which decreases in its dimension in proportion to the number of its branches, destined to receive the blood from the heart, and distribute it to the lungs and other parts of the body; that which has its origin from the right ventricle of the heart, is called the pulmonary artery, and that which rises from the left, the aorta.

ARTFUL, a. performed according to the rules of art, including the idea of skill, judgment, or wisdom.

ARTFULLY, ad. in such a manner as shews a deal of cunning or skill.

ARTFULNESS, f. the quality of performing any thing with skill, or the attaining an end by cunning.

ARTHRITIC,

ARTHRITIC, or ARTHRITICAL, a. [from ἄρθρον, Gr.] gouty; or occasioned by the gout; that which has something like joints.

ARTHRITIS, f. [ἄρθρις, Gr.] in Physic, a disease which affects the joints; the gout.

ARTHUR, King of the Britons, according to Rops, was born in Cornwall, 452, or 453; mounted the throne of Danmonium, 467; when he later Gorlois, at 15 years of age; was crown'd patrician by Ambrosius, 476; elected monarch of Briton, 508; assumed the imperial purple, 528; and was mortally wounded in a battle, 542; during which, Modred and he happening to meet, rushed upon one another so furiously, that nothing but death could part them. Modred was slain upon the spot, and Arthur, mortally wounded, was carried to Glastonbury, where he died, aged 90 years, 76 of which he spent in the exercise of arms; for though he had reigned but 34 years, yet before he came to the crown, he had long commanded the British armies east: Aethelstan. Arthur was undoubtedly a great general. It is a pity his actions have served for a foundation to numberless fables, though worthy of being recorded by the greatest and most able pen. He is said to have instituted the order of the knights of the Round Table, so famous in Romances. Some credible historians assert, that king Henry II. being at Freshbroke, and hearing a Welsh bard singing to his harp the story of Arthur, concluding with his death and burial in the church-yard of Glastonbury, between 2 pyramids; the king ordered inquiry to be made, and the body dug up; at the depth of 7 feet a great stone was found, on which was fixed a leaden cross; with this inscription on the inside: 'Hic jacit sepulchus inclytus rex Arturius in insula Avalonia.' &c. 'Here lieth the famous king Arthur, buried in the isle of Avelon.' Digging lower, they found the king's body in the trunk of a tree, his beautiful queen lying by him, with long flowing hair, in colour bright as gold, which however sunk into dust when touched. The king's bones were very large, and 10 words, at least, in his scull, all cicatrized, except that of which he was supposed to have died. This was discovered, 1189, according to G. maldus Cambrensis, who says he saw and examined them: Camden's Britan. lit. innotescere.

ARTICHOKE, f. a plant much like the thistle, but hath large scaly heads, shaped like the cone of a pine tree.

ARTICLE, f. [articulus, Lat.] in English there are but two articles, a and the: a becomes an before a vowel, y and w excepted, or a like h. A is used in a vague sense to point out one single thing of the kind, in other respects indeterminate: the determines what particular thing is meant. A substantive, without any article to limit it, is taken in its widest sense: that man means all mankind. A man means some one or other of that kind, indefinitely; the man means, definitely, that particular man who is spoken of: the former therefore is called the Indefinite, the latter the Definite, Article. It is the nature of both the Articles to determine or limit the thing spoken of: a determines it to be one single thing of the kind, leaving it still uncertain which; the determines which it is, or if many which they are. The first therefore can only be joined to Substantives in the singular number; the last may also be joined to plurals. There is a remarkable exception to this rule in the use of the Adjectives few and many (the latter chiefly with the word great before it) which, though joined with plural Substantives, yet admit of the singular Article a: as, a few men, a great many men; the reason of it is manifest from the effect which the article has in these phrases: it means a small or great number collectively taken, and therefore gives the idea of a Whole, that is, or Unity. Thus likewise a hundred, a thousand, is one whole number, an aggregate of many collectively taken; and therefore still retains the Article a, though joined as an Adjective to a plural Substantive: as, a hundred years. The Definite Article the is sometimes applied to Adverbs in the Comparative and Superlative degree, and its effect is to mark the degree the more strongly, and to define it the more precisely: as, "The more I examine it, the better I like it. I like this the least of any." In Commerce, a single transaction, thing, or parcel in an account.

To ARTICLE, v. n. to make conditions, or terms; to stipulate; to bind or oblige a person to serve another under certain conditions.

ARTICULAR, a. [articularis, Lat.] in Physic, a disease which affects the joints.

ARTICULATE, a. [from articulus, Lat.] in its primary sense, applied to bodies which are joined together, and may be bent without being pulled asunder. Applied to the voice, it implies, that its sounds are distinct and varied, but connected together, so as to form words.

To ARTICULATE, v. a. [articuler, Fr.] to pronounce syllables, or words in a distinct manner.

ARTICULATELY, ad. in such a manner as to pronounce the syllables of words distinctly.

ARTICULATION, f. in Anatomy, the juncture of two bones in such a manner, that they may be bent without being pulled asunder. Applied to the voice, the modulations and variations of the voice, which are so connected as to form syllables or words.

ARTIFICE, f. [artifice, Fr.] an indirect method of attaining one's end; a pretence, stratagem, or fraud. SYNON. Cunning is employed in using means; finesse insinuates insensibly, and must be accompanied by penetration; deceit surprises and gives satisfaction; artifice generally makes use of studied dissimulation; a trick is commonly looked on as a fraud; and a stratagem is oftener illicit than otherwise.

ARTIFICIAL, a. [artificial, Fr.] something made by art, in opposition to the productions of nature; something counterfeit. Artificial facial lines are those which are drawn upon a sector, or scale, to represent lines and tangents.

ARTIFICIALLY, ad. in an artful, cunning, crafty, or skilful manner.

ARTILLERY, f. [a plural noun, artillerie, Fr.] the heavy engines of war, such as cannon, bombs, &c.

ARTISAN, [artizán, f. [artisan, Fr.] properly applied to those professors of trades which require the least exercise of the understanding; a low mechanic, manufacturer, or tradesman.

ARTIST, f. [artiste, Fr.] one who excels in those arts which require good natural parts; or one who understands both the theory and practice of the art which he professes.

ARTLESS, a. without art, design, craft, or cunning.

ARTLESSLY, ad. in a simple, innocent, and undesigned manner.

A'RUNDEL, a town in Suffex, with the title of an earldom; it has a good market on Wednesdays, and a small one on Saturdays. It is seated on the side of a hill on the river Arun, over which it has a wooden bridge, where small ships may ride. The ancient castle is seated on the summit of the hill, and is said to be a mile in compass. It is eight miles E. of Chichester, and 63 S. W. by S. of London; governed by a mayor and burgeses, and sends two members to parliament; it has two streets paved with stones.

ARU'SPICES, f. an order of priesthood among the old Romans; soothsayers, who pretended to foretell things to come, by inspecting the entrails of beasts.

AS, conjunct. [als, Teut.] referring to an action, or time past, in the same manner; when it answers so or such, it is used for that. "So uncertain, as they require a great deal of examination." Bac. In a particular respect; as far as a particular relation extends; like, or of the same kind. By an ellipsis, for as if. Referring to the present time, it implies something done, during that particular action, at the same time. "Whistled as he went." Dryd. According to, or in what manner. "As they please." Boyle. Answering to, like, or same, it is used as a relative, and implies whicb. "The same crime, as he committed." When at the beginning of two sentences immediately following each other, it denotes a likeness or comparison between them. Answering so, it implies condition, or the same manner. "Some peculiarity as well as his face." Locke.

ASAFOE'TIDA, f. a very stinking gum, which, according to Kempfer, is drawn from a root of an umbelliferous plant, which grows in the province of Charasan in Persia. It has large thick roots, with few fibres, black without, and full of white foetid juice; a medicine prescribed in all nervous complaints.

A'SAPH ST. an Episcopal city of Flintshire, in North Wales, seated on the river Elwy, where it unites with the river Clayd, and over both there is a bridge. It is a very poor place; and of note only for its cathedral. It has a small market on Saturdays. It is 24 miles W. N. W. of Chester; and 211 N. W. of London.

ASBE'STINE, a. [from ἀσβέστος, Gr.] something which cannot be destroyed by fire.

ASBE'STOS, f. a sort of native fossil stone, which may be split into threads and filaments, from one to ten inches in length, very fine, brittle, yet somewhat tractable: It has the wonderful property of remaining unconsumed in the fire, which only whitens it.

ASCA'RIDES, f. [ἀσκαρῖς, Gr.] small, white, round, and short worms.

To ASCEND, v. n. [ascendo, Lat.] to rise upwards from the earth. Figuratively, to advance from any degree of knowledge to another. In Genealogy, to trace a pedigree backwards towards its first founders.

ASCENDABLE, a. that which may be ascended.

ASCENDANT, f. [ascendant, Fr.] in Morality, superiority or influence, whereby one man or thing unreasonably biases or tyrannizes over another. Figuratively, the greatest height or perfection. In Genealogy, ancestors, or those nearest the root of a pedigree.

ASCENDENCY, f. a bias; an undue influence or superiority.

ASCENDING, part. [ascendens, Lat.] going upwards from the earth. In Astronomy, those degrees, or stars which are above the horizon. The ascending node of a planet is that point of its orbit, wherein it is found in its motion towards the north.

ASCENSION, f. [ascensio, Lat.] a motion upwards. Ascension, in Astronomy, is either right or oblique. The difference between right and oblique ascension is what the astronomers mean by ascensional difference. Ascension-day, the day on which the ascension of our Saviour is commemorated, commonly called Holy Thursday, the Thursday but one before Whituntide.

ASCENSIVE, a. [from ascendo, Lat.] that which is in motion upwards; that which is in a rising state.

ASCENT, f. [ascensus, Lat.] motion upwards; the place by which an eminence may be climbed. Figuratively, a high place or eminence. In Physics, the ascent of fluids is their rising above the level of their own surfaces, &c. In Logic, a kind of argument; wherein we rise from particulars to universals.

To ASCERTA'IN, v. a. [ascertener, Fr.] to determine the signification of any word; to take away all doubt.

ASCERTA'INER, f. one who limits or determines the signification of a doubtful expression.

ASCERTA'INMENT, f. the determining the signification of a doubtful expression; a settled rule or standard.

ASCETIC, a. [ἀσκητικός, Gr.] employed only in exercises of devotion and mortification.

ASCETIC, f. [ἀσκητικός, Gr.] one who practises a greater degree of austerities and mortification than others.

A'SCI, f. [from ἄσκησις, Gr.] in Geography, gaily, that inhabitants of the Torrid Zone who have no shadow at certain times of the year, because the sun is then vertical, or shines perpendicularly on their heads.

ASCITES, f. [from ascus, Gr.] in Medicine, a kind of dropsy, which principally affects the abdomen, or lower belly, and is remedied by tapping.

ASCITIC, a. caused by an ascites; dropical, or resembling an ascites.

ASCITIOUS, [ascitibus, a. [ascititus, Lat., asc which is counterfeit or spurious.

TO ASCRIBE, v. a. [ascribo, Lat.] to designate as a cause; to attribute to; to impute.

ASCRPTION, f. the act of ascribing.

ASH, f. [æf, Sax.] in Botany, the fraxinus. It has pinnated leaves ending in a lobe. In male flowers have no petals; and the germs has one seed like a bird's tongue.

ASHAMED, a. to be conscious of having done something which a person may find fault with.

ASHBOURNE, a town in Derbyshire; with a market on Saturdays. Dist. 139½ miles from London.

ASHBURTON, a town in Devonshire, which has a market on Tuesdays and Saturdays. It sends two members to parliament. Dist. 94 miles from London.

ASHBY DE LA ZOUCH, a town in Leicestershire, which has a market on Saturdays. Dist. 115 miles from London.

ASHEN, a. made of ash, or ash-wood.

ASHES, f. [has no singular, asces, Sax.] that substance which bodies are reduced to by burning.

ASHFORD, a town in Kent, which has a market on Saturdays. It is 57 miles from London.

ASHLAR, f. in Masonry, free-stones, as they come out of the quarry, of different lengths, breadths, and thickness.

ASHLING, f. in Building, quartering in garrets, about two foot and a quarter or three feet high from the floor, and reaching to the rafters.

ASHORE, ad. to the shore, on land, or to the land.

ASHWEDNESDAY, f. the first day of Lent, when, in the primitive church, notorious sinners were put to open penance, thus: They appeared at the church-door bare-footed, and clothed in sackcloth, where being examined, their discipline was proportioned according to their offences; after which being brought into the church, the bishop singing the seven penitential psalms, they prostrated themselves, and with tears begged absolution; the whole congregation having ashes on their heads, to signify, that they were both mortal, and decreed to be burnt to ashes for their sins.

ASHY, a. resembling the ash in colour, or of a whitish grey.

ASIA, one of the four great parts of the world, and the second in order. It is bounded on the N. by the frozen sea, on the E. by the Eastern-Ocean, which is part of the South-Sea, on the S. by the Indian-Sea, and on the W. by Europe and Africa. It is of larger extent than any of the three parts in our continent; and it is generally said that the first man was created here; though many are of a different opinion, arising from the uncertainty where the garden of Eden was placed. But be that as it will, arts and sciences were early cultivated here; though they are thought to come originally from Egypt; but all the considerable religions now known had their first beginning in Asia; and there are still a great number of people who maintain their ancient tenets, which, according to them are a hundred thousand years old. They have one sort of religion in China, and another in India, whose priests are the Bramins; not to mention the Jews, Christians, and Mahometans, whose beginnings are sufficiently known to all the world. This was the seat of several ancient empires, or monarchies; such as that of the Assyrians, Medes, Persians, and Greeks. It is 4740 miles in length from the Dardanel on the W. to the Eastern shore of Tartary; and 4380 in breadth from the most southern part of Malacca to the most northern cape of Nova Zembla. It may be divided into ten great parts, namely, Turkey in Asia, Arabia, Persia, the Mogul's empire, with the Two Peninsulas of India, Thibet, China, and Corea, Great and Little Bocharia, with Carazm, Little and Great Tartary, Siberia, and the islands. The Governments of Asia are generally monarchical; and Turkey, Persia, the Mogul's empire, Thibet, and China, are subject to single monarchs; but the rest divided among several sovereigns; so that there are reckoned seven emperors, thirty kings, besides petty princes, and the rajahs of India, which are very numerous. With regard to the extent of their religions, the Christian is but small in respect of the Mahometan, which comprehends one-third of Asia; and the Pagan is about twice as much extended as the Mahometan. Besides these, some pretend there is the natural religion, which has about as many followers as the Christian. The languages are so many and so various, that it is impossible to enumerate them; but the chief are the Turkish, the Grecian, the Arabick, the Chinese, the Persian, and the Old Indian. In short, every country and island has almost a distinct language. Besides the animals we have in Europe, there are lions, leopards, tigers, camels, elephants, rhinoceroses, and many others. There are several great lakes; but the principal are the Caspian Sea, which is 2000 miles in circumference, and the lake Aral which is about half as much, and has not been long known to the Europeans. In Painting, Asia is represented by a woman wearing a garland of various flowers and fruits; dressed in a rich embroidered veltment; holding in her right-hand branches and roots of cassia, pepper, cloves, &c. and in her left a smocking censor; with a camel kneeling by her.

ASIDE, ad. applied to situation, that which is not straight. Opposed to perpendicular.

cular, out of, or deviating from its true direction; not directly towards; or from the company.

A'SININE, a. partaking of the nature of an ass.

To ASK, v. a. [ascian, Sax.] to desire a thing; to demand; to put a question; to enquire; to require.

ASKA'NCE, ASKAU'NCE, or ASKAU'NT, ad. a look, wherein the pupils of each eye are turned to the corners of the eyelid; obliquely, or with a leer, and is expressive of slyness or disdain.

ASKER, f. the person who makes a request or enquiry.

ASKE'W, ad. aside, wherein the pupils are drawn to one corner of the eye, and generally bespeaks contempt or disdain.

ASKRIG, a town in Yorkshire, whose market is on Thursdays. Distance 243½ miles from London.

ASLANT, ad. on one side; obliquely.

ASLE'EP, ad. in that state wherein all the senses are in a manner closed, the eyes shut, and a person enjoys that rest from animal labour called sleep.

ASLO'PE, ad. declining; obliquely.

ASP, or A'SPIC, f. [aspis, Lat.] a kind of serpent, whose poison is so dangerous and quick in its operation, that it kills without the possibility of a remedy. It is very small, and those who are bitten by it die by sleep and lethargy.

ASPA'LATHUS, f. a plant called the Rose of Jerusalem. The wood of a prickly tree, heavy, oleaginous, somewhat sharp and bitter to the taste, and anciently in much repute for an astringent, but now little used. An oil drawn from it is of an admirable scent, and very comfortable to the head to which perfumes are not offensive.

ASPA'RAGUS, f. a garden plant, the root of which is deservedly reckoned one of the five openers, and is an ingredient in all compositions intended to cleanse the viscera, especially where their obstructions threaten the jaundice and dropsy. It is likewise used in many disorders of the breast, as operating by urine, and is of service in most such cases.

A'SPECT, f. [aspectus, Lat.] the face; a peculiar cast of the countenance; look or appearance; the front situation of a building, or direction towards any point. In Astrology, the situation of stars or planets with respect to each other.

To ASPE'CT, v. a. [aspicio, Lat.] to look upon; to behold.

A'SPEN, or ASP, f. [aspe, Sax.] a kind of poplar, whose leaves are supposed to be always trembling: used adjectively for things made out of its wood, or those which resemble it, with respect to the trembling of its leaves.

A'SPER, a. [Lat.] rough or rugged. Spiritus asper, in Grammar, an accent in this form [´], which shews that the letter under it is to be pronounced strong, and the breath to supply the place of an b.

To A'SPERATE, v. a. [aspero, Lat.] to roughen, or make rough.

ASPE'RITY, f. [asperitas, Lat.] unevenness, or roughness, applied to the surface of bodies and pronunciation. Moroseness, or roughness, applied to the behaviour or temper.

To ASPE'RSE, v. a. [aspergo, Lat.] to say any thing injurious to the character of another; to slander; to calumniate.

ASPE'RSION, f. [aspersio, Lat.] the action of casting water about, so as it may fall in small drops, not in full streams. Sprinkling, applied in Divinity to the mode of baptism commonly practised, opposed to immersion. Figuratively, an unmerited calumny or slander.

ASPHA'LITOS, f. a solid, brittle, black, bituminous, inflammable substance, resembling pitch, and chiefly found swimming on the surface of the lake Asphaltites, or Dead Sea, where anciently stood the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. It is used as a principal ingredient in the ground that engravers spread upon their plates, which they intend to etch, or eat in a figure with aqua fortis.

ASPHA'LITIC, a. [from ασφαλτῆς, Gr.] bituminous, or pitchy.

A'SPHODEL, f. [asphodelus, Lat.] in Botany, the day lily. There are six species; and were by the Ancients planted near burying places to supply the manes of the deceased with nurture.

To A'SPIRATE, v. a. [aspiro, Lat.] to lay a great stress of voice upon any syllable or letter. When used neuterly, to be pronounced with stress and vehemence, or a full breath.

A'SPIRATED, a. [aspiratus, Lat.] pronounced with some degree of roughness, stress, or vehemence of voice, or a full breath.

ASPIRA'TION, f. [aspiratio, Lat.] a sighing for, or longing after; an ardent desire, generally used in a spiritual sense. Among Grammarians, it denotes the pronouncing a syllable with some vehemence; as those words beginning with the letter b, bear, beat, if pronounced softly would be ear, eat.

To ASPI'RE, v. n. [aspiro, Lat.] to endeavour to attain something above our present circumstances, rank, or power. Used with the particles to and after.

ASQUI'NT, ad. [from scendan, Sax.] a position of the eyes, wherein they do not both seem to look the same way; obliquely.

ASS, f. [asinus, Lat.] in Natural History, a domestic animal, remarkable for its sluggishness, hardiness, patience in labour, coarseness of diet, and long life. Figuratively, the word implies a person of mean, abject spirit; basely patient under provocations; despicable and dull.

A'SSA, f. [in Pharmacy, divided into assa dulcis, or benzoin, and assa fetida] a gum or resin, of a brownish colour, a sharp taste, and a very strong offensive smell; from whence it receives both the name above-mentioned, and likewise that of devil's dung.

To ASSAULT, v. a. [assailir, Fr.] to attack, or fall upon, in order to subdue, as an enemy. Figuratively, to attack with arguments.

ASSAULTABLE, a. that which may be attacked.

ASSAULTANT, f. [assailant, Fr.] he who makes an attack, opposed to one who defends.

ASSAULTANT, s. using acts of violence against another; attacking.

ASSAULT, f. in Law, an offence committed in a field, by pulling or grubbing up by the roots these trees or bushes that form thickets or cover to beasts.

ASSASSIN, or ASSASSINATOR, f. [assassin, Fr.] one who murders another, either for hire or by treachery.

To ASSASSINATE, v. a. to murder another treacherously, revengefully, or for hire.

ASSASSINATION, f. the act of murdering by treachery, or for hire.

ASSAULT, f. [assault, Fr.] in War, a general and furious attack of a camp, or fortified place, with an intention to carry, or become master of it. This has lately been stiled camp de main, or a strong and vigorous impetuous. In Law, a violent injury offered to a man's person, which may be committed by offering a blow, or a terrifying speech.

To ASSAULT, v. a. in War, to make a general and furious attack, without any cover, on a camp, or fortified place, in order to carry, or become master of it; to offer violence to; to attack, or invade.

ASSAULTER, f. one who uses violence against another.

ASSAY, f. [essayer, Fr.] examination, trial, or attempt; attack. In Law, essay of weight and measures is the examination of them by the clerks of markets.

To ASSAY, v. a. [essayer, Fr.] to put to trial; to try.

ASSAYER, f. an officer of the mint, who uses metals, in order to determine their fineness, and how much they are above or below standard.

ASSAYING, f. the art of separating metals, sulphurs, mineral salts, and other bodies, from each other.

ASSAULTION, f. [assessatio, Lat.] in Roman Law, acquirement.

ASSEMBLAGE, f. [assemblage, Fr.] the assembling a number of individuals together, so as to form a whole; it differs from assembly, because fit is used of persons, and this of things.

To ASSEMBLE, v. a. [assembler, Fr.] to draw several things together, so as to form a whole; to bring several things together into one place. Used, neuterly, with the preposition near.

ASSEMBLY, f. [assemblée, Fr.] a company met together, either upon business or for recreation. In the Military Art, it is the second beating of a drum before a march, as a signal for the soldiers to strike their tents, roll them up, and stand to arms. Assemblies of the clergy are called convocations; synods; councils; the annual meeting of the church of Scotland is called a General Assembly.

ASSENT, f. [assensus, Lat.] that act of the mind whereby it takes, or acknowledges, any proposition to be true or false. In a more loose sense, agreement, or consent.

To ASSENT, v. n. [assentio, Lat.] to receive a thing as true.

To ASSERT, v. a. [asserto, Lat.] to affirm a thing as true; to claim a thing as one's due; to defend both by words and actions.

ASSERTION, f. the affirming a thing as true; a proposition conceived or delivered in positive terms.

ASSERTIVE, a. positive; obstinate; dogmatical.

ASSERTOR, f. he who affirms any proposition as true; the author or supporter of any opinion.

To ASSESS, v. a. [assessare, Ital.] to rate or tax; to fine a person.

ASSESSMENT, f. the sum, fine, or custom, levied upon any person or commodity; the act of levying a fine.

ASSESSOR, f. in Law, one who sits on the bench with a judge, in order to assist him with advice; one who is next or equal to another in rank or dignity.

ASSETS, f. [used only in the plural, from assets, Fr.] the goods of a person deceased, which are appropriated to the payment of his debts.

To ASSEVER, or ASSEVERATE, v. a. [assevero, Lat.] to affirm or deny a thing, not only with an oath, but likewise with imprecations, execrations, or curses.

ASSEVERATION, f. [asseveratio, Lat.] the act of affirming a thing with great solemnity by an oath or imprecation.

ASSIDUITY, f. [assiduité, Fr.] a constant attention or application to business; unwearied diligence.

ASSIDUOUS, a. [assiduus, Lat.] unwearied; incessant; continual and unremitting.

ASSIDUOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to exercise diligence without weariness, and application without intermission.

ASSIENTO, f. [Span.] a Spanish word, signifying a contract or bargain.

To ASSIGN, [assigne, the i is pronounced long] v. a. [assigno, Lat.] to distribute; to allot; to appoint. In Law, to transfer property to another.

ASSIGNABLE, [assignable] a. that which may be determined, settled, fixed, or marked out.

ASSIGNATION, f. [assignation, Fr.] the act of transferring property to another.

ASSIGNEE, [assigné] f. [assigné, Fr.] one appointed by another to do an act, or perform any business in his stead. Commonly applied to those persons who are entrusted with the estate of a bankrupt, and are by law empowered to collect his debts, and make a dividend of his effects to his several creditors.

ASSIGNER, [assigner] f. he who sets out, determines, or appoints.

ASSIGNMENT, [assignment, f.] is the transferring by deed, the interest one has in a lease, or other thing, to another person. Assignments may be made of lands in fee for life or years, of an annuity, rent-charge, judgment, statute, &c.

ASSIMILABLE, a. [from assimilatio, Lat.] that which may be converted into the same nature, or be made like another.

To ASSIMILATE, v. a. [assimilo, Lat.] to convert to the same nature; to bring to a resemblance.

ASSIMILATION, f. in Physics, is that motion by which bodies convert other bodies related to them, or at least such as are prepared to be converted into their own substance and nature. Thus flame multiplies itself upon oily bodies, and generates new flames; air upon water, and produces new air; and all the parts, as well similar as organical, in vegetables and animals, first attract with some election or choice, nearly the same common, or not very different juices for aliment, and afterwards assimilate or convert them into their own nature.

To ASSIMULATE, v. a. [assimulo, Lat.] to put on a counterfeit appearance; to feign.

ASSIMULATION, f. [assimulatio, Lat.] a counterfeit, or specious resemblance.

To ASSIST, v. a. [assistere, Fr.] to relieve; to help.

ASSISTANCE, f. [assistance, Fr.] the act of helping; help.

ASSISTANT, a. that which supplies the defects of another; that which helps.

ASSISTANT, f. one who helps another.

ASSIZE, or ASSIZE, f. [assise, Fr.] is used for the court, place, or time, when and where the writs and processes, whether civil or criminal, are decided by judges and jury. Assize is either general, when judges take their respective circuits, with commission to take all assize; or special, where a commission is granted to particular persons for taking an assize for one or two causes only. All the counties of England are divided into six circuits, and the judges are assigned by the king's commission for every circuit, who now hold the assizes twice a year, in every county (though by Magna Charta they were sent but once a year) except in Middlesex, where the courts of record sit, and the counties palatine. The term is likewise applied to signify the whole process of a writ; a jury; a statute for regulating the weight of bread; and the bread itself, as prescribed by the statute.

To ASSIZE, v. a. to fix the price, weight, or size of a commodity.

ASSIZER, or ASSISER, f. an officer who has the inspection into the weights and measures of commodities.

ASSOCIABLE, a. [associabilis, Lat.] that which may be joined or united to something else.

To ASSOCIATE, v. a. [associare, Fr.] to join as a companion; to make one of a company. To join inseparately, applied to ideas.

ASSOCIATED, a. [associatus, Lat.] confederated; joined as accomplices; making part of a society, or company.

ASSOCIATE, f. one who is joined to another as assistant, companion, partner, confederate, or accomplice.

ASSOCIATION, f. the act of uniting; union; society; a contract or treaty, by which two or more are united together for their mutual assistance, for the better carrying on any design. In Physics, combination, or union.

To ASSOIL, [affouire, Fr.] in Law, to deliver or discharge a person from excommunication.

ASSONANCE, f. [assonance, Fr.] resemblance of one sound to another resembling it. In Rhetoric or Poetry, it is where the words of a phrase or verse have nearly the same sound or termination, but make no proper rhyme; these are accounted vicious in English, though an elegance among the Romans.

ASSONANT, part. [assonant, Fr.] to range things in classes, according to their resemblance with each other.

To ASSORT. v. a. [assortir, Fr.] to range in classes.

ASSORTMENT. f. [assortement, Fr.] in Trade, a stock of goods, consisting of various pieces of different sorts. In Painting, the proportion and harmony between the several parts.

To ASSUAGE, [assuage, f.] v. a. [assuado, Lat.] to cool, or lessen, applied to heat; to calm, applied to the wind; to pacify or appease, applied to passion or rage; to ease, applied to pain. In its general sense, it implies the lessening the violence of something furious. Neuterly, to abate, or grow less.

ASSUAGEMENT, [assuagement, f.] that which lessens the violence of any thing.

ASSUAGER, [assuager, f.] one who pacifies rage, appeases anger, or lessens pain.

ASSUASIVE, [assuasive, a.] [from assuado, Lat.] that which has a great influence; that which assuages, mitigates, or pacifies.

ASSUETUDE, f. [assuetudo, Lat.] the being accustomed to any thing; custom.

To ASSUME, v. a. [assumo, Lat.] to take; to represent a character; to take up one's self; to arrogate; or claim what is not one's due.

ASSUMER, f. one who claims or arrogates more than is his due; an arrogant person.

ASSUMPSIT, [pron. without the p.] f. a voluntary or verbal promise, whereby a man takes upon him to perform or pay any thing to another.

ASSUMPTION, [pron. without the p.] f. [assumptio, Lat.] the act of appropriating any thing to one's self; the supposing a thing true without any formal proof. The assumption of the Virgin Mary is celebrated on the 15th of August. In Logic, the minor, or second proposition in a categorical syllogism; sometimes the consequence drawn from the major and minor.

ASSUMPTIVE, [pron. without the p.] a. that which a person may take, or appropriate to himself. In Heraldry, assumptive arms are those which a person may use as his own.

ASSURANCE,

ASSURANCE, [the syllables assu at the beginning of this and the four following words are by some pronounced like assu] f. [assurance, Fr.] a certain expectation of something future; confidence; trust; conviction. In Commerce, a contract by which a person subjects himself to make good the damages to be sustained by another in a voyage, or by fire. See INSURANCE.

To ASSURE, v. a. [assurer, Fr.] to persuade a person of the certainty of a thing; to make a person confident, by removing the cause of doubt or fear; to be betrothed.

ASSUREDLY, ad. in such a manner as leaves no doubt; certainly; undoubtedly.

ASSUREDNESS, f. the state of a person who is certain, or entirely free from doubt.

ASSURER, f. [assurer, Fr.] one who removes the doubts of another. In Commerce, one who indemnifies another against hazards &c.

ASSYRIA, an ancient empire of Asia, comprehending the modern provinces of Curdistan, Diarbeck, and Irac-arabic.

ASTERISK, f. [ἀστέριος, Gr.] a character used to render any particular passage in the text conspicuous, or to refer to some note in the margin, or at the bottom of the page marked thus (*): when two or three are placed together in a line, they denote that some word is to be supplied, or is wanting ***.

ASTER, ad. a sea term, in the hinder part of a ship; or any thing situated behind the ship.

ASTHMA, f. [ἀσθμα, Gr. in pron. the b is dropped] in Medicine, a difficulty of breathing arising from a disorder in the lungs, attended with a great uneasiness in the diaphragm, or pectoria.

ASTHMATIC, or ASTHMA'TICAL, a. affected or troubled with an asthma.

To ASTONISH, v. a. [astonner, Fr.] to occasion surprize by the immensity and novelty of an object; to amaze.

ASTONISHMENT, f. a surprize, occasioned by an immense and new object; distinguished from admiration, both by the degree, and the nature of the object.

To ASTOUND, v. a. [estonner, Fr.] to astonish; to confound with wonder.

ASTRADDLE, ad. to sit on a thing, so that one of its legs should be on each side of it. See ASTRIBL.

ATRAGAL, f. [ἀτράγαλος, Gr.] in Anatomy, a bone of the tarsus, with a convex extremity, articulated with the tibia by a synchondrosis, commonly called the ankle bone. In Architecture, a little round member, in the form of a ring or bracelet, serving as an ornament to the tops and bottoms of columns. In Gunnery, the little moulding on a piece of cannon, of which there are generally three on each piece.

ATRAL, a. [from astrum, Lat.] that which belongs to, or depends on, the stars. Astral year is the time which the earth takes to make its revolution round the sun.

ASTRAY, ad. wandering from the right or direct path. Figuratively, wrong, or in an error.

ASTRE'A, according to the Heathen Mythology, was the daughter of Jupiter and Themis, and goddess of Justice; in the golden age, she came from heaven to dwell on earth; but the wickedness of the iron age was such, that she fled to heaven again, and was placed in the Zodiac.

To ASTRICT, v. a. [astringo, Lat.] to lessen the distance between two objects; to make the parts of a thing come nearer to each other, opposed to relax. Constringe is most commonly used.

ASTRICTION, f. [astriccio, Lat.] the act or power of making the parts of a body approach to each other.

ASTRICTIVE, or ASTRICTORY, a. that which has a styptic, or binding quality.

ASTRIDE, ad. a posture wherein the legs are placed at a distance from each other. Open or wide, applied to the legs, opposed to close, or together.

To ASTRINGE, v. a. [astringo, Lat.] to press or close together; to force the parts closer to each other.

ASTRINGENT, part. [astringens, Lat.] in Medicine, that which contracts the dimension of the vessels by its roughness and asperity, and thickens the fluids; when used internally, opposed to laxative; when externally, opposed to styptic.

ASTROLABE, f. [ἀστρολάβιον, Gr.] in Astronomy, a system or assemblage of the different circles of the sphere, resembling an armillary sphere, invented by Hipparchus; but being afterwards altered by Ptolemy to a plane surface, called a planisphere, the word is at present applied to a planisphere or stereographic projection of the sphere upon the plane of one of the great circles.

ASTROLOGER, f. [astrologus, Lat.] one who pretends to predict future events from the supposed influences of the stars.

ASTROLOGIC, or ASTROLOGICAL, a. relating or agreeable to the principles of astrology.

ASTROLOGICALLY, ad. according to the principles of astrology, or after the manner of an astrologer.

ASTROLOGY, f. [astrologia, Lat.] the art of foretelling future events from the aspects, positions, and influences of the stars.

ASTRONOMER, f. [from ἀστρον and νόμος, Gr.] a person who applies himself to the study of astronomy.

ASTRONOMIC, or ASTRONOMICAL, a. that which is founded upon the principles of astronomy.

ASTRONOMY, f. [ἀστρονομία, Gr.] a science which teaches the knowledge of the celestial bodies, their magnitudes, motions, distances, periods, eclipses, and order, the conjunction and opposition of the planets, and any other of their mutual aspects, with the time when any of them did or will happen. Astronomy onomy is divided into the ancient and modern. Ancient Astronomy is such as the art flood under Ptolemy and his followers, who supposed the earth quiescent in the center, and that all the heavenly bodies performed their revolutions round it. The modern, or new Astronomy, is that which has been cultivated since the time of Copernicus, who revived Pythagoras and Philolaus's opinion of the motion of the earth, and laid the foundation of the true solar system. In Painting, Astronomy is represented like a woman, with a silver crescent on her forehead, an azure mantle and a watchet scarf, besprikled with golden stars.

A'STRO-THEOLOGY, f. [astrum and theologia, Lat.] the proofs of a Deity drawn from an astronomical view of the heavens.

A'STWICK, a village in the W. Riding of Yorkshire, five miles N. W. of Settle.

ASU'NDER, ad. at a distance from each other; apart, or separate; dissolution of the union of two or more bodies.

ASY'LUM, f. a sanctuary, a place of refuge, which sheltered a criminal, and secured him from falling into the hands of any officer of justice.

ASY'MMETRY, f. [ἀσυμμετρία, Gr.] a defect of proportion, harmony, or correspondence between the parts of a thing. In Mathematics, the incommensurability of two quantities, when they have no common measure.

ASY'MPTOTES, f. [ἀσυμπτῶτες, Gr.] are right lines which approach nearer and nearer to some curve; but which would never meet.

ASY'NDETON, f. [ἀσύνδετον, Gr.] a figure in Grammar, when a conjunction copulative is omitted.

AT, prep. [æt, Sax.] before a place it signifies sometimes, close to; and at other times, in it. Before a word implying time, it denotes the very instant in which a thing was, or will be, done; and sometimes is put without the word time in the same sense. Used instead of with, it implies cause, or on account of. "At this news he dies." Shakesp. Before an adjective of the superlative degree, it implies manner, or perfection. Before a substantive, it sometimes denotes a particular circumstance, and gives it an adverbial meaning; as, at ease, i. e. easy. After be, it implies design, intention, or employment. "She knew what he would be at." Hud. Used with command, it implies subject. "Thou art least at my command." Dryd. Sometimes at signifies from; as, "Endeavour to deserve something at our hands." Pope. At, joined with all, implies, in any respect, degree or manner. "Most women have no characters at all." Pope.

ATE, the preter of EAT.

ATHA'NOR, f. a digesting furnace to keep heat for some time.

A'THEISM, f. [atheïsmos, Fr.] the opinion of those who deny the existence and being of a God, the creator and preserver of the world.

A'THEIST, f. [ἄθεος, Gr.] one who denies the existence of a God, the creator and preserver of all things.

ATHEISTICAL, a. impious, or agreeable to the principles of an atheist.

ATHEISTICALLY, ad. after the manner of an atheist.

A'THEOUS, a. [ἄθεος, Gr.] opposite, or contrary to the belief of a Deity; atheistical.

ATHERO'MA, f. [Gr.] a tumour, or wen which neither yields to the touch, discolors the skin, or causes pain.

A'THERSTONE, a market-town in Warwickshire, 10½ miles distant from London. The market is on Tuesdays. It is indifferently large and well built.

ATHI'RST, ad. wanting drink, or adry.

ATHLE'TÆ, f. [from ἄθλος, Gr.] persons of strength and activity, exercised for the public games of Greece and Rome, and exhibiting their skill in such exploits as required bodily strength.

ATHLE'TIC, a. [from athleta, Lat.] strong, vigorous, and active of body; robust.

ATHWART, prep. transverse; across. Through. Used adverbially, it implies, in a manner vexatious and perplexing; wrong.

ATILT, ad. like one making a thrust.

ATLAN'TIC, f. [from Atlas] in Geography, that part of the ocean which lies between Africa and America.

A'TLAS, f. [Lat.] a collection of maps, generally folio, in allusion to the fable of Atlas's bearing the world on his shoulders. In Anatomy, the first vertebra of the neck, which lies next to, and supports the head. In Architecture, those statues, or half-statues, of men, used instead of columns or pilasters to support any member of architecture, such as a balcony, &c. They are likewise named Telamones.

A'TMOSPHERE, f. [ἄτμος; and σφαῖρα, Gr.] air. In Physics, that thin elastic fluid with which the earth is covered to a certain height, gravitates towards its center, and on its surface, is carried along with it, and partakes of all its motions, both annual and diurnal: some confine the term only to that part of the air which is nearest the earth, receives its vapours and exhalations, and refracts the rays of light. Its whole weight is 14,831,308,800,000,000lb. troy, and its height, according to De la Hire, 16 leagues, or 48 miles. See AIR.

ATMOSPHERICAL, a. that which belongs to the atmosphere.

A'TOM, f. [ἄτομος, Lat.] such a small particle of matter as cannot be physically divided. Atoms are not accounted indivisible on account of their want of extension; but on account of their solidity, hardness, and impenetrability, which leave no vacancy for the admission of foreign force to separate and disunite them, and consequently exclude a division. Thus it is necessary they should be indissoluble, in order to their being incommutable. The ancients ascribed gravity to Atoms, and consequently endued with motion; and observing, that their falling perpendicularly could not join or unite them together, they added a fortuitous motion side-ways, and provided them with certain hooked parts, to enable them the better to hang together; whence, from a casual jumble of these hooked atoms, they supposed this universe to have been formed.

that

ATOMICAL, a. consisting of, or relating to, atoms.

ATOMIST, f. one who professes the Corporation philosophy.

TO ATONE, v. n. to agree, or accord.

ATONELY, to make satisfaction for; to compensate; to expiate; to make a recompense.

ATONEMENT, f. reconciliation, agreement, concord; the uniting two persons at variance with each other.

ATONY, f. in Medicine, want of proper tension, or tone, in the solids of a human body.

ATOP, ad. on the highest part of a thing.

ATRABILARIOUS, a. [from atra and bilis, Lat.] that which affects with a disorder flowing from a black adust state of the blood; called melancholy.

ATRABILARIOUSNESS, f. that quality which causes a person to be deemed melancholic.

ATRAMENTAL, a. [from atramentum, Lat.] that which blackens, or has the qualities of ink.

ATRAMENTOUS, a. black, or having the quality of ink.

ATROCIOUS, a. [from atrox, Lat.] that which expresses a great, if not the highest, degree of wickedness in the committer; that which is commonly, enormously, and flagrantly wicked.

ATROCIOUSNESS, f. that quality which causes a person to be extremely, obstinately, and enormously criminal.

ATROCIOUSLY, ad. in an atrocious manner.

ATROCITY, f. [from atrocitas, Lat.] that which heightens the enormity of a crime, and makes it an object of horror.

ATROPHY, f. in Phycic, an universal consumption, proceeding from the whole habit of the body, without any distemper of the lungs, or other central, or any remarkable fever. See CONSUMPTION.

ATROPOS, in Heathen Mythology, one of the three fatal sisters, that cut the thread, or put a period to the life of man.

TO ATTACH, v. a. [from attacher, Fr.] in Law, to seize either on a person or his goods; to have an affection, desire, or inclination towards a thing.

ATTACHMENT, f. [from attachement, Fr.] in Law, is the taking, securing, or detaining a person or thing by virtue of a writ or precept.

It differs from an arrest in this, that an arrest is only against the body, whereas an attachment is often against the goods only, and sometimes against both body and goods. An arrest, therefore, issues out of an inferior court by precept only, but an attachment out of a higher court, either by precept or writ. By the custom of London, and several other places, a man can attach money or goods in the hands of a stranger, to satisfy himself. Attachment also signifies the love, zeal, affection, one man has for another's interest or welfare.

TO ATTA'CK, v. a. [from attaquer, Fr.] in War, an effort or attempt made upon a person, or a work, in order to conquer or subdue them. Figuratively, to set upon, invade, or treat any one as an enemy, either by actions or words.

ATTA'CK, f. [from attaque, Fr.] in War, an attempt to conquer a body of troops, or master a fortified place. A false attack is that which is made only to divert the attention of the enemy, and to conceal that of the main one. Figuratively, any hostile attempt, whether it consists in actions or words.

ATTA'CKER, f. the person who makes an attempt on a body of soldiers or a fortified place, in order to subdue or conquer them; any one who uses another with violence.

TO ATTAI'N, v. a. [from atteindre, Fr.] to make one's own by labour or mental application; to procure, or obtain; to reach; to arrive at, or acquire.

ATTAI'NABLE, a. that which may be obtained, acquired or procured.

ATTAI'NABLENESS, f. the quality which renders a thing possible to be attained.

ATTAI'NDER, f. [from atteindre, Fr.] is when a person has committed felony or treason, and judgment is passed upon him. The children of such a person are thereby rendered incapable of being heirs to him, or to any other ancestor; and if he was noble before, his posterity are thereby degraded, and made base; nor can this corruption of blood be taken away, but by an act of parliament, or by reverting the judgment by a writ of error.

ATTAI'NMENT, f. that which a person makes his own by labour or mental application; the act or power of attaining.

TO ATTAI'NT, v. a. [from attenter or atteindre, Fr.] to pass sentence against a person either for felony, or treason, whereby he forfeits all his lands or hereditaments, his blood is corrupted, and his children rendered base. Figuratively, to debase, corrupt, or make infamous.

ATTAI'NT, f. in Law, is a writ which lies against a jury for giving a false verdict in a court of record, in a real or personal action, if the debt or damages exceed 40s. In such case, the ancient Law was, that the Jurors' meadows should be ploughed up, their houses thrown down, their woods grubbed up, and their lands and tenements forfeited to the king; but if the person who brought the Attaint be cast, he shall be imprisoned, and ranomed at the king's pleasure. But by statute the severity of the common Law is mitigated, where a petty Jury is attainted, and a pecuniary mulct imposed. Figuratively, a blot or stain, in allusion to the consequences of an attainder.

ATTAI'NTURE, f. See ATTAINDER.

TO ATTE'MPER, v. a. [from attempero, Lat.] to soften, applied to rigour; to render supportable, applied to heat; to lessen any quality by the mixture or addition of another. Figuratively, tively, to suit, adapt, or fit, in allusion to the tempering metals.

To ATTEMPERATE, v. a. [attempero, Lat.] to render agreeable to; to make suitable to.

To ATTEMPT, v. a. [attento, Fr.] to make a trial; to try, or endeavour.

ATTEMPT, f. an undertaking; a trial to do a thing; sometimes applied to the attacks of an enemy.

ATTEMPTER, f. the person who makes an endeavour; who tries, tempts, or attempts.

To ATTEND, v. a. [attendre, Fr.] to fix the mind to an object, when applied to speculation; to listen; to wait upon; to accompany; to follow; to expect; to stay for; to lay wait for. Used neuterly, it implies to yield attention; to stay, or delay.

ATTENDANCE, f. [attendance, Fr.] the act of waiting upon as a servant; service; the person in waiting; a servant.

ATTENDANT, a. [attendant, Fr.] waiting on another as an interior, including the idea of service.

ATTENDANT, f. one who accompanies another; a servant, or dependant of a nobleman; one who depends on another as a tutor; that which is inseparably united, as a concomitant or consequent.

ATTENDER, f. See ATTENDANT.

ATTENT, a. [attentus, Lat.] listening to, or applying the mind to the consideration of any object; intent.

ATTENTION, f. [attention, Fr.] in Logic, an operation of the mind which fixes it to any particular object, and engages it to consider it in such a manner as to acquire a distinct idea thereof, absorbing, as it were, all other ideas which offer themselves to the mind.

ATTENTIVE, a. [attentus, Lat.] the applying the mind or ear to one particular object.

ATTENTIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to consider, or listen to one particular object.

ATTENTIVENESS, f. that quality of mind wherein a person considers, or listens to a particular object, with a total disregard of all others.

ATTENUANT, part. and a. [attenuans, Lat.] that which makes thin or dilutes. Used substantively, in Medicine, for those medicines that resolve the viscosity of the humours in the human body, in order to promote their circulation, and discharge all noxious and excrementitious matter.

To ATTENUATE, v. a. to liquify or make thin.

ATTENUATION, f. [attenuation, Fr.] in Physics, applied to fluids, it is the act of rendering them more liquid and thinner than they were before; the effect of attenuating medicines, or certain efforts which nature itself makes to destroy the force of disorders. In a general sense, it implies the breaking or destroying the cohesion of the particles of any thing, and increasing their surface.

To ATTEST, v. a. [attestor, Lat.] to give a proof of the truth of a thing by evidence or writing.

ATTESTATION, f. [attestatio, Lat.] evidence, or proof of the truth of any fact, either by word or writing.

ATTIC, a. [Atticus, Lat.] in Architecture, a kind of building or shorter story over another, wherein no roof is to be seen, which is generally decorated with an order peculiar to itself, composed of the other five, but should resemble that most which is under it; the breadth of its pilaster should be equal to that underneath it, and just half its height. In Literature, it implies a brilliant kind of wit, and an inexpressible elegance of style peculiar to the people of Attica. Thus Attic salt, in Philology, is a delicate, poignant sort of wit or humour, peculiar to the Athenian writers; so Attic wit; means one that cannot be corrupted. Attic order is a small order raised upon a large one, by way of crowning, or to finish the building. Attic of a roof is a kind of parapet to a terras, platform, or the like. Attic base is a peculiar kind of base used by the ancient Architects in the Ionic order, and by Palladio and some others in the Doric. This is the most beautiful of all bases; and was used by Sir Christopher Wren in building St. Paul's Church, London.

To ATTIRE, v. a. [attirer, Fr.] to adorn with cloaths or drefs. Figuratively, to embellish or adorn.

ATTIRE, f. cloaths or drefs to adorn or embellish a person. Among sportsmen, the Attire of a stag, consists of the bur, pearls, beam, gutters, antler, sur-antler, royal, sur-royal, and crotches; of a buck, of the bur, beam, brow-antler, advancer, palm, and spellers. In Botany, the third part of a division of a plant, including its generative parts; and divided into semi-form and stoid.

ATTIRER, f. one who attires or dresses another.

ATTITUDE, f. [attitude, Fr.] in Painting and Sculpture, the posture of a statue, whereby it expresses some action, or passion of the mind. Applied likewise to the stage, to imply the posture of an actor to express the sentiments of the poet.

ATTLEBOROUGH, [Attleboro] a town in Norfolk, distant from London 93½ miles. It has a market on Thursdays.

ATTOLENT, a. [attollens, Lat.] that which raises or lifts up. In Anatomy, applied to those muscles which raise the parts they belong to.

ATTORNEY, f. [attornatus, Law Lat.] a person appointed by another to do something in his stead. Attorney at Law is one retained to prosecute, or defend a suit at Law. In the Civil Law they are called Procurators. Attornies, by a late order of all the Judges, are to be admitted of some of the inns of court or Chancery (except house-keepers in London and Westminster, &c.) and no Attorney shall put himself out of that society into which he is admitted, till he is admitted to some other society, and delivers a certificate thereof; and all Attornies Attornies are to be in Commons in the times ordered by the society to which they belong, otherwise shall be put out of the roll of Attornies. Attorney-General is a great officer, created by letters patent, to exhibit informations, prosecute for the crown in criminal causes, and file bills in the Exchequer for any thing concerning the king, in inheritance or profits. To him come warrants for making out all patents, grants, pardons, &c. His salary from the crown is 1000*l.* per annum.

To ATTORNEY, v. a. to perform or employ as proxy.

ATTORNNMENT, or ATTOURNMENT, f. [attournement, Fr.] in Law, the agreement of a tenant for life to the transferring of property to another.

To ATTRACT, v. a. [attrabo, Lat.] to draw towards itself; to allure or invite.

ATTRACT. f. that which has the power of alluring, engaging the affection, or attracting.

ATTRACTICAL, a. that which hath the power of drawing something towards it.

ATTRACTION, f. [attraction, Fr.] in Mechanics, the act of a moving power, by which a thing that may be moved is brought nearer, or drawn towards it. In the Newtonian system it is an indefinite principle, not implying a particular manner nor physical cause of action, but only a tendency of approaching, whether it proceed from any external cause, or be inherent in bodies themselves, excluding the idea of impulse from its consideration. It is divided into the attraction of gravity, and the attraction of cohesion. The attraction of gravity, called the centripetal force by mathematicians, is that by which all bodies tend towards the center, or act on each other at a distance: from hence proceed almost all the motions and changes in the system; it is by this principle that light bodies ascend, that projectiles are regulated in their courses, the vapours ascend, and the rain falls; the waves roll, the air presses, and the sea is swelled or decreased by the vicissitude of its flux and reflux. The attraction of cohesion is that which unites the insensible particles of bodies together into their different masses, and causes the roundness we see in drops of water or quicksilver. Figuratively, the power of alluring, enticing, or engaging the affections of a person. Attractions may be said to engage us; allurements to entice us; charms to seduce us.

ATTRACTIVE, a. [attrahif, Fr.] that which has the power of drawing another to itself: inviting, alluring, engaging.

ATTRACTIVE, f. that which can draw or engage the affections; differing from allurement, as that is used in a bad sense, but attraction generally in a good one. In Physic, Attrahives are medicines externally applied, that by their warmth and activity penetrate the pores, mixing with, and rarefying all obstructed matter, so as to fit it for discharge, upon laying open the part. These are what we call drawers, ripeners, maturants, and digestives.

ATTRACTIVELY, ad. in the manner of a thing, or person, which draws or allures something.

ATTRACTIVENESS, f. the quality by which a thing attracts, or allures.

ATTRACTOR, f. that which draws towards itself.

ATTRAHENT, part. [attrahens, Lat.] that which has the quality of drawing towards itself.

ATTRIBUTABLE, a. that which may be affirmed as belonging to a thing; that which may be ascribed or imputed to a thing or person.

To ATTRIBUTE, v. a. [attribuo, Lat.] to affirm as belonging to a thing; to ascribe as a property; to impute, or charge, applied to a cause.

ATTRIBUTE, f. [attribut, Fr.] the thing attributed to another; quality adherent. In a general sense, it is that which agrees with some person or thing; or a quality determining something to be after a certain manner. Thus understanding is an attribute of mind, and extension an attribute of body. That attribute which the mind conceives as the foundation of all the rest, is called its essential attribute; thus, extension is by some, and solidity by others, esteemed the essential attributes of body or matter. Attributes in Divinity, are the several qualities or perfections of the divine nature, and such as can be applied to God only; under which is included all that we can imagine to go to make up a perfect being, such as infinite goodness, power, justice, &c. The heathens appropriated a particular deity to each attribute; his power they called by the name of Jupiter; his wisdom, Apollo; his will, Fate; his wrath, Juno; &c. In Painting and Statuary, Attribute is some distinguishing addition to the principal figure; as the club to Hercules, the peacock to Juno, the eagle to Jupiter, &c.

ATTRIBUTE, f. something ascribed; character or reputation.

ATTRITE, a. [attritus, Lat.] worn off by rubbing two bodies together.

ATTRITENESS, f. quality produced by the rubbing of two bodies together, so as to wear off some of their surfaces.

ATTRITION, f. [attrition, Fr.] the action of rubbing two bodies together, so as to wear away or rub off some particles on their surfaces.

To ATTUNE, v. a. to put an instrument into tune; to make the voice or any instruments accord together, and sound the same notes, or key.

To AVAIL, v. a. [from valoir, Fr.] to turn to one's own use, benefit, profit, or advantage; to promote or procure; to be of use, or advantage.

AVAILABLE, a. applied to means, it signifies their suitability or efficacy to obtain the end; powerful, or proper.

AVANT-GUARD, f. [avantgarde, Fr.] in War, the first line or division of an army in battle array; or that part which is seen by the enemy, enemy, and marches first against him.

A'VARICE, f. [avarice, Fr.] in Morality, an immediate love and desire after riches, attended with extreme diffidence of future events, excessive precautions against the instability of fortune, making a person rob himself of the necessary comforts of life, for fear of diminishing his riches.

AVARI'CIOS, a. that which partakes of the nature of avarice.

AVARI'CIOSNESS, f. that quality which inclines a person to desire riches immoderately, to make no use of them when possessed of them, for fear of diminishing them, and denominates him an avaricious person.

AVA'ST, ad. [of ab and baesten, Belg.] Sea term; hold, stop.

AVAUNT, interj. [avant, Fr.] a word implying detestation and abhorrence; signifying, begone! out of my fight!

AU'BURNE, a. brown; tan coloured.

AU'CTION, f. [auctio, Lat.] a method of sale wherein goods are sold to the highest bidder.

AUCTIONE'ER, f. the manager of an auction.

AUDA'CIOS, a. [audacicus, Fr.] a term relative to the nature of an action; the disposition of mind of one who undertakes it; and the manner in which it is executed. With respect to the nature of the action, it implies something difficult, and attended with many obstacles; that the person is of such a disposition of mind as not to matter what difficulties he encounters; and that he shews a great deal of impudence in rendering his attempt effectual; so that the word is properly applied in a bad sense only.

AUDA'CIOSLY, ad. in such a manner as bespeaks a daring impudence.

AUDA'CIOSNESS, f. that quality which argues a disposition of mind that will induce a person to undertake any action, let the difficulties be what they will. Always used in a bad sense, and including the secondary idea of impudence.

AUDA'CITY, f. [audacitas, Lat.] a disposition of mind which makes a person capable of undertaking any difficult action, and frees him from those apprehensions which might render him inactive, or unfit for the offices of society.

AU'DIBLE, a. [audibilis, Lat.] that which is the object of hearing; that which may be heard.

AU'DIBLY, ad. in such a manner as to be heard.

AU'DIBLENESS, f. that which renders a thing the object of hearing, or to be heard.

AU'DIENCE, f. [audience, Fr.] that attention which is given to a person while he is speaking. In a court sense, the admission of ambassadors or public ministers to a king, in order to deliver the credentials of their sovereign, and to open the intentions for which they are sent. In History, the tribunals or courts of justice established by the Spaniards in America. Persons assembled in order to hear a public speaker. Audience Court, a court belonging to the archbishop of Canterbury, wherein differences upon elections, consecrations, institutions, marriages, &c. are heard; of equal authority with the Court of Arches.

AU'DIT, f. in Law, the hearing and examining the accounts of a person concerned in the receipt of money, by persons publickly appointed for that purpose.

To AU'DIT, v. a. [from audio, Lat.] to examine an account.

AU'DITOR, f. [Lat.] one who hears; one who is present when any thing is delivered in public; who examines and passes either public or private accounts.

AU'DITORY, a. [auditorius, Lat.] that which conduces to hearing. In Anatomy, the auditory nerves are a pair of nerves arising from the medulla oblongata, and distributed, the one to the ear, the soft and spongy part of which is the immediate cause of hearing; and the other to the eye, &c.

AU'DITORY, f. [auditorium, Lat.] a place where persons assemble to hear any discourse; a collection of persons so assembled.

A'VE MA'RY, f. a prayer used by the Romish church, and begins with those words, and implores her intercession.

To AVE'NGE, v. a. [avenger, Fr.] to punish in proportion to the enormity of crimes; and distinguished from revange, because that is always used in a bad, but this in a good sense.

AVEN'GEMENT, f. the act of punishing for crimes.

AVE'NGER, f. one who inflicts punishment for crimes.

A'VENTURE, f. in Law-books a mischance, causing a man's death without felony.

A'VENUE, f. [avenue, Fr.] a passage or opening. In Gardening, a walk of trees leading to a house. In Perspective it is a passage, which is narrower at the end than at the beginning, in order to make it appear the longer, or straight, when viewed from the narrowest end. In Fortification, the opening, inlet, or communications between, a fort and a bastion.

To AVE'R, v. a. [averer, Fr.] to affirm or assert a thing to be true with some degree of positiveness.

A'VERAGE, f. [averagium, Law Lat.] in Law, a due or service which a tenant owed his lord by his beast or carriage. In Sea Commerce, the accidents or misfortunes which happen to a ship or cargo, divided into simple, large or common, and small; an allowance given the master for his care of the goods, above the freight.

AVE'RMENT, f. in Law, the establishment of a thing by evidence; an offer to make good an exception pleaded in abatement of the plaintiff's action, and an actual doing it.

AVERSA'TION, f. [from aversus, Lat.] a term alluding to the motion of a person who detests any thing, which is that of turning away from it.

AVER'SE, a. [aversus, Lat.] hostile or angry with; unwilling, abhorring.

AVER'SELY,

AVE'RSELY, ad. in a manner which shews great unwillingness. Backwards, opposed to forwards.

AVER'SENESS, f. difficulty to be persuaded; unwillingness; backwardness.

AVE'RSION, f. [aversio, Fr.] dislike, arising from the disagreeableness of an object; the cause of dislike.

To AVERT, v. a. [averto, Lat.] to turn aside, to keep off.

AUF, f. [alf, Belg.] a person void of discretion, or common sense; a fool.

AU'GER, f. [egger, Belg.] in Mechanics, an instrument used by carpenters and coopers to bore holes with; consisting of a handle and bit.

AUGHT, pron. [aught, Sax.] any thing; applied to the extent of a person's knowledge, as far as.

To AUGMENT, v. a. [augmenter, Fr.] to increase the value or dimension of a thing by the addition of something else. SYNON. Our addition *augment*s with our fortune; and we are no sooner in possession of one hundred pounds, than we are eager to add to it another.

AUGMENT, f. [augment, Fr.] increase, applied to the dimensions of a body, or the progress of a disease.

AUGMENTATION, f. increase, enlargement, improvement. Also a court so called, erected 17 Hen. VIII. when by the suppression of the monasteries, the revenue of the crown was augmented; and the office still remains, in which are many curious records, though the court has been long since dissolved. In Heraldry, the additional charges to a coat of armour, frequently given as particular marks of honour, and generally borne either on the escutcheon or a crest; as have all the baronets of England, who have borne the arms of the province of Ulster in Ireland.

AUGUR, f. [Lat.] in Ancient History, one who pretended to foretell the success of any undertaking by the flight of birds, or manner in which the poultry eat their food.

To AUGUR, v. n. to foretell; to guess at; to presage.

To AUGURATE, v. n. [auguro, Lat.] to predict by signs, after the manner of an augur.

AUGURA'TION, f. the practice of determining future events in the manner of augurs.

AUGURIAL, a. according to the principles of an augur.

AUGURY, f. [augurium, Lat.] in Antiquity, a species of divination, or the art of foretelling future events, and distinguished into five sorts, namely, augury from the heavens; from birds; from chickens; from quadrupeds; and from portentous events. Of this kind are also the more modern magic, astrology, palmistry, &c. which, though formerly very much practised, are now justly exploded as inconsistent with reason and true philosophy.

AUGUST, a. [augustus, Lat.] that which may claim reverence on account of its dignity or rank, or expect awe from its appearance.

AUGUST, f. [from Augustus] since the alteration of the stile, the eighth month of the year, called by the Romans Sextilis, or the sixth month from March; but named August from Augustus Cæsar. It was represented by the ancients under the figure of a young man with a fair countenance, crowned with a garland of wheat, a basket of fruit on his arm, a sickle in his hand, and bearing a victim.

AUGUSTINES, f. a religious order in the church of Rome, who follow the rule of St. Augustine, prescribed them by pope Alexander IV. Among other things, this rule enjoins to have all things in common, to receive nothing without the leave of the superior; and several other precepts relating to charity, modesty, and chastity. There are likewise nuns of this order.

AUGUSTNESS, f. that quality which renders a person an object of reverence, awe, and homage.

A'VIARY, f. [aviarium, Lat.] a place inclosed for keeping a collection of birds. Figuratively, the collection of birds kept in such a place.

AVI'DITY, f. [aviditas, Lat.] greediness, eagerness, an insatiable love of money.

AVISO, f. [Ital.] in Commerce, notice or information given by letter.

AU'KWARD, a. See AWKWARD.

AU'LCHESTER, a town in Warwickshire, distant from London 102 miles. The market is on Tuesdays.

AU'LIC, a. [audicus, Lat.] belonging to the court. In History, applied to the highest court of the empire of Germany, originally instituted to determine the disputes between the emperor and his subjects.

AUNT, [am] f. [tante, Fr.] a female relation, who is a sister either to a person's father or mother.

To A'VOCATE, v. a. [avoco, Lat.] to call a person from a thing he is engaged in.

AVOCA'TION, f. [avocatio, Lat.] the diverting a person's attention from something he is already engaged in.

To AVOID, v. a. [evider, Fr.] to forbear; to shun; to quit, or leave.

AVOI'DABLE, a. the possibility of escaping the effects of a thing; that which may be escaped or shunned.

AVOI'DANCE, f. the act whereby one frees himself from the effects of any cause; the act of emptying, or carrying off.

AVOI'DER, f. the person who shuns, escapes, or carries away; the vessel used to carry things away in.

AVOIRDUPO'IS, f. [avoir du poids, Fr.] a kind of weight, supposed to be borrowed from the Romans, a pound of which contains 16oz. bearing the same proportion to a lb. troy, as 14 to 16. All coarser commodities are bought by this weight.

AVOLA'TION, f. [from avols, Lat.] the flying away; flight, or escape.

To AVOU'CH, v. a. [avouer, Fr.] to prove by vouchers or proper authorities; positively to maintain the truth of a thing; to justify or vindicate. Vouch is in use, at present, in its stead,

AVOU'CH,

AVOU'CH, f. proof, witness, evidence.

AVOU'CHABLE, a. that which may be proved by evidence or vouchers.

AVOU'CHER, f. he that proves the truth of an assertion by proper vouchers, or evidence.

To AVOW, v. a. [avouer, Fr.] to protest openly, without any dissimulation.

AVOW'ABLE, a. that which may be publickly owned without dissembling, and sometimes without shame.

AVOW'AL, f. a public confession, without the least dissimulation.

AVOW'EDLY, ad. in a public open manner; professedly; publicly.

AVOWEE', f. [avoue, Fr.] the person to whom the representation of any benefice, or the right of advowson, belongs.

AVOWER, f. one who openly professes, asserts, or declares, without dissimulation.

AVOW'RY, f. in Law, the avowing or confessing the having taken a distress for rent, when the person distrained sues for a relevin.

AVOW'TRY, f. adultery.

AURE'LIA, f. [Lat.] in Natural History, the second change of a caterpillar, towards a moth or fly, in which it seems deprived of motion, receives no nourishment, and appearing sometimes with a yellow gold or coloured skin, is called by this name.

AURE'LIAN, f. a naturalist, who applies himself to study the various changes of insects; sometimes applied to one who breeds and describes the various states of moths and butterflies.

AU'RICLE, f. in Anatomy, the external ear, or that which is prominent from the head.

AURI'CUA, f. a flower.

AURI'CLAR, a. [auricularis, Lat.] that which belongs to the ear; secret or private, as if whispered in a person's ear. Auricular confession, in the Romish church, is the private confession a person makes of his sins to a priest, in order to receive absolution.

AURI'CLARLY, ad. in a private or secret manner.

AURIGATION, f. [from auriga, Lat.] the driving a vehicle or carriage.

AURIPIGMENTUM, f. See ORPIMENT.

AURORA, f. [Lat.] in Geography, that faint dawn which appears in the E. when the sun is within 18 deg. of the horizon. In Mythology, the goddess who presides over day-break, the daughter of Hyperion and Thea, or of the Sun and Earth. She is described in all the pomp of imagination by Homer, covered with a great veil, with rosy fingers and hair sprinkling the dew, and expanding the cups of flowers. Aurora Borealis is an extraordinary meteor, or luminous appearance, shewing itself in the night in the northern parts of the heavens. Various reasons have been given by philosophers for this phenomenon; but as no two of them agree, and perhaps are all mistaken as to the real cause, we shall not trouble the reader with their conjectures. It is very common in countries near the pole, but rarely in England, none being recorded in our annals from November 14, 1574, till the surprising one of March 6, 1716; since which time they have been and still continue very frequent.

AURUM FU'LMINANS, [Lat.] in Chemistry, a dissolution of gold in aqua regia, and precipitating it with salt of tartar; whence it becomes capable of giving a report like that of a pistol.

AUSCULTATION, f. [from ausculto, Lat.] a hearkening or listening to.

AUSPICE, f. [auspicium, Lat.] the art of divination, confined to the flight or singing of birds; a prosperous event, or the favour and protection of a lucky person.

AUSPICIOUS, a. that which promises success; favourable, fortunate, kind, propitious, applied to persons.

AUSPICIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to promise success.

AUSTERE, a. [austerus, Lat.] applied to morals rigid and mortified, opposed to effeminate, or luxurious. Applied to tastes, rough, sour, and astringent, like that of unripe fruits.

AUSTERE'LY, ad. in a rigid, mortifying manner.

AUSTE'RITY, f. a state of rigid severity and mortification, sometimes including the secondary idea of sourness or moroseness: severity or harshness of discipline.

AUSTRAL, a. [australis, Lat.] that which is towards the South.

AUSTRIA, a country of Germany, bounded on the N. by Bohemia and Moravia, on the E. by Hungary, on the S. by Styria, and on the W. by the archbishopric of Salzburg. The river Ens divides it into the Upper and Lower; Vienna is the capital of the Lower, and Lintz the capital of the Upper. Austria excels all the provinces of Germany in the fertility of its soil, the plenty of its pastures, and the wholesomeness of the air. Corn, wine, and fruit are very plenty; and the saffron better than that of the East Indies. We must not confound Proper Austria with the Circle of Austria, which is the chief of the Circles of the empire; nor with the territories of the house of Austria. It was long since made an archduchy, and enjoys great privileges.

AUTHENTIC, or AUTHE'NTICAL, a. [authenticus, Lat.] a thing of established authority; that which is attended with full proof, and attested by persons who deserve credit.

AUTHE'NTICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to procure credit.

To AUTHENTICATE, v. a. to establish a thing by the necessary proofs of its genuineness.

AUTHENTI'CITY, f. the genuineness of a thing, supported by proper proofs and authorities.

AUTHE'NTICLY, ad. in such a manner as to evince a thing to be genuine.

AUTHOR, f. [auctor, Lat.] in its more proper proper sense, one who creates, or produces any thing; the original inventor or discoverer of any new art or principle; one who writes upon any subject, opposed to a translator or compiler.

AUTHORITATIVE, a. that which has an influence over another; that which commands or obliges.

AUTHORITATIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to bespeak proper authority or license.

AUTHORITATIVENESS, f. that quality which shews a person to be properly licensed, or to have authority for the doing of things.

AUTHORITY, f. [auctoritas, Lat.] a power which leaves a person the liberty of choice, arising from superiority of rank or reason; includes the secondary idea of respect, and is applied to God, with respect to his creatures; and to parents with respect to their children: applied to arguments, it denotes their strength. SYNON. There appears in the idea of authority something just and respectable; in the idea of power, something strong and active; and in the idea of dominion, something great and elevated.

AUTHORIZATION, f. the act of communicating authority.

TO AUTHORIZE, v. a. [authoriser, Fr.] to give a person licence or authority to perform a thing; to encourage; to justify; to give credit.

AUTOCRACY, f. [autokratia, Gr.] independent power.

AUTOGRAPHICAL, a. [αὐτογράφικος, Gr.] that which is written by a person's own hand.

AUTOGRAPHY, f. a person's own handwriting. An original, opposed to a copy.

AUTOMATIC, a. that which hath the qualities of an automaton, or is endued with a power to move itself. In the animal economy, applied by Boerhaave to express those motions which arise purely from the structure of the body, and over which the will has no power.

AUTOMATON, f. [Gr.] in Mechanics, an engine which moves of itself, or a machine which has the principal of motion in itself.

AUTOMATOUS, a. that which has the power of motion in itself.

AUTOPSY, f. [αὐτοψία, Gr.] the seeing a thing with one's own eyes. Applied by the ancients to the communications which the soul had with the gods in the Eleusinian mysteries.

AUTOPTICAL, a. that which is seen by a person's own eyes.

AUTOPTICALLY, ad. in such a manner as a person may be an eye-witness.

AUTUMN, [autūm] f. [autumnus, Lat.] the third season of the year, wherein the fruits are gathered in, commencing at the equinox, and ending at the winter solstice; including the months of August, September, and October. Some nations computed their years by autumns, the Saxons by winters, and, according to Tacitus, the Germans had no idea of this season. In Ptolemy, Autumnus is represented by a man at perfect age, clothed like the Spring, and girded with a starry girdle; holding in one hand a pair of scales equally poised, with a globe in each; in the other, a bunch of divers fruits and grapes. His age denotes the perfection of this season, and the balance that sign of the zodiac which the sun enters when our Autumn begins.

AUTUMNAL, a. that which belongs to autumn; that which is produced in autumn. In Astronomy, the autumnal point is that point of the equinoctial line from whence the sun begins to descend towards the S. The autumnal signs are Libra, Scorpio, and Sagittarius. Autumnal equinox, the time when the sun enters the autumnal point.

AVULSION, f. [avulsio, Lat.] the act of pulling asunder two bodies already united, implying the secondary idea of some exertion or force.

AUXILIAR, or AUXILIARY, f. [from auxilium, Lat.] a person who assists another, whether in war, peace, works of strength, or the products of the understanding.

AUXILIAR, or AUXILIARY, a. [from auxilium, Lat.] that which affords help or assistance. In Grammar, applied to such verbs as are prefixed to others, and help to conjugate certain tenses, which are on that account named compound ones.

TO AWAIT, v. a. to expect a thing in future; to be reserved, or designed for.

TO AWAKE, v. a. [waccian, Sax.] [pret. awoke] to raise from sleep. Figuratively, to reduce a thing in a dormant or latent state into action. Neuterly, it signifies to cease to sleep: also to be cautious; to be on one's guard; to take such measures as not to be surprized by an approaching calamity or enemy.

AWAKE, part. shaking off sleep.

TO AWAKEN, v. a. [pret. awakened] See AWAKE. This seems to be the best word.

TO AWARD, v. a. [the a in the second syllable is pronounced broad, like ax. wardig, Sax.] to pass sentence, or determine a controversy, as an arbitrator. Figuratively, to give one's opinion.

AWARD, f. [see preceding word] the judgment or opinion of a person chosen by contending parties to determine a difference between them.

AWARE, ad. perceiving; cautious; or upon one's guard.

AWAY, ad. [aweg, Sax.] after the verb go, or be, it implies absent, or out of sight. At the beginning of a sentence it has the force of a verb in the imperative mood, and signifies, leave this place. "Away, old man." Shakespeare. Sometimes joined to a verb, it implies to lose, including the idea of lavishing, squandering, or profusion.

AWE, f. [ege, Sax.] a respect mixed with terror, including the idea of superior rank, authority, or parts.

TO AWE, v. a. to influence a person by one's authority, dignity, or age.

AWFUL, a. that which causes respect joined with fear, on account of its dignity, authority, authority, or age.

A'WFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to command respect, joined with fear; including the secondary ideas of authority and dignity.

A'WFULNESS, f. that quality which attracts respect mixed with fear.

A'WHILE, ad. space or interval, applied to time; some time.

A'WKWARD, a. [eward, Sax.] applied to the mind, perverse; applied to the behaviour, clumsy; unhandy; clownish.

A'WKWARDLY, ad. in a clumsy manner.

A'WKWARDNESS, f. that quality which shews a person not to have been conversant with the elegancies of polite life; and denotes him to be clownish and clumsy.

AWL, f. [ale, Sax.] a sharp-pointed instrument used by shoemakers to make holes, in order to expedite their work.

AW LESS, a. irreverent; without the power of causing reverence.

A'WNING, f. [from aulne, Fr.] the hanging a sail or tarpaulin over any part of a ship to keep the sun off.

A'WRY, ad. [in pron. the w is dropped] out of a straight line; out of a perpendicular direction; on one side; not even. Figuratively, erroneously.

AX, or AXE, f. [ax, Sax.] a carpenter's instrument to hew wood; its edge tapers to the middle of the blade, and it has a long handle to be used with both hands.

A'XBRIDGE, a town in Somersetshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is seated under Mendip-hills, which are rich in lead mines, and proper for feeding cattle. It is a mayor town, consisting of one principal street, which is long but narrow; ten miles N. W. of Wells, and 131½ W. of London.

A'XIOM, f. [αξίωμα, Gr.] a plain, self-evident proposition: as that nothing can act where it is not; that a thing cannot be, and be, at the same time; that the whole is greater than a part thereof; and that from nothing, nothing can arise. This word is principally restrained to Mathematics, and when used to other purposes is frequently called a Maxim.

A'XIS, f. [Lat.] in Geometry, Astronomy, &c. is an imaginary line passing through the center of any figure or orbit. Thus the Axis of the world is a line conceived to pass through the center of the earth from one pole to the other, about which the sphere, or the world, in the Ptolemaic system, revolves in its diurnal rotation. The Axis of a planet is that line drawn through the center, about which the planet revolves. So likewise the sun, with all other planets, except Mercury and Saturn, are known by observation to move about their respective Axis. The Axis of the earth, during its revolution round the sun, remains always parallel to itself, and is inclined to the plane of the ecliptic, making with it an angle of 66 degrees and a half. In Conic Sections, Axis is a right line, dividing the sections into two equal parts, and cutting all its ordinates at right angles. In Mechanics, the Axis of balance is that line about which it moves, rather turns about. Axis of oscillation is a right line parallel to the horizon, passing through the center, about which a pendulum vibrates. In Optics, Axis is that ray, among all others that are sent to the eye, which falls perpendicularly upon it, and which consequently passes through the center of the eye. In Architecture, Spiral axis is the Axis of a twisted column drawn spirally, in order to trace the circumvolution without. Axis, in Anatomy, is the second vertebra of the neck, so called from the head's turning on it like an Axis.

A'XLE, or A'XLE-TREE, f. [axle and treow, Sax.] a piece of wood, &c. which passes through the center of a wheel, on which it turns.

A'XMINSTER, a town of Devonshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the river Ax, near the edge of the county, in the great road from London to Exeter, and was a place of some note in the time of the Saxons. It is governed by a portreeve; has one church, and about 900 houses; but the streets, though paved, are narrow. Here is a small manufactory of broad and narrow cloths; some carpets are also made here in the Turkey manner. It is 25 miles E. by N. of Exeter, and 147 W. of London.

AY, ad. [perhaps from aiō, Lat.] yes; used to affirm the truth of a thing.

AYE, ad. [aya, Sax.] generally used after for, and implies time without end; for ever, to all eternity.

AY'LESBURY. See ALZESBURY.

A'ZIMUTH, f. is an arch of the horizon, comprehended between the meridian of the place, and any given vertical, and is the complement of the eastern and western amplitude to a quadrant. The magnetical Azimuth is an arch of the horizon contained between the sun's Azimuth circle and the magnetical meridian. Azimuth compass is an instrument used at sea for finding the sun's magnetical Azimuth. Azimuth dial is one whose style or gnomon is at right angles to the plane of the horizon. Azimuth circles, called Azimuths, are great circles of the sphere, intersecting each other in the zenith and nadir, and cutting the horizon at right angles in all the points thereof. The Azimuths are represented by the rhumbs on common sea-charts, and on the globe they are represented by the quadrant of altitude when screwed in the zenith. On the Azimuth is reckoned the height of the stars, and of the sun, when not in the meridian.

AZO'RES, certain islands in the Atlantic Ocean, about nine in number, subject to Portugal. They take their name from the great abundance of hawks bred there, and though rocky, yet abounds in corn, wine, &c.

A'ZURE, f. in the general sense, signifies the blue colour of the sky. Among Painters, it is the blue colour, with a greenish cast, prepared from the lapis lazuli, generally called ultramarine. It likewise signifies that bright blue blue colour prepared from the lapis armenus. This colour is called Lambert's blue. In Heraldry, Azure is the blue colour in the coat of arms of any person below the rank of a baron. In the escutcheon of a nobleman, it is called Saphire; and in that of a sovereign prince Saphire. In Engraving, this colour is expressed by lines or strokes drawn horizontally.

A'ZURE, a. that which is of a sky or faint blue colour.

B.

B is the second letter of most alphabets, and in ours the first consonant. It is pronounced by pressing the whole length of the lips together, and forcing them open with a strong breath. It is used as an abbreviation: Thus, in Music, B stands for the tone above A, as B b or b B does for B flat, or the semi-tone major above A; B also stands for bis, and B. C. for basso continuo, or thorough bass. As a numeral, B was used by the Greeks and Hebrews to denote 2; but among the Romans stood for 300, and with a dash over it thus, B̄ for 3000. The same people used B, for brutus; B. F. for bonum factum. They likewise used B. and V. indifferently for each other. B. in the chemical alphabet signifies mercury. B. A. stand for bachelor of arts; B. L. for bachelor of laws; and B. D. for bachelor of divinity.

BA'A, f. a sound borrowed from, and expressive of, the bleating of a sheep.

To BA'A, v. n. to bleat like a sheep.

To BA'BBLE, v. n. [babbelen, Belg.] to prate like a child, without sense; to betray secrets; to talk, without regard to place or circumstances.

BA'BBLE, f. [babil, Fr.] senseless prating.

BA'BBLEMENT, f. See BABBLE.

BA'BBLER, f. one who talks without any fund of sense, or without proper ideas of the words he makes use of.

BABE or BA'BY, f. [baban, Brit.] a young child of either sex. Sometimes applied to one that can neither walk nor speak.

BA'BISH, a. that which resembles the choice of a very young child; that which belongs to a very young child; childish.

BABOON, f. [babouin, Fr.] in Natural History, one of the species of monkeys of the largest size.

BA'BY, f. a young child, distinguished from babe, because that is applied to children who can both walk and speak; but this to those who can do neither.

BACCHANA'LIA, [Bakkandlia] f. the drunken, revelling feasts of the heathen god Bacchus. There were two of these festivals celebrated in the year, one in the spring and the other in the autumn; but both were accompanied with games, spectacles, and theatrical representations, and it was at these times the poets contended for the prize of poetry. Those who were initiated into the celebration of these feasts represented, some, Silenus; others, Pan; others, Satyrs; and in this manner appeared in public night and day, counterfeiting drunkenness, dancing obscenely, committing all manner of licentiousness and debauchery; and running over the mountains and forests with horrible shrieks and howlings, crying out Io Bacche. In Rome they committed such shocking disorders, that the senate suppressed them.

BACCHANA'LIAN, [Bakkandlian] f. one who attended the feast of Bacchus. Figuratively, a riotous, drunken person.

BA'CCHANALS, [Bakkanaals] f. see BACCHANALIA.

BACCI'FEROUS, a. [baccifer, Lat.] in Botany, such vegetables as bear berries, &c.

BA'CHELOR, f. a man who still continues in the state of celibacy, or who was never married. Anciently, it was a name given to those superior in quality to esquires, but had not a number of vassals sufficient to have their banner carried before them in the field of battle. They were usually young gentlemen, who endeavoured to acquire the title of Bachelors by their prowess; and being an order inferior to those called Chevaliers or Knights. Fauchet supposes they took their name from bas chevaliers, or the lowest order of knights. It was also a title given to young cavaliers, who having made their first campaign, received the military girdle. It was likewise used to denominate him who had overcome another in combat, the first time he ever engaged. In an University sense, Bachelors are those who have attained to the baccalaureate; who have taken the first degree in the liberal arts and sciences. At Oxford, a person must be a student four years before he is entitled to be Bachelor of Arts; three years more before he attains the degree of Master of Arts; and in seven years more he may commence Bachelor of Divinity. At Cambridge, the degrees are taken much the same as at Oxford, except in Law and Physic, in either of which the Bachelor's degree may be taken in six years.

BA'CHELORSHIP, f. the state of an unmarried man; the state, dignity, or office of a graduate, or bachelor, at an university.

BACK, f. [bac, bæc, Sax.] in Anatomy, the hind part of the human structure, from the neck to the thighs. Applied to the hands, that part opposite to the palms. Applied to the array of an army, the rear. Applied to situation, the hind part, or that which is not in sight. Applied to any edge-tool or instrument, the thickest part of the blade, opposed to the edge. A large square trough or cistern, used by brewers to hold liquor in. Figuratively, a supporter, or one who will second another in an attempt.

BACK, ad. applied to motion, to the place from whence a person came. Applied to action, to retreat. Applied to time, that which is past. After kick, applied to the increase of plants, to stop or hinder the growth.

To BACK, v. a. to mount a horse; to break break him for the saddle; to make him go backwards by pulling the reins. Figuratively, to second, support, or assist.

To BACKBITE, v. a. to speak against a person in his absence.

BACKBITER, f. one who censures the conduct, or vilifies the actions of a person in his absence.

BACK-BOARD, f. the board in a boat for passengers to lean their backs against; also the stiff-milled paper put into the covers of books to preserve them from injury.

BACK-DOOR, f. a door or passage out of a house behind, opposed to the front. Figuratively, a private passage.

BACKED, part. having a back. Forced to go backwards.

BACK-FRIEND, f. a false friend; or secret enemy.

BACK-GAMMON, f. a game played with dice and men on a board, or table, veneered for that purpose.

BACK-HOUSE, f. the building which lies behind a house.

BACKSIDE, f. the hinder part of any thing. Applied, with decency, to the posteriors of a human creature, as not conveying so coarse an idea as the proper term. Figuratively, a yard or ground behind a house.

To BACKSLIDE, v. n. in Divinity, to return to idolatry, after having quitted it; to apostatize; to quit the true mode of worship.

BACKSLIDER, f. one who quits the true religion in order to embrace a false one; an apostate.

BACK-STAFF, f. an instrument used at sea to take the sun's altitude. This instrument, commonly called Davis's Quadrant, from the name of the inventor, and by the French the English Quadrant, is not so accurate as could be wished; and a large, heavy, brass astrolabe is to be preferred before it.

BACK-STAIRS, f. the private stairs of a house, generally appropriated to the use of servants.

BACK-STAYS, f. in Ship-building, the ropes belonging to the main and fore-masts, which keep them from pitching overboard.

BACK-SWORD, f. a sword with only one sharp edge, and blunt back. Used figuratively, for a cudgel, or the art of defending one's self with a cudgel.

BACKWARD, or BACKWARDS, ad. [back and rearward, Sax.] applied to motion, it signifies the going from a person with the face towards him, the legs being moved towards the hind, instead of the fore part of a person; towards the back, or behind upon the back. "Backwards and forwards." Newton. Applied to the success of an undertaking, it implies, not to prosper or advance; to want success.

BACKWARD, a. unwilling, in allusion to making advances anticipating or meeting a person's wishes; reluctant; slow; dull; not quick or apprehensive.

BACKWARD, ad. applied to time, some period that is past; or a portion of time already past.

BACKWARDLY, ad. applied to the motion whereby a person retreats or goes from another with his face towards him; in a perverse, unwilling manner; reluctantly.

BACKWARDNESS, f. that quality which proceeds from a dislike of the measures a person is to put in practice, the undertaking he is to accomplish, or the person he is to oblige, including the idea of slowness. Dulness; want of apprehension.

BACKON, f. [bacun, Brit.] the flesh of a hog salted and dried, having the bristles burnt with straw. To save on's backon is a low phrase for preserving one's self from hurt or mischief.

BACULE, f. [Fr.] in Fortification, a kind of portcullis, or gate, made like a pit-fall, with a counterpoise supported by two stakes, placed before the corps du garde, advanced near the gate.

BACULOMETRY, f. the art of measuring accessible or inaccessible heights by means of staves or rods.

BAD, a. a relative term. Confined to natural agents, that which lessens or destroys the happiness of ourselves or others. Applied to moral agents, that which they voluntarily perform, in order to lessen or destroy their own happiness or that of others. Applied to persons, one who habitually transgresses the laws of duty prescribed by the Deity. Applied to actions, that which is performed contrary to any moral law. Applied to things, that which is prejudicial to our health, happiness, &c. Prov. A bad shift is better than none.

—Where bad's the best, nought must be the choice.—A bad bush is better than the open field; that is, better to have any, though a bad, friend, or relation, than to be quite destitute, and exposed to the world.

BADE, or BAD, is the preter tense of BID.

BADGE, f. [bad, Sax.] a mark worn by a person to denote his dignity, profession, trade, rank, &c.

To BADGE, v. a. [badian, Sax.] to set a mark on a person; to stigmatize.

BADGER, f. [bedour, Fr.] in Law, one who is licensed to buy corn in one place, sell it in another, and is exempted from the punishment of an engrosser, by 6 Ed. VI. In Natural History, a wild four-footed beast, somewhat larger than a fox, and resembling a hog and dog. It dwells in burrows, lives on insects, carrion and fruit, stinks very much, fattens by sleeping, and shews its age by the number of holes in its tail, one being added every year.

BADLY, ad. not agreeable to a person's wishes; in a manner inconsistent with a person's undertakings. Applied to health, sickly. Applied to the execution of any thing, not suitable to the ideas of taste, elegance, or proportion.

BADNESS, f. a quality which denotes a person habitually to transgress against the laws of his nature. Applied to things, it denotes that they are inconsistent with the good, ease, to pleasure of rational or irrational beings. Applied to roads, it signifies that they cannot be travelled with ease or pleasure. Applied to weather, it denotes a want of serenity, calmness, or sunshine. Applied to health, that it is insidious, and interrupted with sickness.

or

To BAFFLE, v. a. [baffler, Fr.] to render the care of another insignificant; to frustrate the intentions of another.

BAFFLER, f. the person, or thing, which defeats, or renders any thing abortive.

BAG, f. [baige, Sax.] in its primary sense, a receptacle made of linen, silk, or leather, to contain any thing, in the shape of a long square when empty, and open only at one of its ends; which is called the mouth. Likewise a kind of smaller bag, made of black silk, worn by gentlemen over the hind locks of their hair or perukes, as an ornament. In Natural History, the thin membrane, or cystis, containing the poison of vipers, which they lay out of their mouths when eating their food; that which contains the honey in bees, &c. In Commerce, a term of quantity; as a bag of pepper, or saffron, almonds, &c.

To BAG, v. a. to put into a bag; to load with a bag. Used neuterly, to swell for as to resemble a full bag.

BAGATELLE, f. [Fr.] a trifle; a toy. Not English.

BAGGAGE, f. [baggage, Fr.] the utensils of an army, so called from their being packed up in bags. Bag and baggage, a low phrase, to signify all a person's goods; a woman of no character; a prostitute.

BAGNIO, f. [bainio] [bagno, Ital.] a house for bathing, cupping, sweating, and swimming.

BAGPIPE, a musical instrument, consisting of two pipes: a large one and a smaller, both supplied with wind by a pair of bellows.

BAHAMA ISLANDS, often called the Antilles, lying in the Atlantic Ocean. They are very numerous, but twelve only are taken notice of. The gulph of Florida, or Bahama, through which the Spanish galleons sail in their passage to Europe, lies between these islands and the continent of Florida.

BAIL, f. [from baillet, Fr.] the act of freeing or setting a person at liberty who is arrested or imprisoned for an act civil or criminal, under security taken for his appearance; likewise the person who gives such security.

Bail is either common or special. Common bail is in actions of small concern, and is so called because my securities are taken. Special bail is in cases of greater weight, as debts amounting to 10*l.* where the sureties must be subsidiary, answerable to the value.

To BAIL, v. a. to deliver a person from arrest, or imprisonment, by being surety for his appearance at a certain day; to admit to bail.

BAITABLE, a. that which the law permits to be set at liberty on proper sureties.

BAILIFF, f. [baillie, Fr.] an inferior officer of justice, appointed to execute writs and other process directed to the sheriff, and to summons county courts, sessions, assizes, and the like. There are also bailiffs of forests, and of manors, who direct husbandry, sell trees, gather rents, pay quit-rents, &c. A water-bailiff is an officer appointed in port-towns, for the searching of ships, gathering the toll for anchorage, &c. and arresting persons for debt, &c. upon the water. Bailiff is likewise the chief magistrate of several corporations. Governors of some of the king's castles are likewise called Bailiffs.

BAI'LIWIC, f. the place or jurisdiction of a bailiff, within his hundred, or the lord's franchise.

BAI'RAM, f. in the Mahometan customs, a yearly festival of the Turks, which they keep after the feast of Ramazan. It is concluded with a solemn prayer against the infidels, to extirpate Christian princes, or to arm them against one another, that they may have an opportunity to extend their law.

To BAIT, v. a. [batan, Sax.] to put meat on a hook, &c. in order to catch fish or other animals; to refresh one's self or cattle by eating on a journey; to attack with violence; to set dogs upon.

BAIT, f. [baitze, Teut.] a piece of flesh, or other lure, made use of to catch fish, or ensnare animals. Figuratively, an allurements, or enticement; any thing which, under a specious appearance, contains mischief in itself, or produces it by its consequences. A refreshment on a journey, generally applied to cattle.

BAIZE, f. a coarse open woollen cloth, with or without a frize, without a wale, and wrought like flannel, in a loom with two treadles.

To BAKE, v. a. to dress, or heat any thing in an oven. Figuratively, to harden with heat.

BA'KE-HOUSE, f. a place where bread is made, rendered eatable by the heat of an oven, and exposed to sale; and where other meat or pastry is dressed.

BA'KER, f. one who subsists by making bread and baking. The trade is both very ancient and useful, and was a brotherhood in England before 1155, in the reign of Henry II. The white bakers were incorporated in 1307 by Edward II. and the brown in 1521, in James II's time.

BA'KEWELL, a town in Derbyshire, with a market on Mondays. It is seated on the river Wye, among the hills, and the market is good for lead and other commodities. It is 20 miles N. N. W. of Derby, and 15½ from London. It lies in a deep valley, and has a large church with a lofty spire.

BA'LA, a town of Merionethshire, in North-Wales, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on a flat near Pemble-meer, by the Welch called Lkin Tegid, which is 13 miles in length, and six in breadth, and abounds with a fish called a guiniad, resembling a salmon in shape, and its taste is like a trout. The river river Dee runs through this lake, and is noted for salmon. It is 36 miles S. W. by W. of Holywell, and 195 N. W. of London.

BA'LANCE, or BA'LANCE, f. in Mechanics, is that simple power which denotes the equality or difference of weight in heavy bodies, and is sometimes called scales and sometimes steel-yards, of which there are many different forms. Also, the beating part of a watch; equipoise. In Commerce, it is the equality between the value of the commodities bought of foreigners, and the value of the native productions transported into other nations. In Astronomy, it is one of the twelve signs of the zodiac. The sun enters this sign about the 22d of September at the autumnal equinox; this constellation consists of fourteen stars of several magnitudes; when it is represented on a globe or planisphere, it is under the form of a pair of scales. In Physics, the balance of the air is the weight thereof, whereby it presseth where it is least resisted, till it becomes of equal weight in all its parts. Hydrostatical balance is an instrument which determines the specific gravity of fluids and solids, by weighing them in water.

To BA'LANCE, v. a. [balancer, Fr.] to weigh in a pair of scales; to bring two bodies to an equipoise in a pair of scales. In Mercantile affairs, the making the creditor and debtor side of an account equal by the addition of as much as the one is less than the other. Figuratively, to atone for former failings by one's future conduct; to be in a state of suspension.

BA'LANCER, f. the person who weighs any thing, or makes weight in opposite scales.

BALCONY, f. [balcon, Fr.] in Architecture, a projection beyond a wall or building, generally before a window, supported by pillars or consoles, and surrounded by bannisters or ballustrades.

BALD, [bauld] a. [bal, Brit.] that which hath lost its hair. Figuratively, applied to trees stripped of their leaves. Applied to stile in writing, unadorned; void of elegance.

BALDERDASH, [bauldredash] f. any thing jumbled together without taste, judgment, or discretion.

BALDLY, [bauldly] ad. without hairs, applied to animals; without leaves, applied to trees; without ornaments, or elegance, applied to writings, or buildings.

BALDNESS, [bauldness] f. applied to animals, the want of hair; applied to trees, loss of leaves; and applied to writings, paintings, and buildings, want of ornament or elegance.

BALDOCK, [Bauldock] a town in Herefordshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is a long town, lying on the N. road, and seated between the hills in a chalky soil fit for corn, and chiefly of note for its trading in malt. It is nine miles W. of Ross-on, and 37 N. N. W. of London.

BALDRICK, f. [bale and ric, Sax.] a belt, worn hanging from the shoulder across the breast, on which the sword was formerly hung, not unlike that worn by our soldiery at present, to which they fasten their pouches. Figuratively, the zodiac circle, which cuts the globe obliquely, as the belt formerly was suspended.

BALE, f. a quantity of goods or commodities, packed in cloths, corded round very tight. Bale goods are such as are exported in bales.

BALE, f. [bæl, Sax.] something which deprives a person of happiness, or health; misery, anguish, calamity.

To BALE, v. n. to pack goods up in a bale. Used actively by sailors, for laving water out of a vessel, instead of pumping.

BA'LEFUL, a. full of anguish, pain, misery, mischief, and grief; very fatal, or destructive to health.

BA'LEFULLY, ad. in such a manner as produces sorrow, anguish, calamity, and sickness.

BALK, [bauk] f. [balk, Belg. and Teut.] a large piece of timber; a beam; a rafter or pole over any out-house or barn. In Husbandry, a ridge of land left unplowed between two furrows, or at the end of a field. Figuratively, the disappointment of a person's curiosity or expectation, after having excited them.

To BALK, [bauk] v. a. to disappoint a person's expectations, after exciting them; to render a person's endeavours ineffectual; to frustrate; to mis; to omit, when the contrary is expected.

BALKERS, [baulkers] f. in Fishery, persons who stand on a cliff to inform the hithermen which way the shoal of herrings goes.

BALL, [ball] f. any thing of a round form. Ball and socket, in Mechanics, consists of a ball or sphere of brass, fixed in a concave semi-globe with an endless screw, that it may be moveable horizontally, vertically, and obliquely, and is generally added to surveying instruments, to fix them in any position. An entertainment wherein people are assembled to dance. The public dances, wherein masters display the abilities of their scholars in this qualification, go by this name.

BALLAD, f. [ballade, Fr.] words set to music, and performed by a singer. At present the word is appropriated and confined to trifling pieces set to music, and sung about the streets.

To BALLAD, v. n. to make a person the subject of a ballad.

BALLAD-SINGER, f. one who sings ballads in the public streets; including the secondary idea of something very mean.

BALLAST, f. a quantity of stones, sand or gravel, laid in a ship's hold, to sink it to a proper depth, i. e. to make it draw more water, to sail upright, and to prevent its upsetting; and a ship is said to be in ballast when it has no other lading. Figuratively, that which is used to keep any thing steady.

To BALLAST, v. a. to lade a ship with stones, sand, &c. to keep her steady. Figuratively, the addition of something to keep a thing steady.

BALLETTE, f. [Fr.] a stage dance, which is mixed with dramatic characters, and alludes to some actions in real life or fabulous history.

BALLIAGE, f. a small duty paid to the city of London by aliens and denizens, for certain commodities exported by them.

BALLOON, or BALLOON, f. [Fr.] in Chemistry, a large, short-necked, round vessel, or cask, to receive the spirits which come over, or are drawn off by fire. In Architecture, a ball or globe on the top of a pillar, &c. by way of a crowning: In Fire-works, a ball of pasteboard, filled with combustibles, which rises to a considerable height, and bursts into flame.

BALLOT, f. [ballotte, Fr.] a little ball made use of at elections, &c. in giving votes; the sum of votes so collected. At present applies to the votes which are given at elections, by a ticket dropped into some receptacle.

To BALLOT, v. n. [balloter, Fr.] to check, by dropping a small ball into a box; to choose or elect, by dropping in a ticket.

BALLOTATION, f. the act of voting or electing by ballot.

BALM [in pron. the l is sometimes dropt] or BALSAM, f. [saxum, Fr.] an oily, resinous substance, flowing either spontaneously or by means of incision from several plants of several sorts. There are many kinds of balsams, but the most noted are these. 1. Balsam of Gilead, so much valued in the country where it is produced, that it is esteemed as a rich present from the chief prince of Arabia Felix to the Grand Signior. In Medicine, it opens obstructions of the lungs, and lessens erosion from acrimony and the worst kind of ulcerations. It is prescribed in asthma, pleurisy, and whatever requires expectation; in inward bruises and sores, particularly those of the reins, and urinary passages; and externally it is used to discharge and incrustate. 2. Balsam of Peru, which is distinguished into two sorts, white and black.

The former is called the Balsam of Incision, and of a white colour; and is excellent for green wounds. The black is obtained by boiling the wood of the tree which produces it. The best is of a dark red colour, and of admirable fragrant. It heals, dries, and discharges, and is much used externally, not only in wounds, but in palties, ischiadic and rheumatic pains, and by perfumers, for its excellent smell. 3. Balsam of Tolu is produced from the species of the pine, which grows in New Spain. It is of a deep yellowish colour, and of a most delicate scent. It flows from the tree in the consistence of turpentine, but by keeping becomes brittle. Its virtues are the same, in general, with those of the Peruvian and Gilead kinds. 4. Balsam of Capivi, or of Copaciba, is likewise the produce of a tree. It is of a thinner consistence than the common turpentine, but much more fragrant and desirable. It passes away quickly by urine, and mightily steases those passages, and all obstructions and ulcerations of those parts. 5. Balsam of liquid amber. It drops from a tree of Mexico, called arbor styracifera, by an incision in the bark. It is a resinous and pinguious liquor, of a reddish yellow colour and an acrid aromatic taste, and of the consistence of Venice turpentine. Its essence strengthens the head and nervous system, and its oil is of singular efficacy both for external and internal uses. There are also many sorts of factitious or artificial balsams, made up by apothecaries and chemists, which it would be endless to specify. In Botany, Balm is a species of mint.

To BALM, v. a. to anoint; to sooth; to mitigate.

BALMY, a. having the qualities of balm; soothing; fragrant; mitigating.

BALSAMICS, f. in Pharmacy, medicines that soften, restore, heal and cleanse; of gentle attenuating principles, very friendly to nature.

BALTIC SEA, a great gulph between Germany and Poland; from which run several other gulphs, particularly those of Bothnia, Finland, Livonia, and Dantzick. It is remarkable that this sea neither ebbs nor flows, and there is always a current sets through the Sound into the Ocean. It is generally frozen over three or four months in the winter. Yellow amber is found on the coast.

BALUSTER, f. [balustre, Fr.] in Architecture, a small column, or pilaster, from 1/3-4ths of an inch to four inches square, or diameter, sometimes adorned with mouldings of no certain form, and placed with rails on stairs, and in the fronts of galleries in churches.

BALUSTRADE, f. in Architecture, an assemblage of one or more rows of balusters, high enough to rest the elbow on, fixed on a terras, bridge, or building, by way of security, or for separating one part from another.

BAMBOO, f. [Ind.] in Natural History, a large kind of reed or cane, growing in the maritime parts of the East Indies.

To BAMBOOZLE, v. a. to trick, or impose on a person, under the appearance of a friend; to confound, under pretence of assisting. A word of low and ludicrous use, and never found in polite writers.

BAMBOOZLER, f. one who, under specious pretences, tricks another; a cheat; or sharper.

BAMF, a shire of Scotland, bounded on the S. by Aberdeenshire, on the N. by the bay of Cromarty, on the W. by Murray, and on the E. by the German Ocean. It is 32 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It contains part of Buchan, Strathdovern, Boyn, Ensy, Strathawin, and Balveny. It sends one member to parliament.

BAMF, a capital town of the shire of Bamf, in the N. E. part of Scotland. It is seated at the mouth of the river Dovertne, but has no harbour, and consequently little trade, except for corn and salmon. It is 32 miles W. of Aberdeen, and 110 N. of Edinburgh.

BAMPTON, a town in Oxfordshire, distant from London 69 1/2 miles. The market is on on Wednesday. Also a town in Devonshire, distant from London 69½ miles.

BAN, f. in its primary signification, any thing publicly proclaimed, commanded, or forbidden. In Church Government, a proclamation of the intention of two parties to enter into matrimony, which is done thrice in the church they belong to, before the marriage ceremony can be performed. A curse, or excommunication. The ban of the empire is a public act or proclamation, whereby a person is suspended of all his rights as a member or vote to.

To BAN, v. a. [bannen, Belg.] to curse or devote to destruction; to execrate.

BANBURY, a town of Oxfordshire, with a market on Thursday. It is a large well-built mayor-town, containing several good inns, and its markets are well served with provisions. It is the second town for beauty in the county, and seated on the river Charwell. The houses are generally built with stone, and the church is a large handsome structure. It has been long noted for its cakes and cheese, and is 17 miles W. N. W. of Buckingham, and 75 N. W. of London. It sends one member to parliament.

BAND, f. that which ties, or keeps a person to a certain place, without liberty of going farther; that by which a person or animal is kept from exerting their natural strength; the same as a bond. Figuratively, that which has the power of knitting a close alliance or connexion between persons; a company of persons to be united; that which is bound round a person or thing, applied to dress; particularly a linen neckcloth, consisting of two square leaves, hanging down from the chin to the breast, worn by clergymen and lawyers. In Architecture, any flat, low member, or moulding, that is broad. In Surgery, a fillet, or piece of cloth, to surround or swathe certain parts that need assistance; called likewise a roller. Band of Pensioners, consisting of 120 gentlemen, who have 100*l.* a year each, for attending the king on solemn occasions.

To BAND, v. a. to unite together by some common tie; to cover or bind with some narrow cloth, fillet, or band.

BANDAGE, f. a fillet, roller, or swathe, to bind up wounds, dislocated bones, &c.

BANDBOX, f. a light box made of pasteboard, designed for keeping bands, ribbands, head-dresses, and other light and small pieces of dress in.

BANDELET, f. [bandelette, Fr.] in Architecture, any little band or moulding, like that which crowns the Doric architrave.

BANDEROL, f. [banderole, Fr.] a little flag, in form of a guidon, extended more in length than breadth, and formerly hung out at the top of vessels.

BANDITTO, f. [Ital. the plural banditti] a set of outlawed thieves on the continent, who generally herd together in woods, and live on the plunder of passengers.

BANDOG, f. a large, furious species of dog.

BANDOLEER, f. a large leather belt, thrown over the right shoulder, and hanging down under the left arm, worn by the ancient musqueteers, both for the sustaining of their firearms and the carriage of their musquet charges, which were put in 12 wooden cases coated with leather; but now out of use.

BANDROL, f. See BANDEROL.

BANDY, f. [from bander, Fr.] a crooked piece of wood towards the bottom, broad, flat, on one side, rounded at the other and at the handle, used in the game of cricket; now called a bat from battre, Fr. to beat.

To BANDY, v. a. to beat or to set and fro; to give and take; to exchange. Used with the particle witb, to contend.

BANDY, a. crooked. Thus bandy-leg is a crooked leg; and bandy-legged is applied to a person who has crooked legs.

BANE, f. that which destroys life. Figuratively, poison, ruin, destruction.

To BANE, v. a. to destroy, kill, or poison.

BANEFUL, a. abounding with qualities destructive to life; poisonous.

To BANG, v. a. [veugelen, Belg.] to cudgel; a low familiar word. Figuratively, to use a person roughly, applied either to words or actions.

BANG, f. a blow with a stick or cudgel.

BANGOR, an episcopal city of Carnarvonshire, in North Wales, it has a market on Wednesdays. This place was so considerable in ancient times, that it was called Bangor the Great, and defended by a strong castle. Its situation is low; the principal buildings are the cathedral, and the bishop's palace; it is 36 miles W. of St. Asaph, and 251 N. W. of London.

BANIANS, f. a religious sect of Asia, in India, whose professors never eat any thing that has life. They are dispersed all over the East, being the greatest merchants in the world, and may, in some sense, be compared to the Jews in other parts. There is scarce a merchant in the East-Indies but has one of these Banians to take care of his accounts. They believe the transmigration of souls, and think cleanness of the body a considerable part of sanctity. They marry their children very young, seldom staying till they are 12 years of age.

To BANISH, v. a. [bannir, Fr.] to make a person quit his own country. Figuratively, to drive from the mind; to expel.

BANISHER, f. one who expels from, or causes another to quit his native country.

BANISHMENT, f. the state of a person banished. In Law, a kind of civil death, whereby a person is cut off from all benefits arising from the society, or country in which he was born, obliged to quit it, and live in a foreign country. Oftentimes the punishment of capital crimes is remitted, and converted into banishment for life; but it is then termed transportation.

BANK, f. [banc, Sax.] a great shoal of sand in the sea; a rising ground on each side of a river washed by its waters, which it hinders from from overflowing; earth cast up on one side of a trench between two armies. A bench where rowers sit in vessels. In Commerce, a common repository, where persons agree to keep their cash, to be always ready at their call or direction. Likewise the place where the public bank is kept.

To BANK, v. a. to inclose with banks. In Commerce, to raise a sum of money; or to place money in a bank.

BANK-BILL, f. a promissory note given by the Bank for money placed there, which is payable on presenting it.

BANKER, f. a private person entrusted with the cash of others, payable on demand.

BANKRUPT, f. [banqueroute, Fr.] in Law, one who lives by buying and selling, has got the goods of others in his hands, and conceals himself from his creditors. After a seizure of bankruptcy is taken out, a bankrupt not surrendering within forty days, and not delivering his estates, is adjudged guilty of felony.

BANKRUPTCY, f. the state of a person declared a bankrupt; wherein his goods are sold, and a dividend made to his creditors, in proportion to the amount of their respective debts.

BANNER, f. a square flag, standard, colour, or ensign in any army.

BANNERET, f. an ancient order of the knights, or feudal lords, who possessing large fiefs, led their vassals to battle under their own banner, when summoned by the king. This is certainly a very honourable order, as it was never conferred but on some heroic action performed on the field; but this order is now extinct.

BANNIAN, f. a morning gown, or undress.

BANNOCK, f. a cake made with oatmeal and pease mixed with water; common in the north countries.

BANQUET, f. [banquet, Fr.] a feast, or grand entertainment.

To BANQUET, v. a. to entertain or give a feast to one or more persons; to feast, or regale.

BANQUETER, f. a person who entertains another at a sumptuous feast; one who lives sumptuously, or keeps a good table.

BANQUETING-HOUSE, f. a house where public feasts are given. The banquetting-room at Whitehall, intended for the king to feast in, is a structure of the great Inigo Jones.

BANQUETTE, f. in Fortification, a small bank for soldiers to mount upon, when they lie behind an entrenchment.

BANTER, f. the turning any thing to jest; the being pleasant; ridicule, or raillery.

To BANTER, v. a. to represent a person or thing in such light as to make them laughed at, or become objects of ridicule; to rally; to play upon.

BANTERER, f. one who represents the actions or expressions of another in a ridiculous light; one who plays on another, on account of some fault.

BA'NTLING, f. a sucking child; an infant.

BA'NWELL, a village in Somersetshire, five miles N. W. of Axbridge.

BA'PTISM, [βαπτισμος, Gr.] is a sacrament by which a person is initiated into the Christian church. Among the Jews, when a person was made a proselyte to their religion, if a male, he was first circumcised, and soon afterwards baptized; during which time a summary of their religion was read. Baptism is practised by all professors of the Christian religion, except Quakers. In primitive times, the ceremony was performed by immersion, as it still is in the Oriental churches, agreeable to the original signification of the word, which means dipping, or plunging. The practice of the Western churches is to sprinkle the water upon the head or face of the person baptized, except the church of Milan, in whose ritual it is ordered that the head of the infant be three times plunged into the water. In primitive times, it seems probable that none were baptized but adults, though several learned men contend, that infants were admitted into this sacrament.

BAPTIS'MAL, a. relating to, or done at, our baptism.

BA'PTIST, f. [βαπτιστης, Gr.] one who administers baptism; applied by way of eminence, to St. John, our Saviour's fore-runner; likewise one who holds that baptism ought to be administered only to adult persons.

BAPTIST'ERY, f. [baptisterium, Lat.] the place in the church where the sacrament of baptism is administered; the font.

To BAPTIZE, v. a. [βαπτίζω, Gr.] to perform the ceremony of baptism; to christen.

BAPTIZER, f. one who administers the sacrament of baptism.

BAR, f. [barre, Fr.] a piece of wood or iron, made use of to secure the entrance of any place from being forced; a rock or sand bank, at the entrance of a harbour, or river, to keep off ships of burden; the part of a court of justice where the criminal generally stands, and within which the counsel and judge sit to try causes, so called from a wooden bar being placed there to keep off the crowd; an inclosed place at a tavern, coffee-house, &c. wherein a person sits to take care of, and receive the reckoning. Figuratively, any obstacle, or thing which hinders; any thing which keeps the parts of a thing together. In Law, a peremptory exception against a demand or plea brought by a defendant in an action, that destroys the action of the plaintiff for ever, and is either bar so common intent or special. A bar of gold or silver is a lump of either melted and cast into a mould, without ever having been wrought. In Music, the straight strokes drawn perpendicularly across the lines in a piece of music, between as many notes as the measure of time consists of, in which the air is pricked. In Heraldry, an ordinary resembling the feft, differing from it in narrowness, rowness, and that it may be placed in any part of the field: it is generally drawn horizontally across the field, dividing it into two unequal parts, and containing one fifth of the whole. Bar-foot, two half-bullets joined together by an iron bar, used in sea engagements for cutting down masts and rigging.

To BAR, v. a. to fasten or secure any entrance by a piece of iron or wood. Figuratively, to exclude, except against; to hinder, or put a stop to.

BARATRY, f. in Law, is when the master of a ship endeavours to cheat the owners or insurers, either by running away with the ship, or embezzling the goods.

BARB, f. [barba, Lat.] in its original signification, a beard. In its secondary, any thing that grows in its place, or resembles it. The piece of wire at the end of a fish hook, which makes an angle with the point, and hinders it from being extracted; likewise the pieces of iron which run back in the same manner from the point of an arrow, and serve for the same purpose.

BARB, f. [a contraction of Barbary] a horse brought from Barbary, esteemed for its beauty, vigour, and swiftness, for its never lying down, and for its standing still, when the rider drops his bridle.

BARBACAN, f. [barbacane, Fr.] in Architecture, a long narrow canal, or passage for water in walls, where buildings are liable to be overflowed; likewise to drain off water from a terrace; an aperture in the walls of a city, to fire musquets through at an enemy. In Fortification, a fort at the entrance of a bridge; an outer defence or fortification to a city; a watch tower.

BARBADOES, the easternmost of the Windward Islands, in America; it is in general a level country, though not without hills, and 25 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. It had formerly a good deal of wood, but is now almost all consumed with carrying on the sugar-works. The commodities which they export are sugar, rum, cotton, indigo, and ginger; and they have most of the fruits common to the climate. The number of the white inhabitants are about 20,000, who have 100,000 negro slaves. They have no manufactures, nor do they breed many cattle; receiving most of their corn, cattle, flesh, and salted fish, from North America, and their cloaths and furniture from England. They are subject to hurricanes in July and August; but not so much as in the other Caribbees; and it is the most healthy island of any in these parts, because, unless when there is an hurricane, they have always the advantage of a constant easterly wind, commonly called the Trade-wind. The sugar that is brought to England from hence is whiter and finer than that of any other plantation; and they have one particular production called Barbadoes tar, which rises out of the earth, and swims upon the surface of the water. It is of great use in the dry belly-ach, and in diseases of the breast. It is 70 miles E. of the island of St. Vincent, and 90 S. E. of Martinico. The capital town is St. Michael, or Bridge-town, which lies in lon. 59. 2. W. lat. 13. 5. N.

BARBARIAN, f. [barbarus, Lat.] in its primary sense, applied by the Greeks and Romans to all that were not of their own nation, i. e. a foreigner; but in process of time it acquired a secondary idea of cruelty, and was used to denote a person void of all the elegant embellishments of life, and the social affections of benevolence, good-nature, and humanity.

BARBARIC, a. [barbaricus, Lat.] foreign; brought from countries at a great distance.

BARBARISM, f. [barbarismus, Lat.] in Grammar, an offence against the purity of style or language; uncultivated ignorance. Applied to manners, rudeness; want of politeness; savageness; cruelty.

BARBARITY, f. [barbaritas, Lat.] applied to the behaviour, incivility, unpoliteness. Applied most commonly to manners, cruelty; savageness, want of pity, kindness, and humanity.

BARBAROUS, a. [barbaros, Gr.] applied to learning, ignorant; unacquainted with the polite arts and sciences. Applied to manners, void of benevolence, pity, or compassion; cruel; savage; inhuman.

BARBAROUSLY, ad. in such manner as shews a mind unpolished with learning; a stranger to politeness, pity, compassion, or humanity.

BARBARY, a large county of Africa, included between the Atlantic Ocean, the Mediterranean Sea, and Egypt, extending itself along the sea-shore on the side of the Mediterranean. However, some reckon that it extends southward as far as Negro-land, but very improperly. It includes the kingdoms of Barca, Tripoly, Tunis, Algiers, Fez, and Morocco; and is near 2000 miles in length, and in some places 750 in breadth. It was known to the ancients by the name of Mauritania, Numidia, Proper Africa, and Libya. It is the best country in all Africa, except Egypt; and fertile in corn, maize, wine, and fruits; particularly citrons, oranges, figs, almonds, olives, dates, and melons. Their chief trade consists in the sale of their fruits, in the horses called barbs, Morocco-leather, ostrich-feathers, indigo, wax, tin, and coral. The reigning religion is the Mahometan, and there are some Jews; but no Christians, except the slaves.

To BARBECUE, v. a. [Ind.] to dress a hog whole, by splitting it to the back-bone, and broiling it upon a gridiron, raised two feet above a charcoal fire.

BARBECUE, f. a hog dressed whole after the West Indian manner.

BARBEL, f. [barbe, Fr.] a large, strong, but coarse river fish; so called from its having a barb or wattle under its chin.

BARBER, f. [barber, Fr.] one who shaves.

BARBER CHIRURGEON, f. [pronounced barber-surgeon] one who practises the lower operations of surgery; such as bleeding and drawing of teeth, together with the trade of a barber.

BARBERRY, f. in Botany, the piperidge herb, which grows in hedges to the height of eight or ten feet.

BARDS, f. [berd, Brit.] among the ancient Britons, Danes, and Irish, an order of men who used to sing the great exploits of heroes to the harp, were persons in the highest esteem among all ranks of people, and revered as persons of extraordinary abilities, even by crowned heads, who paid them so much deference, as to be reconciled to their most inveterate enemies at their instances. Even in the present times, the word implies a poet.

BARDFIELD, a village in Essex, four miles E. of Thaxted.

BARE, a. [ber, Sax.] uncovered; without ornaments; naked. Figuratively, without ornament; destitute, or in want of necessaries; or joined with any thing else; alone; solitary; very much worn; that which has lost its top; threadbare.

To BARE, v. a. to strip.

BARE, or BORE, the preter of BEAR.

BARBONE, f. a very thin or lean person, who has scarce any flesh to cover his bones. A low word.

BARFACED, a. with the face uncovered. Figuratively, without dissimulation or disguise; with great effrontery, or impudence. Generally used in a bad sense.

BARFACEDLY, ad. in such a manner as shows a bold, daring impudence.

BARFOOT, a. one who is without shoes, or any covering to his feet.

BAR-HEADED, a. without a hat, or any covering to the head.

BARELY, ad. without cloaths, applied to dress; without any thing else, or only, applied as an exception.

BARENESS, f. applied to dress, either total nakedness, or a want of some necessary part of attire; meanness, with respect to the quality of cloathing.

BARGAIN, [in common pronoun, the i is dropped] f. [barren, Brit.] a voluntary agreement made between traders to deliver or sell a commodity at a price agreed on; the thing bought or sold; the conditions of sale. SYNON. Bargain is more limited, relating to sale. Agreement and Contract are more general, implying any sort of stipulation; with this difference between them, that Agreement seems to denote a verbal one; Contract, one that is written.

To BARGAIN, v. n. to agree to, or make terms for the sale of any thing.

BARGAINEE f. the person who agrees to the condition of a bargain or purchase.

BARGAINER, f. one who proposes the conditions of a bargain.

BARGE, f. [borgia, Belg.] a large flat-bottomed vessel used for the carriage of goods in rivers; likewise a state or pleasure boat, built with a room capable of containing several persons.

BARK, f. [berck, Dan.] in Botany, the outside covering of a tree, which increases every year.

BARK, or BARQUE, f. [barque, Fr.] a small vessel with one deck only, used in transporting merchandizes either by sea, or on rivers.

To BARK, v. a. to strip off the rind or bark of a tree.

To BARK, v. n. [barcan, Sax.] to make a noise like a dog, when he gives the alarm.

BARK-BA'RED, f. stripped or robbed of the bark.

BARK-BINDING, f. in Gardening, a disease incident to trees, wherein the bark is so close, that the vegetation, and the circulation of the sap, is hindered. It is cured by splitting the bark, or cutting it along the grain.

BA'RKER, f. applied to litigious, noisy, or clamorous persons.

BARK-GA'LLING, f. is when the bark or rind of a tree is galled or fretted with thorns, &c. which is cured by binding clay on the galled places.

BA'RKING, a town in Essex, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on the river Roding, not far from the Thames, in an unwholesome air. It has been chiefly noted for a large mannatery, now in ruins, there being nothing left standing but a small part of the walls and a gate-house. It is 7 miles E. of London.

BA'RKLEY, a town in Gloucestershire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on a branch of the river Severn; and formerly was of some note for a nunnery; and has still the title of a barony. It is 18 miles S. W. of Gloucester, and 112 W. by S. of London.

BA'RKWAY, a town in Hertfordshire, which had formerly a market on Fridays, and has still one fair. It is on the great road from London to York, 18 miles S. of Cambridge, and 3½ N. of London.

BA'RKY, a. that which consists of, or has the properties of, bark.

BA'RLEY, f. [ber, Sax.] in Botany, the grain from whence beer is extracted. A grain or corn of which malt is made.

BA'RLEY-BRAKE, f. a kind of rural play, which consists in swiftness of running.

BA'RLEY-CORN, f. a grain of barley; used in long measure, as the third part of an inch.

BA'RLEY-MOW, f. a heap of barley laid together, and formed into a rick or stack.

BARM, f. [bar, Brit.] that which is put into drink to make it work, or into bread to swell it; and make it light; called by the Londoners yeast.

BA'RMY, a. that which has been well fermented or worked with barm, or yeast.

BARN, f. [bern, Sax.] a place, or house, wherein any grain, hay, &c. is stored.

BA'RNACLE, f. a small sea animal frequent among the western isles of Scotland, whose generation has much puzzled the learned. At first, it appears like a little shell-fish growing on old timber, or at the bottom of ships, resembling a mussel for colour and consistence, crossed with futures; it hangs to the wood by a neck longer than the shell, of a filmy substance.

by which it receives nourishment within the shell, where is a feathered fowl called a Solan goose. In Fariery, Barnacles is an instrument consisting of two branches, joined at one end by a hinge, to put upon their horses noses to make them stand quietly when shod, blooded, or dressed.

BAR'NARD-CASTLE, a town in the county of Durham, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated in a bottom on the river Tees, is indifferently large, and has a manufacture of stockings; 30 miles S. W. of Durham, and 24 $\frac{3}{4}$ N. N. W. of London.

BAR'NET, a town partly in Middlesex and partly in Hertfordshire, with a market on Mondays. It is a great thoroughfare town, well provided with good inns. It is 11 miles N. W. of London.

BAR'NSTAPLE, a sea-port town of Devonshire, with a market on Fridays. It is a corporation-town, and sends two members to parliament; is seated on the river Tau, over which there is a good bridge; and the market is large for cattle, corn, and provisions. It is 38 miles N. N. W. of Exeter, and 19 $\frac{1}{2}$ W. of London.

BAR'NSLEY, a town in the West Riding of Yorkshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on the side of a hill, and has a manufacture of wire. It is commonly called Black-Barnsley, and is 53 miles N. by W. of Nottingham, and 17 $\frac{1}{2}$ N. W. of London.

BAROMETER, f. [from βαρος and μετρον, Gr.] in Hydrostatics, an instrument to measure the weight or pressure of a column of air, to discover the heights of mountains, &c. which consists of a tube hermetically sealed, filled with quicksilver, and immersed in a vessel of the same.

BAROME'TRICAL, a. relating to, or tried by the barometer.

BAR'ON, [baro, Lat.] a term which formerly included all the greater nobility. It is now used as a degree of nobility, next below that of a viscount, and above that of a baronet. Parliamentary barons are not barons by name only, but are all, by birth, peers, noblemen, and are summoned by the king, "to treat of the weighty affairs of the nation, and to give counsel upon them." They have the following immunities and privileges; in criminal causes, they are judged by their peers only, and are not put on oath, but deliver the truth upon honour; are not impeached on a jury, nor liable to the writs supplicavit, capias, effoigns. They had no coronet till Charles II. gave them a gold one, with six pearls. Besides these, the two archbishops, and all the bishops of England, are parliamentary barons, and enjoy all the privileges of the others, excepting that they are not judged by their peers; for being not to be present in sanguinary causes, in such cases they are judged, as a fact, by a jury of 12. Barons of the Exchequer, are four judges, who determine causes between the king and his subjects, in affairs relating to the revenue and the exchequer. Barons of the Cinque ports, are members elected two for each, who have seats in the House of Commons. Barons and femme, in Law, are husband and wife. Baron and femme, in Heraldry, is when the coats of arms of a man and his wife are borne per pale in the same escutcheon.

BAR'ONAGE, f. [baronagium, Lat.] the body of barons; the dignity, or lands which give title to a baron.

BAR'ONESS, f. [baronessa, Ital.] the lady or wife of a baronet.

BAR'ONET, f. is a degree of honour next to a baron, created by King James I. in order to propagate a plantation in Ulster in Ireland, for which purpose each of them was to maintain 30 soldiers in Ireland for three years, after the rate of 8*l.* per day for each soldier; and they have the precedence of all knights, except those of the Garter, Bannerets, and privy counsellors. The title Sir is allowed them by their patent, though they are not knighted. There was at first but 200, which was afterwards increased. No honour is created between Barons and Baronets.

BAR'ONY, f. the lordship or see of a baron, whether spiritual or temporal.

BAR'OSCOPE, f. [βαρος and σκοπιον, Gr.] an instrument to shew the alteration of the weight of the atmosphere.

BAR'RRACAN, f. [barracan, Fr.] a kind of stuff resembling camelot, wove in a loom with two treddles.

BAR'RRACK, f. [barracca, Span.] small huts erected by the Spanish fishermen along the shore; likewise buildings raised to lodge soldiers in.

BAR'RRATOR, f. [barateur, Fr.] a litigious person, or one who is fond of quarrels and law-suits.

BAR'RRATKY, f. [baraterie, Fr.] in Common Law, the moving or maintaining of suits in disturbance of the peace; and the taking and detaining houses, land, &c. by false pretences.

BAR'RRAY, one of the western isles of Scotland, five miles in length, and three in breadth, rocky on the east side, arable land on the west. There is plenty of cod and ling near this island; and several small ships from Orkney come hither in summer, and return laden with the fish.

BAR'REL, f. [baril, Brit.] a round wooden vessel, which serves for holding several sorts of wares and merchandize. The English barrel, wine-measure, contains the eighth part of a ton, the fourth part of a pipe, and one half of a hoghead, i. e. 31 $\frac{1}{2}$ gallons; beer-measure 36 gallons, and ale-measure 32 gallons. It denotes also a certain weight of several merchandizes, which differ according to the several commodities. The barrel of herrings ought to contain 92 gallons, wine-measure, which amounts to about 28 gallons, old standard, making about 1000 herrings. The barrel of salmon must hold 42 gallons; of eels the same; and of soap 256 pounds. In Mechanics, it is the cylinder of a watch, about which the spring is turned. In Gunnery, it is the cylindrical tube of a gun, pistol, &c. through which the ball is discharged. In Anatomy, it is a petty large cavity behind the tympanum of the ear, about four or five lines deep, and six or six wide, lined with a fine membrane, on which are several veins and arteries. In this cavity are four small solid bones, not covered with the pericranium, as the rest of the bones of the body are.

To BARRELL, v. a. to put into, or inclose in a hamel.

BARREN, s. [barr, Sax.] applied to animals or plants, not able to produce its like. Applied to plants, not able to produce any thing new.

BARRENLY, ad. in an unfruitful manner.

BARRENNESS, f. that imperfection in any animal or vegetable, that renders it incapable of bringing forth, or propagating its kind. Also, want of invention, sterility of thought, &c.

BARRICADE, f. [barricade, Fr.] any defence is the military art raised against an enemy's army, made with vessels, carts, baskets of earth, trees, or pallisades. Figuratively, any thing which obstructs or hinders the motion of any thing.

To BARRICADE, v. a. to stop up a passage; to hinder the advance or motion of any thing.

BARRICADO, f. [barricada, Span.] in Fortification, a defence made with stakes thod with iron, crossed at the top with battoons, and erected in passages or breaches.

To BARRICADO, v. a. to block up a passage; to hinder an enemy from passing any defile or place.

BARRIER, [barrier, f. [barriere, Fr.] that which keeps an enemy off, or hinders him from entering into any country; a fence made at a passage, retrenchment, &c. to stop up its entry. Figuratively, an obstruction, or hindrance; a boundary, or limit.

BARRISTER, f. one who is qualified, from his having performed his exercises at the laws of courts, and by licence from the lord high chancellor, after a proper standing, to plead the cause of clients in a court of justice.

BARROW, f. [barrow, Sax.] any carriage moved or set in motion by the hand; hence a hand-barrow is a frame of boards, on which things are carried by handles at its extremities between two men. A wheel-barrow is that which has a wheel at the head, by which it moves when pushed forward by the handles at the other end.

BARROWS, f. [from berg, Sax.] hills or mounds raised by the Saxons, in honour of those who died in the field of battle.

BARRY, f. in Heraldry, is when an escutcheon is divided bar-ways, i. e. across from side to side, into an even number of portions, consisting of two or more tinctures, interchangeably disposed; expressed in the blazon by the word barry, and the number of pieces must be specified; but if the divisions be odd, the field must be first named, and the number of bars expressed. Barry-bendy is when an escutcheon is divided evenly, bar and bend-ways, by lines drawn transverse and diagonal, interchangeably varying the tinctures of which it consists. Barry-pily is when a coat is divided by several lines drawn obliquely from side to side, where they form acute angles.

BARTER, f. in Commerce, the purchasing one commodity by another, or exchanging one ware for another. SYNON. Barter is a mercantile expression, and intimates the exchange of different commodities by way of traffic.

To BARTER, v. a. [baratter, Fr.] to exchange one thing for another; the original method of carrying on all trade and commerce, till the invention of money.

BARTERER, f. he that trades by exchanging one commodity for another.

BARTON, f. [barton, Sax.] the demesne lands of a manor; a manor-house; the fields, out-houses, &c. a term in great use in the west of England.

BARTON, a town in Lincolnshire, with a market on Mondays. It is seated on the river Humber, where there is a considerable ferry to pass over into Yorkshire, of considerable advantage to the town, which is a large straggling place, 35 miles N. of Lincoln, and 166 N. of London.

BASALTES, f. in Natural History, a kind of marble, of a very fine texture, of a deep glossy black, like polished steel. Its figure is very remarkable, being never found in strata like other marbles, but always standing up in regular angular columns, composed of a number of joints, one placed on, and nicely fitted to another, as if formed by the hand of a skilful workman. It is extremely hard and heavy, will not strike fire with steel, and is a fine touch-stone. They are found in several parts of the world; but the noblest stone seems to be that called the Giants Causeway in Ireland, where it rises far up in the country, runs into the sea, and rises again on the opposite land.

BASE, a. [bas, Fr.] applied to actions, proceeding from a mean, narrow, abject, and sordid disposition. Applied to rank, low, mean, and void of dignity. Applied to birth, descended from mean parents. Applied to metals, counterfeit, or adulterated. Applied to sounds, deep, grave.

BASE, f. [bas, Fr.] in Architecture, the lower part of a column or pedestal, being the same to a column, as a shoe is to a man. Base, in Fortification, is an imaginary line drawn from the flanked angle of a bastion to that which is opposite to it. Base of a figure, in Geometry, is the lower part of it. Base of a triangle, is properly that side parallel to the horizon. Base, in Anatomy, is the broader or upper part of the heart, to which the two auricles are fixed. Base fee, is a tenure in fee at the will of a lord. Base, in Music, the large string of a musical instrument. See BASS, or BASSO.

To

To BASE, v. a. [baser, Fr.] to lower the value of a thing by mixtures; to debase; to adulterate.

BA'SELY, ad. meanly, dishonourably. In bastardy.

BA'SENESS, f. applied to actions, that which is void of generosity, magnanimity, or nobleness of soul, and proceeds from a narrowness or meanness of spirit. Applied to metals, their want of the standard value. Applied to birth, dishonourable, or produced from unlicenced embraces. Applied to sound, low, grave.

To BASH, v. a. to be ashamed.

BASHA'W, f. [Turk.] a Turkish governor of a province, city, or district, who has two horse-tails carried before him.

BA'SHFUL, a. one who is soon put out of countenance.

BA'SHFULLY, ad. in a timorous, sheepish manner.

BA'SHFULNESS, f. timorousness, fear, or shame.

BA'SIL, BA'SLE, or BALE, the capital of the canton of Basil, in Switzerland. It is a large, rich, populous city, with a bishop's see, and a famous university. It is divided into two parts of the river Rhine; the largest of which is on the side of Switzerland, and the least on that of Germany; but they are joined together by a handsome bridge. The larger has five gates, six suburbs, 220 streets, six large squares, and 46 fountains, and is partly seated on a hill. The lesser stands in a plain, and has but two gates, with several streets and fountains. The town-house, and fine paintings in fresco, particularly the picture done by Holben, which represents the passion of Christ, are much admired by travellers. The library contains a prodigious number of books, as well in manuscript as printed; and there is a rich collection of medals, among which there are several exceedingly scarce. The clocks here always go an hour too fast, because they did so on the day appointed to murder the magistrates, by which the conspiracy was disconcerted. This town is surrounded with thick walls, flanked with towers and bastions, and yet is not a strong place. The art of making paper is said to have been invented here. Lon. 7. 36. E. lat. 47. 40. N.

BA'SIL, [basil] f. among joiners, the sloping edge of a carpenter's or joiner's tool, which varies according to the work it is to do; the skin of a sheep tanned. In Botany, a plant named ocymum.

To BA'SIL, [basil] v. a. to grind away the edge of a tool to a certain thickness or angle.

BA'SILIC, f. in ancient Architecture, a term used for a large hall, or public place, where princes sat and administered justice in person; but is now applied to such churches, temples, &c. which by their grandeur, as far surpass other churches, as princes palaces do private houses; also, to such stately buildings as the Royal Exchange at London, where merchants meet and converse.

BAS'PLIC, or BAS'PLICAL, a. in Anatomy, something belonging or relating to the basifical vein.

BAS'LICA, f. [basilica, Gr.] in Anatomy, the middle vein of the arm.

BAS'LICON, f. [basilikon, Gr.] in Pharmacy, an ointment called tetrapharmacon, from its being composed of four ingredients, viz. resin, wax, pitch, and oil of olives; by some, of Burgandy pitch, turpentine, resin, and oil.

BA'SILISK, [basilik] f. [Basiliscus, Gr.] in Natural History, a kind of serpent about three palms long, with white spots on its crown, said to drive all others away by its hissing, and to kill by its very look; called likewise a cockatrice.

BA'SINGSTOKE, a town in Hampshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is a corporation, and a great thoroughfare town on the western road; seated on a small brook, 35 miles E. by N. of Salisbury, and 46½ W. by S. of London.

BA'SIS, f. [basis, Lat.] the foundation, or that on which any thing is established or supported. See BASE.

To BASK, v. a. [backeren, Sax.] to warm by exposing to, or laying in, the heat of the sun. Neuterly, to lie in a warm place.

BA'SKET, f. [bagged, Brit.] a vessel made with twigs, rushes, &c. woven together.

BA'SON, or BA'SIN, [basin, Fr.] a small vessel to hold water, or other liquors; an hollow place which contains water; a pond; a canal; a dock for repairing or building ships; a concave piece of metal made use of by opticians to grind their convex glasses in; a round shell, or case of iron, placed over a furnace, wherein hatters mould their hats. In Anatomy, a round cavity in the form of a tunnel, between the anterior ventricles of the brain, the pituitary glands, and the veins. Basons of a balance are the same as scales, one of which contains the weight, and the other the commodity whose weight is required.

BASS, [pron. base, which way it is frequently spelt] f. [basso, Ital.] in Music, the lowest of all the parts; serving as a foundation to the others. That part of a concert, consisting of the gravest, deepest, and most solemn sounds. Counter-bass is the second, when there are several in the same concert. Trough-bass, is that which proceeds without intermission from the beginning to the end, and is the harmony made by bass-viol, theorbo, &c. playing both while the voices sing and other instruments perform; and also filling the intervals when they stop. Also, a mat used in churches to kneel on, made of rushes, in a cylindrical form, and stuffed with hay; commonly called a bass.

BA'SSET, f. [basset, Fr.] a game at cards.

BA'SSO, [Ital.] in Music, sometimes extended to the bass universally, and at other times restrained to that only which is sung. Basso concertato is the figured or thorough bass, going through the whole piece, playing chords, boards, or whatever can convey harmony to the ear. Basso ripieno, the bass of the grand chorus, which is heard only or comes in at intervals, in order to make the composition have a greater effect.

BASSOON, or BASSOON, f. in Music, a wind instrument blown with a reed, nine inches long, and the bottom, with eleven holes, stopped like that of a flute, dividing into two parts, and set for the bass in concerts with the flute.

BASSO-RELIEVO, or BASS-RELIEF, f. [Ital.] Sculpture, the figures of which do not rise so much from the ground or plane on which they are formed; and when that work is low, flat, and but little raised, as upon coins, medals, cozzetti, &c. it is called low relief; if the figures are raised high, so as to be well distinguished, it is called bold relief.

BASS-VIOL, f. of the same form with that of a violin, but much larger; is played upon in the same manner, and has the same number of strings, and eight stops, which are divided into semi-stops. Its sound is grave, and has a much nobler effect in a concert than that of a violin.

BASTARD, f. [bastard, Brit.] in Law, a person born of parents which have not been lawfully married, and cannot inherit land as heir to his father.

To BASTARD, v. a. to convict of getting a bastard; to prove a person not begotten in lawful wedlock.

To BASTARDIZE, v. a. to prove a person not begotten in lawful marriage; to get a bastard.

BASTARDLY, ad. like a bastard; in a degenerate, spurious manner.

BASTARDY, f. in Law, an unlawful state of birth, wherein a person is produced from a couple not married, and is therefore disabled from succeeding to an inheritance.

To BASTE, v. a. [bastonner, Fr.] to beat with a stick. In Cookery, to moisten meat while roasting, with butter or dripping. Among Sempsters, from basier, Fr. to stitch, to sew two selvages together.

BATTLE, f. a royal castle built by Charles V. in 1369, for the defence of Paris, formerly used as a place of confinement for state prisoners, but totally demolished by the populace, on the great revolution in France 1789.

BASTINA'DE, or BASTINA'DO, f. [bastinade, Fr.] the act of beating with a stick or cudgel; the punishment inflicted by the Turks, of beating the soles of a person's feet, with a heavy piece of wood, having a large knob or round head at the end.

To BASTINA'DE, or BASTINA'DO, v. a. to beat with a stick or cudgel.

BASTION, f. [bastion, Fr.] in Fortification, a large mass of earth, faced with sods, seldom with brick or stone, standing out from a rampart.

BASTON, or BATTOON, f. [Fr.] in Architecture, a mould at the base of a column called a torse. In Heraldry, a kind of bend, not reaching quite across the shield; a sign of bastardy, and ought not to be removed till the third generation.

BAT, f. [bat, Sax.] any large club; particularly one curved, and flat on one side, towards the bottom, used in the game of cricket. In Natural History, an animal with the body of a mouse, and wings like a bird, consisting of a membrane, which it extends in its flight; it appears only in summer evenings.

BAT'TABLE, a. in Law, applied to grounds whose property is disputable.

BATA'VIA, a handsome, large, and very strong town of Asia, in the island of Java and kingdom of Bantam; the capital of all the Dutch settlements and colonies in the East-Indies. The fort, or citadel, is built at a little distance from the town, of stone brought from Europe. Besides this, they have five other forts about the city, to defend it from all insults. In general the place is very beautiful, and built with white stone; and they have canals in the principal streets, planted on each side with evergreen trees. Batavia contains a prodigious number of inhabitants, of every nation and country in these parts; particularly a great number of Chinese, till many thousands of them were massacred in cold blood, in 1741, and their wealth confiscated by the Dutch. It is the residence of the general governor of all the Dutch colonies in the East-Indies, who continues but three years, and is replaced by another sent by the United Provinces. It has a handsome hospital and arsenal; and all the goods brought from other parts of the East-Indies are laid up here till they are exported to the places of their destination. There is always a fleet here, sufficient to maintain their power in these parts, and hinder other nations from molesting their trade, particularly in spices, which they have all to themselves. The harbour is excellent, and seated on the N. E. part of the island, S. E. of Sumatra, and N. W. of Borneo. Lon. 105. 5. E. lat. 6. 10. S.

BATCH, f. the quantity of bread baked at one time. Any quantity of a thing made at once, so as to have the same qualities.

BAT'CHELOR, f. See BACHELOR.

To BATE, [contracted from abate] v. a. to lessen a demand, or lower the price of a commodity; to abate or refrain from a thing; to except, or take away.

BATEMENT, f. the lessening the quantity of stuff; used by carpenters, and low mechanics.

BAT-FOWLING, f. a method of catching birds in the night, practised by lighting straw, or carrying a lantern near the bushes, which being beat with a stick, they fly towards the light, and are caught in nets provided for that purpose.

BATH, f. [batb, Sax.] a sufficient quantity of water collected into some convenient place for persons to wash in. Baths are divided into hot and cold. The most celebrated of this kind in England are those near Wells in Somerset-

Somerſetſhire. They produce a perſpiration of 5 oz. in an hour, and are of great uſe in diſorders of the head, palsy, diſeaſes of the ſkin, ſcurvy, ſtone, conſtipations of the bowels, and moſt chronical diſorders. Cold bathing operates both by its cold and conſtricting power, and its weight, which at the depth of two feet under water, preſſes on the human frame with a weight of 2280lb. troy. It diſſolves the blood, removes any viſcid matter adhering to the ſides of the veſſels; generates ſpirits; forces urine; and removes obſtructions in the viſcera. Knights of the Bath, a Military order in England, inſtituted by Richard II. who limited their number to four; but his ſucceſſor, Henry IV. increaſed them to forty-fix. Their motto was tres in uno, ſignifying the three theological virtues. This order received its denomination from a cuſtom of bathing before they received the golden ſpur. The order of the Bath, after remaining many years extinct, was revived under George I. by a ſolemn creation of a great number of knights.

BATH, a town or city of Somerſetſhire, with two markets on Wedneſdays and Saturdays. It is famous for its hot baths, which draw every year a great number of polite company, partly for the ſake of recovering their healths, and partly for diverſion. It is ſeated on the river Avon, over which there is a handſome ſtone-bridge, in a bottom, ſurrounded by ſteep hills. Of late years it has been adorned with very handſome public and private buildings, particularly a magnificent hoſpital for the benefit of the poor, who come hither for the ſake of the waters. The ſprings, or wells, are diſtinguiſhed by the names of the Croſs-bath, the Hot-bath, and the King's-bath. It is 12 miles E. S. E. of Briſtol, and 107 W. of London.

To BATHE, v. a. to waſh in a bath; to ſoften or ſupple by the outward application of warm liquors; to waſh any thing.

BATH-KOL, THE DAUGHTER OF THE VOICE, f. a name whereby the Jewiſh writers diſtinguiſh the revelation which God made of his will to his choſen people, when, upon the death of Malachi, all prophecies had ceaſed in Iſrael.

BATH-METAL, f. mixed metal, otherwiſe called Prince's Metal.

BA'NING, prep. except.

BATTA-LIA, f. [battaglia, Ital.] the drawing up an army in order of battle.

BATTA'LION, f. [bataillon, Fr.] a ſmall body of infantry drawn up in order of battle. A battalion ſeldom falls ſhort of 700, or exceeds 1000, men. It is generally ranged in fix ranks.

BA'TTEL, a town in Suffex, diſtant from London 57 miles. The market is on Thurſdays.

BATTEN, f. a name given by workmen to a long, thin piece of wood, of an inconfiderable breadth, ſeldom exceeding four inches; it is generally about an inch thick.

To BA'TTEN, v. a. [batten, Teut.] to glut, or ſatiate one's ſelf; to grow fat, to live luxuriously. Applied to land, to make fruitful.

BA'TTER, f. in Cookery, a mixture of flour, eggs, and milk, beaten together with ſome liquor.

To BATTER, v. a. [battre, Fr.] to beat; to beat down. Meſt commonly applied to the battering of walls by engines, cannon, &c.

BA'TTERY, f. in Fortification, a place where artillery is planted in order to play upon the enemy. In Law, the beating any perſon unjuſtly.

BA'TTLE, f. [bataille, Fr.] a fight between two numerous bodies of men. The fight of two individuals is frequently, but improperly, called a battle inſtead of a combat, for a battle ſuppoſes a number on both ſides. ΣΥΧΟΝ. We uſe the word battle when ſpeaking of the conflict between two armies. Engagement is applied to the encounter between two fleets.

To BA'TTLE, v. a. [batailler, Fr.] to engage in battle, or contend in any manner whatever.

BATTLE-ARRAY, f. arrangement, or order of battle; the proper diſpoſition of men in order to engage an enemy.

BATTLE-AXE, f. a weapon made uſe of in former times; frequent mention is made of it by hiſtorians, though none of them have left us a deſcription of it.

BATTLEDOOR, f. an inſtrument uſed to ſtrike a ſhuttle-cock; it conſiſts of a handle and broad blade.

BATTLEFIELD, a village in Shropſhire, 5 mile N. of Shrewſbury, where a victory was gained by Henry IV. over the rebels under Henry Percy, ſurnamed Hotſpur. It is governed by a conſtable, and conſiſts of about 400 houſes and 1400 inhabitants. It has a large church, and one long ſtreet, paved; but no manufactory.

BATTLEMENTS, f. notches on the top of a tower, wall, parapet, &c. to look through, in order to annoy an enemy.

BATTOLOGY, f. [βαττολογία, Gr.] a tedious circumlocution, or the frequent repetition of the ſame word without any reaſon.

BATTOON'S f. [baton, Fr.] a truncheon or ſtaff, borne by a marſhall as a mark of his dignity; likewise, any ſhort ſtick or club.

BAVARIA, a conſiderable country of Germany, with the title of a duchy; bounded on the N. by Bohemia, and the Upper Palatinate; on the E. by Auſtria, the archbiſhopric of Saltzburg, and the biſhopric of Paſſau; on the S. by the biſhopric of Brixen, and the Tyrol, and on the W. by the river Lech. It is about 124 miles in length from E. to W. and 87 in breadth from N. to S. The principal rivers are the Danube, the Inn, the Iſer, and the Lech. The air is wholeſome, and the ſoil fertile in wine, wheat, and good paſtures; but the country having little trade is poor. It is divided into the Upper and Lower; and the duke is one of the electors ſince the year 1623. We muſt not confound the duchy of Bavaria with with the circle of that name, which is much more extensive, comprehending, besides the former, the Upper Palatine, the archbishopric of Salzburg, the bishopric of Freisinguen, Boffian, and Ratibon, and the duchy of Neuburg: bounded on the E. and S. by the circle of Austria, and on the W. and N. by the circle of Franconia, Swabia, and Bohemia. The palatinate of Bavaria is part of Nortgaw, and whose capital is Amberg.

BAVIN, f. sort of brush faggots, used by bakers to heat their ovens, and by others for other uses; in War, they are used to fill up ditches.

BAVILE, f. [Ascellum, Lat.] a plaything; and figuratively, any thing of a trifling insignificant nature.

BAWBEE, f. in Scotland, a halfpenny.

BAWCOCK, f. a fine fellow.

BAWDY, f. a person of either sex, who lives by procuring women for lewd purposes.

BAWDILY, ad. in an obscene, unchaste, or immodest manner.

BAWDRY, f. the acting like a bawd in bringing persons together for immodest purposes. Applied to language, that which is obscene and obscene.

BAWDY, a. that which expresses obscenity or obscene ideas in plain terms, and carries with it the idea of impudence.

BAWDY-HOUSE f. a place where strumpets carry on their immodesty, and prostitution is practised.

To BAWL, v. a. [ballo, Lat.] to cry or speak any thing with a loud voice.

BAWSIN, f. in Natural History, a badger.

BAUTRY, or BA'WTRY, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkshire, on the borders of Nottinghamshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is three furlongs in length on the road from London to York, and has been long noted for mill-stones and grind-stones, brought thence by the river Idle, on which it is seated. It is eight miles S. by E. of Doncaster, and 15 S. of London.

BAY, f. [baia, Lat.] applied to the colour of a horse, is that which inclines to red, and approaches near to a chestnut. The light and gilded bays have a greater cast of the yellow; the dun, scarlet, and bloody bay, a greater mixture of red; and the chestnut bay, that which resembles the colour of a chestnut. In Geography, a part of the sea which runs into the land, and is broader in the middle than at its first entrance, called the mouth. Figuratively, the state of one surrounded by enemies, which cannot be escaped but by making head against them. In Architecture, used to signify the largeness of a building; thus a barn, which has a floor and two heads, is called a bay and two bays. In Botany, the laurus, a kind of ever-green, which used to be formed into wreaths, as a reward for poets, &c. Hence it is used as a token of honour, and a mark of merit.

To BAY, v. n. [abayer, Fr.] to bark at; to bellow, in the same manner as hounds do their prey.

BA'Y-SALT, f. that which is made of seawater, exhaled by the heat of the sun.

BA'Y-WINDOW, f. a window which swells or projects outwards.

BA'YARD, f. a horse of a bay colour.

BA'YONET, f. [bayonette, Fr.] a short broad dagger made lancet-fashion, with a round hollow iron handle, which goes over the muzzle of a musquet, and fixes it to it.

BA'Y-YARN, f. yarn proper for making baize.

BA'YZE, f. See BAIZE.

BDE'LLIUM, [in prom. the b is generally dropped] f. a gum-resin, somewhat resembling myrrh in appearance, brought from the Levant; it is met with in single drops of a very irregular size, some of which are as large as a hazle-nut. Its colour is dusky, and its taste bitterish. People are no more agreed about the true nature of Bdellium, than they are about the manner how it is produced; and it is much doubted whether the Bdellium of the ancients be the same with the modern kind. In Pharmacy, this gum is allowed to be an emollient and discutient, and to be a powerful aperient and detergent, according to its age; for it is more so when new and fresh than afterwards.

To BE, v. n. [bron, Sax.] an auxiliary verb, by which we form the passive; sometimes used to confirm the state or condition of a thing, and at others its existence. To be reserved for a person future, in opposition to present.

BE, an article used in composition, and borrowed from the Sax. sometimes a mere expletive, and otherwise signifies upon, about as to be-spatter, to be-sprinkle.

BEACH, f. that part of the sea-shore which is washed by its waves.

BEA'CHED, a. that which is exposed to its waves.

BEA'CHY, a. that which abounds in beaches.

BEA'CON, f. [beacon, Sax.] a signal, or combustible raised on an eminence to be fired as the signal of an enemy's approach; signals and marks erected at sea, for the security of vessels.

BEA'CHY-HEAD, a promontory on the coast of Suffex, between Hastings and Shoreham, where the French fleet defeated the English and Dutch in June 1690.

BEA'CONAGE, f. a tax paid for the use and maintenance of a beacon.

BEA'CONSFIELD, a town in Bucks, with a small market on Thursdays. It stands on an eminence on the road from London to Oxford, and has several good inns; contains about 100 well-built houses, and is eight miles N. W. of Uxbridge, and 23 W. N. W. of London.

BEAD, f. [beade, Sax.] a small round piece of glass or other substance, moving on a string which runs through it, used by those of the Romish church to count their sins and prayers. Likewise used as ornaments for women, and worn round their necks in necklaces. In Architecture, chitecture, a round moulding, or astragal, carved so as to resemble a necklace.

BEADLE, f. [bydel, Sax.] a public crier, herald, or messenger. In Law, one who cites people to appear at a court; one whose office is to punish, or apprehend strollers, vagrants, and petty offenders in a parish. At the university, one who walks before the masters in public processions. Squire beadles are those who attend peculiarly on the vice-chancellor, give notice of convocations at each college, and are generally masters of arts.

BEADPROOF, f. among Distillers, is a fallacious way of determining the strength of their spirits, from the continuance of the bubbles or beads raised by shaking a small quantity of the spirit in a phial.

BEADROLL, f. a list or catalogue of a certain number of prayers for souls of the dead, which are generally counted by the members of the Romish church on their beads.

BEADSMAN, f. one who devotes himself entirely to prayer; one who undertakes or professes to pray for another.

BEAGLE, f. [bigle, Fr.] in Natural History, an English hound, or hunting dog, of a small size, known by its deep sound, and used in hunting hares.

BEAK, f. [bec, Fr.] the bill of a bird, or any thing which resembles it.

BEAKED, a. sharp-pointed, resembling the beak of a bird.

BEAL, f. a pimple, or any eruption in the skin, which raises or protuberates beyond it.

BEALT, BEALTH, or BULITH, a town of Brecknockshire, in South Wales, with a large market on Mondays, for live cattle, and one on Saturdays for provisions. It is pleasantly seated on the river Wye, and consists of about 100 houses, whose inhabitants have a trade in stockings. It is 16 miles N. of Brecknock, 92 S. of Chester, and 171 from London.

BEAM, f. [beam, Sax.] in Building, a large piece of wood lying across the walls of a building, supporting the principal rafters of the roof. Applied to a balance, that piece of iron, &c. which supports the scale. Among Weavers, a cylindrical piece of wood placed lengthways on the back part of the loom, on which the threads of the warp are rolled, and unrolled as the work advances; likewise the cylinder, or round piece of wood, on which the stuff is rolled as it is weaved, placed on the forepart of the loom. A ray of light darted or emitted from any luminous body. We say rays of light, beams of the sun; by the first of which expressions we mean, that those are rays which shine early in the morning; by the second, that those are beams which gleam at noon. Applied to an anchor, the straight part or shank, to which the hooks are fastened.

To BEAM, v. n. to emit or dart rays.

BEAMINSTER, or BE'MINSTER, a town in Dorsetshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is a pretty place, seated on the river Bert, 15 miles W. N. W. of Dorchester, and 138 W. by S. of London.

BEAMY, a. that which darts rays; shining; radiant.

BEAN, f. [bean, Sax.] in Botany, a kind of pulse.

To BEAR, v. a. in its primary sense, to support, to stand under, or carry a burden; to deliver or carry; to wear. Used with name, to go by. To support, sustain, or keep from falling; to endure; to permit, or suffer without resentment; to produce, to bring forth. To carry away by violence. Joined with down, to overcome, or carry along with one like a torrent. To bear a bead, in Distillery, to shew itself to be proof by frothing when shook. To bear a body, in Painting, capable of being well ground down, and mixing with oil, so as not to shew any grits or particles. Joined to price, to sell well, or at a certain value. To endure the frown of adversity; to suffer without remonstrance or complaint. To produce fruit, applied to vegetables. To bear off, to carry away by force. To bear upon, to stand firm without falling. To bear out, to support or maintain one's opinion.

BEAR, f. in Natural History, a wild beast with long shaggy hairs, hooked claws, feeding on fruits, honey, bees, and flesh. The females go no longer than thirty days, when they generally produce five young ones. Bear, in Astronomy, is applied to two constellations in the northern hemisphere, called the greater and the less. In the tail of the last is the pole star, never distant above two degrees from the pole.

BEARALSTON, a small town in Devonshire, that had a market on Thursdays, now disused; nor has it any fairs; but sends two members to parliament. It is ten miles N. of Plymouth, and 212 W. by S. of London.

BEARD, f. [beard, Sax.] the hair which grows on a person's cheeks, lips, and chin, which has given no small cause of contention in the military, civil, and ecclesiastic world. The Chinese are very fond of long ones; but nature having been very sparing to them, they look on the Europeans as very great men, on account of this advantage. Applied to vegetables, it signifies the prickles which grow on the ears of corn. In an arrow, it is the barb, or forked point at the head. In Astronomy, the beard of a comet is the rays emitted towards the part to which it moves.

To BEARD, v. a. to take a person by the beard, including the idea of strength and contempt in the agent.

BEARDED, a. applied to persons, one who has a beard. Applied to vegetables, that which has long ears, like those growing on the ears of corn. Applied to instruments, that which is forked like a fishhook, not easily to be pulled out; jagged.

BEARDLESS, a. without a beard. Figuratively, young, or not arrived to the state of manhood.

BEARER, f. one who carries or conveys a thing from one to another. One who supports, or sustains, applied to dignity. That which produces or yields fruit, applied to vegetables.

BEAR.

BEAR-GARDEN, f. a place wherein bears are kept for diversion. Figuratively, any place where low diversions are exhibited, and merriment and confusion are customary.

BEARING, f. the act of supporting a weight; the carrying a burden. In Geography, and Navigation, the situation of one place to another, with regard to the points of the compass. In Sea-Language, when a ship sails towards the shore, before the wind, she is said to bear in with the land or harbour. To let the ship sail more before the wind, is to bear up. To put her right before the wind, is to bear round. A ship that keeps off from the land, is said to bear off. When a ship to the seaward comes under another ship's stern, and gives her the wind, she is said to bear under her.

BEAST, f. [bête, Fr.] an animal not endued with reason, generally four-footed, and so other covering or dress, but that which nature has furnished it with. Figuratively, a person who acts inconsistent with the character of a rational creature.

BEASTLINESS, f. that which is unworthy of a man; indecent, and disgusting.

BEASTLY, a. that which resembles a beast, either in its form or other of its peculiar qualities.

To BEAT, v. a. [preter beat, part. pass. beat or beaten] [battere, Fr.] to strike a person; to wound, to reduce to powder; to forge; to subdue, overcome, or vanquish; to mix together by violent stirring. Used with the particle down, to lessen the price. Used with brains, or head, to apply one's thoughts to a difficult subject. "To beat his brains about things impossible." Haywo. "Waste his time, and beat his head about the Latin Grammar." Luck. Neurally, to move, or throb, applied to the pulse, or the heart. To beat up for soldiers, to go about with a drum, in order to raise recruits. The word up is an expletive, and might be left out. SYNON. In order to beat, we must redouble the blows; but to strike, we give only one. We are never beaten without being struck; but we are often struck without being beaten.

BEAT, f. a stroke; the sound made by a drum, when struck by the sticks; the stroke or throbs of the pulse or heart.

BEATER, f. an instrument by which blows or strokes are given; a pestle.

BEATIFIC, or BEATIFICAL, a. [beatificus, Lat.] that which can render a person completely happy. Used by divines for the bliss of heaven.

BEATIFICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to make a person perfectly happy.

BEATIFICATION, f. in the Romish Church, an acknowledgement that a person is in heaven, and may be esteemed as blessed; but not allowed the honours of saints, conferred by veneration.

To BEATIFY, v. a. [beatifico, Lat.] to make perfectly happy; to bless with a place in the heavenly mansions.

BEATING, f. punishment inflicted by blows.

BEA'TITUDE, f. [beatitudo, Lat.] in Divinity, a state of perfect happiness, free from defect or interruption, applied to that of the deceased saints and angels in heaven.

BEATS, f. in Clock or Watch-work, the strokes made by the fangs or pallet of the spindle of the balance.

BEAU, f. [Fr. pronounced bo, and has the French plural beaux] an effeminate person of the male sex, who is passionately fond of dress.

BE'AVER, f. [bavere, Fr.] in Natural History, an animal which lives sometimes by land, and sometimes by water, about four feet long, and weighs from 40 to 60 lb. Its hair is either brown, white, or black; that on the belly is of a very fine down, about an inch long, and is used for hats. Its tail resembles that of a fish more than any land animal, serves it instead of a trowel in building, and of a rudder in swimming.

BEAU'ISH, [bo-ish] a. resembling a beau; effeminately nice; foppish.

BEAU'LIEU, a village in Hampshire, four miles S. W. of Southampton.

BEAU'MARIS, a town of Anglesea, in North Wales, with a market on Wednesdays. It stands on the freight of Menai, and was fortified with a castle by Edward I. It is governed by a mayor, recorder, two bayliffs, and twenty-one common-council men, and sends one member to parliament. Here the general quarter-sessions are held, and the county gaol is kept. It lies on the road from Chester to Holyhead, and was formerly a place of good trade, by means of its excellent harbour. Here is plenty of corn, butter, and cheese. It is 59 miles W. by N. of Chester, and 24 $\frac{1}{2}$ of London.

BEAUTEOUS, [beauticus] a. that which is formed with so much elegance and symmetry, as to raise an agreeable sensation in the mind.

BEAUTEOUSLY, [beauticosly] ad. in such a manner as to raise an idea of regular features, fineness of shape, and elegance of complexion.

BEAU'TIFUL, [beautifful] a. that which has all the symmetry of parts necessary to convey the idea of beauty, applied both to persons and things.

To BEAUTIFY, [beautify] v. a. that which recommends any thing to the love or approbation of a person, by heightening or increasing its charms.

BEAUTY, [beauté, Fr.] a certain composition of colour and figure, which raises delight and approbation in the beholder. Figuratively, applied to Music, Painting, Architecture, Statuary, and Literary compositions, implying an idea of excellence in the object, capable of raising delight in the mind. A person blessed with all that symmetry of features, &c. that raise delight in the mind of a beholder, and extort approbation by its excellencies. SYNON. By a handsome woman, we understand understand one that is graceful and well shaped, with a regular disposition of features; by a pretty, we mean one that is delicately made, and whose features are so formed as to please; by a beautiful, an union of both. When applied to other things, beautiful relates to something more serious and engaging; pretty, to somewhat more gay and diverting: this is the reason why we say a beautiful tragedy, but a pretty comedy.

BEAUTY-SPOT, [beuty spot] f. something artfully made use of to heighten the charms of a person; a patch.

TO BECALM, v. a. to reduce a storm or tempestuous commotion of the elements to rest and quietness. Figuratively, to pacify the turbulent passions that disturb the mind.

BECAUSE, conj. [from be, Sax. and cause] used to imply a reason, or cause of an assertion or truth which comes before it.

BECCLES, a town in Suffolk, with a good market on Saturdays. It is a large town, with a handsome church, and a tall bulky steeple, seated on an eminence some distance from the church; 15 miles S. W. of Yarmouth, and 108 N. E. of London.

BECHICS, [békiks] [βήχικα, Gr.] f. in Pharmacy, medicines to relieve a cough.

BECK, f. an external sign, generally such as is made with the head.

TO BE'CKEN, v. a. to make signs to a person to approach, or come to one.

BE'CKLY, a village in Suffex, six miles N. W. of Winchelsea.

TO BECO'ME, v. a. [pret. I became, comp. pret. I have become] to be made; to grow; to alter or change from one state to another. Used with of, to happen, to fall out, to be the end of.

TO BECO'ME, v. n. applied to persons, to appear worthy of; to adorn, or grace. Applied to things, to suit; to be proper for; to agree, or be so adapted to the circumstances of a person as to be graceful.

BECO'MING, part. that which acquires a grace from its suitableness or propriety.

BECO'MINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to suit the circumstances, rank, and character of a person.

BED, f. [bed, Sax.] a place designed for a person to sleep, or lie on, made of a sacking covering, stuffed with feathers, flocks, &c. Figuratively, lodging; marriage. In Gardening, a piece of made ground, enriched with dung, &c. for raising plants and other vegetables; the channel of any river. In Natural History, a range or layer of earth or mineral substance, a stratum. To be brought to bed of a son, to be delivered of, &c. To make a bed, to shake it, lay the cloaths smooth, and make it fit to be lain on. Bed, in Gunnery, a solid piece of oak, hollowed in the middle, to receive the breech and half the trunions.

TO BED, v. a. to place in a bed; to go to bed. Neuterly, to cohabit.

TO BEDA'BLE, v. a. to wet, fo as to occasion inconvenience or uneasiness.

TO BEDA'GGLE, v. a. to daub, dirt, or splash the bottom of a garment, by walking carelessly in wet weather, and not holding it up.

BE'DAL, a town in the North-Riding of Yorkshire, with a good market on Tuesdays. It is a small place, seated on a little brook, 10 miles E. S. E. of Richmond, and 219½ N. N. W. of London.

TO BEDA'SH, v. a. to wet a person with water by beating it with a stick, or casting a stone in for that purpose.

TO BEDA'WB, v. a. to cover a thing with dirt. Figuratively, to apply or lay on paint in a rough and ignorant manner.

TO BEDA'ZZLE, v. a. to overpower the sight by too much brightness or lustre.

BED-CHA'MBER, f. a room furnished with a bed, and set apart for sleeping in. Lords of the bed chamber are 10, of the first rank, who attend, in their turns, one week in the king's bed-chamber, lying on a pallet-bed all night, and waiting on him whenever he eats in private. The first of them is called the groom of the stole.

BED-CLO'ATHS, f. the blankets, quilt, coverlid, &c. which are spread over a bed.

BE'DDING, f. [bedding, Sax.] the bed blankets, quilt, coverlid, &c. which are on a bedstead.

TO BEDE'CK, v. a. to embellish; to adorn; to grace.

BE'DEHOUSE, f. [from bedt, Sax. and house] an hospital, or alms-house.

TO BEDE'W, v. a. to moisten by sprinkling; in allusion to the manner in which the dew moistens the earth and vegetables.

BE'D-FELLOW, f. one who lies in the same bed with another.

BE'DFORD, the county town of Bedfordshire, with two markets on Tuesdays and Saturdays. Bedford is seated on the river Ouse, which divides it into two parts, united by a bridge with two gates, one at each end, to stop the passage occasionally. It has five churches, and formerly had a strong castle, whose site is now a very fine bowling-green. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, a recorder, two bailiffs, a town-clerk, and two serjeants at mace. The Tuesday-market is on the south-side for cattle; and that on Saturday on the North-side, for corn. It is 27 miles E. by N. of Buckingham, and 50 N. by W. of London. It has the title of a duchy, and sends two member. to parliament.

BE'DFORDSHIRE, a county in the diocese of Lincoln, 24 miles long, and 16 broad. It contains 116 parishes, 10 market-towns, and sends six members to parliament. It is a pleasant inland county, and diversified with fruitful plains and rising hills, abounding in cattle, corn, and rich pastures; it is noted for barley, bone-lace, and a manufacture of straw goods.

TO BEDI'GHT, v. a. to set off with dress, or other external ornaments.

TO BEDI'M, v. a. to darken, to obscure by great brightness.

TO BEDI'ZEN, v. a. to dress out.

BE'DLAM,

B E E

B E G

BEDLAM, f. [formerly spelt Bethlehem], a religious house near Moorfields, in London, converted into an hospital for mad people; a house set apart for the abode and cure of mad people.

BEDLAM, a. belonging to a mad-house.

BEDLAMITE, f. an inhabitant of Bedlam; a mad person.

BEDMAKER, f. a person in universities who makes beds.

BEDPOST, f. the post at the head or foot of a bed, which supports the tester, or canopy.

BED-PRESSER, f. a person fond of lying in bed; a heavy, lazy fellow.

TO BEDRAGGLE, v. a. to dirt or soil the lower part of a garment, by letting it drag in the dirt.

TO BEDRENCH, v. a. to soak with an abundance of some fluid.

BEDRID, a. confined to one's bed by age.

BEDRIDDEN, a. one who, worn out by age and sickness, is unable to quit his bed.

BEDRITE, f. the privilege of the marriage-bed.

BEDSTEAD, or BE'DSTED, f. the frame on which the bed is laid.

BED-TIME, f. the hour of rest.

TO BEDUNG, v. a. to cover with dung.

TO BEDUST, v. a. to sprinkle with dust.

BEDWIN-MAGNA, a village five miles S. W. of Haverford, which has neither market nor fair; but has a borough by prescription, and sends two members to parliament. Some tell us it was a considerable place in the time of the Saxons, and that the traces of fortifications are still remaining. It is 70½ miles W. of London.

BEE, f. [bee, Scz.] an insect that makes honey. Figuratively, an industrious, busy, careful person.

BEECH, f. [bece, Sax.] a tree from whose fruit an oil is extracted, much esteemed by the French.

BEECHEN, a. [beecene, Sax.] consisting of beech; belonging to beech.

BEEF, f. [beuf, Fr.] the flesh of black cattle dressed up for the markets.

BEEF-EATER, f. a yeoman of the guards.

BEEN, part. pret. of TO BE.

BEER, f. [berre, Sax. or bir, Brit.] a liquor prepared from malt and hops, and rendered viscous by fermentation.

BESTINGS, f. See BIRTINGS.

BET, f. [beta, Lat.] the name of a plant, of which there are several species. It is boiled like parsnips, and often makes one of the ingredients of a soup or salad.

BETTLE, f. [bytel, Sax.] an insect that flies about in summer-evenings, having four wings, the two outward being only sheaths for the others: they are black, and abound in damp places, such as vaults under ground. Also a great bodge, used to beat down piles, &c. wedges, &c. A wooden mallet made use of in beating hemp. Bettle-headed, having a dull, stupid, unthinking head.

TO BETTLE, v. n. to jut out; to hang over.

BEEVES, f. pl. oxen, cattle, bullocks.

TO BEFALL, [bestull] v. n. to happen. This word is most commonly taken in a bad sense.

TO BEFIT, v. a. to suit; to tally with.

TO BEFOOL, v. a. to delude; likewise to deride, and treat a person as a fool.

BEFORE, prep. [bifor, Sax.] further onward in place; in the front of, not behind; in the presence of; in the power of, preceding in time; in preference to; prior to; superior to.

BEFORE, ad. earlier in time; in time past; previously to; to this time, hitherto.

BEFOREHAND, ad. in a state of anticipation, or preoccupation; previously, by way of preparation, in a state of accumulation, or so as that more has been received than expended.

BEFORETIME, ad. formerly.

TO BEFORTUNE, v. n. to betide.

TO BEFOUL, v. a. to daub, smear, or dirt.

TO BEFRIEND, v. a. to do a kindness to a person; to confer a favour.

TO BEG, v. n. [beggeren, Teut.] to pray, intreat, petition, or crave charity, favour, or assistance.

TO BEGET, v. a. [preter. I begot, or begat, I have begotten, begattan, Sax.] to generate, or bring forth. To produce, as effects, or accidents.

BEGETTER, f. he that generates, or gets a child.

BE'GGAR, f. one who lives upon alms; one who assumes what he does not prove; as to beg the question.

TO BE'GGAR, v. a. to reduce a person from plenty to want.

BE'GGARLINESS, f. a quality which would permit a person to submit to any meanings for the sake of a subsistence.

BE'GGARLY, a. poor; mean.

BE'GGARLY, ad. meanly; despicably.

BE'GGARY, f. extreme poverty.

TO BEG'IN, v. n. [pret. I began, or begun; I have begun, beginnan, Sax.] to enter upon something new; to commence any action or state; to enter upon existence; to have its original; to take rise.—Actively, to do the first act of any thing; to trace from any thing as the first ground. To begin with; to enter upon.

BEGINNER, f. he that gives the first cause or original to any thing; an unexperienced attempter.

BEGINNING, f. the first original or cause; the entrance into act or being; the state in which any thing first is; the rudiments or first grounds.

TO BEG'IRD, v. a. [preter. I begirt, or begirded; I have begirt] to bind with a girdle; to surround; to encircle; to shut in with a siege; to besiege.

BE'GLERBEG, f. [Turk.] the chief governor of a province among the Turks.

BEGONE, interject. go away; hence, away.

TO BEGUILLE, v. a. [begalian, Sax.] to cheat, impose upon, or deceive.

BEHA'LF, f. interest; side; party. To speak on a person's behalf.

To BEHA'VE, v. a. to demean, act, or conduct one's self.

BEHA'VIOUR, f. a manner of behaving one's self; elegance of manners; conduct; demeanour; course of life. To be upon one's behaviour, a familiar phrase, implying such a state as requires great caution.

To BEHE'AD, v. a. to cut off a person's head. In Europe, this is the punishment of the great and nobly born. In China, it is the punishment of the lower sort of people, while their superiors are hanged on account of their quality.

BE'HEMOTH, f. a monstrous creature mentioned by Job, which some imagine to be the whale; others the sea calf, or ox. Some of the fathers thought it to be the devil, and others the elephant. In the Hebrew language, it signifies a beast in general, and particularly those larger sorts that are fit for service.

BE'HEN, f. in the Materia Medica, the name of two roots, the one white, the other red; both accounted cordials and restoratives, but neither is received into the present practice.

BEHE'ST, f. [be and bæst, Sax.] the positive commands of a superior to an inferior.

BEHIND, prep. [be and bindan, Sax.] at a person's back; backwards; following; remaining after a person's departure, or death. Applied to motion, at a distance from that which moves or goes before, used with the verb leave. "It leaves our sense behind." Dryd. Used comparatively, it implies great inferiority, or less worth. Used adverbially, it implies something not yet discovered or perceived by the mind.

BEHIND-HAND, ad. applied to persons who live beyond their income, and in debt.

To BEHO'LD, v. a. [pret. I beheld; I have beheld, or beholden] [beholdan, Sax.] to take a view of a person; to have a person in sight, including the idea of attention, or looking on him for some time. SYNON. We see whatever strikes the sight: We look at an object when we designedly cast our eye upon it: We behold it, when we look with attention; view, when we survey it.

BEHO'LD, an interjection of the same force with lo.

BEHO'LDEN, part. indebted to; lying under an obligation to a person.

BEHO'LDER, f. one who casts his eyes upon an object.

BEHO'Lding, f. obligation. This word is seldom used by elegant writers.

BEHOO'F, f. [bebists, Sax.] an obligation which a person lies under; also the profit, benefit, or advantage, which may accrue from any thing.

To BEHOO'VE, v. n. [bebosan, Sax.] to be incumbent on a person as a duty; or to be fit and suitable in point of convenience.

BE'ING, the participle of the verb To BE.

BE'ING, f. an abstract term, signifying the existence of a thing: thus we say, the Supreme

Being; a finite Being, &c.

BE'ING, conj. since.

To BELA'BOUR, v. a. to beat a person severely. A low and vulgar expression.

To BELA'CE, v. a. in Navigation, to mend a rope, by laying one end over another.

BELA'TED, a. benighted; used to express something which ought to have been done, but was omitted at a period past.

To BELA'Y, v. a. to lie in ambush; or to lie in wait for.

To BELA'Y, v. a. [beleygen, Belg.] in Navigation, to fasten.

To BELCH, v. a. [bealcan, Sax.] to break wind upwards.

BELCH, f. the act of breaking wind upwards.

BE'LDAM, f. [belle dame, Fr.] a name given in derision to an old woman.

To BELEA'GUE, v. a. [beleggerin, Belg.] to block up, or besiege a place.

BELEMNITES, f. [from βίλος, Gr.] usually called a thunder-bolt, arrow-head, or finger-stones. Their forms are various as well as their sizes, from a quarter of an inch to eight inches in length; of different colours, and have a peculiar smell when scraped. They are found in all sorts of strata, in beds of chalk, clay, gravel, stones, and often in loose flints.

BE'LFORD, a town in Northumberland. Dist. from London 320 miles.

BE'LFRY, the tower or place where the bells of a church are hung and rung.

BELIE'F, f. credit, persuasion, opinion; faith, or firm assurance of the truths of religion; the creed, or form, containing the articles of faith.

To BELIE'VE, v. a. [gelyfan, Sax.] to assent to the truth of a proposition founded on probable arguments; to put a confidence in the veracity or truth of any one.

BELIE'VE, f. one who gives assent or credit to a thing; one who assents to the truth of Christianity, upon the probable arguments produced in its favour.

BELI'KE, ad. perhaps; probably.

BELL, f. [bel, Sax.] a popular machine or vessel, ranked by musicians amongst the instruments of percussion; made of a compound metal of tin and copper, or pewter and copper, in the proportion of 20lb. of pewter, or 23lb. of tin, to 100 wt. of copper; hung in steeples of churches and in houses. Its sound arises from a vibratory motion of its parts, like that of a musical chord. Those of the Egyptians are made of wood. The Turks have a very great aversion to bells, and prohibit Christians the use of them in Constantinople, pretending that the sound of them would be troublesome to the souls of the departed. To bear the bell, is to surpass others, or to be the first in merit.

To BELL, v. n. in botany, to grow in the shape of bells.

BELLE, f. [the feminine of beau, Fr. pron. bell] a person who dresses with elegance, behaves with gentility, and has all the polite accomplishments that can adorn a lady.

BELLS

BELLES LETTRES, f. those branches of education that polish and adorn the mind. Language, classical learning, both Greek and Latin, Geography, Rhetoric, Chronology, and History, may be accounted the chief parts of learning contained under this term.

BELL-FASHIONED, a. that which resembles a bell in its shape.

BELL-FOUNDER, f. a person who casts bells.

BELLIGERENT, part. [from bellum and gens, Lat.] a modern term, that which is at war; that which is engaged in war.

BELLIGEROUS, a. engaged in, or waging war.

BELLING, part. [a corruption of bellowing, or bellan, Sax.] applied to the noise made by a cow at milking time.

BELLINGHAM, a town in Northumberland; the markets are on Tuesday and Saturday. Distance 1994 miles from London.

BELL-MAN, f. a superior kind of watchman, with a bell which he rings at certain places in his parish, before he repeats some verses on the eve of a festival. In country towns, applied to the crier, who bears a bell which he rings, to give notice to the neighbourhood before he makes his proclamation.

BELL-METAL, f. the metal of which bells are made.

BELONA, f. in Mythology, the sister of Mars, and goddess of war. When war was proclaimed, the herald set a spear upon a pillar before her temple; the priestesses, in their devotion to her, used to cut themselves with knives to render her propitious.

TO BELLOW, v. n. [bellan, Sax.] to make a very loud noise; applied to that of a bull, the sea in a storm, or the outcries of human creatures.

BELLOWS, f. [bilig, Sax.] an instrument into which air is alternately drawn and expelled, rushing in at some apertures in its bottom called feeders, and rushing out of a metal tube called its muzzle.

BELLUINE, a. [belluinus, Lat.] beastly; brutal.

BELLY, f. [bellig, Sax.] that part of the body which reaches from the breast to the thighs, and contains the entrails both in men and beasts; used figuratively, for gluttony, or leanness in eating.

TO BELLY, v. n. to swell; to protuberance, applied to the thing which grows larger in one part than it is in another.

BELLY-ACHE, [belly-ake] f. a pain in the belly, arising from wind, or other flatulencies; the colic.

BELLY-BOUND, a. affected with costiveness.

BELLY-FULL, f. a sufficiency of food, or as much as takes away the sensation of hunger, and satisfies the appetite.

BELLY-PINCHED, a. denied, or in want of sufficient food; hungry.

BELLY-ROLL, f. in Husbandry, a roller or cylinder, made use of to roll ground after it is ploughed.

BELLY-TIMBER, f. food, or that which suffices hunger, and supports the human fabric, in the same manner as props of timber do a building. A low word.

BELLY-WORM, f. a worm which feeds in the belly or entrails.

TO BELONG, v. n. [belangen, Belg.] to be the property of a person; to be the province or business of, to have relation to, applied to the heads of a discourse; to be dependent on as a subject, or domestic; to be appropriated to; to have for its peculiar object.

BELOVED, part. [from Belove, which is hardly ever used, though nothing can be more frequent than the use of the participle; thus we say, you are beloved by me, but never I believe you] caressed with the greatest warmth of kind affection, as an object worthy to be beloved.

BELOW, prep. [from be and loer Job, Belg.] applied to a place, not so high as another object. Applied to dignity or excellence, inferior. Applied to character, or rank, unbecoming on account of its meanness; unfit, or degrading, on account of its baseness or viciousness. Used adverbially, in a low situation, or nearer to the earth.

BELSWA'GGER, f. one who makes a noise, and puts on an air of importance.

BELT, f. [belt, Sax.] a girdle fastened round a person's middle. When a sword is hung to it, it is called a sword belt. In Astronomy, two bright marks like girdles, surrounding the body of the planet Jupiter. In Geography, certain straits, called the Great and Lesser Belt, between the German ocean and the Baltic. The Belts belong to the king of Denmark, who exacts toll from all ships passing through them, except those of Sweden.

BELTON, a village in Leicestershire, 7 miles W. of Loughborough.

BELTON, a village in Lincolnshire, two miles N. of Grantham.

BELWETHER, f. a sheep which keeps the rest of the flock together, and draws them after him by the sound of a bell hanging to his neck.

TO BELY'E, v. a. to invent a falsehood; to feign; to calumniate; and to misrepresent.

TO BEMI'RE, v. a. to daub, or smear with dirt.

BEMI'RED, part. covered with dirt. Figuratively, stuck or sinking in a dirty or boggy place.

TO BEMO'AN, v. a. [bermonaan, Sax.] to express sorrow for any disaster or calamity.

BEMO'ANER, f. one who pities, laments, or is affected with sorrow, on account of the disasters of another.

TO BEMO'IL, v. a. [of be and moll, from meuller, Fr.] to bedaub; to fall, to be rolled in, or incumbered with dirt.

TO BEMO'NSTER, v. a. to make a thing hideous, horrible, or monstrous.

BE'MSTER, or BE'MINSTER, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is is seated on the river Bert, 14 miles N. of Dorchester, and 138 W. by S. of London.

BEMUSED, a. given to rhyming or poetry. A term of ridicule.

BENCH, f. [bench, Sax.] a seat made of a long board, distinguished from a stool by its length. Used for the prison or liberties of the King's Bench, which see. The seat whereon judges sit. Figuratively, the persons sitting in the trial of causes. Free-bench signifies that estate in copyhold lands, which the wife, being espoused a virgin, has, after the decease of her husband, for her dower, according to the custom of the manor. It is the custom of the Manors of East and West Emburn, Chadleworth in the county of Berks, Tor in Devonshire, and other places of the west, that, if a customary tenant die, the widow shall have her Free-bench in all his copyhold land, dum sola et casta fuerit; but if she commit incontinency, she forfeits her estate; yet, if she will come into the court, riding backwards on a black ram, with his tail in her hand, and say the words following, the Steward is bound, by the custom, to re-admit her to her Free-bench.

Here I am,
Riding upon a black ram,
Like a whore as I am;
And for my Crincum Crancum,
Have lost my Bincum Bancum;
And, for my Tail's game,
Have done this worldly shame;
Therefore, I pray you, Mr. Steward,
Let me have my land again.

To BENCH, v. a. to furnish with, erect, or make benches in any place; to place, seat, or prefer a person to a seat or bench.

BENCHERS, f. in Law, the senior barristers of an inn of court, intrusted with the government and direction of it, out of which is annually chosen a steward.

BENCÖOLEN, a fort and town of Asia, on the S. W. coast of the island of Sumatra, belonging to the English. The chief trade is in pepper, of which there is a large quantity. Lon. 101. 5. E. lat. 4. 5. S.

To BEND, v. a. [pret. and part. bended or bent] [benden, Sax.] applied to shooting with a bow, to stretch; to force from a straight line to a curve, or crooked one; the point or object to which a motion is directed. Figuratively, to apply the mind to the consideration of any subject; to be disposed to; to make submissive. To bend the brow, to knit the brow. Neut. to hang or jut over; to be strongly inclined to, or resolved on; to bow the body, or the knee, in token of submission or respect.

BEND, f. the part of a line, &c. which is not straight, and forms an angle. In Heraldry, Bend is one of the nine honourable ordinaries, containing a third part of the field when charged, and a fifth when plain. It is sometimes, like other ordinaries, indented, engrained, &c. and is either dexter or sinister. Bend Dexter is formed by two lines drawn from the upper part of the shield on the right, to the lower part of the left, diagonally. It is supposed to represent a shoulder-belt, or a scarf. Bend Sinister, is that which comes from the left side of the shield to the right. In Bend, is when any things, borne in arms, are placed obliquely from the upper corner to the opposite lower, as the Bend lies.

BENDABLE, a. that which may be forced from a straight to a crooked line; that which may be bent.

BENDER, f. one who bends any thing; an instrument by which any thing may be forced from a straight to a crooked line.

BENDLETS, f. [bandelet, Fr.] in Heraldry, marks or distinctions in a shield, of the same length, and but half the breadth of a bend.

BENDS, f. in a ship, are the wales, or the outmost timbers of a ship's side, on which men set their feet in climbing up.

BENDY, f. in Heraldry, is the field divided into four, six, or more parts, diagonally, and varying in metal and colour.

BENE'APED, a. [be and neap, from neapfe, Sax.] a sea term, implying that a ship has not depth of water enough to set her a-float, bring her over a bar, or out of a dock.

BENE'ATH, prep. [beneath, Sax.] applied to situation, not to high as, or under, something else. Joined with funk, it implies the pressure of something heavy on a person. Applied to rank or dignity, inferior to. Applied to actions, not becoming; unworthy of a person. Adverbially, in a lower place; below, as opposed to heaven.

BENEDI'CTINES, f. an order of monks who profess to follow the rules of St. Benedict. They wear a loose black gown, with large wide sleeves, and a capuche or cowl on their heads, ending in a point behind. In the Canon Law, they are stiled Black-friars, from the colour of their habit. The rules of St. Benedict, as observed by the English monks before the dissolution of the monasteries, were these: They were obliged to perform their devotions seven times in 24 hours; the whole circle of which devotions had a respect to the passion and death of Christ; they were obliged always to go two and two together; every day in Lent they were obliged to fast till six in the evening, and abated of their usual time of sleeping and eating; but they were not allowed to practise any voluntary austerities, without leave of their superior; they never conversed in their refectory at meals, but were obliged to attend to the reading of the scriptures. They all slept in the same dormitory, but not two in a bed; they lay in their cloaths; for small faults they were shut from meals; for greater, they were debarred of religious commerce, and excluded from the chapel; and as to incorrigible offenders, they were excluded from the monasteries. Every monk had two coats, two cowls, a knife, a needle, and a handkerchief; and the furniture of their bed was a mat, a blanket, a rug, and a pillow.

BENEDI'CTION, or BLE'SSING, f. [benedictio, ambrosio, Lat.] among the Hebrews, signifies the present usually sent from one friend to another; as also the blessing conferred by the patriarchs, on their death-beds, on their children. It was also one of those early instances of honour and respect paid to bishops in the primitive church. The custom of bowing the head to them, and receiving their blessings, became universal. In the western churches, there was anciently a kind of Benediction which followed the Lord's prayer; and after the communion, the people were dismissed with a Benediction.

B E N

BENEFACTION, f. [benefactio, Lat.] a good and benevolent action; generally applied to charitable gifts for the relief of persons in distress.

BENEFACTOR, f. a man who confers a benefit, or does an act of kindness to a person in want.

BENEFACTRESS, f. a woman or female, who contributes to the relief of the indigent by some charitable gift.

BENEFICE, f. [beneficium, Lat.] a word borrowed from the Romans, who used to distribute the lands conquered on the frontiers to their soldiers; they were called beneficarii, and the lands themselves beneficia, which were at first given for life only, but afterwards were made hereditary. Hence benefice in the Church, signifies either a church endowed with a reward or salary for the performance of divine service, or the salary itself given on that account. All church preferments, except bishoprics, are called Benefices; and all Benefices are titled by the Canonists sometimes Dignities; but now Dignity is usually applied to bishoprics, deaneries, arch-deaconries, and prebendaries; and Benefice to parsonages, vicarages, rectories, and donatives. A benefice in commendam, is that which is given to a person on a vacancy for a certain time, or till it is provided for.

BENEFICED, a. possessed of a church-living.

BENEFICENCE, f. [beneficentia, Lat.] a disinterested inclination to do a good action, or to promote the welfare of another.

BENEFICENT, part. [beneficus, Lat.] performing acts of kindness and assistance, without any views of interest.

BENEFICIAL, a. [from beneficium, Lat.] that which assists, relieves, or is of service to.

BENEFICIALLY, ad. in such a manner as to relieve, assist, or be of service to a person.

BENEFICIARY, a. he that holds any dignity as dependant on, and tributary to, another. Used substantively, it implies one who is in possession of a church living or benefice.

BENEFIT, f. [beneficium, Lat.] that which turns to the profit of another; an act of kindness or love, done to help or assist another. Among players, the whole takings of the theatre, which are applied to their own use. In Law, benefit of the clergy, was an ancient liberty of the church; whereby any priest might on his prison, even in case of murder, be delivered to his ordinary in order to purge himself. It is at present confined to signify a person's being only burnt in the hand for felony, and set free for the first time.

B E N

To BENEFIT, v. a. to do something to or for another, whereby he may receive advantage or improvement; to promote, increase, or render better. Used neuterly, to improve. Applied to the mind, to reap advantage from.

BENEVOLENCE, [benefolentia, Lat.] a disposition to do good; kindness; the good done; the charity given. According to the ancient statutes of this realm, it imports a voluntary gratuity given by the subjects to the king. SYNON. Of the two words beneficence and benefolence, one is the intention, the other the act; benefolence being the desire of doing good; beneficence actual goodness.

BENEVOLENT, part. [benefolens, Lat.] inclined to do good from an affectionate regard to a person.

BENGA'L, the most easterly province of the Mogul's dominions in India, on the Ganges, bounded on the N. by the provinces of Patna and Jesuat; on the E. by Arracan and Tipra; on the S. by the bay of Bengal and Oriza; and on the W. by Narvar and Malva; extending 400 miles in length, and 300 in breadth from N. to S. and is annually overflowed by the Ganges, in the same manner as Egypt by the Nile. One of the East India company's settlements is here; this place affords rich cargoes for 50 or 60 vessels yearly, besides what is carried in small vessels to the neighbouring countries.

To BENIGHT, v. a. to be overtaken by darkness in a journey; to be without light; to wander in the dark. Applied literally to the eyes, and figuratively to the mind.

BENIGN, [benignus] [benignus, Lat.] a. having a disposition that inclines a person to do a good action to another; kind, generous, or liberal. In Medicine, wholesome, gentle.

BENIGNNESS, [benignitas] f. that which inclines a person, or fits a thing, to do good to another.

BENIGNITY, f. [the g is retained in the pron. of this word, though dropped in the former] [benignitas, Lat.] a disposition of mind inclining one person to be kind to another.

BENIGNLY, [benigne] ad. in such a manner as to shew kindness and condescension.

BENISON, f. [from benir, Fr.] a blessing, applied to the benediction of a parent.

BENT, f. that which forms an angle, or crookedness in opposition to straight; the declivity, or slope of a hill. Utmost power; application of the mind; disposition or inclination towards something; determination; fixed purpose; turn of the temper or disposition; tendency; flexion.

To BENU'MB, v. a. [benumen, Sax.] to take away or destroy the sense of feeling, applied to the effect of cold upon the extreme parts of the body; or the approach of death, and stupifying violence of any disorder.

BENZO'IN, [vulgarly called Benjamin] f. a dry and solid resin, brought from the East Indies.

Indies. It should be chosen fresh, is of a quick pungent smell, easily broken, and full of the white almond-like granules. It is a powerful expectorant, and is given with success in disorders of the lungs and inveterate coughs.

To BEPAI'NT, v. a. to cover with artificial colours. Figuratively, to change the colour of the complexion.

To BEPI'SS, v. a. to be unable to retain one's urine, joined with the personal pronouns myself, himself, &c.

To BEQUE'ATH, v. a. to leave a person any thing by will.

BEQUE'ATHMENT, f. the leaving something, or the thing left by will. Seldom used.

BEQUE'ST, f. something left by will; a legacy.

To BERA'TTLE, v. a. to make a noise at, including the idea of contempt; to scold.

To BERE'AVE, v. n. [pret. bereaved, or bereft] [beresfian, Sax.] to take away by force, including a want of pity; to spoil; to rob; to strip a person of his property.

BERE'AVEMENT, f. the act of taking away, or leaving a person destitute of any thing.

BERE-RE'GIS, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is a small place, 12 miles N. E. of Dorchester, and 113 S. W. of London.

BER'GAMO, f. [Fr.] a coarse tapestry, manufactured with several sorts of spun thread, or of flocks of wool, silk, or cotton, ox, cow, or goats hair.

BER'GAMOT, f. [bergamotte, Fr.] in Gardening, a fine juicy pear, of a globular form, and a coat of an olive color, mixed with brown. An essence or perfume, drawn from the fruit of a lemon-tree, ingrafted with the stock of a bergamot pear-tree. Likewise a kind of snuff, of a large grain, said to be only pure tobacco, with some of this essence rubbed into it.

To BERHY'ME, v. a. to make a person or thing the subject of a poem; used by way of contempt.

BE'RKELEY. See BARKLEY.

BE'RKHAMSTEAD, a town of Hertfordshire, with a market on Saturdays, chiefly for malt. It had formerly a strong castle built by the Normans, and has now a good free-school, founded by John Incent, dean of St. Paul's. It is 11 miles W. of St. Alban's, and 26 N. W. of London.

BE'RKSHIRE, an English county, 37 miles in length, and 25 in breadth; bounded on the N. by Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire; on the W. by Wiltshire; on the S. by Hampshire and Surry; and on the E. by Middlesex and part of Buckinghamshire. It contains 140 parishes, and 12 market towns. The principal town is Reading. In general, it is a fruitful country, and particularly in the vale of White-Horse; it has the title of an earldom. Its principal commodity is broad or woollen cloth; and its chief rivers are the Isis, Oke, and Kennet.

BERLIN, a large strong and handsome city of Germany, and capital of the electorate of Brandenburg, where the king of Prussia resides. The palace is magnificent, and there is a fine library, a rich cabinet of curiosities and medals, an academy of sciences, and an observatory, besides a superb arsenal. Its trade and buildings have lately been much improved, and there is a canal cut from the river Spree to the Oder on the E. and another from thence to the Elbe on the W. It has a communication by water both with the Baltic Sea and German Ocean; seated on the river Spree, 300 miles N. by W. of Vienna. Lon. 13. 37. E. Lat. 52. 53. N. Berlin is applied to a carriage of the chariot kind, very convenient for travelling, being both lighter and less apt to be overturned than a chariot.

BERMU'DA ISLANDS, a cluster of very fine Islands, nearly in the form of a Shepherd's crook, and surrounded with rocks, which render them almost inaccessible to strangers. They lie in the Atlantic Ocean, about 500 miles E. of Carolina. They are inhabited by the English, enjoy a pure and temperate air, and have plenty of flesh, fish, and garden-stuff. The common employment of the inhabitants is in building sloops, and the making women's hats, well known in England by the name of Bermudas hats. Lon. 65. 10. W. Lat. 32. 50. N.

BERN, the capital town of the canton of Bern in Switzerland. Here is a celebrated school, and a rich library, and 12 companies of tradesmen, in one of which every inhabitant is obliged to be enrolled before he can enjoy any office. It is a strong place, and seated in a peninsula formed by the river Aar, almost in the middle of the canton. Lon. 7. 40. E. Lat. 40. 00. N.

To BERO'B, v. a. to steal; to take away the property of a person. Seldom used.

BE'RRY, f. [berig, Sax.] a small fruit containing one or more seeds in a soft pulp, covered with a skin.

To BE'RRY, v. n. to produce berries. In the North, it signifies to strike, from ber, in. to beat or thresh.

BE'RVY, a sea-port and parliament town of Scotland, in the county of Merns, 22 miles S. W. of Aberdeen.

BE'RWICK, a town on the borders of England and Scotland, properly belonging to neither, with a market on Saturdays. It is a town and county of itself, and is a place of great strength, as well by art as nature, being defended with walls, a castle, and other fortifications. It is large, populous, and well-built, and has a good trade in corn and salmon. It is seated on the river Tweed, over which there is a very handsome bridge of 16 arches; sends two members to parliament, and has the title of a duchy. It is 335½ miles distant from London.

BE'RWICK, a shire in Scotland; bounded by the river Tweed on the S. by Lothian on the N. by the German Ocean on the E. and by Tiviotdale on the W. it abounds with corn and and grass, and has in its several seats of gardens of quality. The principal rivers are the Tweed, the Whiteadder, Blackadder, Eye, and Ebbick. The principal place is the town and castle of Dunfermline, the best place for trade in the county. It sends two members to parliament, one for the burgh of Lauder, &c.

Berwick North, a town of Scotland, in the county of Lothian, seated on the Firth of Forth. Near this place general Cope was defeated by the rebels in 1745, and made his escape to Berwick upon Tweed. It is 36 miles N. W. of Berwick upon Tweed, and 20 W. N. W. of Edinburgh.

Beryl, f. [Βερύλλος, Gr.] a precious stone of a bluish green, found in the East Indies, and about the gold mines of Peru.

To BESCREW, v. a. to conceal or hide any thing. Seldom used.

To BESEECH, v. a. [preter. I besought, I have besought] [from secan, Belg.] to entreat with great earnestness; to ask as a favour, in a humble and suppliant manner.

To BESEEM, v. n. [beziemen, Belg.] to suit, applied to a means; to become, or be worthy of, applied to character or dignity.

To BESIEGE, v. a. [preter. I beset, I have beset] [besetzen, Sax.] to surround, so as not to be able to escape without difficulty, alluding to an army's surrounding a body of men, or some fortified place. To endanger, to encompass, used with the particle with.

To BESPREW, v. a. [besprehen, Teut.] to wish any thing unhappy or miserable to a person.

BESIDE, or BESIDES, prep. [be and side, Sax.] by the side, or near, applied to situation.

"To sit down beside him." Bacon. "Beside him hung his bow." Par. Lost. In the enumeration or detail of particulars, something more, over, and above. "In man there is a nature found beside the senses." Davies. "Great numbers beside those whose names are in the Christian records." Addis. Inconsistent with;

"A note relating to; nor discoverable by." "A method beside, and above the discoveries of man's reason." South. "It is beside my present business." Lache. Before a reciprocal pronoun, as himself, &c. it implies the loss of reason, or madness. "Thou art beside thyself." Act. Used adverbially, it implies an additional circumstance, or something more than what has been mentioned. "Besides, you know not." Dryd. The rest; or that which has not been already spoken of, or mentioned. "Hast thou any more besides?" Gen. xix. 12.

To BESIEGE, v. a. to surround, or attack a place with an army, in order to conquer and get master of it.

BESIEGER, f. a person who attempts to take a town by encamping against it.

To BESLU'BBER, v. a. to daub, or smear with any thing that raises a disagreeable idea.

To BESMEAR, v. a. to cover or daub with any thing which alters the colour of a thing, and raises an idea of something not cleanly. Figuratively, to tarnish, to deprive of its lustre, applied to character, &c.

To BESMIRCH, v. a. to soil, blacken, discolour.

To BESMOKE, v. a. to soil; to foul, or dry in smoke.

To BESMUT, v. a. [be and smitan, Sax.] to smear with any thing black; especially applied to discolouring a thing by smoke, soot, &c.

BESOM, f. [besom, Sax.] an instrument consisting of a long handle, to which birch or rushes are fastened, used by housewives to sweep their floors from sand or dust.

To BESORT, v. a. to suit; to fit.

BESORT, f. company; attendance; train.

To BESOT, v. a. to stupify with gluttony and drunkenness. Used with the particle on, to doat, or be extremely in love with.

BESOU'GHT, [pron. besau] part. pass. of BESIECH.

To BESPANGLE, v. a. to make a thing glitter, by the means of some small shining object.

To BESPATTER, v. n. to wet, by casting small quantities of water. Figuratively, to soil or tarnish the character of a person.

To BESPEAK, v. a. [preter. I bespoken, or I bespake; I have bespoken; be and spragan, Sax.] to give orders for the making of any thing, in order to prevent others from buying it; to engage beforehand. To discover beforehand, or forebode; to address in discourse; to speak to; to declare; to shew.

BESPEAKER, f. he that gives orders for the making of any thing to an artificer or manufacturer.

To BESPICKLE, v. a. to mark with spots.

To BESPREW, v. a. to vomit upon.

To BESPICE, v. a. to season with spices, generally applied to liquors.

To BESPIT, v. a. to wet with spittle; to spit upon.

BESPOKE, irregular part. from BESPEAK.

To BESPO'IT, v. a. to mark with spots.

To BESPREAD, v. a. [be and spradan, Sax.] to extend a thing at full length over another; to cover with.

To BESPRI'NKLE, v. a. [be and springe, Sax.] to spurt, to throw water upon a thing, so as to make it fall upon it in drops.

To BESPUTT'ER, v. a. to wet any thing, by forcing spittle in drops from between the lips.

BEST, a. [the superlative degree of good; the comparative better] [best, Sax.] the highest degree of good. Used with the verb do, the utmost exertion of power or ability. Taken adverbially, in the highest degree of goodness.

To BESTA'IN, v. a. to mark with stains; to spot.

To BESTE'AD, v. a. to profit; to accommodate.

BESTIAL, a. [from bestia, Lat.] that which has the nature of a beast. Applied figuratively, to one that seems to have no regard for reason, delicacy, virtue, shame, or humanity.

BESTIALITY,

BESTIALITY, f. that quality which is contrary to the right use of reason; opposite to every principle of humanity.

BESTIALLY, ad. in such a manner as to resemble a beast, and below the dignity of humanity.

To BESTI'CK, v. a. [preter I bestuck, or have bestuck] to fix darts, or any pointed thing or mark upon a subject.

To BESTI'R, v. a. to exert one's power vigorously. Generally used with the reciprocal pronouns, him, her, himself, &c.

To BEST'OW, v. a. [the ow in the last syllable is pron. like o long] [besteden, Belg.] to give a person a thing which he had no right to demand. To give in marriage, used with the preposition upon, before the receiver. To apply. To lay out upon. To place.

BESTO'WER, f. he that gives a thing; he that confers a favour.

To BESTRE'W, v. a. [part. bestrewed, or bestrown,] to scatter, or sprinkle over; to cover with.

To BESTRIDE, v. a. [preter I bestrid, or bestrode; I have bestrown] to stand over any thing, so as to have it between our legs, or a leg on each side of it. As this posture is that of a person on horseback, is put figuratively for a person riding.

To BESTU'D, v. a. to adorn with shining dots, marks, or studs.

BET, f. [from betan, Sax.] the money deposited by each of the parties who lay a wager, to be given to him who wins.

To BET, v. a. to lay a wager.

To BETA'KE, v. a. [preter I betook, part. passive betaken] [betacan, Sax.] to apply; to have recourse to, with the reciprocal pronouns him, her, &c. and the particle to. To take to, fly, or go, applied to motion.

To BETEEM, v. a. to bestow or give. To produce, alluding to the teeming-time of animals.

To BETHINK, v. a. [pret. I bethought, be and thucan, Sax.] to recall back something past into the mind; to recollect one's self; to suspend our thoughts.

BETHLEHEM, f. [the house of bread, Heb.] the name of a city in Judea, famous for being the birth-place of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Applied according to its etymology, to an hospital; and at present appropriated to that where lunatics are confined, near Moorgate, London. See BEDLAM.

BETHLEHEMITE, f. a person confined, or fit to be confined, in a mad-house, called a Bedlamite.

To BETHRA'L, [betbraul] v. a. to bind and fetter as a captive. Seldom used.

To BETHU'MP, v. a. to bang, or beat. A ludicrous word.

To BETI'DE, v. n. [preter it betided, or betid, from tid, Sax.] to happen to a person; to befall; used both of good and bad events.

BETI'ME, or BETI'MES, ad. [be and tima, Sax.] in season; without delay; soon; in a short time. Joined with morning, early.

BE'TLE, BET'EL, or BE'TRE, f. [Ind.] in Botany, a plant in great repute all over the East, resembling that which bears pepper; but so weak as to need a prop to support it.

BE'TLEY, a town in Staffordshire, with a market on Thursdays, but no fair. It is seated on the confines of the county next to Cheshire, in a barren sandy soil, 16 miles N. N. W. of Stafford, and 156½ on the same point from London.

To BETO'KEN, v. a. to declare, to show, to discover by marks or signs.

BETOO'K, irreg. part. from BETAKE.

To BETO'SS, v. n. to be tossed about; to be agitated, disturbed, troubled, or tormented.

To BETRA'Y, v. a. [trahir, Fr.] to deliver a person up to his enemies, though bound to the contrary; to disclose a secret entrusted to one; to discover some failing. To discover.

BETRA'YER, f. the person who treacherously delivers another into the hands of his enemies; one who discloses a secret.

To BETRI'M, v. a. to adorn or embellish the person with dress; applied with great beauty to the flowery creation.

To BETRO'TH, v. a. to promise a person in marriage.

To BETRUST, v. a. to trust or rely upon the fidelity of another, applied both to persons and things.

BETTER, a. [the comparative degree of good, of which best is the superlative] that which exceeds, is better or preferable to the thing it is compared with. Used as a substantive, a person of rank or authority superior to ourselves.

BETTER, ad. in a more perfect, exact manner; more advantageous, or profitable.

To BET'TER, v. a. to improve; to increase the value of a thing; to amend by change; to surpass; to excel; to strengthen, or add strength to.

BET'TER, f. one who lays wagers.

BETTUS, a village of Merionethshire, in North Wales, 6 miles N. N. E. of Bala.

BETTYWEYS, a village of Carnarvonshire, in North Wales, 10 miles S. by E. of Aberconway.

BETWEEN, prep. [betwecan, Sax.] applied to situation, it signifies the middle, or the having one of the two things mentioned on each side of us. Applied to time, the middle space, or that which is included within the periods mentioned. Applied to qualities, partaking of each. Applied to things opposite or contrary to each other, it implies separation, or the idea of difference acquired by comparison. A reciprocation on both sides, applied to friendship. By themselves, privately, exclusive of any others. Between is properly used of only two persons; but among, when more are included.

BETWI'XT, prep. [betwux, Sax.] used indifferently for between; which see.

BE'VEL, or BE'VIL, f. among Joiners, a kind of square, one or both legs of which are crooked, according to the sweep of an arch, or vault.

with Bezil angle is that which is not square, whether it be obtuse or acute.

To BEVEL, or BE'VIL, v. a. to form a bevel angle, in opposition to a right one.

BEVERAGE f. [from bevere, Ital.] any common drink, or any thing drinkable; a treat at putting on, or first wearing a new suit of cloths; a treat at a person's first coming to prison, called likewise garriß.

BEVERLEY, a town in the East-Riding of Yorkshire, with two markets, on Wednesdays, and Saturdays. It is a large well-built town, having two parish churches, besides the minister, and sends two members to parliament; seated on the river Hull, and well inhabited by the better sort of people and mechanics; 9 miles N. of Hull, and 18 N. of London.

BEVY, f. [beva, Ital.] a flock, or number of birds collected together; an assembly, or society.

To BEWAIL, v. a. [from wa, Sax. grief] to grieve for any calamity.

To BEWARE, v. a. to act with so much caution as to provide against any future obstacle or misfortune.

BEWDFLEY, a town in Worcestershire, with a market on Saturdays. It is pleasantly seated on the river Severn, is neat and well built, enjoys a good trade for malt, leather, and caps; and lies 14 miles N. of Worcester, and 18 N. W. of London. It sends one member to parliament.

To BEWET, v. a. to make moist or wet.

To BEWILDER, v. a. to lose in a place, or road, which has no certain path. Figuratively, to puzzle and perplex the mind with difficulties.

To BEWITCH, v. a. to injure by, or subject to, the power of diabolical charms and incantations. In a secondary sense, to operate so powerfully on the mind by personal or mental charms, as to captivate and be irresistible.

BEWITCHERY, f. in the times of ignorance, supposed to be an irresistible power which persons, dealing with magic, or with the devil, had over others. In its secondary sense, a charm, either personal, mental, &c.

To BEWRA'Y, v. a. [in pron. the w is dropped] [bewragen, Sax.] to discover a thing that is hid or secret, either through simplicity or weakness.

BEWRA'YER, f. [in pron. the w is dropped] a person who discovers a thing which should be concealed; a divulger of secrets.

BEY, f. among the Turks, is the governor of a country or town; the Turks write it bey or ber, a lord or sultan.

BEYOND, prep. [beeyond, Sax.] a word used to signify excess in any thing. Applied to a place, the farther side of any thing, or that which is at the greatest distance from us; farther than; across; or over; too great for, or out of the reach of; exceeding; above; superior.

BE'ZIL, or BE'ZEL, f. that part of a ring in which the stone is fixed.

BE'ZOAR, f. if oriental, is a stone moderately hard and heavy, variable in size, shape, and colour. It is generally of a round form, and its size between that of a horsebean and a small walnut, of a dusky olive or green brown. It is always smooth and glossy; but when broken, is found to consist of several coats or crusts of stony matter, laid one over another, on a piece of stick, or seed of a fruit, for a nucleus or basis.

The oriental Bezoar is, like the pearl, a dittemper in the animal that breeds it, and is a concretion of stony matter in the stomach of a quadruped of the goat kind. It is brought from Persia and the East Indies; it is esteemed as an antidote against poison. Occidental Bezoar is brought from Peru and Mexico, and is produced in the stomach of the same sort of creature; its virtues are the same as in the oriental, tho' in a less degree. Monkey Bezoar is a rare and valuable stone found in a species of monkey common in the East Indies and America.

Porcupine Bezoar is of a yellowish-brown colour, greatly valued by the Indians as an universal remedy, especially in poisons and malignant fevers. German Bezoar is a stone found in the stomach of an animal of the goat kind, and its virtues are said to equal, if not to exceed, the oriental Bezoar. There are likewise several sorts of factitious Bezoars prepared from antimony by Chemists, and given with good effect in several dittempers.

BEZOAR'DIC, a. medicines compounded with bezoar.

BIA'NGULATED, or BIA'NGULOUS, a. [from bius and angulus, Lat.] that which has two angles.

BI'AS, f. [biais, Fr.] the weight lodged in one side of a bowl to direct or regulate it in its course, and to turn it from a straight line. Figuratively, an influence, propensity, or any thing which directs the course of a person's actions to a particular end. SYNON. These words rise gradually; inclination implying something less strong than propension; propension than bias: The first leads us to an object, the second draws us, the third drags us. Inclination is greatly owing to education, propension to custom, bias to constitution.

To BI'AS, v. a. to influence a person to any particular measures of conduct.

BIB, f. [from bibo, Lat.] a piece of linen put under the chins of infants when feeding, to keep the victuals which are spilt from their cloaths; likewise a piece of linen pinned on the front of the stay of those of more advanced years.

BIBA'CIOUS, a. [bibax, Lat.] much addicted to drinking; or drinking to excess.

BIBA'CITY, f. [bibacitas, Lat.] the quality of drinking too much.

BI'BBER, f. [from bibo, Lat.] a person who drinks to excess.

BI'BLE, f. [βίβλιον, Gr.] the volume containing the great truths of religion and conduct revealed from heaven by God, comprehending the Old and New Testaments; though sometimes applied to the Old only, as the word Testament is restrained to the New. The translation translation of this sacred volume was begun very early in this kingdom, and some part of it was done even by king Alfred. Adelmus translated the Psalms into Saxon in 709; other parts were done by Edfrid, or Ebert, in 730; the whole by Bede in 731. Trevisa published the whole in English, in 1357. Tindal's was brought hither in 1534; revised and altered in 1538; published with a preface of Cranmer's, in 1549. In 1551, another translation was published, which being revised by several bishops, was printed with their alterations in 1560. In 1607, a new translation was published by authority, which is that in present use.

BIBLIO'GRAPHER, f. [from βιβλος and γραφω, Gr.] one who writes or copies books.

BIBLIOTHE'CAL, a. belonging to a library.

BIBULOUS, a. [bibulus, Lat.] that which sucks or drinks any fluid or moisture.

BICESTER, or BU'RCESTER, a town in Oxfordshire, with a market on Fridays, for cattle and sheep. It is a long straggling place, and 54½ miles from London.

To BIC'KER, v. n. [bicare, Brit.] to skirmish, or quarrel; to tremble, or quiver, or move backwards and forwards.

BICKERER, f. one who is quarrelsome.

BICKERING, f. a quarrel, skirmish, or sudden attack, opposed to a set or pitched battle.

BICOR'NE, or BICO'RNOUS, a. [bicornis, Lat.] that which has two horns.

To BID, v. a. [preter. I bid, bad, bade; I have bid, or bidden] [biddan, Sax.] to request, or invite a person as a guest; to order or command; to offer a sum for the purchase of a thing; to publish, or proclaim. SYNON. To bid, intimates direction to perform, whether the person directing has any authority for so doing. To order, implies the exercise of authority.

BIDDEN part. pass. from BID.

BIDDER, f. one who offers a price for any commodity.

BIDDEFORD, a sea-port town in Devonshire; distant from London 203 miles. The market is on Tuesdays.

BIDDING, f. command, and order, including generally the idea of a superior.

To BIDE, v. a. [bidan, Sax.] to endure, or suffer. Neuterly, to dwell, live, remain, or continue in a place.

BIDENTAL, a. [bidens, Lat.] that which has two teeth. Figuratively, that which has two prongs.

BIDING, f. constant stay or residence in a place.

BIENNIAL, a. [biennis, Lat.] that which continues, or has been, for two years.

BIER, [beer] f. [beer, Sax.] a frame of wood on which dead persons are carried to the grave.

BIE'TINGS, f. [byfing, Sax.] in Farming, the first milk given by a cow after calving.

BIFA'RIOUS a. [bifarius, Lat.] double, two-fold, what may be understood two ways.

BIFEROUS, a. [biferens, Lat.] bearing fruit twice a year.

BIFID, a. [bifidus, Lat.] cut, cleft, or divided into two parts.

BIFOLD, n. twofold, double.

BIFO'RMED, a. [biformis, Lat.] compounded of two forms; something that is double shaped.

BIFOROUS, a. [binus and forum, Lat.] an opening with double doors.

BIFURCATED, a. [binus and furca, Lat.] an instrument with two forks or prongs.

BIG, a. applied to dimensions, large, immense, swelling out. Joined to with, or of, pregnant; with child. Swelling or distended with grief. Applied to a person's looks or words, proud; haughty. SYNON. The word great is a general term signifying any thing considerable in bulk, extent, quality, number, &c. Thus we say, a great house, a great road, a great weight, a great many, a great famine, a great happiness. The words big and large are more circumscribed; big implies greatness of bulk, large greatness of extent. Thus we say, a big man, a big stone; but a large room, a large field.

BIGAMIST, f. one who has married another before the death of his first wife.

BIGAMY, f. [bigamia, low Lat.] a double marriage, or the having of two wives at the same time; which is felony by law.

BIG-BE'LLIED, a. swelling out; applied to sails filled with wind; with child; pregnant.

BIGGIN, f. [begin, Fr.] the under cap of an infant, covering the hind part of its head, and made close, to keep the upper or mould of it warm.

BIGGLESWADE, a town in Bedfordshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on the river Ivel, over which it has a handsome stone-bridge. It is much more considerable than it was formerly, on account of the great northern road which runs through it, and has several commodious inns for travellers. It is one of the greatest barley markets in England, and lies 10 miles N. W. of Bedford, and 45 N. N. W. of London.

BIGHT, f. [bygan, Sax.] the circumference of the coil of a rope, opposed to its ends or extremities.

BIGNESS, f. largeness, with respect to quantity, bulk, or dimensions.

BIGOT, f. [supposed to be derived from Rollo's refusing to kiss the toe of Charles the Vth of France, when he received his daughter in marriage, and the investiture of the dukedom from him, with this Gothic expression, Ne se by God, on which account he was called by the king a bigot] a person strongly and immovably attached to any religion or opinion, notwithstanding the strongest reason urged to convince him by a contrary party. Used in a bad sense.

BIGOTED, a. obstinately prepossessed in favour of a person, or opinion.

BIGOTRY, f. unreasonable firmness; obstinacy.

obedience, or attachment to any party or opinion.

B'LANDER, f. a small ship or vessel, broad and flat, used for conveying goods from place to place.

B'LBERRY, f. a small purple berry, of a sweetish and sharp taste, used sometimes for tarts.

B'LBOW, f. a rapier or sword.

B'LBONES, f. a sort of stocks, for punishing offenders on board a ship.

B'LDRESTON, a. a town in Suffolk, with a market on Wednesdays. It has one large church, about a quarter of a mile from the town, and an annual meeting. It is situated on the river Breton, and consists of about 400 houses. It was formerly noted for Suffolk blues, and blankets; but at present, almost the whole business of the town is spinning of yarn. It is 12 miles S. E. of Bury, and 67½ N. E. of London.

B'ILE, f. [bilis, Lat.] in Anatomy, a yellow bitter liquor or fluid, separated from the blood in the liver, collected in the gall-bladder, and discharged into the lower end of the duodenum.

B'ILE, f. [bile, Sax.] a red inflammatory swelling or tumour, very sore, and cured by leeching.

B'ILGE, f. [bilig, Sax.] that part of a ship's bottom on which, together with the keel, the ribs, when a-ground. Bilge-water, that which rests on a ship's bottom, on account of its flatness, and cannot go to the well. Bilge-pump, is that which is applied to the side of a ship, to exhaust or pump out the bilge-water.

To B'ILGE, v. n. a sea term, to damage, or break the boards of a ship or vessel against a rock, so as to make a passage for the water to enter; to spring a leak.

B'ILIARY, a. [from bilis, Lat.] in Anatomy, that which belongs to, or conveys, the bile.

B'LINGSGATE, f. a gate, port, or stairs, on the river Thames, London, noted for the resort of fishermen and titherwomen. Figuratively, low abuse and scurrilous language, alluding to that which is made use of by those who frequent this place.

B'LINGUOUS, a. one who speaks two languages. In Law, it signifies a jury which passes upon a foreigner for a crime committed in England, whereof part are English, and part foreigners.

B'LIIOUS, a. consisting of bile.

To B'ILK, v. a. [bilken, Teut.] to cheat; to defraud; to contract a debt, and run away without paying it.

B'ILL, f. [bile, Sax.] the horny substance protruding and standing out from the head of a beak, and forming its mouth; a beak. In Husbandry, an edged tool, with a hooked point, of an axe kind, fitted to a handle, and used to lop trees. If the handle be short, it is named a hand-bill; but if long, a bedge-bill. In Trade, a written or printed account of goods delivered to, or work done by, a person. In Commerce, a common obligation given by one person to another, or a writing wherein a person obliges himself to pay a sum of money to another at a certain time. Bill of credit is that which is given by one person to another, empowering him to take up money of his correspondents in foreign countries. A bill of entry is an account of goods entered at the Custom-house, either inwards or outwards, mentioning the person exporting, &c. the quality and species of the goods, where exported to, and from whence. Bill of exchange is a piece of paper drawn by a person on another in a different place or country for money received by him at home. Bill of lading is a memorandum or acknowledgment, under the hand of the master of a vessel, of his having received goods on board, together with a promise to deliver them as consigned. Bill of parcels is an account given by the seller or buyer of the several goods bought, and their prices. Bill of sale is a solemn contract under seal, whereby a person transfers all right and interest he has in his goods to another. Bill, in Law, is a single bond without a condition; a declaration in writing, expressing some grievance or wrong done by the person complained of. In Parliament, a writing containing some proposals offered to the House to be passed into a law. A physician's prescription. A bill of mortality is a bill, giving an account of the number of persons dying within certain limits and times. A bill of fare, an account of the dishes of an entertainment, or of the provisions in season.

To B'ILL, v. n. to join bills together. Figuratively, to carels with great fondness, in allusion to the manner of doves joining their bills together.

B'ILLE'RICAY, a. a town in Essex, with a large market on Tuesdays. It is seated on a hill; nine miles S. by W. of Chelmsford, and 23½ E. of London.

B'ILLET, f. [billet, Fr.] in Heraldry, is a bearing in form of a long square. They are supposed to represent pieces of gold or silver; but Guillim thinks they represent a letter sealed up; and others take them for bricks. Also, a log of wood cut for fuel. Also, a note or ticket given by the constable of a parish or hundred, to quarter soldiers at public-houses. Also, billet-doux, or a soft billet; a love-letter. Among fox-hunters, it signifies the ordure or dung of a fox.

B'ILLIARDS, f. [it has no singular] [billiard, Fr.] a kind of game played on an oblong table, fixed exactly horizontal, and covered with a cloth, with little ivory balls, which are driven by the opposite parties into hazards, holes, or pockets, placed at the ends and sides of the table.

B'ILLINGHAM, a. a town of Northumberland, with a market on Tuesdays and Saturdays. It is 28 miles W. of Newcastle, and 297½ N. N. W. of London.

B'ILLINGHURST, a. a village of Sussex, four miles S. S. W. of Horsham.

B'ILLION, f. [Fr.] in Coinage, a base metal, either of gold or silver, in which copper is predominant.

BI'LLOW, f. a large, high, swelling, hollow wave. SYNON. We cut through the waves; are lifted by the surges; tossed and dashed by the billows.

To BI'LLOW, v. n. to swell or grow tempestuous; to raise in large heaps like the appearance of billows.

BI'LLOWY, a. stormy, tempestuous, swelling into large waves.

BI'LSDEN, a small town in Leicestershire, nine miles S. E. of Leicester, and 96½ N. by W. of London.

BIN, f. [binus, Sax.] a long square frame, or sheaf of wood, wherein corn, bread, &c. are put.

BI'NAGAR, a village in Somersetshire, four miles N. E. of Wells.

BI'NARY, a. [from binus, Lat.] two; double.

BI'NBROKE, a town in Lincolnshire, with a mean market on Wednesdays, seated in a bottom, and has two parish churches. It is 30 miles N. E. of Lincoln, and 161 N. of London.

To BIND, v. a. [preter bound, bind] [bindan, Sax.] to deprive a person of the free use of his limbs by bonds; to surround, encompass, confine, fasten together; to fix a bandage on; to compel, force, restrain. In Phisic, to make cohesive. To bind a book, to sew the sheets together, and place them in a cover. With the word over, to be obliged, under a certain penalty, to appear at a court of justice. SYNON. We bind the feet and hands of a criminal; and we tie him to a stake. In the figurative sense, a man is bound when he is not at liberty to act; and he is tyed when he cannot change his party, or quit it. Authority and power bind; Interest and love tie.

BI'NDER, f. one who binds books; one who ties thieves together. In Surgery, a fillet, used to keep on the dressings of a sore, and rolled several times about it.

BI'NDING, f. that which is bound, wound, or tied round any thing; a bandage.

BI'NGHAM, a town of Nottinghamshire, seated in the vale of Belvoir, now a mean place, and its market, which is on Thursday, is small. It is eight miles E. of Nottingham. Distant from London 108 miles.

BI'NGLEY, a town in the West-Riding of Yorkshire. It is seated on the river Aire, near Skipton in Craven, 30 miles W. by S. of York, and 212 N. N. W. of London.

BI'NOCLE, f. [binus and oculus, Lat.] in Dioptrics, a telescope fitted with two tubes, so that distant objects may be seen by both the eyes.

BINO'CLAR, a. that which has two eyes or sights.

BINO'MIAL, a. in Algebra, a root, consisting only of two parts.

BIO'GRAPHER, f. [βίος and γράφω, Gr.] one who writes the lives of particular persons.

BIO'GRAPHY, f. [βίος and γράφω, Gr.] writing the lives of men is called biography.

BI'OVAC, f. in military affairs, a night-guard, performed by the whole army, when any danger is apprehended from the enemy.

BI'PAROUS, a. bringing forth two at a time.

BI'PARTITE, a. [binus and partior, Lat.] having two parts answering to each other; divided into two.

BIPARTITION, f. the act of dividing into two.

BI'PED, f. [bipes, Lat.] that which hath two feet.

BI'PEDAL, a. [bipedalis, Lat.] two feet in length.

BIPE'NNATED, a. [binus and penna, Lat.] having two wings.

BI'QUADRATE, or BI'QUADRATIC, a. [bis and quadra, Lat.] the next power above the cube, or the square of the cube root. Biquadratic equation, in Algebra, is an equation where the unknown quantity of the terms has four dimensions. Biquadratic power is the fourth power of a number, or the square squared. Biquadratic root of a number is, the square root of the square root.

BIQUIN'TILE, a. [bis and quintus, Lat.] in Astrology, an aspect of the planets, wherein they are 144 deg. from each other.

BIRCH, f. [birch, Sax.] in Botany, betula; it hath male and female flowers at a distance from each other. Linneus places it in the 4th sect. of his 21st class. There are four species. It is used for making ox-yokes, hoops, small screws, panniers, brooms, wands, bavin-bands, withies for faggots, arrows, bolts, shafts, dishes, bowls, ladles; also for fuel, great and small coal. In Russia and Poland, they cover houses with the bark of the Birc-tree instead of slate and tile. Birc-broom, is a broom or besom, made with the small twigs of the birch-tree. See BESOM.

BIRCHEN, a. made of birch.

BIRD, f. [bird, Sax.] one of the six general classes of animals; its body is covered with feathers, and has two wings, two legs, and a bill of a firm, bony, or rather horny substance; and the females are all oviparous. Birds, in Heraldry, according to their several kinds, represent either the contemplative or active life. They are the emblems of liberty, expedition, readiness, swiftness, and fear. They are more honourable beings than fishes, because they participate more of air and fire, the two noblest and highest elements, than of earth and water. In the blazoning of birds, if their wings be not displayed, they are said to be borne close. PROV. Birds of a feather flock together.—He's in great want of a bird that will give a goat for an owl.—One bird in the band is worth two in the bush.—'Tis an ill bird that betrays its own nest.—Every bird must hatch her own egg.

BIRD-BOLT, f. [bird and bolt, Sax.] a small shot, or arrow, used in killing birds.

BIRD-CAGE, f. a receptacle made with wire, &c. to keep birds in.

BIRD-CATCHER, or BIRDER, f. one who who lives by catching and selling birds.

BIRD-LIME, f. a viscid glutinous substance, prepared different ways, but that in common use with us is made of holly bark. It is spread upon twigs, upon which the birds lightly are entangled.

BIRGANDER, f. a fowl of the goose kind.

BIRMINGHAM, a very large town in Warwickshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is a corporation, it being only governed by two constables and two bailiffs; and therefore free for any person to come and settle there; which has contributed greatly to the increase not only of the buildings, but the trade, which is the most flourishing of any in England for all sorts of iron-works, besides many other curious manufactures. The town stands on the side of a hill, forming nearly a half-moon. The lower part is filled with the work-shops and ware-houses of the manufacturers, and consists chiefly of old buildings. The upper part of the town contains a number of new and regular streets, and a handsome square, elegantly built. It has three churches; one, in the lower part of the town, which is an ancient building, with a very tall spire: the other is a very grand modern structure, having a square stone-tower, with a cupola, and turret above it: in this tower is a fine peal of ten bells, and a set of musical chimes, which play seven different tunes, one for each day in the week. It has a handsome free school, endowed by Edward II. It has also two chapels, and meeting-houses for every denomination of Dissenters. It is 17 miles N. W. of Coventry, 48 S. E. of Shrewsbury, and 116 N. W. of London.

BIRT, f. a turbot.

BIRTH, f. [birth, Sax.] the natural exclusion of the fetus by the vagina; the act of bringing forth; the entrance of a person into the world; any production; rank or dignity inherited by descent. In Sea affairs, a proper place for a ship to ride in; the distance between a ship when under sail, and the shore; a place separated by canvass wherein the sailors mess, and put their chests. A good-birth, good accommodations, wherein a person has every thing that is convenient.

BIRTH-DAY, f. the day on which a person comes into the world, or is born.

BIRTH-NIGHT, f. the night on which a person is born.

BIRTH-PLACE, f. the town or place where a person is born.

BIRTH-RIGHT, f. the right which a person acquires by birth, generally applied to the first-born.

BIRTH-STRANGLER, a. strangled, choked, or killed by suffocation, in coming into the world.

BISCOTIN, f. [Fr.] a confection made of flour, marmalade, eggs, &c.

BISCUIT, [biscet] f. [bis, Lat. and cuit, Fr.] a kind of hard dry bread, made entirely of wheat flour, mixed with leaven and warm water, baked for long voyages four times, and prepared six months before it is shipped. It will keep a whole year. Likewise a fine delicate pastry, or cake, made of fine flour, eggs, almonds, and rose water; or of flour, eggs, sugar, and citron, or orange peel, and baked twice.

To BISECT, v. a. [binus and seco, Lat.] in Geometry, to divide any line into two equal parts.

BISECTION, or BISSECTION, f. in Geometry, the act of dividing, or the thing divided, into two equal parts.

BISHOP, f. [biscop, Sax.] a prelate, or person consecrated for the spiritual government and direction of the diocese, whose jurisdiction consists in collating to benefices, ordaining priests and deacons, licensing physicians, surgeons, and school-masters. The bishops are all peers of the realm, except the bishop of Sodor and Man, who seems to be excluded that privilege, from his being nominated by the lord of that isle, all the others being nominated by his majesty. Next to the two archbishops, the bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester, have always the precedence; and the others follow according to the date of their consecration.

BISHOP, f. a liquor made of water, wine, sugar, and a Seville orange roasted.

BISHOPS-AUKLAND, a town in the bishoprick of Durham, with a market on Thursdays. It is pleasantly seated on the side of a hill, and noted for its castle, beautifully repaired about 100 years ago; for its chapel, whose architecture is very curious; and for its bridge. It is eight miles S. by W. of Durham, and 25½ N. N. W. of London.

BISHOPS-CASTLE, a town in Shropshire, with a market on Fridays, seated near the river Clun: is a corporation; sends two members to parliament; and its market is much frequented by the Welch. It is 15½ miles N. W. by W. of London.

BISHOP AND HIS CLERKS, some little islands and rocks on the coast of Pembroke-shire, near St. David's, dangerous to mariners.

BISHOPRIC, f. the province, district, or diocese, which belongs to a bishop.

BISHOPS-LYDIARD, a village in Somersetshire, five miles N. W. of Taunton.

BISHOPS-STORTFORD, a town of Hertfordshire, with a good market on Thursdays, seated on the side of a hill, and has several good inns; but the streets are not paved. It has a large church, one Presbyterian and one Quaker meeting. Here was formerly a castle, called Weymore-castle, wherein a garrison was kept; but there are now no remains of it left. It is 12 miles N. E. of Hertford, and 30 N. by E. of London.

BISK, f. [bisque, Fr.] a soup, or broth, made of different sorts of flesh boiled, according to Johnson.

BISLEY, a village in Gloucestershire, nine miles W. N. W. of Cirencester. Distant 98 miles from London.

BISMUTH, f. in Natural History, is a genus genus of the semi-metals; its most usual appearance is in form of an ore, intimately mixed with silver, a large quantity of arsenic, and an earthy matter, which yields a blue colour, equal to the zaffre or smalt procured from cobalt. The ore is usually of a bright silvery white, of an irregular structure, sometimes granulated. In the fusion of this ore, the sulphur and arsenic evaporate, and the reguline matter being thereby freed from its imprisoned state, runs from the earthy matter, which remains fixed behind. It yields the famous cosmetic magistery, and is a very valuable ingredient in the mixed metals used in casting printers types, and for bell-metal. It is common in Germany, and frequently found in the tin-mines of Cornwall.

BISSEXTILE, f. [so called, because the 6th of the calends of March was repeated in that year] [bis and sextilis, Lat.] a year containing 366 days, happening every four years, when a day is added to the month of February, to make up for the six hours which the sun spends in his course each year, beyond the 365 days usually assigned to it.

BISTRE, f. [Fr.] a colour made of chimney foot boiled, and afterwards diluted, and made into cakes with gum-water. It is used by painters to wash their designs, instead of Indian ink, &c.

BISTOURY, f. [bistouri, Fr.] a surgeon's instrument, used in making incisions.

BISULCOUS, a. [bisulcus, Lat.] cleft in two parts; cloven-footed.

BIT, f. [bitel, Sax.] the essential part of a bridle, which being put into the horse's mouth, the rider is enabled to manage him. It is also the sharp end of a piercer, auger, or other iron instrument. The bit of a key is that part which contains the wards. Bit also means as much as a person generally bites off at once.

To BIT, v. a. to put a bit into a horse's mouth; to bridle.

BITCH, f. [bitge, Sax.] the female of the dog, wolf, fox, and otter kind.

To BITE, v. a. [preter. bit, part. pass. bitten] [bitan, Sax.] to wound, pierce, or divide with the teeth. To affect with pain, applied to the cold; to make a person uneasy, applied to satire or reproach; to wound by its sharpness, applied to a sword, &c. To make the mouth smart, applied to the sharp taste of acid bodies. Figuratively, to cheat or defraud.

BITE, f. the incision or wound made in any thing with the teeth; a sharper, a cheat; trick or fraud.

BITER, f. one that seizes with the teeth, applied to a dog; one that readily or quickly swallows a bait, applied to a fish; one who deceives or defrauds another by false appearances; a sharper.

BITTACLE, f. [from bitt, Belg.] a frame in the steerage of a ship, wherein the compass is placed.

BITTEN, part. pass. of BITE.

BITTER, a. [biter, Sax.] that which excites a hot, pungent, and astringent taste, like that of wormwood. Figuratively, wretched, miserable, painful, disagreeable, unpleasing, and hurtful.

BITTER, f. in Sea language, any turn of the cable round the bits, so that it may be let out gradually, or by degrees. When a ship is stopped by the cable, she is said to be brought up by the bitter.

BITTERLY, ad. that which has a bitter taste. Figuratively, in a sorrowful, painful, sharp, and severe manner; used sometimes to express the superlative or highest degree.

BITTERN, f. [bitour, Fr.] in Natural History, a bird with a long bill and legs, which feeds on fish, and is remarkable for its noise.

BITTERNESS, f. a kind of flavour, or sensation, the reverse to sweetness. Applied to manner, severity, austerity. Applied to reproach, keenness, sharpness, or extremity. Applied to the passions, sorrow, trouble, distress.

BITTS, f. [bittan, Sax.] two perpendicular pieces of timber in the fore-part of a ship, bolted to the gun-deck; their heads are braced with a cross piece, and several turns of the cable are taken over them, for securing the ship when at anchor.

BITUME, or BITUMEN, f. in Natural History, a fat, tenacious, inflammable mineral substance, or a fossil body which easily takes fire, yields oil, and is not soluble in water.

BITUMINOUS, a. having the nature and qualities of bitumen.

BIVALVE, a. [binus and valva, Lat.] in Natural History, applied to fish that have two shells, such as oysters; and in Botany, to plants whose seed-pods open their whole length; to discharge their seeds, as pease.

BIVULVAR, a. that which has two shells.

BIZANTINE, f. a large wedge of gold, valued at 1*l.* which the king offers upon high festival days.

To BLAB, v. a. [blabbern, Teut.] to reveal a secret through heedlessness or want of caution. Used neuterly, to talk, or tattle.

BLAB, f. a tell-tale; one who discovers secrets through inconsideration, or too great a propensity to talking.

BLABBER, f. one who discovers a secret through want of caution, and a great fondness for speaking.

BLACK, f. [blac, Sax.] absence or want of light and colour, owing to a body's reflecting no rays of light. Dyer's black, for stuffs of a high price, is composed of indigo, woad, boiled with allum, tartar, or ashes of lees or wine, maddered with common madder, and mixed with gall-nuts of Aleppo, coppers and sumach. The best black cloth should be first dyed blue. German black is made of the lees of wine, burnt bones washed afterwards, and ground with burnt ivory, or peach-stones; that with ivory is the best. This is used by rolling-press printers. Ivory black is ivory burnt between two crucibles, and ground with water, used by painters and jewellers to blacken the bottom

bottom ground of the collets or bezels in which they set diamonds. Spanish black, invented by the Spaniards, is burnt cork. Lamp or iron black, is the sooty smoak or foot of rosin, received in sheepskins, or pieces of coarse linen, fixed at the top of a chimney, wherein it is burnt for that purpose. Carriers black is made with gall-nuts, four beer and cold iron, for the first blackening applied to the hils; but of gall-nuts, copperas, and gum arabic for the second. Black after the word but, and the preposition upon, implies fullen, intricately, and is a sign of displeasure. "Locked black upon me." Blacksp. Applied to moral actions, horrible, or excessively wicked. Joined with air, it implies the colour of the skin, occasioned by a hard blow; livid. PROV. Black will take no other hue; this dyes find by experience. It may signify that vicious persons are seldom or never reclaimed.—A black pen is as fast as a white; signifying, that the prerogative of beauty proceeds from fancy.—A black hen lays a white egg; I conceive the meaning of it is, that a black woman may bear a fair child.

To BLACK, v. a. to make of a black colour.

BLACK, a. of a black colour.

BLACKAMOOR, f. one whose complexion is naturally black. See NEGRO.

BLACK-BROWED, a. having black eyebrows. Figuratively, dark, gloomy, dismal, or threatening.

BLACKBURN, a town in Lancashire, with a market on Mondays. It has its name from the brook Blackwater, which runs through it; and is seated near the river Derwent, 12 miles E. of Preston, and 203 N. N. W. of London.

BLACK-CATTLE, f. in Husbandry, a general term, including oxen, bulls, or cows.

To BLACKEN, v. a. to make a thing black, which was of a different colour before; to intercept the rays of light; to darken. Figuratively, to sully a person's character by defamation or unmerited censure.

BLACKGUARD, f. in low and familiar language, used to convey the idea of a person of mean circumstances, dirty and ragged dress, of base principles, and worthy of contempt.

BLACK-HEATH, a village near Greenwick, in Kent, six miles S. E. from London.

BLACKISH, a. [black and isic, Sax.] inclining to a black colour; somewhat black.

BLACK-LEAD, f. See LEAD.

BLACKMOOR, a village in Essex, seven miles S. W. of Chelmsford.

BLACKNESS, f. that quality of a body which arises from its reflecting few or no rays, and is owing to its porosity, the minute cells of its particles, and the rays of the light suffering so many reflections in the inside, that they return to the surface; want of light, or darkness.

BLACK ROD, f. the usher of the order of the Garter, so called from his black rod with a golden lion at the top. He attends the king's chamber, and the house of lords in parliament.

BLACK SEA, formerly called the Euxine Sea, lies between Europe and Asia, bounded on the N. by Tartary; on the E. by Mingrelia, Circassia, and Georgia; on the S. by Natolia, and on the W. by Rumania, Bulgaria, and Bessarabia. It lies between Lon. 33. and 44 E. and from lat. 42. to 46. N. entirely surrounded by the Turkish dominions, who have the sole navigation of it.

BLACKSMITH, f. a person who forges the larger works in iron, and derives his name from their colour, which is generally black, from their not being polished; opposed to a whitesmith, who forges the smaller works, which are generally polished.

BLADDER, f. [bladdre, Sax.] in Anatomy, a thin dilatible membranous body, which serves as the receptacle of the urine after its secretion from the blood in the kidneys, situated in the pelvis of the abdomen; in men, immediately on the rectum; in women, on the vagina uteri. It likewise signifies a pustule, blister, or the swelling of a membrane filled with any juice or fluid, such as that which arises after scalding or burning.

BLADE, f. [blad, Sax.] in Botany, the spike or leaf of grass before it grows to seed; the green shoots or leaves of corn, which rise from the seed. Hence that part of a sword or knife is called a blade, from the form's resembling a blade of grass. Figuratively, a bold, enterprising, brisk, fierce, and gay person.

BLADE, or BLADE-BONE, f. in Anatomy, the scapula, or scapular-bone, of a flat or triangular form.

To BLADE, v. a. to furnish with a blade; to fit a blade to a handle.

BLADED, a. that which has leaves, spires, or blades.

BLAIN, f. [bleg-ne, Sax.] a distemper incident to beasts, consisting of a bladder growing at the root of the tongue, against the windpipe, which at length grows so large as to stop the breath. Applied to human creatures, a pustule or blister.

To BLAME, v. a. [blamea, Fr.] applied to persons, to charge them with having done a fault.

BLAME, f. the charging with wrong measures or faults. Figuratively, the defect which merits censure. Used with to, it implies that which deserves blame, or blameable.

BLAMEABLE, a. that which may be found fault with, or censured.

BLAMEABLENESS, f. that which renders a thing faulty, or liable to blame or censure.

BLAMEABLY, ad. in such a manner as deserves censure or blame.

BLAMEFUL, a. that which highly deserves to be found fault with, censured, or blamed.

BLAMELESS, a. that which is no ways defective; or deserves no censure or blame; used sometimes, but very rarely, with the particle of.

BLAMELESSLY, ad. in such a manner as to be free from fault; not meriting a censure.

BLAME-

BLAMELESSNESS, f. that quality which renders a person or thing by no means the object of censure or blame.

BLAMER, f. the person who censures, or charges a person or thing with defect, or being wrong.

BLAMEWORTHY, a. that which deserves censure or blame, including the idea of something wrong or defective.

To BLANCH, v. a. [blanchir, Fr.] to whiten a thing which was before of another colour. Figuratively, to peel, applied to the peeling almonds, which discovers their kernel of a white colour.

BLANCHER, f. one who makes any thing white; a whitener.

BLANCHER, f. the action, art, or method of making any thing white. In Coinage, the method made use of to give the pieces that brightness and lustre they have on their first coming out of the mint.

BLAND, a. [blandus, Lat.] soothing, mild, applied to language. Soft, temperate, applied to weather.

BLANDFORD, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is pleasantly situated on the river Stour, near the Downs, and is a well inhabited place; but has been subject to several dreadful fires, particularly in 1731, when almost all the town was burnt down, with the goods therein; but it was soon rebuilt more beautiful than before. It has the title of a marquissate, and is 12 miles S. of Salisbury, 18 N. E. of Dorchester, and 104 W. by S. of London.

To BLANDISH, v. a. to insinuate one's self into a person's favour; to soothe, or allure. Seldom used.

BLANDISHMENT, f. an insinuating address; soft, mild, and kind expressions, by which a person steals into the favour of another.

BLANK, a. [blanc, Fr.] whitish or pale, applied to colour. That which is not written on. Used with the word look, either expressed or understood, confused, dejected, or shewing the signs of disappointment. Applied to verse, that which has no rhyme; but Milton, Thomson, and others, have shewn this to be the most masculine ornament of poetry, which brings our language to a nearer resemblance of the Greek and Roman poetry, and fits in a height beyond the poetry of the French and Italians, which they must look up at with envy, and acknowledge it impossible for their enervate languages to attain to.

BLANK, f. in Commerce, a void space, or that which has no writing on it, but is left so, in order to be filled up. In Lotteries, a ticket which has no prize drawn against it. Figuratively, the mark or point which an arrow or piece is aimed at.

To BLANK, v. a. figuratively, to confuse; disappoint; to erase, bring to nothing, or render abortive.

BLANKET, f. [blanchette, Fr.] a stuff made of wool, and used for beds.

To BLANKET, v. a. to cover or wrap in a blanket.

BLANKLY, ad. in such a manner as care or shews confusion or disappointment; with whiteness; with paleness.

To BLARE, v. n. [blaren, Belg.] to bellow; to melt away, like a lighted candle blown by the wind.

BLA'NEY, (St.) a village of Cornwall, 14 miles N. W. of Foy.

To BLASPHEME, v. n. [blasphemo, Lat.] to speak ill of God, his messengers, things relating to his service, and comprehended in his revelation. In Law, an indignity, injury offered to the Almighty, by denying what is his due, or attributing to him what is disagreeable to his nature, Lindw. cap. 1.

BLASPHEMER, f. one who utters disrespectful or irreverent things either of God, Christ, or any person in the Holy Trinity, God's messengers, or any thing relating to religion.

BLASPHEMOUS, a. that which is disrespectful or irreverent with respect to God and heavenly things.

BLASPHEMOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as is inconsistent with that reverence due to the Deity; in such a manner as to speak ill of God and heavenly things.

BLASPHEMY, f. an offering some indignity to God, any person of the Trinity, or messengers from God, his holy writ, or the doctrines of revelation.

BLAST, f. [blast, Sax.] a breath, puff, current of wind; the sound made by blowing trumpet or other wind instrument; a warm air or other alteration in the atmosphere, which withers trees, or causes a pestilence.

To BLAST, v. a. to infect with some sudden plague or infection by means of the air; to cause a thing to wither; to ruin a person's character by spreading false rumours to render an enterprize abortive.

BLASTING, f. in Mineralogy, the blowing up the vein of a mine by gunpowder, which cannot be broken up by the spade, the gun, and the ax, or softened by fire.

BLA'TANT, a. [blattant, Fr.] bellowing like a calf. Seldom used.

BLAZE, f. [blaze, Sax.] a flame, or the light of a name. Figuratively, a spreading abroad; publication, or extending a report likewise, the white mark on a horse's forehead reaching to his nose.

To BLAZE, v. a. used with upon, to shine, or give light. Figuratively, to make a thing universally known by report or rumour. Sometimes used with the words abroad and about.

BLA'ZER, f. one who spreads abroad any report or rumour. Not much in use.

BLA'ZEY, (St.) See BLA'ZEY (St.)

To BLA'ZON, v. a. [blasfzner, Fr.] in Heraldry, to name all the parts of a coat, in their proper and technical terms. Figuratively, to set out, deck, or adorn. To discover to advantage; to display. To spread abroad.

BLA'ZON, f. in Heraldry, the art of expressing the several parts of a coat of arms in to proper terms; all persons, beneath the degree of a noble, must have their coats blazoned by metals and colours; nobles by precious stones; and kings and princes by planets. Blazon is used figuratively for making any thing public; a pompous display of any quality.

To BLEACH, v. a. [ablaere, Sax.] to whiten a thing by exposing it to the air and sun. Neutrally, to grow white in the sun or open air.

BLEACHING, f. the art of making a thing white, which was not perfectly so before, or which was of a different colour.

BLEAK, a. [Blac, Sax.] cold, sharp, chill.

BLEAKNESS, f. extreme coldness, applied to the air.

BLEAKY, a. cold or chilly owing to the wind.

BLEAR, [blow, Belg.] dim or sore with water or rheum. Applied to the eyes, that which causes dimness of sight.

To BLEAR, v. a. to occasion dimness of sight; to make the eyes sore with water or rheum. Figuratively, to blind, or prevent the mind from taking notice of things.

To BLEAT, v. a. [blatan, Sax.] to make a noise like a sheep.

BLEAT, f. [from the verb] the cry of a sheep.

BLID, f. [blown, Germ.] a blifter.

BLID, part. from BLEED.

To BLEED, v. a. [preter. I bled, or have bled] [blatan, Sax.] to lose blood by a wound, &c. to die by bleeding. Figuratively, to drop like thick or rich blood. Used actively, to extract blood from a person by opening a vein with a lancet; to let blood.

BLEGON, See BLEAGON.

To BLEMISH, v. a. to mark with any defect; to spot, stain, or any other ways to rob a thing of its beauty, value, or perfection. Figuratively, to defame; to ruin a person's reputation.

BLEMISH, f. applied to personal charms, a scar, or any thing that diminishes their perfection. Applied to manufactures, a defect either in the making, or owing to some accident. Applied to moral conduct, a reproach, disgrace, defect, or fault.

To BLEMISH, v. n. to shrink; to start back. To hinder; to obstruct. Seldom used.

To BLEND, v. n. [blendan, Sax.] to mix or mingle things together imperfectly, or so as several compounds may be discovered, applied to the mixing of colours.

BLENDER, f. a person who mingles things together.

BLENNHEIM, a village of Germany in Silesia, rendered memorable for the victory over the French and Bavarians, obtained in August 1704, by the Allies, under the command of the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene. In memory of this battle, the fine palace of Blenheim was built, near Woodstock, at the charge of the government. It is situated on the W. side of the Danube, three miles N. E. of Hochstedt, 27 N. E. of Ulm, and 25 N. W. of Augsburg. Lon. s. 30. E.

lat. 48. 40. N.

BLENT, the obsolete Preterite of BLEND;
To BLESS, v. a. [perter I blest, or blest] [blestan, Sax.] to pray for, or wish happiness or good to a person; to praise for happiness received, or ascribe our happiness to God; to confer every thing that can make a person perfectly happy, applied to God.

BLESSED, part. pass. of BLESS.

BLESSEDLY, ad. in a manner which communicates the greatest happiness that can be wished.

BLESSEDNESS, f. that quality which renders a person extremely happy; the state of consummate felicity in heaven. Figuratively, the divine favour.

BLESSING, f. a declaration of future happiness in a prophetic manner; a prayer in which happiness is requested. Figuratively, the divine favour; any means or cause of happiness; any great advantage or benefit.

BLETCHINGLY, a town in Surry. Distance 20 miles from London.

BLEW, the Preterite of BLOW.

BLIGHT, f. [bligebe, Teut.] a distemper that affects trees and plants in various manners, sometimes the whole, and sometimes only the leaves, occasioned by an evil disposition of the air, as too severe frosts, &c. Figuratively, any thing which makes an undertaking miscarry, or disappoints the person's expectations.

To BLIGHT, v. a. to stop the vegetation of a tree; to render it barren; to wither. Figuratively, to blast, destroy, kill, or wither.

BLIND, a. [blind, Sax.] not able to see; deprived of sight. Figuratively, ignorant, with the particle to before the object; dark, not easily to be seen or found. PROV. Blind men can judge no colours.—A man were better to be half blind than have both his eyes out.—Who so blind as he that will not see?

To BLIND, v. a. to deprive a person of his sight; to prevent a person from seeing; to darken. Figuratively, to render a thing obscure, and not easily comprehended.

BLIND, f. something made use of to intercept the light. Figuratively, something made use of to divert the eye or mind from attending to the design a person is carrying on.

To BLINDFOLD, v. a. to hinder a person from seeing, by folding or tying something before his eyes.

BLINDFOLD, a. with the eyes covered; with the eyes shut. Figuratively, without consideration; without using our reason.

BLINDLY, ad. without sight. Figuratively, scarcely or hardly to be perceived; without examination; implicitly.

BLINDMAN'S BUFF, f. a play wherein a person endeavours to catch some one of the company, after something is tied over his eyes to prevent his seeing.

BLINDNESS, f. loss of the faculty of seeing, arising from the loss or distemperature of the organs of the eye. Figuratively, ignorance, or want of knowledge.

BLINDSIDE, f. used figuratively, to express press the foibles or weakness of a person, which exposes him to the artifices of others.

BLINDWORM, f. in Natural History, the larger slow-worm, so called from the smallness of its eyes, which hath induced some to think it has none; a kind of small viper, the least of the English venomous reptiles.

To BLINK, v. n. [blincken, Dan.] to wink with one eye; to shut one eye; to be blind of, or to see obscurely with one eye.

BLINKARD, f. one who has bad eyes, one who sees but very dimly. Figuratively, one who discerns but very imperfectly.

BLISS, f. [blisse, Sax.] joy arising from the possession of some great and important good; a state of happiness, or of the highest felicity; most commonly applied to the happiness of the heavenly mansions. SYNON. Our happiness glares in the eyes of the world, and exposes us often to envy. Our felicity is only known to ourselves, and gives us continual satisfaction. The idea of bliss extends beyond a life temporal.

BLISSFUL, a. abounding with joy; possessed of the highest degree of happiness.

BLISSFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to shew the greatest signs of joy, occasioned by the possession and enjoyment of happiness.

BLISSFULNESS, f. the quality or state of extreme joy, arising from the enjoyment of an important and immense good.

BLISTER, f. [bluyster, Belg.] a swelling of the skin, generally filled with a watry fluid, after burning, scalding, &c. In Pharmacy, a medicine which attracts the humours to a particular part, and by that means raises the cuticle.

To BLISTER, v. n. to rise in blisters; to be covered with blisters. Used actively, to raise blisters by burning; to apply a plaister, in order to raise a blister.

BLITH, a town of Northamptonshire, with a market on Thursdays. Is situated on a rivulet, and had formerly both a cattle and a priory, of which there are some obscure remains. It is 23 miles N. W. of Newark, and 149 N. by W. of London.

BLITHE, a. [blithe, Sax.] gay, airy, joyous, sprightly, owing to the enjoyment of some good.

BLITHLY, ad. in a joyous, sprightly, or airy manner.

BLITHNESS, f. the state of joyful alacrity and sprightliness.

BLITHSOME, a. very gay, airy, or sprightly; cheerful.

To BLOAT, v. a. [blowan, Sax.] to swell with wind. Figuratively, to shew pride by the looks or gesture. Neuterly, it implies to look as if swelled by wind; generally applied to a person growing lousy, but appearing at the same time of a weak constitution.

BLOATEDNESS, f. the state of a person or thing puffed up with fat, or swelled with wind.

BLOBBER, f. a bubble. Not in common use.

BLOBBER-LIP, f. a thick lip.
BLO'B-LIPPED, or BLO'BBER-LIPPED, a. that which has thick lips, applied both to persons and things.

BLOCK, f. [block, Belg.] a heavy piece of timber, more thick than long; any massy body; a piece of wood framed in the shape of a skull, made use of by barbers to make their perukes upon; a piece of wood used by hatters to form or dress their hats on; the wood on which criminals are beheaded; pieces of wood belonging to a ship, fitted with shives and pins for running rigging to go through. Figuratively, an obstruction or impediment; a person of dull parts, slow apprehension, remarkable stupidity.

To BLOCK, v. a. [bloquer, Fr.] to stop up any passage; to inclose a town so as to hinder any one from going into, or coming out of it. Generally used with the particle up.

BLOCKADE, f. [blockbays, Teut.] a fortress or bulwark, erected to stop up or secure a passage. In War, a kind of siege, wherein all passages and avenues are seized and stopp'd up, so as the besieged can neither receive provisions, reinforcements, nor intelligence, and are reduced to the necessity of surrendering or starving.

To BLOCKADE, v. a. to seize upon, and block up all the avenues to a place.

BLOCKHEAD, f. a figurative expression, used to imply a person of a dull apprehension; want of parts and great stupidity.

BLOCKHEADED, a. remarkably stupid, dull, and incapable of improving.

BLOCKHOUSE, f. a fortress built to secure a passage, and hinder any one from going through.

BLOCKISH, a. like a blockhead.

BLOCKISHLY, ad. after the manner of a person remarkable for his stupidity; like a blockhead.

BLOCKISHNESS, f. great dulness of apprehension; or stupidity.

BLO'CKLEY, a village in Worcestershire, though inclosed by Gloucestershire, seven miles S. E. of Evesham.

BLO'CK-TIN, f. that which is pure and unwrought.

BLO'CK-WOOD, f. in Trade, the log-wood, brought from Honduras, and used in dying blacks.

BLO'MARY, f. [from bloma, Sax.] the first forge in an iron work, through which the metal passes after it has been first melted from the mine.

BLOOD, [blud] f. [blood, Sax.] a red warm fluid, circulating by means of the veins and arteries through every part of an animal body. Blood is used figuratively for family-kindred, descent, life. Joined with hot or cold, a mild or warm disposition; a person of a warm or sanguine temper; a rake. Joined with flesh, used in Scripture to signify human nature in its corrupt state, or the state of unassisted reason. The juice of vegetables.

To BLOOD, v. a. to stain with blood; to let blood.

BLO'OD-

BLOOD-HOT, a. that which has the same degree of heat as the blood.

BLOOD-HOUND, f. a hound that follows by the scent, keens with great fierceness, will not quit the track of the person he pursues, and is wanted to the sport by blood.

BLOODILY, ad. in a cruel savage manner; inclined to murder or bloodshed.

BLOODINESS, f. the state or appearance of a thing faded with blood.

BLOODLESS, a. without blood; having no blood. Figuratively, dead; pale.

BLOODSHED, f. murder, occasioned by giving a person a wound by which he bleeds to death; Langbaer.

BLOODSHEDDER, f. one who murders another.

BLOODSHOT, or BLOODSHOTTEN, a. a distemper in the eyes, wherein the blood-vessels are so distended as to make them appear of a bloody colour.

BLOODSTONE, f. in Natural History, a mineral of a green colour, spotted with a blood-red, ponderous, composed of pointed needles, and generally found in iron mines. It is used in medicine as a styptic, or to stop blood; and by goldsmiths and gilders to polish their wares.

BLOODY, a. stained with blood. Figuratively, cruel; murderous.

BLOODY-FLUX, f. See DYSENTERY.

BLOODY-MINDED, a. cruel; inclined to murder, or bloodshed.

BLOOM, f. [blume, Teut.] in Botany, the flower on fruit-trees and plants, which precedes their fruit. The fine blue substance appearing on plums, &c. Figuratively, a flourishing state, which may admit of increase and improvement.

To BLOOM, v. n. to produce blossoms or flowers. Figuratively, to flourish; to be in a flourishing state.

BLOOMY, a. full of blossoms or flowers. Figuratively, in a state of vigour or perfection; in a flourishing state.

BLOSSOM, f. [blösem, Sax.] in Botany, the flower which afterwards turns to fruit on trees or plants.

To BLOSSOM, v. n. to put forth flowers or blossoms, which afterwards turn to fruit.

To BLOT, v. a. [blotir, Fr.] to drop ink on a paper or other substance; to efface or dash out any word with ink; used with out. Figuratively, to render a thing imperceptible, or invisible; to efface; to stain, sully, or disgrace. To make black; to darken.

BLOT, f. a spot of ink dropped by accident on paper; a dash of the pen on a word, in order to efface it. Figuratively, a stain, or any thing which causes disgrace, applied to character.

BLOTCH, f. a sore, pustule, or any eruption of the skin, which conveys the idea of a defect.

To BLOTE, v. a. [blößen, Belg.] to smok, or dry with smok; hence blotd, or red heron's. Seldom used.

BLOW, [blō] f. [blowen, Sax.] a stroke given with the fist or any weapon. Used with at, a single attempt; a sudden event; at once.

The act of laying or depositing eggs in flesh, applied to flies: "The blow of flies." Cleapm.

To BLOW, [blō] v. n. [pret. blew, part. pass. blown] [blawan, Sax.] to move, applied to the action of wind. Used sometimes impersonally with the particle it. "It blows a happy gale." Dryd. To breathe upon; to found by means of wind. "Let the prating organ blow." Dryd. To found a musical instrument by the breath. Used with over, to pass or cease without producing damage.

"When the storm is blown over—how blest is the swain!" Granv. Used with up, to mount in the air, applied to the effect of gunpowder.

"Some of the enemy's magazines blew up." Taylor, No. 59. Used actively, to drive or move by the force of wind; to increase a fire by means of a pair of bellows; to breathe upon; to found a wind instrument by the breath.

"Their loud up-lifted angel-trumpets blow." Milt. Used with out, to extinguish by the wind or breath. Used with upon, to become common; to become contemptible on account of its being universally known, even to the vulgar; to be stale.

To BLOW, [blō] v. n. [blowan, Sax.] in Botany, to bloom, to blossom, to flourish.

BLOWER, [blō-er] f. among Miners, a mallet of tin.

BLOWING, [blō-ing] f. the act of forming glass into its various shapes, by breathing or blowing with the mouth through the blowing pipe.

BLOWZE, f. a female of a healthy ruddy countenance, or one whose hair is generally in disorder.

BLOWZY, a. ruddy-faced, or with the hair disordered.

BLUBBER, f. the fat part of a whale, which contains the oil.

To BLUBBER, v. n. [imbabolare, Ital.] to weep in such a manner as to make the cheeks swell. Used actively, to swell the cheeks with weeping.

BLUBBERED, part. swelled, big, or large, applied to the lips.

BLUDGEON, f. a short stick, having one end loaded with lead, &c. used as an offensive weapon.

BLUE, a. [formerly spelt blaw, blaw, Sax.] of a blue colour. Used substantively for one of the primitive colours of the rays of light; and among dyers for one of the five simple or mother colours, of which they form the others. It is made of woad, small woad, or vouede, or indigo. To look blue upon a person, is to behold him with an unfavourable aspect, or forbidding countenance.

To BLUE, v. a. to make of a blue colour, to give linen a blueish cast by dipping them into cold water, wherein soap and indigo have been dissolved.

BLUELY, a. like a blue colour; blueish.

BLUENESS, f. that quality which denominates a thing blue.

BLUFF,

BLUFF, a. applied to the looks, big, swelling, furly.

To BLUNDER, v. n. [blunderen, Belg.] to be guilty of a gross mistake, including the secondary idea of contempt. Used actively, to go in a confused manner in quest or search. To mix ignorantly and by gross mistake.

BLUNDER, f. a gross mistake, applied both to actions and words, and carrying with it the idea of gross and ridiculous stupidity.

BLUNDERBUSS, f. a kind of gun or fusée, whose barrel is generally made of brass, and may be charged with several bullets. Figuratively, a person guilty of gross and ridiculous mistakes either in actions or words.

BLUNDERER, f. one who cannot distinguish one thing from another; one who is guilty of gross and ridiculous mistakes, either in action or language.

BLUNT, a. applied to the point or edge of a weapon, that which will not pierce or cut, on account of its thickness, opposed to sharp; deficient in politeness of behaviour; void of ceremony or politeness; not easily to be penetrated.

To BLUNT, v. a. to spoil the sharpness of the edge or point of any weapon, so as to hinder it from piercing. Figuratively, to lessen the violence of any passion.

BLUNTLY, ad. applied to edge tools, not able to pierce or cut. Applied to behaviour, without ceremony, politeness, or elegance.

BLUNTNESS, f. want of edge, point, or sharpness, applied to weapons. Plainness, abruptness, want of ceremony, or politeness, applied to manners.

BLUR, f. [borra, Span.] a blot or stain. Figuratively, a defect.

To BLUR, v. a. to efface, erase, or render a thing imperceptible. Figuratively, to stain, applied to credit, behaviour, or reputation.

To BLURT, v. a. to speak, discover, or declare, without consideration, or notwithstanding caution to the contrary. Used with the particle out.

To BLUSH, v. n. [blufen, Belg.] to reddens, or grow red in the face at being charged with any thing that excites shame, or seeing any thing immodest. Figuratively, to bear the colour of a blush. Used with at before the cause. Prov. Blushing is Virtue's colour.

BLUSH, f. a redness of the cheeks occasioned by the consciousness of some defect, or the sight of some unchaste object. Figuratively, any red colour. With the word first, a sudden appearance, or at first sight.

To BLUSTER, v. n. [from blafz, Sax.] to roar, applied to the noise of the wind in a storm. Figuratively, to make a noise, bully, hector, swagger, or be tumultuous through a vain persuasion or conceit of a person's importance.

BLUSTER, f. the roaring noise occasioned by the violence of the wind. Figuratively, the height or noisy turbulence of anger or vain conceit.

BLUSTERER, f. a person who makes a great noise from a conceited opinion of his own importance; a bully.

BLUSTROUS, a. applied to the wind, making a great noise from its violence. Applied to persons making a noise, and assuming the airs of those who are of some importance.

BLYTHBOROUGH, a town in Suffolk, seated on the river Blyth, over which it has a bridge. It is now gone to decay, but is a post-town on the road to Yarmouth, and has a stately handsome church. Distant from London 98 miles.

BMI, f. a note in music.

BO, interj. a word used to excite terror; according to Sir William Temple, from Bo, an old northern captain, whose very looks terrified his enemies.

BOAR, f. [formerly spelt bote] [bar, Sax.] the male hog.

BOAR-SPEAR, f. a spear used in hunting wild boars.

BOARD, f. [bræd, Sax.] a piece of timber sawn thin for the use of building; when thick, it is called a plank. A table. A table round which a council or committee sits: hence the council board; the board of works. Figuratively, entertainment, diet, or food. The deck, or floor of a ship. Used with on, within the ship. Joined to without, as without board, out of the ship: With over, over the sides of the ship, or out of the ship into the sea. "Threw him over-board." Slip by the board, is to slip by the sides of a ship. To make a board, is to turn the ship to the windward. To make a good board, is used of a ship when advanced much to the windward at one tack.

To BOARD, v. a. to enter a ship by force; to attack or make the first attempt; from the French aborder quelq'un. To cover with boards. To board it up to the wind, is to turn a ship to the windward.

To BOARD, v. n. [burdd, Brit.] to live and diet at a house; to place a person as a boarder at a house.

BOARD-WAGES, f. money allowed servants to find themselves in victuals.

BOARDER, f. one who diets, or eats at another's table, at a settled rate; a scholar that lives in the master's house, and eats at his table.

BOARDING-SCHOOL, f. a school where the scholars live with, and are found in victuals by, the master.

BOARISH, a. [boar and isc, Sax.] of the nature of, or like a boar. Figuratively, fierce, cruel, savage, furious, and void of every principle of humanity.

BOARISHNESS, f. the furlous savage quality of a boar. Figuratively, want of delicacy, kindness, pity, and humanity.

To BOAST, v. a. [boft, Brit.] to display one's abilities in a proud, assuming, and vain manner; to magnify, exalt, or be proud of.

BOAST, f. the thing a person is proud of; the cause of a person's pride; a vain and conceited display.

BOASTER, f. one who makes a pompous display display of his advantages, whether they consist in power, wealth, learning, virtue, or religion.

BOASTFUL, a. inclined or subject to brag; ostentatious.

BOASTINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to brag of, or display with vain conceit, and pompous expressions.

BOAT, f. [bar, Sax.] a small open vessel, commonly wrought or moved by oars, intended chiefly for rivers and lakes; when rowed by one man, called a sculler; when by two, named two, by the Londoners.

BOATMAN, or BOATSMAN, f. he that manages, or works a boat.

BOATSWAIN, f. [boatfswain, Sax.] an officer aboard a ship, who has charge of all her rigging, takes care of the long boat, and her furniture, steering her by himself; calls out the several gangs and their companies to their stations, and other offices, and punishes all offenders that are sentenced by the captain or a court-martial.

To BOB, v. a. [boho, Span.] to conquer, or cheat, or deprive by fraud and cunning. These senses seem now obsolete.

To BOB, v. z. applied to any body, which being hung or suspended by a string, plays backwards and forwards; to play or swing upon a thing. To give a person a hunch or push with the elbow, by way of signal, or to make him take notice of any particular.

BOB, f. a jewel or other ornament which hangs loose from the ear; the word or sentence repeated at the end of every verse or stanza of a song; a blow, hunch, or push with the elbow. Also, a short peruke.

BOBBIN, f. [bobine, Fr.] a small piece of wood, turned in the form of a cylinder, with a little borer jutting out at each end, and bored through its length to screw a small iron spindle, and to wind thread, worsted, silk, &c. upon; the small reel put in the hollow of a shuttle, round which the thread or silk is wound to make the woof; a small neat turned stick, round which the thread is wound to make bone lace with; likewise a round white tape, used by the ladies as a running string for their aprons, caps, &c.

BOBCHERRY, f. a game among children, wherein a cherry is suspended by a string, which they strive to bite, or get into their mouths.

BOBTAIL, f. a dog which has his tail cut off entirely, or very short; hence the adjective bobtailed.

BOCKLAND, f. in the Saxon time, was what we call freehold land, held by persons of rank by charter or deed in writing, by which name it was distinguished from Folk-land, or copy-hold-land, held by the common people without writing.

To BODE, v. a. [bodhan, Sax.] to convey the knowledge of some future event, applied to an omen; to portend, used both in a good and bad sense.

BOYEMENT, f. signs foreshewing some future event, used both of good and bad events.

BO'DGAM; a village in Sussex; nine miles N. W. of Winchester.

BO'DICE, f. stays, or a kind of waistcoat laced before, made of leather, and worn by country women next to their shifts.

BO'DILESS, a. [body and leafse, Sax.] that which has no body; incorporeal; immaterial.

BO'DILY, a. that which consists of, or belongs to, matter; that which belongs to the body. Real, opposed to chimerical.

BO'DILY, ad. in such a manner as to be united to the body, or matter; corporeally.

BO'DKIN, f. [bodkin, Brit.] an instrument with a small blade, and sharp point, to make holes with; an instrument formed like a needle with a long eye, used by females to run a ribbon or string in an apron or other parts of their dress, and formerly used in confining and tying up their hair.

BO'DMIN, a town of Cornwall, with a market on Saturdays; seated in a bottom between two high hills, which renders the air very unwholesome. It chiefly consists of one street, and the many decayed houses shew it has been a place of greater note; is a mayor-town, and sends two members to parliament, and formerly had the privilege of the coinage of tin. It is 32 miles N. E. of Falmouth, and 23½ W. by S. of London.

BO'DY, f. [bodig, Sax.] in Physics, a solid, extended; palpable substance, of itself merely passive, and indifferent either to motion or rest, but capable of any sort of motion, or any kind of forms; composed of particles infinitely hard, so as never to wear or break into pieces. In Anatomy, that part of an animal composed of bones, muscles, nerves, canals, and juices. The real existence of a thing, or its complexion, in opposition to an image, shadow, representation, or type. A collection of persons united by some common tie, or charter. Applied to dress, that part which covers the body. The materials which compose a stuff or other manufacture. Applied to liquors, strength. Substance. The main or chief part of a thing. A perfect system, or that which contains all the branches of a science; as, "A body of divinity." "A body of laws."

To BO'DY, v. a. to produce; to bring into being.

BO'DY-CLOATHS, f. the cloaths which cover a horse's body, when dieted, &c.

BOG, f. [bog, Irish] a moist rotten spot of earth, which sinks and gives way to the weight of the body, formed of grafs or plants putrified by some spring; a marsh or morass.

To BO'GGLE, v. n. [from bogil, Belg.] to start, run, or fly back at the sight of a terrifying object. Used with the particle at, to hesitate; to doubt. To dissemble; to be guilty of prevarication; or to play fast and loose; used with the particle with.

BO'GLER, f. a person full of doubts; a fearful or timorous person.

BOG-TROTTER, f. one who lives in a boggy country.

BO'GGY, a. abounding in bogs; partaking of of the nature or quality of a bog.

BOHEA, f. [Chin.] one of the best teas which comes from China, and is the second gathering; for all teas grow on the same plant, and differ only according to the season of gathering, and the method of drying. After it is gathered, it is dried in pans over a fire, and rolled up in the form we have it, by a person employed for that purpose; the juice or oil of the plant, which then moistens the hands, being of so corroding a nature, that it often eats into his flesh, and produces the same effect as a caustic. Bolca tea is very serviceable, and where it agrees with a person, excels all other vegetables for preventing sleepiness or dullness, for taking off weariness or fatigue; for raising the spirits; corroborating the memory, and other faculties which depend on a true temperature of the brain, if used chiefly in an afternoon, drank moderately, and not too hot, as is the general custom.

BOHEMIA, a kingdom of Europe, bounded on the N. by Misnia and Luface, on the E. by Silesia and Moravia, on the S. by Austria, and on the W. by Bavaria. It is about 200 miles in length, and 150 in breadth, and is very fertile in corn, saffron, hops, and pastures. In the mountains there are mines of gold and silver, and in some places they find diamonds, granates, copper, and lead. The Roman Catholic religion is the principal, though there are many Protestants. The chief rivers are only the Muldau, the Elbe, and the Oder. Their language is the Sclavonian, with a mixture of the German. The capital town, or city, is Prague. It is subject to the house of Austria.

To BOIL, v. n. [bouillir, Fr.] to be violently agitated with heat; to have its particles set into a violent motion by fire, and so to be able to scald any thing immersed in it, applied to water. Figuratively, hot; to move with a violent motion, like that of boiling water; to be placed in boiling water; to dress victuals by boiling. To boil over, applied to water or other fluids, to have its contents so rarefied by heat, as to take up a larger dimension than before, and to run over the sides of a vessel.

To BOIL, v. a. to dress victuals in water boiled over a fire.

BOILER, f. one who boils any thing; a vessel in which a thing is boiled.

BOILING, f. [in Physics] the particles of fuel passing the pores of the vessel, mix with the liquid, and meeting with a resistance there sufficient to destroy their motion, they communicate it to the water; hence arises a small intestine motion in the particles of that fluid; but the first cause still continuing, that motion is increased till the agitation of the water becomes sensible; but now the particles of fire, continually striking on those at the lowest surface of the water, will impel them, both by its impulse and by their own rarefaction, upwards, during which the particles at the upper surface must, by their own specific gravity, be descending towards the bottom; which will easily account for the surface of water's being sooner hot than at the bottom, and a person's being able to move a vessel of boiling water by putting his hand on the bottom, without receiving any hurt. The fire thus diminishing the specific gravity of water, so as to make it mount not only in water, but likewise air, we hence are enabled to account for the steam or smoak. The particles of air dilated and expanded thus by heat, moving upwards, will meet and coalesce in their ascent, by which means great quantities of water will rise and fall alternately, or in other words the water will boil; but the heat continuing, and the rarefaction increasing, the water will now be too much for the vessel to contain, and will consequently swell over its sides, which the vulgar call boiling over. It must however be added, that when water boils, it cannot be rendered hotter by any degree of fire whatever.

BOISTEROUS, a. violent, furious, vehement, or stormy. Roaring, applied to the wind. Figuratively, furious, warm, hot, outrageous. Applied to persons, violent.

BOISTEROUSLY, ad. in a violent manner; furiously.

BOISTEROUSNESS, f. the state or quality of being furious, tumultuous, turbulent, and stormy.

BOLD, a. [bold, Sax.] not hindered from an undertaking, either by the threats of others, or the difficulties attending it; daring, brave, courageous, fearless. Impudent, rude, applied to the behaviour. Licentious, or too free, applied to words. Level, smooth, even, applied by sailors to situation. To make bold, to take the liberty or freedom.

To BO'LDEN, v. a. to grow bold, to make bold; to dispel a person's fears or doubts.

BO'LD-FACED, a. impudent; not shewing any signs of shame by the countenance.

BO'LDLY, ad. confidently; with assurance; impudently.

BO'LDNESS, f. courage, intrepidity, undauntedness. The power to speak or do what we intend before others without fear or disorder. In a bad sense, a resolution to do or speak any thing before others, though conscious of its being wrong or incedent.

BOLE, f. [bolus, Lat.] a certain particular sort of earth, used by painters, moderately coherent, ponderous, soft, and not stiff or viscid, but in some degree ductile while moist; and composed of fine particles, smooth to the touch, friable, easily dissoluble in water, and freely subsiding from it. There are several sorts of Boles, as the white, yellow, red, brown, and grey; all which are prescribed in some case or other, in various distempers. Also, the body or trunk of a tree. Likewise a measure of corn, containing six bushels.

BO'LINGBROKE, or BU'LLINGBROKE, a town in Lincolnshire, with a market on Tuesdays.

Tuesday. It is feated at the spring-head of a river, which falls into the Witham on a low ground, and is a very ancient town, with the title of an earldom, though now but a mean place. It is 40 miles E. of Lincoln, and 131 S. by E. of London.

BOLLS, f. [Lat.] in Natural History, a great fiery ball, swiftly hurried through the air, generally drawing a tail after it.

BOLL, f. in Botany, a round stalk or stem.
THE BOLL, v. a. to rise in a stalk. "The flower bolls." Exod. ix. 14.

BOLNEY, a village in Suffex, nine miles N. of New Shoreham.

BLOGNA, an ancient, large, rich, and very handsome town of Italy, in the territory of the Church, and capital of the Bolognese; an archbishop's see, and an university. It contains about 80,000 inhabitants, and 169 churches. It is a place of great trade, which is in some measure owing to a canal that runs from this city into the river Po. The Reno, which runs near Bologna, runs 400 mills, which are employed in the silk-works; besides, they deal in wax, soap, hams, stockings, and even lap-dogs, which are greatly esteemed. It is feated at the foot of Modena, 15 S. W. of Ferrara, 48 N. of Florence, and 175 N. W. of Rome. Lon. 11. 30. E. Lat. 46. 27. N.

BOLOGNESE, a small province of Italy, in the territory of the Church, bounded on the N. by the Ferrarese, on the W. by the duchy of Modena, on the S. by Tuscany, and on the E. by Romania. It is watered by a great number of small rivers, which render the soil the most fertile of any in Italy. It produces abundance of all sorts of grain and fruits, particularly Muskadine grapes, which are in high esteem. There are also mines of steel and iron; and they fabricate large quantities of linen, silk-stockings, and cloth.

BOLSTER, f. [bolstre, Sax.] a long ticking sack filled with feathers, flocks, &c. made use of to support or raise a person's head in bed. Applied to dress, a pad made use of to hide some deformity. In Surgery, a compress or piece of linen doubled, laid, or bound upon a wound.

To BOLSTER, v. a. to support, to raise a person's head with a bolster. In Surgery, to lace or keep the lips of a wound close, by means of a compress. Figuratively, to support or maintain.

BOLT, f. [bolus, Belg.] a dart shot from a bow; lightning; a thunderbolt; a short piece of iron made to fasten doors; a spur; obstacle, impediment. Bolt-upright means upright as an arrow.

To BOLT, v. a. to fasten with a bolt; to sling out; to speak without hesitation. Figuratively, to fasten; to separate the fine from the coarse parts of a thing with a sieve, from winning. To separate truth from falshood by rigorous examination.

To BOLT, v. n. to spring out with suddenness; to ~~spring out with suddenness~~ of an arrow; to come in a hurry, or without due consideration. Used with the word out.

BOLT-ROPE, f. the rope on which the sail of a ship is fastened.

BOLTER, f. a sieve to separate finer from coarser parts, peculiarly applied to that made use of to separate flour from bran.

BOLT-HEAD, f. in Chemistry, a long straight-necked glass vessel used in distillations. See MATRASS.

BOLTING-HOUSE, f. a place where meal is sifted, or separated from the bran.

BOLTON, a town in Lancashire, with a market on Mondays. It is 11 miles N. W. of Manchester, and 239 N. N. W. of London.

BOLTON, a village in the West-Riding of Yorkshire, three miles N. E. of Skipton.

BOLTSPLIT, f. See BOWSPRIT.

BOLUS, f. [Lat.] in Pharmacy, a medicine made into a soft mass, about the size of a nutmeg, to be taken at once.

BOMB, f. [bombus, Lat.] formerly a loud noise. In Gunnery, a hollow ball of cast iron, filled with whole powder and nails, pieces of iron, &c. furnished with a vent for a fusee or wooden tube, replete with combustible matter, to be thrown out of a mortar-piece.

To BOMB, v. a. to attack with, or shoot bombs against; to bombard.

BOMBARD, f. [bombardus, Lat.] a piece of artillery used before the invention of cannon, exceeding short and thick.

To BOMBARD, v. a. to sling bombs into a town; to attack with bombs.

BOMBARDIER, f. the engineer who fires or directs the throwing of bombs out of the mortars.

BOMBARDMENT, f. an attack made upon a city, &c. by throwing bombs into it.

BOMBASINE, [bombazine] f. [bombasin, Fr.] a slight silken manufacture used for mourning.

BOMBAST, f. in Literature, high, pompous, and swelling expressions, without any meaning.

BOMBAST, a. pompous, sonorous, but conveying mean ideas.

BOMBAY, an island on the W. coast of the peninsula on this side the Ganges, in the East-Indies, seven miles in length, and 20 in circumference. It came to the English by the marriage of Charles II. with Catherine of Portugal. The ground is barren, and good water scarce. It was formerly counted very unhealthy; but, by draining the bogs, and other methods, the air is greatly altered for the better. This island is eminent for little else besides its fort and harbour. They have abundance of cocoa-nuts, but scarce any corn, or cattle, but what are brought from the adjacent country. The inhabitants are of several nations, and very numerous. It is very well situated for trade on the continent of India, and is one of the principal settlements the English have in this part of the world. The factory, and those depending upon them, are now a corporation, and governed by a mayor and and aldermen, as in England. It is 130 miles S. of Surat, and 200 N. of Coa. Lon. 73. 0. E. lat. 19. 0. N.

BOMB-CHEST, f. a chest filled with gunpowder and bombs, and placed underground in order to blow it up, together with those that are upon it.

BOMB-KETCH, or BOMB-VESSEL, f. a small vessel, strongly built, and strengthened with large beams, to bear the shock of a mortar at sea, when bombs are to be thrown from it into a town.

BONA FIDE, f. among Lawyers, signifies that such a thing was really done without fraud or deceit.

BONA-ROBA, f. a woman of the town; a prostitute.

BONA'SUS, f. [Lat.] in Natural History, a kind of buffalo, or wild bull.

BON-CHRETIEN, f. [Fr.] a pear, so called perhaps from the name of some gardener.

BOND, f. [bond, Sax.] any thing which confines a person's arms so, that he has not the free use of them; cords or chains; that which holds the parts of a thing together; union, joining, or connexion. Figuratively, captivity, imprisonment, loss of liberty; obligation. A tie, applied to alliance. In Law, a deed by which a person obliges himself to perform certain acts, under a penalty specified therein.

BOND, a. [gebonden, Sax.] not free; in a state of slavery.

BONDAGE, f. slavery; a state wherein a person is deprived of liberty.

BOND-MAID, f. a woman, or female slave.

BOND-MAN, f. a man slave.

BOND-SERVANT, f. a person who is under bond to serve his master, and is not at liberty to quit him.

BOND-SERVICE, f. the condition of a slave; slavery.

BOND-SLAVE, f. a person in inextricable slavery.

BONDS-MAN, f. a slave; a person who has given his bond as security for another.

BONDS-WOMAN, f. a woman slave; or one who has given her bond for security.

BONE, f. [ban, Sax.] in Anatomy, a white, hard, brittle, insensible substance, supporting and strengthening the body like beams and pillars in a building; defending some of the more essential parts, as the brain; giving shape to the human fabric, and assisting it in its motion. The bones consist of lamellæ running lengthwise, and arched over at their ends. The number of bones in a human fabric are reckoned to be 245, exclusive of the ossa sesamoidea, which amount to 48 more. To make no bones, is to make no scruple, alluding to the readiness with which a dog devours a bone. To give a person a bone to pick, a low phrase, for laying an obstacle in a person's way; or suggesting something which may perplex him. A bone of contention, a cause of strife.

To BONE, v. a. to take the bones out of the flesh.

BONE-LACE, f. a cheap sort of flaxen lace, wove by bobbins made out of bones.

BONELESS, a. that which has no bones. Applied to the gums, without teeth.

To BONESET, v. n. in Surgery, to set a broken bone in such a position, that the two ends may meet and grow together; to reduce a dislocated bone into its proper place.

BONESETTER, f. one who applies himself peculiarly to set broken or dislocated bones.

BONFIRE, f. [bon, Fr. and fire] a public fire, made by the populace on rejoicing days.

BONGRACE, f. [bonne grace, Fr.] a forehead-cloth, generally worn by infants.

BONNET, f. [Fr.] a covering for the head; a cap; or outward covering made of silk, worn instead of a hat by the ladies. In Fortification, a small work, or little ravelin, without a ditch, having a parapet of earth from 3 to 12 feet high, and from 30 to 36 feet thick. Bonnet à prêtre, or a priest's cap, an out-work with three salient angles, and two inwards. Among Sailors, small sails set on the courses, or fastened to the bottom of the mizen, mainsail, or foresail of a ship, when they are too narrow to clothe the mast, or in order to make more way in light winds or calm weather.

BONNILY, ad. in a gay manner; handsomely.

BONNNINESS, f. the quality of appearing gay, handsome, or plump.

BONNNY, a. [from bon, Fr.] gay, cheerful, handsome, young.

BONNY-CLABBER, f. four buttermilk.

BONUM MAGNUM, f. [Lat.] in Gardening, a species of pear.

BONY, a. having the properties, or consisting of bone; abounding in bone.

BOOBY, f. a dull, heavy, stupid, or contemptible fellow.

BOOK, f. [bor, Sax.] a composition of some person, designed to communicate something he has discovered or collected to the public, and of a length sufficient to make a volume; and a collection of papers sewed or bound, intended to be wrote on; the division of an author's subject. Used with the particle in, and personal pronouns his or my, to be much esteemed or valued by a person "I was so much in his books, that, &c." Addison. Without book, applied to the public delivery of a preacher, by the mere strength of memory.

To BOOK, v. a. to enter or write any thing in a book.

BOOK-BINDER, f. one who sews the sheets together, and fixes them to a cover of boards, or leather; &c.

BOOKFUL, a. one who is full of opinions gleaned from books, without having either digested what he has read, or been able to produce any thing of his own.

BOOKISH, a. very fond of books, study, or reading; pedantic. Generally used in a bad and boon, and as a term of contempt.

BOOKISHNESS, f. a great fondness for books; to make an application to study. Used sometimes as a reproach, or term of contempt.

BOOK-KEEPER, f. a clerk employed in a company-house to register the transactions daily carried on, and able to methodize them so that his patron may at any time know the true face of his affairs.

BOOK-KEEPING, f. the art of keeping accounts, or registering a person's transactions.

BOOK-LEARNED, a. conversant in books, but not in men; one that reads much, but is a pedant of no parts or invention.

BOOK-LEARNING, f. improvement or learning to be acquired from books, opposed to that which may be obtained by the exercise of a man's own faculties.

BOOK-WORM, f. in Natural History, a name of a worm which preys upon books. Figuratively, a person immoderately fond of reading; one who applies himself too intently to study.

BOOM, f. [boom, Sax.] among Mariners, a long pole used to spread out the clue of the trailing-sail, main-sail, or fore-sail; a pole, with ladders, or baskets, set as a mark to show the sailors how to steer in a channel, when the channel is overgrown; a bar of timber laid across a harbour, to secure its entrance.

BOON, f. [boon, Sax.] a gift, or present, obtained by having requested or sued for it.

BOON, a. [boon, Fr.] merry; gay. Generally used with the word companion.

BOOR, f. [boer, Belg.] a rude unpolished countryman; a clown.

BOORISH, a. without any breeding or politeness; rude; clownish.

BOORISHLY, adv. in an impolite, rude, and clownish manner.

BOORISHNESS, f. clownishness; rudeness of behaviour.

To BOOT, v. a. [boot, Belg.] to be of service or advantage; to profit; to enrich, serve, or accumulate.

BOOT, f. [boot, Sax.] gain, profit, or advantage. To boot, is an adverbial expression, signifying besides; over and above.

BOOT, f. [boote, Fr.] a leather-covering worn over the legs and feet, and used by those who sit on horseback; a leather receptacle under a coach-box, used for carrying boxes or other parcels.

To BOOT, v. a. to put on boots.

BOOTED, part. with boots on the legs; as boots.

BOOTCATCHER, f. the person who pulls off boots at an inn.

BOOTEL, See BOOTLE.

BOOTES, f. [Lat.] in Astronomy, the name of a northern constellation of fixed stars, consisting of 55 according to Flamsteed; one of which, called Arcturus, is of the first magnitude.

BOOTH, f. [butb, Brit.] a house built of boards, or boughs, to be used for a short time.

BOOT-HOSE, f. a stocking worn instead of boots; spatterdash; or Welch-boots.

BOOTLESS, a. that which will not produce any advantage or profit; unavailing; unsuccessful.

BOOT-TREE, f. an instrument consisting of two parts, when joined in the shape of a leg, with a groove cut in the middle, to receive a quoin, or wedge, which is driven in by main force, in order to stretch or widen a boot.

BOOTY, f. [buys, Belg.] that which is gained from an enemy in war; plunder; pillage; spoils; things acquired by robbery. To play booty, is to play or act unfairly.

BOPEEP, f. the act of thrusting the head in sight of a person, and drawing it back again immediately; sometimes used as a token of fear, and at others a sign of pleasantry.

BO'RABLE, a. that which may be bored.

BORACHIO, f. [borracbo, Span.] a drunkard.

BORAGE, f. a plant, the leaves of which are accounted cordial, and good for removing faintness; and therefore the tops are frequently put into wine and cool tankards.

BORAX, f. [Lat.] according to Quincy, is an artificial salt, prepared from sal-armenic, nitre, calcined tartar, sea-salt, and alum, dissolved in wine. According to others, it is a mineral salt, of great use in soldering and casting gold and other metals. It is used by dyers, and gives a gloss to silks. It is one of the ingredients in Glauber's salts.

BORDEL, f. [bordee, Teut.] a house of bad fame; or where women of the town are entertained.

BORDER, f. [bord, Teut.] the extremities or edge of any thing; the extremities or confines of a country; the outer and extreme parts of a garment or head-dress; a narrow slip of flowers at the extremity of a flower-bed, &c. in a garden.

To BORDER, v. n. to live near to the extremities or confines of a country; to be situated near. Figuratively, to approach. Used actively, to sew a narrow ornament at the extremities of a thing; to lie upon or near.

BORDERER, f. one who dwells near a place, or on the confines and extremity of a country.

BORDURE, f. in Heraldry, a cutting off from within the escutcheon all round it about one-fifth of the field, serving as a difference in a coat of arms, to distinguish families of the same name, or persons bearing the same coat. If the line, constituting the bordure, be straight, and the bordure be plain, then in blazoning you must only name the colour of the bordure.

To BORE, v. a. [borian, Sax.] to wear into a hole; to make a hole by any sharp-pointed instrument; to push forwards with violence; to make one's way, alluding to the strength required to make a hole with.

BORE,

BORE, f. the hole made by boring; the instrument used in boring a hole; the dimensions of a hole or cavity, applied peculiarly to the mouth of a cannon, or other piece of artillery.

BORE, the preter. of BEAR.

BO'REAL, a. [borealis, Lat.] northern.

BO'REAS, f. [Lat.] the north wind.

BO'RER, f. an instrument made use of to bore holes with; the person who bores.

To be BORN, v. n. pass. [from bear] to come into the world; used with the particles to, for, and of. "He was born to empire." PROV. He that is born to be hanged shall never be drowned.—He that was born under a three-halfpenny planet shall never be worth two-pence.

BORNE, the part. pass. of BEAR.

BORNEO, an island of Asia, in the East-Indies. It was discovered by the Portuguese in 1521; is about 1800 miles in circumference, and almost of a round form. The inland country is very mountainous; but towards the sea, low and marshy, occasioned by the great rains that fall eight months in the year. It produces rice and many sorts of fruits, besides several animals unknown to the Europeans. Pepper is peculiar to the countries about Bangoar; and to the westward they have small diamonds of a yellow water. Sambals, another part of this island, produces gold, pearls, and bees-wax, which last is used instead of money. The people, in general, are very swarthy, but not quite black, and they go almost naked. There are Mahometans on the sea-coast; but all the rest are Gentoos, or Pagans. The East-India company have had factories here; but differences arising between them and the natives, they have been all driven away, or murdered: however, the English have still a liberty of trading to the island. The sea-coast is usually overflowed half of the year; and when the waters go off, the earth is covered with ouse and mud; for which reason some of the houses are built on floats, and others on high pillars, or posts. The capital town is of the same name, and large and populous, with a good harbour, and seated on the North side of the island, 42 miles S. W. of Bacasa. Lon. 111. 27. E. Lat. 4. 55. N.

BO'ROUGH, [burro] f. [borboe, Sax.] a town with a corporation. The word originally signifies a company, consisting of ten families, which were bound together as each other's pledge. Afterwards borough came to signify a town, having a wall or some kind of defence about it. Borough is a place of safety and privilege; and some are called free boroughs, and the tradesmen in them free burgesses, from a freedom they had granted them originally, to buy and sell without interruption, and exempt from toll. Borough is now particularly appropriated to such towns or villages as send burgesses or representatives to parliament, whether they be incorporated or not. The whole number of boroughs amounts to 149. Royal boroughs are corporations in Scotland, made for the advantage of trade, having commissioners to represent them in parliament. Head-borough, the president or chairman of a hundred, chosen to speak, or transact affairs in their name. In parishes, a kind of head-constable, having others for his assistants.

BO'ROUGH-ENGLISH, f. a customary descent of lands or tenements, in certain places, by which they descend to the youngest instead of the eldest son; or, if the owner have no issue, to the younger instead of the elder brother. This custom is not frustrated by the devise of a will, or a feoffment at common law to the contrary. The reason of this custom, according to Littleton, is, because the youngest is presumed, in law, to be the least able to provide for himself.

BO'ROUGHBRIDGE, [Burrowbridge], a town in the North Riding of Yorkshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the S. side of the river Your, over which there is a handsome stone-bridge. The town is not large, but commodious; and sends two members to parliament. It is 17 miles North of York, and 217½ N. by W. of London.

To BO'RROW, [borro] v. a. [borigan, Sax.] the taking money or other things of another, on condition of returning it again. Figuratively, to take something which belongs to another; to assume a property which belongs to something else. PROV. He that goes a borrowing goes a borrowing.

BO'RROWER, f. a person who takes money, &c. of another, on condition of returning it again; he that uses what is another's as if it were his own. Figuratively, he that adopts the sentiments of another, without acknowledging that they are so, applied to writings.

BO'SCAGE, f. [boscage, Fr.] a place set with trees; a grove or thicket; woods or woodland. In Painting, a picture or landscape, representing woods.

BO'SKY, a. [bosque, Fr.] abounding with wood; woody.

BO'SOM, [biscom] f. [bosome, Sax.] the breast; that part of the body containing the heart. Figuratively, the embrace of the arms holding any thing to the breast; the middle or innermost part of any inclosure. In Composition, it implies favourite; any thing near or dear to a person, or that of which he is peculiarly fond; thus bosom-interest, bosom-friend, bosom-secret.

To BO'SOM, [biscom] v. a. to inclose in the bosom. Figuratively, to keep secret; to surround.

BO'SON, f. a corruption of BOATSWAIN, which see.

BO'SPHORUS, f. [βῶς; and πόρος, Gr.] in Geography, a narrow strait or arm of the sea, which it might be supposed an ox could swim over; at present confined to that of Thrace, called the straits of Constantinople; and the Cimmerian or Scythian Bosphorus, called the straits of Kapha, or Kiderleri.

BO'SQUETS, f. [boscetto, Ital.] in Gardening, small groves, or compartments, formed of trees, shrubs, or tall-growing plants, planted planted in quarters, either disposed in regular rows, or in a wild and accidental manner.

BOSS, f. [bois, Fr.] a stud or ornament fixed above the rest of the work; a shining prominence; the prominent part, or that which sticks out of the middle of a thing, or &c.

BOSSAGE, f. in Architecture, a projecting line laid rough in a building, to be afterwards carried into mouldings, arms, &c.

BOSSLEY, or BOSS-CASTLE, a town in Cornwall, whose market is discontinued. It sends two members to parliament. It is seated on the sea-coast, 17 miles N. W. of Looe, and 293 W. by S. of London.

BOSTON, a town of Lincolnshire, with two markets, on Wednesdays and Saturdays. It is commodiously situated on both sides of the river Witham, over which it has a handsome, high wooden-bridge; and being not far from the sea into the sea, enjoys a good trade. It is a large handsome town, with a spacious market-place; as also a high steeple, which is reputed to be the best built structure in the county; and serves as a land-mark for sailors. It is 27 miles S. E. of Lincoln, and 115 N. from London.

BOSTON, the capital of Massachusetts-Bay, one of the Thirteen United States of North-America, seated on a peninsula, at the bottom of a fine bay, covered by small islands and rocks, and defended by a castle and platform of guns, which render the approach of an enemy very difficult. It lies in the form of a crescent about the harbour; and the country beyond rising gradually, affords a delightful prospect. There is only one safe channel to approach the harbour, and that so narrow, that three ships can scarcely sail a-breast; but within the harbour there is room for 500 sail to lie at anchor. At the bottom of the bay is a pier, near 1200 feet in length, which ships of the greatest burden may come up close to; and on the North side there are warehouses for the merchants. The streets are handsome, particularly that extending from the pier to the town-house. There are ten churches, of all denominations, of which six belong to the Independents. At each end of the town is a battery of eight guns; and, about a league from it, a beautiful strong castle, with a large prison in time of war. Lon. 1.24. W. lat. 42.4. N.

BOSWORTH, a town in Leicestershire, seated on a pretty high hill, in a country, fertile in corn and grass; and famous for a bloody battle fought here between Richard III. and Henry earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. wherein Richard lost his life and crown. It is 13 miles S. W. of Leicester, and 106½ N. N. W. of London.

BOTANIC, or BOTANICAL, a. [from botanis, Gr.] that which relates to herbs; skilled in herbs.

BOTANIST, f. one who is skilled in the nature of plants, and their culture; one who applies himself peculiarly to the study of vegetables.

BOTANOLOGY, f. [βοτανολογια, Gr.] a discourse on plants.

BOTANY, f. [βοτανη, Gr.] the science of herbs and plants. This science was very little cultivated till Bauhine arose in the 16th century, and both reduced it to method, and increased the number of its objects.

BOTCH, f. [bozza, Ital.] a swelling which afterwards encrusts, discolours the skin, and causes a disagreeable idea. Figuratively, the part of any work clumsy or ill-finished, so as to disgrace the rest; something added or joined to a thing in a clumsy manner.

To BOTCH, v. a. [boetsjen, Belg.] to mend or patch old cloaths in a clumsy manner. Figuratively, to mend any thing in an awkward manner; to join things together which do not suit; or agree with one another. To mark with pustules, scabs, or blotches.

BOTCHER, f. one who mends, or sews patches on old cloaths, in a clumsy manner; and is the same in respect to a taylor, as a cobbler to a shoemaker. Figuratively, a person who performs any thing in a clumsy and bungling manner.

BOTCHY, a. marked with blotches, or running sores.

BOTH, a. [battha, Sax.] when applied to two persons, or other things as concerned together, it unites them into one collective idea, which implies the two. When followed by and, it implies either, or one as well as the other. "Both morning and afternoon." Sidney.

BOTRYOID, a. [βοτρυοειδης, Gr.] in shape like a bunch of grapes.

BOTS, f. [has no singular] [from bitan, Sax.] a species of small worms breeding in the entrails of horses.

BOTTISDALE, a town in Suffolk, whose market is on Wednesday. Distant 91 miles from London.

BOTTLE, f. [bouteille, Fr.] a vessel with a narrow mouth to contain liquor. When made of leather called a leathern bottle; when of glass, a glass bottle. Figuratively, a quart, bottles generally holding that quantity; a bundle of grass or hay, derived from the French bouteau, a bundle. When compounded with other words, it signifies drinking; as a bottle companion.

To BOTTLE, v. a. to put liquor into bottles. Used with the particle off, to draw out of another vessel into a bottle.

BOTTLE-NOSED, a. one who has a large nose, very big towards the end.

BOTTLE-SCREW, f. a spiral wire, made use of to pull a cork out of a bottle.

BOTTOM, f. [botom, Sax.] the lowest part of a thing. Applied to a river, the bed of earth, or gravel over which the water glides; a valley, dale, or lower ground. Figuratively, foundation; hence, to be at the bottom, sometimes implies thoroughly. To be at the bottom, to be concerned in, to have a part or share. A ship, or vessel; hence, to embark on the same bottom, is to venture in one bottom, to run a risque together in the same thing. The bottom of a lane; lage, is the lowest part. The bottom of beer, the dregs. Applied to thread, a small ball, from botreau, Fr. a heap or little bundle.

To BO'TTOM, v. a. to build upon as a foundation, principle, or support; to wind thread into a ball. Used neuterly, to be built on; to be supported by.

BO'TTOMED, a. having a bottom; usually compounded with some other word, as flat-bottomed boats.

BO'TTOMLESS, a. without a bottom; prodigious deep; that which cannot be fathomed. Figuratively, boundless, insatiable.

BO'TTOMRY, f. in Trade, the borrowing money upon the keel or bottom of a ship, whereby, if the money be not repaid at the day appointed, the ship becomes the property of the creditor; likewise the lending money, to be paid at the return of the ship; in consideration of which, though the interest demanded be 20, 30, 40 per cent. and upwards, it is not esteemed usury; because if the ship perishes, the creditor loses his money.

To BOUGE, v. n. [bouger, Fr.] to swell out, BOUGH; [pron. bou] an arm or large shoot of a tree bigger than a branch, yet not always distinguished from it.

BOUGHT, præter of BUY, and pron. baut. BOUILLE'E, or BOUI'LON, f. [Fr.] in Cookery, any thing made of boiled meat; broth, or soup.

To BOUNCE, v. n. to strike against a thing with such force as to rebound back; making a noise at the same time. To spring with force, applied to the spouting of beer out of a bottle. In familiar language, to make a noise, bully, or hector; to be strong mad and active.

BOUNCE, f. a smart, violent, and sudden stroke; a sudden crack, or noise, applied to the explosion of a gun, or the bursting of a bladder, &c. In low language, a threat, or boast.

BOUNCE, f. one who is noisy in his own praise, or in his threats against another; a bully; a boaster.

BOUND, f. [from bondir, Fr.] a restraint; a leap, jump, or spring; the flying back of a thing which is struck against another with great force.

To BOUND, v. n. [bondir, Fr.] to jump, spring, or move on forwards by leaps; to fly back again when struck against a thing with violence. Used actively, to make a thing leap, or mount by fits from the earth, in its motion.

BOUND, part. pass. of BIND.

BOUND, a. [from bindan, Sax.] destined, intended, or on one's way to a certain place. Used with for, and peculiar to seamen.

BOU'NDARY, f. the extremities, or utmost limits of a thing or country.

BOUNDEN, part. pass. of BIND.

BOUNDING-STONE, f. a stone played with, and made to bound from the earth, when flung from the hand.

BOUNDLESS, a. that which is restrained by no limits, confined by no power; or satisfied by no enjoyment.

BOUNDLESSNESS, f. the quality of being without any restraint; insatiableness; infinity.

BOUNTEOUS, a. liberal, or conferring benefits largely, and from a goodness and kindness of nature.

BOUNTEOUSLY, ad. in a liberal manner; conferring benefits generously, and from a principle of good nature.

BOUNTEOUSNESS, f. the quality of conferring benefits or favours, from a principle of kindness, including the idea of superiority.

BOUNTIFUL, a. conferring favours without restraint, and from an internal principle of kindness. Applied to things, very much abounding in valuable products.

BOUNTIFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to confer favours or benefits with generosity, and from an inward principle of kindness. Applied to things, plentifully producing what is of service or use.

BOUNTIFULNESS, f. a great propensity to bestowing favours, or conferring benefits; generosity, munificence.

BOUNTY, f. [bonité, Fr.] the conferring benefits on others, distinguished from charity, because exercised towards objects that are not highly necessitous; and including the idea of a gift bestowed by a superior.

To BOU'RGEON, v. n. [pron. boorjon] [bourgeois, Fr.] to sprout; to shoot into branches; to produce buds.

BOURN, a town of Lincolnshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated near a spring called Burnwell-head, from which proceeds a river that runs through the town. It is a pretty large place, and has a good market for corn and provisions. It is noted for the coronation of king Edmond. It is 17 miles N. of Peterborough, 35 S. of Lincoln, and 97 N. of London.

BOURN, [boorn] f. [borne, Fr.] the extremities, bounds, or limits of a country, or piece of land.

BOURN, [burn] f. [boorn, Sax.] a brook or torrent; when added to the name of places, it implies, that they are situated near or upon brooks.

To BOUSE, [booze] v. n. [buysen, Belg.] to drink immoderately; to tope.

BOU'SY, [boozey] a. intoxicated with drink.

BOUT, f. [botta, Ital.] a turn; implying as much of an action as is performed without intermission; at once; a part of any action which is carried on by successive intervals.

BOW, [Bō] a town in Devonshire, whose market is on Thursday. Distant 188 miles from London.

BOW, [Bō] a village in Middlesex, situated 2½ miles S. from London.

To BOW, [ow pron. like that in now or bow] v. a. [byegan, Sax.] to bend the body in token of respect; to listen to, joined with the ear and the particle down. "Bow down thine ear to the poor." Ecclesi. iv. 8. To press, or crush. Actively, to bend, or to bend to make a bow; to stoop, or incline the body towards the earth. To be overpowered, or to stoop keep under the pressure of affliction.

BOW

BOW, [the ow pron. like that in bow, or now] f. a sloping of the head and inclination of the body, by way of compliment.

BOW, [pron. bo, as if the w was dropped] [scav. Brit.] f. a warlike weapon or instrument made of tough wood, the extremities of which are tied by a string, which being drawn towards the body of a person, bends the wood, and by its elasticity forces an arrow placed on the string, with great violence, to a great distance; a bending piece of wood furnished with hair, and used in playing on stringed instruments; the loop of a string tied in a knot; a joint, or bending piece of wood. Applied to a ship, that part which begins at the loof and composing part of the stem, and ends at the forward part of the forecastle. In Building, bow is a beam of wood or brass, with three long fibres, which directs a lathe of wood or steel in any arch, used commonly in drawing draughts of ships, projections of the sphere, or long arches. Paov. A bow long bent at last wears out. This proverb may be applied both to the body and mind: too much labour and study weaken and impair both the one and the other.

BOW-BENT, [bi-bent] a. bent like a bow, or in the form of a bow; crooked; crooked.

To BOWEL, [the ow is pron. as in bow] v. a. to pierce the bowels; to penetrate deep, or to the bottom of a thing.

BOWELS, [bowels] f. [boyaux, Fr.] the smaller vessels, or organs within the body; the pit. Figuratively the inner part of any thing. Tenderness, pity, or compassion.

BOWER, f. [bow-er] an arbour, or place beyond the branches of green trees, bent or arched at the top; the anchor of a ship, so called from its being in the bow of a ship, and thus pronounced bo-er.

To BOWER, v. a. to make a bower; to enclose in a bower. Figuratively, to inclose.

BOWERY, a. full of bowers; shady and inclosed like a bower.

BOWL, f. [pron. bole] [bowlin, Brit.] a drinking vessel, rather wide than deep, distinguished from a tea-cup by its greater diameter, and from a drinking cup, because that is rather deep than wide; the hollow, roundish part of any thing which can hold liquor.

BOWL, f. [the ow pron. as in cow] [boile, Fr.] rounded or spherical piece of wood, which may be rolled along the ground.

To BOWL, v. a. to roll a bowl along the ground; to roll a bowl at any mark.

BOWLER-STONES, f. lumps or fragments of flint or marble, broke from cliffs, moved by the action of water.

BOW-LEGGED, [bi-legged] a. having round legs, or such as resemble a bow, when bent.

BOWLER, f. [the ow pron. as in now] he that rolls a bowl; one that plays with, or at bowls.

BOWLING-GREEN, f. a piece of ground overgrown with grass of a true level or horizontal surface, kept close cut, and frequently rolled, for playing at bowls.

BOY

BO'WLINE, [bo-line] f. a rope fastened to the middle part of the outside of a sail.

BO'WMAN, [bo-man] f. one who shoots with a bow.

BO'WSHOT, [bo-shor] f. the distance to which an arrow can fly when shot from a bow.

BO'WSPRIT, or BO'LTSPRIT, [bo-sprit] f. a kind of mast at the prow of a vessel, resting slopeways on the head of the main stern, fastened by the forestay and to the partners of the foremast, serving to carry the sprit, and sprit-top-sail and jack-staff. Its length should be two-thirds of the main-mast, and its thickness equal to the main.

BO'W-STRING, [bo-string] f. the string by which a bow is bent.

BO'WYER, [bo-yer] f. one who shoots with a bow; an archer; a person who makes bows.

BOX, f. [box, Sax.] its leaves are pinnated and evergreen; it has male and female flowers on the same plant, the former having a three-leaved, and the female a four-leaved, concave empelment. Linnæus ranges it in the fourth section of his 23d class, from its having male and female flowers on the same plant, and the male flowers having four stamina. There are three species. Its wood is yellowish, hard, solid, even, very heavy, and takes a good polish.

BOX, f. [box, Sax.] a case made of wood, or other substance, to hold any thing; distinguished from a chest, as the less is from the greater; the case of a mariner's or sea compass; the inner case of a watch; a chest in which money is put: hence a Christmas-box, which signifies both the chest into which the money is put, and the money then collected. The first story of seats in a play-house, formed into small square rooms, and built either on the stage, or round the extremities of the pit.

BOX, f. [bock, Brit.] a blow on the face with the hand.

To BOX, v. a. to fight with the fists; to strike on the head or face with the hand.

BO'XEN, a. made of box. Applied to colour, of a box colour.

BO'XER, f. one who is skilled in fighting with the fists; one who fights with his fist.

BO'XTED, a village in Suffolk, five miles N. E. of Clare.

BOY, f. [the etymology uncertain] a name applied to persons of the male sex till they are fifteen years old. Used figuratively for a person who wants the sedateness and discretion of manhood, and is then a term of reproach.

BO'YHOOD, f. the state wherein a person is stiled a boy, extending from infancy to youth, or till a person is fifteen years old.

BO'YISH, a. like a boy with respect to inexperience, want of sedateness, discretion; childish; trifling; puerile.

BO'YISHLY, ad. in a childish, wantonly trifling manner.

BO'YISHNESS, f. that quality which is predominant predominant in boys; want of thought, sedateness, or discretion; childishness; trifling.

BRA'BBLE, f. [brabblen, Belg.] a quarrel; a clamorous noisy contest.

To BRA'BBLE, v. n. to contest a thing with great clamour; to quarrel, to clamour.

BRA'BBLER, f. a clamorous, quarrelsome, turbulent, or noisy fellow.

To BRACE, v. a. [embrasser, Fr.] to tie, or wind bandages tight round a thing. To strain or stretch. To brace the yard, in Sea Language, is to bring the yard to either side, so as to make it stand square or even across the ship.

BRACE, f. a bandage; that which keeps the parts of a thing close together; that which is used to keep a thing stretched. In Printing, a crooked line, denoting that the members of a sentence ought to be joined together, but not taken separately, marked thus } and used by poetical writers at the end of a triplet, or three lines which rhyme to each other. In Architecture, a piece of timber formed with bevel joints, and used to keep a building steady. In Sea affairs, ropes fastened to the yard-arms of a ship, and used to square the yards, and bring them to any position. Applied to a coach, the thick thongs of leather on which the body hangs.

BRACE, f. [never used with an s at the end for the plural, and is a collective noun, which seems to have only the singular] in Hunting, two, or a pair; perhaps so called from their being tied together.

BRA'CED, a. in Heraldry, the intermingling chevrons at the base of an escutcheon.

BRA'CELET, f. [bracelet, Fr.] an ornament worn round the wrist; a piece of defensive armour for the arm.

BRA'CKER, f. that which braces, or keeps a thing tight. In Surgery, a bandage.

BRA'CHIAL, [brachialis] a. [from brachium, Lat.] that which belongs to, or is situated in, the arm.

BRA'CHIMANS, a sect of Indian philosophers, known to the ancient Greeks by the name of Gymnosophists. The ancient Brachmans lived upon herbs and pulses, and abstained from every thing that had life in it. They lived in solitude, without matrimony, and without property, earnestly wishing for death, and considered life only as a burden. The modern Brachmans are one of the casts or tribes of the Banians; they are their priests, and perform their office of praying and reading the law, with several mimical gestures, and a kind of quavering voice. They believe, that in the beginning nothing but God and water existed; and that the Supreme Being, desirous to create the world; caused the leaf of a tree, in the shape of a child playing with its great toe in its mouth, to float on the water. From its naval there issued out a flower, whence Erana drew his original, who was entrusted by God with the creation of the world, and presides over it with an absolute sway. They make no distinction between the souls of men and brutes; but say the dignity of the human soul consists in being placed in a better body, and having more room to display its faculties. They allow of rewards and punishments hereafter; and have so great a veneration for cows, that they look upon themselves as blessed, if they can but die with the tail of one of them in their hand. They are skillful Arithmeticians, and calculate, with great exactness, the eclipses of the sun and moon. They are remarkable for their religious austerities; one of them has been known to make a vow to wear about his neck a heavy collar of iron for a considerable time; another, to chain himself by the foot to a tree, with a firm resolution to die in that place; and another, to walk in wooden shoes stuck full of nails on the inside. Their divine worship consists chiefly of professions made in honour of their deities. They have a college at Banara, a city situated on the Ganges.

BRACHY'GRAPHY, [brachygrafy] f. [βραχυς and γραφω, Gr.] the art of short hand, or writing a thing by characters in a shorter time and compass than by the letters of the common alphabet.

BRA'CKET, f. [braccetta, Ital.] pieces of wood, carved or plain, fixed against a wall, to support something.

BRA'CKISH, a. [brack, Belg.] that which is somewhat salt; of the taste of sea water.

BRA'CKISHNESS, f. the disagreeable saltiness which is found on tasting sea-water.

BRA'CKLEY, a town of Northamptonshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on a branch of the river Ouse, and is a corporation, containing two churches. It had formerly a college, now turned into a free-school, and sends two members to parliament. It is 18 miles S. W. of Northampton, and 64 N. W. of London.

BRAD, f. [Sax.] when added to the names of places, signifies their broadness; thus Bradford signifies a broad ford.

BRAD, f. a kind of nails used in building, without a shoulder over their shank, or a spreading head like other nails, pretty thick towards the upper end, that the top may be driven into, and buried in the board they fasten.

BRA'DFIELD, a town in Essex, with a market on Thursdays. It is 16 miles N. of Chelmsford, and 63 N. E. of London.

BRA'DFIELD, a village in the West-Riding of Yorkshire, and in the wapentake, of Strasforth.

BRA'DFORD, a town in Wiltshire, with a market on Mondays. It is seated on the river Avon, on the descent of a hill, 11 miles W. of the Devizes, and 102 W. of London.

BRA'DFORTH, a town in the West-Riding of Yorkshire. It is seated on a branch of the river Aire, 36 miles S. W. of York, and 201 N. N. W. of London.

BRA'DNINCH, a town of Devonshire, which formerly had a market on Saturdays, and was a considerable place before a fire happened which burnt it to the ground. It is 17 miles North of Exeter, and 167 W. by N. of London.

12 miles

To BRAG, v. a. [braggeren, Belg.] to display an advantage with great pomp and vanity; to boast.

BRAG, f. a pompous or proud display of any advantage a person possesses. Figuratively, the thing itself which causes pride or boasting; glory. PROV. Brag's a good dog, but that he has lost his tail.—Brag's a good dog if he will let us, but he dar: not bite.

BRAGGADOCHIO, f. a person who vainly sets forth his own good qualities, or displays them more than they deserve.

BRAGGART, f. [braggeret, Teut.] a person who boasts of his own abilities too much.

BRAGGART, a. proud, conceited, vain.

BRAgger, f. one who displays his pretended abilities in all the pomp of vain and extravagant language.

BRA'GLESS, a. without a boast; without being boasted of.

To BRAID, v. a. [brædan, Sax.] to weave together; to plait.

BRAID, f. a lock of hair, or any thing collected by weaving or plaiting; a small narrow kind of lace, used for ornamenting women's shoes, bed-curtains, &c.

BRAILS, f. small ropes used in furling the sails upon. To haul up the brails, or brail up the sail, implies that the sail is to be haled up, so as only to be furled, or bound close to the yard.

BRAIN, f. [brægen, Sax.] in Anatomy, the large, soft, whitish substance, filling the inside of the cranium, or skull; wherein all the organs of sense terminate, and wherein the soul is said to reside. It is divided into the cerebrum, cerebellum, medulla oblongata, or medulla spinalis. The brain is much larger in men than in any other animals, and is generally larger in such other animals as shew the greatest degree of sagacity, such as monkeys, &c.

To BRAIN, v. a. to dash the brains out; to kill by dashing the brains out.

BRAINLESS, a. without brains. Figuratively, silly, foolish, thoughtless.

BRAIN-PAN, f. the skull, so called from its containing the brains.

BRAINSICK, a. disordered in the brain. Figuratively, giddy, thoughtless, foolish, mad.

BRAINTREE, a town in Essex, with a market on Wednesdays. It is a large town, seated on a hill, and has a good market for corn and provisions. It has one church, an Assembly and a Quakers meeting-house; and is 24 miles N. E. of London.

BRAKE, f. [of uncertain etymology] a thicket of brambles, or thorns.

BRAKE, f. [from bræcan, Sax.] a wooden mallet, used in beating or dressing hemp; the handle of a ship's pump; a baker's kneading-rough; a sharp bit or snaffle for horses.

BRAKY, a. abounding in brakes; or thickets of thorns.

BRAMBER, a town of Sussex, formerly of some account, but has neither market nor mint; however, it sends two members to parliament. It is 19 miles S. of West-Grinstead, and 49 S. S. W. of London.

BRAMBLE, f. a wild prickly shrub; a blackberry, dewberry, and raspberry bush.

BRAMPTON, a town of Cumberland, with a market on Tuesdays. It is seated on the river Ithin, not far from the Picts wall. It is at present but a small place; and near it, on the top of a high hill, is a fortified trench, called the mote. It is 8 miles N. E. of Carlisle, and 31½ N. W. of London.

BRAMPTON, a village in Herefordshire, one mile S. of Ross.

BRAN, f. [brann, Brit.] the husk of corn, separated after grinding from the flour.

BRANCH, f. [branche, Fr.] in Botany, the arm, or part of a tree which sprouts from the trunk. Figuratively, any detached part from a whole. A section or subdivision, applied to writings. Any part which is joined to another, like a branch to a tree. A part of a pedigree or family. In Hunting, the antlers or shoots of a stag's horns.

To BRANCH, v. a. to divide into separate divisions like branches. Figuratively, to adorn with needlework, representing branches. Used neuterly, to shoot into branches: to separate, or divide a subject into several parts, used with the particle out. To speak largely, to expatiate. To have horns shooting out into antlers.

BRANCHLESS, a. without branches. Without honour, alluding to the branches of a pedigree.

BRANCHY, a. full of branches; spreading.

BRAND, f. [brand, Sax.] a stick lighted, or fit to be set on fire at one end. Figuratively, a thunderbolt. A mark made on the flesh of a criminal by a burning iron; anciently a sword.

To BRAND, v. a. [branden, Belg.] to mark with a brand, or burning iron. Figuratively, to reproach as infamous; to stigmatize.

BRANDENBURG, THE MARCHE OF, a large country of Germany, bounded on the N. by Pomerania and Mecklenburg, on the E. by Poland, on the S. by Silesia, Lutace, Upper Saxony, and Magdeburg, and on the W. by the territory of Lauenburg. It is divided into five principal parts, namely, the Old Marche, Pregnitz, the Middle Marche, Uckermark, and the New Marche. Berlin is the capital town; and the principal rivers are the Elbe, the Havel, the Sprey, the Ucker, the Oder, and the Warthe; the court is Calvinist, but the greatest part of the inhabitants are Lutherans; however, the Papists are tolerated here. We must not confound the electorate of Brandenburg with the countries subject to the Elector of Brandenburg, which comprehends, besides the Marche, the Farther Pomerania, the dutchies of Magdeburg and Cleves, the principalities of Halberstadt and Minden, the counties of Marck, Ravensburg, Lingen, Maers, and Tecklingburg, and lately Silesia and West Friesland.

To BRANDISH, v. a. [from brand] to wave, shake, or flourish a weapon. Figuratively, to make a parade, or flourish with.

BRANDON,

BRA'NDON, a town of Suffolk, which had a market on Thursdays, now discontinued. It is seated upon the little river Ouse, over which it has a bridge and a ferry at a mile's distance; whence it is divided into Brandon and Brandon-Ferry, which last has the most business, because commodities are brought hither from the Isle of Ely. It is 12 miles N. of Bury, and 78½ N. E. of London.

BRA'NDY, f. [brandevin, Fr.] in Distillation; a proof spirit, obtained from real wines, or fermented juices of grapes.

BRA'NGLE, f. squabble; wrangle.

To BRA'NGLE, v. n. to wrangle; to squabble.

BRANK, f. buckwheat.

BRA'NNY, a. like bran, having the appearance of bran.

BRASI'L, or BRAZI'L, f. [pron. brasset] a heavy, dry, and very hard wood, so called because it is supposed to have come originally from Brazil in S. America. That of Pernambuco is the best. The tree grows commonly in dry and barren places, among rocks, becomes very thick and tall; the branches are long and large, the leaves small, of a fine bright green, resembling those of box, but somewhat longer.

BRASI'L, a large country of S. America, with the title of a principality, which is given to the presumptive heir of the crown of Portugal. The most Eastern part of S. America is comprehended under this name, and lies between the equinoctial line and the tropic of Capricorn, being about 1560 miles in length, and 1000 in breadth; but, measuring along the coast, it is near 3000 miles long, and is bordered with mountains that open from time to time, and form good harbours, where vessels may lie in safety. It was discovered by chance in 1500; for Alvarez Cabral, a Portuguese, was forced upon it by a tempest; and the kings of Portugal have continued masters of it ever since. Some time after the revolt of the United Provinces from the king of Spain, the Dutch drove away the Spaniards, to whom it then belonged; but the Portuguese, in their turn, obliged the Dutch to leave it in 1655. The air of this country, though within the torrid zone, is pretty temperate and wholesome; inasmuch that people live there a long while. The waters in general are very good, and the soil fertile and excellent: there comes more sugar from thence than all other parts of the world: besides this, it produces tobacco, Indian corn, several sorts of fruits, and medicinal drugs. The wood brought from Brasil, and hence so called, is of very great use in dying red; and, within the country, there is gold, and several sorts of precious stones: likewise the cattle, carried over from Europe, increase prodigiously, inasmuch that there is no want of provisions. The Portuguese chiefly inhabit the sea-coast, for they have not penetrated far into the country. The inland parts are full of people of different languages; but they all agree in wearing no sort of cloaths. They are of a copper colour, with long coarse black hair on their heads, but without any of the other parts of their bodies, like the rest of the Americans. They are strong, lively, and gay; and, as they are subject to few diseases, they live a long time. They love to adorn themselves with feathers, and they are very fond of feasts, at which they dance and skip about immoderately. They have no temples, nor any other sign of religion; and they make no manner of scruple to marry their nearest relations. Some pretend that they are cannibals, and eat those that they have taken in war; but this is a fable. They have huts made of the branches of trees, and covered with palm-tree leaves. Their furniture consists chiefly in their hammocks, and dishes, or cups, made of calabashes, painted without of a red colour, and black within: their knives are made of a sort of stone and split canes; and they have likewise baskets of different sizes, chiefly made of palm-tree leaves. Their arms are only bows, arrows, and wooden clubs. When they travel, they fasten their hammocks between two trees, and sleep all night therein. The Portuguese divide Brazil into fifteen governments or captainaries, eight of which belong to the King of Portugal, and the rest to great men, who have peopled them at their own expense. They are all under a Vice-roy, who resides at St. Salvadore, the capital of the whole country.

BRASS, f. [bras, Sax.] a facitious yellow metal, made of copper, melted with lapis calaminaris. The calamine is first calcined and ground to powder, then mixed with charcoal dust, and to 10lb. of this mixture is added five of copper, which being placed in a wind furnace 11 or 12 hours, the copper imbibes about one third of the weight of the calamine, and is converted into brass. Brass is used figuratively for impudence.

BRA'SSY, a. partaking of brass; hard as brass.

BRAT, f. [bratt, Sax.] a child, used to express contempt. Figuratively, products or effects.

BRAVA'DO, f. [bravada, Span.] a proud boast; haughty defiance, or challenge.

BRAVE, a. not daunted or terrified with dangers or difficulties; ready to attempt any dangerous enterprise; grand, or noble. Sometimes applied in an indeterminate manner, to express good or great in the additive degree.

BRAVE, f. [brave, Fr.] a person who is daring beyond the rules of discretion; or bold to excess. A bold defiance or challenge.

To BRAVE, v. a. to undertake a thing notwithstanding the dangers with which it is attended: to defy contemptuously; to provoke a person to resentment; to bid defiance to; applied, in this last sense, to inanimate things with great beauty.

BRA'VELY, ad. in such a manner as not to be terrified by difficulties, or daunted by dangers; intrepidly; courageously.

BRA'VERY, f. the performance of any great and noble actions, notwithstanding the dangers dangers which attend them; a disposition of mind, which enables a person to accomplish his designs, notwithstanding any obstacles or difficulties which oppose it. Applied to the appearance of things, finery, splendour. False courage; boasting; or boldness.

BRAVO, f. [Ital.] a man who murders or assassinate another for hire.

To BRAWL, v. n. [braviller, Fr.] to quarrel about trifles in a noisy manner; to report in a loud manner; to make a noise; beautifully applied to inanimate things.

BRAWL, f. a noisy quarrel; scurrility.

BRAWLER, f. one who is quarrelsome and noisy at the same time; a word of reproach.

BRAWN, f. [of uncertain etymology] the fleshy or muscular parts of the body; the arm. Figuratively, vigour, or strength. The flesh of a boar soured or pickled; a boar.

BRAWNY, a. strong, robust; sinewy, fleshy; of great muscles and strength.

To BRAY, v. a. [bracan, Sax.] to beat into pieces, or powder in a mortar by means of a pestle.

To BRAY, v. n. [brave, Fr.] to make a noise like an ass. Figuratively, to make a disagreeable noise like that of brass.

BRAY, f. the noise of brass; a terrible or disagreeable sound.

To BRAZE, v. a. the soldering or joining of two pieces of metal together. Figuratively, to be enured or hardened in impudence.

BRAZEN, a. made of brass. Figuratively, caused by brazen instruments. Impudent.

To BRA'ZEN, v. n. to deny with great impudence; to behave without concern; to bully. Used with the word out. "He would brazen it out as if he had done nothing." Arbut.

BRA'ZEN-FACE, f. a person who has no sense of shame, an impudent fellow.

BRAZEN-FACED, a. void of shame, impudent.

BRAZENNESS, f. appearing like brass. Figuratively, undaunted impudence.

BRA'ZIER, f. one who makes or sells brass ware.

BRA'ZING, f. the act of soldering or joining two pieces of iron together. Sometimes the word is applied to the joining pieces of iron together by beating them red hot upon one another; but this is more properly called welding.

BREACH, f. [breche, Fr.] the dividing or destroying the union between the parts of a thing, before joined together. In Fortification, a hole or gap made in any part of the works of a town, either by cannon or mines. Figuratively, a defect; the acting contrary to any law; the violating any obligation; quarrel; discord; want of unity.

BREAD, [brad] f. [breod, Sax.] a baked mass of dough formed from the flour of some grain, and a constant part of food. Figuratively, every kind of necessary for the support of life. To eat a person's bread, is sometimes used to imply, that he has been admitted to the most intimate friendship, and supported by his bounty.

BRE'AD-CORN, f. a corn or grain of which bread is made.

BRE'AD-ROOM, f. [a sea term] a place in a ship's stern, to keep bread, or biscuit.

BREADTH, [bradb] f. [from brad, Sax.] the measure of a plain superficies from side to side. In Commerce, the measure of any cloth, or other manufacture, between the two selvages, or lifts. Within an hair's breadth, denotes extreme nearness, applied to situation; and a very narrow escape, applied to danger.

To BREAK, v. a. [breccan, Sax.] to separate the parts of a thing by force; to burst by violence. Used with the word down, to destroy or demolish. To pierce or penetrate, applied to light. "A dim winking lamp which feebly broke the gloomy vapours." To diminish or weaken. "Have not some of his vices weakened his body, and broke his health?" Tillof. In Horsemanship, to tame or render manageable. "To break the stubborn colt." Dryd. Applied figuratively to the human species, "To break our fierce barbarians into men." Addis. To render a person unable to carry on trade; to make a bankrupt. "Improve-rishes the rich, breaks the merchant." South. To wound so as to make the blood appear. "She'll sooner break your head." Dryd.

Applied to promises, oaths, or duty, to act counter to, to violate, to disregard. "I never more will break an oath." Shak. "To break the pious laws of nature." Dryd. To intercept, prevent, or hinder the effect of. "To break his dreadful fall." Dryd. To interrupt. "His voice broke with sighs." Speet. No. 164. To separate. joined to company. "They were forced to break company." Atter. Used with off, to dissolve; likewise to stop, hinder, or prevent. "To break off so noble a relation." Collier. "To break off all its commerce with the tongue." Addis. With of, to master or lay aside an ill habit. "The French were not quite broken of it." Grew. Used with mind, to discover our sentiments. "Fearful how to break my mind." Dryd. Used with back, to strain or put the back bone out of joint.

In Husbandry, to plow. "The husbandman must first break the land." Davies. To disband, applied to an army. "Solyman, returning to Constantinople, broke up his army." Knolls. Used with wind, to discharge wind included in the intestines. To break on the wheel, is to break the bones of a criminal fastened on a wheel.

To BREAK, v. n. to burst. "Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break." Shak. To open, so as to discharge matter, applied to a tumor. To dispel darkness, to dawn, applied to the first appearance of light in the morning. "As soon as the day breaks." Speet. No. 465. To decay in health and strength. "See how the day begins to break." Swift.

Swift. To burst, to pronounce, or utter, used with from, and the words lips, mouth, or breast. "Whilst from his breast the dreadful accents broke." Dryd. To force a passage, used with the particles through, into, and forth. "To break through with his whole body of horse." Clarend. To intervene without notice or regard to the ceremonies of polite behaviour. "With a magisterial air breaks in upon conversation." Addis. Discarded or deprived of an employ. "When I see a great officer break." Swift. Joined with loose, to disengage from any obstacle, tie, or other confinement or restraint. "Break loose from all our engagements." Tillock. To desert from an undertaking; to quit a habit; to desert suddenly, with the particle off. "Do not peccatorily break off in any business." Bacon. When used with off and from, to separate from with some effort or violence. "I must break from this enchanting queen break off." Shak. To burst through, and discover itself, notwithstanding any impediment. "There being so many ways by which a smothered truth is apt to blaze and break out." South. To rage, or appear, applied to a distemper. "A violent fever broke out in the place." Speet. No. 164. In all the various meanings of this verb, the idea of separation, or the effect of sudden force is always included.

BREAK, f. applied to the first appearance of light in the morning, when the rays of light break the gloom of darkness, it implies the dawn. A pause or interruption, applied to a discourse.

BREAKER, f. he who forces a thing asunder; he who divides a thing by force; a wave broken by rocks or sand banks.

To BREAKFAST, [breckfast] v. n. to eat after having fasted some time; applied to the first meal a person makes in the day.

BREAKFAST, f. that which a person eats at his first meal in the day. In a general sense, any thing to eat after a long want of food.

BREAK-NECK, f. [pronounced brake-neck] a precipice or fall, from whence a person would break his neck.

BREAM, f. [brame, Fr.] in Natural History, a large fish, delighting in rivers or ponds, very broad, with a forked tail, and scales of a golden colour, set with great elegance.

BREAST, f. [pronounced and formerly wrote breast] [breast, Sax.] in Anatomy, one of the three venters in an animal body, which contains the heart and lungs. Breasts are two prominences situated in the anterior, and towards the lateral parts of the thorax. In beasts, the word is applied to that part which extends from the neck to the fore legs. Figuratively, the heart; bosom; conscience; or soul, which was, by the ancients, supposed to reside in this part.

To BREAST, v. a. to oppose with the breast; to meet; to struggle against.

BREAST-BONE, in Anatomy, the bone of the breast called the sternum.

BREAST-HIGH, a. as high as the breasts.

BREAST-HOOKS, f. among Ship-carpenters, the compassing timbers before, that help to strengthen the stem, and all the fore-part of a ship.

BREAST-KNOT, f. a bunch or knot of ribbands worn by females on or near their breasts.

BREAST-PLATE, f. armour worn by way of defence on the breast.

BREAST-WORK, f. works thrown up as high as the breasts of the defendants in a fortified place, or field.

BREATH, [bratb] f. [bratbe, Sax.] the air which proceeds from the mouth, either in the actions of respiration or inspiration. Figuratively, life. Used with take, to recover lost breath from too great a fatigue; to cease from labour, or hurry; a respite or pause. A breeze of wind, or gentle current of air. "Not a breath of wind flies o'er its surface." Addis. The same instant, used with in. "You menace and court me in a breath." Dryd.

BREATHABLE, a. that which may be breathed; or that which is fit to be breathed.

To BREATHE, v. n. to draw in and force out the air at the mouth by the action of the lungs. Figuratively, to live. "Let him breathe a private man in Athens." Shak. To take breath, to recover a damage by means of a respite; to rest. "He followed the victory so hot upon the Scots, he suffered them not to breathe." Spem. Used with in, to enter by the action of breathing or respiration. "To whose soul mouth no wholesome air breatbes in." Shak. Used actively, it implies to fill with, to discharge the lungs of air, by the actions of inspiration and respiration. Used with into, to act upon by breathing; to animate. "He breatbed into us the breath of life." Dicay of Piety. To force out of the mouth, with the particle out. "Who breatbed out nothing but flame." Speet. No. 223.

To make long-winded by exercise. "The greyhounds are as swift as breatbed stags." Shak. To sound by the breath, applied to wind instruments. "To breatb the flute." Prior. To send up in vapours appearing like the breath in frosty weather. "His altar breatbed ambrosial odours." Par. Lost. To sigh, or offer up, without being heard. "I have toward heaven breatbed a secret vow." Shak. In Surgery, to open by a lancet. "To breatbe a vein." Dryd.

BREATHLESS, f. one who enjoys life; one who is alive. He that causes or animates by his breath, alluding to God's breathing into man the breath of life, as the Scripture expresses it.

BREATHING, f. the action of fetching breath. Figuratively, alive. A sigh of devotion; secret prayer conceived in the mind, but not uttered in words; an aspiration. Breathing-places, vents, or chinks, that let in fresh air.

BREATHLESS, [brtblefs] a. out of breath.

breath, or force able to breathe from fatigue or hurry. Figuratively, dead.

BRECHIN, a parliament town of Scotland, in the county of Angus, 15 miles N. E. of Dundee, and 45 on the same point from Edinburgh.

BRECKNOCK, or BRE'CON, a town of S. Wales, and capital of Brecknockshire. It is called by the Welsh Aber-Honddey, and is situated at the confluence of the rivers Honddey and Ull. It is an ancient place, as appears by the Roman coins that have been often dug up here. It is a large town, containing three churches, one of which is collegiate, and stands at the west end. The houses are well built, and it formerly had a wall, with three gates, and a stately castle. The offices are kept here, and it has a good trade in clothing. The markets are on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and are well supplied with corn, cattle, and provisions. It sends one member to parliament, and is 34 miles N. W. by W. of Monmouth, 34 S. E. by E. of Llanaber, and 164 W. by N. of London.

BRECKNOCKSHIRE, a county of S. Wales, 39 miles in length, and 27 in breadth. It is full of mountains, some of which are exceeding high, particularly Mouchdenneth, near from Brecknock. However, there are large fertile plains and valleys, which yield plenty of corn, and feed great numbers of cattle. It has 61 parishes, and four market-towns, and there were formerly nine castles. It is bounded on the E. by the counties of Hereford and Monmouth, on the S. by Glamorgan, on the W. by Carmarthen and Cardigan shires, and on the N. by Radnorshire.

BREDE, f. [See BRAID] a border wrought with the needle in different colours resembling flowers, &c.

BREDE, a village in Suffex, five miles N. W. of Winchester.

BREECH, [trich] f. [from brayan, Sax.] the back and lower part of the body, from whence the excrements are voided. Applied to a piece of cannon, the hinder part, or that part behind the touch-hole.

BREECHES, [triches] f. [brac, Sax.] It has no singular; that part of a man's dress which covers his thighs and breech. To wash the breeches, is a phrase implying, that a woman always shows authority over her husband than her sex.

To BREED, v. a. [braden, Sax.] to produce, bring forth, or generate; to educate, nourish, or bring up. Sometimes used with the particles to and up to. Figuratively, to excite or cause. Applied to place, to give birth to. To cut, applied to the teeth. To keep animals for procreation or multiplying their species.

To BREED, v. n. to be big with child; to be pregnant. To propagate; or increase by procreations. To raise or increase a breed.

BREED, f. a species of animals; a cast or kind. Offspring, applied to mankind. That which is produced at one hatching.

BREEDER, f. that which produces, or is the cause of any thing. That which educates, or brings up. A person who is not barren; one who raises a breed.

BREEDING, f. education, instruction. Figuratively, genteel and polite behaviour; the method taken in rearing a child.

BREESE, f. [brisa, Sax.] in Natural History, a stinging fly, called the gad-fly.

BREEZE, f. [brezza, Ital.] a gentle, cooling, pleasant breath of wind. In Navigation, a shifting wind blowing from the sea and land alternately at certain hours, and sensible only near the coasts.

BREEZY, a. refreshed by breezes.

BREMEN, the duchy of a province of Germany, in the province of Lower Saxony, lying between the rivers Weser and the Elbe; of which the former separates it from the duchy of Oldenburg, and the other from that of Holstein. The air is cold; but the country is fertile, and well peopled. It formerly belonged to the Swedes, but was afterwards sold to the King of Great Britain, as Elector of Hanover, in 1716. In the winter it is subject to inundations, and particularly in 1617, on Christmas-day, several thousand cattle were drowned, besides several hundreds of men; and the country was so covered with water, that it has cost immense sums to repair the dykes. Bremen is the capital town.

BRENT, a. burnt.

BRENT, a town in Devonshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is a post-town, 200 miles W. by S. of London.

BRENTFORD, a town in Middlesex, with a market on Tuesdays. That part in which the church and market-place stands is called New-Brentford. It is a great thoroughfare on the western road, and is well furnished with inns. It is seven miles W. of London.

BRENTWOOD, or BURNTWOOD, a town in Essex, with a market on Thursdays. It stands on a rising ground, in the road from London to Colchester, and has several good inns. It is 18 miles S. N. E. of London.

BREST, f. in Architecture, the member of a column; named likewise apras, or tore.

BRET, f. in Natural History, a round flat fish, of the turbot kind; called likewise brut or brut.

BRETTON CAPE, an island so called, near the eastern continent of North America, between 45 and 58 degrees of latitude. It is separated from Nova Scotia by a narrow strait called Canso, and is about 100 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is a barren country, producing little corn or grass, and subject to fogs throughout the year. It is covered with snow in winter, and is excessive cold. It is of very small importance to England, but was of great consequence to the French, because it commanded the navigation of the river St. Lawrence, through which they passed to Canada. There is likewise an excellent fishery on this coast, from which they reap great great advantage. It was taken by the English in 1745, and restored to the French in 1748, by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. It was again re-taken by the English, on July 26, 1758, when all the garrison, consisting of 5600 men, were made prisoners of war, while the loss of the English was very inconsiderable. There were eleven men of war in the harbour, which were all either taken, sunk, or destroyed; and it was ceded to England by the treaty of peace in 1763.

BREVE, f. in Music, a long note, formerly pricked in the form of a square without any tail, equivalent to two measures, minims, femibreves, or bars, and is now wrote thus O.

BREVET, f. among the French, denotes a grant of some favour, or donation from the king; not much unlike a warrant, or the king's letters patent with us.

BREVIARY, f. an abridgement or compendium.

BREVIER, f. [pron. bre-veer] a small printing letter, the same as this book.

BREVITY, f. [brevitas, Lat.] applied to writings, the expressing a sentiment in very few words; conciseness; shortness.

To BREW, v. a. [brouwen, Belg.] to make beer or ale, by mixing malt and hops with boiling water, and fermenting it afterwards with yeast. Figuratively, to make any drink by boiling different ingredients; to contrive; to plot. Used neuterly, to perform the office of a brewer; to make ale or beer.

BREWER, f. one who makes malt liquor, and sells it.

BREW-HOUSE, f. a place or house wherein beer or ale is made.

BREWING, f. the process or method of making ale or beer; the quantity of liquor produced by brewing.

BREWIS, f. a piece of bread boiled in a pot together with meat.

BREWOD, a town of Staffordshire, with a market on Tuesdays. It is a small place, and the market is almost come to nothing. The old nunnery is now a free-school. It is 129½ miles N. W. of London.

BRIAR, f. See BRIER.

BRIBE, f. a gift or reward given to a person to engage him to determine contrary to the merits of a cause; something given to a person to stifle evidence; something given to an elector, to engage him to vote for a particular candidate.

BRIBERY, f. the act of giving a person money to engage him to any particular side or undertaking.

BRICK, f. [brick, Belg.] a fat, reddish, or white earth, formed in wooden moulds of various sizes, first dried in the air, and afterwards burnt in a kiln or clamp. Oil of brick is olive oil imbued by heated bricks, pounded afterwards, and distilled in a retort.

To BRICK, v. a. to lay or build with bricks.

BRICK-BAT, f. a piece or fragment of a brick.

BRICK DUST, f. the dust of bricks; or the powder of bricks made by rubbing them on each other, or pounding them.

BRICKHILL LITTLA, a town in Buckinghamshire. Dist. 43 miles from London.

BRICK-KILN, f. a place wherein bricks are burnt.

BRICKLAYER, f. one whose business it is to lay and cement bricks in a wall or building. Tylers and bricklayers were incorporated 10 Eliz. under the name of Master and Wardens of the society of freemen of the mystery and art of tylers and bricklayers.

BRICK-MAKER, f. one who makes bricks.

BRIDAL, a. that which belongs to a wedding.

BRIDE, f. [bryd, Sax.] a name given to a woman the day of her marriage, and sometimes after the wedding day is over.

BRIDE-BED, f. the bed on which a newly-married couple lie.

BRIDE-CAKE, f. the cake with which the guests are entertained at a wedding.

BRIDEGROOM, f. a new married man.

BRIDE-MEN, f. the male attendants, as the BRIDE-MAIDS are the female attendants, or company at a wedding; the office of the latter is to undress the bride on the wedding-night, and see her to bed.

BRIDEWELL, f. a house of correction near Fleet-ditch, London, built by Henry VIII. as a royal palace for the reception of the emperor Charles V. Any place where vagrants are obliged to beat hemp, or kept to hard labour as a punishment.

BRIDFORD, or BRIDFORD, or BIRTFORT, a village in Wiltshire, one mile S. E. of Salisbury.

BRIDGE, f. [bric, Sax.] a building of stone or timber consisting of one or more arches, intended for the passage of men or carriages from one side of a river to another. The word bridge is used figuratively for the upper part of the nose; and in musical instruments for a piece of wood, which stands upright on the belly of the instrument, and supports the strings. Hanging-bridges are those which are not supported either by posts or pillars, being sustained only by the two extremities. A draw-bridge is made fast only at one end with hinges, so that the other may be lifted by chains fixed to it. A flying-bridge is made of pontoons, leather boats, casks, &c. covered with planks, for the passage of an army. A bridge of boats is made of copper or wooden boats, fastened with stakes or anchors, and covered with planks. PROV. Let every man praise the bridge he goes over, i. e. speak not ill of him who hath done you courtesy, or whom you have made use of to your benefit; or do commonly make use of.

BRIDGEND, a town of Glamorganshire, in S. Wales, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the river Ogmore, which divides it into two parts, but they are joined together by a stone a stone-bridge. The market is considerable for corn, cattle, and provisions. It is 177½ miles W. of London.

BRIDGE-TOWN, the capital of the island of Barbadoes, in the Atlantic Ocean, and in America. It was first called St. Michael, from the name of the parish-church, and is the finest and largest place in all these islands; for it contains 1200 houses, built of stone, with glazed windows, and many of them faired. The streets are broad, the houses high, and the rents dear. The wharfs and keys are very neat and convenient, and the forts are so strong, that when they are well manned, and furnished with ammunition, it would be very difficult to take them. The church is as large as some cathedrals, and it has a very fine organ. On the E. side of the town is the magazine of gun-powder, which is always very well guarded. Law. 61. o. W. lat. 13. o. N.

BRIDGENORTH, a town in Shropshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is a corporation-town, governed by 24 aldermen, and 48 common-council. It is seated on the river Severn, which divides it into two, but it is joined together by a handsome bridge. They are called the Upper and the Lower Town. The streets are broad and paved, and it has two parish churches. It was formerly fortified with walls, and had a stately castle, seated on a rock, now in ruins. It sends two members to parliament. It is 139 miles N. W. of London.

BRIDGEWATER, a town of Somersetshire, with two markets, on Thursdays and Saturdays. It is seated on the river Parret, over which there is a stone-bridge, and near it ships of 100 tons burthen may ride. It is a large, well frequented place, with the title of a duchy; and sends two members to parliament. There are in it several large inns; and the market is well supplied with corn and provisions. It is 137 miles W. by S. of London.

BRIDLE, f. [bridel, Sax.] the bit, head-stall, fillet, throat-band, reins, and nose-band, which are fastened on a horse's head to manage and govern him. Figuratively, a restraint, curb, check.

To BRIDLE, v. a. [bridlian, Sax.] to manage a horse by means of a bridle. Figuratively, to check; or restrain; or keep within bounds. Used neuterly, to hold up the head in an affected manner, applied to the attitudes of a woman.

BRIDLINGTON, or BU'RLINGTON, a town in the East-Riding of Yorkshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is a sea-port town, seated on a creek near Flamborough-head, with a commodious key for ships, and is a place of good trade. It is 208 miles N. of London.

BRIDPORT, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated in a low dirty country, between two rivers, and it had a harbour in former times, which is now choked up with sand. It is a corporation, governed by two bailiffs, a recorder, 16 aldermen, (four of whom are always justices,) and a town-clerk; and it sends two members to parliament. It has one church, and it chiefly consists of two streets, which are broad, and mostly paved. The market is remarkable for hemp; and here is a large manufactory, the town's people being generally employed in spinning of twine, and in making of sail-cloth, and nets for all the large fisheries. It is 135 miles W. by S. of London.

BRIEF, [breef, Fr.] appropriated to language, short, concise, opposed to diffusive or verbose.

BRIEF, f. a short and expressive account or description. In Law, a writ whereby a person is summoned to answer to any action; an abridgement of a client's case, containing in a concise manner the proofs and objections that may be made by the contrary party, together with answers to them, wrote out for the instruction of a counsel on a trial. In Canon Law, letters patent, generally read in churches, giving a licence for making a collection all over the kingdom for any public or private use, the money for which is collected by the churchwardens.

BRIEFLY, ad. in few words; concisely.

BRIEFNESS, f. the quality of expressing a thing in a few words; conciseness; shortness.

BRIER, f. [brær, Sax.] in Botany, a kind of prickly tree, distinguished popularly into sweet or wild; and being a species of the rose, see that article.

BRIERY, a. full of briars, thorns, or prickly plants.

BRIGADE, f. [brigade, Fr.] in the Military Art, a part or division of an army, whether horse or foot, under the command of a brigadier. A brigade of an army, is a body of horse of ten or thirteen squadrons, or five or six battalions of foot; a brigade of a troop is a third part of it, when consisting of fifty soldiers; but only a sixth, when it consists of one hundred; that is, a troop is divided into three brigades in the former case, and into six in the latter.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL, f. an officer commanding a brigade of horse, or foot, and ranking next below a major-general.

BRIGANDINE, f. [from brigand, Fr.] a kind of ancient defensive armour, consisting of thin pliable plates, like scales; a coat of mail.

BRIGANTINE, f. [from brigand, Fr.] a small, light, flat, open vessel, with twelve or fifteen benches on each side for rowers, going both with sails and oars, fit for boarding, or giving chase, and chiefly used by the Corsairs.

BRIGG, a town in Lincolnshire, with a good market on Thursdays for cattle and provisions. It is seated on the river Ankam. Some call it Glamford-Bridges. It is 153 miles N. of London.

BRIGHT, a. [beort, Sax.] shining; splendid; glittering with light. Figuratively, strong; clear; or that which introduces more light into the mind. Noble, shining, illustrious, ous, or that which sets a person in a conspicuous point of view, applied to action. Applied to sagacity, quick, penetrating.

BRIGHTHELMSTONE, a sea-port town of Sussex, with a market on Thursdays. It is at present greatly frequented on account of its waters, is daily increasing in good buildings, and has a pretty good harbour. It was at this place King Charles II. embarked for France 1651, after the battle of Worcester. It is 59 miles S. of London.

To BRIGHTEN, v. a. to make a thing shine which was dull, or covered either with rust or dust. Figuratively, to disperse. To make famous; to render conspicuous; to heighten, applied to character. Used neuterly, to shine again after being obscured.

BRIGHTLY, ad. with splendor; with lustre. Figuratively, in such a manner as will raise an advantageous idea of ourselves.

BRIGHTNESS, f. the lustre which appears on the sight or burnished metals, or cut diamonds; splendor. Figuratively, goodness; sagacity; perfections that make a person conspicuous. "The brightness of his parts." Prior.

BRIILLIANCY, f. [from brillant, Fr.] greatness of lustre, or splendor which dazzles the eyes.

BRIILLIANT. a. [brillant, Fr.] sparkling, or reflecting the rays of light with great lustre.

BRIILLIANT, f. [from briller, Fr.] a diamond quite flat underneath, and cut on its upper part in triangular faces, the uppermost ending in a point.

BRIM, f. [brimme, Sax.] the edge or extremities of a thing. Applied to the hat, that part which is cocked or turned upward. Applied to any vessel, or drinking glass, the uppermost part or edge. Figuratively, the surface of any liquor or fluid. The top of a bank washed by a river.

To BRIM, v. a. to fill full; to fill up to the brim. Neuterly, to be full to the top.

BRI'MFUL, a. full to the top. Figuratively, ready to run over, by being charged too full.

BRI'MMER, f. a vessel or bowl filled up to the brim.

BRI'MMING. a. filled to the top.

BRI'MSTONE, f. in Natural History, a fat, unctuous, mineral, yellow substance, dry, solid, and friable, melting with a gentle heat, inflammable, and when fired in the open air, burning almost all away with a blue flame, and a noxious vapour; endowed with an electric power, and not dissoluble in an acid menstruum.

BRI'NDED, part. [from brin, Fr.] streaked; marked with streaks or branches; tabby.

BRI'NDLE, f. applied to the streaks upon the skin of a beast, of a different or darker colour than the other parts.

BRI'NDED, part. marked with streaks of a different or darker colour, applied to the skin of a beast.

BRINE, f. [brine, Sax.] any salt liquor; sea-water. Figuratively, the sea; tears. The liquor or pickle which proceeds from salted meat.

To BRING, v. a. [pret. I brought, part. pass. brought] [bringan, Sax.] to cause a person to come, or to fetch a thing to another, distinguished from carry, because it may then be done by another; but the word bring implies, that a thing is done by one's self. Figuratively, to procure; to produce. Used with the particle in, to introduce. Used with back, to make a person or thing return; to recover; to recall. Used with to, to lead, or conduct; to induce, to prevail upon. Used with about, to accomplish. Used with off, to clear from any charge; to free from danger. Used with over, to prevail on, or induce a person to alter his sentiments; to convert or seduce. Used with out, to discover a thing which is concealed. Used with under, to subdue, vanquish, or tyrannize over. Used with up, to instruct, educate; to teach; to introduce a fashion; to advance, or come forward with, applied to an army. "Bring up your men." Shakspeare. To bring implies conveying a thing ourselves from one place to another, in opposition to the verb send. To fetch implies going to a place in order to bring.

BRINISH, a. [brine and ise, Sax.] like brine; saltish.

BRINK, f. [brink, Dan.] the extreme edge of a river, precipice, &c. Figuratively, the highest degree of danger.

BRINY, a. tasting saltish, or like brine, or any other liquor that resembles it.

BRISK, a. [bruygue, Fr.] lively, gay, airy; full of vivacity and spirits, applied to the disposition. Vigorous, full of activity and power, applied to action. Sparkling, mantling, applied to liquors. Bright, glaring, and strongly affecting the sight, applied to colours.

To BRISK-UP, v. n. to advance in a sprightly, lively, and nimble manner.

BRI'SKET, f. [bricbet, Fr.] the breast of an animal, particularly that part which lies next to the ribs.

BRI'SKLY, ad. in a brisk, lively, active, and spirited manner.

BRI'SKNESS, f. a light, airy, and cheerful disposition; vivacity or liveliness; activity, gaiety.

BRI'STLE, f. [bristl, Sax.] the strong hair which grows and stands upright on the back of a boar, &c.

To BRI'STLE, v. a. to erect the bristles upright when enraged, applied to a hog. Figuratively, to grow angry; to advance to an enemy in order to attack him, or revenge an affront, used with the particle up. Neuterly, to stand erect like the bristles of a hog.

BRI'STLY, a. in Botany, encompassed with a substance resembling hairs. Thick set with hairs or bristles.

BRI'STOL, a sea-port town, which is partly in Gloucestershire and partly in Somersetshire, with a bishop's see. It is now accounted the second town or city in England, both with regard to its magnitude, riches, and trade. It has 18 churches, besides its cathedral, and several meetings for Protestant Dissenters, among whom the Quakers are a large body. The most remarkable church, besides the cathedral, is St. Mary Redcliff, just without the walls, in the county of Somerset, which some think is the finest parish church in the kingdom. There is a bridge over the river Avon, with houses on each side, like those which London-bridge formerly had. They have an exchange like that of London, which was opened in September 1743. The key is on the river Froome, a little above its confluence with the Avon, over which there is a draw-bridge for the admittance of ships that come up with the tide; and this leads to the College-Green, where the cathedral stands. They have a prodigious trade; for it is reckoned they send 2000 ships yearly to several parts of the world. Here are no less than 15 glass-houses, they having plenty of coal from King's wood and Mendip-hills. The hot-well is resorted to for the cure of several diseases, and is about a mile from the town, on the side of the river Avon. St. Vincent's Rock, above this well, is noted for a sort of soft diamonds, called Bristol-stones. Besides this well, there is a cold spring, which gushes out of a rock on the side of the said river, that supplies the cold bath. There are several manufactures, particularly woollen stuffs, carried on by the French refugees. From the College-Green there is a delightful prospect over the city and harbour, and in it stands a stately high cross of Gothic structure, decorated with the effigies of several of the Kings of England. Near Queen's-square, which is adorned with rows of trees, and an equestrian statue of King William III. stands the custom-house. The walls have been demolished a long time ago; but there are several parts yet standing. They use sledges or sleds, instead of carts, because the vaults of the common shores will not admit them. It has three markets, on Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays. It sends two members to parliament, and has the title of an earldom. It is 123½ miles W. of London.

BRISTOL-STONE, f. a kind of soft diamond found in a rock near Bristol.

BRITAIN (GREAT) the title given to England and Scotland, since the union of the two kingdoms. See ENGLAND and SCOTLAND.

BRITAIN (NEW) called also Terra Labrador, and Eskimaux, a country in North-America, between the river of St. Lawrence and Hudson's Bay. It is subject to Great Britain; but we have no settlement in it, nor are there any inhabitants but a rude savage sort of people, called Eskimaux, who have neither laws nor religion. They have no houses, but live in caves and holes in the sides of hills, and are the only people in America that have beards, which almost hide their faces. The chief produce is skins and furs.

BRITISH, a. belonging to Britain.

BRITTLE, a. [brittan, Sax.] that which breaks or crumbles to pieces with the least force or violence.

BRITTLENESS, f. that quality which renders a thing easy to break.

BROACH, f. [broche, Fr.] an instrument or stake forced through a joint of meat, by means of which it is turned round, and its parts are successively exposed to the action of the fire, in roasting; a musical instrument, which is played upon by means of a handle that turns a cylinder round on its axis, and gives motion to the several keys by pieces of wire fixed perpendicular on its surface.

To BROACH, v. a. to spit; to pierce with a spit. Figuratively, to force a spicket or cock into a vessel in order to draw the liquor; to tap; to open; to wound so as to let out blood. A low expression, alluding to the tapping a vessel. To be the author of, applied to doctrine or opinion.

BROACH'ER, f. a spit or stake to roast meat on. Figuratively, the first inventor, author, or founder of any opinion or doctrine.

BROAD, [bröd or brawd] a. [brad, Sax.] wide, or the extent between the sides of a thing; distinguished from length, which is the extent or space between the two ends. Figuratively, large or great. "A broad mixture of folly." Locke. Diffusive, clear, and bright. "Appears in the broadest light." Decay of Piety. Coarse, gross, obscene, applied to language. "In some places he is broad and fulsome." Dryd. With the eyes wide and open. "He was broad awake." Bold, not delicate; not reserved. Broad as long, implies equal on the whole. SYNON. By broad is understood extended each way; as, broad cloth; a broad brimmed hat. By wide is meant broad to a certain degree; as, three inches wide; four feet wide.

BROADALBINE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by Athol, on the E. by Gaurie, and on the S. by Perthshire, and on the W. by Argyllshire.

BROAD-CLOTH, f. a manufacture made of sheep's wool of our own growth mixed with that of Segovia in Spain, the staple commodity and honour of this nation, so called from its breadth, which is so great that it is weaved by two persons, who sit at each side, and sing the shuttle to one another.

BROAD-EYED, a. that which can see to a great distance round; or has a very large prospect in sight. "In spite of broad-eyed watchful day." Sbak. This conveys a noble image to the mind, and is an elegant use of the term.

BROAD-LEAVED, a. that which has broad leaves.

BROADLY, ad. in a broad manner.

BROADNESS, f. breadth; the extent between the selvages or list of cloth; the space between the sides of a thing. Figuratively, obscene, immodest.

BROAD-SHOULDERED, f. measuring much, or of great width, between the shoulders.

BROADSIDE, f. the firing all the guns on one one side of a ship into an enemy's vessel. Figuratively, an attack; or a positive and unexpected charge of something criminal, by way of accusation, or reply.

BROAD-SWORD, f. a sharp-edged cutting-sword, with a broad blade.

BROADWATER, a village on the sea-coast of Suffex.

BROADWISE, ad. according to the breadth.

BROCADE, f. [brocado, Span.] a stuff of gold, silver, or silk, raised and embellished with flowers, foliage, or other ornaments.

BROCADED, par. Woven with flowers, or ornaments of various colours. Figuratively, drest in brocade.

BROCCOLI f. in Botany, a species of cabbage.

BROCK, f. a badger; also, a hart of the third year; also, a hind of the same year, a brock's sister.

BROCKET, f. a red deer of two years old.

BROGUE, [brög] f. [brog, Ir.] a wooden shoe; a corrupt, or vicious manner of speaking or pronouncing.

BROIDER, v. a. [broder, Fr.] to adorn with figures of needle-work.

BROIL, f. [from brouiller, Fr.] a quarrel, contest, tumult, or war.

TO BROIL, v. a. [bruler, Fr.] to dress meat either by placing it immediately on the coals, or on a gridiron over a fire. Neuterly, to overheat by immoderate exercise. Used improperly for to burn.

BROKAGE, or BROKERAGE, f. money gained by promoting bargains; or what is given a broker for commission; the trade of buying and selling second hand things.

BROKERAGE, f. the fee or pay given to a broker for negotiating business.

BROMLEY, a town in Kent, whose market is on Thursdays; distant from London 9½ miles.

BROMLEY, a town in Staffordshire. See ABBOTS BROMLEY.

BROMSGROVE, a town of Worcestershire, with a market on Tuesdays. It is seated on the Salwarp, and is a pretty good town, containing about 400 houses. It drives a considerable trade in clothing, and has a good market for corn, cattle, and all sorts of provisions. It is 115 miles N. W. of London.

BROMYARD, a town of Herefordshire, with a market on Tuesdays. The town is seated on a rising ground, and is 12 miles W. of Worcester, and 125 W. N. W. of London.

TO BROKE, v. n. [of uncertain etymology. Skinner seems inclined to derive it from to break, because broken men turn factors or brokers. Casaubon derives it from the Greek; but Mr. Lye more probably deduces it from a Saxon word, signifying to procure] to transact business, or buy and sell for another, at a certain sum per cent.

BROKEN-HEARTED. a. in a condition which admits of no comfort; dejected, in despair; disconsolate.

BROKENLY, ad. in an unconnected manner; without any connexion; by loose sentences.

BROKEN-MEAT, f. fragments, or pieces of meat taken from a table.

BROKER, f. one who buys or sells, or transacts business for another. By abuse, the word is applied to those who deal in second-hand goods. Exchange-broker, is one who concludes bargains for others, relating to the remitting of money, or bills of exchange. Stockbrokers, are those who buy or sell, for others, parts or shares in the joint stock of any public company, as the Bank, South-sea, &c. Pawnbrokers, are those who lend money to the necessitous, upon a pledge of goods given as security.

BRO'NCHIA, [bránkia] f. [βρόγχος, Gr.] in Anatomy, the ramification of the trachea; or certain branches or hollow tubes belonging to the windpipe, that are dispersed through the lungs.

BRO'NCHIAL, [bránkial] a. belonging to the throat.

BRO'NCHOCELE, [bránkofele] f. [βρογχόκηλη, Gr.] in Surgery, a tumour arising in the anterior part of the neck, occasioned by some humour, or some violence, as straining in labour, lifting weights, &c.

BRONCHOTOMY, [bránkótomy] f. [βρογχός and τομή, Gr.] the operation which opens the wind-pipe by incision, necessary in many cases, especially, in a violent quinsey, to prevent suffocation from the great inflammation or tumour of the parts.

BRONTO'LOGY, f. [βροντή and λόγος, Gr.] a discourse on thunder.

BRONZE, f. [bronze, Fr.] a method used by statuarys, to make their plaitered busts look as if composed of brass. Of this there are two sorts, the red brass or bronze, and the yellow or gilt brass.

BROOCH, f. [brocke, Belg.] a jewel; an ornament of jewels. Figuratively, an ornament; glory.

TO BROOD, v. n. [brædan, Sax.] to hatch, or sit upon in order to hatch; to sit like a hen hatching her eggs; beautifully applied in the following sentence: "Where brooding darkness spreads his jealous wings." Milt. To sit near, and watch with great anxiety. Used actively, to hatch. Figuratively, to cherish or keep alive by incessant anxiety.

BROOD, f. [brod, Sax.] a parcel of chickens hatched by one hen, at one time. Figuratively, offspring, children; production.

BRO'ODY, a. inclining to hatch, or to sit on eggs to hatch them.

BROOK, f. [broc, Sax.] a small and shallow running water. SYN. Rivulets and brooks are certain species of streams which are running waters, with this difference, that a rivulet runs between banks, whereas a brook winds its way through the meadows, or by a hedge-side. A rivulet is a much larger stream than a brook.

TO BROOK. v. a. [brocan, Sax.] to bear without without resentment or complaint; to put up with. Applied to misfortunes, or affronts, to endure.

BROOM, f. [brom, Sax.] in Botany, the gorilla, Lat. genet, Fr. Linnæus ranges it in the third sect. of his 17th class. There are 70 species. Likewise an utensil made with the twigs of the above-mentioned plant, and used in sweeping houses or streets.

BROOMING, or BREAMING, f. the burning the sith a ship has contracted, with straw, reeds, broom, &c. when she is on the careen.

BROOMSTAFF, f. the staff to which the twigs of a broom are bound, to make a besom; the handle of a broom; named more generally in London a broom-stick.

BROOMY, a. full of, or abounding in, broom.

BROTH, f. [bratb, Sax.] a kind of soup, made by boiling meat down in a small quantity of water.

BROTHER, or BROTHER-HOUSE, [bradel, Fr. bordilla, Ital. so called from their having been formerly built near, or upon the banks of rivers] a house inhabited by prostitutes, and set apart for the practice of lewdness.

BROTHER, f. [bretbren and brothers in the plural, the former of which seems confined to the Scriptures] [brother, Sax.] a term of relation between two male children sprung from the same father or mother, or both. Among the ancients, this term was used with greater latitude than at present, and signified even first cousins; in this sense it is used in Scripture, when mention is made of our Lord's bretbren. Figuratively, a person united by the most ardent affections of friendship; one of the same trade; a person resembling another in qualities or conduct. Among Drunken, taken for man in general, alluding to our being all descended from one common parent.

BROTHERHOOD, f. the state or condition of a brother; the relation in which one brother stands with respect to another. Figuratively, men living together in the same house, and professing the same principles, applied to monks or friars; men incorporated together by the same charter; men of the same trade.

BROTHERLY, a. that which suits or belongs to a brother.

BROTHERLY, ad. after the manner of a brother. Figuratively, in a very affectionate manner.

BROUGH, a town in Westmoreland, whose market is on Tuesdays. Distant 258½ miles from London.

BROW; f. [the ow is pron. like ow in now, bow] the arched collection of hairs over the eye in human creatures. Figuratively, the looks, air, or appearance of the countenance. Applied to a hill, the verge, or extremity of its surface.

To BROWBEAT, v. a. to endeavour to awe a person by stern and haughty looks or words.

BROWN, a. [the ow is pron. as in bow] [brun, Sax.] sun-burnt, of a colour which may be made of a mixture of black with another colour. Figuratively, dark, gloomy. Used as a substantive, dark, or dusty colour.

BROWNISH, a. somewhat brown; inclining to brown; of a faint brown.

BROWNISTS, in Church History, a religious sect which sprung up in England towards the end of the 16th century. Their leader was one Robert Brown, a native of Northampton. They separated from the established church, disliking its discipline and form of government. They were equally averse to Episcopacy and Presbyterianism. They condemned the solemn celebration of marriages in churches; and maintained that matrimony being a political contract, the confirmation of it ought to proceed from the civil magistrate. They rejected all forms of prayers, and affirmed that the Lord's prayer ought not to be recited as a prayer, it being given only as a model by which we are to form our prayers.

BROWNNESS, f. that idea or sensation, which is excited in the mind on seeing a brown colour.

BROWN-STUDY, f. gloomy meditations.

To BROWSE, [brouze] v. a. [brouser, Fr.] to feed on herbs, leaves, or grafs. To crop or eat, applied to cattle. Actively, to feed or eat, used with on or upon.

BROWSE, [brouze] f. pasture; properly leaves or shrubs fit for goats and other animals to eat.

BROW-SICK, a. dejected.

To BRUISE, [bruze] v. a. [briser, Fr.] to crush or hurt by any thing blunt, which does not cut the skin, or let the blood out; to crush by any weight; to beat in a mortar, so as only to crush or destroy the form of a thing, without reducing it into powder.

BRUISE, [bruze] f. a hurt whereby the skin is not broke.

BRUIT, [brüt] f. [bruit, Fr.] a report, rumour, or noise; something which is the common topic of conversation.

To BRUIT, [brüt] v. a. to spread abroad; to divulge; to rumour. Both the verb and the noun are seldom used.

BRU'MA, or BRA'HMA, f. the idol of the Brachmans, who, they say, produced as many worlds as he has considerable parts; the first world, which is above the heavens, being formed of his brain; the second of his eyes; the third of his mouth, &c.

BRU'MAL, a. [brumalis, Lat.] belonging to the winter.

BRUNETTE, f. [the plural brunettes, according to Addison] [Fr.] a person of a brown complexion; generally applied to the female sex.

BRUNSWICK, the dutchy of, is a country of Germany, fertile both in corn and pastures, and divided into three principalities, Wolfenbuttle, Grubenhagen, and Calenberg, which also comprehends the duchy of Gottingen. The principality principality of Wolfenbüttele has its own Dukes; but the other two belong to the Elector of Hanover. The territories of the house of Brunswick are more extensive; the principal of which are the duchies of Brunswick and Lunenburg, with the county of Danneburg, which is annexed thereto.

BRUNT, f. [brunß, Belg.] the onset, attack, or shock of an enemy; the force, violence, and stroke of a cannon. Generally used with the verb bear. To bear the brunt, is to sustain the attack of an army. Figuratively, any difficulty, or cross, and unexpected accident.

BRUSH, f. [broffe, Fr.] an instrument made of bristles or hair fastened to wood, used for sweeping rooms, cleaning cloaths, or painting. Figuratively, a slight attack or skirmish in war.

To BRUSH, v. a. to clear a thing of dust by means of a brush; to touch in one's passage. Used with up, to paint, to make a thing look well by a brush. Used neuterly, to pass quick, and close to a person, joined with the particle by. "Brush'd regardless by." Dryd. To skim upon the surface; to pass along so as just to touch the surface in the passage, used with over.

BRUSHER, f. a person who makes use of a brush; one who cleans with a brush.

BRUSHWOOD, f. rough, woody thickets.

BRUSHY, a. rough or shaggy like a brush.

BRUSSELS, the finest and richest city of the Netherlands, the capital of Brabant, and the seat of the governor of the Austrian Low Countries, to whom they pay almost the same honours as to their sovereign. The ducal palace, where the governor resides, the town house, and the arsenal, are superb structures. The academy is famous, where young gentlemen perform their exercises; and they have dug a fine canal to Antwerp. The trade and manufacture of the inhabitants is in cambrics, laces, and fine tapestry, which are exported all over Europe. It is 148 miles N. by E. of Paris, and 173 E. of London. Lon. 4. 8. E. lat. 50. 51. N.

To BRUSTLE, v. n. [brasthan, Sax.] to crackle; to make a noise, like the rustling of armour, or that of rich silks. Figuratively, to swagger, hector, or approach a person in a threatening manner.

BRUTAL, a. [brutal, Fr.] that which belongs to a beast, opposed to rational. Figuratively, inhuman, cruel, savage; without, or contrary to, reason and the principles of humanity.

BRUTALITY, f. [brutalité, Fr.] a disposition or behaviour contrary to the laws of reason, dictates of politeness and humanity; churlishness, savaginess.

To BRUTALIZE, v. n. [brutaliser, Fr.] to grow morose, savage, inhuman, and like a brute. Actively, to make brutish or savage.

BRUTALLY, ad. inhumanly; churlishly.

BRUTE, a. [brutus, Lat.] senseless; savage; inhuman; void of all the tender and social affections; not having the use of reason; rough; uncivilized.

BRUTE, f. an animal without the principle of reason; a beast. Figuratively, applied to men as a term of the most mortifying reproach, and implying a person void of humanity, and an enemy to reason.

BRUTISH, a. resembling a beast, either in form or qualities. Figuratively, rude; inhuman; senseless; stupidly ignorant; regardless of reason, or contrary to its dictates.

BRUTON, a town of Somersetshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the river Brew, and is a well-built and well inhabited town, with a handsome church, a free-school, and a strictly almshouse, and has a manufacture of serges and stockings. It is 109 miles W. of London.

BUB, f. a cant word for strong malt liquor.

BUBBLE, f. [bobbie, Belg.] a small bladder of water; a little round drop of any fluid filled and expanded with air, and destroyed by the least touch. Figuratively, something easily destroyed; a cheat, or the person cheated.

To BUBBLE, v. n. to rise in bubbles; to make a gentle noise as it runs, applied to water issuing from some narrow place, or its fountain-head. Actively, to cheat, or defraud by projects of imaginary advantages.

BUBBLER, f. one who cheats by projects, promising great advantages for the loan of money.

BUBBY, f. a woman's breast. A low term.

BU'BO, f. [βουβο, Gr.] in Surgery, a tumour or swelling, attended with an inflammation gathering in the groin, &c. A malignant bubo is owing to some contagious disease, or venereal taint. A mild bubo takes its rise from the stagnation of glutinous and inspissated blood.

BUBONOCE'LE, commonly called a BUB-TUMOR, f. in Surgery, is a tumour in the groin, formed by the prolapsus or falling down of the intestines, omentum, or both, through the processes of the peritonæum, and rings of the abdominal muscles.

BUCCANERS, or BUCCANERS, f. a cant word for the privateers and pirates in America.

BU'CHAN, a shire of Scotland, having the German Ocean on the N. and E. and the shire of Mar on the S.

BUCK, f. [bruch, Brit.] the male of the fallow deer, rabbits, hares, goats, &c. Among deer it is as corpulent, and has horns like a hart, differing only in size, growing out of the head like fingers in the hand. Likewise a cant name for a club, or society, so called from their use of these hunting terms, calling their president, the grand buck, &c.

BUCK, f. [bauche, Teut.] ley made of ashes for washing linen. Figuratively, linen.

To BUCK, v. a. when from buck signifying a deer, it denotes to copulate; and when from buck signifying ley, it implies to wash cloaths in ley.

BU'CKENHAM, a town of Norfolk, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated in a flat, and formerly had a strong castle, now demolished.

fished. It is 12 miles E. of Thetford, and 6½ N. E. of London.

BUCKET, f. [bucket, Fr.] a wooden vessel resembling one half of a barrel or pipe, fitted with a handle formed like a semicircle, and used to draw water out of a well; likewise, a wooden vessel of the same form used in fires to draw the engines with water. See PAIL.

BUCKINGHAM, the chief town of Buckinghamshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated in a low ground, on the river Ouse, by which it is almost surrounded, and over it are three handsome stone bridges. There was formerly a strong castle in the middle of the town. There is a county-jail, built not many years since. It is a corporation, sends two members to parliament, and had the title of a county. It is 35 miles N. E. of Oxford, and 12½ W. of London.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the N. by Northamptonshire, on the E. by Bedfordshire, Herefordshire and Middlesex, on the W. by Oxfordshire, and on the S. by Berkshire, from which it is separated by the river Thames. It is about 30 miles in length, and 18 in breadth, containing 85 parishes, and 15 market towns, whereof six send members to parliament. The air is healthy, and the soil is rich, being mostly chalk or marle. The most general manufactures are bone lace, and paper. The principal rivers, besides the Thames, are the Ouse and Cole; the chief town is Buckingham.

BUCKLE, f. [bucel, Brit.] an instrument made of a link of metal with a tongue and catch, used to fasten the straps of shoes, the harness of horses, &c. A curled lock of hair; or hair in a state to make it curl.

To BUCKLE, v. a. to fasten with a buckle. Figuratively, to marry, or join. To apply constantly, used with the particle in. To apply to, used with to. To comb a wig in curls; to prepare hair for taking a curl.

To BUCKLE, v. n. [bucken, Teut.] to bend or bow under a weight, used with under. Figuratively, to bend one's inclinations, to apply, or attend to.

BUCKLER, f. [buccled, Brit.] a large piece of defensive armour, buckled to the arm, and used by the ancients to defend their bodies from the blows or darts of the enemy; being found cumbersome, they were changed for the shield, which is of less dimension.

BEEKMAST, f. the fruit of the beech tree.

BEEKRAM, f. [beogram, Fr.] a coarse cloth made of hemp, grummed, calendered and dyed; used by taylor's to stiffen their garments; and by packers to wrap up cloths, straps, &c. They are sometimes made of old rags or pieces of sails grummed.

BUCKTHORN, f. a tree.

BUCCOLIC, f. [buccolic, Gr.] pastoral poetry.

BUD, f. [budum, Fr.] in Botany, the small swellings or prominences on the bark of a tree, which turn to shoots, &c. Among Gardeners, it denotes the first tops of fallad plants; and in Husbandry, a weaned calf of the first year, being so named from the budding of its horns. Figuratively, the beginning, first appearance, tender and immature state of a thing.

To BUD, v. n. to swell with gems or little prominences. Applied to vegetables, to put forth shoots. Figuratively, to be in the bloom of youth. Actively, in Gardening, to inoculate by inserting a bud into a tree.

BUDDÉSDALE, a town of Suffolk with a market on Thursdays. It is seated in a valley, and has a small chapel, and an endowed grammar-school. It is 15 miles N. E. of Bury, and 87½ N. E. of London.

BUDDLE, f. a place where miners wash their ore to fit it for the furnace.

To BUDGE, v. n. [boug-t, Fr.] to stir; to move.

BUDGE, f. the fur of lambs.

BUDGE, a. stiff; furly; formal.

BU'DGET, f. [bougette, Fr.] a small bag; that which is contained in a budget; a store or stock.

BUFF, f. [from buffalo, Fr.] the hide of a buffalo dressed in oil, after the same manner as buff.

BU'FFALO, f. an animal of the ox kind, but wild, with large, crooked, and resupinated horns; equal in size to our largest oxen, with an aspect fierce and terrible, the eyes big and prominent, the ears long and patulous, the neck thick and short, the flesh hanging loose under the throat. It is a native of the East, but brought into Italy, and other parts of Europe, where it is used as a beast of burden and draught.

BU'FFET, f. [buffetta, Ital.] a blow on one side of the head given with the fist. Figuratively, indignity, persecution, or hardship.

BUFFET, f. [buffet, Fr.] a kind of cop-board or closet formed with an arch at the top, and furnished with shelves, used to place china and plate in for show and ornament.

To BU'FFET, v. n. [buffier, Fr.] to strike on the head with the hand; to box. Figuratively, to strike any thing forcibly with the hand. Used neuterly, with the particle for, to box, or fight with the fists.

BU'FFETER, f. one who fights with his fists; a boxer.

BU'FFLE-HEADED, a. that which has a head like a buffalo. Figuratively, dull, stupid.

BUFFO'ON, f. [buffon, Fr.] one who endeavours to excite laughter by low jests and antic postures; a merry-andrew, a jack-pudding.

BUFFO'ONERY, f. the using low jests, ridiculous pranks, or scurrilous mirth, in order to extort a laugh from the company.

BUFONITÆ, f. in Natural History, a kind of extraneous fossils, called lycodontes, or wolf's teeth.

BUG, [bug, Brit.] an insect of a roundish flat form, a darkish red colour, which breeds in household stuff and beds, blisters where it bites, is produced from a nit, and stinks when killed. Likewise a flying insect formed like a beetle, a beetle, and named a May-bug, or May-fly.

BUG, or BUG-BEAR, f. [from bug, Brit.] an object which raises terror; a walking spectre; a ghost; generally applied to the imaginary terror used to frighten children.

BUGGINESS, f. infested with bugs.

BUGGY, a. abounding with bugs.

BUGLE, or BUGLE-HORN, f. a small bending-horn; a hunting-horn.

BUGLE, f. a shining bead, of a cylindrical form, and made of glass.

To BUILD, [build] v. a. [the preter. I built, or have built, builden, Belg.] to make or raise houses, &c. Figuratively, to raise on any thing as a support or foundation.

BUILDER, [builder] f. one who constructs or raises houses, &c.

BUILDING, [building] f. a fabric or place erected for shelter from the weather, for dwelling, or for the purposes of religion, security, or magnificence. Building is used in its primary sense, for the art and act of raising edifices.

BUILTH, a town in Brecknockshire, distant from London 171 miles. The market is on Mond. and Sat.

BULL, f. [bulbus, Lat.] in Botany, a thick root, nearly round; of which there are two species. 1. The tunicated, or coated. 2. The squamous, or scaly.

BULBACEOUS, a. the same as bulbous, but not so proper.

BULBOUS, a. that which resembles or contains a bulb; that which has a round root.

BULFINCH, f. a song bird, so called from its red colour; it is remarkable for its imitating wind music, particularly the flageolet.

BULGARIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded on the N. by Wallachia, on the E. by the Black Sea, on the S. by Rumania and Macedonia, and on the W. by Servia. It is divided into four sangiacates, which have the name of the capital places, namely, Viddin, Sophia, Nicopoli, and Silistria. The three first lie on both sides of the river Danube; but the last is wholly on this side, and is partly inhabited by Tartars.

To BULGE, v. n. [originally wrote bilge, which signified the lower part of a ship] to spring a leak by striking the bottom on some rock or place which makes a hole or forces off some of the timber, applied to a ship; to founder. To stick or jut out, used with the particle from.

BULIMY, f. [Bulimia, Gr.] in Medicine, an enormous appetite, attended with faintings and coldness at the extreme parts.

BULK, f. [bulcke, Belg.] size, dimensions. Used with the word people, &c. the greatest part, and sometimes the vulgar. The human frame. Applied to a ship, the whole space in the hold for the stowage of goods; likewise the cargo. To break bulk, is to open or unload any part of the cargo.

BULK, f. [bielcke, Belg.] in Building, a part of a building projecting from the window, like a table, and used either for placing commodities on, by way of show; or for porters to pitch their burdens.

BULLKINESS, f. the largeness of a thing; the greatness of size or dimensions.

BULLKY, a. of great size or stature.

BULL, f. [bulle, Belg.] the male of black-cattle, kept generally for propagating the species; any thing made in the form of a bull. In Astronomy, one of the twelve signs of the Zodiac, into which the sun enters in April. A blunder or contradiction.

BULL, f. [bulia, Lat.] in Ecclesiastic History, an instrument made out at the Roman or pope's chancery, sealed with lead, and of the same nature with the edicts of secular princes. The seal presents on one side the heads of St. Peter and St. Paul, and on the other, the name of the pope, and the year of his pontificate.

BULL, a. in Composition, sometimes denotes largeness, as bull-head, and in such cases is not to be looked on as derived from the English noun, but from the Greek participle.

BULL-BAITING, f. [from bull and baitan, Sax.] the worrying or teasing a bull, by setting dogs on him.

BULL-DOG, f. a species of dogs of a strong make, round head, noted for never quitting its hold whenever it has fastened, and used in baiting bulls, which they generally seize by the nose, and pin to the ground.

BULLETS, f. [bullet, Fr.] an iron or leaden ball or shot, used to load guns with. According to Mr. Derham, a bullet shot out of a great gun flies a mile in a little above seventeen half seconds, and reckoning the sun's distance 86,051,398 English miles, would be thirty-two years and a half in its passage to it, in its full force. Red-hot bullets are heated in a forge, and used to set a place on fire, containing combustibles. Hollow bullets are made cylindrical, with an opening and sulcus at one end, which giving fire to the inside, when in the ground, it bursts, and has the same effect as a mine. Chain bullets are two bullets joined by a chain three or four feet long. Branch bullets, two balls joined by a bar of iron five or six inches apart; and two-headed bullets, named likewise angles, are the two halves of a bullet joined by a bar or chain; they are chiefly used in sea-fights, to cut the rigging, masts, &c.

BULL-HEAD, f. figuratively, a stupid person. In Natural History, a fish, called likewise the miller's thumb; its head is broad and flat, disproportionate to its body.

BULLION, f. [billon, Fr.] gold and silver in the mass, neither wrought nor coined; so named either when they are first melted from the ore, or after they are refined and cast into ingots, or bars.

BULLY, f. a person who makes use of threatening expressions, and insolent behaviour, with great shew of courage, but possessed of great cowardice. In low language, used for a person who attends a strumpet, and espouses her quarrels.

To BULLY, v. a. to behave with noisy insolence infence and persequuted courage, in order to traghan a person into any meatures or compliance.

BULRUSH, f. a large rush, growing in the sea, rivers, and in moist places.

BULWARK, f. [bolw rike, Belg.] a fortification or bastion. Figuratively, a security or protection.

BUM, (bumer, Belg.) that part of the postman on which a person sits. Used in Composition, to convey the idea of reproach, or signifying low and despicable, as in the following word, bum-bailiff

BUM-BAILIFF, f. a person employed to execute a writ, or arrest a person; a bailiff of the lowest sort.

BUMPKIN, f. [bumken, Belg.] a person who has not had the benefit of a polite education, but is gross in his conceptions, rude or unpolished in his behaviour, and void of experience with respect to the world; a rustic, or clown.

BUMP, f. a swelling occasioned by a blow.

To BUMP, v. a. to kick a person, or strike with the knee in the breech. To make a loud noise, applied to that made by the hammer.

BUMPER, f. [perhaps a corruption from bum pers, it being customary in Italy to drink the pope's health in full glasses] a cup or glass filled up to the brim, or as full as it can hold.

BUNCH, f. [banck. r., Dan.] any prominence, hard knob, or swelling, rising above the surface of a thing. Many things of the same kind growing together. A cluster, applied to vegetables. Several things collected or tied together at one of their extremities.

To BUNCH, v. n. to grow in knobs or prominences. To swell, used with out.

BUNCH-BACKED, a. having bunches on the back; hump-backed; crooked, owing to the dislocation of the back or shoulder bones.

BUNCHINESS, f. the quality of being uneven with respect to surface; growing in knobs or clumps, opposed to smoothness.

BUNDLE, f. a parcel of goods, or collection of things wrapped or tied together, including the secondary idea of being easily portable.

To BUNDLE, v. a. to tie or wrap several things together. Figuratively, to be included or collected together; to be comprehended or connected.

BUNG, f. [bing, Brit.] a stopple of wood, used for the bung-hole of a cask.

To BUNG, v. a. to stop a barrel close at its largest vent or hole.

BUNGAY, a town in Suffolk, with a market on Thursdays. It is seated on a spot watered by the river Wavenay, which separates it from Norfolk. It has two parish churches, one of which is handsome, and in the midst of the ruins are the remains of a famous nunnery.

Here is also a dissenting meeting-house, and a grammar-school. The streets are pretty wide, and well-paved. Here are likewise the remains of a castle, supposed to be built by

K. John. About 60 years ago, almost every house was burnt to the ground, and the records belonging to the castle and convent consumed.
 It is, however, now a good trading town; and the women are employed in knitting worsted stockings. The market is large, for corn. It is 20 miles S. of Suffolk, and 107 N. of London.

BUNG-HOLE, f. a large round hole in a barrel, by which it is filled.

To BUNGLE, v. n. to perform any thing in a clumsy awkward manner. Used actively, to botch. Figuratively, to palliate grossly, joined with the particle up.

BUNGLE, f. a botch; an awkward and clumsy performance.

BUNGLER, f. a bad workman; one who does a thing in an ignorant, awkward, or clumsy manner.

BUNGLINGLY, ad. in a bad, clumsy, ignorant, or awkward manner.

BUNN, f. [bunuelo, Span.] in Pastry, a cake composed of yeast, flour, and carraway seeds.

BUNT, f. [corrupted, according to Skinner, from bent] the middle part of a sail formed into a bag, or pouch, that it may contain more wind. Bunt-lines are small lines fastened to the foot, and reeved through little blocks seized to the yard, serving to hoist up the bunt of the sail, that it may be furled with greater ease.

To BUNT, v. n. to swell, used with the particle out.

BUNTER, f. [a cant word] a woman who picks up rags in the street. Used figuratively, as a term of reproach, to convey the idea of a dirty, nasty, mean, and low-lived creature.

BUNTING, f. a bird of the lark kind.

BUNTINGFORD, a town of Hertfordshire, with a market on Mondays. It is a large thoroughfare on the N. road, seven miles
 S. of Royston, and 31 N. by W. of London.

BUOY, f. [pron. boy] [boye, Fr.] a piece of wood or cork, and sometimes an empty barrel, well closed, floating in the water, tied to a cable fastened to the bottom of the sea, in order to inform pilots and mariners where anchors are dropped in the harbours, where the wrecks of ships are sunk, together with shall-low places, sand banks, and other impediments.
 The mast buoy is made of a piece of a mast or other piece of wood, which stands out of the water. Buoy is sometimes used for a sea mark, which shews the dangers of difficult passages.

To BUOY, v. a. [pron. boy] to raise above the surface of the water; to keep afloat.
 Figuratively, to keep any principle or thing from subsiding, or sinking under oppression.
 To cause a thing to ascend by its specific lightness. Neuterly, to float. Figuratively, to surmount or get the better of all difficulties and impediments.

BUOYANCY, [boyancy] f. the quality of floating; or that quality which prevents a thing

thing from subsiding, sinking, or descending.

BUOYANT, [boyant] a. that which keeps a thing floating; light; that which will not sink. Figuratively, that which animates, or keeps from dejection.

BURBOT, f. a river fish full of prickles.

BURDEN, f. [spelt more properly burthen] [byriben, Sax.] a load, supposed to be as much as a man or a horse can carry. Figuratively, a difficulty, oppression, affliction, or any thing that affects a person with weariness, or becomes irksome; the number of tons or weight a ship can carry. In trade, applied to steel, 180lb. In music, the drone or bass of an organ, bagpipe, &c. and the pipe or string which sounds it; hence the words which are repeated at the end of every stanza, are called the burthen of a song. SYNON. By the word burden we understand a weight possible to be borne; by load a weight more than we are able to bear. A light burthen is no inelegant expression; but a light load certainly is.

To BURDEN, v. a. to load; to encumber, or put a person to great expence.

BURDENER, f. one who loads. Figuratively, an oppressor.

BURDENOUS, a. that which makes a load heavy. Figuratively, grievous, oppressive, irksome; putting a person to great expence, without being of any service to him.

BURDENSOME, a. applied to a very pressing load on the body. Figuratively, applied to afflictions, or the trouble one person gives another, afflicting the mind with great anxiety and distress.

BURDENSOMENESS, f. applied to loads, weight or heaviness. Figuratively, applied to calamities and inconveniences.

BUREAU, f. [pron. bur] [Fr.] a chest of drawers, with the top sloping, and furnished with pigeon-holes to keep writings in.

BURFORD, a town of Oxfordshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on an ascent on the river Windrush, and is a handsome place, chiefly noted for the making of saddles. The Downs near it, noted for horse-racing, are of great advantage to the town. It is 71 miles W. of London.

BURG, f. See BURROW, &c.

BURGAGE, f. in Law, a tenure proper to cities and borough towns, whereby lands are held of the king, or other lord, at a certain yearly rent.

BURGAMOT, f. [bergamotte, Fr.] a species of mellow juicy pear.

BURGEIS, f. [pron. boorjais] [bourgeois, Fr.] a small type used by printers.

BURGESS, f. [bourgeois, Fr.] an inhabitant of a borough or city; or a representative of a borough town in parliament.

BURGH, f. a corporate town or borough.

BURGH, a town in Lincolnshire, whose market is on Thursday. It is 133 miles N. of London.

BURGHER, f. [from burg and war, Sax.] one who has the right of a citizen, or a vote for a parliament-man.

BURGHERSHIP, f. [from burgher and scip, Sax.] the dignity, privilege, or office of a burgher.

BURGLARY, f. in Law a felonious breaking and entering a person's house in the night-time, with an intent to commit some felony, whether it be executed or not. If the offence happen in the day-time, it is then called house-breaking, by way of distinction. A reward of 40l. is given for apprehending persons guilty of this crime, by 5 Ann. c. 51.

BURGOMASTER, f. [most properly spelt burghermeister] [burger and meister, Belg.] the chief magistrate of the towns of Holland, Flanders, and Germany, and answers to an alderman and sheriff of London.

BURIAL, f. the interring or placing a dead body in the ground. Figuratively, the placing any thing in the earth, or under the water. The burial service is an office of the church, performed at the grave and interment of one of its members.

BURIAL, f. he that places or interrs a corpse in the grave. Figuratively, that which removes any corpse or other thing out of sight. Seldom used.

BURINE, f. [Fr.] a tool used by engravers to make their marks, or etch on metal.

To BURL, v. a. to dress cloaths as fullers do.

BURLE'SQUE, [barlesk] f. [from barlare, Ital.] a droll, ludicrous kind of poetry, wherein both persons and things are represented in such a ridiculous light as to excite laughter.

To BURLE'SQUE, [barlesk] v. a. to turn to ridicule; to represent a person or thing in a ludicrous and ridiculous manner.

BURLY, a. tall, or over-grown, applied to stature. Of large dimensions, or very wide, applied to breadth. High-sounding, swelling or pompous, applied to stile.

To BURN, v. a. [preter, I burnt, or I have burnt] [bernan Sax.] to consume or destroy by fire; to occasion a wound by fire, or any hot solid body. Neuterly, to be on fire; to kindle. Figuratively, to shine as if in flame. To be violently agitated, or inflamed by passion; to make the cheeks glow with heat, or consume like latent fire.

BURN, f. a wound or hurt received from fire.

BURNHAM, a village in Buckinghamshire, three miles E. of Maidenhead.

BURNHAM, a village in Somersetshire, three miles N. of Huntspil.

BURNHAM, a town in Norfolk, with a market on Mond. and Sat. It is seated near the sea, 29 miles N. W. from Norwich, and 126½ N. E. of London.

BURNING, f. the action of fire on some substance, whereby the minute parts are forced from each other, put into violent motion, and some of them assuming the nature of fire themselves, fly off to their proper sphere, while others either ascend in vapours, or are reduced to ashes. Figuratively, flame or fire.

BURNING.

BUR

BURNING-GLASS, f. a convex glass which collects the rays of the sun into a point, where wood, or other combustible matter being placed, is set on fire. As a wood fire is 45 times hotter than that of the summer-sun, a glass must condense the rays of light 35 times to burn. The burning-glasses made of looking-glasses are much more powerful than those made by lenses, or glasses that transmit the rays of light through them.

To BURNISH, v. a. [brunir, Fr.] to polish any substance so as to make it shine. Neutrally, to grow bright or glossy: to shine with splendor.

BURNISHER, f. one who burnishes or polishes; an instrument used by polishers.

BURNISHING, f. the polishing metals to make them glossy, or shining.

BURNLEY, a town of Lancashire, with a market on Mondays. It is 207½ miles N. N. W. of London.

BURNT, part. pass. of BURN.

BURNT-ISLAND, a parliament town on the coast of Scotland, in Fife, 10 miles N. W. of Edinburgh.

BURR, f. the lobe or lap of the ear; likewise a sweet-bread of meat, especially that of veal.

BURREL, f. [from burre, Fr.] in gardening, a species of pear called likewise the red butter pear.

BURREL-FLY, f. in Natural History a winged insect very troublesome to cattle, called likewise the ox-fly, gad-bee, or breeze.

BURREL-SHOT, f. a sort of cast-shot, or small bullets, nails, stones, pieces of old iron, &c. put into cases, to be discharged from a piece of ordnance.

BURROW, BERG, BURG, BOROUGH, EURGH, f. [burg, Sax.] a corporate town which sends members to parliament, and formerly applied only to fortified places. The holes made in the ground by rabbits.

To BURROW, v. a. to make holes in the ground like rabbits.

BURRAR, f. [burarius, Lat.] an officer in a college; who receives its monies, and keeps its account; a treasurer. In Scotland, a student sent to the universities by each presbytery.

BURSE, f. [bourse, Fr.] an Exchange, or place where merchants assemble to transact business.

BURST, f. a separation of the parts of a thing with violence, and attended with noise; an explosion; a sudden and violent action of any kind.

To BURST, v. n. [preter, I burst, have burst, or bursten] [burstan, Sax.] to separate or by accident with violence; to quit, or break away, with the particle from. Used with into, to come in suddenly. "She burst into the room." To break, separate, or disunite with suddenness and violence.

BURST or BU'RSTEN, [part. of BURST] in Surgery, applied to one who has a rupture.

To BU'RTHEN. v. a. } See BU'RDEN.
BU'RTHEN, f.

BUR.

BURTON UPON TRENT, a town of Staffordshire, with a market on Thursdays. It had formerly a large abbey; and over the river Trent it has now a famous bridge of free-stones, about a quarter of a mile in length, supported by 37 arches. It consists chiefly of one long street, running from the place where the abbey stood to the bridge; and has a good market for corn and provisions. Burton-ale is accounted the best of any brought to London. It is 129½ miles N. N. W. of London.

BURTON, a town of Lincolnshire, with a market on Mondays. It is seated on a hill near the river Trent, and is but a small place. It is 164½ miles N. by W. of London.

BURTON, a town of Westmoreland, with a market on Tuesdays. It is seated in a valley, near a large hill called Farleton-Knothill. The town is pretty well built; but the market is very small; and it is on the great road from Lancaster to Carlisle. It is 246½ miles N. N. W. of London.

BURWASH, a village in Suffex, eight miles W. of Battle-Abbey.

BU'RY, [commonly pron. berry, in this and the four next words] f. [burg, Sax.] a dwelling-place or house. Added to the Saxon names, implies that the person or company resided or lived there: thus Aldermanbury seems to intimate that the aldermen resided formerly in that place.

To BU'RY, v. a. to inter a corpse in a grave; to inter with funeral rites; to cover with earth. Figuratively, to conceal, or hide.

BU'RYING-PLACE, f. a place set apart for interring bodies; a church-yard.

BU'RY ST. EDMUND'S, a town of Suffolk, with a market on Wednesdays and Saturdays. The situation is exceeding pleasant, and the air is supposed to be the best in England, for which reason it is frequented by the better sort of people. It was formerly of great note for its abbey, which was said to be the finest and richest of any in England, and stood between the two churches, which are both very large, and seated in one church-yard. In St. Mary's, one of these churches, lies Mary Q. of France, who was married to Thomas Duke of Norfolk. It sends two members to parliament, and is governed by a recorder, 12 aldermen, and 24 common council. The streets, which are always clean, are pretty wide, and well paved. The town took its name from St. Edmund the King, who was buried here, after being murdered in a wood, and his head severed from his body. Besides the above churches, there are one Presbyterian, one Independent, and one Quakers meeting. Here is a spacious market-hall, a grammar-school, a fine fair-field, and a beautiful cross. The market is very large for corn, fish, and fowl. The assizes for the county are held here. It is 14 miles E. of Newmarket, and 73 N. N. E. of London.

BU'RY, a town of Lancashire, with a market on Thursdays. It is 36 miles S. E. of Lancaster, and 190 N. N. W. of London.

BUSH,

B U S

BUSH, f. [bois, Fr.] a thick shrub.
 To BUSH, v. n. to grow thick, to grow in a great number close together.

BUSHEL, f. [boisseau, Fr.] a measure of capacity for dry goods, as corn, salt, fruit, coals, &c. containing eight gallons, or four pecks, or the eighth part of a quarter of corn, &c.

BUSHY, a. full of branches. Figuratively, short, but growing in great numbers.

BUSINESS, [business, f.] a. without employ; at leisure. Figuratively, without the fatigue which attends business.

BUSILY, [businessly, ad.] in an officious inquisitive manner. With an air of seeming hurry from a multiplicity of business.

BUSINESS, f. [business or business, f.] employment; a man's peculiar trade or profession; affairs or concerns. After do, properly, service, advantage, or a means of attaining an end. "A perpetual spring will not do their business." Bent. To do a man's business, is a low and familiar phrase for killing, destroying, or ruining him. SYNON. Business implies an object of industry; affairs an object of concern. The first implies the hands; the second the mind. The word business, by its having no plural number, intimates a particular employ. By the singular of affairs being seldom in use in the sense before us, that word is understood to mean a variety of transactions.

BUSK, f. [busque, Fr.] a piece of steel or whalebone, worn at the stomacher of a woman's stays, in order to keep them in the proper form, and strengthen them.

BUSKIN, f. [brofsken, Belg.] a kind of short boot worn by the ancients, covering the foot and leg as far as the middle, laced or fastened before; was worn by the dramatic performers in tragedy, and distinguished from the sack worn in comedy, which was of a thinner sole, and consequently lower. Figuratively, tragedy.

BUSS, f. [bus, Ir.] a salute given by the lips; distinguished from a kiss, which is given with a greater shew of distance or ceremonious kindness. In Fishery, a small vessel from 48 to 60 tons burden, used in the herring fishery.

To BUSS, v. a. to salute a person with the lips. Figuratively, to touch.

BUST, f. [busso, Ital.] in Sculpture, the figure of a person in relieve, containing only head, shoulders, and stomach, usually placed on a pedestal or console. The Italians use the term for the trunk of the human body, from the neck to the hips.

BUSTARD f. [bucciano, Ital.] a wild turkey.

To BUSTLE, v. n. to set about a thing with activity; to make a great noise or stir about any thing.

BUSTLE, f. a hurry of business; a noise or tumult.

BUSTLER, f. an active, industrious, stirring man.

BUSY, [pron. busy or busy,] a. [from business, Sax.] engaged in any employment; active, diligent, officious.

B U T

 To BUSY, [busy,] v. a. to keep a person employed; to employ.

BUSY-BODY, [busy-body,] f. an officious person meddling with the concerns of other people, offering assistance; and giving advice, without being asked.

BUT, conj. [butte, butan, Sax.] when it diverts or breaks off the thread of a discourse, so as to pursue a different topic, it intimates a stop of the mind, and signifies howbeit. "But to say no more." When applied to limit or restrain the sense to what is expressed, exclusive of all others; it signifies only. "I saw but two planets." When used to imply a thing to be otherwise than it should be, it signifies yet, or nevertheless. "You pray, but it is not that God would bring you to the true religion." Joined with did or had, it denotes only. "Did but men consider." Tiliasf. After a comparative noun it has the force of than. "No sooner up, but he privately opened the gate." Guard. No. 167. After the auxiliary verb be, preceded by a negative, it implies otherwise than. "It cannot be but nature has some director." Hooker. Joined with for, it implies without, or had it not been for. "And but for mischief you had died for spite." Dryd. After a negative, or question implying a negative, it denotes an exception, except. "Who can it be, ye gods, but perjured Lycon?" Smith's Phœd.

BUT, f. [but, Fr.] a limit or boundary. In Sea Language, the end of any plank which joins to another on the outside of a ship under water.

BUT-END, the broad or blunt end of a thing, or the end on which it rests.

BUTCHER, f. [boucher, Fr.] one who kills, cuts up, and sells the flesh of cattle in a market, or his own house. Butcher is used figuratively for one who is of a barbarous disposition, delights in murder, or the slaughter of mankind.

To BUTCHER, v. a. to slay or kill a beast. Figuratively, to murder one of the human species in a barbarous and cruel manner.

BUTCHERLY, ad. in a cruel, barbarous, or bloody manner.

BUTCHERY, f. the trade of a butcher. Figuratively, the commission of murder, attended with excessive cruelty; cruelty; barbarity.

BUTESHIRE, in Scotland, consists of the islands of Arran and Bute, which lie in the Frith of Clyde, to the S. of Argyshire. They are fertile in corn and pastures, and there is a considerable herring fishery. This shire, together with Caithness, sends one member to parliament.

BUTLER, f. [formerly spelt bottiller, that is, one who fills bottles] [bouteillier, Fr.] a servant who has the care of the wine and other liquors used in a family.

BUTLERAGE, f. the duty upon wine imported, claimed by the king's butler.

BUTLERSHIP, f. the office of a butler.

BUTMENT,

BUTMENT, f. [abatement, Fr.] in Architecture, supports on, or against, which the feet of an arch rest; likewise the little places taken out of the yard or ground plot of a house for a buttry or scullery.

BUTT, f. [butte, Sax.] a vessel or barrel containing 126 gallons of wine, 108 of beer, and from 15 to 22 cwt. of currants.

BUTT, f. [but, Fr.] the place or mark which a push is to hit in shooting. Figuratively, the point or object to which any person's measures are made by a push in fencing; a person who is the object of ridicule to a whole company.

To BUTT, v. a. to strike or give a blow with the head, applied to the method of attack used by a ram.

BUTTER, f. [buttere, Sax.] a fat and nutritious substance made from cream by churning. Suffolk, being a good soil, is famous for very good butter.

To BUTTER, v. a. to spread or pour butter upon any thing.

BUTTER-FLY, f. [butterflege, Sax.] in Natural History, a beautiful insect produced from an egg, crucea-worm, caterpillar, and nymph, or aurelia. The wonders of the different stages before it arrives to its maturity, and the profusion of splendour which appears in its structure, when applied to the butter-fly from, would require too much room to expatiate on here.

BUTTERIS, f. in Farriery, an instrument of steel set in a wooden handle, used in paring the feet, or cutting the hoof of an horse.

BUTTER-MILK, f. the whey separated from the cream in making butter.

BUTTER-PRINT, f. a piece of carved wood, used to mark butter.

BUTTERY, a. having the appearance or qualities of butter.

BUTTERY, f. a room where butter or other provisions are kept.

BUTTOCK, f. the broad, thick, fleshy part of a man, or beast, joining to the hip. The beam of a ship is her full breadth right a-stern.

BUTTON, f. [botton, Brit.] a small flatish round ball made of metal, or wood covered with silk or hair, sewed to the cloaths to fasten any part of dress together. Figuratively, a knob or ball. In Botany, the round head of a plant; a bud. In Carpentry, a piece of wood moving upon a nail or screw, used to keep a door shut. In Smithery, a brass knob of a lock serving to open or shut a door. In Natural History, the sea-urchin, a kind of crabfish with prickles instead of feet.

To BUTTON, v. a. to sew buttons on a garment; to close or fasten the parts of a garment together with buttons. Figuratively, to include.

BUTTON-HOLE, f. the hole made in a garment to receive and fasten the button in.

BUTTRESS, f. [from aboutir, Fr.] in Architecture, a kind of butment serving to prop or support the sides of a building or wall.

Figuratively, a prop, or support of any opinion or cause.

To BUTTRESS, v. a. to prop, support, or secure from falling.

BUTYRACEOUS, or BUTYROUS, a. [from butyrum, Lat.] having the properties or qualities of butter.

BU'XOM, a. [boesum, Sax.] obedient; tractable. Figuratively, void of resistance; yielding, or giving way. Gay, lively, brisk, wanton, jolly.

BU'XOMLY, a. in a wanton, lively, gay, or amorous manner.

BU'XOMNESS, f. wanton, gay, or amorous.

BU'XSTEAD, or BU'CKSTEAD, a village in Suffex, 10 miles S. S. E. of East-Grinstead.

BU'XTON-WELLS, in Derbyshire, formerly noted for two springs which were near each other, one of which was very hot, and the other very cold; but the wonder is now lost, for they are blended together. It lies at the bottom of a dirty village of the same name, where there is a public inn, which is very large and commodious; a great deal of good company resort there in the summer-time, as well for air and exercise, as for the benefit of bathing. There is plenty of grouse or moor-game for those who love shooting, and trouts and greylings for those that love fishing. In short, here are diversions of all sorts at an easy rate. The water is not near so warm as the hot well at Bristol. It is 32 miles N. W. of Derby, and 159½ N. N. W. of London.

To BUY, v. a. [pron. by] [biegan, Sax.] to purchase a thing by money, or the exchange of any other commodity. Figuratively, to exchange one thing for another. To bribe, or corrupt by bribery.

BU'YER, [by'er] f. he that purchases a thing with money, &c.

To BUZZ, v. a. [biazen, Teut.] to hum, or make a noise like bees, flies, or wasps.

To BUZZ, v. n. To whisper. Used with abroad, to divulge, publish, or spread a report or rumour.

BUZZ, f. the humming sound of bees; a whisper, or talk.

BU'ZZARD, f. [busard, Fr.] a degenerate kind of hawk. Figuratively, a person of mean parts; a blockhead or dunce.

BU'ZZER, f. a secret whisperer, or one who endeavours, by false rumours, to alienate the affections of another.

BY, prep. [bi, big, Sax.] after words signifying action, it implies the agent, cause, means, manner; and is used after verbs neuter, for the instrument. After quantity it expresses the proportion. At the end of a sentence, it implies imitation or conformity. "A model to build others by." Arbitr. After an adjective of the comparative degree, it denotes the difference. "Shorter by the head." Applied to place or situation, it denotes nearness. Joined to the pronouns himself, herself, &c. it signifies the exclusion or absence of all others. After keep, it signifies possession, or ready for use.

use. "He kept some of the spirit by him." Boyle. In forms of swearing, it signifies a particularizing, or specifying the object. Used adverbially, it signifies near, or at a small distance, applied to place. Passing, applied to motion; and presence when used with be. "I will not be by." Shak. By and by, signifies a short time, or shortly. Used substantively, for something which is not the direct or immediate object of a person's regard; generally used with the preposition by. "By the by." Dryd. This word is commonly wrote bye, and as it distinguishes it from the preposition, should be generally adopted for the sake of perspicuity.

BY, or BYE, in Composition, implies something out of the direct way, as by-road; something irregular, private, or selfish, as by-end; something private, opposed to that which is by public authority, as a by-law.

BY-END, f. private, or self-interest, opposed to public spirit, and conveying an idea of reproach.

BY-GONE, a. past, peculiar to the Scotch.

BY-LAW, f. a law made by corporations or courts for the better government of cities, &c. in cases which are not provided for by the public laws, but no ways opposite or contrary to them.

BY-MATTER, f. something which is accidental, and has no connection with the main subject.

BY-PAST, a. past, peculiar to the Scotch.

BY-PATH, f. a private path, opposed to a public path.

BY-ROAD, f. an unfrequented road.

BY-WAY, f. a private and obscure way.

BY-WORD, f. [bi-word, Sax.] a saying, proverb, or term of reproach.

BY'ZANTINE, f. See BIZANTINE.

C.

C, The third letter in the English alphabet, is supposed by some to have been borrowed from the Hebrew, by others from the Grecian. It is sounded by pressing the breath between the tongue, raised to the roof of the mouth near the palate, and the lips open. Before the vowels a, o, u, and all consonants, it is pronounced hard, though somewhat softer than the k, as in cage, cat, cut; but before i, e, and y, it has a sound like the s, but somewhat more sharp, as in cit, cell, cyder; before an b, it has a peculiar sound, between the hardness of the k and the softness of the s, as in chain, cheese; but in words derived from the French, it is sounded like an f before b, as in cbaise, cbitane, which are pronounced baize, bitane. It has been customary to add a k to it, when it comes at the end of words, as in logick; but moderns seem now to have dropped it as useless, writing logic, critic, music, &c. which is certainly to be commended, not only as being more agreeable to the etymology of words derived from the Latin, but likewise confirmed by the practice of the Anglo-Saxons, from whom we have borrowed the best part of our language. Used as a figure, it stands for 100, and when double CC, 200. When placed before a name, it signifies Calus, Cesar, &c. With Roman lawyers, it signified condemni, from condemno. See A. When double, it signified consuls. In Commerce, it is used by merchants to mark their books. In Music, it denotes the highest part of a thorough bass.

CA'BAL, f. See CABALA.

CABA'L, f. [cabale, Fr.] a body of men united in some design to disturb or change the administration of a state, distinguished from party, in the same degree as few from many. Figuratively, an intrigue or plot to introduce a change in an administration.

To CA'BAL, v. n. [cabaler, Fr.] to form plots.

CA'BALA, f. [Chald.] properly signifies tradition, and is the name of a mysterious kind of science, thought to have been delivered by revelation to the ancient Jews, and transmitted by oral tradition to those of our times; serving for interpretation to the books both of nature and Scripture. It consisted principally in the combination of particular words, letters, and numbers, by means whereof the rabbins pretend to discover things future, and to see clearly into the sense of many difficult passages of Scripture.

CA'BALISTS, a. a sect among the Jews who interpret scripture.

CABALISTIC, or CABALISTICAL, a. something relating to the Cabalists; something mystical.

CABA'LLER, f. one who enters into plots and intrigues to disturb and change the administration of any government.

CA'BARET, f. [Fr.] in France, is a tavern.

CA'BBAGE, f. in Botany, the brassica, a kitchen plant with large, fleshy, and glaucous-coloured leaves. Linnæus ranges it in the second sect of his 15th class, joining the turnip, navew, and rocket to it; and its species are eight; the varieties of the first being eleven, and those of the third fort two.

To CA'BBAGE, v. a. to defraud a person of part of his cloth.

CA'BIN, f. [cabbin, Brit.] a little hut or cottage. On board a ship, small apartments, of different dimensions, for the officers to lie in.

To CA'BIN, v. n. to live in a cabin. Figuratively, to live or lie in any narrow or small place.

CA'BINED, a. belonging to a cabin. Figuratively, narrow, or belonging to a bed-chamber.

CA'BINET, f. [cabinet, Fr.] among Joiners, a kind of press or chest with several doors and drawers for preserving curiosities, or keeping cloaths. Figuratively, a room in which private private consultations are held. Hence a cabined course is that which is held with great privacy, and wherein the most important articles which concern a state, are determined.

CABINET MAKER, f. one who makes cabinets, chests of drawers, and other wooden furniture for chambers, or dining rooms.

CABLE, f. [cabl, Brit.] a thick, large, strong, three-strand rope, from three to twenty inches in diameter, fastened to an anchor to hold the ship when she rides. When two pieces of cable are spliced together, it is called a flat of the cable.

CABLED, a. belonging to, or resembling cables. Cabled flutes, in Architecture, are shafts which are filled up with pieces in the form of a cable. In Heraldry, a cabled cross is that which is formed of the two ends of a ship's cable.

CABOCHED, a. in Heraldry, the head of a hawk cut off behind the ears by a section parallel to the face.

CABURNS, f. small ropes used in a ship.

CACAO, or CA'COA, f. a nut about the size of a common almond, the fruit of a tree very common in the West Indies. The fruit, if fresh, has a brown and pretty even skin or rind; and when it is taken off, the kernel must appear fresh, plump, and shining, of a hazel-nut colour, very dark on the outside, a little more reddish within, of a bitterish and astringent taste, without any greenish or musty savour. It is one of the most oily fruits which nature produces, and never grows rank, how old soever it be. Of this fruit is made an excellent confection, as also chocolate.

CACHEXY, [kakhsy] f. [καχξία, Gr.] an ill habit of body, or such a distemperature of the humours, as hinders nutrition, and weakens the vital and animal functions.

CACHECTIC, or CACHECTICAL, [kakhsy or kakhsikal] a. having an ill habit of body.

CACHINATION, [kakinatshen] f. a loud laughter, or what we call a horse laugh.

CACKLE, f. the noise made by a goose or w.

To CACKLE, v. n. [kackelen, Brit.] to utter a noise like a goose; applied likewise to a man. Figuratively, to laugh heartily.

CACKLER, f. a fowl that cackles. Figuratively, a person who divulges a secret; a tattler, or venturer.

CACHYMY, [kakhsy] f. [καχυμία, Gr.] in Medicine, a vicious or corrupt and morbid humours.

CACODE'MON, f. [κακοδαίμων, Gr.] an evil spirit, or ghost; any imaginary frightful object, created in the minds of fearful and superstitious people. With Astrologers, it is a malignant spirit in a sphere of the heavens, supposed to be the pretended terror of its prognostications.

CACOTHES, f. [κακοθής, Gr.] in Medicine, an epithet applied by Hippocrates to an acute and difficult distemper. In Surgery, it is an inveterate disease, breaking out in boils or blains hardly curable.

CACOPHONY, [kakhsy] f. [κακοφωνία, Gr.] in Grammar and Rhetoric, the meeting together of letters, syllables, or words, which form a harsh and disagreeable sound.

To CACUMINATE, v. a. [cacumino, Lat.] to sharpen.

CAD'VEROUS, a. [from cadaver, Lat.] having the appearance or qualities of a dead body.

CADDIS, f. a kind of tape or ribbon. In Natural History, a kind of worm or grub found in a case of straw, derived from codde, Sax. a bag.

CADE, a. soft, tender, tame, delicate. In Husbandry, a cade lamb, is one that is bred in a house; a house lamb. Hence to cade, the verb, to bring up tenderly.

CADE, f. [cadus, Lat.] a cask, or barrel. A cade of herrings is a vessel containing 500, and a cade of sprats, 1000.

CA'DENCE, f. [cadence, Fr.] a fall, decline, or descent. In Music, cadence is a certain rest either at the end of a song, or of some of its parts into which it is divided, as into members or periods. Cadence, in Dancing, is when the several steps and motions follow or answer the different notes or measure of the music.

CA'DET, f. [cadet, Fr.] the younger son of a family, is a word naturalized in our language from the French. Among the military men, it denotes a young gentleman, who serves in a marching regiment, as a private man, at his own expence, with a view to acquire knowledge in the art of war, and to obtain a commission in the army.

CA'DEW, or CA'DEWORM, f. in Natural History, a kind of worms, which in time change into butterflies.

CA'DI, f. a magistrate among the Turks.

CA'DIZ, a handsome, large, strong, rich, and famous town of Spain, in Andalusia, with a good harbour, frequented by merchant ships from all parts. It is a bishop's see, and seated on an island, about 18 miles in length, and 9 in breadth; but the N. W. end, where the town stands, is not two broad. It has a communication with the continent on the opposite shore by a bridge. The bay formed by it is 12 miles in length, and six in breadth. All the Spanish ships go from hence to the West-Indies, and return hither. It was taken and plundered by the English in 1596; but being attempted again in 1702, they had not the like success. It contains about 5000 houses, and 50,000 inhabitants; and the cathedral is a very handsome structure. Lon. 6. 46. W. lat. 36. 25. N.

CA'DMIA, f. a recement of copper ore produced in furnaces, when that metal is separated from its ore.

CADUCE, or CADUCEUS, f. [Lar.] among the Romans, was a white staff or wand, carried by those officers who went to proclaim peace with any people with whom they had been at variance. Also, a rod entwined by two serpents, borne by Mercury, as the ensign emign of his quality and office, given him, according to the fable, for his seven-stringed harp. The poets ascribe to this rod the properties of laying men asleep, raising the dead, &c.

CÆCUM, f. [Lat.] in Anatomy, one of the three portions of the larger intestines.

CAERF'LLY, a town of Glamorganshire, in South-Wales, with a market on Thursdays. It is seated between the rivers Taff and Bumney, in a moorish ground, and among the hills. It is thought the walls now in ruins were built by the Romans, there being often Roman coins dug up here. It is 5 miles N. of Landaff, and 158 W. of London.

CAERLE'ON, a town of Monmouthshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is a place of great antiquity, and was a Roman town, as is evident from the many Roman antiquities found here. It is commodiously seated on the river Ulk, over which there is a large wooden bridge. The houses are generally built of stone; and there are the ruins of a castle still to be seen. It is 19 miles S. W. of Monmouth, and 147½ W. by N. of London.

CAER'RWIS, a town of Flintshire, in N. Wales, with a market on Tuesdays. It is seated on an ascent; and, though it is but a small place, the market is very good for corn and provisions. It is five miles E. of St. Asaph, five W. of Flint, and 203 N. W. of London.

CÆSTUS, f. [Lat.] a large gauntlet made of raw hides, used in combats with the ancients; they were studded with nails, or strengthened with lead or plates of iron, and furrowed the hands, wrist, and arm, to guard them from blows, and prevent their being broken or dislocated.

CAFTAN, f. [Pers.] a Persian vest or garment.

CAG, f. à barrel or wooden vessel, containing four or five gallons.

CAGE, f. [cage, Fr.] an inclosure of twigs or wire, in which birds are kept; a place for wild beasts, inclosed with palisadoes; a prison for people guilty of petty crimes.

To CAGE, v. a. to inclose or confine in a cage.

To CAJOLE, v. a. [cajoler, Fr.] to flatter, soothe, or coax, including the idea of dissimulation.

CAJOLER, f. a flatterer, or wheedler.

CAJOSTER, a town in Lincolnshire, 155 miles from London.

CAISSON, f. [Fr.] a chest of bombs or powder, laid in the enemy's way, to be fired on his approach.

CAITIFF, f. [cheif, Fr.] a criminal who is guilty of meanness; a detestable contemptible villain.

CAKE, f. [caecen, Brit.] a rich kind of baked bread, generally thin and round. Figuratively, any thing composed of flour and baked made in a thin and flatish form.

To CAKE, v. u. to harden like dough in the oven.

CALABA'SH-FREE, f. in Botany, a large tree growing from twenty-three to thirty feet high. The shells of the fruit are used by the negroes for cups.

CALAIS, a strong town of France, in Lower Picardy, with a citadel, and a fortified harbour. It is built in the form of a triangle, one side of which is towards the sea. The citadel is as large as the town, and has but one entrance. It is a trading place, with handsome streets, and several churches and monasteries; the number of inhabitants is reckoned to be 4000. It was taken by King Edward III. in 1347; and was lost in Queen Mary's time in 1557. It was bombarded by the English in 1696, without doing much damage. The fortifications are good; but its greatest strength is its situation among the marshes, which may be overflowed at the approach of an enemy. The harbour is not so good as formerly, nor will it admit vessels of any great burden. In times of peace there are packet-boats going backward and forward twice a week, from Dover to Calais, which is 21 miles distant. It is 25 miles W. of Dunkirk, and 152 N. of Paris. Lon. 2. 6. E. lat. 50. 58. N.

CALAMA'NCO, f. a kind of woollen stuff, with a glossy surface.

CALAMINE, f. [lapis calaminaris, Lat.] a hard, heavy mineral substance, appearing of a stony nature, but a lax and cavernous structure, generally found in loose masses, from the size of a walnut to those of three pounds and upwards.

CALAMINT, f. [calaminta, Lat.] in Botany, a species of the melissa or baum, which grows naturally in the mountains of Tuscany.

CALAMITOUS, a. [calamitosus, Lat.] involved in misfortunes; wretched; unfortunate; unhappy, oppressed with misery, applied to persons. Fatal, noxious, unwholesome, or productive of misery, or distress, applied to things.

CALAMITY, f. misfortune, affliction, distress, the cause of misery. SYNON. Each of these words denotes a sad event; but that of misfortune is applied to casualties and outward circumstances, things detached from us. Disaster respects properly personal accidents. Calamity implies something more general.

CALAMUS, f. [Lat.] in Botany, a reed or sweet-scented wood.

CALASH, f. [caleche, Fr.] a light four-wheeled uncovered carriage, drove by the traveller himself.

CALCEDONIUS, f. [Lat.] a precious stone of the agate kind.

CALCINATION, f. [calcination, Fr.] the rendering a body reducible to powder by means of fire.

CALCINATORY, f. a vessel used in calcining.

To CALCINE, v. a. [from calx, Lat.] to make a thing easily powdered by means of fire; to burn in the fire to a substance, which a small force will crumble; to reduce to ashes; to burn to a cinder. Figuratively, to consume or destroy.

destroy.

CALCOGRAPHY, f. [χάλκος and γράφω, Gr.] the art of engraving on brass or copper-plates.

TO CALCULATE, v. a. [calculus, Fr.] to find out the value or amount of any thing by arithmetic; to compute or find the situation of the planets; to contrive or adapt to a certain case.

CALCULATION, f. an operation in arithmetic. Figuratively, a deduction of reason; the result of an arithmetical operation.

CALCULATOR, f. one who computes, or calculates.

CALCULATORY, a. belonging to calculation or computation.

CALCULOSE, or CALCULOUS, a. stony, gritty & having the stone or gravel.

CALCULUS, f. [Lat.] in Medicine, the stone in the kidneys, ureters, or bladder.

CALCUTTA. See WILLIAM'S FORT.

CA'LDRON, or CAU'LDRON, f. [caudron, Fr.] a large vessel to heat water, or dress victuals in; a pot.

CALEFACTION, f. [from calefacio, Lat.] the act of heating any thing; the state of being heated.

CALEFACTIVE, or CALEFACTORY, a. that which heats, or has the power of heating.

TO CA'LEFY, v. n. [calefio, Lat.] to grow hot; to be heated.

CA'LENDAR, f. [calendarium, Lat.] a table containing the days, months, festivals, &c. happening in the year. The Roman calendar, from which ours is borrowed, was composed by Romulus, who made the year consist of no more than 364 days; Numa Pompilius corrected his error, by making it consist of twelve lunar months of thirty and twenty-nine days alternately, which made 354 days; but being fond of an odd number, he added one day more, which made it 355 days; and that the civil year might equal the sun's motion, he added a month every second year. Julius Cæsar, as a farther improvement, made the year consist of 365 days, and left the six hours to form a day, at the end of every fourth year, which was added to the month of February. This calendar was called the Julian, or the old stile, in opposition to the new stile introduced by Gregory XIII. who finding the Julian gone too forward, cut off ten days from the calendar; and, to remedy this defect for the future, left out one bissextile day every 100 years, making every fourth hundred a leap year. By act of parliament, to remedy the inconveniences arising from the differences of style, this kingdom adopted the Gregorian, or new style, by leaving out eleven days of the month of September in the year 1752.

CALENDER, f. a hot press, made use of to press, smooth, or water manufactures of silk, wool, or linen. In Natural History, the word is applied to an insect, which preys on corn, leaving nothing but the husks, and giving the flour made of it a very bad taste.

TO CA'LENDER, v. a. to smooth, water, or dress any manufacture in a hot press or calender.

CA'LENDERED, a. applied to corn, devoured by the calender, an insect.

CA'LENDERER, f. one who presses, smooths, or waters manufactures in a hot press or calender.

CA'LEND, f. [it has no singular, calendæ, Lat.] the first day of the month among the Romans: they were reckoned backwards thus: the first day of February was called the calends of February, the thirty-first of January the second of the calends of February, and so on to the 19th, when the ides commenced.

CA'LENTURE, f. [from calro, Lat.] in Medicine, an inflammatory fever, frequent at sea.

CALF, f. [plural calves] [ecalf, Sax.] the young of a cow. The swelling fleshy part of a man's leg.

CA'LIBER, f. [calibre, Fr.] the extent or diameter of any round thing; an instrument used by carpenters. Among the gunsmiths, wooden calibers are models by which they cut the stocks whereon they mount their guns, pistols, &c. Steel calibers are instruments with which they turn and file their screws. In Gunnery, the diameter of the mouth or bore of a piece of cannon, or of the ball it carries. Caliber compasses, a pair of compasses, with the legs bent inwards, furnished with a tongue, which moves on a rivet on one of its legs, and is used to take the dimensions of the bore of a cannon, together with the size and weight of the ball it can carry.

CA'LICE, or CHA'LICE, f. [calix, Lat.] a cup; appropriated to the cups or vessels which the communicants drink out of at the Lord's supper.

CA'LICO, f. [from Calicut in India] a kind of linen manufacture imported by the East-India company.

CA'LD, a. [calidus, Lat.] hot, burning.

CAL'DITY, f. [caliditas, Lat.] heat.

CA'LIF, or CA'LIPH, f. [khalifa, Arab.] a title given to the successors of Mahomet among the Saracens, by whom it is accounted the supreme ecclesiastical dignity; or, among the Mahometans, a sovereign dignity, vested with absolute authority in all matters relating both to religion and polity.

CALIGATION, f. [from caligo, Lat.] darkness, cloudiness, dimness of sight.

CALIGINOUS, a. [caliginosus, Lat.] dark, dim, cloudy, obscure.

CA'LIGRAPHY, f. [καλλιγραφία, Gr.] a neat and handsome hand, applied to writing; beautiful writing.

CA'LIVER, f. a hand-gun, harquebuse; a small gun used at sea.

CA'LIX, f. [Lat.] in Botany, the outward greenish cover which encompasses the petals or other parts of a flower.

CA'LIXTINS, f. in Church History, a sect of Christians in Bohemia and Moravia: the principal point in which they differed from the the church was the use of the chalices, or communicating in both kinds. It was also a name given to those among the Lutherans, who followed the sentiments of George Calixtus, a celebrated divine, who opposed the opinion of St. Augustine on predestination, grace, and free-will.

To CALK, [caulk] v. a. [from calage, Fr.] to stop the seams or other leaks of a ship with oakum or tow, to keep the water out.

CAL'KER, [caulker] f. the person who stops the leaks of a ship.

CAL'KING, [caulking] f. stopping the leaks or seams of a ship with oakum or tow, which is afterwards covered with a mixture of tallow, pitch, and tar, as low as it draws water.

To CALI, v. a. [pron. caull] [calo, Lat.] to name. Used with on and upon, to visit or go to a person's house. In Divinity, to receive a mission from God; and used with upon, to implore; to pray to in distress, with confidence of assistance. To call back, to revoke. To call over, to read aloud a list or muster roll. To call names, to abuse a person by some reproachful term or word. To call in, applied to money, to collect or demand a sum lent. Joined with out, to challenge, provoke, or excite to combat or danger.

CALL, [caull] f. an address by word of mouth. Figuratively, a mission from God. In law, a nomination or admission. Used with upon, a claim or demand. Within call, not far off; within hearing. An instrument imitating the notes of birds, and used by bird-catchers to bring them into their traps.

CAL'LING, [caulling] f. the business or trade a person professes; station, employment, or profession; divine vocation; invitation to the true religion.

CAL'LLINGTON, or KE'LLINGTON, a village in Cornwall, 15 miles N. by W. of Falmouth. The market is on Wednesdays; and it is 217 miles from London.

CALLIOPE, [Καλλιόπη, Gr.] f. the muse who presides over rhetoric and heroic verse.

CAL'LIPERS, f. See CALIBER, of which this is a corruption.

CALLO'SITY, f. [callosité, Fr.] in Anatomy, a hardness of the skin, owing to hard labour, or frequent rubbings, whereby it becomes insensible.

CAL'LOUS, a. grown hard, swelling, and insensible. Applied to the mind or conscience, not to be moved by threats or promises.

CAL'LOUSNESS, f. insensibility of the body, wherein the skin grows into knobs, and loses all sensation; the hardness of the juices which knit together the extremities of a broken bone. Figuratively, insensibility, applied to the mind.

CAL'LOW, a. unsledged; without feathers.

CAL'LLUS, f. [Lat.] See CALLO'SITY.

CALM, a. [calmer, Belg.] undisturbed by tempests or violent winds, applied to the sea and elements. Undisturbed by boisterous passions, applied to the mind. Substantively, used for a freedom from tempests or winds at sea.

To CALM, v. a. to put an end to a tempest. Figuratively, to sooth or pacify; to appease.

CAL'MER, f. the person or thing which reduces from a state of turbulence or violence to one of quietness, rest, and serenity.

CAL'MLY, a. free from violence, furiousness, or tempestuous commotion. Figuratively, in a serene, cool manner.

CAL'MNESS, f. a state of quiet free from the disturbance of violent winds. Figuratively, a state of cool and sedate tranquillity; mildness.

CALNE, a town of Wiltshire, with a market on Tuesdays. It is seated on a river of the same name; it has a handsome church, and sends two members to parliament. It is 87½ miles W. of London.

CAL'LOMEL, f. [καλός and μέλος, Gr.] in Chemistry, a name given to mercury sublimated a fourth time or upwards, which makes it more gentle in its operation, and fits it to act as an alterative.

CALORIFIC, a. [calorificus, Lat.] that which has the power of heating.

CALOTTE, f. [Fr.] a cap or coil of hair, worn first by cardinal Richlieu. A red calotte is become the badge of a cardinal. In Architecture, a round cavity or depression.

CAL'OYERS, f. [from κάλος, Gr.] monks of the Greek church, who live a very retired and austere life, eat no flesh, keep four Lent, and never break their fasts till they have earned that meal by their labour.

CAL'TROPS, f. [caltræppe, Sax.] an instrument with four iron spikes, disposed in such a manner that one of them will always be upright, and three of them in the ground. They are used to annoy, embarrass, and wound the horses feet of the cavalry. In Botany, a plant so called from its resembling the instrument just described, and being very troublesome to cattle by pricking their feet.

To CALVE, v. n. to bring forth a calf.

CALVINISTS, f. in Church History, are those who follow the opinions of John Calvin, one of the principal reformers of the church, in the 16th century, a man of great parts and industry, and of considerable learning; whose doctrine still subsists in its greatest purity at Geneva, where it was first broached, and from whence it was propagated. This is the prevailing religion of the United Provinces. In England it is confined among the Dissenters; and in Scotland it is held in its utmost rigour. The Calvinists are great advocates for the absoluteness of God's decrees, and hold, that election and reprobation depend on the mere will of God, without any regard to merit or demerit of man; that he affords to the elect an irresistible grace, a faith that they cannot lose, which takes away the freedom of will, and necessitates all their actions to virtue. They believe that God foreknew a determinate number in whom he intended to manifest his glory; and having thus foreknown them, he predestinated them to be holy; in order to which, he gives them an irresistible grace, which makes it impossible for them to be otherwise.

CALUMET

CALUMET, f. a symbol of peace among the Indians of North America. It is made of a red stone, like our marble: the head resembles that of a tobacco-pipe, but larger, and is fixed on a hollow reed, to hold it for smoking. They adorn it with fine wings of various colours, and is the Calumets of the sun, to whom they present it, especially if they want fair weather, or rain. This pipe is a pas or safe-conduct amongst all the allies of the nation that has it given. In all embassies the ambassador carries it as an emblem of peace, and is always received with a profound regard; the savages being persuaded that a violation of the Calumet would be attended with some dire misfortune.

To CALUMNIATE, v. n. [calumniar, Lat.] to accuse falsely; to slander.

CALUMNIATION, f. a false representation of a person's words and actions, in order to render his character suspected.

CALUMNIATOR, f. [Lat.] one who slanders another to ruin his reputation.

CALUMNIOUS, a. slanderous; falsely accusing.

CALUMNY, f. [calumnia, Lat.] the falsely accusing of a person with crimes, or misrepresenting his words and actions, in order to make his character suspicious.

CALX, f. [Lat.] lime, or a sort of stone burnt in a kiln in order to make mortar. In Chemistry, a kind of ashes.

CAMAI'EU, f. [camachista, Ital.] a particular kind of onyx, which can be engraved either in relievo or creux; a kind of onyx, on which are represented landscapes, &c.

CAMBER, f. a piece of timber cut arching.

CAMBRICK, f. [toile de Cambray, Fr.] a species of linen made of flax, very fine and white, at first manufactured at Cambray.

CAMBRIDGE, [in Latin Cambridgegia] the capital of the county of the same name. It stands in a spacious, delightful, and fertile plain on the river Cam, by which it is divided into two parts; it is a pretty large place; but most of its streets are narrow, and many of the houses much out of repair; so that, were it not for the colleges, for which it is famous, and other public edifices, it would make no striking appearance. The town is governed by a mayor and aldermen. The university has a chancellor, an honorary title, now in the Duke of Grafton, under whom is a commissary, who holds a court of record; a high steward; a vice-chancellor, who is independent of the chancellor, and has the exercise of the government in the university. Under him are two proctors, and two taxers for weights and measures; a registrar; besides four beadles; and a librarian. To the university belong fifteen colleges, (besides Downing-college, now building, founded by the late Sir Jacob Downing, bart. who left an estate of 6000*l.* per ann. to endow it) halls, or houses, with the same number of heads or masters, 406 fellowships, added to the masters; and in conjunction with them have the oversight of the students, 662 scholarships, and 236 exhibitions. The number of all these, together with the other students, has been about 1500 for some years past. All the colleges, two only excepted, lie round the skirts of the town, have a beautiful prospect into the fields, a pure air, and fine gardens. The senate-house lies in the middle of the town, a new and handsome building. Near it are the public halls, the consistory or vice-chancellor's court-house, and the cabinet of natural curiosities, which were collected by Dr. John Woodward. The university library is over the halls, containing about 41,000 books; it was greatly augmented by King George I. with the library of Dr. John More, bishop of Ely, which consisted of thirty thousand volumes, and cost his majesty 6000 guineas, &c. in acknowledgment of which, and other favours, the senate decreed a statue to be erected to him, which Charles Lord Townshend caused to be made of marble at his own expence, and his son Charles finished it. The university, as well as the town, send each two members to parliament. Contiguous to the town-hall is a new shire-house of brick and stone. The markets at Cambridge are on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Here are fourteen parish churches. It lies 51 miles N. of London, and 50 N. of Oxford.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE, an inland county of England, 47 miles in length, and 18 in breadth, and is bounded on the E. by Suffolk and Norfolk, on the S. by Essex and Hertfordshire, on the W. by Bedford and Huntingdon shires, and on the N. by Lincoln and part of Huntingdon shires. It contains 8 market-towns, and 163 parishes, and it sends six members to parliament. The principal river is the Ouse, which runs through the country from W. to E. The air and soil of the S. part is very good; but the N. fenny and aguish; and here there are large weirs and meers full of fish. The capital town is Cambridge. besides which there is Ely, a bishop's see.

CAMBRON, a village in Cornwall, five miles W. of Redruth.

CAME, the preter of the verb COM E,

CAMEL, f. [camelus, Lat.] in Natural Hist. a large four-footed animal, of which there are several species; one sort being large, is able to carry burdens of a thousand pounds weight, having one bunch on its neck; another sort has two bunches like a natural saddle, and are used either for carrying burdens, or to ride on; they have large solid feet, but not hard; in spring they cast their coats, and will, it is said, continue ten or eleven days without eating or drinking.

CAMELEON, f. in Natural History, a little animal of the lizard kind. Its tongue is half as long as itself, round as far as the tip, which is hollow, on that account called a trunk, and used by it in catching flies, on which it subsists.

CAMELFORD, a town in Cornwall, with a market on Fridays. It is seated on the river Camel; sends two members to parliament; and is governed by a mayor, aldermen, and and recorder. It has one church, situated half a mile out of the town, and about 100 houses badly built, but the streets are broad and well paved. Here is also a large market for yarn; a great quantity of which is spun in this place and its neighbourhood. It is 228½ miles W. by S. of London.

CAMELOT, CAMBLET, or CAMLET, f. [camelot, Fr.] a stuff made of goats hair, with wool, or silk, or both.

CAME'RA OBSCURA, f. [Lat.] in Optics, a machine representing an artificial eye, wherein the images of external objects are exhibited distinctly, in their native colours, exact proportions, real situations, and in all their perspectives or fore-shortenings. It is made sometimes by darkening the windows of a room, that look into a street, gardens, &c. and making a small hole in the shutters, fixing therein a plain glass convex, or rather a tube with two glasses; for only with one glass the object will be represented upon the wall, a sheet, &c. hung on purpose in an inverted posture.

CAMERATED, a. [cam-ratus, Lat.] arched or vaulted.

CAMERA'TION, f. [cameratio, Lat.] a vaulting or arching.

CAMISA'DO, f. [from camisa, Ital.] a military term, denoting an attack by surprize in the night, in which the assailants wear their shirts outward, as a distinction to know their own men from the enemy.

CAM'LET. - See CAMELOT.

CAMP, f. [camp, Fr.] the order of tents pitched by an army when they keep the field; the place where an army rests, or dwells in tents or barracks. A flying camp is a strong body of horse, &c. which always keep the field, and are continually in motion, either to cover any place, or to surprize, or fatigue an enemy, and cause a diversion.

To CAMP, v. a. to fix tents, and remain in a field, applied to an army.

CAMPAIGN, [pron. campain] f. [campagne, Fr.] that space of time during which an army keeps the field, without going into winter quarters.

CAMPBELTON, a parliament town of Scotland, with a harbour. It is seated on the eastern coast of Cantire, in the shire of Argyle, 10 miles W. of the isle of Arran.

CAMPDEN, a town in Gloucestershire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is a large, but poor town, gives title to a viscount, and sends two members to parliament. It is 86½ miles N. W. by W. of London.

CAMPHIRE, or CAMPHOR, [kämpfire, or kämpfor] f. [campbora, Lat.] in Pharmacy, a peculiar kind of substance, being neither a rosin, volatile salt, oil, bitumen, juice, nor gum, but a mixed substance, white, transparent, dry, brittle, of a strong and penetrating smell, easily evaporated in the air, when heated, and when in flames not easily extinguished, but burning even in water and in snow. There are two sorts, natural and fac-titious. The camphire-tree is a species of the laurus, pretty large and thick; its branches are garnished with oval, spear-shaped leaves, when fully grown, of a yellow colour, and when broken, emit a strong odour of camphire.

CAMPHORATED, [kämpforated] a. that which has camphire mixed with it.

CAN, f. [canne, Sax.] a drinking vessel, or a cup made of wood in the form of a cask or barrel. Figuratively, any drinking vessel not made of earth.

CAN, v. n. [konnen, Belg.] [it is sometimes, but seldom, used as an absolute verb, but constantly joined with another verb, as a sign of the potential mood. Its present is declined thus: I can, thou canst, he can, we can, &c. and its preter, I could, thou couldst, &c.] to be able; to have power sufficient to do an action. Though taken as a sign of the potential mood, yet it differs very much from may; may denoting right, lawfulness, or a permission to do a thing; but can, the power or strength of the doer or agent, and with the verb active is applied to persons; as, I can do it; but, with the passive, relates to things; as, it can be done.

CANADA; a large country of N. America, bounded on the W. by the Ocean, on the S. by the Mississippi, on the E. by New York, Pennsylvania, &c. and on the N. by the river St. Lawrence, and the territory of the Hudson's-Bay company. It was discovered by John and Sebastian Cabot, father and son, in 1497. This country in general is pretty good; but the winter continues for six months very severe. The land that is cleared of trees is very fertile, and the wheat sowed in May is reaped the latter end of August. Pulse in general, and especially pease, thrive very well, and are very good. The woods are full of wild vines, game, and animals peculiar to N. America; but the beaver is the most useful and curious of them all. The rivers and lakes are full of fish; and there is a great number of trees unknown in Europe. Canada turpentine is greatly esteemed for its balsamic qualities, and for the disorders of the breast and stomach. The original natives of the country speak four different languages, and may be divided into as many different tribes, viz. the Siouxe, the Algon-giere, the Hautonne, and that of the Eskimaux. Most of them live a wandering life, and maintain themselves by hunting. Their complexion is of a red copper colour, like the rest of the Americans, with coarse hair, and no beards, except the Eskimaux, who are a hairy, cruel, savage nation. They are very fond of brandy; and, when they are drunk, they become almost mad. They all seem to worship the sun, and acknowledge tutelary gods as well as the First Being. Their wars are bloody; and at present they make use of fire-arms. Quebec is the capital town; which was taken by the English on the 18th of September in the year 1759; at the siege of which the brave General Wolfe lost his life, but not before he perceived that the English forces were victorious. The whole country was afterwards reduced reduced and ceded to the English by the peace of 1763.

CANAÏLLE, f. in France, the lowest rank of people; the vulgar.

CANA'L, f. [canalis, Lat.] a place cut in a garden to receive water from a river or pipes; a hollow place cut for the reception of the sea; any tract of water made by art. In Anatomy, a duct or passage through which any of the juices flow.

CANALI'LATED, a. [canaliculatus, Lat.] made like a pipe or gutter.

CANARIES, f. in Geography, twelve small islands in the Atlantic Ocean, west of Africa, discovered by Bothencourt, a Frenchman, but now belonging to Spain. They make a great deal of wine, which is called Cuxary, from one of the most considerable of all these islands.

CANARY-BIRD, f. a singing bird formerly peculiar to the Canaries, of the linnæan kind, of a yellow, or yellowish green colour, a very loud note, and of great boldness.

To CAN'CEL, v. a. [cancellor, Fr.] to cross a writing, and thereby render it of no effect. Figuratively, to destroy a deed by tearing off the seal or name; to efface or obliterate.

CANCELLATION, f. an expunging or annulling the power of an instrument.

CANCER, f. [Lat.] in Astronomy, a sign of the Zodiac, into which the sun enters in June, and represented on globes by the figure of a crab, in order to express the returning of the sun, or its coming back to the equator from thence; or from its seeming not to advance, but rather to go back for some days when in the solstitial point, in which respect it imitates the motion ascribed to that animal. The stars in this constellation, according to Flamsteed, are 71. The tropic of Cancer, is a less circle of the sphere, parallel to the equator, and passing through the beginning of the sign Cancer; all the inhabitants within this space have the sun perpendicular or vertical twice a year, and are situated in the Torrid Zone. In Surgery, a roundish, unequal, livid, hard tumour.

To CANCERATE, v. n. to grow cancerous; to turn to a cancer.

CANCEROUS, a. having the virulence of a cancer.

CANCEROUSNESS, f. the quality arising from a cancer.

CAN'DENT, a. [candens, Lat.] hot.

CAN'DIA, an island in the Mediterranean, formerly called Crete, and lies on the S. of the Archipelago. The capital town is of the same name, which, though populous formerly, is now little better than a desert, there being nothing but rubbish, except at the Bazar or market-place; likewise the harbour of Candia is now fit for nothing but boats: however, the walls of the town are yet standing, which are pretty strong; and it is the see of a Greek archbishop. Here are some Greeks, a few Jews, and some Armenians, besides three or four French families, with a vice-consul.

The product of this island is corn, wine, oil, wool, silk, and excellent honey. Mount Ida, so famous in History, is in the middle of this island, and is nothing but a huge, overgrown, ugly, sharp-pointed eminence, with not the least shadow of a landscape: no delightful grotto, no public spring, nor no purling rivulet are to be seen thereon. It is about 200 miles in length, 50 in breadth, and 500 in circumference. Lon. 25. 23. E. lat. 35. 20 N.

CAN'DID, a. [candidus, Lat.] white. Figuratively, impartial; mild; uninfluenced by sinister motives, malice or prejudice.

CAN'DIDATE, f. [from candidus, Lat.] one who solicits the votes of others, in order to attain any place, or office conferred by a majority; one who opposes another; a competitor.

CAN'DIDLY, ad. in an impartial manner; without prejudice, malice, or envy; fairly.

CAN'DLE, f. [candela, Lat.] a wick of cotton covered with wax, spermaceti, or tallow, of a cylindrical form, used to supply the want of day-light. Sale by the candle, or inch of candle, is an auction which lasts only while a piece of candle, lighted for that purpose, continues burning, the last bidder before it is extinct being adjudged the purchaser.

CAN'DLE-LIGHT, f. the light afforded by a candle.

CAN'DLEMAS, f. a festival appointed by the church, to be observed the second of February, in honour of the purification of the blessed virgin Mary. It was celebrated by the ancient Christians; who, on that day, used abundance of lights in their churches and processions, in memory, as is supposed, of our Saviour's being on that day, declared to be a light to lighten the Gentiles. In imitation of which, the Roman Catholics, on this day, consecrate all their tapers and candles which they use in their churches during the whole year.

CAN'DOUR, f. [candor, Lat.] a temper of mind unclouded by envy, untroubled by malice, and unseduced by prejudice; sweet without weakness, and impartial without rigour.

To CAN'DY, v. a. to prefer, by boiling in sugar; to melt and crystallize sugar several times, to render it hard and transparent. Figuratively, to freeze, to be covered with a hard substance, or rakes. To flatter, or make use of soothing and insinuating expressions. Neuterly, to grow hard; to grow thick, or be covered with flakes.

CANE, f. [canina, Lat.] in Botany, a kind of reed growing in several joints, and of different dimensions. The bamboo, which grows in the Indies, especially at Bengal, to a prodigious size, is wrought into bows, or other household utensils, by the inhabitants; the smaller sort is made into fishing rods. The walking cane is that which grows in the East Indies; those which are without joints are by far the best, and more elastic. Hence the word signifies, figuratively, a walking-staff.

To CANE, v. a. to beat a person with a cane, cane, or a walking-staff.

CANICULA, f. [Lat.] in Astronomy, the name of one of the stars in the constellation of Canis Major, called the Dog-star; from whose heliacal rising with the sun, that is, its emergence from the sun's rays, the ancients reckoned their dog-days; and the Egyptians and Ethiopians began their year.

CANICULAR, a. [canicularis, Lat.] of or belonging to the dog-days. The canicular days are a certain number of days preceding or ensuing the heliacal rising of the Canicula, or Dog-star.

CANINE, a. [caninus, Lat.] having the properties of, or resembling a dog.

CANINE-TEETH, f. [dentes canini, Lat.] in Anatomy two sharp-edged teeth in each jaw, between the incisors and molars, so called from their resembling the correspondent teeth in a dog.

CANIS MAJOR, f. [Lat. the Great Dog] in Astronomy, a constellation in the southern hemisphere, consisting, according to Flamsteed, of 32 stars.

CANIS MINOR, f. [Lat.] or the Lesser Dog, is the same as Canicula; which see.

CANISTER, [canistrum, Lat.] in its primary sense, which is now obsolete, a basket. In its secondary, a small box or receptacle made of tin, or other metal, or porcelain, to hold tea, sugar, &c.

CANKER, f. [cancer, Lat.] in Natural History, a small worm which preys upon fruit, joined with the word worm. In Medicine, a speck made by a sharp humour, which grows or corrodes the flesh like a caustick, and is common to children; a corrosive humour. Figuratively, that which gradually and inevitably destroys. A disease incident to trees, which makes the bark rot and fall off. Applied to brass, a kind of rust or verdigrise, which covers its surface with a green colour.

To CANKER, v. n. to rust, or grow green, applied to brass or other metals; to be corroded, to grow foul or corrupt. Actively, to corrode; to pollute; to eat or gnaw; to infect; including the idea of acrimony.

CANNABINE, a. [cannabinus, Lat.] hempen.

CANNEL-COAL, f. is a substance which is often confounded with jet. It is dug up in many parts of England in great abundance, particularly in Lancashire, where it is burnt as common fuel. It is worked into toys and utensils of various kinds under the name of jet. In Medicine, it is good in the colic, as an emollient, and discutient.

CANNIBAL, f. one who lives upon human flesh.

CANNIBALLY, ad. after the manner or practice of cannibals.

CANNON, f. [canon, Fr.] a hollow, cylindrical instrument, made of a mixt metal, furnished with a touch-hole, and used to shoot a ball by the force of gun-powder. This military engine is supposed to have been invented by J. Owen, an Englishman; and it is evident that the first which were ever seen in France belonged to this nation, and were used in the battle of Cressy, in 1346.

CANNON-BALL, or CANNON-BULLET, f. the ball or bullet with which a cannon is charged.

To CANNONA'DE, v. n. to attack with, or fire cannon against. Sometimes used neuterly.

CANNONIER, f. [pron. cannoner] the person who discharges or fires a cannon.

CANNO'T, v. n. not able, not having power enough for the performance of a thing. Joined with but, it implies necessity, and signifies must. "I cannot but believe." Locke, CANOA, or CANOE, [pron. canio] f. an Indian vessel or boat, made of the trunk of a tree, dug hollow; pieces of bark sewed together; or of the small sticks of a pliant wood, covered with seal skins.

CANON, f. [κάνων, Gr.] in Ecclesiastical Hist. a law or rule, relating either to the doctrine or discipline of a church, enacted by a general council, and confirmed by the principal magistrats. Applied to the Scripture, such books as are held to be really inspired. A law or rule in any science. In Surgery, an instrument used in sewing up wounds. In Geometry and Algebra, a general rule for the solution of all questions of the same nature.

CANON, f. [κάνων, Gr.] a person who possesses a prebend, or revenue allotted for performance of divine service in a cathedral or collegiate church.

CANONESS, f. in the Romish church, a woman who enjoys a prebend, and lives after the manner of Secular Canons, without being obliged to renounce the world, or make any vows.

CANONICAL, a. [canonicus, Lat.] applied to ceremonies and discipline, those which are established by the laws of the church. Applied to books, those which are generally allowed to be divinely inspired. Applied to time, or hours, those which are prescribed or limited by the church, for the performance of, or celebrating of, any ceremony or act of religion.

CANONICALLY, ad. in a manner agreeable to the prescriptions and laws of the church.

CANONICALNESS, f. the quality which denotes a thing to be founded on, or agreeable to, the laws of the church.

CANONIST, f. one who makes the canons his peculiar study; a professor of the canon law.

CANONIZATION, f. in the Roman Church, a declaration of the pope's, whereby, after some solemnity, a person who has been eminent for an exemplary life, and a supposed power of working miracles, enters into the lists of the saints.

To CANONIZE, v. a. to enter a person's name in the list of saints; to make a saint.

CANONRY, or CANONSHIP, f. the benefice, office, or duty of a canon.

CANOPIED,

CANOPYED, a. covered above with a canopy, spread above, or over the head.

CANOPY, f. [canopium, Lat.] any thing which is extended over the head.

To CANOPY, v. a. to form a canopy over a person's head.

CANOROUS, a. [canorus, Lat.] given to singing; musical; tuneful.

CANT, f. [canis, Lat.] applied to language, a dialect made use of by beggars and vagabonds, to conceal their meaning from others; a whining tone of voice; a particular form of speaking peculiar to any body of men; a whining, formal pretension to goodness, generally attended with hypocrisy.

To CANT, v. n. to make use of the dialect, absurd jargon, or private gibberish of vagabonds and thieves; to speak or read in a whining tone; to endeavour to impose upon a person by a formal pretence of uncommon piety; to flatter.

CANTA'TA, f. [Ital.] in Music, a song composed of recitative airs, and a variety of notions, generally for a single voice, with a thorough bass; sometimes for two, three, or more voices, with different instruments.

CANTATION, f. [cantatio, Lat.] the act of singing.

CANTER, f. one who endeavours to pass himself upon the world as a religious person, by a fair outside, and formal appearance of religion, without obeying it in his heart.

CANTERBURY, the capital of the county of Kent, with an archbishop's see, founded by Augustine the monk. The cathedral is a large superb structure, and was once very famous for the shrine of Thomas Becket. Besides this it has 14 parish churches, and the remains of a great many Roman antiquities. Here is a castle much like that at Rochester, and the walls of the same thickness; there are six walls round the town, with a deep ditch, and a great rampart of earth within. It is a large, populous, trading place, and has a good silk manufactory, which was introduced by the Walloons in the reign of Q. Elizabeth. It has two markets, on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and one fair on September 29, for toys. It sends two members to parliament, and is seated on the river Stour. It is 56 miles S. E. by E. from London.

CANTHARIDES, f. [plural of cantharis, L.] in Natural History and Pharmacy, called Spanish flies, but properly a beetle formed from an egg, which produces a worm, that is peculiar to the fig-tree, pine-tree, white brier, and poplar, whose juices being very corrosive or biting, are by Bacon supposed to be the cause of so corrosive or caustic quality. It is needless to mention their service in blisters, or the danger of too free a use of them, since experience has confirmed the former, and given us too dreadful examples of the latter.

CANTHUS, f. [Lat.] the corner of the eye, formed by the meeting of the eyelids.

CANTICLE, f. [from canto, Lat.] a song; applied to some hymn in Scripture, and used in the plural to signify Solomon's song.

CANTILIVERS, f. in Building, pieces of wood framed into the front, or sides of a house, to sustain the mouldings or eaves over it.

CANTLE, f. [kant, Belg.] a piece with corners.

CANTLET, f. a piece; a fragment.

CANTO, f. [Ital.] a division, section, or book of a poem. In Music, a song, or the treble part of it.

CANTON, f. [canton, Fr.] a small part of a city detached from the rest; a parcel or division of land; a district, or part of a country governed by its own chief or magistrates; a small community or clan. In Heraldry, a square portion of an escutcheon separated from the rest, when on the left side, called sinister; and like the spaces between the cross or saltire.

To CANTON, v. a. to divide into small parts, parcels, or districts, used with the particle into, and sometimes both with out and into.

To CANTONIZE, v. n. to parcel out; to allot in small divisions, used with among.

CANTRED, or CANTREF, f. a British word, which signifies an hundred villages.

CANVASS, f. [canvas, Fr.] very clear unbleached cloth of hemp or flax, wove in little squares, used for working tapestry by the needle; for blinds of windows, towels, and to cover stays, &c. likewise a coarse cloth of hemp, of which sails are made.

To CANVASS, v. a. [canvasser, Fr.] to search a truth to its first principles; to enquire into; to examine; to debate, or dispute; to controvert. Used neuterly, to solicit; ask people for their votes or interest at an election.

CANUTE, or CNUTE, upon Edward's death, became master of the whole kingdom, and was proclaimed king in 1017; and all the lords, both English and Dane, swore allegiance to him. After his coronation, he divided England into four parts, Mercia, Northumberland, East-Anglia, and Wessex. Over the three former he appointed dukes or earls, and the last he governed himself. To the end that justice might be impartially administered, he declared, that for the future there should be no distinction made between the English and Danes. He denounced the severest punishments against malefactors of what nature soever, without respect of persons. He sent Edmund's two sons into Denmark, under pretence of travelling; but a worse design was supposed to be at the bottom of it. However, the king of Hungary, at whose court they were, after having first been in Sweden, took care of their education, and gave one of his daughters in marriage to Edmund, the eldest, who died soon after; and to Edward he gave his sister-in-law, Agatha, daughter of the emperor Henry II. by whom he had five children, Edgar Atheling, Margaret, and Christian, and two died in Hungary. He built a stately church over the grave of St. Edmund, the East Anglian king, who was killed by the Danes, and very much enlarged the town of St. Edmundsbury. In 1031, he took took a journey to Rome, where he made large presents to the churches, and confirmed all his predecessors had done, both for the church of Rome and the English college. There is an instance of his piety and good sense transmitted to us, which is, that as he was walking one day by the sea-side, at Southampton, and his flatterers were extolling him to the skies, and even comparing him with God himself; he, to convince them of their folly and impiety, caused a chair to be brought to him, and seating himself where the tide was about to flow, he turned himself to the sea, and said, "O sea, thou art under my jurisdiction, and the land where I sit is mine; I command thee to come no farther, nor to presume to wet thy sovereign's feet." But the tide coming on as usual, he, from thence, took occasion to let his base flatterers know, that none but the King of Heaven, whom the sea and land obey, deserved the titles they impiously bestowed on him. After which, it is said, he would never wear his crown, but caused it to be put on the head of a crucifix at Winchester. Canute died in the 9th year of his reign, in the year 1036. He left three sons, Sweyn, who had Norway; Harold, England; and Hardicanute, Denmark. Gunilda, his daughter, was married to the emperor Henry IV.

CANY, a. abounding in canes.

CANZONET, f. [canzonetta, Ital.] a little song.

CAP, f. [cap, Brit.] a part of dress made to cover the head; the ensign of a cardinalate. When the Romans gave a slave the cap, it entitled him to liberty. Students in Law, Physic, &c. as well as graduates in most universities, wear caps. Doctors are distinguished by peculiar caps, given them in assuming the doctorate. In Italy, the cap is used as a mark of infamy. At Lucca, the Jews are distinguished by a yellow cap, or an orange colour. In France, bankrupts were formerly obliged to wear, ever after, a green cap. It also signifies a square piece of timber, put over the head of a mast, to keep it steady. In Gunnery, a piece of lead laid over the touch-hole to preserve the prime. Cap of maintenance is one of the regalia carried before the king at a coronation.

To CAP, v. a. to cover the top of a thing; to pull off a cap in play.

CAP-A-PIE, or CAP-A-PE', [Fr.] from head to foot, all over, used with the verb arm.

CAP-PAPER, f. a sort of coarse, thick, brownish paper.

CAPABILITY, f. the quality of being able to undertake or perform a thing.

CAPABLE, a. [capable, Fr.] endued with power or understanding equal to an undertaking; susceptible; fitted for, or adapted to.

CAPACIOUS, a. [capax, Lat.] applied to bodies of large dimensions, or of a large cavity, able to contain much. Applied to the mind, extensive, or containing a great stock of knowledge.

CAPACIOUSNESS, f. the quality of containing or receiving a great number of things or large bodies.

To CAPA'CITATE, v. a. to render a person fit by instruction, discipline, study, or exercise; to qualify a person for an undertaking.

CAPA'CITY, f. [capacité, Fr.] the dimensions or cavity of a thing fitting it for the reception of other bodies. Applied to the mind, understanding; a power of receiving instruction; a state, condition, or character.

CAPA'RISON, f. [caparaison, Fr.] the cloathing or covering spread over any horse of state, or sumpter-horse.

To CAPA'RISON, v. a. to dress a horse in its housings for shew and ostentation. Figuratively, to adorn a person with pompous and splendid dress.

CAPE, f. [cape, Fr.] in Geography, a piece of land running or projecting into the sea; a head-land, or promontory; the neck-piece of a coat.

CAPE-COAST CASTLE, a fortress of Africa, on the coast of Guinea, and the chief that the English have in these parts. Lon. 0.10. W. Lat. 4.40. N.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, the south extremity of Africa, first discovered by the Portuguese. It is now in the hands of the Dutch, who have built a good town and fort here; the capital of the settlements among the Hottentots, inhabited by Dutch and French refugees, who have made it a delightful place, with charming gardens, full of fruit trees of various kinds, as well as kitchen herbs, and very beautiful flowers. The Hottentots are reckoned the nastiest people in the known world, with little or no religion. They are not so black as the negroes, and yet appear so, because they daub themselves with grease mixed with soot. All their dress consists in a skin which they throw over their shoulders, and a clout to hide their nakedness. The English were once in possession of this country, which they afterwards abandoned for St. Helena. This settlement has great plenty of excellent wine, corn, and fruits; also cattle, venison, poultry, and fish, which renders it a delightful place. The principal inconvenience is the storms it is subject to, both in winter and summer. Lon. 16.5. E. lat. 34.40. S.

CAP'ER, f. [from caper, Lat. a goat] in Dancing, a spring or leap, in which the feet are moved across each other several times before a person reaches the ground again.

CAP'ER, f. [capparis, Lat.] the flower of the caper-bush, of which a pickle is made.

To CAP'ER, v. n. to cross the feet several times in the air in a leap, applied to dancing to skip for joy; to dance with great activity.

CAP'ERER, f. one who cuts capers in dancing.

CAP'PIAS, f. [Lat.] in Law, a writ of two sorts, one before judgment, called capias ad respondendum; the other is a writ of execution after judgment.

CAPILLA'CEOUS, a. See CAPILLARY.

CAPILLAMENT, f. [capillamentum, Lat.] in Botany, the small threads or hairs which grow grow in the middle of a flower, adorned with little herbs at the top. Likewise the strings or threads about the roots of plants.

CAPILLARY, a. [from capillus, Lat.] resembling hairs. In Botany, applied to such plants as have no main stem, their leaves arising from the roots, and produce their seeds in little nests or protuberances on the back of their leaves; as the fern, maiden-hair, of which the frond of capillaire is made. In Anatomy, applied to the minute arteries which, in the brain, are not equal to one hair, and the smallest lymphatic vessels, which are 100 times smaller than the smallest arteries. In Physic, capillary vasa are those whose diameter is one-half, one-third, or one-fourth of a line, or the best that can be made.

CAPILLATION, f. [from capillus, Lat.] a dividing into branches as small as hairs.

CAPITAL, a. [capitalis, Lat.] in its primary sense, that which belongs or relates to the head. Applied to crimes, that which affects a person's life; criminal in the highest degree; chief or principal. Capital stock, the fund of a trading company.

CAPITAL, f. among Merchants, the sum of money brought in by each party to make up the common stock. Likewise, the money which a merchant first brings into trade on his own account. In Geography, the chief city of a kingdom, or residence of its monarch.

CAPITALLY, ad. in such a manner as affects a person's life. Capitally convicted, is applied to a person who is cast for his life, or condemned to die. Applied to productions of art, in a perfect, high-finished, or excellent manner.

CAPITATION, f. [from caput, Lat.] a numbering by the heads; a certain sum of money imposed at so much per head, in exigencies of state.

CAPITULAR, f. [capitulum, Lat.] signifies a book divided into chapters; also a collection of civil and canonical laws.

To CAPITULATE, v. n. to draw articles; to set down the heads of a remonstrance; to make a head. Mostly used by moderns, to tender a place upon certain conditions.

CAPITULATION, f. the surrender of a place upon certain conditions.

CAPON, f. [capo, Lat.] a castrated cock.

CAPONIÈRE, f. a work sunk on the side of a place about four or five feet deep; the earth dug out serves for a parapet, and is made with hop-holes and embrasures, covered over with strong planks, on which are clays, or bundles, that support the earth, which covers all. It holds 15 or 20 men, who fire through these embrasures.

CAPOT, f. [Fr.] at picquet, when one party wins all the tricks.

To CAPOT, v. a. to win all the tricks at the game of picquet.

CAPOUCH, f. [capuce, Fr.] a monk's hood.

CAPRICE, [caprice] or CAPRICHIO, f. [caprice, Fr.] a sudden change of sentiment, not founded on reason; a whimsey, freak, or fantastick humour.

CAPRICIOUS, a. [capriciosus, Fr.] a variable and inconstant behaviour, founded on mere whim and fancy; a sudden and frequent change of opinion or sentiment, inconsistent with reason.

CAPRICIOUSLY, ad. in a whimsical, humourfome, fanciful manner.

CAPRICIOUSNESS, f. the quality of changing or commanding, according to the starts of fancy, without any regard to reason or propriety.

CAPRICORN, f. [capricornus, Lat.] in Astronomy, the tenth sign of the zodiac, represented on ancient medals in the form of a goat, with the hinder parts of a fish; for the sun entering that sign on the winter solstice, from whence he begins to ascend towards the northern hemisphere, the hieroglyphic sign of a goat, which is fond of climbing, and ascends as it browses, seemed to be proper to represent that circumstance.

CAPRIO'LES, f. [Fr.] are leaps that a horse makes in the same place, without advancing.

CAPSTAN, f. [corruptly spelt capstern, cabestan, Fr.] a large cylinder, or barrel, placed perpendicular on the deck of a ship, and turned by four levers, or bars, which cross it, serving, by means of a cable which winds round it, to draw up heavy burdens. It is likewise used to tow a ship, and to weigh the anchors.

CAPSULAR, a. [from capsula, Lat.] hollow like a chest or pouch.

CAPSULATE, a. [from capsula, Lat.] inclosed as in a box. Capsulated plants, in Botany, are such as produce their seeds in short dry podes, or husks.

CAPSULE, f. denotes a receptacle, or cover, such as the pod of a bean, &c.

CAPTAIN, f. [capitaine, Fr.] a military officer, whereof there are various kinds; as a captain of a troop, or company, one commands a troop of horse, and the other a company of foot, under a colonel. Captain General is he who commands an army in chief. Captain Lieutenant is one who commands a troop or company in the room of another whose absence is dispensed with. Captain of a ship of war, is the commanding officer. Captain of a merchant ship, is he who has the direction of the ship, crew, and cargo.

CAPTAINRY, or CAPTAINSHIP, f. the power over a certain district; the chief-tainship. The rank or post of a captain.

CAPTION, [kapsion] f. [from capio, Lat.] in Law, the act of taking any person by a judicial process.

CAPTIOUS, [kapsious] a. [captiosus, Lat.] given to cavils, or forming objections; ensnaring; insidious.

CAPTIOUSLY, [kapsiously] ad. in such a manner as shews a great inclination to raise objections; in a sly, insidious manner.

CAPTIOUSNESS, [kapsiousness] f. the quality of forming cavils, or unnecessary objections; jections; peevishness.

To CAPTIVATE, v. a. [captivus, Lat.] to take prisoner. Figuratively, to charm or subdue by the power of superior excellence.

CAPTIVATION, f. [captivatio, Lat.] the act of taking a person prisoner; the state of a person taken prisoner.

CAPTIVE, f. [captivus, Lat.] one taken prisoner in war. Figuratively, one charmed or subdued by the beauty or excellence of another.

CAPTIVE, a. [captivus, Lat.] taken prisoner in war; in confinement; imprisoned. Figuratively, subdued, or kept under great restraints.

To CAPTIVE, v. a. to take or make a person prisoner.

CAPTIVITY, f. [captivité, Fr.] a state of servitude, owing to a person's being taken prisoner in war.

CAPTOR, f. [from capio, Lat.] the person who takes a prisoner, or prize.

CAPTURE, f. [capture, Fr.] the taking of any prey; the thing taken. In Law, the seizing a person for debt, or the apprehending a criminal.

CAPUCHINS, [pron. Caspuéens] monks of the order of St. Francis, founded by Matthew Baschi. They are clothed with brown or grey, are always bare-footed, never go in a coach, and never shave their beards.

CAPUT MORTUUM, f. in Chemistry, is that thick, dry, earthy substance, that remains, without spirit, or apparent virtue, after distillation, or other process by fire.

CAR, f. [car, Brit.] a small carriage with one or two horses. Figuratively, used by the poets for a chariot, or genteel vehicle, in which a person is drawn.

CA'RABINE, or CA'RBI'NE, f. [carabine, Fr.] a small kind of fusel, or fire-arm, about two feet long in the barrel.

CARABINIER, f. [pron. carabinéer] a sort of light horse, carrying longer carabines than the rest, used sometimes on foot.

CA'RACK, f. [caracca, Span.] a large ship of burden; a galleon.

CARA'NNA, f. a hard brittle resin, tho' some call it a gum. It is brought principally from New Spain, is of a dark colour, and bitterish taste. A fine odoriferous oil is distilled from it, esteemed a very powerful external remedy in cases of pain, tumours, and wounds.

CA'RAT, or CARACT, f. [carat, Fr.] a mark, that is to say, an ounce troy, divided into 24 equal parts, called carats, and each carat into four grains, is a weight by which the mint-masters discover the fineness of gold. Carat, or carat fine, is the 24th part of the goodness of a piece of pure gold. Carat is a weight used by jewellers, equal to four grains, but lighter than the mark weight above.

CA'RAVAN, f. [caravanne, Fr.] a body or company of merchants or traders travelling together in great numbers through deserts, or other dangerous places in the East, for their mutual safety and defence. Their beasts are horses, but most commonly camels, and they are escorted by a chief or aga, with a body of janizaries.

CARAVANSARIES, f. are a sort of public inns built on great roads in the East, for the accommodation of caravans; there being no inns for passengers, as in Europe. Some of these are very magnificent; and there are people who attend, to accommodate travellers; there is, however, no furniture, and in some places no other provisions but what the caravans bring with them. There are many of these in the great towns of Asia and Africa, especially in the Turkish and Persian dominions. They are generally built in the form of a square, and round a quadrangle, like a college.

CA'RAVEL, or CA'RVEL, f. [caravela, Span.] a round, light, old-fashioned ship.

CA'RAWAY, f. [carum, Lat.] in Botany, the seed is stomachic, diuretic, and carminative; one of the four hot seeds in the shops.

CARBONA'DO, f. [Span.] meat cut across, or in squares, with a knife, to be broiled.

To CARBONA'DO, v. a. to cut across, in Cookery. Figuratively, to cut or hack.

CA'RBUNCLE, f. a very elegant stone, of a deep red colour; with a mixture of scarlet, known among the ancients by the name of Anthrax. It is usually found pure and faultless, and is of the same degree of hardness with the sapphire, which is second only to the diamond; it is naturally of an angular figure, and is found adhering by its base to a very heavy and ferruginous stone of the emery kind. Its usual size is near a quarter of an inch in length; and two thirds of that in diameter. In its thickest parts, when held up against the sun it loses its deep tinge, and becomes exactly of the colour of a burning charcoal, whence the propriety of the name which the ancients gave it. It bears the fire unaltered, without parting with its colour. It is only found in the East Indies, so far as is yet known, and there but rarely. Hill's History of Fossils.

CA'RBUNCLED, a. fed with carbuncles; covered with large red pimples.

CARBU'NCULAR, a. resembling, or partaking of the qualities of a carbuncle.

CA'RCANET, f. [carcan, Fr.] a chain or collar of jewels.

CA'RCASE, or CA'R'CASS, f. [carcasse, Fr.] a dead body. Figuratively, a body or person, in a reproachful sense; the decayed parts, ruins, or remains of a thing. In Gunnery, a kind of bomb of an oblong form, filled with combustibles, and thrown from a mortar.

CA'RCELAGE, f. fees paid by prisoners before they can be discharged.

CARCINO'MA, f. a cancer.

CARD, f. [carta, Fr. charta, Lat.] in Gaming, pieces of fine thin pasteboard, cut in oblong squares, on which are painted several marks and figures, and used in several games. A court card, is that which has the image of some person painted on it. In Sea affairs, the upper part of the mariner's compass, on which the names of the winds are marked.

CARD,

CARD, f. [cards, Belg.] an instrument or comb, composed of several small pieces of iron-wire, hooked in the middle, fastened by the feet in rows; they are generally used in pairs, placed with their points opposite to each other, having the materials between them, and serve to comb, disentangle, and range wool or flax, in a proper order for spinning.

To CARD, v. a. [kaerden, Belg.] to comb wool, &c. to make it fit for spinning, by drawing it through the card or comb. Neuterly, to gum; or ply inordinately at cards.

CARDAMOM, f. [cardamomum, Lat.] a medicinal seed, that assists digestion, strengthens the liver and stomach, and is diuretic.

CARPER, f. one who combs or prepares wool by passing it through a card.

CARDIAC, a. an appellation given to cordial medicines that strengthen and invigorate the heart, replenish the exhausted spirits with good humour, and excite motion where required, whereby the elasticity and tone of the fibres, which before were weakened and vitiated, are restored, and a brisker and freer circulation occasioned.

CARDIALGIA, or HEART-BURN, f. is a disorder of the stomach, attended with anorexia, a nausea, and inclination to vomit.

CARDIFF, a town of S. Wales, in Glamorganshire, with two markets, on Wednesdays and Saturdays. It is seated on the river Towy, over which there is a handsome bridge, and is large, compact, well-built town, having a castle, a wall, and four gates. It has a considerable trade with Bristol; for vessels of small burden may come to the bridge. At present it has but one church, the water having destroyed the other. The constable of the castle is the chief magistrate, whom they call mayor; besides him, there are two bailiffs, a recorder, 12 aldermen, 12 common-councilmen, 2 sergeants at mace, and 8 constables. It contains two parishes, and about 300 houses, formed into broad paved streets. Here the assizes and sessions for the county are held; and it sends one member to parliament. Near it are some iron works. It is 164 miles W. of London.

CARDIGAN, a principal town of Cardiganshire in S. Wales, with a market on Tuesd. and Sat. It is pleasantly situated on the river Tivy, over which there is a handsome stone bridge with several arches. It is the chief town where the assizes are held, and the county goal kept. The shire-hall is well built; it sends one member to parliament, and has the title of an earldom. It is 225 miles W. N. W. of London.

CARDIGANSHIRE, a county of South-Wales, 42 miles in length, and 20 in breadth, lying upon the coast of the Irish sea, which bounds it on the W. Radnorshire is on the E. Merionethshire on the N. and Carmarthenshire on the S. The air is milder here than in other parts of Wales; and to the W. and S. are plains fruitful in corn. It contains 64 parishes, and 1 market-town; and sends one member to parliament. There are several small rivers, which, rising in the mountains, fall into the sea, but the Tivy is the principal. It abounds with veins of lead and silver ore; a ton of which last will yield 70 or 80 ounces of silver. The mines have been worked several times to great advantage; and particularly Sir Hugh Middleton cleared 2000l. a month for several years together, which enabled him to bring the New River water to London. Some private adventurers have attempted to work them, but have failed for want of a sufficient stock.

CARDINAL, a. principal, chief, supreme. Thus cardinal winds are those that blow from the four corners of the compass. Cardinal signs in the Zodiac are, Aries, Libra, Cancer, and Capricorn. In Arithmetic, cardinal numbers are such as express positively how many things there are, as 1, 8, 10, 12, &c. In Morality, the cardinal virtues are justice, prudence, temperance, and fortitude.

CARDINAL, f. an eminent dignity in the church of Rome, who has a voice in the conclave at the election of a pope. The cardinals, originally, were no more than deacons, entrusted with the care of distributing the alms to the poor of the several quarters of Rome; and as they held assemblies of the poor in certain churches of their several districts, they took the title of those churches. They began to be called Cardinals in the year 300, under pope Sylvester, by which appellation was meant the chief priests of a parish, and next in dignity to a bishop. This office grew more considerable afterwards, and gradually arrived at its present height. The Cardinals compose the pope's council, and till the time of Urban VIII. were stiled Most illustrious; but by a decree of that pope, 1630, they had the title of Eminence conferred upon them.

CARDINALATE, or CARDINALSHIP, f. the office and rank of a cardinal.

CARDUUS, f. [Lat.] a kind of thistle, used in Medicine as a gentle vomit.

CARE, f. [care, Sax.] attention to a particular subject; concern or anxiety of mind, arising from the uncertainty of something future, or the oppression of the present calamity; caution, protection, regard, and support, when followed with the particle of. A too great anxiety for the events of this world; an affectionate regard for a person. SYNON. Prudence signifies wisdom applied to practice; discretion is the effect of prudence, and means a knowledge to govern or direct one's self; by care we understand heed in order to preservation; caution implies a greater degree of wariness.

To CARE, v. n. to be anxious, solicitous, or concerned for a person; to be disposed, or inclined. To have a sympathy or affectionate regard for.

To CARE'EN, v. a. [caréner, Fr.] to lay a vessel upon one side in order to calk, stop the leaks, trim, or repair the other side.

CARE'ER, f. [carriers, Fr.] a course or r-c-c;

race; the ground on which a race is run; full speed; very swift motion.

CAREFUL, a. abounding or perplexed with great solicitude, apprehensions, or anxiety.

CAREFULLY, ad. in an attentive, cautious, circumspect, and diligent manner.

CAREFULNESS, f. cautious, diligent, and constant application; heedfulness; vigilance.

CARELESS, a. without due attention, labour, application, caution, or concern; without thought, or premeditation.

CARELESSLY, ad. without anxiety; without care; with negligence; in a manner void of care.

TO CARESS, v. a. [careffer, Fr.] to embrace with great affection; to treat a person with great civility and endearment.

CARESS, f. an embrace of great affection; an endearing profusion of civilities and kind actions.

CARET, f. [Lat.] in Grammar, a mark implying that something is omitted in writing, or printing, which ought to come in where this sign (A) stands.

CARGO, f. [charge, Fr.] the lading of a ship; all the merchandizes and wares on board a ship.

CARIBBEE ISLANDS, are islands of America in the West-Indies, divided among several European nations, of which Jamaica, Barbadoes, St. Kitt's, Antigua, Nevis, and several smaller belong to the English; Hispaniola, to the Spaniards and French; Cuba, which is the largest, to the Spaniards; Martinico to the French; Eustatia, to the Dutch; besides many others, as will be taken notice of in their proper places.

CARIBBEES, the original inhabitants of the Caribbee Islands, now almost rooted out, except in some not possessed by the Europeans. They have generally been accounted cannibals, or men-eaters, but very falsely. They are of a melancholy, thoughtful, and idle disposition, and generally live a long while. They are of a copper colour, with long black coarse hair, and beardless, like the rest of the native Americans. They went stark naked before the coming of the Europeans; but now those that live in the same islands with them are a little more modest. They have several wives without any regard to consanguinity; but as for their religion, it is hard to say what it is.

CARICATURE, f. in Painting, is the concealment of real beauties, and the exaggeration of blemishes, but still so as to preserve a resemblance of the object.

CARIES, f. [Lat.] in Medicine, the solution of continuity in a bone, attended with a waite of its substance, occasioned by the corrosion of some acrimonious matter.

CARIO-SITY, f. that quality of a bone which putrifies and wastes its substance.

CARIOUS, a. [cariofus, Lat.] rotten, generally applied to bones.

CARK, f. [carck, Sax.] care; anxiety.

TO CARK, v. n. [carcan; Sax.] to be solicitous, careful, anxious.

CARLE, f. [ceorl, Sax.] a rude, brutish fellow; a churl; also an old man.

CARLINGS, or CARLINES, f. in a ship, are two pieces of timber, lying fore and aft, along from beam to beam whereon the ledges rest, on which the planks of the ship are fastened.

CARLISLE, [Karlisle] a city of Cumberland, of which it is the capital, with a market on Sat. It is a place of great antiquity, and seated at the confluence of several rivers, which almost encompass it; the river Peterill being on the E. Cauda on the W. and Eden on the N. which soon after falls into the sea. It is surrounded with walls, and fortified with a castle, which stands on the west side of the town; the houses are well-built; and the cathedral church is a stately structure, with curious workmanship. It is a place of some trade in fustians; and sends two members to parliament. The gates are called Irish, English, and Scots. The Picts, or Roman wall, of which there are still some remains, runs hence to Newcastle. It is 301 miles N. N. W. of London.

CARMAN, f. one who drives a cart, or keeps carts for hire.

CARMARTHEN, the capital town of Carmarthenshire, in South Wales, with two markets on Wednesdays and Saturdays. It is pleasantly seated on the banks of the river Towy, over which there is a large stone-bridge, to which small vessels may come up to unload their goods. It is a corporation, and the place where the assizes are held; was once fortified with a wall and strong castle, and is at present a considerable place, sending one member to parliament. It is 207 miles W. by N. of London.

CARMARTHENSHIRE, a county of S. Wales, 48 miles in length, 25 in breadth, and bounded by Cardiganshire on the N. St. George's Channel on the S. Brecknock and Glamorgan shires on the E. and Pembroke-shire on the W. It is fruitful in corn and grafs, having many pleasant and rich meadows; also wood, coal, and sea-fish, especially salmon, which is exceeding good. The air is mild and wholesome, it not being so mountainous as the other counties. It contains 145 parishes, 8 market-towns; and sends two members to parliament, one for the county, and one for the shire town. It is watered with several rivers and small streams. The chief town is Carmarthen.

CARMELETES, or WHITE FRIARS, f. are an order of our Lady of Mount Carmel, making one of the four orders of Mendicants. They pretend to derive their original from the prophets Elijah and Elisha. Their original rules contained 16 articles; one of which confined them to their cells, and enjoined them to employ themselves day and night in prayer; another prohibited the brethren having any property; another enjoined fasting, from the fast of the exultation of the Holy Cross till Easter, excepting on Sundays; abstinence at all times from flesh was enjoined by another article; one obliged them to manual labour; another imposed a strict silence on them, from vesper till the morn'g the next day: however, those institutions have in some respects been altered.

CARMINATIVES, f. are medicines prescribed for the colic disorder, to dispel the wind.

CARMINÉ, f. a very bright red colour, bounding somewhat on a purple, used mostly in minicures; and is the settling of the water into which cochineal, conan, and antour have been steeped.

CARNAGE, f. [carnage, Fr.] slaughter, blood, or heaps of bodies slain in battle.

CARNAL, a. [charnel, Fr.] proceeding from, or belonging to the fleshy part of man, opposed to spiritual. Figuratively, sensual, lustful, lecherous, voluptuous.

CARNALITY, f. lust, wantonness, propensity to lust; unchaste pleasure. Figuratively, immersed in sensuality.

CARNALLY, ad. in a gross, sensual manner, opposed to spiritual.

CARNARVON, a town of Carnarvonshire, in N. Wales, with a market on Saturdays. It is commodiously seated on the sea-shore, and has a prospect into the Isle of Anglesea. It is a place of great strength, as well by nature as art, being surrounded on all sides, except the E. with the sea and two rivers. It had a strong castle, now in ruins; and has only one parish church, but the houses and streets are tolerably handsome. It has the title of an earldom; and sends one member to parliament; is governed by the constable of the castle, who, by patent, is always mayor. It is 25½ miles N. W. of London.

CARNARVONSHIRE, a county of N. Wales, 50 miles in length, 13 in breadth, and bounded on the N. and W. by the sea, on the S. by Merionethshire, and on the E. by Denbighshire. The air is sharp and cold, it being full of high mountains, lakes, and rocks; however, there are several fruitful bottoms and pleasant valleys, which feed sheep, cattle, and goats; and its rivers are full of fish. It contains 68 parishes, and six market towns. The highest mountain is called Snowdon-hill, which is boggy on the top, and has two lakes full of fish. The sheep which feed on the sides of it yield the sweetest mutton in Wales. It sends two members to parliament; one for the county, and one for Carnarvon, which is the principal town.

CARNATION, f. [from caro, Lat.] in botany, a species of the clove-gillyflower. In fluxion, a lively red colour, resembling that of flesh newly cut.

CARNE-LION, f. [improperly spelt carneion] in Natural History, a precious stone, of which there are three species, a red, a yellow, and a white; the red sort is again subdivided into two species, the pale being called the female, and the deep red the male carnelion.

CARNIVAL, f. [carnaval, Fr.] the season of mirth and luxury celebrated by the Italians, and especially at Venice, lasting from Twelfth-day to Lent, and attended with balls, feasts, operas, concerts, and every thing which pomp, ostentation, or festivity can furnish.

CARNIVOROUS, a. [from caro and voro, Lat.] eating flesh, or that which lives on flesh.

CARNOSITY, f. [carnosité, Fr.] in Surgery, a fleshy excrescence; a fungous or proud flesh.

CARNOUS, a. [carneus, Lat.] fleshy, applied to animals. In Botany, a soft substance similar to that of flesh in animals.

CAROL, f. [carola, Ital.] a song of joy, exultation, or festivity, applied to the rustic anthems of country singers at Christmas; any kind of song.

To CAROL, v. n. [carolare, Ital.] to sing with great joy and festivity. Actively, to praise in anthems or songs.

CAROLINA, one of the provinces of the Thirteen United States of North America. It is bounded on the N. by Virginia, on the E. by the Ocean, on the S. by Florida, and on the W. by Louisiana, lying between 30 and 35 degrees N. lat. The chief produce is tobacco, indigo, and rice; but they are attempting to breed silk-worms for the production of silk. The animals, trees, fruits, and plants, are much the same as in Virginia; particularly wild animals resembling a bull, with very long hair, short legs, large bodies, and great bunches on their backs near the shoulders. Their horns are black and short, and they have a great beard under their muzzles, and so much hair on their heads that it hides their eyes, which gives them a hideous look. They have bears, whose flesh is esteemed good eating; and they make hams of their legs. Besides these they have cat-a-mountains, wild cats, wolves, a sort of tygers, beavers, otters, musk-rats, possums, raccoons, minxes, water-rats, a kind of rabbits, elks, different from the European; stags, fallow deer, several sorts of squirrels, foxes, and two sorts of rats. The birds are so numerous, that it would be tedious even to mention their names; and there are many sorts of fish, quite unknown in these parts of the world. Their fruits and trees are much the same as in Virginia, and they have some of the best kind of fruits transplanted from Europe, which thrive very well. The native Americans are of the same shape, colour, and stature, as in the other parts of America; they being all of a red copper complexion, with coarse black hair, and no beards; and here, as in other places, each man has several wives. The other commodities of Carolina not yet mentioned, are corn, naval stores, and skins; which last they purchase of the native Americans.

CAROUSAL, f. [carosial] a festival, or holiday, celebrated with mirth, pomp, and festivity.

To CAROUSE, [caroûze] v. n. [carousser, Fr.] to drink freely. Actively, to drink to; to drink a health.

CAROUSE,

CAROUSE, [carouze] f. a drinking match; a large draught.

CAROUSE, [carouzer] f. one who drinks freely; a toper.

CARP, f. [carpe, Fr.] a large fresh-water fish, remarkable for its being able to live a long time out of water.

To CARP, v. n. [carpo, Lat.] to censure, find fault with, or blame, including the idea of forwardness and reproach.

CARPENTER, f. [charpentier, Fr.] one who performs the several offices of cutting, joining, flooring, or other wood-work, relative to houses, buildings, or ships.

CARPENTRY, f. the art of building either houses or ships with wood.

CARPER, f. a person fond of raising objections; a caviller, or censorious person.

CARPET, f. [karpel, Belg.] a covering of stuff or other materials, commonly spread over tables, or laid on floors. The phrase of a thing's being on the carpet, is to express its being in hand, in debate, or the object of consideration.

To CARPET, v. a. to spread with a carpet. Figuratively, applied with great elegance to the earth, to embellish or adorn with flowers and herbs.

CARPING, part. fond of cavilling; raising objections, or finding fault; censorious; captious.

CARPINGLY, ad. in a captious and censorious manner.

CARRAT, f. See CARAT.

CARRAWAY, f. See CARAWAY.

CARRIAGE, [in pron, the last a is dropped] f. [carriage, Fr.] a vehicle used to convey persons or goods from one place to another; the act of conveying things from one place to another; the price paid for the conveying of goods. Figuratively, personal address and behaviour; conduct, or practices; proceedings, or the manner of transacting any affair. The carriage of a cannon is the frame of timber on which it is mounted.

CARRICK, a county of Scotland, bounded by the Frith of Clyde on the N. W. and Galloway on the S. Bargoeny is the capital town.

CARRIER, f. one who conveys or moves a thing from one place to another; one who conveys goods from one town or place to another. In Natural History, a species of pigeons, so called from their carrying letters, &c. tied to their necks, to the place where they were bred, be it ever so remote.

CARRION, f. [charogne, Fr.] the flesh of a dead carcass; and putrified flesh, not fit for food. Figuratively; a coarse, gross, disagreeable person; a term of reproach.

CARRION, a. relating to a dead or putrified carcase; feeding on dead carcases.

CARRROT, f. [carote, Fr.] a garden root; of which there are two sorts, the yellow and the orange; the last of which is reckoned by much the better.

CARROTY, a. red. applied to red haired people, from the resemblance of the colour of their hair to that of a carrot.

To CARRY, v. a. [charier, Fr.] to remove a thing from one place to another; to convey, transport, bear; to gain in competition, or rather resistance; to behave, conduct, obtain, import, support, sustain. Used with off, to kill or put an end to a person's life. To carry on, to prosecute, continue, or persevere in an undertaking, notwithstanding all oppositions. Joined with through, to support, or enable a person to sustain and surmount.

CART, f. [cart, Brit.] a land carriage, with two wheels, drawn by horses. Figuratively, any vehicle or carriage.

CARTE BLANCHE, f. [Fr.] a blank paper; a paper or instrument to be filled up with such terms and conditions as the person to whom it is sent thinks fit.

CARTEL, f. [cartel, Fr.] certain terms or stipulations settled between persons at variance. In War, applied to the conditions made by enemies for the mutual exchange of prisoners.

CARTER, f. one who drives, and gets his living by driving a cart.

CARTESIANS, f. a sect of philosophers who adhere to the opinions advanced by Des Cartes, and founded on the two following principles; the one metaphysical, the other physical; the first is, I think, therefore I am; the other is, that nothing exists but substance. The first of these principles is refuted by Mr. Locke; the other, by the principles of the Newtonian philosophy.

CARTHUSIANS, f. a religious order founded by one Bruno, in the year 1080. Their rules are very severe. They are not to go out of their cells, except to church, without leave of their superiors; nor speak to any person without leave. They must not keep any portion of their meat and drink till next day; their beds are of straw, covered with a felt; their clothing, two hair-cloths, two cowls, two pair of hose, and a cloak, all coarse. In the refectory, they are to keep their eyes on the dish, their hands on the table, their attention on the reader, and their hearts fixed on God. Women are not allowed to come into their churches.

CARTILAGE, f. [cartilago, Lat.] in Anatomy, a smooth, solid, uniform, elastic substance, softer than a bone, but more solid than any other part, without cavities for marrow, or any nerves or membranes for sensation.

CARTILAGINEOUS, or CARTILAGINOUS, a. consisting of cartilages.

CARTMEL, a town of Lancashire, with a market on Mondays. It is seated among the hills called Cartmel-Fells, not far from the sea, and near the river Kent; adorned with a very handsome church, built in the form of a cross like a cathedral. The market is well supplied with corn, sheep, and fish. It is 26½ miles N. N. W. of London.

CARTOON, f. [cartone, Ital.] in Painting, a drawing or sketch upon strong paper, to be chalked through upon a wall, in order to be painted in fresco.

CARTOUCH

CARTOUCH, f. [cartouch, Fr.] a case of wood three inches thick at the bottom, girt round with marlin, containing 48 musket-balls, and six or eight balls of iron of a pound weight; being fired out of a hobit, or small mortar, for the defence of a pass; likewise used for a cartridge.

CARTRAGE, or CARTRIDGE, f. [cartouche, Fr.] a charge of powder wrapped up in thick paper, paste-board, or parchment, for charging fire-arms with the greater expedition.

CARTULARY, f. [from charta, Lat.] a place where papers or records are kept.

To CARVE, v. a. [carvan, Sax.] to cut or divide into several parts. Also, to dissect or cut up a fowl or joint of meat at a table. Also, to cut flowers, knots, figures, or other devices, in wood or stone.

CARVER, f. one who forms statues, or other likenesses, in wood, stone, or marble. In Cookery, one who cuts the meat.

CARVING, f. the art of cutting images, or other likenesses in wood, stone, or marble.

CARUNCLE, f. [caruncula, Lat.] in Anatomy, a little piece of flesh. The carunculae lacrymales are two small eminences in the inner corners of the eyes.

CARUS, f. in Medicine, is a species of the apoplexy, being a deprivation of sense and motion, affecting the whole body; yet the faculty of respiration is still left; in short, the Carus differs little from a lethargy.

CARYATIDES, f. in Architecture, a kind of order of columns or pilasters, used by the ancients, made in the form or figure of women, dressed in long robes, and serving to support the entablature.

CASCADE, f. [cascade, Fr.] a fall of water from a higher to a lower place. They are either natural or artificial.

CASE, f. [caisse, Fr.] something made to cover or contain a thing; a covering, sheath, or box.

CASE, f. [casus, Lat.] the outward or external condition, circumstance, or state of a person; the state of a thing. In Physic, the state of the body; used with the particle in, and the word good, fat and plump; and with the word bad, lean or emaciated. In Law, the representation of any fact, question, or the whole arguments of council on a particular point or circumstance of a trial. Casus, in Grammar, implies the various changes which nouns in Greek and Latin undergo in their several numbers, to express the several views or relations under which the mind considers things with regard to one another. In casu implies, if it should happen.

To CASE, v. a. to put in a case or cover. Figuratively, to surround or inclose, like a case. In Building, to cover with materials different from those in the inside. To skin, or strip off the skin. Newly, to represent an affair in all the various lights it will bear; to put cases.

To CASE-HARDEN, v. a. to prepare iron, so as to render its outward surface hard, and capable of resisting the file or any edged tool.

CASEMATE, or CA'ZEMATE, f. in Fortification, a certain retired platform in the flank of a bastion, for the defence of the moat or face of the opposite bastion; a kind of vault or arch of stone-work.

CASEMENT, f. [casamento, Ital.] a window opening upon hinges.

CASEOUS, a. [caseus, Lat.] something like cheese; cheesy.

CASERN, f. a little room or lodgment erected between the rampart and the houses, in a fortified town, for the ease of the garrison.

CASH, f. [caisse, Fr.] in Commerce, the ready money a person is possessed of.

CASHIER, [caissier] f. a person who keeps the money at a banker's, or any public office.

To CASHIER, [caissier] v. a. to disband; to deprive a person of his place or post for some mal-practice.

CASK, f. [casque, Fr.] a round hollow cylindrical vessel, used for keeping liquors, provisions, or dry goods.

CASKET, f. a small box for jewels, or things of small dimensions, but great value. Figuratively, any thing which contains something of great value.

CASPIAN SEA, a great lake or sea of Asia, bounded by the country of the Calmuck Tartars on the N. by Bocharia and part of Persia on the E. by another part of Persia on the S. and by another part of Persia and Circassia on the W. being about 400 miles in length from N. to S. and 300 in breadth from E. to W. Several great rivers fall into this sea, and yet it never seems to increase, though it has no communication with any other sea. It is sometimes very dangerous for sailors, though it hath no observable tide. It abounds in fish, which are thought to be better than in other seas. Lon. from 49. to 55. E. lat. from 37. to 47. N.

CASSATION, f. in Civil Law, the annulling or abrogating any procedure.

CASSAVI, or CASSADA, f. an American plant, long and thick, of which the Americans make a kind of bread, said to be a wholesome and nourishing food.

CASSIA, f. in Botany, a tree growing in Alexandria and in the West-Indies, affording a clammy substance, used in the shops for a purge. Likewise, a fragrant spice, supposed to be the bark of a tree very like cinnamon.

CASSOCK, f. a close, long garment, worn by clergymen, when in their robes, under their gown.

To CAST, v. a. [preter and part. passive cast] [kafter, Dan.] to throw with the hand; to throw a net; to throw dice, or lots; to throw in wrestling; to let fall; to expose; to shed; to moulting; to condemn in a trial or lawsuit; to lay aside, as unfit to wear; to have an abortion, as a cow, when she flings her calf; to compute, reckon, calculate; to contrive, or plan out; to form or model a thing in a mould with melted metals. To cast aside.

to lay by as useless. Used with down, to fling or throw from a high place. To cast an eye, to glance, or look at. To cast a light, to reflect, or impart. Joined with away, to wreck or shipwreck, applied to sea-affairs. To be cast down, to be disconsolate, low-spirited, or dejected on account of some misfortune. Used with out, to speak, give vent to, or utter with rashness and vehemence. Used with upon, to be driven by violence of the wind, or stress of weather. Used with off, to discard; to disburden one's self of; to leave behind. Neuterly it implies, to contrive; to turn the thoughts; to admit of a form, by casting; to warp.

CAST, f. the act of throwing a thing at a distance by the hands. A specimen, or stroke; a particular motion of the eye; a throw, or chance of a throw, at dice; a mould, a form. In Painting, a shade or tendency to any colour. Exterior appearance. Manner; air; mein.

CASTANET, f. a musical instrument, made of two little round pieces of wood or ivory, hollowed like a spoon, fastened to the thumb, and beat with the middle finger, serving to direct the time and measure of the dances.

CAST-AWAY, f. a person that is involved in a multiplicity of misfortunes, and seemingly abandoned by Providence.

CASTELLAIN, f. [castellano, Span.] the constable of a castle.

CASTELLANY, f. the manor or lordship belonging to a castle, or the territory of a city, or town.

CASTELLATED, a. inclosed within a building, or fortified place.

CASTER, f. one who flings or throws. In Arithmetic, one who calculates.

CASTIGATION, f. [castigatio, Lat.] punishment inflicted on a person in order to make him amend his faults; penance, or correction.

CASTIGATORY, a. punishing, to make a person amend.

CASTING-NET, f. a net which is spread by throwing it in the water, used in fishing.

CASTLE, f. [castellum, Lat.] a place or edifice fortified by art or nature to defend a town or city from an enemy. Castles in the air, imply some chimerical project.

CASTLE-CARY, a town of Somersethire, with a market on Tuesdays. It is 12 miles S. E. of Wells, and 117 W. by S. of London.

CASTLE-COMB, a town in Wiltshire, so called from its old castle. It formerly had a market now disused. It is 17 miles N. W. of Chippenham, and 12 N. N. E. of Bath.

CASTLE-MEDINGHAM, a village in Essex, three miles N. of Halded.

CASTLE-RISING, a town in the county of Norfolk, which had a market, now disused on account of its harbour being choaked up with sand: it is, however, a mayor-town, and sends two members to parliament. The castle, whence it has its name, is still standing; and here is an alms-house for 24 poor widows. It is 103 miles N. N. E. of London.

CA'STLETOWN, the capital of the isle of Man, seated on the S. W. part of the island. It has a strong castle, but of no great importance, on account of its distance from the rocky and shallow harbour.

CA'STLE-SOAP, f. a corruption of Castile soap.

CA'STLING, f. the young of a brute animal, which is cast before its time.

CA'STON, a town in the county of Norfolk, with a market on Mondays. It is 122½ miles N. E. of London.

CA'STOR, f. See CAIOSTER.

CA'STOR, f. a beaver, an amphibious animal, the feet of which have five toes, and the hinder ones formed for swimming, with a black, flat, and oval tail. In Astronomy, a moiety of the constellation of Gemini, called also Apollo.

CA'STOR and POLLUX, f. in Meteorology, a fiery meteor, which appears in the form of one, two, or three balls, adhering to some part of a ship. When seen single, it is named Helena, and shews that the severest part of a storm is yet to come; when double, called Castor and Pollux, and portends a cessation of a storm.

CASTOREUM, f. [Lat.] in Pharmacy, a liquid matter contained not in the testicles but in little bags, near the anus of the Castor. It is a medicine much esteemed, of great use in hyberic cafes, and in all disorders of the nerves, in epilepsies, palsies, and all disorders of that kind.

To CA'STRATE, v. a. [castra, Lat.] to geld. Figuratively, to cut sentences out of any book.

CASTRATION, f. gelding.

CASTRAMETATION, f. [castrametatio, Lat.] the art of encamping.

CA'SUAL, [casual] a. [casuel, Fr.] something done without design; something happening contrary to the common laws of nature.

CA'SUALLY, [casually] ad. in an accidental manner; without design; by chance.

CA'SUALTY, [casualty] f. an event that is not foreseen, or intended. Figuratively, any accident which puts an end to a person's life.

CA'SUIST, [casuist] f. [casuiste, Fr.] one who studies and resolves nice points in cases of conscience.

CASUISTICAL, [casuistical] a. belonging to cases of conscience, or practical parts of ethics.

CA'SUISTRY, [casuistry] f. the science employed about cases of conscience, or nice points in practical divinity or ethics.

CAT, f. [cat, Fr.] a domestic animal, which catches mice, reckoned the lowest order of the lion species, and supposed to see in the dark, or with the least glimmering of light, which may be owing to the faculty it has of contracting and dilating the pupil of the eye in an extraordinary manner.

CATACHRE'SIS, [katakrethsis] f. [κατακρησις, Gr.] in Rhetoric, is, when a word, whose natural meaning is good and innocent, is used abusively; as, you are a pretty fellow indeed, meaning, you are a sad wretch.

CATACHRESTICAL, a. applied to language, improper; far-fetched; forced.

CATACOMBS, f. [κατακόμβαι, Gr.] grottoes or subterraneous cavities for the burial of the dead.

CATACOU'STICS, f. [κατακούσεις, Gr.] the science of reflecting sounds or echoes.

CATALEPSIS, f. [κατάληψις, Gr.] a disease, by which the patient is rendered, in an instant, motionless and senseless, and continues in the same posture he was in when he first seized him, with his eyes open, but without sight or understanding.

CATALOGUE, [κατάλογος] f. [κατάλογος, Gr.] a list or particular enumeration of things in some order, wherein they are mentioned in separate lines or articles.

CATAMITE, f. a person kept by the ancient Romans, and the modern Italians, for the vilest of purposes.

CATAMOUNTAIN, f. a fierce and wild animal, resembling a cat.

CATAPHRACT, [καταφραξ] f. [καταφραξ, Lat.] a horseman completely armed.

CATAPLASM, f. [κατάπλασμα, Gr.] a poultice.

CATAPULT, or CATAPULTA, f. [Lat.] a military engine invented by the Syrians, for throwing stones, and sometimes huge darts or javelins of 10 or 12 feet in length.

CATARACT, f. [καταράκτης, Gr.] in Natural History and Cosmography, a precipice in the middle of a river, caused by a rock stopping its stream, from whence the water falls with great violence and noise. Among the most remarkable are those of the Nile in Africa, and Danube in Europe; and that of Niagara in America. In Medicine, a total or partial loss of sight.

CATARRH, [κατάρρ] f. [from καταρρῖσθαι, Gr.] in Medicine, a defluxion of serous matter from the head on the mouth, aspera arteria, and the lungs, arising from a cold, or diminution of insensible perspiration, which occasions irritations.

CATARRHAL, or CATARRHOUS, a. proceeding from a catarrh.

CATASTROPHE, [κατάστροφη] f. [κατάστροφη, Gr.] in Poetry, the change or revolution in the last act of a play, or the turn which converts the intrigue, and concludes the piece. Figuratively, a dreadful event or accident, which terminates in a person's ruin, misery, or death.

CATCAL, [κατκαλ] f. a kind of short whistle, with a pea included in its inside, made use of at play-houses, to hinder an actor from proceeding in his part, and to shew disapprobation of any dramatic performance.

To CATCH, v. a. [preter, I caught, or caught, I have caught, or have caught] [κεῖσθαι, Belg.] to seize or lay hold on suddenly with the hand. Figuratively, to intercept any thing in motion. To pursue or take any thing that is running from one; to receive any falling body, or prevent it from reaching the ground; to receive a disease by infection; to contract; to seize suddenly; to captivate, charm, or seize the affections, alluding to the taking prey in toils. Used neuterly, to be infectious; to spread by contagion. Figuratively, to spread or increase from one to another, applied to bodies or things which lie near one another.

CATCH, f. the act of seizing any thing which flies, or hides; the posture proper for seizing an advantage taken; hold laid on the thing caught; profit; a short interval of action. A taint; any thing which fastens by a sudden spring, or by entering into a loop or cavity. In Music, a short song, containing some merry tune.

CATCHER, f. one who catches, or that in which any thing is caught.

CATCH-POLL, f. at present a word of reproach and contempt for a bailiff, or his followers; formerly used without reproach for a serjeant at mace, or any other, who used to arrest men upon any just cause.

CATECHETICAL, [κατηχητικός] a. [from κατηχῆσις, Gr.] consisting of questions and answers.

CATECHETICALLY, a. by way of questions and answers.

To CATECHISE, [κατηκίζω] v. a. [κατηχῆσις, Gr.] to ask a person questions in order to discover secrets; to examine, or interrogate.

CATECHISER, [κατηκίζω] f. one who teaches a person, or tries whether he can say his catechism; one who questions, examines, or endeavours to make discoveries by questions.

CATECHISM, [κατηκισμὸς] f. is, according to the liturgy of the church of England, an institution to be learned by every person, before he is brought to be confirmed by the bishop. Our church-catechism is drawn up after the primitive manner, by way of question and answer. Originally it contained no more than a repetition of the Baptismal Vow, the Creed, and the Lord's Prayer; but king James I. ordered the bishops to add to it a short and plain explication of the sacraments.

CATECHIST, [κατηκιστής] f. [κατηχῆσις, Gr.] one who teaches or instructs persons in the first principles of religion, by way of question and answer.

CATECHUMEN, [κατηκῆμιον] f. [κατηχῆμιον, Gr.] in the Primitive Church, a candidate for baptism.

CATECHUMENICAL, [κατηκῆμιονικός] a. belonging to a catechumen.

CATEGORICAL, a. positive; absolute; affirmative; adequate.

CATEGORICALLY, ad. in a positive, express, absolute manner.

CATEGORY, f. [κατηγορία, Gr.] in Logic, a system or assemblage of all the beings ranged under one kind or genus, called in Latin a predicament.

CATENARIAN, a. [from catena, Lat.] relating to a chain; resembling a chain. In Mathematics, the Catenarian Curve is formed by a rope or chain hanging freely between two points whereon its extremities are fastened.

CATENATION,

CATENATION, f. [from catena, Lat.] the act of linking together, or connecting like a chain.

To CATER, v. a. to provide food; to buy in victuals.

CATERER, f. a man employed to provide and buy in victuals for a family.

CATERESS, f. a woman who buys in provisions for a family.

CATERPILLAR, f. in Natural History, a reptile, from whence butterflies or moths are produced, covered with hair, formed of annular scales, having small holes on its sides for respiration, with several feet, and furnished with a glutinous substance, which it emits from its mouth, and makes use of as ropes to descend from any height.

To CATERWAUL, v. n. to make a noise like cats in their rutting time. Figuratively, to make a disagreeable noise; to abandon one's self to lust.

CATES, f. [katter, Belg.] nice and elegant food; cakes; or rich dishes.

CAT-HARPINGS, f. small ropes in a ship, running on little blocks from one side of the shrouds to the other, near the deck.

CATHARTIC, or CATHARTICAL, a. [καθαρτικὸς, Gr.] cleansing. Applied in Medicine to purges, or those medicines which cleanse the body by stool; but in a more extensive sense, to all kinds of medicines which cleanse the body.

CATHARTICALNESS, f. the quality of cleansing or purging.

CATHEAD, f. in Natural History, a fossil, consisting of nodules with leaves in it, of an iron stone, and found in the rocks near Whitehaven, in Cumberland. On board a ship, a piece of timber with two shivers at one end, having a rope and a block.

CATHE'DRAL, a. episcopal, or containing the see or seat of a bishop; belonging to a cathedral.

CATHE'DRAL, f. [from καθεδρα, Gr.] the chief church of a diocese, where the service is sung.

CATHETER, f. [καθετήρ, Gr.] in Surgery, a hollow probe or instrument, usually of silver, and sometimes crooked, generally thrust up the bladder, to assist the discharge of urine, when the passage is stopped by the stone, or any other disorder.

CATHOLICISM, f. universality; something common to all of the same kind.

CATHOLIC, a. [καθολικός, Gr.] universal. Used sometimes for true, in opposition to heretical or schismatical. Roman Catholic, is a title which the papists claim or arrogate to themselves. Catholic king, or majesty, is the title of the king of Spain.

CATHOLICON, f. in Medicine, a remedy which cures all disorders. Figuratively, that which is an universal preservative.

CATKINS, f. imperfect flowers hanging from trees, like a rope or cat's tail.

CATLING, f. [kats leins, Teut.] in Surgery, a dismembering knife, used for cutting off any corrupted part of the body. In Botany, the down or moss growing about walnut-trees, resembling the hair of a cat.

CATO'PTRICAL, a. relating to catoptrics, or vision by reflection.

CATO'PTRICS, f. [κατοπτρική, Gr.] the doctrine of reflex vision; or that part of optics which treats of, or delivers the laws of, light reflected from mirrors or polished surfaces.

CAT'S-EYE, f. among Jewellers, a stone of the opal kind, but far inferior to it in beauty.

CAT'S-SILVER, f. in Natural History, a fossil composed of plain, parallel; flexible, elastic plates, and of a yellow or golden, white, silvery, or black colour.

CATTLE, f. a collective noun for four-footed animals, which serve either for tilling the ground, or for food to mankind; distinguished into black cattle, which comprehend horses, oxen, bulls, cows, and their young; and likewise into small cattle, under which are comprehended rams, ewes, lambs, goats, &c. Figuratively, persons; a word of reproach and contempt, as it places the human species on a level with brutes.

CAVALCADE, f. [cavalcade, Fr.] a pompous procession on horseback, or in coaches.

CAVALIER, [cavalier] f. [cavalier, Fr.] a knight, gentleman, or soldier who rides on horseback; a horseman. Figuratively, a term of reproach given to those who adhered to King Charles in the great rebellion, CAVALIER, a. gay, sprightly, warlike, brave, generous, polite. Sometimes in a quite contrary sense, i. e. proud, haughty, disdainful.

CAVALIERLY, ad. in a brave or polite manner. But, by the writers in King Charles's time, used for a disdainful, haughty, and arrogant manner.

CAVALRY, f. [cavalerie, Fr.] soldiers who fight and march on horseback, divided into horse and dragoons. The horse never serve but on horseback, being named likewise troopers, or heavy cavalry. The dragoons fight either on horseback or on foot, as occasion requires, and are named light-horse. When an army is drawn up in battle array, the cavalry are posted in the wings; and bodies of cavalry ranged in order of battle, are termed squadrons.

To CA'VATE, v. a. [cavo, Lat.] to scoop, bore, or dig any solid matter into a hollow; to make hollow.

CA'UDLE, f. [chaudeau, Fr.] a liquor sometimes made with water, oatmeal, &c. sometimes with water, oatmeal, spices, and a small dash of wine, used by women in their lying-in, being both diaphoretic and balsamic, and administered with success to those who have the small-pox.

To CA'UDLE, v. a. to make caudle; to mix as caudle.

CAVE, f. [cave, Fr.] a hollow place made in a rock or under ground, which runs in an horizontal direction. Figuratively, an hollow thing. SYNON. Cave is a habitation under ground, made either by art or nature. Cave is some little dwelling raised above the ground.

To dig a cave; we build a cell.
CAVE, v. n. to dwell in a cave, or in a recessed place.
CAVEAT, f. [Lat.] in Law, a kind of writ in the spiritual court to stop the probate of a will, the granting letters of administration, or the admission of a clerk to a benefice, &c.
See Rep. 191.
CAVERN, f. [caverna, Lat.] a hollow place under ground.
CAVERNED, a. full of caverns; hollow; metaphorical. Figuratively, dwelling in a cavern.
CAVERNOUS, a. full of caverns, or hol-
 lowed under ground.
CAVETTO, f. [Ital.] a hollow member, of wood or concave moulding, containing a quarter of a circle.
CAVEZON, f. a sort of nose-band, of leather, or wood, clapt upon the nose of a horse to wring it, in order to supple and break him in.
CADGET, [cant] Participle preter of CATER.
CAVIA'RE, CAVEA'RE, or CAVIER,
 [Ital.] the hard roes of sturgeon salted, made into small cakes, and dried in the sun.
CAVIL, v. n. to raise frivolous objections.
CAVIL, f. a groundless or frivolous objection.
CAVILLATION, or CAVILLING, f. a disposition, inclination, or quality of raising groundless objections, or finding fault with things without reason.
CAVILLER, f. one who makes groundless, frivolous, or impertinent objections.
CAVILLINGLY, ad. objecting in a groundless or frivolous manner.
CAVILLOUS, a. fond of objecting, or making groundless objections.
CAVID, f. [Fr.] a natural hollow, fit to receive a body of troops, and favour their approach.
CAVITY, f. [cavitas, Lat.] hollowness;
 a hollow; a hollow place.
CAUK, f. in Natural History, a coarse quality of oak.
CAUKY, a. resembling or partaking of the qualities of cauk.
CAUL, f. [caul, Brit.] a kind of netting or cap, used by women to inclose their hair; the hinder part of a woman's cap; the netting in the inside of a wig, on which the curled curls are sewed. Figuratively, a kind of membrane. In Anatomy, the omentum, or reticulum, a membrane in the abdomen. Likewise a membrane found on the head of some children at their birth.
CAULIFEROUS, a. in Botany, applied to such plants as have a true stalk.
CAULIFLOWER, f. [generally pronounced cauliflower] [caulis, Lat.] in Botany, a species of cabbage: this plant was brought from Cyprus, and not raised to such perfection as to be sold in a market till 1680.
CAUSABLE a. that which may be produced or effected.

CAUSAL, a. relating to causes.
CAUSATION, f. the act expressive of causing.
CAUSATIVE, a. that which expresses a cause or reason.
CAUSATOR, f. a causer; an author.
CAUSE, [the f in this word and its derivatives, is usually pronounced like z] f. [causa, Lat.] that which makes a thing begin to be;
 that which produces any thing. A first cause, is that which operates of itself, and from its own proper power or virtue. A secondary cause, is that which derives its power from some other. Figuratively, the reason or motive for any undertaking. In a Law sense, the matter in dispute, or subject of a law-suit.
TO CAUSE, v. a. to produce any effect; to effect.
CAUSELESS, a. derived from no cause.
 Without just grounds, reasons, or motives.
CAUSELESSLY, ad. in a groundless manner; without foundation; without reason; unjustly.
CAUSER, f. he that produces, or the agent by which any thing is effected or produced.
CAUSEY, or CAUSEWAY, f. a massive collection of stones, stakes, and falcines, bricks, broken tiles, and lumber; or an elevation of viscous earth well beaten together, serving as a narrow road or path in wet or marshy places.
CAUSTIC, or CAUSTICAL, a. [καυσ-τικὸς. Gr.] in Medicine, that which operates like fire, both with respect to the heat it occasions, and the consumption it causes in the parts to which it is applied.
CAUSTIC, f. in Medicine, a remedy which operates like fire, by destroying the vessels of the part to which it is applied. It is used to eat off proud flesh, fungus, &c.
CAUTELOUS, a. [cauteleus, Fr.] wary, cautious, circumspect. Sometimes used in a bad sense for wily, cunning, treacherous.
CAUTERIZATION, f. the act of consuming flesh by burning hot irons, or caustic medicines.
TO CAUTERIZE, v. a. [cauteriser, Fr.]
 in Surgery, to eat or consume a part by the application of a cautery.
CAUTERY, f. See CAUSTIC.
CAUTION, [kautsion] f. [cautio, Lat.] a prudent manner of acting; wariness; foresight; warning.
CAUTIONARY, [kautsionary] a. given as a pledge, or a security.
CAUTIOUS, [kautsious] a. [cautus, Lat.]
 guarding against any suspected trick; wary, watchful.
CAUTIOUSLY, [kautsiously] ad. in a wary manner, opposed to rashness.
CAUTIONSNESS, [kautsiousness] f. the quality of taking such measures as may prevent any misfortune; a prudent, wary conduct.
TO CAW, v. n. [formed from the sound]

to make a noise like a crow, raven, or rook.

CA'WOOL, a town in the E. riding of Yorkshire, with a market on Wednesdays, 12 miles S. of York, and 186 N. W. of London.

CA'XTON, a town in the county of Norfolk, with a market on Tuesdays. It is 112½ miles N. E. of London.

CA'XTON, a town in Cambridgeshire with a market on Tuesdays. It is but small, though a post-town, and a good thoroughfare; 10 miles W. by S. of Cambridge, and 49 S. of London.

CA'YO, a village of Carmarthenshire, in S. Wales, which gives denomination to a hundred.

To CEASE, v. n. [cæso, Lat.] to forbear or discontinue an action or custom a person is engaged in. To rest, used with from. Actively, to put a stop or an end to. SYNON. We finish by putting the last hand to a work. We cease in quitting it entirely. We leave off in discontinuing.

CEASE, f. death, or extinction.

CEA'SELESS, a. without stop, intermission, pause, respite, or discontinuation; without end.

CECU'TIENCY, f. a tendency to blindness; a dimness of sight.

CE'DAR, f. [cedrus, Lat.] in Botany, a famous tree, a native of mount Libanus, mentioned in Scripture as remarkable for its height and the extent of its branches. It is an evergreen, prodigious thick, and resembles a pyramid.

CE'DRINE, a. [cedrinus, Lat.] of or belonging to the cedar-tree.

To CEIL, [scel] v. a. [cælo, Lat.] to overlay, or cover the inner roof of a building.

CEILING, [sceling] f. the upper part or roof of a room.

To CE'LEBRATE, v. a. [celebro, Lat.] to make honourable mention of; to make a thing famous. Figuratively, to praise or commend; to enumerate the blessings received from the Divine Being, with a heart full of gratitude; to perform the solemn rites appropriated to any particular day or festival. SYNON. Famous, celebrated, and renowned are equally applicable to persons or things; but illustrious to persons only, at least when we would be nice in our choice of words.

CELEBRATION, f. [celebratio, Lat.] the performance of any rite appropriated to some festival or solemnity. Figuratively, praise, fame, renown, memorial, or honourable mention.

CELE'BRIOUS, a. [celeber, Lat.] famous; renowned.

CELE'BRIOUSLY, ad. in a famous manner; in such a manner as to communicate fame.

CELE'BRIOUSNESS, f. renown, fame, or qualities which are the objects of esteem and approbation.

CELE'BRITY, f. [celebritas, Lat.] the performing any rite; renown; fame.

CELE'RITY, f. [celeritas, Lat.] swiftness of motion; velocity; rapidity.

CE'LERY, f. in Botany, a species of parsley. CELESTIAL, a. [caelestis, Lat.] in the heavenly regions; belonging to heaven, or angelical. Used substantively for an inhabitant of heaven.

CELESTIALLY, ad. in a heavenly manner, opposed to earthly.

To CELE'STIFY, v. a. to communicate or endue with the properties of heaven.

CELESTINS, in Church History, a religious order of Christians, reformed from the Bernardines by pope Celestin. Their rules are divided into three parts; the first, of the provincial chapters, and the elections of superiors; the second contains the regular observances; and the third, the visitation and correction of the monks. The Celestins rise two hours after midnight to say matins. They eat no flesh at any time, except when they are sick; they fast every Wednesday and Friday, to the feast of the exaltation of the holy cross, and from that feast to Easter every day.

CE'LIAC, n. [from κοιλία, Gr.] relating to the lower belly. Celiac Passion is a sort of diarrhea, or flux of the belly, in which the aliment is extruded either crude or chylified, instead of excrements.

CE'LIBACY, f. [from caelebs, Lat.] the unmarried or single state, opposed to marriage.

CE'LIBATE, f. [celibatus, Lat.] a single life; the same as Celibacy.

CELL, f. [cella, Lat.] a hollow place; a little house, apartment, or chamber, wherein the ancient monks used to dwell in their retirement; a small or close apartment in a prison. In Anatomy, little bags, bladders, or cavities, wherein fluids or other humours are lodged. In Botany, the partitions or hollow places in the husks or pods of plants, which contain the seeds. In Natural History, the little divisions or partitions of bee-hives, in which the honey is stored.

CE'LLAR, f. [cella, Lat.] in Building, a place under-ground for keeping stores, or the lowest room of a house.

CE'LLARAGE, f. the part of a building appropriated to cellars; cellar-room.

CE'LLULAR, a. [cellula, Lat.] consisting of, or abounding in, little cells or cavities.

CE'LSITUDE, f. [celstudo, Lat.] height, tallness, stature. Also, a note of dignity, by which some persons in high offices are distinguished.

CE'MENT, f. [cæmentum, Lat.] any glutinous substance used to stick two bodies together. Figuratively, that which unites, or forms an union between things.

To CEME'NT, v. a. to unite by some glutinous substance, such as mortar, &c. Figuratively, to unite different people in the bonds of friendship, or by some common tie of interest, &c.

To CE'MENT, v. n. to join together, so as not to be easily divided. In Surgery, applied to broken bones.

GEMENTATION, f. the act of joining bodies bodies together by cement.

CÉMETERY, f. [κοιμητήριον, Gr.] a place wherein the bodies of the dead are buried, a churchyard, or burying-ground.

CÉNATORY, a. [from cena, Lat.] relating to supper.

CÉNOB[ITICAL], a. [κοίτης and βίος, Gr.] living in community.

CÉNOTAPH, f. [νάτος and τάφος, Gr.] an honorary monument erected for a person whose remains are buried in another place; such are most of the monuments in Westminster-abbey.

To CENSE, v. a. [incensifer, Fr.] to perfume with incense. Used only in poetry.

CÉNSER, f. [incensifer, Fr.] the pan or vessel in which incense is burnt.

CÉNSOR, [cenfor, Lat.] f. a Roman magistrate, employed to survey and rate the people, and to inspect and correct their manners. Used by moderns to signify a person given to find fault with, and censure the conduct, actions, or productions of others.

CÉNSORIAN, a. relating to a censor.

CÉNSORIOUS, a. morosely animadverting on the faults of others. Used with of, or upon, before the object of censure.

CÉNSORIOUSLY, ad. in a severe manner; in such a manner as to condemn the foibles of others with the greatest rigour.

CÉNSORIOUSNESS, f. a disposition of finding fault with the actions of others.

CÉNSORSHIP, f. the office of a censor; or the time during which he continued in his office.

CÉNSURABLE, a. liable to be found fault with; worthy of censure; blameable.

CÉNSURABLENESS, f. the quality which makes a thing the object of blame or censure.

CÉNSURE, f. [cenfura, Lat.] the act of blaming, or noting the defects which make any thing blameable; a reproof or reprimand given by a person in authority. In Ecclesiastic Government, a punishment inflicted on a person for some remarkable misdemeanour.

To CÉNSURE, v. a. to reprove a person publicly for some misdemeanour, applied to the reproofs of a superior; to reprimand; blame; or find fault with.

CÉNSURER, f. a person who is fond of taking notice of the faults of others; one who is addicted to reproving others for their defects.

CENT, f. [an abbreviation of centum, Lat.] in Commerce, used to express the profit or loss arising from the sale of any commodity, the rate of commission, exchange, or the interest of money, &c. and signifies the proportion or sum lost, &c. in every 100; thus 10 per cent. loss implies that the seller hath lost 10 pounds on every 100 pounds of the price for which he bought the commodity.

CÉNTAUR, f. [centaurus, Lat.] an imaginary or chimerical being, represented by ancient poets as composed partly of the human and partly of the brute species, i. e. half a man and half a horse. In Astronomy, a constellation in the southern hemisphere, joined with the Wolf, containing thirteen stars.

CÉNTAURY, f. a plant, the root of which is esteemed in fluxes, dysenteries, spitting of blood, and recommended by some in all diseases arising from the obstructions of the mercurial veins.

CÉNTENARY, a. [centenarius, Lat.] the number of a hundred.

CÉNTÉSIMAL, f. [centesimus, Lat.] hundredth.

CÉNTO, f. [Lat.] in Poetry, a piece wholly composed of verses from other authors, wherein sometimes whole lines, and at others half verses, are borrowed, but set down in a new order, and applied to a subject different from that in which they were originally introduced.

CÉNTRAL, a. relating to the centre, or placed in the centre. Darkest, or as dark as the centre of the earth. Central forces, are those by which a body tends to, or removes from, the centre.

CÉNTRALLY, a. entirely; perpendicularly; in a manner relating to the centre of gravity.

CÉNTRE, or CÉNTER, f. [centrum, Lat.] in its primary sense, a point equally remote from either of the extremities of a line, figure, or body; or the point or middle of a line or plane, which divides it into two equal parts. The centre of a circle, is a point within it, from whence all lines drawn to the circumference are equal. Centre of gravitation or attraction, is that point to which a planet is impelled in its motion by the force of gravity. Centre of gravity, is that point about which all the parts of a body, in any situation, balance each other. Centre of motion, is that point which remains at rest, while all the other parts of a body move about it. Centre of oscillation, is that point in which, if the whole gravity of the pendulum were collected, the time of its vibration would receive no alteration. Centre of percussion, is that point in which the force of a stroke is the greatest possible. Centre is used figuratively, for the earth, in the Ptolemaic system placed in the centre.

To CÉNTRE, v. a. to fix on, or as a centre; to tend to, or be collected together, as in a centre. Used neuterly, to meet, like rays in a centre; to be placed in the centre of the mundane system.

CÉNTRIFUGAL, a. [centrum and fugio, Lat.] that which endeavours to fly or recede from its center or fixed place; so that the force of any body moving in a circular or curvilinear orbit that strives to fall off from the axis of its motion in a tangent to the said orbit, is called the centrifugal force.

CÉNTRIPÉTAL, a. [centrum and peto, Lat.] tending towards the centre. Centripetal force, is that by which a body tends, acts, or is impelled towards the centre.

CÉNTRY, f. See SENTRY, or SENTINEL.

CÉNTUPLE, a. [centuplex, Lat.] an hundred-fold.

To

To CENTURIATE, [centurio, Lat.] to divide into hundreds.

CENTURIATOR, f. an historian who divides time into centuries, or spaces consisting of an hundred years.

CENTURION, f. [centurio, Lat.] a military officer among the Romans who commanded an hundred men.

CENTURY, f. [centuria, Lat.] in Chronology, is a period of one hundred years. In Church history, the method of computing by centuries is generally observed, commencing from the time of our Saviour's incarnation; in which sense we say, the first, second, third century, &c.

CEPHALALGY, [cephalalgia] f. [κεφαλαλγία, Gr.] the head-ach.

CEPHALIC, [cephalic] a. [from κεφαλή, Gr.] in Medicine, remedies for disorders in the head.

CERATE, f. [from cera, Lat.] in Medicine, a kind of stiff ointment, made of oil, wax, and other ingredients, used externally.

CERATED, a. [ceratus, Lat.] covered with wax or cerate.

CERBERUS, f. a name the old Poets gave a dog with three heads, which they feigned to be the porter of hell-gates, that carried the fortunate souls that went thither, but devoured those that would get out again.

To CERE, v. a. [from cera, Lat.] to rub upon, or cover with wax.

CEREBEL, f. [cerebellum, Lat.] the hinder part of the brain.

CEREBRUM, f. [Lat.] the brain, properly so called. See BRAIN.

CERECLOTH, f. a cloth covered or spread with cerate or other ointment.

CEREMENTS, f. [from cera, Lat.] clothes dipped in melted wax or gums, in which dead bodies were formerly wrapped when embalmed.

CEREMONIAL, a. that which relates to a ceremony, or external rite. Figuratively, consisting in mere external show; formal. Substantively, an external rite, or book containing the ceremonies to be observed in religious worship.

CEREMONIALNESS, f. the quality of abounding in external rites, and modes of worship; the mere external show of devotion, piety, or virtue.

CEREMONIOUS, a. consisting in external or outward rites; superstitious, or fond of ceremonies; formal; too much given to the practice of external acts of civility and polite address. Figuratively, awful.

CEREMONIOUSLY, ad. in a polite and civil manner.

CEREMONY, f. [ceremonia, Lat.] an assemblage of several actions, forms and circumstances, in order to render a thing more solemn; an outward rite, an external form in religion; polite address. Master of the Ceremonies, is an officer instituted by King James I. for the more honourable reception of ambassadors and strangers of quality. He wears about his neck a chain of gold, with a medal under the crown of Great Britain, having on one side an emblem of peace, with this motto, beati pacifici; and on the other, an emblem of war, with Dieu et mon droit. His salary is 300*l.* per ann. He has his assistant and marshal of the ceremonies, both under him.

CERINTHIANS, f. in Church History, heretics, the followers of Cerinthus, who lived and published his heresies in the time of the apostles themselves. They did not allow that God was the author of the creatures, but said, that the world was created by an inferior power. They attributed to this Creator an only Son, but born in time, and different from the world. They admitted several angels and inferior powers; they maintained that the law and the prophets came not from God, but from angels; and that the God of the Hebrews was only an angel. They distinguished between Jesus and Christ, and said, that Jesus was a mere man, like other men, of Joseph and Mary; but that he excelled all other men in prudence and wisdom; that Jesus being baptized, the Christ of the supreme God, that is, the Holy Ghost descended upon him; and that by the assistance of this Christ, Jesus performed his miracles. It was partly to refute this sect that St. John wrote his gospel.

CERNE-ABBEY, a town in Dorsetshire, distant from London 121 miles. The market is on Wednesday.

CERTAIN, a. [certus, Lat.] that which cannot be denied without obitancy; resolved, or determined; sure, so as to admit no doubt.

CERTAINLY, ad. without doubt, question, scruple, or fail.

CERTAINTY, f. divided by Metaphysicians into Certainty of truth, which is when words are so put together in propositions as exactly to express the agreement or disagreement of ideas, as expressed in any proposition; and adly, Certainty of knowledge, which is the perceiving the agreement or disagreement of ideas, as expressed in any proposition; this is called the knowing or being certain of the truth of any proposition. A physical certainty is that which depends on the evience of sense. A mathematical certainty, is that which no man any ways doubts of, as that 100 is more than 1. A moral certainty, is that whose proof depends on a due connection of circumstances, and clearness of testimony; and when these concur, cannot be doubted of without obitancy. Figuratively, an event which must necessarily and unavoidably happen.

CERTIFICATE, f. [from certifico, law Lat.] a testimony given in writing, to certify or make known any truth. Figuratively, any testimony.

To CERTIFIE, or CERTIFY, v. a. [certifier, Fr.] to give certain notice of a thing.

CERTIORARI, f. [Lat.] a writ issued out of the Chancery or court of King's Bench, directed to an inferior court, to call up the records of a cause there depending.

CERTITUDE, f. [certitudo, Lat.] an act of the judgment, importing the adhesion of the mind mind to the proposition it affirms, or the strength of evidence which occasions that adhesion; free from doubt. See CERTAINTY.

CERVICAL, a. [cervicalis, Lat.] belonging to, or situated in the neck. The cervical nerves and vessels, in Anatomy, are so called from their being situated in the neck.

CERVIX, f. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the hind part of the neck, opposed to the jugulum, throat, or fore-part.

CERULEAN, or CERULEOUS, ad. [ceruleus, Lat.] blue, or sky-blue.

CERUMEN, f. [Lat.] ear-wax.

CERUSE, f. [cerussa, Lat.] white-lead reduced to a powder, diluted with water on porphyry, and formed into a paste.

CESARIAN, a. [from Cæsar] in Anatomy, the Cæsarian section, is the cutting a child from its mother's womb, either dead or alive.

CESS, f. a tax; the act of levying rates, or taxing.

CESSATION, f. [cessatio, Lat.] a pause, rest, stop, or vacation, including the idea of a change from a state of activity or motion to its contrary, that of rest. Figuratively, a truce, or forbearance of hostile acts between two armies, without a peace.

CESSA'VIT, f. in Law, a writ, which lies against a person who has not paid his rent, or performed his due service for the space of two years, and has not sufficient goods and chattels to make an equivalent distress.

CESSIBILITY, f. the quality of receding or giving way.

CESSIBLE, a. [from cessum, Lat.] easy to give way.

CESSION, [cession] f. [cessio, Fr.] the act of yielding or giving way to a stroke or force, without resistance. In Common Law, an act whereby a person transfers his right to another.

CESSIONARY, [cessionary] a. implying a resignation.

CESSOR, f. in Law, a person who ceaseth or neglecteth to pay rent, or perform a duty, so long, that a writ of cessavit may be taken out against him.

CESTUS, f. [Lat.] a girdle, which the poets ascribe to Venus, and pretend that it charms the person who wears it with irresistible charms.

CETA'CEOUS, a. [from cete, Lat.] resembling a whale; of the whale kind.

C FAUT, in Music, one of the notes in the gamut, or scale.

CHACE, f. See CHASE.

CHAD, [chad] f. in Natural History, a round kind of fish.

To CHAFE, v. a. [ecbauffer, Fr.] to warm by rubbing. Figuratively, to make sore by friction and heat. To warm, or sceng with aromatic perfumes. To make a person grow warm with anger. Neuterly, to grow angry, or fret at any opposition or disappointment; beautifully applied to inanimate things.

CHAFE, f. anger, or peevish warmth, owing to opposition, slight, contempt, or disappointment.

CHA'FER, f. in Natural History, a kind of a yellow beetle, with two antennæ, or horns, terminated with a kind of brush or comb, making a very loud buzzing noise when flying, and appearing generally in the month of May, whence they are called May bugs by the vulgar.

CHA'FERY, f. a forge in an iron mill, wherein the iron is wrought into bars.

CHAFF, f. [cras, Sax.] the husks, or outward skins of corn, which are separated from the flour by threshing and winnowing. Figuratively, any thing of small value; any thing worthless.

To CHA'FFER, v. n. [kauffen, Belg.] to treat about or make a bargain; to haggle, to beat down a person in his demands or price. Used actively, to buy; to truck or exchange one commodity for another.

CHA'FFERER, f. one who buys bargains, or endeavours to purchase a thing at less than the market-price; a haggler.

CHA'FFERY, f. the act of buying or selling; traffic.

CHA'FFINCH, f. a song bird, so called from its delighting in chaff.

CHA'FFING-DISH, f. an utensil made use of to contain coals for keeping any thing warm, or warming it when cold.

CHA'FFLESS, a. without defect or levity.

CHA'FFY, a. full of chaff; like chaff.

Figuratively, light.

CHA GFORD, a town in Devonshire, distant from London 186½ miles.

CHAGRIN, [chagrin] f. [Fr.] unevenness of temper; ill humour, displeasure or peevishness, arising from any thing done to vex, or in opposition to a person's inclinations.

To CHA'GRIN, [chagrin] v. a. [chagriner, Fr.] to tease; to make uneasy.

CHAIN, f. [chaîne, Fr.] a collection of rings or round pieces of metal linked to each other, of diverse lengths and thickness; an ornament used by several magistrates, and borrowed from the Goths. In Surveying, a series of iron links, distinguished into 100 equal parts, used for measuring land. Figuratively, a state of slavery, or confinement; a series of things linked to, and dependent on one another.

To CHAIN, v. a. to fasten, secure, or confine with a chain. Figuratively, to enslave, or bring into a state of slavery. To be defended by a chain. To unite in firm and indissoluble friendship.

CHAIN-PUMP, f. a double pump used in large ships.

CHAIN-SHOT, f. two half bullets fastened together by a chain, used in an engagement at sea.

CHAIN-WORK, f. work with open spaces, or interstices representing the links of a chain.

CHAIR, f. [chair, Fr.] a moveable seat for a single person, with a back to it. Figuratively, the place or post of a great officer. Above the chair, chair, in London, is applied to those aldermen who have bore the office of lord-mayor; below the chair, to those who have not yet enjoyed that dignity. The seat of justice or authority; a covered carriage in which persons are conveyed from one place to another, borne by two men; a sedan. To take the chair, or to be in the chair, implies that a person is president, and presides at an assembly.

CHAIRMAN, f. one who sits in a higher chair than the rest of the members, and presides at an assembly or club; one who carries a chair or sedan.

CHAISE, [chaise] f. [chaise, Fr.] a high open carriage, running on two or more wheels, and drawn by one, two, or more horses.

CHALCEDONY, f. a genus of semipellucid gems, of an even, regular, and not tabulated texture, variegated with different colours, dispersed in form of mists and clouds.

CHALCOGRAPHY, [chalkography] f. [χαλκογραφία, Gr.] the art of engraving upon brass.

CHALDEA, [chaldæa] otherwise called Babylonia, has now the name of Irac Arabi, and lies between the river Euphrates and Tigris, a little to the N. of Buffarah and the Persian Gulph, and to the S. of Bagdad.

CHALDER, CHALDRON, or CHAUDRON, f. a dry measure used for coals, containing 12 sacks, or 36 bushels heaped up, according to a standard sealed and kept at Guildhall, London.

CHALICE, f. formerly used for a cup, or drinking vessel, with a foot to it. At present appropriated to the vases or vessels used at the celebration of the Eucharist, or Lord's Supper.

CHALK, [chalk] f. [ceale, Sax.] a white, dry marle, with a dusty surface, and found in hard masses. In Medicine, it is of the first note among the alkaline absorbents; nor is it less useful in the ordinary affairs of life; is in no small repute as a manure, especially for cold and four lands, for which the soft unctuous chalk is most proper, as the dry, hard, and strong chalk is for lime. Black chalk, among Painters, is a kind of ochreous earth, of a close texture, which gives a fine black, and is used on blue paper. Red chalk is an indurated clayey ochre, much used by Painters and Artificers.

To CHALK, [chalk] v. a. to rub with chalk; to manure with chalk; used with out, to mark, or describe with chalk. Figuratively, to direct, point out, or discover.

CHALKY, [chalky] a. consisting of chalk; white with chalk. Applied to fluids, such as have chalk steeped in them, and are impregnated with it.

To CHALLENGE, v. a. [challenger, Fr.] to call, dare, or provoke a person to fight, either by speaking or writing. Figuratively, to dare or defy a person to enter into a literary contest on any subject; to lay claim to as a right.

CHALLENGE, f. a provocation or summons to engage in a duel, or combat, either uttered or written; a claim of a thing as a due or right, used with of. In Law, an exception against either persons or things.

CHALLENGER, f. one who defies, provokes, or summons another to fight him; one who claims a superiority; one who claims a thing as his due; a claimant.

CHALYBEATE, [chalybeate] a. [from chalybs, Lat.] partaking of the qualities, or impregnated with steel.

CHAM, [cham] f. the title given to the sovereign princes in Tartary.

CHAMA'DE, [chamade] f. [Fr.] a certain beat of drum, or sound of a trumpet, whereby notice is given to the enemy of some propositions to be made to them, to surrender, have leave to bury the dead, make a truce, &c.

CHAMBER, f. [chambre, Fr.] in Building, any room situated between the ground floor and garrets of a house. Figuratively, a retired room in a house; an apartment, occupied as a public office, or court of justice; any cavity or hollow; that part of a gun wherein the charge is lodged.

To CHAMBER, v. n. to be too free with women; to be wanton.

CHAMBERLAIN, f. an officer who has the care of a chamber. The lord great chamberlain is the sixth great officer of the crown. Lord chamberlain of the household has the oversight of all the officers belonging to the king's chambers, except the precinct of the bed-chamber. In great towns, a receiver of their rents and revenues; and in London, the chamberlain has likewise the cognizance of all disputes between masters and apprentices, the power of imprisoning the latter for misdemeanors, and makes freemen, &c.

CHAMBERLAINSHIP, f. the office of a chamberlain.

CHAMBERMAID, f. a maid-servant who takes care of the chambers, the lady's dressing-room, and assists the lady's woman in dressing her.

To CHAMBLET, v. n. to be variegated; to appear like cloth or silk watered by the calenderer.

CHAMBREL, f. in Farriery, the joint or bending of the upper part of the hinder leg of a horse.

CHAMELEON; [chameleon] f. [χαμαιλεων, Gr.] See CAMELEON. This is the proper spelling.

To CHAMFER, v. a. [chamfrer, Fr.] to furrow; to make channels, or hollow places in a column.

CHAMO'IS, or SHAMMY, f. a particular kind of leather, used for gloves, shoes, &c.

CHAMOMILE, [chamomile] f. [χαμαμηλον, Gr.] in Botany, a plant, so called from its trailing along the ground. It has a compound flower with an hemispherical empalement, composed of many rays.

To CHAMP, v. a. [champayer, Fr.] to bite with a frequent and forcible action of the teeth; to grind any hard and solid body with the teeth, so as to render it fit to swallow. Used with sep. Neuterly, Neatly, to open and close the jaws together, or perform the action of biting often.

CHAMPAIGN, [Champaign, f.] [campagne, Fr.] a flat, open, or level country.

CHAMPIGNON, [Champignon, f.] [champignons, Fr.] in Botany, a plant of the mushroom kind.

CHAMPION, f. [champion, Fr.] one who undertakes a combat in behalf of another. The king's champion is an officer, who, while he is at dinner on his coronation-day, challenges any to contest the king's right with him in combat; after which the king drinks to him, and sends him a gilt cup and cover full of wine, which he keeps as a fee. Figuratively, any one who undertakes the defence of any sentiment or topic in literature and religion.

CHANCE, f. [chance, Fr.] a word which implies that an event produced is not owing, but contrary, to the established laws of nature; or that the cause of a thing is unknown; a future event. Figuratively, an unforeseen or unexpected calamity or misfortune; a thing which was not intended or designed. SYNON. Chance forms neither order nor design; we neither attribute to it knowledge or will, and its events are always very uncertain. Fortune lays plans and designs, but without choice; we attribute it to a will without discernment, and say that it acts blindly.

To CHANCE, v. n. to fall out unexpectedly, or contrary to the necessary laws of motion or nature; to proceed from some unknown cause; or without any design of the agent.

CHANCE-ME'DLEY, f. the killing of a person without design, but not without some fault; as when a person, in lopping a tree, should kill a passenger by means of a bough he slings down; for though it may happen without design, yet as he ought to have given notice, it is not without fault.

CHANCEL, f. [from cancelli, Lat.] the eastern part of a church, between the altar and the rail that incloses it.

CHANCELLOR, f. [cancellarius, Lat.] a very ancient and honourable officer, supposed to be formerly the king's or emperor's notary or scribe, and presided over a college of secretaries, for the writing of treaties, and other public business; and, according to a late treatise, the court of equity, under the old constitution, was held before the king and his council, in the palace, where one supreme court for business of every kind was kept. At first the Chancellor became a judge, to hear and determine petitions to the king, which were preferred to him; and in the end, as business increased, the people addressed their suit to the Chancellor, and not to the king; and thus the Chancellor's equitable power, by degrees, commenced by prescription. The lord high Chancellor is the chief administrator of justice next the king; possesses the highest honour of the long robe, is invested with absolute power to mitigate the severity of the law in his decisions, enters into his office by taking an oath, and having the great seal committed to him by the king, has the disposition of all ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the crown under 20l. per annum, peruses all patents before they are signed, and takes place of all the nobility, excepting those of the royal family and the archbishop of Canterbury. Chancellor, in an ecclesiastical court, is one bred to the law, and used by the bishops to direct or advise them in such causes as come before them. Chancellor of the Exchequer is an officer who presides in that court, and takes care of the interest of the crown. Chancellor of an University is the chief magistrate who seals diplomas, letters of degrees, and defends the rights and privileges of the place: in Oxford this place is enjoyed for life; but at Cambridge only for the space of three years. Chancellor of the order of the Garter, is the person who seals the commissions and mandates of the chapter, keeps the register, and delivers transcripts of it under the seal of their order. Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, is an officer appointed to determine controversies between the king and his tenants of the duchy land, being assisted in difficult points by two judges of the common law.

CHANCELLORSHIP, f. the office of a chancellor.

CHANCERY, f. the grand court of equity and conscience, instituted to temper and moderate the rigour of other courts, which are obliged to act according to the strict letter of the law. From this court all original writs, commissions of bankrupts, of charitable uses, of idiots, lunacy, &c. are issued. It gives relief for or against infants, notwithstanding their minority; for or against married women, notwithstanding their coverture. All frauds and deceptions, for which there is no redress at common law; all breaches of trust, confidences, and accidents, as to relieve obligors, mortgagors, &c. against penalties and forfeitures, where the intention was honest, are here relievable; but in no case where the plaintiff can have his remedy at common law. Here all patents, most sorts of commissions, deeds between parties touching lands and estates, treaties of foreign princes, &c. are sealed and enrolled. From hence are issued writs to convene the parliament and convocation, proclamations, charters, &c.

CHANCERE, [Chancker, f.] [chancre, Fr.] in Surgery, a tubercle, which has its seat in the unctuous humour that fills the vesicular texture.

CHANCROUS, [Chanckrous, a.] having the quality of a chancre.

CHANDELIER, [Chandeler, f.] [chandelier, Fr.] a branch for holding candles. In Fortification, a wooden frame on which fascines or faggots are laid for covering the workman, instead of a parapet.

CHANDLER, f. [chandeller, Fr.] a seller of divers sorts of wares.

To CHANGE, v. a. [changer, Fr.] to give or take one thing for another. To resign or quit one thing for the sake of another, used with with for. "Cannot change that for another." Soub. To give a person the value of money in coin of a different metal; to alter. Applied to the moon, to increase, or decrease. Syn. We vary in our sentiments when we give them up and embrace them again. We change our opinions when we reject one in order to embrace another. He who has no certain principles is liable to vary. He who is more attached to fortune than truth, will find no difficulty in changing his doctrine.

CHANGE, f. the alteration of a person's circumstances; the act of taking or giving any thing for another; a succession of things in the place of one another. In Astronomy, the time in which the moon begins a new revolution. Figuratively, novelty. In Ringing, the alteration of the order in which any set of bells are rung. Money of a different metal.

CHANGEABLE, a. that which may be altered; that which does not always remain in the same situation or circumstances; inconstant; fickle.

CHANGEABLENESS, f. applied to the mind, want of constancy; fickleness. Applied to laws or qualities, liable to alteration.

CHANGEABLY, ad. in a manner subject to alteration; inconstantly.

CHANGEFUL, a. altering very often, and upon slight grounds; used as a word of reproach. Fickle; inconstant; full of change.

CHANGELING, f. a child left or taken in room of another; a person who does not enjoy a proper use of his understanding; a fool, natural, or idiot; one apt to alter his sentiments often; a fickle person.

CHANNEL, f. [canal, Fr.] in Cosmography, the hollow or cavity in which running waters flow; the arm of a sea, or a narrow river, between two adjacent islands or continents.

To CHANNEL, v. a. to cut any thing in narrow cavities, for containing water; or for the sake of ornament; applied to buildings.

To CHANT, v. a. [chanter, Fr.] to sing; to celebrate in songs; to perform divine service with singing, as in cathedrals. Used neuterly, to harmonize or sound a chord with the voice to any musical instrument, used with the particle to.

CHANT, f. a song; a particular tune; the peculiar tune used in a cathedral.

CHANTER, f. one who sings in a cathedral; a singer; a songster.

CHANTICLEER, f. the cock, so called from his clear shrill crow.

CHANTRESS, f. a female who sings.

CHANTRY, f. a church or chapel endowed for one or more priests to say mass in it daily.

CHARS, [χάρς] f. [χάρς, Gr.] the original confused mass of matter out of which all visible things were made. Figuratively, any confused irregular mixture; any thing whose parts are not easily distinguished.

CHAOTIC, [καθικ] a. resembling, or like a chaos.

To CHAP, v. a. [happen, Belg.] to break into chinks by excessive heat, applied to the effects of cold on the hands.

CHAP, f. an opening, cleft, or chink in the ground, owing to excessive drought or heat.

CHAP, f. the upper or under part of a beast's mouth.

CHAPE, f. [chappe, Fr.] the catch of any thing by which it is held in its place; the hook by which a sword is fastened in its scabbard; the steel ring with two points by which a buckle is held to the back-strap; a piece of brass or silver which covers the end of the scabbard of a sword.

CHAPEL, f. [capella, Lat.] a building which is sometimes part of a church, or adjoining to it; or separate, and called a Chapel of ease, where a parish is large, as a relief to the distant parishioners. There are also free Chapels, endowed with revenues for maintaining a curate without any expence to the rector or inhabitants.

CHAPEL LE FRITH, a town in Derbyshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the utmost confines of the Peak, near Cheshire; but the market is now come to nothing. It is 165 miles N. N. W. of London.

CHAPELRY, f. the jurisdiction or bounds of a chapel.

CHAPERON, [chaperon] f. [Fr.] a kind of hood or cap worn by knights of the garter when dressed in their robes.

CHAPEFALN, [chappelan] a. having the mouth shrunk, or the projecting part fallen down, applied to an helmet.

CHAPEITER, f. [chapeiteau, Fr.] in Architecture, the upper part or capital of a pillar.

CHAPLAIN, f. [capellanus, Lat.] a person who performs divine service in a chapel; or is retained in the service of some family to perform divine service.

CHAPLAINSHIP, f. the office, possession, or revenue of a chaplain.

CHAPLET, f. [chapelet, Fr.] a garland or wreath of flowers to be worn round the head. In the Roman church, a string of beads.

CHAPMAN, f. [chapman, Sax.] one that cheapens or buys goods; a buyer and seller.

CHAPS, f. the mouth of a beast. Used by the vulgar, and in contempt, for the mouth of a man or woman.

CHAPTER, f. [chapitre, Fr.] the division of a book. In Canon Law, a congregation of clergymen, under the dean, in a cathedral church; an assembly held both by religious and military orders for deliberating their affairs, and regulating their discipline; the places in which assemblies of the clergy are held.

CHAR, f. [wrote likewise charre] in Natural History, a fish; a kind of golden alpine trout.

To CHAR, v. a. to burn wood to a black cinder.

CHAR, f. work done by the day by a woman; a single job.

To CHAR, v. n. [pron. chair] to do the house-house-work of a family occasionally, opposed to regular service.

CHA'RACTER, [karakter] f. [character, Lat.] a figure or mark drawn upon paper, or other substance, to convey some idea to the mind; a letter of the alphabet; an assemblage of virtues or vices, whereby one person is distinguished from another; or that which a person has peculiar in his manners, which makes him differ from others; office, dignity, or authority.

To CHA'RACTER, [karakter] v. a. used with in, or upon, to engrave.

To CHA'RACTERISE, [karakterize] v. a. to describe a person or thing by the properties which distinguish it from others; to impress a thing in lasting characters on the mind; to mark with a peculiar stamp or form.

CHARACTERISTIC, or CHARACTERISTICAL, [karakteristik] a. that which distinguishes a person or thing from others of the same species.

CHARACTERISTIC, [karakteristik] f. a peculiar mark, or assemblage of qualities, which distinguishes a person or thing from others of the same kind.

CHA'RACTERLESS, [karakterless] a. without any mark to distinguish a thing.

CHA'RACTERY, [karakterij] f. a mark which distinguishes a thing from others of the same kind.

CHA'RCOAL, [charcoal] f. a kind of fuel, or coal made of oak half burnt, under a covering of turf; that for powder-mills is made of elder-wood.

CHARD, a town of Somersetshire, whose market is on Mondays. Distant from London 141 miles.

To CHARGE, v. a. [charger, Fr.] to entrust, or commit to a person's care; to make a person debtor. Figuratively, to impute or ascribe; or impose as a task; to accuse, applied to crimes, sometimes having the particle with. To oblige a person to give evidence; to adjure; to command; to attack, applied to an engagement in war. To load a person, applied to burthens. Applied to fire-arms, to load with powder or shot.

CHARGE, f. in Gunnery, is the quantity of powder and shot with which a gun is loaded for execution. Also, care, trust, custody; precept, mandate, commission, accusation, imputation; the thing entrusted; expence; attack; the signal for battle. Also, a preparation or ointment, applied to the shoulder-blains, inflammations, and sprains of horses. In Heraldry, it is applied to the figures represented on the escutcheon, by which the bearers are distinguished from one another; and it is to be observed, that too many charges are not so honourable as fewer.

CHA'RGEABLE, a. expensive; costly; liable to be blamed or accused.

CHA'RGEABLENESS, f. expensiveness, costliness.

CHA'RGEABLY, ad. in a costly, expensive manner, at a great expence.

CHA'RCGER, f. a very large dish.

CHA'RILY, ad. in a deliberate, circum-spect, cautious manner.

CHA'RINESS, f. a nicety, or delicacy, whereby a person is offended at any thing which is inconsistent with the highest degree or idea of justice; scrupulousness.

CHA'RRIOT, f. [car-rhod, Brit.] a covered four-wheeled carriage suspended on leathers, or springs, drawn by two or more horses, and having only back seats. War chariots, used by our ancestors, were open vehicles drawn by two or more horses, with scythes at the wheels and spears at the pole. Chariot-race, a public game among the Romans, &c. wherein chariots were driven for a prize.

To CHA'RRIOT, v. a. figuratively, to convey, as in a chariot.

CHARIOTE'ER, f. one who drives a chariot.

CHA'RITABLE, a. [charitable, Fr.] having a benevolent and humane disposition, inclining a person to assist the afflicted.

CHA'RITABLY, ad. in a kind, benevolent, tender, affectionate manner.

CHA'RITY, f. [caritas, Lat.] a benevolent principle, exerting itself in acts of kindness and affection to all persons, without respect to party or nation.

To CHARK, v. a. to burn to a coal, or cinder.

CHA'RLATAN, f. a person who pretends to a knowledge of physic; a quack; a mountebank.

CHA'RLATANICAL, a. vainly pretending to a knowledge of physick; quackish.

CHA'RLATANRY, f. the practice of a quack.

CHA'RLBURY, a town in Oxfordshire, whose market is on Fridays. Distant from London 68 miles.

CHARLES (Stuart) I. born Nov. 19, 1600, was proclaimed king on the death of James I. March 27, 1625; and on the May following, his marriage with Henrietta Maria of France was solemnized by proxy at Paris. The new queen arrived in England, and the marriage was consummated at Canterbury, June 10. The king May 10, granted a pardon to 20 Romish priests, who were condemned to die. On June 18, the parliament met at Westminster, when the king asked money for the recovery of the Palatine. After some complaints and debates about grievances, the commons gave the king 2 subsidies, but at the same time, both houses joined in a petition against Recusants, setting forth the great dangers from the increase of popery, the cause of this increase, and the remedies for preventing this evil for the future. To which the king gave an answer very much to the satisfaction of the parliament, if his actions had been agreeable to it. King James having promised to lend some ships to the French king, which it was pretended, at least, were to serve against the Genoë, or some of the allies of Spain, admiral Pennington was sent to Dieppe with the the Vanguard man of war, and 7 stout merchant ships. It soon appeared, that the French king designed to make use of them against his protestant subjects in Rochelle; upon which the crew deserted to a man, rather than fight against their fellow-protestants; and Pennington was ordered by the court to put these ships into the hands of the French, to be employed as they thought fit. This occasioned a distrust of the king, a jealousy of the queen, and a general odium of the duke of Buckingham. Before the parliament had sat a fortnight at Oxford, whither it was removed on account of the plague which raged in London, the king perceiving that the commons would grant no further supplies, till grievances were redressed, and that they were beginning to fall upon the conduct of the duke of Buckingham, he dissolved them, in a hasty manner, by commission, on August 12. But wanting money for the expedition against Spain; he raised it by a forced loan from his subjects, by letters under his privy-seal, which increased the popular discontents. On Feb. 9, 1626, the king was crowned. The new parliament met on the 6th, and was opened by a speech from the lord-keeper, Coventry. Care had been taken to have leading members against the court made sheriffs, that they might not be chosen in this. However, this parliament proved no more favourable to the king's designs than the former; they made greater complaints against the public grievances. The king sent for both houses to Whitehall, and severely reprimanded the commons, both by himself and the lord-keeper, complaining of their animosity against the duke, of the scantiness of the supply, and the manner of granting it; and in the end said, 'Remember that parliaments are altogether in my power, for their calling, sitting, and dissolution; therefore, as I find the fruits of them good or evil, they are to continue or not to be.' This did not intimidate the commons, who being returned to their houses, drew up a remonstrance, and presented it to the king to justify their proceedings, and then went on with their articles against the duke, who, while under the impeachment, procured himself to be chosen chancellor of Cambridge, notwithstanding one of the articles against him was his engrossing a plurality of offices. The commons took great offence at this, but the king supported his election. The commons drew up a remonstrance against the duke as the principal cause of all the grievances in the kingdom, and against tonnage and poundage, which had been levied by the king, ever since his accession, though it was never understood to be payable without a special act of parliament in every new reign. But the parliament was dissolved by commission, June 15, before this remonstrance could be presented, and the king ordered all such as had copies of it to burn them. The duke remained in the king's favour till he was stabbed, when he was going to embark on board the fleet of which he was commander in chief, as well as of the land forces. There was nothing but continual struggles between the king who wanted to assume to himself the absolute power of disposing of his subjects property, and leaving their grievances unredressed, and the parliament, who were willing to grant the king the necessary supplies, provided their grievances were redressed, and the rightful privileges of the subjects secured; which at last produced a civil war. On January 3, 1641-2, he sent his attorney-general to the house of peers, to accuse in his name, of high treason, the lord Kimbolton, and five members of the house of commons; and persons were sent to seal up their papers, &c. and the king having sent a serjeant at arms to the house of commons to demand them, came himself the next day, attended by a number of armed men, as if with a design to seize them. Leaving his guard at the door, he entered the house, and taking the speaker's chair, made a speech to them, on what he was come about; but looking round, and finding the accused persons not there (for they had slipped away just before), he told the house, he expected they should send them to him as soon as they returned; and then departed, the members crying out, Privilege! Privilege! The king soon after this removed with his family to Hampton-court, from thence to Windsor, and at last to York. Two days after his departure, he sent a message to both houses, telling them he would waive his proceedings against the six members, and be as careful of their privileges as of his own life and crown. Two days after that he sent another to the same effect; and on February 2, offered a general pardon; but all was to no purpose, the wound was too deep to be healed, the commons made a large declaration against the late action, impeached the attorney-general for what he had done, and committed him to prison. Moreover, they set a guard about the Tower, sent Sir John Hotham to take possession of Hull, where was a great magazine of arms and ammunition, and ordered him to keep it for the parliament; understanding the king had a design to secure it for himself. On May 20, the commons voted; 1. That it appeared that the king, seduced by wicked counsels, intends to make war against the parliament. 2. That wheresoever the king makes war upon the parliament, it is a breach of the trust reposed in him by his people, contrary to his oath, and tending to the dissolution of the government. 3. That whosoever shall serve or assist him in such wars, are traitors by the fundamental laws of the kingdom. On June 10, the two houses published proposals for borrowing money and plate for the defence of the kingdom. On the 15th, the king granted several commissions of array for levying troops, and the parliament drew up a declaration against them. On July 12, the commons voted, and with them the lords agreed, that an army should be raised, and the command given to R. De-reux,

1642, earl of Essex. And on August 22, the king in a solemn manner set up his standard at Nottingham, having before, by proclamation, commanded all men, who could bear arms, to repair to it the said day. On October 23, a great battle was fought between the two armies at Edgehill, in Warwickshire. Both sides claimed the victory, the number of the slain on the side of battle was about 5000. The year 1643 began with a treaty for peace, which was held at Oxford, between the king and commissioners from the parliament, but it broke off on April 15, without success. On June 18, there was a fight in Chaldgrave-field, in which the famous Mr. Hampden, a great leader in the parliament, was slain. On July 5, was fought the famous battle of Lansdown, in which, though the marquis of Hertford, who commanded for the king, lost almost all his horse, yet Sir William Waller was at last compelled to quit the field. But Sir William met with a worse fate on 13, when at Roundway-Down, in Wiltshire, he was entirely defeated, 5 or 6000 of his men slain, and 900 made prisoners. The king summoned such lords and commons as had deserted the parliament at Westminster, to meet as a parliament at Oxford. Accordingly they assembled, Jan. 22, 1643-4, and sat till April 16 following, when they were prorogued to October, but never met again. They did little of moment, except helping the king to money, which was the chief end for which they were called together. The king visibly gained ground of the parliament last year, and therefore the two houses thought it necessary to call in the Scots to their aid. A treaty was concluded, in pursuance of which the Scots army entered England, about the time the Oxford parliament met: it consisted of 15000 foot, and 3000 horse, under the command of the earl of Leven, and passed the Tweed on Feb. 28, at some distance from Newcastle. On July 2, an obstinate and bloody battle was fought at Marston-Moor, in which prince Rupert was entirely routed, and the parliamentarians got a complete victory, which was owing in great measure to Cromwell's valour and good conduct. York now surrendered to the parliament generals on honourable terms. On June 14, 1645, was fought the famous battle of Naseby in Northamptonshire, which decided the quarrel between the king and the parliament, wherein the parliament's forces gained a complete victory. The king lost a great number of officers and gentlemen of distinction, most of his foot were made prisoners, all his cannon and baggage taken, with 3000 arms, and other rich booty; among which was also the king's cabinet, with his most secret papers, and letters between him and his queen; which showed how contrary his counsels with her were to those he declared to the kingdom. After this signal victory, nothing could stand before the parliament's forces. On February 18, 1645-6, Fairfax defeated Lord Hopton at Torrington, and on March 16 he capitulated, his whole army to be disbanded in six days, and all the horses and arms to be delivered up to Fairfax; who by the surrender of Exeter, April 6, 1646, completed the reduction of the west to the power of the parliament. Upon Fairfax's approach to lay siege to Oxford, his majesty made his escape from thence, and threw himself into the hands of the Scots army. Oxford surrendered June 29, and the few remaining garrisons soon after. And thus the whole kingdom was subjected to the obedience of the two houses. And now the parliament consulted how to get the king out of the hands of the Scots, and to send them back into their own country. At last, it was agreed, that they should have 400,000*l.* for the arrears due to them, one moiety to be paid before their going home, and the other at stated times. And so after several debates about the disposal of the king's person, the Scots having received the 200,000*l.* on January 30, 1646-7, delivered him up to the commons of the parliament of England, who were sent down to Newcastle to receive him. The same day their army began to march for Scotland, the king was conducted to Holmby-house in Northamptonshire, where he arrived Feb. 16. The parliament and army quarrelled, and the counsel of agitators, consisting of deputies from each regiment, sent cornet Joice with a detachment of fifty horse, to take the king from the parliament's commissioners at Holmby, and bring him to the army; that he resolutely effected on June 4, 1647. And now the king over-ruled the parliament. August 24, the army was conducted to Hampton-Court. A treaty was set on foot for the restoration of the king, but on January 3, 1647-8, the house (being still under the influence of the army) resolved, That no more addresses should be made to the king, no messages received from him; and to this the lords some days after agreed, the army promising to adhere to the parliament against the king. In the beginning of the year 1648, there were several risings in favour of the king; the Welsh, under major-general Langhorn, had seized several places, and were 8000 strong, but were defeated by colonel Horton, sent before Oliver Cromwell; who arriving soon after, put an end to the commotions in Wales. In the mean time, general Fairfax defeated those who had risen in Kent. The Scots army under the duke of Hamilton, amounting to near 20,000, entered England in July, and were joined by about 5000 English, under sir Marmaduke Langdale. Cromwell, after having finished his work in Wales, marched with all expedition to join Lambert in the north, and August 17, near Preston in Lancashire, totally routed and dispersed this great army, the duke, in his flight, being taken prisoner. Cromwell then marched directly into Scotland, and arriving at Edinburgh, he divested the Hamiltonian party of their authority. At the beginning of these troubles, the presbyterian party in the house, in the city, and other places, began to resume their courage.

Several petitions were presented for a personal treaty with the king, and when the army was removed from London into different parts of the kingdom, the secluded members and others, who had absented themselves, having returned to their seats, the votes of no more addressess were repealed, and it was resolved to enter into a personal treaty with the king; that Newport in the Isle of Wight should be the place of treaty; and that his majesty should be there with honour, freedom, and safety; and five lords and ten commoners were nominated commissioners for this treaty; but the army was resolved to break off the treaty by force, and colonel Ewer, on November 18, presented to the commons a remonstrance, wherein they desired, That the treaty might be laid aside, and that the king might come no more into the government, but be brought to justice, as the capital cause of all the evils in the kingdom, and of so much blood being shed. On November 21, Cromwell recalled colonel Hammond from the Isle of Wight, and sent colonel Ewer to take charge of the king's person, who kept him in strict custody. On Nov. 30, his majesty was brought over to Hurst castle in Hampshire. On Dec. 4, the commons resumed the debates on the king's concessions, and voted, that the said concessions were sufficient grounds for settling the peace of the kingdom; and then adjourned to Wednesday. On which day some regiments of horse and foot having possessed themselves of all the avenues to the parliament-house, seized on forty-one members as they offered to go in, and the next day denied entrance to near one hundred more. An ordinance being voted in the house of commons, was carried up to the house of lords for their concurrence, though the commons declared at the same time, that they being representatives of the people, had a right to enact a law, though the consent of the king, and the house of peers, be not had thereto. They made an ordinance for erecting an high court of justice, for trying the king, who was brought from Windsor to St. James's on the 19th. The next day the trial began, the court sitting in Westminster-hall, and having chosen serjeant Bradshaw for their president. The substance of the charge was, That the king had endeavoured to set up a tyrannical power, and to that end had raised and maintained a cruel war against the parliament. The king behaved with dignity, making no other answer but denying the authority of the court. The same he did on the 22d and 23d. At last, being brought before them a fourth time, on January 27, he earnestly desired, before sentence, to be heard before the lords and commons; but his request was not granted. And so still persisting in disowning the jurisdiction of the court, and consequently in his refusal to answer to the charge, his silence was taken for a confession, and sentence of death was passed upon him: pursuant to which he was on January 30, beheaded on a scaffold erected in the street near the windows of the Banqueting-house at Whitehall, shewing as great a firmness, resolution, and resignation to the last, as he had done in all his sufferings. The day before his execution, he was permitted to see his children, the princess Elizabeth, and the duke of Gloucester, the only ones then in England. His corpse was carried to Windsor, and privately interred in St. George's-chapel.

CHARLES II. was the son of king Charles I. and born May 29, 1630. On July 3, 1646, he went from Jersey into France, and resided abroad till May 1660, when he arrived at Whitehall. The king, upon forming his council, took in some that had been deeply enough engaged against his father, but afterward promoted his restoration, as Denzel Hollis, afterward Lord Hollis; the earl of Manchester, Sir Anthony Ashley Cooper, and others. Mr. Baxter and Mr. Calamy were appointed his chaplains in ordinary. Sir Edward Hyde, afterward earl of Clarendon, was his lord chancellor and prime minister. The assembly which restored the king had been summoned by a commonwealth writ, in the name of the keepers of the liberties of England. It was however called a parliament till his arrival, and then had only the name of a convention; however, two days after the king went to the house, and gave his assent to an act for changing the convention into a parliament. August 29, his majesty gave his assent to the act of indemnity, with some exceptions. The commons, soon after, voted 1,200,000l. for the ordinary expences of the government. On September 13, died of the small-pox, Henry duke of Gloucester, his majesty's youngest brother. The duke of York married Anne, eldest daughter of chancellor Hyde, earl of Clarendon, to whom he had been contracted at Brada. This parliament, which the king would have called the healing parliament, was dissolved December 29, after passing several acts, and among the rest, one for erecting a post-office. The royal society was founded this year 1660, by the king and letters patent. The king was crowned on April 23. A new parliament was summoned to meet on May 8, which continued almost 18 years, and was afterwards called the pensionary parliament. In May 1662 the marriage between the king and Catharine, princess of Portugal, was solemnized. The sale of Dunkirk, this year, to the French king, for five millions of livres, made a great noise in England, and was much reflected on. On March 2, 1664-5, war was proclaimed against the States General. In this session of parliament, the clergy gave up their right of taxing themselves in convocation, and have ever since been taxed by the parliament in common with other subjects; and from this time the clergy have voted at elections for members of parliament. On June 3, 1665, the duke of York beat Opdam the Dutch admiral. The plague broke out in London in May, and before the end of the year when it ceased, swept off 68,596 of the inhabitants. In Ja-

uary

1665-6, the French king declared war against England. The English fleet put to sea under the command of prince Rupert and the duke of Albemarle, toward the middle of May, and there soon was a most bloody fight with admiral Ruyter, in which the English were worsted. There was another furious engagement in July, when the Dutch were beaten. In September, about one in the morning, a terrible fire broke out in the city of London, which continuing for three days, laid the greatest part of the city in ashes, consuming 89 churches, the city-gates, Guild-hall, with many other public structures, and 13,200 dwelling houses, and the ruins of the city were 436 acres. In October 1667, the king laid the first stone of the Royal-Exchange, which was built in the room of the old one, erected by Sir Thomas Gresham. In January 1667, was concluded the famous triple alliance between England, Holland, and Sweden, which was designed to check the projects of Lewis XIV. of France, who had already invaded the Spanish Netherlands. This was almost the only step taken by king Charles for the interest of England and of Europe during his whole reign, and indeed, it seems, that his design in it was only to amuse the public, and that there was a secret understanding between him and Lewis at the same time. In April 1670, a severe act was passed against the non-conformists. The king established a secret council, consisting of the five following persons, Clifford, Arlington, Buckingham, Ashley Cooper, and Lauderdale. This council was nick-named the Cabal, from the initial letters of their names: and they truly deserved that name, as they artfully promoted all the king's measures, how contrary soever to the interest of England, and the good of all Europe. In January 1670-1, was passed the famous Coventry act against maiming or disfiguring, making it death. On February 2, the king sent a message to hasten the money-bills. Lord Lucas made a bold speech in the house of lords against the money-bills. A difference happened about the same time, between the two houses, upon the lords' rights of altering money-bills. In the midst of this dispute the king came to the house of peers, and prorogued the parliament. A powerful league was now formed against Holland by France, England, the elector of Cologne, and the bishop of Munster. The king, though he had lately two millions and a half from the parliament, and 700,000l. from the French king, was so profuse, that he still wanted money, which he would fain raise without applying to the parliament. Upon this the cabal advised him to shut up the Exchequer, which he actually did, and it continued shut up for a year and some months, to the great distress and ruin of many families. On March 15, the king published his declaration for liberty of conscience, suspending the execution of all penal laws against the non-conformists. On the 17th, the king declared war against the States-general; and the French king, and the other allies, soon after. The parliament met on February 4, 1672-3, and it soon appeared that the country-party or that of the people was become more powerful in the house of commons than the court party. They vigorously addressed the king against his declaration for liberty of conscience, as it was claiming a dispensing power, and both houses joined in addresses against the dangers that threatened the nation from popery. The king finding the commons so fully bent not to finish the money-bill till their grievances were redressed, recalled his declaration. On April 18, 1677, the king among other acts, gave his assent to one for taking away the writ de hæretico comburendo. On August 11, 1678, the separate peace with Holland was signed, and some months after with the rest of the allies. March 21, 1680-1, the parliament met, and the first thing they did was to order their votes to be printed, which practice they have continued ever since. But the king finding this parliament not inclined to countenance his favourite schemes, came suddenly to the house of lords and dissolved it, after one short session of but seven days. The year 1681 was almost wholly taken up with prosecutions of persons for speaking ill of the king, the duke of York, and the government; some were fined, and in large sums, and others pilloried. Sir George Jefferies, a man without honour or conscience, had been made lord justice of the King's Bench, and other alterations had been made among the judges; and the sheriffs of London being now named by the king, impannelled such juries as were sure to find for the court. The project of the surrender of Chartres was completed this year. On February 6, 1684-5, the king died in his 55th year, and near 25 years after his restoration. He had no children by his queen, but several by his mistresses.

CHARLES'S WAIN, f. in Afr. 7 remarkable stars in the constellation of Ursa Major.

CHA'RLLEY, a town of Lancashire, with a market on Tuesdays. It is seated near the spring-head of a rivulet called Chor, not far from the river Yarrow. It is 201 miles N. W. of London.

CHARM, f. [charme, Fr.] a kind of spell, supposed by the ignorant to have an irresistible influence, by means of the concurrence of some infernal power, both on the minds, lives, and properties of those whom it has for its object. Figuratively, any excellence which engages and conquers the affections. SYNON. The word charm carries an idea of force, which puts a stop to ordinary effects and natural causes. The word enchantment is used properly for that which regards the illusion of the senses. The word spell bears particularly an idea of something which disturbs the reason.

To CHARM, v. a. to fortify, or secure against evil by some spell; to influence, or subdue the mind by some excellence or pleasure.

CHARMER, f. one who deals in spells or magic; one whose personal perfections irresistibly attract admiration and love. SYNON. The body seems to be more susceptible of graces; the mind of charms. We say of a lady that she walks, dances, and sings with grace; and that her conversation is full of charms.

CHARMING, part. possessed of such perfections as work irresistibly on the mind, and fill it with pleasure.

CHARMINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to convey inexpressible pleasure.

CHARMINGNESS, f. that quality which renders a thing capable of working on the affections, and filling the mind with pleasure.

CHARNEL-HOUSE, f. [charnier, Fr.] the place in or near a church where the bones of the dead are deposited.

CHART, [chart] f. [charta, Lat.] an hydrographical map, or projection of some part of the earth's superficies, for the use of navigation.

CHARTER, f. [chartre, Fr.] in Law, a written evidence or instrument of things done between two parties. The king's charter, is where he makes a grant to any person or body politic; such as a charter of exemption, &c. Charters of private persons, are deeds and instruments. Figuratively, the act of bestowing any privilege or right, exemption or claim.

CHARTERED, a. invested with privileges by charter, beautifully applied in the following sentence. "The air, a chartered libertine, is still." Shak.

CHARTER-LAND, f. land which is held by charter, or evidence in writing.

CHARTER-PARTY, f. [chartre partie, Fr.] a deed or writing indented, made between merchants and sea-faring men concerning their merchandise.

CHARY, a. cautious, scrupulous, careful of giving any cause for suspicion or censure.

TO CHASE, v. a. [chasser, Fr.] to follow after a beast, &c. for pleasure; to hunt; to pursue as an enemy.

CHASE, f. the pursuit or following of game; hunting; that which is the proper object of hunting. The pursuit of an enemy, or of some desirable object. Figuratively, pursuit. In Law, a large extent of woody ground, privileged for the reception of deer and game.

CHASER, f. one who pursues.

CHASM, [chasm] f. [χάσμα, Gr.] a breach or hollow space separating the parts of any body; a vacant space.

CHASTE, a. true to the marriage-bed. Applied to expressions, free from any obscenity or immodest words. In Grammar, free from any foreign mixture.

TO CHASTEN, v. a. [castigare, Fr.] to correct or punish a child, in order to deter him from faults.

TO CHASTISE, [castigare] v. a. [formerly accented on the first syllable] [castier, Fr.] to punish or afflict for faults. SYNON. We castigate him who has committed a fault, to prevent his doing the same again: We punish the person guilty of a crime by way of expiation, and as an example to others. To correct, signifies to amend by means of castigation. To discipline, means to regulate and instruct.

CHASTISEMENT, f. [formerly accented on the first syllable] correction, or punishment, generally applied to the discipline of parents and tutors.

CHASTISER, f. the person that punishes.

CHASTITY, f. [castitas, Lat.] an entire freedom from any imputation of lust either in thought or deed. In Expressions, free from immodest words.

CHASTELY, ad. without the least incontinence, or any inclination to lust.

CHASTENESS, f. freedom from incontinence, or any breach of modesty.

TO CHAT, v. n. [a contraction of the verb chatter] to talk on indifferent subjects, or without any deep thought, or profound attention.

CHAT, f. trifling, idle, and unimproving discourse, made use of to pass time away.

CHATELLANY, [châtellenie] f. [châtellenie, Fr.] the district belonging to a castle.

CHATHAM, a town in Kent, adjoining to Rochester, and seated on the river Medway. It is the principal station of the royal navy; and the yards and magazines are furnished with all sorts of naval stores, as well as materials for building and rigging the largest men of war. The entrance into the river Medway is defended by Shoerness and other forts; and, in the year 1757, by direction of the duke of Cumberland, several additional fortifications were begun at Chatham; so that now the ships are in no danger of an insult, either by land or water. It has a market on Saturdays. It has a church, a chapel of ease, and a ship used as a church, for the sailors; and the streets are narrow and paved, and it contains about 3000 inhabitants. The principal employment of the labouring hands is ship-building in the king's yard, and private docks. It is 27 miles N. W. by W. of Canterbury, and 31 miles S. E. of London.

CHATELS, f. any moveable possession. At present used only in Law, for all things moveable and immovable.

TO CHATTER, v. a. [caqueter, Fr.] to make a noise like a pie. Figuratively, to talk very much.

CHATTER, f. a noise like that of a pie, or monkey when angry; impertinent talk.

CHATTERER, f. one who spends his time in idle or unimproving talk.

CHATTWOOD, f. little sticks; fuel.

TO CHAW, v. a. [kaewen, Teut.] to cut meat or food into small pieces by a frequent action of the teeth.

CHAWDRON, f. the entrails or maw of a beast.

CHAWLEY, a village in Devonshire, 10 miles N. N. W. of Crediton, and 18 N. N. W. of Exeter.

CHEADLE, a town in Staffordshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated in the moor-lands, and in the most fruitful part of them. The houses are poorly built, but the market market is pretty good. It is 146 miles N. N. W. of London.

CHEAP, [cheap] a. [ceapan, Sax.] to be purchased with little money; of small value.

To CHEA'PEN, v. a. to bargain for or ask the price of a commodity; to endeavour to purchase a thing at a less price than the seller first asks for it.

CHEAPLY, ad. at a very low price or rate; with very little money.

CHE'APNESS, f. purchased with little money.

To CHEAT, [cheer] v. a. to deceive or impose upon; to defraud a person by some artifice or low cunning.

CHEAT, f. a fraud, or imposture, whereby a person is deceived and imposed upon; a person who imposes on others.

CHEA'TER, f. one who practises fraud, in order to deprive people of their properties.

To CHECK, v. n. to restrain the cravings of any appetite; to stop a thing in motion; to chide or reprove a person.

CHECK, f. a restraint, disappointment, rebuke, curb, reproof. Figuratively, a flight; a counter cypher of a bank bill; an account kept privately to examine that which is kept with a banker, or public office; a person who examines any account; a kind of linen with blue stripes crossing each other, used by sailors for shirts, &c. Clerk of the Check, in the king's household, has the controulment of the yeomen of the guard, and all the others belonging to the royal family, allowing their absence or defaults in attendance, or mulcting their wages for the same, &c. He, or his deputy, takes cognisance of those who are to watch in the court, and sets the watch, &c.

To CHE'CKER, or CHE'QUER, v. a. [from checker, Fr.] to vary with different colours like a chess-board; to variegate. Figuratively, to diversify with different states of prosperous or unsuccessful circumstances.

CHE'CKER, or CHECKER-WORK, f. any thing painted in squares, with different colours, like a chess-board.

CHE'CK-ROLL, f. a book or roll containing the names of the king's household servants.

CHE'DDER, a large village of Somersetshire, famous for its cheeses, which are the next best to Stilton cheese in England; and as large as those of Cheshire. It is seated 2 or 3 miles to the E. of Axbridge in Somersetshire.

CHEEK, f. the fleshy part of the side of the face below the eye. The cheeks of a grate, are flat plates of iron standing perpendicular, and serving to confine or enlarge the dimensions of a fire.

CHEER, f. [cheer, Fr.] provisions for an entertainment; gaiety, or fullness of spirits.

To CHEER, v. a. to inspire with courage; to animate, or incite; to make joyful.

CHE'ERER, f. the person or thing which communicates joy, or comforts in distress.

CHE'ERFULL, a. that which abounds in gaiety, life, and spirits, opposed to dejection.

CHE'ERFULNESS, f. a disposition of mind unclouded by despair; alacrity; vigour.

CHE'ER-LESS, a. sad, dejected, or comfortless.

CHE'ERLY, ad. in a gay, cheerful, joyous manner.

CHE'ERY, a. gay, joyful, or communicating pleasure and gaiety.

CHEESE, [cheese] f. [cyse, Sax.] a food made of milk, curdled by means of rennet, squeezed dry in a press, and hardened by time.

CHEESE-CAKE, f. in Pastry, is made of soft curds, butter, and sugar, baked.

CHE'ESEMONGER, f. one who deals in cheese.

CHE'ESE-PRESS, f. a press, wherein the curds of which the cheese is made are pressed dry from the whey.

CHE'ESE-VAT, f. the wooden case in which the curds are confined, when pressed for cheese.

CHE'ESY, [cheesy] a. having the qualities of cheese.

CHE'LMSFORD, a town of Essex, with a good market on Fridays: seated on the road to Colchester, between two rivers, over which there are bridges. It is a handsome, large, and well-frequented town, and takes its name from the river Chelmer; is governed by a chief constable, has only one church, a very ancient and large Gothic structure, and three meeting-houses of the dissenters. The houses are, in general, pretty good; and the town lying on a small descent, is always clean. There is here an excellent conduit, which contains several inscriptions, almost worn out by time; and it has such a supply of water, that it runs a hoghead and an half and four gallons in a minute. Here the members for the county are chosen, and the assizes commonly held, as well as the four quarterly sessions. It is 29 miles E. N. E. of London.

CHE'LSEA, a very handsome village in Middlesex, seated on the river Thames, one mile W. of Westminster. It is remarkable, for its magnificent hospital for invalids, and for Ranelagh-house and gardens, where there is a band of music for the entertainment of the beau-monde in the summer season. Here is also an excellent physic-garden.

CHE'LTHENHAM, a town of Gloucestershire, with a market on Thursdays. It is a pretty good town, and has a handsome church; but it is most noted for its mineral waters, which are somewhat like those of Scarborough, for which it was lately much frequented. It is 9 miles N. E. of Gloucester, and 95 miles W. by N. of London.

CHEM'ISE, [pron. Chamis] f. [Fr.] in Fortification, a wall lining a battien or ditch, in order to strengthen and support it.

CHE'PSTOW, a town of Monmouthshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the side of a hill on the river Wye, near its confluence with the Severn. It was formerly a very considerable place, and had a large castle on a rock, and a priory, part of which last is converted into a parish church. It has a handsome high bridge over the river, and sends provisions and other commodities to Bristol. This town is walled round, and the streets are broad and well paved. The tide is said to rise higher here than in any other part of Europe, it swelling 50 or 60 feet perpendicular. It is 18 miles N. of Bristol, and 127 W. of London.

To CHE'RISH, v. a. [cherir, Fr.] to nourish or promote the growth of a thing; to help; to encourage; to protect, shelter, and nourish.

CHE'RISHER, f. one who protects, and contributes to the growth of a thing.

CHE'RRY, f. in Gardening, a fruit-tree, with shining leaves; its fruit grows on long pedicles, is roundish or heart-shaped, though included by Linnæus under the genus of prunus, or plum, yet they cannot be grafted on each other.

CHE'RRY, a. resembling a cherry in colour; red.

CHERSONESE, or CHERSONESUS, [kerfontz] f. [χερσωνες, Gr.] in Geography, a tract of land surrounded by the sea, excepting at a narrow space or neck, by which it is joined to the main land or continent.

CHERT, f. [quartz, Germ.] a kind of flint.

CHE'RTSEY, a town of Surry, with a market on Wednesdays. It is in a low wet situation, not far from the river Thames, over which there is a bridge. It is 20 miles W. by S. of London.

CHE'RUB, f. a celestial spirit in the order of angels, placed next to the seraphim; in scripture variously described under the shapes of men, eagles, oxen, lions, &c.

CHERU'BIC, a. angelic, or partaking of the nature of a cherub.

CHE'RUBIN, a. like a cherub; heavenly; angelical.

To CHE'RUP, v. n. to make a noise by drawing in the air through the lips, after they are drawn into a kind of circle, in order to encourage any beast, or to set a song bird a-singing.

CHE'SHAM, a town of Buckinghamshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is 29 miles W. by N. of London.

CHE'SHIRE, an English county-palatine, 50 miles in length, and 33 in breadth, bounded on the E. by Staffordshire and Derbyshire, on the W. by Flintshire and Denbighshire, on the N. by Lancashire, and on the S. by Shropshire. It contains 13 market-towns, and 86 parishes. It sends four members to parliament, and the chief place is Chester. The principal rivers are the Dee, the Weaver, and the Tame; but there are several small streams. The air and soil are very good, and the land is fitter for pasture than corn, for which reason they feed a great number of cattle; and from it we have very good cheese, well known over all the kingdom. Besides which there are salt-works, which yield fine white salt; also mines of coal, and many lakes.

CHE'SNUT, or CHE'SNUT-TREE, f. the timber of it, next to oak, is the fittest for building, durable, and most covered by carpenters and joiners. As to the nut or fruit of this tree, the biggest are accounted the best.

CHESS, f. [ecbeca, Fr.] a game played with little round pieces of wood on a board divided into 64 squares, each side having eight noblemen and as many pawns, which are to be moved or shifted into the different squares, according to the laws of the game.

CHE'SSOM, f. in Gardening, a mellow earth, between the two extremes of clay and sand.

CHEST, f. [cyff, Sax.] a large strong wooden box, greater than a trunk, used for keeping cloaths, linen, &c. The cavity of the human body from the neck to the belly, called the brest or stomach. A chest of drawers is a wooden frame which contains several drawers placed above each other.

CHE'STER, the capital of Cheshire, with two markets on Wednesdays and Saturdays. It is a place of great antiquity, and of a quadrangular form; the walls are near two miles in circumference, and there are four gates, towards the four cardinal points. It has a strong castle, in which is the shire-hall, where all the causes belonging to the county palatine are determined. By the bridge is a handsome water-house, and the principal streets are adorned with piazzas, under which are the tradesmen's shops. It contains 10 parish churches, besides the cathedral. It has almost a constant communication with Ireland; this and Holyhead being the principal places of taking shipping for Dublin. It is governed by a mayor, a sheriff, 24 aldermen, sends two members to parliament, and is a bishop's see. It is a place of very considerable trade, and is 18½ miles N. W. of London. It gives the title of earl to the prince of Wales.

CHE'STERFIELD, a town of Derbyshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is pleasantly seated on a hill, between two small rivers, and has the title of an earldom. It has a large handsome church, a free-school, and several alms-houses. The sessions for the peace are held here for the N. part of the county. It is governed by a mayor, and the market is considerable for corn, lead, and country commodities. The houses are, for the most part, built of rough stone, and covered with slate. It is 149 miles N. N. W. of London.

CHE'STERFORD, a village in Essex, upon the borders of Cambridgeshire, 3 miles S. of Saffron-Walden.

CHEST-FOUNDERING, f. in Farriery, a disease in horses which resembles a pleurisy, or peripneumony in men.

CHEVALI'ER, [pron. chevallid] f. [Fr.] a knight. In Heraldry, a horseman armed at all points, or in complete armour.

CHEVAUX DE FRISE, [pron. chev d'freze] f. [Fr.] in Fortification, a piece of timber traversed with wooden spikes, five or six feet long, pointed with iron, used for stopping up up breaches, or securing any avenue from the enemy's cavalry.

CHE'VERIL, [ševeril] f. [cheverran, Fr.] a kid. Figuratively, kid leather.

CHE'VRON, [ševräng] f. [Fr.] in Heraldry, one of the honorary ordinaries, representing two rafters of a house joined together, so as to form an angle, and is the symbol of protection. Per chevron, is when the field is divided only by two single lines, rising from the two base-points, and meeting in a point above, lik: the chevron: this is termed party per chevron.

To CHEW, v. a. [ceoyan, Sax.] to bite or grind meat into small pieces between the teeth, proper for swallowing. Neuterly, to revolve often in the thoughts; to ruminate or meditate upon. Used with on, or upon.

CHIAN EARTH, [tian erth] f. in Pharmacy, is a dense and compact earth, sent hither in small flat pieces from the island whose name it bears; it is recommended as an astringent; and we are told, it is the greatest of all cosmetics, that it gives a whiteness and smoothness to the skin, and prevents wrinkles, beyond any of the other substances that have been celebrated for the same purposes.

CHICA'NE, [checkane. By some the cb in this word and its derivatives is pronounced like š, as in the French] f. [cbicane, Fr.] in Law, the art of protracting a cause by frivolous objections.

To CHICA'NE, v. n. [cbicaner, Fr.] to prolong a contest by artifice and subtleties.

CHICA'NER, f. [cbicaner, Fr.] one who makes use of quirks, subtleties, or any other artifice to obscure the truth.

CHICA'NERY, f. [cbicanerie, Fr.] an artful prolonging any dispute by frivolous objections or subtleties.

CHI'CHESTER, the capital of Suffex, with two markets on Wednesdays and Saturdays. It is seated on a plain on the banks of the river Levant. It is a bishop's see, and has a cathedral, with seven small churches built with flint stone. It sends two members to parliament, and is governed by a mayor, a recorder, a deputy-recorder, 14 aldermen, 6 bailiffs, 27 commoners, and a portreeve. The buildings are very regular, and the city being walled round, you may stand in the market-place, which is the centre, and see the four gates, which are all that belong to the city. It has some trade, but would have more, if the harbour was not choaked up. It is 61 miles S. W. of London.

CHICK, or CHI'CKEN, f. [sicen, Sax.] the young of a fowl, or hen. Chick is used figuratively for a word of tenderness. Sometimes it is used for a person not arrived to the years of maturity, and void of experience.

CHI'CKEN-HEARTED, a. timorous; cowardly.

CHI'CKEN-POX, f. in Medicine, a species of the small-pox, but the pustules are not so large.

CHI'CKLING, f. a small or young chicken.

CHI'CKWEED, f. in Botany, a trailing kind of weed much used by bird-breeders.

To CHIDE, v. a. [preter, cbide, particip. pass. cbid, or cbidden] [cidan, Sax.] to reprove with some degree of warmth and anger for faults. To blame or find fault with, beautifully applied to inanimate things. "Fountains, o'er the pebbles, cbid your stay." Dryd. To scold or reprove severely. To make a noise as in a passion, elegantly applied to inanimate things. "As doth a rock against the cbiding flood." Shak.

CHI'DER, f. one that is addicted to reproof, or fond of blaming.

CHI'DLEIGH, or CHU'DLEIGH, a town of Devonshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated near the river Thames, and the market is good for corn and provisions. It is 183 miles W. by S. of London.

CHIEF, [cbef] a. [cbef, Fr.] the major part, or greatest number; principal, including the idea of superior rank and activity.

CHIEF, f. a commander, applied to one who commands an army. In Heraldry, the upper part of an escutcheon, running across from side to side.

CHI'EFLESS, a. without a chief or commander.

CHI'EFLY, ad. generally; for the most or greatest part; principally.

CHI'EFRIE, [cbefry] f. an acknowledgment paid to the lord.

CHI'EFTAIN, [cbestain] f. one who commands an army; the head of a clan.

CHILBLAIN, f. small red shining tumors, appearing on the fingers, toes, and heels, and when breaking out on the heels, called kibes.

CHILD, f. [plural cbildren] [cild, Sax.] an infant, or person in its tenderest years: the offspring of a person.

To CHILD, v. n. to bring forth; or bear children. Figuratively, to be prolific or fruitful, opposed to barren.

CHILD-BEARING, the act of bearing children; pregnancy.

CHILD-BED, f. a lying-in; or the state of a woman just after her delivery.

CHILD-BIRTH, f. labour; travail; delivery.

CHILDERMAS-DAY, f. the day on which Herod's massacre of the children at Jerusalem, on account of Christ's birth, is commemorated.

CHILDHOOD, f. the state of a child; the interval between infancy and youth.

CHILDISH, a. resembling a child in ignorance, simplicity, and trifling.

CHILDISHLY, ad. in such a manner as only becomes a child; in a trifling manner.

CHILDISHNESS, f. want of distinction, knowledge, experience, and gravity.

CHILDLESS, a. without children.

CHILDLIKE, a. that which resembles the actions and sentiments of a child.

CHILHAM, a village in Kent, 6 miles S. W. of Canterbury.

CHILL, a large country and kingdom of S. America,

America, lying along the side of the S. Sea, 750 miles in length, and from 37 to 50 in breadth. It may be divided into three principal parts; viz. the bishoprick of Iago, the bishoprick of Imperial and Cuio. It was discovered by Don Diego d'Almagro in 1525. It abounds in trees, fruits, Indian corn, cattle, and mines of all kinds. The greatest part is inhabited by the native Americans, who have neither towns nor villages, properly speaking, but only wretched huts at a distance from each other. They are much addicted to women and drunkenness. The colour of their skin is that of a red copper, as in all other parts of America; and, since the introduction of horses by the Europeans, they seldom travel without one, there being such a prodigious plenty of them. It is bounded on the W. by the S. Sea, and on the E. by that prodigious ridge of mountains called the Andes.

CHI'LIAD, [Iliad] f. [χιλιας, Gr.] a thousand, or a collection of things or years amounting to a thousand.

CHILL, f. [cele, Sax.] cold, or that which stops the circulation of any fluid by its coldness. Figuratively, shivering with, or having the sensation of cold; depressed, dejected; discouraged, or rendered inactive by some disappointment or terrible object.

To CHILL, v. a. to reduce from a state of warmth to one of coldness. Figuratively, to stop or repress any motion; to discourage and defeat; to blast or destroy by cold.

CHI'LLINESS, f. cold; a sensation which produces shivering.

CHI'LLY, a. that which proceeds from chillness or cold.

CHI'LMARK, a village in Wiltshire, 12 miles W. of Salisbury.

CHI'LMINAR, f. the noblest and most beautiful piece of architecture amongst all the ruins of antiquity, being the ruins of the famous palace of Persepolis, fired by Alexander the Great, when intoxicated, at the persuasion of Thais his courtesan.

CHI'LNESS, f. the sensation of cold productive of shivering; the quality of producing the sensation of cold.

CHIMB, f. [chimb, Belg.] the end of a barrel or tub.

CHIME, f. in Music, formerly used for a concord, or the sounding of the same note on several instruments at once. In Ringing, the sounding all the bells of a steeple after one another, with all the variations in their order that can produce music, or an agreeable harmony. Applied to Clocks, a kind of periodical music, produced by a particular apparatus, wherein hammers of different sizes are put in motion, and play some tune on bells. Figuratively, harmony of tempers, proportion, or other relations. In Poetry, the syllable at the end of a verse, which has the same sound as that of the preceding one.

To CHIME, v. n. to found a concord; to agree in sound. Figuratively, to be musical. To answer each other, applied to relative terms; to acquiesce in; to agree with. Applied to Poetry, to make the concluding syllables of two verses end with the same letters or sound.

CHIME'RA, [chimera] f. [χίμαιρα, Gr.] a poetical fiction of a monster, composed of an union of the parts of different animals. Figuratively, a groundless or vain imagination, which has no foundation in reason or nature.

CHIME'RICAL, [chimérical] a. that which is the mere product of fancy or imagination; imaginary; fantastic.

CHIME'RICALLY, [chimérickally] ad. in a wild, fantastic, vain manner; without any reality; without any real existence.

CHI'MLEIGH, a town in Devonshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on the river Dert, which fetching a compass like a bow, surrounds three parts of it. It is but a small place, and the market is inconsiderable. It is 22 miles N. N. W. of Exeter, and 193½ W. by S. of London.

CHI'MNEY, f. [cheminée, Fr.] in Architecture, the passage or funnel through which the smoke ascends in a building. Chimney-pole is a composition of certain mouldings standing on the forefide of the jaumbs, and coming over the mantle-tree.

CHIN, f. the lower part of the face from the under lip.

CHI'NA, the empire of, in Asia, is bounded on the E. by the ocean, on the N. by a great wall above 1000 miles in length, which separates it from Tartary; on the W. by high mountains and deserts, and on the S. by the ocean, and the kingdoms of Tonquin, Cochinchina, and Laos. It is included between 95 and 135 degrees of E. longitude, and between 21 and 35 of N. latitude. It is about 2000 miles in length, from N. to S. and 1500 in breadth, from E. to W. and is divided into 16 provinces, which contain 155 towns of the first rank, 1312 of the second, besides 2357 fortified towns; in all which there may be about 50,000,000 of people. There are several large rivers, and where these are wanting, there are artificial canals, for the more ready communication and trading from one part to another; for they are all made navigable for large barks. It is generally a plain champaign country, and they scarce let an inch of ground remain unoccupied; for the hills are cut into several stages, or stories, from the bottom to the top, that the rain may water them all pretty equally, and render them more fruitful. Even the mountains are cultivated and covered with trees; and there are mines of iron, tin, copper, quicksilver, gold, and silver. There are corn and pulse of all sorts, especially rice; and there is a great number of simples, and several trees and fruits proper to the country, particularly one tree produces pease, very little different from those of Europe; another bears a kind of gum, which makes excellent varnish; a third bears white berries, of the size of a hazel-nut, whose pulp is nothing but a sort of tallow, of which they make candles; and a fourth, called

called the white-wax tree, produces white shining wax, of much greater value than the common wax. The Bamboo cane grows to the height of an ordinary tree; and, though it is hollow within, yet the wood is very hard, and proper for many uses, such as pipes to convey water, boxes, baskets, and for the making of paper, after it is reduced into a sort of pulp. It is now well known to all Europe, that this is the only country from whence all sorts of teas are imported. The complexion of the Chinese is a sort of tawney, and they have large foreheads, small eyes, flat noses, long ears, long beards, and black hair; and these are thought to be most handsome who are most bulky. The women affect a great deal of modesty, and are remarkable for their little feet. The open endeavour to make as pompous an appearance as possible, when they go abroad; and yet their houses are but mean and low, consisting only of a ground floor. They are addicted to all sorts of learning, particularly to arts and sciences. The government of this empire is absolute, and the emperor has the privilege of naming his successor; but the chief mandarin has permission to remind him of his faults. He looks upon his subjects as his children, and pretends to govern them with a fatherly affection. There is no country in the world where the inhabitants are so ceremonious as here; and yet, notwithstanding their seeming sincerity, they cheat as much in their dealings as in the most uncivilized countries. It is certain that their empire is very ancient, and they themselves pretend it has existed many thousand years before our era of Noah's flood. However, it is generally allowed to have continued 4000 years without interruption, though they have had twenty-two different families on the throne. The last family now reigning is that of the Tartars, who conquered China in 1640. Their religion is Paganism, and the sect of Fo is the principal. They allow polygamy, and keep their wives in slavery. Their writing is very particular; for every letter is a word, and consequently they have a many letters, or characters, as words in their language. All their cities and towns are so much alike, that those that know one are acquainted with all. Peking is the capital of the whole empire. The revenues of the towns are computed at 21,000,000. sterling yearly, and the forces are said to consist of about 5,000,000 of men in times of peace; however since their being conquered by the Tartars, they have no enemies to cope with. The Chinese pretend to have a great veneration for their ancestors; and some keep images of them in their houses, to which they pay a sort of devotion. They have laws which regulate the civilities and ceremonious salutation they pay each other, for which reason they always appear to be extremely good-natured; and yet there is but little dependence on their friendship, for they are as deceitful, and as great hypocrites, as any people in the world.

CHI'N-COUGH, [chin-cough] f. in Medicine, a violent dry cough, affecting children, even to a danger of suffocation.

CHINE, f. [eschine, F.] the part of the back containing the spine or back-bone.

To CHINE, v. a. to cut into chines; to split along the back bone.

CHINK, [cinan, Sax.] f. a narrow gap, or opening, whereby the contact of the parts of a body is dissolved; a small or narrow opening lengthwise.

To CHINK, v. a. to make money or pieces of any metal sound by shaking them together. Neuterly, to make a sound by being shaken together; to break in cliffs or gapes, applied to ground.

CHI'NKY, a. full of narrow holes, gapes, or cliffs.

CHINTS, f. a fine cloth manufactured of cotton in the East Indies, generally printed with lively and durable colours.

To CHIP, v. a. to cut wood into small pieces. To cut off the crust of a loaf, applied to bread.

CHIP, f. [cyp, Sax.] a small piece of wood separated from a larger by a bill or cutting tool; any small piece cut off from a larger.

CHI'PPENHAM, a town of Wiltshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the river Avon, and the market is well supplied with corn and provisions. It is a good thoroughfare town, has a stone bridge over the river, consisting of 16 arches, and sends two members to parliament. It is 21 miles E. of Bristol, and 93 $\frac{1}{2}$ W. of London.

CHI'PPING, f. the action of cutting off small pieces from timber or other matters.

CHI'PPING, a village of Lancashire, 10 miles E. of Garstang.

CHIPPING-NOR'TON, a town of Oxfordshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It has a dry situation on the side of a hill, and near a small rivulet, and is a straggling town, except about the market-place. It is a corporation; and the market is good for corn, cattle, and provisions. It is 74 miles N. W. of London.

CHIPPING-WY'COMB, a town of Buckinghamshire, with a market on Fridays. It is seated on a small river, which falls into the Thames, in a pleasant valley, and is well-built, containing about 200 houses, with several good inns; and the market is considerable for fish, flesh, and other provisions. It is a mayor-town, and sends two members to parliament. It is 33 miles W. of London.

CHIPPING-O'NGAR, a town in Essex, with a market on Saturdays. It is 21 miles N. E. of London.

CHIPPING-SO'DBURY, a town of Gloucestershire, with a market on Thursdays. It is seated in a bottom, near the Downs, on the road from Bristol to Cirencester; and has a great market for corn and cheese. It is 111 miles W. of London.

CHI'RAGRA, [kragra] f. [χρῆσις and ἀγρῶς, Gr.] in Medicine, the gout in the hand.

CHIRA'GRICAL, [kiragrical] a. being subject subject to the gout in the hands.

CHIRO'GRAPHY, [kirógrafy] f. [χρῆσις and γράφω, Gr.] a person's own hand-writing.

CHIRO'MANCER, [kirómanfer] f. [χρῆσις and μάντις, Gr.] one who pretends to foretell future events by inspecting the lines of a person's hand.

CHIRO'MANCY, [kirómanfy] f. the pretended art of foretelling what shall happen to a person by inspecting the lines of his hand.

To CHIRP, v. n. [formed from the sound] to make a noise like a sparrow, or birds which call to one another.

CHIRPER, f. a bird that makes a noise like a sparrow, or calls to another; a person that is gay, cheerful, or merry.

CHIRUR'GEON, [kirúrjau; commonly though corruptly pron. Surgeon] f. [χρῆσις and εργον, Gr.] one who cures such disorders, hurts, or ailments, as require external applications, or the operations of the hand.

CHIRUR'GERY, f. [See Chirurgion] the art of curing wounds and diseases, by external applications, or operations of the hand.

CHIRUR'GIC, or CHIRUR'GICAL, [kirúrjikal, or kirúrjikal] a. having qualities fit for external or outward application. Belonging to external or manual operation.

CHI'SEL, [chtzel] f. [ciseau, Fr.] a tool made of iron, pretty long, thin, and sometimes ground to an edge, used in carpentry, joining, masonry, sculpture, &c.

CHIT, f. [ciito, Ital.] a young little child; a mere baby; a word used in anger, and expressive of contempt.

CHIT-CHAT, f. [a cant word formed from the reduplication or repetition and corruption of the word chat] idle and unimproving discourse.

CHIT'TERLINGS, f. [not used in the singular] [from schytterlingh, Belg.] the guts or bowels, generally applied to those of beasts fit for food. Likewise the frill, or border sewed on the bosom of a man's shirt.

CHI'VALRY, f. [chevalerie, Fr.] knight-hood, or military dignity. The qualification of a knight, including courage, honour, and dexterity in the use of arms; the profession, or rules to be observed by a knight; an adventure, or exploit.

CHIVES, f. [chive, Fr.] in Botany, the stamina which support the summits in the center of flowers; or the small knobs growing on the ends of the fine threads or stamina of flowers.

CHLORO'SIS, [klorósis] f. [from χλωρός, Gr.] in Medicine, the green sickness.

CHOCOLATE, f. [chocolate, Span.] when applied to signify the cake from whence the liquor is made, is a composition of the nut, sugar, and vanilla. Chocolate-house is a place where only chocolate is sold ready made, and resembling a coffee-house.

CHOICE, f. [chois, Fr.] a faculty or act of the will, by which it prefers one thing to another, including that it is in our power to have determined otherwise. Figuratively, the preferring or determining in behalf of a thing on reasonable motives; the thing chosen; that which merits a preference, or ought to be preferred; a variety of things offered to the mind or judgment, that it may select from thence those which are best. To make choice of, is to prefer or select one or more things from several which are proposed to the judgment or will.

CHOICE, a. [comparative choicer, superlative choicest] [chois, Fr.] of superior excellence. Most valuable, or best. Careful, frugal, opposed to prodigal or profuse.

CHOICELESS, a. without the power of choosing.

CHO'ICELY, ad. with all the qualifications which should determine the will to give a preference.

CHO'ICENESS, f. that quality which determines the will to give it a preference; value, or superior excellence which claims a preference.

CHOIR, [koir] f. [chorus, Lat.] a band or company of singers. That part of a church where the choristers and clergy are placed.

To CHOK, v. a. to stop up the passage of the throat so that a person cannot breathe; to kill by stopping a person's breath. To stop up any passage; to intercept or obstruct the motion of any thing. SYNON. Death brought on by a stoppage of breath is the general idea of the words suffocated, smothered, choaked; but that of suffocated implies an extinction of life, occasioned by being in a place where we cannot breathe; that of smothered, by being in a place where we are not suffered to breathe; that of choaked, by having the wind-pipe closed.

CHOK, f. in Botany, the filamentous or capillary part of an artichoke, immediately covering the fleshy part of the bottom.

CHOK-PEAR, f. in Gardening, a rough, harsh, unpalatable pear. Figuratively, any sarcasm that stops the mouth.

CHOKY, a. that which cannot easily be swallowed, but is apt to stick in the passage, and stop the breath.

CHOLAGOGUES, [klóagoges] f. [χολα and αγωγος, Gr.] medicines which have the power of purging the bile.

CHOLER, [klóler] f. [cholera, Lat.] in Anatomy, the bile; which abounding very much in angry persons, is used figuratively for anger.

CHOLERIC, [klólerik] a. abounding with cholera. Figuratively, angry; easily provoked; passionate.

To CHOOSE, [chooze] v. a. [preter I chose, I have chosen, or chose] [cofsan, Sax.] to prefer or take from several things offered; to give the preference to; to will; to elect; or pick out of a number. SYNON. When we would take a thing, we determine upon one, because we cannot have all. We choose by comparing things, because we would have the best. We do not always choose what we prefer; but we ever prefer that which we choose.

CHO'OSER, [chooizer] f. one who has the power power of choosing; one who has a right to vote for a person who is candidate for any post; an elector.

To CHOP, v. a. [pretor choppe, or I have choppe] [happen, Belg.] to cut with a cleaver, or a chopping knife, by a quick or sudden stroke; to sever or cut quickly. Neuterly, to change with a quick and unexpected motion. To appear as if cut, applied to the effects of cold or bad weather on the hands.

To CHOP, v. a. [comsumo, Sax.] to purchase by exchanging one thing for another; to take a thing back again which had been given in exchange; to be fickle in one's choice.

CHOP, f. a piece cut off by a sudden blow; a piece of meat cut off from a joint, generally applied to mutton. A chink, cleft, hole, or vacancy made by the warping of wood. Chop-knife, a kind of cook's shop, where meat is ready dressed, so called from their dealing mostly in mutton chops.

CHOPPING, a. large or hasty, applied to crimes. Chopping-block, a long thick block of wood, used by butchers to cleave or chop their meat upon. Chopping-knife, a large sort of knife, used for chopping or mincing meat.

CHOPPY, a. full of holes or clefts; appearing as if cut, or chopt, owing to the effects of cold, applied to the hands, &c.

CHOPS, f. [it has no singular, and is supposed by Johnson to be a corruption of chops] the mouth of a beast. Figuratively, used in contempt for the mouth of a man.

CHORAL, [choral] a. [from chorus, Lat.] relating to, or composing a choir or chorus.

CHORD, [pronounced hard, hard, as if the d was dropped. When it implies a string made of hemp or silk, it is spelt cord; but when it means its primitive sense, the d is retained] f. the string of a musical instrument, by the vibration of which all sounds are excited, as by divisions the several degrees of tune are determined. In Geometry, a right line, terminated at each end of its extremities in the circumference of a circle, but not passing through its centre. Line of chords is one of the lines of the sector or plain scale. In Anatomy, a little nerve extending over the drum of the ear, supposed by some to vary and move by sounds that beat on the tympanum, in the same manner as the braces or strings stretched over the war-drum.

CHORDEE, [chorde] f. is a violent pain contraction of the frenum.

CHORION, [chorion] f. [from χρησιν, Gr.] Anatomy, a thick, strong, whitish membrane, covered with a great number of branches of veins and arteries, and the outward membrane which wraps the fœtus.

CHORISTER, [chorister] f. one who sings in a choir, generally applied to signify a singer. Figuratively, one who sings or makes part of a chorus. Beautifully applied to birds.

CHORLEY, a town in Lancashire, whose market is on Tuesdays. It is 7 miles S. E. of Bolton, and 206 N. W. of London.

CHOROGRAPHER, [chorografer] f. [χρησιν, and γραφω, Gr.] he that describes particular regions or countries.

CHOROGRAPHY, [chorography] f. the art of describing particular regions and countries, either in words or in maps.

CHORUS, [chorus] f. [Lat.] a number of fingers joining in the same piece or tune. Figuratively, that part of a song in which a whole company join. In Ancient Drama, one or more persons present on the stage during a dramatic performance, supposed sometimes as by-standers, at others serving to introduce or prepare the audience for the introduction of any particular incident; and originally the only performers on the stage.

CHOUGH, [chuff] f. [coo, Sax.] in Natural History, a bird like a jack-daw, but somewhat bigger, which frequents rocks by the sea-side.

CHOULE, [commonly pronounced and written gowl] f. [gula, Lat.] the crop of a bird, adhering to the lower side of the bill, and descending by its throat, somewhat resembling a bag or satchel, and serving as a kind of first stomach to prepare its food for digestion.

To CHOUSE, v. a. to deprive a person of anything by plausible stories, or false pretences.

CHOUSE, f. one who is a proper object for fraud; a bubble or tool; a trick or sham.

CHRISM, [chrism] S. [χρισμα, Gr.] the act of anointing; applied generally to anointing, as the initiation into some office, or rendering a person qualified for some profession, in a scriptural sense.

CHRIST, [Christ] f. [χριστος, Gr.] one of the appellations given to our Lord and Saviour Jesus, signifying the same as Messiah, used by the Jews, and both importing the validity of his claim to the high character he assumed, and the reality of his being qualified to undertake the great work of redemption.

CHRIST-CHURCH, a town of Hampshire, with a market on Mondays. Seated between two rivers, and was formerly fortified with a castle. It is now a pretty good town; and sends two members to parliament. It is 98 miles S. W. of London.

To CHRISTEN, [christen] v. a. [christian, Sax.] to initiate or enter into the church of Christ by the sacrament of baptism. Figuratively to give a thing a name, alluding to the practice of naming persons at this ceremony.

CHRISTENDOM, [Christendom] f. [christendome, Sax.] the collective body of Christians; those parts wherein Christianity is professed.

CHRISTENING, [christening] f. the ceremony of baptism.

CHRISTIAN, [christian] f. [χριστιανος, Gr.] a person who believes in Christ, and professes the principles of his religion. They who professed the religion of Jesus were at first termed Disciples; but the title of Christians was first given to those of Antioch, as appears from the Acts of the Apostles.

CHRISTIAN, [christian] a. [christianus, Lat.] professing the Christian religion. The Most Christian King is a title assumed by the king of France, supposed by French antiquaries to have been given originally by Gregory the Great to Charles Martel. Christian-name is that name which is given a person at his baptism.

CHRISTIANITY, [krifidniti] f. [christianité, Fr.] the doctrines delivered by Christ and his Apostles, and professed by Christians.

To CHRISTIANIZE, [krifiantze] v. a. to convert a person, or convince him of the truth of the doctrines of Christianity.

CHRISTMAS, [Krifimas] f. the day on which the nativity of our blessed Saviour is celebrated. Christmas-box, a box in which money collected as gifts by servants at Christmas is kept. Figuratively, the collections made at Christmas.

CHRISTOPHER ST. one of the Caribbee Islands in America, lying to the N. W. of Nevis, and about 60 miles W. of Antigua. It was formerly inhabited by the French and English; but, in 1713, it was ceded to the latter. It is about 20 miles in breadth, and 7 in length, and has high mountains in the middle, whence rivulets run down, which are of great use to the inhabitants. Between the mountains are dreadful rocks, horrid precipices, and thick woods; and in the S. W. part of the island, hot sulphureous springs at the foot of them. The air is good, the soil light, sandy, and fruitful; but it is subject to hurricanes. The houses are as good as any in these parts; and the animals are the same as in the other islands. The produce is chiefly sugar, cotton, ginger, indigo, and the tropical fruits, Lon. 6s. 52. W. lat. 17. 30. N.

CHROMATIC, [krómatic] a. [from χρῶμα, Gr.] in Painting, that part which consists in colouring.

CHRONIC, or CHRONICAL, [krónik, or krónikal] a. [from χρόνος, Gr.] that which endures or lasts a long time. In Medicine, applied to those diseases which are opposed to the acute, or such as soon come to a crisis.

CHRONICLE, [krónikl] f. [chronique, Fr.] a regular account of transactions in the order they happen; a history.

To CHRONICLE, [krónikl] v. a. to insert in an history; to be recorded; to be made famous, or handed down to the memory of posterity.

CHRONICLER, [krónikler] f. one who writes a regular account of transactions according to the order in which they were performed; an historian.

CHRONOGRAM, [krónogram] f. an inscription whose numeral letters compose some particular date.

CHRONOLOGER, [krónologer] f. one who makes the setting the dates of former transactions his particular study.

CHRONOLOGICAL, [krónologikal] a. relating to chronology; the period in which any transactions happened.

CHRONOLOGICALLY, [krónologikal] ad. in such a manner as is consistent with the rules of chronology.

CHRONOLOGIST, [krónologist] f. See CHRONOLOGER.

CHRONOLOGY, [krónolójy] f. the art of tracing the times wherein any remarkable transaction is performed.

CHRONOMETER, [krónometer] f. [χρονόμετρον and μέτρον, Gr.] an instrument used for the measuring time.

CHRY'SALIS, [krýsalis] f. [from χρῆμα, Gr.] in Natural History, a worm or caterpillar in its second state, wherein it continues without eating, or any motion unless in its tail, for some time, till it bursts its pellicle, and changes into a moth or butterfly.

CHRY'SOLITE, [krýsolite] f. [χρῆμα and λίθος, Gr.] a general term given by the ancients to all precious stones that had a cast of gold or yellow in their composition. Among moderns, a precious stone of a dusky, green colour, with a cast of yellow.

CHUB, f. in Natural History, a non-spineous fish, or that which has no prickly fins, and only one on its back.

CHU'BBED, a. Figuratively, having a large head, alluding to that of a chub.

To CHUCK, v. n. to make a noise like a partridge, or a hen calling her chickens.

To CHUCK, v. a. [from choc, Fr.] to give a person a gentle chuck under the chin; endeavour to throw money into a hole, made in the ground, at some distance.

CHUCK, f. the noise of a hen; an expression of endearment; a cast, by which a person endeavours to throw money into a hole made in the ground for that purpose.

To CHUCKLE, v. n. [schacklen, Belg.] to laugh vehemently, so as to be out of breath. Actively, to call like a hen. Figuratively, to fondle, or chuck under the chin.

CHU'DLEIGH. See CHIDLIGN.

CHUFF, f. a coarse, heavy, blunt, surly, and passionate clown.

CHUFFY, a. surly, morose.

CHUM, f. [cham, Armorick] a chamber-fellow; a term used in the universities.

CHUMP, f. a thick, heavy, piece of wood, less than a block.

CHURCH, f. [chere, Sax.] is a word of different significations, according to the different subjects to which it is applied. 1. It is understood of the collective body of Christians through the whole world who profess to believe in Christ, and acknowledge him to be the Saviour of mankind. This is what ancient writers call the Catholic or Universal Church; and agree with the apostle's account of one, in Col. i. 18. 2. It is applied to any particular congregation of Christians, who, at one time, and one and the same place, associate together, and concur in the participation of all the institutions of Jesus Christ, with their proper pastors and ministers. 3. It is also applied to any particular sect or party of Christians, distinguished by particular doctrines and ceremonies; as, the Romish Church, the Greek Church, the Church of England, the Reformed Churches, and the the like. 4. It is sometimes used to denote the body of ecclesiastics, or clergy; in which sense Church is opposed to the State. 5. It is likewise taken for the place where a particular congregation or society of Christians assemble for the celebration of divine service. In this sense Churches are variously denominated, according to the rank, degree, discipline, &c. as the metropolitan, patriarchal, cathedral, parochial, collegiate, &c. Sometimes the word Church is understood in a more extensive sense, and divided into several branches; as the Church militant is the assembly of the faithful on earth; the Church triumphant, that of the faithful already in glory; to which the Papists add the Church purgans, which, according to their doctrine, is that of the faithful in purgatory. SYNON. Church and temple signify a edifice set apart for the public service of religion; but that of temple is a more pompous expression, and less in use than Church. With respect to the Pagan religion, we frequently use the word temple; as the temple of Apollo: but with relation to our own, seldom; St. Paul's Church.

To CHURCH, v. a. to read the peculiar service of returning thanks to God for a happy delivery; with the person who is recovered from child-bed.

CHURCHMAN, f. one who professes the religion or mode of worship by law established; a minister, or person who officiates in a church.

CHURCH-STREETTON, a town of Shropshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is seated between two hills, and is but a small place, though the market is good for corn. It is 153 miles N. W. of London.

CHURCH-WARDEN, f. an officer elected yearly, in Easter-week, by the minister and parishioners of every parish to look after the church, church-yard, and the things belonging to them.

CHURCH-YARD, f. the ground adjoining to a church, wherein the dead are buried.

CHURL, f. [crowl, Sax.] a clown, or unpolished countryman. Figuratively, a morose, surly, or ill bred person; a riggard, or a miser.

CHURLISH, a. like a rude, ignorant, ill bred clown; surly, uncivil, selfish, avaricious.

CHURLISHLY, ad. in a rude, uncivil, polished, or brutal manner.

CHURLISHNESS, f. rude, obstinate, and surly behaviour.

CHURN, f. a vessel in which cream, by violent or long agitation, is turned into butter.

To CHURN, v. a. [hermen, Belg.] to make butter, by frequent and continual motion.

To CHUSE. See CHOOSE.

CHYLA'CEOUS, [chyliferos] a. consisting of chyle; partaking of the qualities of chyle; resembling chyle.

CHYLE, [chyle] f. [χυλος, Gr.] in the animal economy, a milky, insipid liquor, consisting of oily and mucilaginous particles, extracted from dissolved aliments of every kind, and by a peculiar mechanism conveyed to the blood.

CHYLIFACTION, [chylifakcion] f. the act of converting the juice of aliments into a white liquor called the chyle.

CHYLIFACTION, [chylifaktive] a. having the power of making chyle; endued with the quality of converting aliment into chyle.

CHYLOPOETIC, [chylopotik] a. [χυλος and ποιος, Gr.] having the power or office of converting aliment into chyle.

CHYLOUS, [chylous] a. consisting of chyle, resembling or partaking of the qualities of chyle.

CHYMIC, or CHYMICAL, [chymik, or chymikal] a. [chymicus, Lat.] made by or relating to chymistry.

CHYMICALLY, [chymikally] ad. in a chymical manner.

CHYMIST, or CHEMIST, [chymist, or chemist] f. a professor of chymistry.

CHYMISTRY, [chymistry] f. [from χυμος, Gr.] an art by which sensible bodies, contained in vessels, are so changed by means of fire, that their several powers and virtues are thereby discovered, their several substances are separated, and new bodies are composed by the mixture of different substances or ingredients.

CIBA'RIOUS, a. [cibarius, Lat.] proper for food; partaking of the qualities of food.

CICATRICE, or CICATRIX, f. [cicatrix, Lat.] a little seam, or elevation of callous flesh, rising and remaining on the skin, after the healing of a wound.

CICATRISANT, or CICATRISIVE, a. in Medicine, applied to such applications as are desiccative, aid nature to repair the skin of a wound, and form an escchar.

CICATRIZATION, f. in Surgery, the act of healing a wound; the state of being healed or skinned over.

To CICATRIZE, v. a. to apply such medicines to wounds as heal and skin them over; to heal and skin a wound over.

CICHORA'CEOUS, [chioraceus] a. [from cichorium, Lat.] having the qualities of succory.

CICUTA, f. [Lat.] in Botany, a vegetable poison divided into major and minor; likewise a poisonous juice or liquor expressed from the cicuta aquatica, with which the Athenians used to put their state criminals to death.

CIDER, f. [cidre, Fr.] a brisk, cool liquor prepared from the juice of apples made vinous by fermentation.

CIDERKIN, f. the liquor made of the murk, or gross matter of the apples, after the cider is pressed out, by the addition of boiled water, which is suffered to infuse for 48 hours.

CIELING, [sceling] See CEILING.

CILIA, f. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the palisades of stiff hairs wherein the eyes are guarded.

CILIARY; a. [from cilium, Lat.] in Anatomy, belonging to the eyelids.

CIMETER, f. [cimitarra, Span.] a sort of a sword, used by the Turks, short, heavy, flat, with but one edge, and curved towards the point.

point. It is sometimes spelt scymeter, or set-meter.

CIMME'RIAN, a. dark, dismal, gloomy, a term derived from the Scythians, whose country was so full of woods, and covered with continual clouds, that but very little sun was seen among them.

CINCTURE, f. a girdle, or cloathing worn round the body. Figuratively, an inclosure.

CINDER, f. [cendres, Fr.] coals burnt till most of their sulphur is consumed, reduced to a porous cake, and quenched before they turn to ashes; a red-hot coal that has ceased to flame.

CINERATION, f. [from cineres, Lat.] in Chymistry, the act of reducing a body to ashes.

CINERITIOUS, [cinerifolius,] f. [cineritius, Lat.] having the form of, or resembling ashes.

CINGLE, f. [cingulum, Lat.] a girth for a horse.

CINNABAR, f. is either native or factitious. The native cinnabar is an ore of quicksilver, moderately compact, heavy, and of an elegant, striated, red colour. In this ore the quicksilver is blended with sulphur, which is commonly no more than one part in six, in proportion to the mercury. It is found lodged in a bluish indurated clay, though sometimes in a greenish talcy stone. Facitious Cinnabar is a mixture of mercury and sulphur sublimed, and thus reduced to a fine red glebe. The best is of a high colour, and full of fibres like needles.

CINNAMON, f. [cinnamomum, Lat.] the bark of an aromatic tree resembling the camphire, or olive-tree, and growing in the island of Ceylon.

CINQUE, [sink] f. [Fr.] in Gaming, a five on dice, &c.

CINQUEFOIL, [sinkfoil] f. a kind of five-leaved clover.

CINQUE-PORTS, the five ports, so called, situated on the coasts of Kent and Suffex, over-against France; these are Hastings, Dover, Hithe, Romney, and Sandwich.

CION, f. [sion or sion, Fr.] in Botany, a young twig, shoot, or sprout of a tree; a shoot ingrafted or inserted on a stock.

CIPHER, [sifer] f. [cifra, Ital.] an arithmetical character or number marked thus (0): though of no value itself, in integers it creates the value of figures, when set on the right hand, and decreases them in the same proportion, when set before them, in decimal fractions; a collection or assemblage of letters, consisting of the initials of a person's name, interwoven together, and engraved on plate or painted, instead of escutcheons, on coaches; certain characters made use of by persons to conceal the subject they write about from others; the key to explain any private characters. A mere cypher, a person of no importance or interest.

To CIPHER, [sifer] v. n. to perform the operations of arithmetic.

CIRCA'SSIA, a country situated between 40 and 50 east longitude, and between 45 and 50 north latitude. It is bounded by Russia on the N. by Astracan and the Caspian sea on the E. by Georgia and Dogestan on the S. and by the river Don and the Palus Meotis on the W. inhabited by the Tartars. The women pass among the Turks for very great beauties, their complexion being extremely fine.

CIRCLE, f. [circulus, Lat.] in Geometry, a plane figure, comprehended under one line only, to which all lines drawn from a point in the middle are equal. Figuratively, a curve line, which being continued, ends in the point from whence it began, having all its parts equidistant from a point in the middle called the center: but this is properly the periphery or circumference of a circle; the circumference or extremities of any round body; an assembly of people forming a ring; a company; a series of things following one another alternately. Circles of the Empire, are such as have a right to be present at the diets: they are ten in number, viz. Austria, Burgundy, the Lower Rhine; Bavaria, Upper Saxony, Franconia, Swabia, Upper Rhine, Westphalia, and the Lower Saxony.

To CIRCLE, v. a. to move round any thing; to surround, encompass, or inclose; to confine, or keep together.

CIRCLED, part. having the form of a circle.

CIRCLET, f. [diminutive of circle] a circle; an orb.

CIRCLING, a. surrounding or encompassing like a circle.

CIRCUIT, [fruite] f. [circulus, Lat.] the moving round any thing; the motion or revolution of a planet round its orbit; a space inclosed with a circle; the circumference of any thing; the space which any thing measures in going round it; a ring, a crown, or that which encircles any thing. Also, the progress which the judges take twice every year through the several counties of England and Wales, to hold courts, and administer justice. Hence England is divided into six circuits, viz. the Home circuit, Norfolk, Midland, Oxford, Western and Northern circuit.

To CIRCUIT, v. n. to move round, or in a circle.

CIRCUITE'ER, or CIRCUITER, f. one that travels in a circuit; that which moves in an orbit.

CIRCUITION, f. [circutio, Lat.] the act of going round about. Figuratively, circumlocution; comprehension of argument.

CIRCULAR, a. [circularis, Lat.] round, in the form of a circle. Figuratively, succession, in which that which proceeds first returns again. Circular letter, a letter addressed to several persons, who have the same interest in some common affair. Circular-lines, such straight lines as are divided by the divisions made in the arch of a circle. Circular-sailing, is that which is performed in the arch of a great circle.

CIRCULARLY, ad. in the form of a circle; circle; with a circular motion.

To CIRCULATE, v. n. [from circulus, Lat.] to move in a circle; to be in use; so as to be constantly changing its owner.

CIRCULATION, f. the act of moving in a circle; a motion whereby a body returns in a curved line to the point from which it set out; a series or succession, in which things preserve the same order, and return to the same state. The circulation of the blood was discovered in England, in 1728, by Harvey. It is in a living animal, the natural and continual motion of the blood, from the heart through the arteries, from whence it is brought back again to the heart by the veins, and is the principle on which life depends; for when this circular motion of the blood ceases, death immediately follows. Circulation of the sap in vegetables, a natural motion of the nutritious juice of plants, from the roots to the extreme parts, and back again to the root. In Chemistry, it is an operation whereby the same vapour, raised by fire, falls back, by which means it is distilled several times, and reduced to its most subtil parts.

CIRCULATORY, f. in Chymistry, a glass vessel, consisting of two parts, luted on each other, wherein the finest parts mount to the top, and finding no passage fall down again.

CIRCUMMBIENCY, f. [circum and ambi, Lat.] the act of encompassing or surrounding.

CIRCUMMBIENT, part. [circum and ambi, Lat.] compassing a thing round; encircling; including; surrounding; encompassing.

To CIRCUMCISE, [circum and caedo, Lat.] to cut off the prepuce or foreskin.

CIRCUMCISION, f. a rite or ceremony, as well of the Pagan as Jewish religion. This term is taken from the Latin circumcidere, to cut round, because the act of circumcision consists in cutting off, from male infants, the prepuce or skin, which covers the glans of the penis. The time for performing this rite, among the Jews, was the eighth day; that is, full six days after the child was born, and the instrument was generally a knife of stone.

CIRCUMFERENCE, f. [circum and ferentia, Lat.] the periphery of a circle; the line including and surrounding any thing; the space enclosed in a circle; the extremities of a round body. Figuratively, any thing of a round form.

To CIRCUMFERENCE, v. a. to include in a circle; to circumscribe, or confine.

CIRCUMFERENTOR, f. [from circum and fero, Lat.] an instrument used by surveyors in taking angles, consisting of a brass index with legs, a compass, and mounted on a stand with a ball and socket.

CIRCUMFLEX, f. [circum and flexus, Lat.] an accent marked (˘) used to regulate the pronunciation, and requires an undulation between the grave and the acute.

CIRCUMFLUENCE, f. [circum and fluens, Lat.] an inclosure made by water flowing round any thing.

CIRCUMFLUENT, part. flowing round any thing; or inclosing any thing with water.

To CIRCUMFUSE, [circum and fuso, Lat.] to pour round; to diffuse, or spread every way.

CIRCUMFUSILE, a. [circum and fusibilis, Lat.] that which may be poured, diffused, or spread round any thing.

CIRCUMFUSION, f. [circum and fusio, Lat.] the act of spreading round.

CIRCUMJACENT, part. [circum and jacens, Lat.] lying round any thing; bordering on every side; contiguous.

CIRCUMLOCUTION, f. [circum and locutio, Lat.] the expressing a sentiment in a number of words; a periphrasis; an indirect way of expressing a person's sentiments.

CIRCUMMURED, a. [circum and murro, Lat.] encompassed or surrounded with a wall.

CIRCUMNAVIGABLE, a. [circum and navigabilis, Lat.] that which may be sailed round.

CIRCUMNAVIGATION, f. [circum and navigatio, Lat.] the sailing round any tract of land.

CIRCUMPOLAR, a. [circum and polus, Lat.] in Astronomy, applied to stars near the north pole, which move round it without setting.

CIRCUMPOSITION, f. [circum and positio, Lat.] the act of setting or placing any thing in a ring or circle.

CIRCUMROTATION, f. the act of whirling a thing round with a motion like that of a wheel; the state of a thing whirled round.

To CIRCUMSCRIBE, v. a. to inclose in certain lines or limits.

CIRCUMSCRIPTION, f. [circum and scriptio, Lat.] the determination to a particular figure; limitation, restraint, confinement, boundary.

CIRCUMSCRIPTIVE, a. that which determines the shape or figure of a body.

CIRCUMSPECT, a. [circum and spectus, Lat.] cautious; a person attentive to the effects of his actions, and who weighs the dangers and difficulties with which they are attended.

CIRCUMSPECTION, f. looking round about one. A cautious or wary conduct, wherein a person weighs the dangers and difficulties with which his actions are attended, and endeavours to guard against them. SYNON. To be well with the world requires circumspection, when we are speaking before those with whom we are not acquainted; consideration for people of rank and quality; and regard toward those with whom we are interested.

CIRCUMSPECTIVE, a. looking round about; taking all the measures which may prevent a disappointment, or secure a person from any maliciousness of an enemy.

CIRCUMSPECTLY, ad. in a cautious, discreet, and prudent manner; guarding against accidents, and precluding any disappointments.

CIRCUMSTANCE, f. [circum and stantia, Fr.] the particular incident belonging to any action, which determines it to be either good or bad, or a fact probable or improbable; an event. Used in the plural for the state or condition of a person; bad circumstances signifying distress or poverty, and good circumstances, riches or affluence.

To CIRCUMSTANCE, v. n. to be placed in a particular light; to be attended with peculiar incidents.

CIRCUMSTANT, part. [circumstant, Lat.] standing round, surrounding.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL, [circumstantial] a. [circumstantialis, Lat.] accidental, opposed to essential. Minute; particular, wherein all the different relations and attendant reasons of an action are enumerated.

CIRCUMSTANTIALITY, [circumstantialitas] f. the state of a thing, with all the peculiarities attending it.

To CIRCUMSTANTIATE, [circumstantiare] v. a. to place a thing or action in a particular situation or relation, with respect to the accidents which attend or determine its quality.

To CIRCUMVALLIATE, v. a. [circumvallare, Lat.] to inclose; or surround with trenches and fortifications.

CIRCUMVALLATION, f. the art of strengthening or fortifying a camp or place with works. In Fortification, a line or trench with a parapet thrown up by the besiegers, encompassing all their camp, to defend it against any force that may attempt to relieve the place.

To CIRCUMVENT, v. a. to over-reach a person by superior craft; to deceive, or impose upon, by specious pretences, and secret artifices.

CIRCUMVENTION, f. [circumventio, Lat.] the imposing upon, or over-reaching a person by secret artifices and subtlety.

To CIRCUMVEST, v. a. [circumvestio, Lat.] to cloath all over with a garment; to cloath, or surround with a garment.

To CIRCUMVOLVE, v. a. [circumvolvō, Lat.] to roll round: to roll any body in an orbit or circle.

CIRCUMVOLUTION, f. [circumvolutus, Lat.] the act of rolling round; the state of being round; the thing rolled round.

CIRCUS, f. [Lat.] in Antiquity, a spacious building of a round or oval figure, erected to exhibit shows and games to the people. The Roman Circus was a large, oblong edifice, arched at one end, encompassed with porticoes, and furnished with two rows of seats, places ascending over each other. In the middle was a kind of foot-bank, or eminence, with obelisks, statues, and posts, at each end. Those who have measured the circus say, it was 2187 feet long, and 900 broad, and would contain 150,000 people; others 260,000, or 300,000, and was the greatest building in Rome.

CIRENCESTER, [pron. Cæster] a town of Gloucestershire, with two markets, on Mondays and Fridays. It is a borough-town, and sends two members to parliament. It is 89 miles W. of London.

CIST, f. [cista, Lat.] a case; a covering. In Medicine, the coat of a tumor.

CISTED, a. inclosed in a bag, or membrane.

CISTERCIANS, in Church History, a religious order founded in the eleventh century, by St. Robert, a Benedictine. They became so powerful, that they governed almost all Europe both in spirituals and temporals. Cardinal de Vitri, describing their observances, says, they neither wore skins nor shirts, nor ever eat flesh, except in sickness; and abstained from fish, eggs, milk, and cheese; they lay upon straw-beds, in their tunics and cowls; they rose at midnight to prayer; they spent the day in labour, reading, and prayer; and in all their exercises observed a continual silence. The habit of their order is a white robe, in the nature of a cassolet, with a black scapulary and hood, and girt with a woollen girdle. The nuns wear a white tunic, and a black scapulary and girdle.

CISTERN, f. [cisterna, Lat.] a receptacle for water or rain, placed in yards or kitchens for family use; a large reservoir of water, or inclosed fountain.

CIT, f. [a contraction of citizen] one who lives in the city, opposed to one at the court; a word of contempt.

CITADEL, f. [citadelle, Fr.] a fort, or place fortified with four, five, or six bastions, in order to defend a city against enemies, and to keep the inhabitants in their obedience.

CITAL, f. a reproof, or impeachment; a summons, or a call to appear in a court.

CITATION, f. [citatio, Lat.] in Law, a summons to appear before an ecclesiastical judge, on some cause relating to the church; quoting or mentioning an author's name; the passage quoted from an author; a mention, detail, enumeration.

CITATORY, a. having the power of a summons, or used as a summons.

To CITE, v. a. [cito, Lat.] to summons or call a person to appear in a court of justice; to enjoin, or call on a person with authority; to quote.

CITER, f. one who summons a person to appear in a court; one who quotes a passage from an author.

CITHARA, f. [Lat.] a kind of harp, a musical instrument used by the ancients, the precise form or structure of which is not known: at first it had only three strings, but the number was increased afterwards to 8, 9, and lastly to 24; it was played upon with a plectrum or quill, like the lyre.

CITIZEN, f. [citoyen, Fr.] a person who is free of a city, one who carries on a trade in a city, opposed to a gentleman, or a soldier.

CITRINE, a. [citrinus, Lat.] lemon-coloured; of a dark yellow.

CITRINE, f. [citrinus, Lat.] a species of crystal of an extremely beautiful yellow. It is generally clear, fine, and free from flaws; it is very plentiful in the West-Indies, oftentimes set in rings by our jewellers, and may be mistaken for a topaz.

CITRON, f. [citrus, Lat.] a fruit which comes from a hot country, and is in smell, taste and shape, somewhat like a lemon.

CITY, f. [ciuitas, Fr.] a large town inclosed with with a wall. In Law, a town corporate, that hath a bishop and a cathedral church; the inhabitants of a city.

CITY, a. living in a city; like a citizen; with vain parade or ostentatious affluence.

CIUVET, f. [ciivete, Fr.] in Natural History, a fide animal, a native of Peru and Guano, not much unlike our cat.

CIVIC, a. [ciivicus, Lat.] that which relates to civil matters, opposed to military. A civil war among the Romans, was made of patricians, and given to those that had saved the life of a citizen.

CIVIL, a. [ciivilis, Lat.] that which belongs to a city, or the government thereof; opposed to military. Civil war is that which is waged between the inhabitants or people of the same nation against one another. Civil death is that which is inflicted by the laws, in opposition to natural law, joined with power or magistrate, that is exercised on the principles of government, opposed to military. Figuratively, civil; humane; well-bred; complaisant; beautifully applied to inanimate objects. Civil law is that which is opposed to the Common, and implies the Roman law, contained in the institutes, digests, and code. Civil law, that which is established by law in any country, and is so called to distinguish it from the natural law, which is determined by the revolution of the heavenly bodies.

CIVILIAN, f. [ciivilis, Lat.] one who studies and makes the civil law his peculiar CIVILIZATION, f. a law which renders criminal process civil, by turning an information into an inquest, &c.

CIVILITY, f. politeness; a polite address attended with humane and benevolent actions; to be observed in a polite manner.

CIVILIZE, v. a. to instruct in such manners as tend to render men humane.

CIVILIZER, f. one that reforms the manners of barbarians, and renders them humane and polite.

CIVILLY, ad. in a manner agreeable to the principles of government, and the rules of civility; in a kind, condescending, good-natured, and genteel manner.

CIVILTY, f. [generally written size] [from ciivis, Lat.] the dimensions of any thing with respect to magnitude or bulk.

CLACK, f. [klack, Belg.] any thing which produces a continued and lasting noise, applied to the stone of a mill. Figuratively, incessant and clamorous tattle; the tongue.

CLACK, v. n. [klatschen, Teut.] to produce a noise like that which is heard in a mill when the stones are going; to let the tongue run, or to talk CLACKMANNAN, a town of Scotland, in the shire of Monteth, seated on the N. W. of the river Forth, 25 miles N. W. of Edinburgh. Here Robert de Bruce, king of Scotland, had a palace.

CLACKMANNAN, a small county of Scotland, bounded on the E. by Fifeshire, on the N. and W. by Perthshire, and on the S. by Stirlingshire. It is but 8 miles in length, and 5 in breadth. It produces good corn and pastures, and plenty of coals and salt. This shire, together with Kinross, sends one member to parliament.

CLAD, part. preter from CLOATH.

To CLAIM, v. a. [clamer, Fr.] to demand as a right or due.

CLAIM, f. a demand, or right of demanding a thing as due.

CLAIMABLE, a. that which may be demanded as due, or as belonging to a person.

CLAIMANT, f. he that pretends a right to any thing in the possession of another, and demands it as his property.

CLAIMER, f. one who demands a thing as his property.

CLAIR-OBSCURE, f. See CLARE-OBSOURE.

To CLAMBER, v. n. [perhaps corrupted from climb, or climber] to ascend or go up a steep place with difficulty, so as to be forced to use both knees and hands.

CLAMMINESS, f. the quality by which any substance sticks to, or glews any thing that touches it; viscidness; ropiness.

To CLAMM, v. a. to clog with any glew with or viscous matter.

CLAMMY, a. viscous, ropy, glutinous, or adhering to any thing which touches it.

CLAMOROUS, a. making a noise with the voice: speaking loud and turbulent.

CLAMOUR, f. [clamor, Lat.] a noise, or outcry; an exaltation of the voice in anger. Applied with elegance to inanimate things.

To CLAMOUR, v. n. to make a noise; or speak in a loud, passionate, and turbulent manner.

CLAMP, f. [klampe, Belg.] a piece of wood added to another to strengthen it, and prevent its bursting; a little piece of wood in the form of a wheel, used in a mortise, instead of a pulley; a quantity or collection of bricks. Clamp-nails are such as are used to fasten on clamps in the building or repairing of ships.

To CLAMP, v. n. in joining, to fit a board with the grain to another piece across the grain; this is of use to prevent warping.

CLAN, f. [Scot.] a family, race, or tribe; a body of persons.

CLANULAR, a. [clancularius, Lat.] secret, clandestine.

CLANDESTINE, a. [clandestinus, Lat.] underhand; secret; in order to evade any law; private; always used in a bad sense.

CLANDESTINELY, ad. in a secret or private manner, including some illegal or bad practice.

To CLANG, v. n. [clango, Lat.] to make a loud shrill noise with a brazen sound, like that of a trumpet; or to make a noise like that of armour when struck with a solid body, or like swords when beat together. Actively, to strike together, so as to make a noise.

CLANGOUR, f. [clangor, Lat.] a loud shrill shrill found.

CLANGOUS, a. making a loud and shrill noise.

CLANK, f. a loud, shrill, or harsh noise, made by hard bodies when clashed together.

To CLAP, v. a. [clappan, Sax.] to strike together with a quick motion, so as to make a noise; to put one thing upon another with a hasty, sudden, and unexpected motion; to perform any action in a quick and unexpected manner; to applaud or praise a person by striking the hands together; to shut up with a quick or sudden motion. To clap up implies to complete suddenly, without much precaution.

CLAP, f. a loud noise, made by the striking of two solid bodies together, or by explosion, when applied to thunder; applause or approbation, testified by striking the hands together.

CLAPPER, f. one who strikes his hands together by way of applause; the tongue or piece of iron, which hangs in the inside of a bell, and makes it sound; a piece of wood in a mill for shaking the hopper. Figuratively, the tongue of a person that is very talkative; a word of reproach.

To CLAPPERCLAW, v. a. to scold.

CLARE, a town of Suffolk, with a market on Mondays. It is seated on a creek of the river Stour; the ruins of a castle, and a collegiate church, are still visible. They have a manufacture of bays. In this town is a very large church, and a Presbyterian and Quakers meeting. It consists of about 500 houses, which are mostly of clay, white-washed, and the streets pretty wide, but not paved. It is 56 miles N. E. of London.

CLARENCE'UX, or CLARENCE'UX, [pron. clauran'shu] [Fr.] the second king of arms, so called from the duke of Clarence, son of Edward III. who first bore this office. He marshals and disposes the funerals of all the lower nobility on the south side the Trent, and is therefore called Surroy, i. e. South-roy, or South-king.

CLARE-OBSCUR'E, [clarus and obscurus, Lat.] in Painting, the lights and shades in a picture; the art of distributing the lights and shades in a piece to the greatest advantage.

CLARET, f. [clairret, Fr.] French wine, of a clear, pale, red colour.

CLARICORD, or CLARICHORD, f. [from clarus and chorda, Lat.] a musical instrument in form of a spinnet. It has 49 or 50 stops, and 70 strings, which bear on five bridges, the first whereof is the highest, the rest diminishing in proportion. Some of the strings are in unison, their number being greater than that of the stops. There are several little mortises for passing the jacks, armed with brass hooks, which stop and raise the chords, instead of the cords used in virginals and spinnets. The chords are covered with pieces of cloth, which render the sound sweeter, and deaden it so, that it cannot be heard at any considerable distance; and therefore is in particular use among the nuns, who are unwilling to disturb silence of the dormitory.

CLARIFICATION, f. the clearing thing from impurities; the fining liquors.

To CLARIFY, v. a. [clarifier, Fr.] to or make any liquor clear.

CLARION, f. [clairon, Fr.] a trumpet with a narrower tube and shriller sound than the common fort.

CLARITY, f. [clarté, Fr.] brightness.

CLARK, f. See CLEEK.

To CLASH, v. n. [kleffen, Belg.] to make a noise, applied to two bodies struck together to act with opposite views; to contradict, oppose, or disagree.

CLASH, f. a noise made by collision, the striking two bodies together; opposite sentiments, opinions, or interests.

CLASHING, f. See CLASH.

CLASP, f. [cleppe, Belg.] a thin piece of metal curved at the extremities, which enters into a hole made in another place, and is used to fasten two things together, such as the covers of a book, or the two fore-parts of a garment, &c. Figuratively, an embrace wherein the arms are thrown round the back of a person.

To CLASP, v. a. to shut or fasten by clasp; to hold within the hands; to make the fingers meet round the circumference of a thing held in the hand; to inclose.

CLASP-KNIFE, f. a knife which is furnished with a spring, and folds into the handle.

CLASS, f. [classis, Lat.] a collection of things ranged according to their different natures, or value; a rank or order. In Schools, a number of boys placed according to their attainments and the authors they read.

CLASSIC, or CLASSICAL, a. [classicus, Lat.] in ancient Literature, the authors of the Augustan age, of received note, and acknowledged abilities.

CLASSIC, f. an author of the first rank in abilities, and esteemed a standard for style.

To CLATTER, v. n. [clatrage, Sax.] to make a noise by being struck often together; applied to sonorous or metalline bodies; to make a noise by talking aloud, fast, and little to the purpose. A low word.

CLATTER, f. a rattling noise made by the frequent striking of hard bodies together; confused and tumultuous noise.

CLAVATED, part. [clavellatus, Lat.] knobbed; or abounding with knobs.

CLAVE, the preter of CLAVE.

CLAVELLATED, part. [clavellatus, Lat.] in Chymistry, made with burnt tartar.

CLAVICLE, f. [clavicula, Lat.] in Anatomy, the collar-bone, of which there are two situated between the scapula and sternum, each of them resembling an Italic S, but in women more straight than in men.

CLAUSE, [clausula, Lat.] a sentence; a single article; so much of a sentence as will make sense.

CLAUSTRAL, a. [from claustrum, Lat.] belonging to belonging to a cloister, or religious house.

CLAUSURE, f. [clausura, Lat.] confinement; the state of a person shut up or confined in a monastery.

CLAW, f. [clawen, Sax.] the foot of a bird or beast, armed with a sharp-pointed horny substance.

To CLAW, v. a. [clawen, Sax.] to scratch or tear with the nails.

CLAY, f. [clai, Brit.] a compact, weighty, stiff, viscid, and ductile earth, when moist; smooth to the touch, easily dissolved in water, and when mixed with it, not quickly subsiding. Figuratively, the earth, or substance out of which our bodies are by Scripture said to be produced.

To CLAY, v. a. to cover with clay. In Agriculture, to manure with clay.

CLAY-COLD, a. as cold as clay. Figuratively, lifeless.

CLAYEY, a. consisting of, or abounding in clay.

CLAYISH, a. of the nature of clay; like clay.

CLAY-MARL, f. a whitish, smooth, chalky earth, resembling clay, but somewhat more fat, and sometimes mixed with chalkstones.

CLEAN, [kleen] a. [clant, Sax.] free from dirt or soil. Figuratively, free from any moral stain, wickedness, or impurity. Adverbially used, it implies entirely, perfectly, fully or completely.

To CLEAN, v. a. to free from dirt or filth.

CLEANLY, a. free from dirt or filth; free from moral impurity; innocent; chaste.

CLEANLY, ad. in a clean, neat manner, free from dirt or filth.

CLEANNESS, f. neatness; free from dirt or filth; elegance; exactness; freedom from any moral impurity.

To CLEANSE, [kleeze] v. a. [clensian, Sax.] to free from dirt or filth by washing or rubbing; to free from bad humours by purges, in Medicine. To free from matter of fungus, applied to wounds.

CLEANSE, [kleezer] f. in Medicine, that which removes any humours, or expels any noxious fluid from the body; a detergent.

CLEAR, [kleeer] a. [clarus, Lat.] bright, transparent, pellucid, translucent; free from blame, innocent, without blemish; evident, indisputable, undeniable; free from distress, prosecution, or imputed guilt; vacant, out of debt, unintangled; out of danger.

To CLEAR, v. a. to brighten; to vindicate one's character; to prove a man's innocence; to free from obscurity; to discharge a debt; to clarify, or clear liquors; to gain without any deduction for loss or charges. To clear a ship, is to obtain leave for sailing, or selling the cargo, by paying the customs.

CLEARANCE, f. a certificate that a ship has been cleared at the custom-house, by paying the duties.

CLEARER, f. the person or thing that removes any filth or obstruction; that which communicates light to the mind, or removes any difficulty or prejudices which may obscure the judgment.

CLEARLY, ad. free from darkness, obscurity, ambiguity; plainly; without any undue influence or prejudice. Without deduction or diminution, applied to gains; without evasion, or reserve.

CLEARNESS, f. transparency, which renders a thing easy to be seen through, applied to glass. Freedom from dregs, or filth, applied to liquors. Distinctness, plainness, freedom from obscurity and ambiguity, applied to ideas.

CLEAR-SIGHTED, a. able to discern and distinguish things; judicious; seeing into the consequences of things.

To CLEAR-STARCH, v. a. to starch in such a manner, that linen may appear transparent and clearer than in common washing.

To CLEAVE, [kleeve] v. n. [preter, I cleve, part. cloven] [cleofan, Sax.] to stick; to adhere to; to unite one's self to a person.

To CLEAVE, [kleeve] v. a. [preter, I cleave, part. cloven, or cleft] [cleofan, Sax.] to divide a thing with a chopper and with violence; to divide by a swift or rapid motion. To divide or separate; to part asunder.

CLEAVER, [kleever] f. a large flat instrument made of metal, with a handle, and of a long square form, used by butchers to separate the joints of meat from their carcases; one who chops any thing. In Botany, a weed, named likewise clever.

CLEES, f. the two parts of the foot of a cloven footed beast.

CLEF, [clef, Fr.] in Music, a mark placed at the beginning of the lines of a piece of music, which determines the name of each line, according to the scale; the tune or key in which it is to begin, and all the unisons in a piece.

CLEFT, participle passive, from CLEAVE.

CLEFT, f. a space made by the separation of the parts of any body; a crack. In Farriery, a disease in horses, which appears on the hough of the pasterns.

To CLEFT-GRAFT, v. a. in Gardening, to engraft by cleaving the stock of a tree, and inserting a branch into it.

CLEMENCY, f. [clementia, Lat.] unwillingness to punish, and tenderness in the inflicting punishment.

CLEMENT, a. [clemens, Lat.] unwilling to punish, and tender in executing or in limiting punishment.

CLEMBURY MORTIMER, a town in Shropshire, whose market is on Wednesdays. Distant from London 136 miles.

To CLEPE, v. a. [clupan, Sax.] to call. Obsolete.

CLEPSYDRA, f. a water-clock, or an instrument to measure time by the fall of a certain quantity of water, used by the ancients before the invention of clocks and hour glasses, both by sea and land. There were many kinds of Clepsydræ among the ancients, but had all of them this in common, that the water ran generally through a narrow passage from one vessel into another, and in the lower was a piece of cork, which, as the vessel filled, rose up by degrees, and shewed the hour.

CLERGY, f. a body of men set apart by due ordination for the service of God and the Christian church, and originally consisted of bishops, priests, and deacons; but in the third century many inferior orders were appointed, such as subdeacons, acolythists, readers, &c. The clergy of the church of Rome are divided into regular and secular. The regular clergy consist of those monks or religious who have taken upon them holy orders of the priesthood in their respective monasteries. The secular clergy are those who are not of any religious order, and have the care and direction of parishes. The protestant clergy are all secular. The privileges of the English clergy, by the ancient statutes, are very considerable; their goods are to pay no toll in fairs or markets; they are exempt from all offices but their own; from the king's carriages, posts, &c. from appearing at sheriff's tourns, frank pledges, &c. and are not to be fined or amerced according to their spiritual, but their temporal means. A clergyman, acknowledging a statute, is not to be imprisoned. If he be convicted of a crime for which the benefit of the clergy is allowed, he shall not be burnt in the hand; and he shall have the benefit of the clergy in infinitum, which no layman can have more than once. The revenues of the clergy were anciently very considerable; but since the Reformation are very small, especially those of the inferior clergy. Indeed an addition was made, a Ames, by which the whole revenues or first-fruits and tenths were granted to raise a fund for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy; pursuant to which a corporation was formed, to whom the same revenues were conveyed in trust. Benefit of Clergy is a privilege which anciently was allowed only to those who were in orders; but by the statute of 18 Eliz. every man to whom the benefit of the clergy is granted, though not in orders, is put to read at the bar, after he is found guilty, and convicted of felony, and so burnt in the hand, and set free for the first time, if the ordinary or deputy standing by do say, legit ut clericus; otherwise he shall suffer death.

CLERGYMAN, f. a person dedicated, by ordination, to the service of the church; a person in holy orders.

CLERICAL, a. [clericus, Lat.] belonging to the clergy.

CLERK, f. [cleric, Sax.] a word originally used to denote a learned man, or man of letters; but now is the common appellation by which clergymen distinguish themselves in signing any deed, instrument, &c. Also the person who reads the responses of the congregation in the church, to direct the rest. It is likewise a common name for writers, or book-keepers, in public offices or private counting-houses. In our courts of records, there is a great number of officers who go under this name.

CLE'RKSHIP, f. the office or employ of a clerk.

CLE'VE'R, a. dextrous, quick, or skilful in the performance of any thing; well pleasing, convenient. Well made; handsome.

CLE'VE'RLY, ad. in a dextrous, ingenious, skilful, and proper manner.

CLE'VE'RNESS, f. a proper, skilful, and dextrous performance; a quality which conveys the idea of fitness, ingenuity, and perfection, and thereby excites satisfaction in the mind.

CLEW, f. [clwyse, Sax.] any thing in a globular form; a ball of thread. Figuratively, any guide or direction, by means of which a person may surmount any difficulty, alluding to a ball of thread made use of by persons to find their way back again from a labyrinth. The clew of a sail is the lower corner, reaching down to that-earing where the tackle and sheets are fastened.

To CLEW, v. a. among sailors, joined with the word sail, signifies to raise them in order to be furled by means of a rope fastened to the clew, called the clew-garnet.

To CLICK, v. n. [clicken, Belg.] to make a small, sharp, and successive noise, like that of the beats of a watch.

CLIC'KER, f. a tradesman's servant, who stands at the shop-door to invite customers to buy his wares; commonly called a barker.

CLIE'NT, f. [cliens, Lat.] in Law, one who employs a lawyer for advice or defence. Among the Romans, one who was dependent on some great personage, who undertook to defend him from oppression.

CLIE'NTELE, f. [clientela, Lat.] the condition of a client.

CLIE'NTSHIP, f. the office or condition of a client.

CLIFF, f. [clif, Sax.] a steep or craggy rock, generally applied to one on the sea-coast. In Music, used improperly for Clef.

CLIMA'CTER, f. [κλιμακτηρ, Gr.] a certain period of life or portion of years, supposed to terminate in some great danger.

CLIMACTE'RIC, or CLIMACTE'RICAL, a. [from κλιμακτηρ, Gr.] among Physicians and Astrologers, is a name given to certain periods in a man's life, which they supposed to be very critical, and to denote some extraordinary change. According to some, every seventh year is climacteric; but others allow only those years produced by 7 by the odd numbers 3, 5, 7, and 9, to be climacterical. These years, they say, bring with them some remarkable change with respect to life, health, or fortune; the Grand Climacteric is the 63d year; but some, making two, add to this the 81st. The other Climacterics are the 7th, 21st, 35th, 39th, and 56th.

CLIMATE, f. [κλίμα, Gr.] in Geography, a space on the surface of the earth, contained between two parallel circles, and measured from the equator to the polar circles; in each of which spaces the longest days are half an hour longer in those near the poles, than in those those nearest the equator. From the polar circles to the poles, the climates increase the space of a whole month. In a polar sense, any country differing from another, either in respect of its seasons, the quality of the soil, or the manners of its inhabitants, without any regard to the length of the day.

CLIMAX, f. [κλίμαξ, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure, wherein the sense of a period ascends or increases every sentence, till it concludes; as in the following: "Whether Paul, or Apollus, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come, all are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's." 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23.

To CLIMB, v. n. [preter and participle passive, climbed, sometimes pronounced clime] [climan, Sax.] to ascend; to ascend by their specific levity, &c. applied to vapours; to mount, or go upwards.

CLIMBER, f. one who mounts, ascends, or scales any high or steep place. A plant so called, from its creeping up on other supports.

CLIME, f. the same as climate; generally used in poetry.

To CLINCH, v. a. to hold a thing in the hand with the fingers and thumb meeting over it; to shut the hand, so as the fingers and thumb may reach over each other; to bend the point of a nail, when driven through any thing; to confirm, establish, or push home, applied to an argument.

CLINCH, f. a word which has a double meaning; a pun; a word made use of to conclude several lines in the different parts of a poem, and to rhyme to as many different words. In Navigation, that part of a cable which is fastened to the ring of an anchor.

CLINCHER, f. a cramp or hold fast, made of a piece of iron bent, or making an angle at the top, and used to fasten planks.

To CLING, v. n. [preter, I cling, or havee cling; part. clung] [hlynger, Dan.] to stick close to, or hang upon, by twisting round a thing.

CLINIC, or CLINICAL, a. [from κλινος, Gr.] those who keep their beds on account of the violence of any disorder.

To CLINK, v. a. to strike metals together so as to make them sound. Neuterly, to make a noise, applied to the sound made by two pieces of metal struck together.

CLINK, f. a noise made by the striking of two pieces of metal, whether iron or steel, on each other.

CLIO, one of the Nine Muses, the patroness of history; she is called the daughter of Jupiter and Memory, to shew the qualifications of an historian; her name properly signifies glory, fame, or renown, in a good sense, and is generally represented by a young maiden, crowned with laurel, holding a trumpet in her right hand, and a book in her left, with Thucydides's name in it.

To CLIP, v. a. [clippan, Sax.] to embrace by folding the arms closely round; to enfold in the arms; to hug. To cut with sheers, from klipper, Dan. or hippen, Belg. Figuratively, to diminish, applied to coin. To cut short, not to pronounce fully, applied to language.

CLIPPER, f. one that debases the coin, by cutting, filing, or otherwise diminishing its size and weight.

CLIPPING, f. that which is cut off from a thing.

CLITHERO, a town in Lancashire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated near Pendil-Hill, and is an ancient borough-town, sending two members to parliament. The market is good for cattle, yarn, and provisions. It is 36 miles S. E. of Lancaster, and 21 $\frac{3}{4}$ N. N. W. of London.

CLIVER, f. [more properly written clever] in Botany, an herb, whose seed sticks to the cloaths of such as touch it; and used in medicine.

CLOAK, [klak] f. a loose outer garment without sleeves, worn over the rest of a person's cloaths, either to defend them from cold or rain. Figuratively, a pretext, or pretence, in order to conceal any design.

To CLOAK, [klak] v. a. to cover with a cloak. Figuratively, to conceal any design by some specious pretext or artifice.

CLOCK, f. [clock, Brit.] a kind of movement or machine, going by a pendulum, serving to measure time, and shew the hour by striking on a bell. Huygens was the first person who brought the art of clock-making to any perfection; and the first pendulum clock made in England, was in the year 1622, by Fromantel, a Dutchman. What's o'clock, is a phrase importing what hour is it? 'Tis nine o'clock, implies, it is the ninth hour. Applied to stockings, clock signifies the work with which the ancles are adorned.

CLOCK-WORK, f. any movements which go by means of springs, wheels, and a pendulum, and in that respect resemble the movements of a clock.

CLOD, f. [clud, Sax.] a small mass of moist earth; a lump of earth or clay. Figuratively, a turf; the ground; any thing vile, base and earthy; a dull, gross, stupid person.

To CLOD, v. n. to unite into a mass, on account of its moisture or viscosity. To curdle, used instead of clot. Actively, to pelt with clods.

CLODDY, a. consisting of little heaps, small masses, or clods of earth.

CLODPATE, f. a stupid fellow; one who cannot easily apprehend the meaning of another. Hence clod-pated, an adjective, implying dull of apprehension, or stupid.

To CLOG, v. a. to load with something that may hinder motion; to burthen; to embarrass. Neuterly, to be obstructed by the sticking of something to a thing.

CLOG, f. any weight or thing which impedes or hinders the motion of a thing; a restraint; an incumbrance, hindrance, obstruction, or impediment; a composition of leather, consisting of a foal and two straps, worn by women over the shoes, to keep their feet clean, clean, or warm.

CLO'GGINESS, f. the state of being hindered from motion; obstruction.

CLO'GGY, a. that which, by adhering to any instrument, stops up the passages, or otherwise hinders its motion.

CLO'ISTER, f. [claufter, Sax.] a habitation surrounded with walls, and dwelt in by monks or religious; a monastery for the religious of either sex. In a more restrained sense, the principal part of a regular monastery, consisting of a square built on each of its sides. In Architecture, a court which has buildings on each of its four sides; a peristyle or piazza.

To CLO'ISTER, v. a. to shut up in a monastery; to confine in a religious house.

CLO'ISTERAL, a. shut up in a monastery or nunnery; solitary; retired; reclusive.

CLO'ISTERED, part. solitary; inhabiting a cloister; confined in a monastery, or religious house. In Architecture, built round, or surrounded with a piazza, or peristyle.

CLOKE, f. See CLOAK.

To CLOOM, v. a. to cover or stop up with clay, mortar or any glutinous matter.

To CLOSE, [klōza] v. a. [clausus, Lat.] to shut any thing that is open; to conclude, finish, or perfect; to confine; to join any thing broken. To heal, applied to wounds; to join two parts together, after being separated. To join with a party. To close with, or in with, to come to an agreement with.

CLOSE, f. any thing shut, without passage or outlet; a small field surrounded with a hedge or rails. Applied to time, the end of any particular period or portion. The end of a sentence; a conclusion.

CLOSE, a. used with the verbs, lie, shut, or fasten, shut so as nothing can come out, nor any air make its entrance. "A close box." "A close room." Without vent or inlet; without motion; stagnating; sultry, or not easily breathed in, applied to the air. Having very few pores, applied to metals. "That very close metal." Locke. Dense; concise; short; without any redundancy; or thick, applied to the manner of expression. "Your thoughts lie so close together." Applied to situation, touching, or without any distance between the things mentioned. Applied to designs, secret, or without discovery; having the appearance of reserve and secrecy; without wandering. "To keep our thoughts close to their business." Locke. Home; to the point; retired; without going abroad. "He keeps very close." Under great restraint. "A close prisoner." Narrow, dark, cloudy, misty, and sultry, applied to the sky, or weather. Used adverbially, either by itself, or in composition.

CLOSE-BODIED, a. that which comes tight round the body, opposed to that which hangs loose.

CLOSE-HANDED, a. covetous; illiberal; void of generosity.

CLOSE-LEAGUED, a. ranged near one another; in a thick and impenetrable body; secretly leagued, or privately conspiring against.

CLO'SELY, ad. applied to shutting any vessel, &c. without vent or passage for the internal or external air; very near; not deviating from, applied to the translation of authors. "I have translated closely."

CLO'SENESS, f. the state of having no passage for the air; narrowness; want of air; denseness; compactness; recluseness; solitude; reserve; secrecy; avarice; connection.

CLO'SER, [klōzer] f. a finisher or concluder.

CLO'SET, [klōzet] f. a small room for privacy and retirement; a shallow place furnished with shelves, and with a door, serving as a repository for curiosities, or family utensils.

To CLO'SET, [klōzet] v. a. to shut up or conceal in a closet; to take into a closet for the sake of privacy.

CLOSH, f. a distemper in the feet of cattle, called likewise the f: under.

CLO'SURE, [klōzūre] f. the act of shutting or stopping up any aperture or cleft; confinement; conclusion; end.

CLOT, f. [klot, Belg.] a mass formed by thickening of any fluid body.

To CLOT, v. n. [klotteren, Belg.] to grow into small masses, applied to any fluid substance. To gather into clods, applied to moist or clayey earth.

CLOTH, f. [plural, clotbs, or clotbes] in a general sense, any thing woven, either from animal or vegetable substances, for garments; the linen wherewith a table is covered at any meal; the canvass on which pictures are painted; the several coverings which are laid on a bed.

To CLOTHE, v. n. [preter, I clothed; part. I have clothed, or clad] to invest with garments; to cover or adorn with dress.

SYNON. Clotbes express simply that which covers the body. Dress has a more confined meaning; besides that of a bare covering, it includes in its idea a relation to form and fashion, as well to the ornaments as the necessaries: thus we say, a Spanish dress; a rich dress.

CLO'THIER, f. one who carries on the manufactory of woollen cloth.

CLO'THING, f. dress; vesture; garments.

CLOTH-SHE'ARER, f. one who shears the nap of woollen cloth, after it has been raised by carders or teasers.

CLOT-POLL, f. a word of contempt and reproach, implying a stupid person; a block-head, or thick-skull.

To CLOT'TER, v. n. See TO CLOT.

CLO'TTY, a. full of clots or lumps.

CLOUD, f. a collection of condensed vapours suspended in the atmosphere. Clouds are the most considerable of all the meteors, as furnishing water and plenty to the earth; mitigating the excessive heats of the Torrid Zone, and screening it from the beams of the sun; collecting the rays of light by the numerous refractions they suffer in their passage through them, thereby prolonging the stay of light after the sun is descended below the horizon, and and anticipating its coming some time before it has ascended above it: without their mediation, the heavens would be one uniform sable expanse, the rays of light would be scattered abroad in the immense regions of space without reaching our eyes, and the ravishing prospect of nature would become a large blot. They consist of very small drops of water, detached by external or internal heat, and elevated by electricity, and the laws of hydrostatics, above the surface of the earth, till they arrive at a collection of vapours of the same specific gravity of themselves; when meeting with air, and by running into each other, they form masses, or collections heavier than that part of the atmosphere which they swim in, and so fall down in rain. Figuratively, the veins, or dusky marks in agates, or stones; any thing which obscures; a state of darkness; a crowd, or great number.

To CLOUD, v. a. to darken; to make the countenance appear lowering; to render a matter obscure, or difficult to be understood; interspersed or diversified with dark veins, applied to wood and stones. Neuterly, to grow cloudy, dark, or over-cast, applied to the sky or weather.

CLOUD-CAPT, a. covered, topped by, or reaching the clouds. "The cloud-capt towers."

CLOUDILY, ad. in a cloudy or dark manner.

CLOUDINESS, f. a state wherein clouds possess darkness and obscurity; want of brightness or lustre; foulness, applied to precious stones.

CLOUDLESS, a. without clouds; clear, applied to the weather. Without spots or blemishes, applied to jewels.

CLOUDY, a. formed of clouds; dark, obscure, or over-cast with clouds. Figuratively, obscure; dark; imperfect; fullen; dejected.

CLOVE, the preter of CLEAVE.

CLOVE, f. [clow, Fr.] an aromatic fruit, brought from the East-Indies, growing on a tree twenty feet high, whose leaves resemble those of the bay-tree.

CLOVEN, participle of CLEAVE.

CLOVEN-FOOTED, or CLOVEN-HOOFED, a. having the foot or hoof divided into two parts.

CLOVER, or CLOVER-GRASS, f. in Botany, a species of trefoil. To live in clover, is a phrase for living luxuriously, because clover is reckoned delicious food for cattle.

CLOUGH, f. [clough, Sax.] the cleft of a hill; a cliff. An allowance in weight.

CLOUT, f. [clut, Sax.] a square piece of cloth made double, serving among other uses, to keep infants clean from their evacuations; to patch on a shoe or garment.

To CLOUT, v. a. to patch or mend in a coarse or clumsy manner; to cover with a thick cloth; to join awkwardly or clumsily together.

CLOUTED, part. patched or mended; joined in a clumsy manner.

CLOUTERLY, a. slowly; clumsily; or performed in awkward manner.

CLOWN, f. a rustic, or country fellow; one whose behaviour is rude, and manners are unpolished.

CLOWNISH, a. in a manner agreeable to clowns; rude, awkward, ill-bred, and coarse like a clown.

CLOWNISHLY, ad. in a clumsy, coarse, rude, and ill-bred manner.

CLOWNISHNESS, f. unpolished rudeness; rustic simplicity, or awkward address; broadness and coarseness of expression. SYNON. Unpoliteness is a want of good manners; it does not please. Clownishness is a mixture of ill manners; it displeases. Clownishness proceeds from an entire want of education; unpoliteness from a bad one.

To CLOY, v. a. [enclouer, Fr.] to fill so with food as to leave no appetite for any more; to surfeit almost to loathing.

CLUB, f. [cluppa, Brit.] a heavy and strong stick, used as an offensive weapon. In Gaming, the name of one of the suits of cards, called in French treffe, from its resembling the trefoil leaf, or that of clover-grass. The money-proportion, or sum every member is obliged to pay at a drinking society; an assembly meeting at a public house to spend the evenings generally incorporated and regulated by orders established among themselves; concurrence; joint expence or contribution.

To CLUB, v. n. to contribute one's proportion to a public expence; to join and unite in one common design; to carry on some common design which requires the assistance of many.

CLUB-HEADED, a. having a round or thick head.

CLUB-LAW, f. the compelling the assent of a person by external force or violence.

To CLUCK, v. n. [cluccan, Sax.] to make a noise like a hen when calling her chickens.

CLUMP, f. [klumpe, Teut.] a shapeless thick piece of wood, nearly as broad as long.

CLUMSILY, [klumzily] ad. in an uncouth, awkward, graceless, and displeasing manner.

CLUMSINESS, [klumziness] f. want of ingenuity, skill, dexterity, or readiness in performing any thing; awkwardness.

CLUMSY, [klumzy] a. [clumpfeb, Belg.] awkward, artless, unhandy, and without grace in the performance of any thing; heavy, thick, and coarse, with respect to weight and shape.

CLUNG, the preter and part of CLING.

To CLUNG, v. n. [clingan, Sax.] to dry or waste like wood after it is cut.

CLUNG, part. wasted away, by a consumption, or other disorders; shrunk.

CLUNN, a village in Shropshire, six miles S. of Bishop's-Cattle.

CLUSTER, f. [clyster, Sax.] a bunch, or several things of the same sort growing close together, and on one common stalk. Figuratively, a number of insects crowding together; a body of, or several people collected together.

To CLUSTER, v. n. to grow in bunches

clo. e

close together, and on one stalk, applied to vegetables. To gather close together in bodies, applied to bees. To collect into bunches.

CLUSTER-GRAPE, f. in Botany, the small black grape, generally the forwardest of any.

CLUSTERLY, a. growing close together on one common stalk.

To CLUTCH, v. a. to hold in the hand with the fingers and thumb closed together; to gripe or grasp; to shut the hand close, so as to seize and hold a thing fast.

CLUTCH, f. a gripe, grasp, or seizure with the hand shut very fast and close. Figuratively, in the plural, clutches, the claws or talons of a bird or wild beast.

CLUTTER, f. [See CLATTER] a noise made by a person's being in a hurry about some trifling affair; a hurry or clamour; a low word.

CLYSTER, f. [κλύση, Gr.] in Medicine, a decoction of various ingredients injected into the anus by means of a syringe, or pipe and bladder.

To COACERVATE, v. a. [coacervo, Lat.] to heap together.

COACERVATION, f. the act of heaping, or the state of things heaped together.

COACH, [kotsh] f. [coache, Fr.] a carriage of pleasure and state, having both back and front seats, hung upon straps or springs, running on four wheels; and distinguished from a chariot because it has two seats fronting each other, and from a vis-a-vis, because more than one person can sit opposite to one another. This carriage was originally intended for the country, and when first introduced into cities, there were but two even in Paris, one of which belonged to the queen, and the other to Diana, natural daughter of Henry II. The first courier who set up this equipage was John de Laval de Bois Dauphin, who could not travel on horseback on account of his enormous bulk. We find even in England, that as low as Queen Elizabeth's time, the nobility of both sexes attended her in processions on horseback.

To COACH, [kotsh] v. a. to carry or convey in a coach.

COACTION, [kodshon] f. the obliging to do, or to refrain from doing any action; force; compulsion.

COACTIVE, a. having the force of restraining from, or compelling to any action; acting in concert with.

COADJUTANT, pare. [con and adjutans, Lat.] helping, assisting, or taking part with a person in any action; co-operating.

COADJUTOR, f. [con and adjutor, Lat.] one engaged in assisting another; an assistant, associate, or partner in any undertaking. In the Canon Law, one appointed and empowered to perform the duties of another.

COADJUVANCY, f. [con and advvans, Lat.] help; concurrence in any process or operation; a contributing to effect any particular design.

COADUNITION, f. [con, ad, and unitio,

Lat.] the uniting of several things or particles so as to form one common mass.

To COAGMENT, v. a. [coagmento, Lat.] to join, glue, or heap together so as to form one mass.

COAGMENTATION, f. [coagmentatio, Lat.] a joining, uniting, gluing, or otherwise heaping several particles or substances together, so as to form one common mass. The joining several syllables or words together, so as to form one word or sentence, applied to style or grammar.

COAGULABLE, a. [from coagulo, Lat.] that which may thicken, grow dense, or concreate.

To COAGULATE, v. a. [coagulo, Lat.] to make a thing curdle, or turn into clots, applied to the turning of milk into curds by means of rennet. Neuterly, to curdle; to form concretions; to congeal.

COAGULATION, [f. coagulatio, Lat.] the act of turning into curds. Concretion; conge-lation; or growing thick and tangible, applied to fluids; the state of a thing congealed, curdled, or condensed; the substance or body formed by congealation or concretion.

COAGULATIVE, [from coagulo, Lat.] a. that which has the power of causing coagulations, concretions, curdling, or depriving a body of its fluidity.

COAGULATOR, f. that which causes condensations or concretions.

COAL, [köl] f. [col, Sax.] a solid, dry, opake, inflammable substance, found in large strata, splitting generally in an horizontal direction, of a black, glossy hue, soft and friable, not fusible, but easily inflammable, and leaving, when burnt, a great quantity of ashes.

COAL-BLACK, a. of the colour of coal; the deepest black.

To COALESCE [koalesis] v. n. to unite together.

COALESSCENCE, [koalescence] f. [from coalesco, Lat.] the act of coalescing or uniting of several particles, whereby they adhere together, and form one body, or common mass.

COALITION, [f. coalitum, Lat.] the uniting or joining of different particles, so as to compose one common mass.

COAL-WORK, [köl-work] f. a coal-mine, or place where coals are dug.

CO'ALLY, [kölly] a. abounding in coal.

COAPTATION, f. the fitting or artful disposition or arrangement of the parts of a thing, or of the words of a sentence.

COARSE, [körse] a. mixed with dross, not refined, applied to metals. Rough, and consisting of large threads, applied to cloth or silk manufactures. Rude, uncivil, indelicate, ill-bred, applied to behaviour or manners. Unpolished, and not elegant, applied to language. Mean, vile, rough, and of no value.

CO'ARSELY, ad. in a rude, rough, inelegant manner; free from any graces, or appearance of politeness.

CO'ARSENESS, f. want of purity; abounding in dross; want of elegance or delicacy; clownishglowworms, rudeness, or rusticity; a composition of mean and cheap materials.

COAST, [kôst] f. [coſta, Fr.] a shore or land, which lies near, and is washed by, the sea. Used by Sir Isaac Newton, in the sense of the original French and Latin, for a side or part. The coast is clear, a phrase implying that any danger is over, and that there are no obstacles in a person's way.

To COAST, v. n. in Navigation, to sail near a coast, or keep within sight of land.

CO'ASTER, f. one who makes a voyage from port to port on the same coast, keeping at the same time within sight of the shore; one who sails near the shore.

COAT. [kô] f. [cotte, Fr.] the outward garment of a man, made with plaits at the sides; the lower part of a woman's dress tied round the waist, and covering the legs. Figuratively, any covering or tegument. The hairs or fur of a beast. In Heraldry, the escutcheon, field, or habit, on which a person's arms are portrayed.

To COAT, v. a. to cover or spread over.

To COAX, v. a. to endeavour to persuade a person by flattery, or insinuating address; a low word.

CO'AXER, f. one who endeavours to persuade a person by flattery, or artful and insinuating behaviour.

CO'BALT, f. a marcasite plentifully impregnated with arsenick.

To CO'BLE, v. o. [kobler, Belg.] to mend any thing in a clumsy manner, generally applied to shoes. To do or make any thing in a coarse, unhandy, or awkward manner.

CO'BBLER, f. a mender of old shoes. Figuratively, a very bad workman; one who cannot perform any thing with elegance.

COBI'RONS, f. irons with a knob at the upper end, used in fire places where wood is burned.

COB-SWAN, f. the head or leading swan in a swannery.

COB-WEB, f. [kobweb, Belg.] the web or net of a spider. Figuratively, any snare or trap. Sometimes used for a restraint which may be easily broken through.

COCCI'FEROUS, [kokſiferous] a. [κακκός, Gr. and ſera, Lat.] in Botany, a term applied to all plants having berries.

COCHINE'AL f. [cocbinilla, Span.] an insect found upon the opuntia, originally of a white or pellucid colour, but turning red by means of the food it eats, and when dried, affording a beautiful purple colour, made use of by dyers.

COCHLEARY, [kiblessary] a. [from cocleas, Lit.] made in the form of a screw.

COCHLEATED, [kibklead] a. [from cocleas, Lat.] twisted in the form of a screw. Turbinated; applied to shells.

COCK, f. [coec, Sax.] the male of the species of domestic fowls, famous for its courage, pride, and gallantry; the male of any birds or fowls. Weather-cock, an instrument turning round a pivot, used to shew the point from which the wind blows; an instrument turning with a screw, made of bell-metal, and used in drawing liquors from casks; the notch of an arrow; that part of the lock of a gun which holds the flint; the particular form in which the brims of a hat are placed; the stile or gnomon of a dial; the needle of a balance. Cock-a-boop, or cock on the hoop, a phrase implying triumphant exultation, or elation on some success.

To COCK, v. a. to erect, or set upright. To mould the shape of a hat; to wear the hat with an air of petulance and smartness; to fix the cock of a gun ready for discharging; to lay hay in small heaps. Neuterly, to strut, hold up the head, or look big on account of any little success.

COCKA'DE, f. a ribband tied in a bow, or formed in the shape of a rose, worn in a man's hat.

COCKATRICE, f. [cock and atter, Sax.] a serpent, supposed to be formed from a cock's egg. Figuratively, a person of an insidious, venomous, and treacherous disposition.

COCK-BOAT, f. a small boat belonging to a ship.

COCK-CROWING, f. the time at which cocks crow. Figuratively, the morning.

To COCKER, v. a. [coqueliner, Fr.] to indulge too much; to fondle, or treat with too much fondness.

COCKER, f. one who keeps cocks for fighting.

COCKEREL, f. a young cock.

COCKERMOUTH, a town of Cumberland, with a market on Mondays. The situation is low, between the rivers Derwent and Cocker, over which there are two stone bridges. It is between two hills, on one of which stands a handsome church, and on the other a stately castle. It is a borough-town, and sends two members to parliament. It is well inhabited, has a good trade in coarse broad cloths, and has several handsome buildings. The market is the best for corn in the county, except Penrith. It is 46 miles S. E. by S. of Kendal, and 299 N. N. W. of London.

COCKET, f. a seal belonging to the custom-house; an instrument drawn on parchment, signed, sealed, and delivered to merchants, as a certificate that they have paid the customs for their goods.

COCK-HORSE, ad. triumphant; exulting; a kind of low word.

COCKLE, f. [coquille, Fr.] a small shell fish.

To COCKLE, v. a. to contract any stuff into wrinkles by wet or rain.

COCKLED, part. shelled; wrinkled by wet.

COCKLOFT, f. a room over a garret, so called from its smallness.

COCKNEY, f. a person born in London; a word of contempt. Figuratively, any effeminate, luxurious, ignorant, or inexperienced person dwelling in a city.

COCK-PIT, f. a place wherein cocks generally fight. In a ship, a place on the lower deck cock of a man of war, in which are divisions for the purser, the surgeon, and his mates.

CO'CK's-HEAD, f. in Botany, a plant called likewise sainfoin, and esteemed one of the best sorts of fodder for cattle.

CO'CKSURE, a. confident; certain.

CO'CKSWAIN, f. [coggsuaine, Sax.] an officer on board men of war, who has the command of the boat.

CO'COA, [koko]. f. See CHOCOLATE-SUR.

CO'CTILE, a. [coctilis, Lat.] made by baking.

CO'CTION, [kok'bon] f. [coctio, Lat.] a boiling. In Surgery, a digestion of matter.

COD, or CO'DFISH, f. a sea fish, caught on the banks of Newfoundland, and many other parts.

COD, f. [codde, Sax.] in Botany, any case, or husk, in which seeds are lodged.

To COD, v. n. to inclose in a husk, case, or cod.

CODE, f. [codex, Lat.] a book; a book of civil laws, appropriated by way of eminence to the collection made by Justinian.

CODICIL, f. [codicillus, Lat.] a writing made by way of supplement to a will, in order to supply something omitted, or alter and explain something contained in the testament.

CODILLE, f. [codille, Fr.] in Gaming, a term at ombre, implying that the game is won against the player; this is termed basted, in quadrille.

To CO'DLE, v. a. [coctulo, Lat.] to par-boil; to soften by the heat of water.

CO'DLING, f. an early kind of apple, so called from its being generally boiled for eating.

COE'FFICACY, f. [con and efficacia, Lat.] the united power of several things acting together to produce an effect.

COEFFICIENCY, f. [con and efficio, Lat.] the acting together, or joint power of several things to produce an effect.

COEFFICIENT, f. [con and efficiens, Lat.] that which acts jointly with another. Coefficients, in Algebra, numbers or uneven quantities prefixed to letters, in which they are supposed to be multiplied. In Fluxions, applied to any generating term, it is the quantity arising from the division of that term by the generated quantity.

COENOBITES, [Sénobites] in Church history, a sort of monks in the primitive church, so called from living in common, in which they differed from the Anchorites, who retired from society. The cenobitic life took its rise from the times of the apostles, and was the state and condition of the first Christians, according to St. Luke's account of them.

CO'EQUAL, a. being in the same state, condition, and circumstances as another.

COEQU'ALITY, f. the state of two persons or things which are equal to each other.

To CO'ERCE, v. a. [coercere, Lat.] to restrain by force, or punishment, from the committing any crime, or performing any action.

CO'ERCIBLE, a. that which may or ought to be restrained.

CO'ERCION, [koer'bon] f. [from coerco, Lat.] a check, or restraint. A restraining from the violation of any law, by means of punishment.

CO'ERCIVE, a. that which has the power of restraining; that which has the authority of restraining by means of punishment.

COESSENTIAL, [koess'enshial] a. [con and essentia, Lat.] partaking of the same essence.

COESSENTIALITY, [koess'enshiality] f. the quality of partaking of the same essence.

COE'TERNAL, a. [con and eternus, Lat.] existing eternally with another; equally eternal with another.

COE'TERNALLY, ad. in a manner equally eternal with another.

COE'TERNITY, f. [con and eternitas, Lat.] having an eternity of existence together with, or equal to the eternity of another.

COE'VAL, a. [coevus, Lat.] born or produced at the same time; of the same age with another.

COE'VOUS, a. [coevus, Lat.] of the same age; living at the same time.

To COE'XIST, v. n. [con and existere, Lat.] to exist, or be at the same time, or in the same place.

COE'XISTENCE, f. the having existence at the same time or place with another.

COE'XISTENT, a. having existence at the same time with another.

To COE'XTEND, v. a. to extend to the same space, period, or duration with another, followed by with, before the object with which the co-extension is formed.

COE'XTENSION, f. the act or state of extending to the same space or duration with another.

CO'FFEE, f. [Arab.] the berry of a tree, formerly peculiar to the kingdom of Yaman in Arabia, but now propagated in most of our colonies, in Jamaica especially, where it is little inferior to the best Turkey. It grows on a tree forty feet high, which in Arabia is always covered with flowers and fruit. Its leaves resemble the common laurel. The liquor or decoction made from the berry roasted, was introduced first into England by Mr. Daniel Edwards, a Turkey merchant, in the year 1652, bringing with him one Pasquet, a Greek servant, to make coffee for him; who was the first person that ever set up a coffee-house.

CO'FFEE-HOUSE, f. a place where coffee is sold, persons generally meet, if near Change, transact business, and the newspapers are taken in for the accommodation of customers.

CO'FFEE-MAN, f. one who keeps a coffee-house.

CO'FFER, f. [coffe, Sax.] a chest for keeping money. Figuratively, treasure. In Fortification, a hollow lodgment across a dry moat, the upper part of which is raised with pieces of timber above the moat's level, is covered with with hurdles laden with earth, and serves as a parapet with embrazures. It is generally used by the besieged to distress the enemy, when they endeavour to pass the ditch.

To COFFER, v. a. to put into chests or coffers, followed by up.

COFFERER of the king's household, f. a principal officer at court, in the counting-house, or elsewhere, next to the comptroller, who inspects over the behaviour and conduct of the other officers of the household, and pays them their respective salaries.

COFFIN, f. [coffa, Fr.] the receptacle wherein a dead body is placed for its interment. In Pastry, a mould of paste for a pie. A paper case in form of a cone or pyramid; a round piece of paper with the edges bent up perpendicularly, used by the apothecaries to drop their bolusses in, to keep the outward part clean.

To COFFIN, v. a. to place, or inclose in a coffin.

To COG, v. a. to persuade, wheedle, or gain a person over by flattery, or an insinuating address. To falsify, or corrupt a manuscript, by inserting some word or sentence; to obtrude falsehoods, or endeavour to make them pass current. To cog a die, is to secure it so as to direct it in its fall. Neuterly, to lie; to wheedle.

COG, f. the tooth of a wheel by which it acts upon another wheel.

To COG, v. a. to fix cogs in a wheel.

COGENCY, f. [from cogo, Lat.] the power of compelling; the power of extorting assent, or obedience.

COGENT, part. [cogens, Lat.] able to compel to action; powerful; resolute.

COGENTLY, ad. in a forcible manner. Extorting conviction and assent, applied to arguments.

COGGER, f. a flatterer: a wheedler.

COGGESHALL, a town in Essex, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the river Blackwater, or Pant, over which there is a bridge. It has one large church, and three meeting-houses. The town consists of several narrow streets badly paved, and there is here a manufactory of bays. It is 44 miles E. N. E. of London.

COGITABLE, a. [from cogito, Lat.] that which may be thought on, or may be the subject of thought.

COGITATION, f. [cogitatio, Lat.] the beholding any idea in the mind; the act of thinking. Figuratively, thought, purpose, intention, or design; meditation.

COGITATIVE, a. [from cogito, Lat.] having the power of thought; given to thought, study, or reflection.

COGLE-STONE, f. [cogolo, Ital.] a small pebble; a little stone.

COGNATION, f. [cognatio, Lat.] in Civil Law, the relation between both males and females descending from the same stock; relation; partaking of the same nature.

COGNISE, [knisè] f. in Law, the person to whom a fine in lands or tenements is acknowledged.

COGNISOR, [knisor] f. in Law, one that passes or acknowledges a fine in lands or tenements to another.

COGNITIVE, a. that which has the power of knowing or apprehending.

COGNIZABLE, [by some pron. knisable] a. [cognisibile, Fr.] proper for the consideration or inspection of a person subject to judicial examination and notice.

COGNIZANCE, [by some pron. knizance] f. [connoissance, Fr.] in Law, an acknowledgment of a fine, or confession of something done; the hearing of a matter judicially; the particular jurisdiction of a magistrate, or an object which more particularly falls under his inspection or notice; a badge by which any person may be known or distinguished.

COGNOMINATION, f. a surname; the name of a family, or name added from any accident or quality.

COGNOSCENCE, f. knowledge.

COGNOSCIBLE, a. [from cognosco, Lat.] that may be known; possible to be known; being the object of knowledge.

To COHA'BIT, v. n. [cobabito, Lat.] to dwell in the same place with another; to live together as man and wife.

COHA'BITANT, f. one who dwells in the same place with another.

COHABITATION, f. the act of dwelling with another in the same place, the living together as man and wife.

COHE'IR, f. [coberes, Lat.] a man who enjoys an inheritance together with another.

COHE'RESS, f. a female who enjoys an inheritance with another.

To COHE'RE, v. n. [cobereo, Lat.] to stick together; to hold fast to one another as part of the same body. To be well connected; to depend on what has preceded, and connect with what follows, applied to literary compositions. To suit, fit, or be fitted to; to agree.

COHE'RENCE, or COHE'RENCY, f. [cobarentia, Lat.] in Physics, that state of bodies in which their parts are joined together so as to resist division, or separation; relation; dependency; consistency, so as one part of a discourse does not contradict another.

COHE'RENT, part. [cobereus, Lat.] sticking together so as to resist a separation; suitable, adapted to one another; consistent, or not contradictory.

COHE'SION, f. the action whereby the atoms or primary corpuscles of bodies are connected together so as to form particles, and the particles are kept together so as to form sensible masses. Figuratively, cohesion signifies the state of union or inseparability both of the particles of matter and other things; connection.

COHE'SIVE, a. that has the power of sticking fast, so as to resist separation.

COHE'SIVENESS, f. the quality of uniting so as to resist any attempt to separate them, applied to the particles of matter.

To COHOBATE, v. a. to pour any distilled filled liquor upon its residuum, or remaining matter, and distil it again.

COHOBA'TION, f. the returning any liquor distilled upon that which remains after the distillation, and the distilling it again.

CO'HORT, f. [cobors, Lat.] a troop of soldiers, in the Roman armies, containing about 500 foot. In Poetry, used for any company of soldiers or warriors.

COIF, f. [coiffe, Fr.] a head-dress; a lady's cap; a serjeant at law's cap.

CO'IFFED. a. wearing a coif.

CO'IFFURE, f. [coiffure, Fr.] head-dress.

TO COIL, v. a. [sueillir, Fr.] to reduce into a narrow compass. To coil a rope, is to wind it in a ring.

COIL, f. [kollenen, Teut.] a tumult, noise, confusion, or bustle, occasioned by some quarrel; a rope wound into a ring.

COIN, f. [coigne, Fr.] a corner; anything standing with a corner outwards; a brick cut diagonally. pronounced quoin or quine.

COIN, f. money, or metal stamped with a lawful impression; payment of any kind; compensation. As money is the general medium of commerce, and as every nation has coins peculiar to itself, we apprehend it will be of no small use to the reader to inform him of the value of these coins that have been, or now are current in several countries where trade is carried on. And as the Jewish coins are very proper to be known, for the right understanding of the Scripture, we shall begin with them.

JEWISH COINS reduced to English Money.

Gerah				£	s.	d.
				0	0	1 ⁵⁰ / ₁₀₀
10	Bekah			0	1	1 ¹¹ / ₁₆
20	2	Shekel		0	2	3 ⁵ / ₁₆
1000	100	50	Maneh, mina hebraica	5	14	0 ³ / ₄
000 0	6000	3000	60	Talent 342 3 9
Solidus aureus, or Sextula, worth				0	12	0 ¹ / ₂
Siclus aureus, worth				1	16	6
A Talent of gold, worth				5475	0	0

In England, the current species of gold coin are the guinea, half-guinea, quarter-guinea, jacobus, laureat, angel and rose-noble; the four last of which are now seldom met with, having been mostly converted into guineas, chiefly during the reigns of Charles II. and James II. The silver coins are the crown, half-crown, shilling, and sixpence. There are likewise penny, two penny, three penny, and great pieces in silver. The copper coins are the half-penny and farthing. In Scotland, by the articles of Union, it is appointed, that all the coins be reduced to the English, and the same accounts to be observed throughout the whole island. In Ireland, the coins are the same as in England, except that the English shilling passes for 26 half-pence, which are the only coin peculiar to that country.

In France, the only gold coin now current is the louis d'or, with its divisions, which are half and quarter, and its multiples, which are the double and quadruple louis d'ors.

Value and proportion of the FRENCH COINS,

Denier, equal to $\frac{1}{4}$ of a farthing sterling.				£	s.	d.
2	Double			0	0	0 ¹ / ₂
3	1 ¹ / ₂	Liard		0	0	10 ³ / ₄
12	6	4	Sol Paris, is equal nearly to	0	2	7 ¹ / ₂
240	120	80	20	Livres d'accompt
720	360	240	60	3	Ecu
The old louis d'or is valued at				0	16	9 ³ / ₄
The new louis d'or at				1	0	6

In Spain, the gold coin is the pistole; above which is the double pistole, and piece of four pistoles, and under it the half pistole; to which must be added, the castilians of gold. The silver money are the piaftre, or piece of eight rials, and its diminutions; as also, the simple rial, with its diminutions. The copper coins are the ochavos, or octavos, which are of two kinds, the one equal to four marvedis, and ordinarily called quarta; the other double this, and called double quarta; and lastly, the marvedis. In Spain they have new money and old; the old, current at Sevil, Cadiz, Andalusia, &c. is worth 25 per cent. more than the new, current at Madrid, Bilbao, St. Sebastian, &c. This difference is owing to their king Charles II. who, to prevent the exportation of money, raised it 25 per cent. however, several provinces retained the ancient state.

Value and proportion of the SPANISH COINS.

	£	s.	d.
Quarta, four marvedis	—	—	—
Octavo, or double quarta, 8 marvedis	—	—	—
Rial of Old Plata, equal to	—	0	6½
Piece of eight, or piaftre	—	0	4 6
Pistole	—	0	16 9½

In Portugal, the gold coins are the milleray, or St. Stephen, and the moeda d'oro, or moeda, which is properly their pistole; above this are doppio moedas, or double pistoles, and quadruple species equal to five pistoles. The silver coins are the cruzada, pataca or piece of eight, and the vintem, of which they have two sorts, the one silver, and the other billon. The rest is of copper, which serves them in accounts, as the marvedis does the Spaniards.

Res, rec, or rez, equal to three-fifths of a farthing sterling.

	£	s.	d.
Vintem, 20 res	—	—	—
Cruzada, 26 vintems	—	—	—
Mi-moeda, or half pistole	—	0	13 6
Moeda d'oro, or pistole	—	1	7 0
Doppio moeda, or double pistole	—	2	14 0
Ducat of fine gold	—	6	15 0

Besides the above, they have pieces of gold of the value of 3l. 12s. 1l. 16s. and other subdivisions.

DUTCH COINS.

Those of silver are crowns or dollars, ducatoons, florins and schellings, each of which has its diminution. The silver is billon; the best and penny, of copper.

	£	s.	d.
Ducat of Holland	—	0	9 3.2
Ducatoon	—	0	5 5.59
Patagon, or rixdollar	—	0	4 4.28
The three-guilder piece, or sixty flivers	—	5	2.46
The guilder, florin, or 20 flivers	—	0	1 8.08
The lion dollar	—	0	3 7.07

The schelling goes for six flivers, and the ortel is the fourth part of a fliver.

FLEMISH COINS.

Those of gold are imperials, rides or philips, alberts and crowns; those of silver, are philips, rixdollars, patagons, schellings, and galdens; and those of copper, patards

	£	s.	d.
Groat, eight patards	—	0	—
Single fliver	—	0	0 1½
Schelling	—	0	0 7½
Gulden	—	0	2 0
Rixdollar, dollar, patagon	—	0	4 6
Imperial	—	0	11 9

The German, Dutch, and French coins are current here. The German and Italian coins are so numerous and various, every prince and state having a coinage of their own, that it would be a difficult as well as useless task, to reduce them to any standard, many of them being current only in the place where they are coined; and as the knowledge of them can be of no service to the reader, unless he happens to travel into those countries, we shall pass on to

The DANISH COINS.

	s.	d.
The gold ducat	9	3 ½
The horse	1	1 ½
The four-mark piece	2	8.23
Marc lub	1	6
Schedal, or two marks	3	0
Rix-mark	0	11
Slet-mark	0	9

SWEDISH COINS.

Those of copper are the roustique, alleuvre, mark, and money.

	s.	d.
A gold ducat is equal to	9	3½
An eight-mark piece of silver	5	2
A four-mark piece	2	7
A chrittine	1	1½
A caroline	1	5½

The Swedish money, properly so called, is a kind of copper, cut in little square pieces, or plates, about the thickness of three English crowns, and weighing five pounds and a half, stamped at the four corners with the Swedish arms, and current in Sweden for a rixdollar, or piece of eight.

MUSCOVITE COINS.

	s.	d.
The copeck of gold, worth	1	6½
Copeck of silver, or denaung	0	1
Polusk	0	0 ½
Motofke	0	0 ½
The ruble of silver, valued at	4	6
The cheroonitz of gold, called ducat by foreigners	9	6

It were easy to give an account of many other coins, such as the Polish, Turkish, Persian, Indiap, &c. but as a particular description of these these would take up more room than we have to spare, we must refer the reader to such books as treat particularly of this subject.

To COIN, v. a. to mint, or stamp metals for money; to make or forge any thing, used in an ill sense.

COINAGE, f. the stamping metals; or making money. This was formerly performed by a hammer, but at present by a mill; the former was the only method known till the year 1559. The English coinage, by adding the letters on the edges, contributed not a little to its perfection. Figuratively, this word is used for coin or money; the charges or expence of coining. Forgery, or invention, used in a bad sense.

To COINCIDE, v. n. [coincido, Lat.] to fall upon, or meet in the same point; to be consistent with, to concur.

COINCIDENCE, f. the state of several bodies or lines falling upon the same point; concurrence; consistency, or uniting to effect the same end, or establish the same point.

COINCIDENT, a. [coincident, Lat.] falling upon the same point, applied to bodies, or lines. Concurring; consisting; agreeing; mutually tending to the support of any particular point.

COINDICATION, f. [from con and indico, Lat.] the concurrence of many symptoms, bespeaking or betokening the same cause.

COINER, f. one that makes money. Figuratively, a maker of counterfeit money; an inventor.

To COJOIN, v. n. [conjungo, Lat.] to join with another in the same office.

COISTRIL, f. a coward, or run-away sock.

COIT, f. [coite, Belg.] a thing thrown at a mark. See QUOIT.

COITION, f. [coitio, Lat.] the act of propagating the species; the act by which two bodies come together.

COKE, f. [from coquo, Lat.] fuel made by burning pit-coal under the ground, and quenching the cinders; as in making charcoal. It is frequently used in drying malt.

COLANDER, [pron. cullender] f. [from colo, Lat.] a sieve; either of hair, twigs, or metal, through which any mixture is strained, and leaves the grosser parts behind it.

COLATION, f. [from colo, Lat.] the act of filtering, straining, or separating any fluid from its dregs or impurities.

COLATURE, f. [from colo, Lat.] the act of separating the dregs of any fluid by straining it through a sieve, or filtering it through paper; the matter strained or filtrated.

COLBERTINE, f. a kind of fine lace worn by women.

COLCHESTER, a town of Essex, with a market on Wednesdays and Saturdays. It is a place of great antiquity, and pleasantly and commodiously seated on the S. side of the river Colne, which is navigable within a mile of the town, on the declivity of a hill. It was surrounded with a wall which had six gates, and three posterns, besides nine watch-towers; but these are now in a great measure demolished. It had 16 parish churches, but now only 8 are used; these are not very large, and most of them were damaged in Cromwell's time. There are here also five meeting-houses. The streets are not very broad, though they are tolerably paved. The town suffered greatly in the civil wars. There is a large manufactory of bays, for Spain and Portugal, and the town is famous for oysters and eringo-rooms, and imports wine, brandy, coals, deals, &c. It was lately a corporation, but has lost its charter for some misdemeanour; however, it still sends two members to parliament. Towards the E. are the ruins of an old castle, with a fence round it, about two acres in circumference. It is 51 miles E. N. E. of London.

COLCOTHAR, f. in Chemistry, the dry substance remaining after distillation, but generally applied to the caput mortuum of vitriol.

COLD, a. [cold, Sax.] without warmth, or warming; having a sensation of cold, or shivering, because the particles of air are less in motion than those of our body, or being mixed with nitrous particles, diminish the motion of those of the body; that which is not volatile, or easily put in motion by heat. Figuratively, unaffected; not easily excited to action; indifferent; not able to move the passions; reserved, or void of the warmth of friendship and affection; chaste, temperate, not easily provoked to anger; not meeting with a warm or affectionate reception; deliberate; calm.

COLD, f. something void of heat and motion, and which contains in it no particles of fire; that which produces the sensation of cold; a disease caused by stopping perspiration, and other effects of cold weather.

COLDLY, ad. without warmth or heat; with great indifference or unconcern.

COLDNESS, f. opposite to heat; that quality which causes a sensation of cold, and deprives a person of his natural warmth and heat; want of kindness, love, esteem, or affection; coyness, chastity, or freedom from any immodest desires.

COLE, [cawol, Sax.] a general name for all sorts of cabbage.

COLEFORD, a town of Gloucestershire, with a market on Tuesdays. It is 123 miles W. N. W. of London.

COLESEED, f. in Botany, the rape, from whence rape-seed oil is drawn, cultivated for feeding cattle.

COLESHILL, a town in Warwickshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on the side of a hill, by the river Colne, over which there is a stone bridge. It is 103 miles N. W. of London.

COLEWORT, f. in Botany, a species of the cabbage.

COLIC, f. [colicus, Lat.] in Medicine, a severe pain in the lower venter, and so called because it was formerly thought to be seated in the colon. A bilious colic proceeds from bilious, sharp, sharp, and stimulating humours. A flatulent colic is a pain in the bowels, owing to dry acres contained in the intestines. A nervous colic is from convulsive spasms, or contortions of the guts, whereby their capacities are strained. An hysterical colic arises from disorders peculiar to women, and from a consent of parts. The fiava colic proceeds, by consent of parts, from the irritation of the stone or gravel in the bladder or kidneys.

COLIC, a. affecting the bowels.

To COLLA'PSE, v. n. [collapsus, Lat.] to fall together; to close together so as one side shall touch another.

COLLA'PSION, f. the state of vessels closing of themselves; the act of closing together.

COLLAR, f. [collare, Lat.] an ornament of metal worn by knights of several military orders, hanging over the shoulders on the mantle, and generally consisting of a gold chain, enamelled with cyphers and other devices, and having the badge of the order suspended at the bottom. That of the order of the Garter consists of SS, with roses enamelled red, within a garter enamelled blue, and a George at the bottom. Collar is likewise that part of the harness which is round a horse's neck. The part of the dress which furrounds the neck. To strip the collar is a phrase for getting free, escaping, or extricating one's self from any difficult engagement. A collar of brawn is a quantity of brawn rolled and bound up in a round parcel.

To COLLAR, v. a. to seize by the collar. joined with brawn, to roll it up and bind it tight with a string, in order to make it retain a round form.

COLLAR-BONE, f. the clavicle, one of the bones which are on each side of the neck.

To COLLA'TE, v. a. [collatum, Lat.] to compare one thing with another of the same kind. Applied to books, to compare and examine them, in order to find whether any thing be deficient, corrupted, or interpolated. Used with to, to place in an ecclesiastical benefice.

COLLA'TERAL, a. [con and latus, Lat.] to side; running parallel; mutual, or such as becomes near relations, applied to affection. In Geography, situated by the side of another. Not direct, oblique. Concurrent, applied to proofs. In Cosmography, intermediate, or lying between the cardinal points. In Genealogy, applied to relations of the same stock, but not in the same line of ascendants and descendants; such are uncles, aunts, nephews, cousins. Collateral descent, in Law, is that which passes to brothers children. Collateral assurance is a bond made over and above the deed itself for the performance of a covenant. Collateral security is a deed made of other lands, besides that granted by the deed of mortgage, on their not being a sufficient security.

COLLA'TERALLY, ad. sid. by side, applied to position or situation. Not in the same line of descendants, though from the same stock, applied to Genealogy.

COLLA'TION, f. [collatio, Lat.] the act of bestowing or conferring, applied to gifts or favours; the comparing one copy or thing of the same kind with another. In Canon Law, the bestowing of a benefice by a bishop, who has right of patronage. An elegant public entertainment or feast.

COLLA'TOR, f. one who examines copies or manuscripts, by comparing them with some other writing. In Law, one who presents to an ecclesiastical living or benefice, generally applied to the presentation of a bishop.

CO'LEAGUE, [colleg] f. [collega, Lat.] a partner or associate in the same office.

To COLLEA'GUE, [colleg] v. a. to unite or join with.

To COLLE'CT, v. a. [collectum, Lat.] to gather together; to bring several things together, or into the same place; to add into a sum; to infer, draw, or deduce from arguments. Followed by the reciprocal pronouns himself, &c. to recover from a surprize; to reassemble one's scattered ideas.

CO'LECT, f. [collecta, Lat.] a short comprehensive prayer, used in the church service.

COLLECTA'NEOUS, a. [collethaneus, Lat.] gathered together, collected.

COLLE'CTIBLE, a. that which may be gathered, or deduced from any premises.

COLLE'CTION, f. [collectio, Lat.] the act of gathering several pieces together; an assemblage of things in the same place.

COLLECTI'TIOUS, [kollektifshious] a. [collectitious, Lat.] gathered up. Wants authority.

COLLE'CTIVE, a. [collectivus, Lat.] gathered together, consisting of several members or parts, forming a whole, or one common mass. In Logic, a collective idea, is that which unites several things of the same kind. In Grammar, a collective noun is a noun which expresses a multitude or several of the same sort, though used in the singular number; as a company; an army; a fleet.

COLLE'CTIVELY, ad. in a body, taken together, opposed to singly or separately. In general; or generally; in one mass or heap.

COLLE'CTOR, f. [collector, Lat.] one who gathers scattered things together.

COLLEGE, f. [collegium, Lat.] a community, or society of men set apart for learning or religion. The word college bears a different sense in different countries. In Germany, there is the college of electors, who assemble in the diet of Ratisbon. At Rome, there is the college of cardinals, a body composed of three distinct orders of them. The universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and Paris, have their several colleges, in which learning is taught. Among the Jews were several colleges, consisting generally of the tribe of Levi. Samuel is said to have founded the college of the prophets. Among the Greeks, the lyceum and academy were celebrated colleges. Colleges have been generally in the hands of those devoted to religion. Thus the Magi in Persia; the Gymnosophists in the Indies; the Druids in Gaul and Britain, had the care of instructing youth youth in the sciences. After the establishment of Christianity there were almost as many colleges as monasteries, particularly in the reign of Charlemagne, who enjoined the monks to instruct youth in music, grammar, and arithmetic. In London, there is the College of Civilians, commonly called Doctors Commons, founded by Dr. Harvey, dean of the arches, for the professors of the civil law residing in London. Also, the College of Physicians, a corporation of physicians in London, whose number, by the charter, is not to exceed eighty. Sion College, or College of the London clergy, who were incorporated in 1631, at the request of Dr. White, under the name of the president and fellows of Sion College; it is likewise an hospital for ten poor men, the first within the gates of the house, the other without. Gresham College, or College of Philosophy, founded by Sir William Gresham, who built the Royal Exchange, is now pulled down, and the Excise Office built on its site. The subjects of the lectures (now read in a room over the Royal Exchange) are divinity, astronomy, music, and geometry, rhetoric, civil law, and physic; each lecturer has 50*l.* a year, and had a lodging in the college. College of Heralds, commonly called the Heralds Office, a corporation founded by King Richard III. who granted them several privileges, as to be free from subsidies, tolls, offices, &c. Colleges of Common Law, see Inns of Court.

COLLE'GIAL, a. relating to a college, or possessed by a college.

COLLE'GIAN, f. an inhabitant or member of a college.

COLLE'GIATE, a. consisting of colleges; instituted or regulated after the manner of a college. Collegiate church is that which is endowed for a society or body corporate, consisting of a dean and secular priests, without a bishop; of this kind are Westminster-Abbey, Windsor, &c.

COLLE'GIATE, f. a member of a college, or one bred at an university.

COLLET, f. [from collum, Lat.] formerly any thing that was worn about the neck. Figuratively, the neck. Among jewellers, that part of a ring in which the stone is set.

To COLLIDE, v. a. [collido, Lat.] to strike, beat, or dash two things together, or against each other.

COLLIER, f. one who digs for coals in a mine; one who sells or deals in coals; a vessel made use of to convey coals by water.

COLLIFLOWER, See CAULIFLOWER.

COLLIGATION, f. [colligatio, Lat.] the binding things close, or together.

COLLINGBURN-DUKE, a village in Wiltshire, about 10 miles S. of Marlborough.

COLLIQUAMENT, f. the substance any thing is produced to by dissolution, or fusion, i. e. by being dissolved or melted.

COLLIQUANT, part. [colligans, Lat.] that which has the power of dissolving, melting, or wasting.

To COLLIQUATE, v. a. [colligo, Lat.]

to melt, dissolve, or turn a solid into a fluid by heat, &c.

COLLIQUATION, f. the melting of any thing by heat. In Medicine, a disorder wherein the blood and other animal fluids flow through the secretory glands:

COLLIQUATIVE, a. melting or dissolvent. A colliquative fever is that which is attended with a diarrhoea, or profuse sweats, from too lax a contexture of the fluids.

COLLIQUEFACTION, f. [from colliguesacio, Lat.] the reducing different metals to one mass, by melting them on a fire.

COLLI'SION, f. [collisio, Lat.] the act of striking two bodies together.

COLLOCATION, f. [collocatio, Lat.] the act of placing; disposition.

To COLLO'GUE, [collig] v. s. to wheedle, flatter, impose upon, or seduce by fair words. A low word.

COLLOP, f. a thin slice of meat, or steak; a piece or slice of any animal.

COLLOQUY, f. [colloquium, Lat.] a conference, or conversation; a discourse in writing, wherein two or more persons are represented as speaking or talking together on any topic.

COLLOW, f. [supposed by Johnson rather to be colly, from coal] the black grime of burnt coals or wood.

COLLUCTATION, f. [colluctatio, Lat.] the mutual struggle or commotion of the particles of any fluid between themselves; opposition; fermentation. Figuratively, contest; spite; mutual opposition.

To COLLUDE, v. n. [colludo, Lat.] to join in a fraud; to conspire in imposing on a person.

COLLU'SION, f. [collusio, Lat.] in Law, a deceitful contract or agreement between two or more persons, for the one to bring an action against the other, in order to defraud a third person of his right.

COLLUSIVE, a. fraudulently concerted or agreed upon between two persons, in order to cheat a third.

COLLUSIVELY, ad. concerted or contrived in a fraudulent manner, with a fraudulent design.

COLLUSORY, a. carrying on a fraud by secret concert.

COLLYRIUM, f. [Lat.] in Medicine, an external remedy for disorders in the eyes.

COLNBROOK, a town of Buckinghamshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on the river Colne, which separates this county from Middlesex. It is a great thoroughfare on the western road, and has several good inns. It is 17½ miles W. from London.

COLNE, a town of Lancashire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on a small hill, near the eastern confines of the county. It is 21½ miles N. N. W. of London.

COLONGNE, [Kolon] an ancient, large, rich, and celebrated town of Germany, with an archbishop's see, and an university. It has 12 parishes, 37 monasteries, and 365 churches and chapels, with a vast number of monks and nuns. It is a place of no great strength, and the the inhabitants are but few for so large a place. It is a free imperial city, and though the elector has a palace here, he has not the liberty of staying in it for many days together, nor is he admitted to come at all with a numerous attendance. The inhabitants are generally Roman Catholics; but there are some Protestants, who are obliged to perform their devotions at Milheira, in the duchy of Borg, near three miles from the city. It is 17 miles E. of Juliers, and 85 W. by N. of Mentz. Lon. 6. 38. E. lat. 50. 50. N.

COLOGNE, [Köln] electorate of, one of the most considerable countries of Germany, is bounded on the N. by the duchy of Cleves and Guelderland, on the E. by the duchy of Berg, on the S. by the archbishoprick of Treves, and on the W. by the duchy of Juliers. It is divided into the diocese and the domain. The diocese is divided into the upper and the lower; the domain comprehends the duchy of Westphalia, and the territory of Recklinckusen. The elector is arch-chancellor of the empire for Italy, and has a right to consecrate the emperor for Italy, with that of Mentz. This electorate is thought to be the most fertile and pleasant country of all Germany; and it abounds in corn, wine, pastures, and all the necessaries of life.

COLOMB, ST. a town in the county of Cornwall, with a market on Thursdays. It is 249 miles W. by S. of London.

COLON, f. [κόλον, Gr.] in Grammar, a point or stop marked thus (:): used to make a pause greater than that of the semicolon, and less than that of a period; and when stops were first invented, to separate any member of a sentence; but at present it is used in a period where the sense seems complete, but is lengthened by some supernumerary sentence, beginning with an adverbial conjunction, as but, nevertheless, &c. In Anatomy, the greatest and widest of all the intestines.

COLONEL, [kūnel] f. [colonel, Fr.] an officer in the army who has the command in chief of a regiment. Colonel Lieutenant is one who commands a regiment of the guards, whereof the king, or other great personage, is colonel. Lieutenant-colonel is the second officer of a regiment at the head of the captains, who commands in the absence of the colonel.

COLONELSHIP, [kūnelship] f. the office of a colonel.

To COLONISE, [kūlonize] v. a. to plant with inhabitants; to settle with people brought from some other place; to plant with colonies.

COLONNADE, f. [from colonna, Ital.] a peristyle of a circular form; or a series of pillars placed in a circle, and insulated within side. Figuratively, any series or range of pillars.

COLONY, f. [colonia, Lat.] a body of people sent from the mother country, to cultivate and settle some other place. Figuratively, the country settled by a body of people both in and coming from some other place.

COLOPHONY [kūlophony] f. [from Colophon, a city, whence it is imported] a resinous substance prepared of turpentine boiled in water, and afterwards dried; or from a slow evaporation of a fourth or fifth part of its substance by fire.

COLOURATE, a. [coloratus, Lat.] coloured; dyed; marked or stained with any colour.

COLORATION, f. [from colora, Lat.] the art or practice of colouring or painting; the state of a thing coloured.

COLORIFIC, a. [colorificus, Lat.] that which has the power of producing colours, or of colouring any body.

COLOSSE, or COLOSSUS, f. [colossus, Lat.] a statue of enormous size; that of Apollo at Rhodes, made by Chares, was so high that ships could pass, with full sails, between its legs; its height was 126 feet; few people could fathom its thumb; it was overthrown by an earthquake after standing 1360 years; and being found prostrate on the ground by the Saracens, when they became masters of the island, was sold by them to a Jew, who loaded 900 camels with the brass of it.

COLOUR, [pron. kūller] f. [color, Lat.] the different sensations excited by the refracted rays of light, reflected on our eyes in a different manner, according to the different size, shape, or situation of the particles of which bodies are composed. In a popular or vulgar sense, the different hue in which bodies appear to the eye. Figuratively, the rosy hue of the cheeks; the tints or hues produced by covering any surface with paint. Under colour, appearance, or pretence.

To COLOUR, [kūller] v. a. [coloro, Lat.] to mark, or dye with some hue or tint. Figuratively, to palliate, or excuse; to assign some plausible or specious reason for an undertaking; to bluish.

COLOURABLE, [kūllerable] a. specious, plausible.

COLOURABLY, [kūllerably] ad. plausibly; speciously.

COLOURED, [kūlled] part. streaked; diversified with different hues.

COLOURING, [kūllering] f. that branch of painting which teaches the proper distribution of lights and shades, and laying the colours with propriety and beauty.

COLOURIST, [kūlleriſt] f. a painter excellent in the tints he gives his pieces, and the manner in which he disposes his lights and shades.

COLOURLESS, [kūllereſs] a. without any colour; white; transparent.

COLT, f. [colt, Sax.] a young horse that has never been ridden, or broke. Figuratively, a raw, ignorant person.

COLT'S-TOOTH, f. an imperfect and superfluous tooth in the mouth of a young horse. Figuratively, an inclination to youthful pleasures, wantonness, or gaiety.

COLTER, f. [colter, Sax.] the sharp iron of a plough, which breaks up the ground peculiarly to the plough-share.

CO'LTISH, a. resembling a colt; wanton.

CO'LUMBARY, f. [columbarium, Lat.] a place where doves or pigeons are kept; a dovecot; a pigeon-house.

CO'LUMBINE, f. [columbina, Lat.] in Dying, a pale violet, or changeable dove colour. Likewise the heroine, or chief female character in pantomime entertainments.

CO'LUMN, [kolum] f. [columna, Lat.] in Architecture, a round pillar made to support or adorn a building. In War, a deep file or row of troops or division of an army, marching at the same time towards the same place, with intervals between them to prevent confusion. SYNON. By the word pillar is understood a supporter of some roof; by the word column a particular kind of pillar, that which is round: thus every column is a pillar, tho' every pillar is not a column.

COLU'MNAR, or COLUMNA'RIAN, a. formed in the shape of a column.

CO'LUMPTON, a town of Devonshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the river Culm, over which there is a bridge, and is a pretty handsome place. It is 16 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by S. of London.

CO'LURES, [koluriz] f. [coluri, Lat.] in Geography and Astronomy, two great circles imagined to intersect each other at right angles, in the poles of the world; one of which passes thro' the equinoctial points, Aries and Libra; the other through the solstitial points, Cancer and Capricorn; the latter determining the solstices, and the former the equinoxes.

CO'MA, f. [κόμα, Gr.] in Physick, a kind of lethargy or sleepy disease, wherein a person has a violent propensity to sleep.

COMA'TO'SE, a. lethargic; sleepy; or affected with a coma.

COMB, [köm] f. [comb, Sax.] an instrument made of horn, tortoise-shell, or box, sawed, through which the hair is passed in order to cleanse or adjust it; likewise an instrument made of iron or steel wires fixed upright on a piece of wood, through which flax, wool, or hemp is passed to prepare it for spinning. The top or crest of a cock, so called from its resembling the teeth of a comb. The receptacles or hollow places in a bee-hive, wherein the honey is stored.

To COMB, [köm] v. a. [camben, Sax.] to clean or smooth the hair by passing a comb through it; to make wool or flax fit for spinning, by passing it through a comb.

COMB-MARTIN, a town in Devonshire, with a small market on Saturdays. It is seated on the Severn Sea, where it has an inlet which runs through the town. It is but a small place, 5 miles E. of Ilfracomb, and 17 $\frac{1}{2}$ W. by S. of London.

To CO'MBAT, v. n. [combattre, Fr.] to fight, generally applied to a duel or a fight, where the persons engage hand to hand. Actively, to fight. Figuratively, to engage.

COMBAT, f. [combat, Fr.] a contest; a battle with another; sometimes restrained to a duel, generally applied to an engagement between two persons; a duel. Figuratively, opposition, or struggle.

CO'MBATANT, f. [combattant, Fr.] he that fights. Figuratively, a champion or stickler for any opinion.

CO'MBER, [kömer] f. one who passeth wool through the comb, and prepareth it for the spinner.

COMBINA'TION, f. an union of private persons for some peculiar purpose. Figuratively, union of qualities or bodies; mixture. Union or association, applied to ideas. In Mathematics, the variation or different order in which any number of things may be disposed.

To COMB'NE, v. a. to join together. Figuratively, to link together in unity, affection, or concord. Neuterly, to join together, applied to things. Figuratively, to unite in one body. To unite in friendship, applied to persons.

CO'MBLESS, [kömlefsi] a. wanting a comb, without a comb, applied to a cock.

COMBU'ST, part. burnt. In Astronomy, applied to a planet, when eight one-half degrees distant from the sun.

COMBU'STIBLE, a. that which may be burnt, or that which easily catches fire.

COMBU'STIBLENESS, f. the quality of catching fire easily.

COMBU'STION, [kombüst-yon] f. [combustion, Fr.] the burning of several things together; conflagration; consumption by fire. Figuratively, confusion, noise, hurry, commotion, produced by restless minds, either in moral or political affairs.

To COME, v. n. [preter I came, or have come, participle come] [coman, Sax.] to move from a distant to a nearer situation, either to a thing or person; to approach, draw near to, or advance towards. To proceed; to issue. To become. To become present, and no longer absent. To happen; to fall out. To come about, to come to pass; to fall out. To change; to come round. To come after, to follow. To come in, to enter. To comply; to yield; to hold out no longer. To arrive at a port or place of rendezvous. To become modish, or brought into use. To be an ingredient; to make part of a composition. To come into, to join with, to bring help. To comply with; to agree to. To come over, to repeat an act. To revoit. To rise in distillation. To come out, to be made publick. To be discovered. To come out with, to give a vent to; to let fly. To come abroad, to be publickly known or published. To come to, to arrive at or attain. To follow as a consequence; to happen. To come again, to come a second time; to return. To come at, to reach. To come by, to obtain, gain, or acquire. To come in for, to be early enough to obtain a share of any thing, alluding to the custom in hunting, where those dogs that are slow come in for no share of the game. To come near, to approach; to resemble. To come off, to escape; to quit or fall from, or leave. To come out, to thrive, or grow; to advance to combat. To come to, to agree or consent; to amount to, applied to arithmetic. To come to himself, &c. to recover from a fright, or a fit. To come up with, to overtake. To come upon, to invade, attack, or seize unexpectedly.

or

COME, interjection, implying an exhortation to attention, dispatch, and courage, when said singly; but when repeated, it implies a grant, permission, supposition, or a transition from the topic which preceded, to avoid giving offence.

COME, ad. means when it shall come. To come, infamously; not present.

COM'EDIAN, f. [comedian, Fr.] one who acts on the stage. In a restrained sense, applied only to one who appears in a comedy; but in some loose sense, any actor.

COMEDY, f. [from comæd and oid, two Greek words signifying a village and a poem, because it was at first only a poem exhibited in villages] a dramatic piece, representing some interesting transaction, being an exact picture of human life, exposing the faults of private persons, in order to render them, ridiculous and universally avoided.

COMELINESS, f. grace; handsomeness joined with an appearance of dignity.

COMELY, a. handsome, graceful, applied to that appearance which excites reverence rather than love. Applied to things, that which is suitable to a person's age or condition, consistent with virtue, or agreeable to the rules of right reason.

COMELY, ad. in a graceful, becoming, and pleasing manner.

COMER, f. that which soon grows, or lies above ground, applied to plants. A visitor; a person who enters or settles in a place. To grow up one's self to the first comer, is to embrace any doctrine implicitly, and without examination.

COMET, f. [cometa, Lat.] in Astronomy, is opaque heavenly body, like the planets, moving in its proper orbit, which is very eccentric, having one of its foci in the center of the sun. It is distinguished not only by its size, but likewise by its appearance, from the stars, as being bearded, tailed, and haired; and when eastward of the sun, and its light precedes before; tailed when westward of the sun, and the train follows it; and haired when diametrically opposite to the sun, having the tail between it, and all its tail hid, emitting a few scattered rays. The orbits of comets approaching near to a right line, in the parts thereof they go so near the sun, that, according to Sir Isaac Newton's computation, their heat is 2000 times as great as that of red-hot iron. To this let it be added, from the same great author, that these bodies are so soon being such tremendous objects as they are esteemed to be by the vulgar, and lately pretended to be by atheists, that their atmospheres being dilated, rarefied, and diffused through the celestial regions, may be attracted down to the planets, become mingled with their atmospheres, and by that means supply the deficiencies which would otherwise, by continual exhausting, affect this and other planets; so that their revolutions, instead of being looked on as the harbingers of terror and calamity, should rather be esteemed a friendly and benevolent visit, wherein they bestow such presents to every planet they pass by as are requisite to prevent its decay, and supply its inhabitants with such things as are necessary to their existence.

COMETA'RIUM, f. [Lat.] a mathematical machine, representing the method of a comet's revolution.

COMETARY, or COME'TIC, a. that which belongs or relates to a comet.

COM'FIT, f. [comfit, Fr.] a dry sweetmeat; any vegetable preserved by boiling it in sugar, and drying it afterwards.

To CO'MFORT, v. a. [comforto, low Lat.] to strengthen, excite, invigorate, enliven, or make a person undertake a thing boldly by persuasions; to make a person grow cheerful that is in sorrow, by advice and arguments.

CO'MFORT, f. support, assistance, or countenance; consolation, or support under calamity and danger.

CO'MFORTABLE, a. receiving relief or support in distress; affording consolation; having the power of lessening distress.

CO'MFORTABLY, ad. in a cheerful manner; in a manner free from dejection or despair.

CO'MFORTER, f. one that diminishes or lessens the degree of a person's sorrow under misfortunes; one who strengthens and supports the mind in misery or danger.

CO'MFORTLESS, a. without comfort, without any thing to lighten the burden, or allay the sensation of misfortunes; applied both to persons and things.

CO'MIC, or CO'MICAL, a. [comique, Fr.] relating to, or fit for comedy; ridiculous, or causing mirth, either from an unusual assemblage of ideas seemingly inconsistent, or antic gestures, and polite raillery.

CO'MICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to raise mirth, either by an association or assemblage of ideas seemingly inconsistent; by polite or good-natured raillery, or by some odd and antic gesture.

CO'MICALNESS, f. that quality by which a thing appears odd or ridiculous, and raises mirth in the mind.

CO'MING, f. the act of moving towards a person or place; approach; presence, or arrival; the presence of a thing, which was absent some time before. Coming-in, the product of a person's estate, pension, salary, or business.

CO'MING, part. applied to the inclination, propensity or affection; fond; forward; easily complying. Applied to time, something not present; something future.

COM'ITIAL, [comitibal] a. [comitialis, Lat.] relating or belonging to an assembly, applied peculiarly to that of the Romans.

COMMA, f. [comma, Gr.] in Grammar, a pause, or stop marked thus (,) used to distinguish such members of a discourse from each other wherein there is a verb, and nominative case, several nouns adjective, or substantives, in the same sentence, not joined by a conjunction, and where the sense is not complete. In Music, the smallest of all the sensible intervals of tone, seldom used but in theory, to shew the justness of the concords, and is about the ninth part of a tone, or interval, whereby a perfect semitone, or tone surpasses an imperfect one. In Natural History, a very beautiful moth, so called from its having a white mark on one of its wings, in the form of this point.

To COMMAND, v. a. [commander, Fr.] to order, including the idea of authority; to keep in subjection; to oblige a person to perform any thing. Figuratively, to arrogate or claim by mere force; to overlook; to be situated above any place, so as to be able to look into, or annoy it.

COMMAND, f. authority or power. Figuratively, the exercise of authority, or enforcing obedience. In a Military sense, the power of overlooking, and taking or annoying any place.

COMMANDER, f. he that has the direction of, or authority over others. In a Military sense, a leader, chief, or officer. A paving beetle, or rammer. In Surgery, an instrument, called likewise a glossocomium, used in most tough, strong bodies, where a laxation has been of long continuance.

COMMANDERY, f. the exercise of a command, or the office of a commander. In History, applied to a benefice or fixed revenue belonging to a military order, and conferred on ancient knights, who had done some considerable service to the order.

COMMANDMENT, f. [commandement, Fr.] an express order to do or abstain from any thing. When it orders any thing to be done, it is named a positive command; but when it forbids the doing a thing, it is then termed a negative command.

COMMATERIA'LITY, f. of the same matter or substance with another; resemblance to something in its matter or substance.

COMMEMORABLE, a. [from commemoro, Lat.] deserving to be mentioned with honour and reverence; worthy to be celebrated and kept in remembrance.

COMMEMORATION, f. the doing something in order to preserve the remembrance of any person or thing.

COMMEMORATIVE, a. tending to preserve the remembrance of any person or thing.

To COMME'NCE, v. n. [commencer, Fr.] to begin; to take its beginning; to assume a new character which it never did before, applied to persons and things.

To COMME'ND, v. a. [commendo, Lat.] to represent a person as possessed of those virtues that demand notice, approbation and esteem; to praise; to deliver or entrust with confidence, and full assurance of protection. To desire to be mentioned in a kind and respectful manner.

COMME'NDABLE, a. worthy of praise.

COMME'NDABLY, ad. in a manner worthy of commendation.

COMME'NDAM, f. [low Lat.] in Canons, a vacant benefice which is given to a person to supply till some other person is presented or named to it.

COMME'NDATARY, f. one who holds a living on commendam.

COMMENDATION, f. a favourable representation of a person's good qualities; praise; recommendation; a message of kindness.

COMME'NDATORY, a. that which commands or engages notice, esteem, and approbation, from a favourable display of good qualities; containing praises.

COMME'NDER, f. one who praises, or displays the virtues of another, in order to render him esteemed and beloved.

COMMENSA'LITY, f. [from commensalis, Lat.] the act of eating, or sitting to eat, at the same table with another.

COMMENSURAB'ILITY, f. the capacity of being measured by some common measure or standard.

COMME'NSURABLE, a. [com and mensura, Lat.] in Geometry, having some common aliquot part, or which may be measured by some common measure so as to leave no remainder. Thus a foot and a yard are commensurable, because an inch taken 12 times is a foot, and 36 times a yard.

To COMME'NSURATE, v. a. [com and mensura, Lat.] to reduce to one common measure; to extend as far as.

COMME'NSURATE, part. reducible to one common measure; equal; proportionate.

COMME'NSURATELY, ad. a capacity of measuring or being measured by another equally extensive.

COMMENSURA'TION, f. the reduction of, or measuring a thing by some common measure; proportion.

To COMMENT, v. n. [commentor, Lat.] to write notes; to explain, interpret, or expound.

COMMENT, f. notes or annotations, in order to explain an author; exposition; explanation; remark.

COMMENTARY, f. [commentarius, Lat.] a continued and critical explanation of the sense of an author.

COMMENTATOR, f. one who writes remarks, notes, or explanations of an author.

COMMENTITIOUS, [commentitiosus] a. [commentitius, Lat.] invented; forged; fictitious; without any existence, but in the brain.

COMMERCE, f. [commercium, Lat.] the exchange of commodities, or the buying and selling merchandize both at home and abroad, in order to gain profit, and increase the conveniences of life. Commerce is used figuratively.

for intercourse of any kind. SYNON. Traffic relates more to the exchange of merchandize; trade and commerce, to that of buying and selling; with this difference, that trade seems to imply the manufacturing and vending of merchandize within ourselves; commerce, negotiating with other countries.

COMMERCIAL, a. belonging or relating to trade or commerce.

To COMMIGRATE, v. a. [con and migro, Lat.] to move in a body, or with one common consent, from one country to another.

COMMIGRATION, f. the removal of a large number of persons or animals from one country to another.

COMMINATION, f. [comminatio, Lat.] a threat; a declaration or denunciation of punishment or vengeance for any crime: an office of the church, containing the threatenings denounced against any breach of the divine laws, and recited on Ash-Wednesday.

COMMINATORY, a. applied to laws, a clause in any law or edict, importing a punishment for the breach or violation of it.

COMMINUIBLE, a. [from comminuo, Lat.] that which may be broken, powdered, or reduced into small parts.

To COMMINUTE, v. a. [comminuo, Lat.] to pulverize; to grind; to break into small parts.

COMMINUTION, f. the act of reducing into small particles, by grinding, powdering, breaking or chewing.

COMMI'SERABLE, a. [con and miseror, Lat.] that which deserves, or is the object of, pity and relief; shewing pity and compassion to persons in distress.

To COMMI'SERATE, v. a. [con and miseror, Lat.] to pity; to compassionate. SYNON. We naturally commiserate the sorrows of one we love. We may pity, and yet not have compassion. We may have both pity and compassion, yet not commiserate.

COMMI'SERATION, f. [commiseratio, Lat.] a tender, sympathizing, and affectionate regard for those in distress.

COMMISSARY, f. an officer commissioned occasionally for a certain purpose; a delegate or deputy. In Church Government, one who exercises ecclesiastical jurisdiction in such places as are at a considerable distance from the bishop's see. In the army, a commissary-general of the musters, is one who takes a view of the numbers or strength of every regiment, sees that the horse are well mounted, and that the men be well clothed and accounted. Commissary-general of provisions, furnishes the army with every thing necessary for its food.

COMMISSION, f. [commissio, Lat.] the act of entrusting any thing; a trust; a warrant by which any trust is held. In Common Law, the warrant, or letters patent, which all persons, exercising jurisdiction, have to empower them to hear and determine any cause or suit; as Commission of the judges, &c. There are a great variety of Commissions issued from the crowns. In Trade, it sometimes means the power of acting for another, and sometimes the premium or reward a person receives for so doing, which is $\frac{1}{2}$, 1, 2, 3, or more per cent. according to the nature or circumstances of the affair.

To COMMISSION, v. a. to authorize, empower, appoint, or give a person authority to discharge an office.

COMMISSIONER, f. one whose name is inserted in any warrant for the discharge of a public office; one empowered to act in a particular quality by patent or warrant.

COMMI'SSURE, f. [commissura, Lat.] a joint; or a place where two bodies, or the parts of an animal body, are joined together.

To COMMIT, v. a. [committo, Lat.] to entrust, or trust a person; to send a person to prison; to perform, act, or perpetrate some crime or fault.

COMMITMENT, f. the act of sending a person to prison.

COMMITTEE, f. a number of persons to whom the consideration or examination of an affair is referred.

COMMITTIBLE, a. liable to be committed; an object worthy of imprisonment.

To COMMI'X, v. a. [commisco, Lat.] to mix, blend, or join several things together, or into one mass.

COMMI'XION, COMMI'XTION, or COMMI'XTURE, f. mixture; incorporation.

COMMO'DE, f. [Fr.] the head-dress of a woman.

COMMO'DIOUS, a. [commodus, Lat.] the suitability of a thing to any particular purpose; free from any hindrance or obstruction; convenient; seasonable, or suitable; spacious, well contrived, applied to building.

COMMO'DIOUSLY, ad. in a convenient manner, applied to situation. Enjoying the necessaries and comforts of life, applied to condition. Fitted or suited to any particular end or view.

COMMO'DIOUSNESS, f. the fitness or suitability of a thing to any end; advantage.

COMMO'DITY, f. [commoditas, Lat.] convenience, profit, interest, or advantage. In Commerce, wares, goods, merchandize, or that which is the object of trade.

COMMO'DORE, f. in the Navy, an under-admiral, or person commissioned to command a squadron of ships. When three or more sail of ships are in company, the eldest captain assumes this post, and has this title.

COMMON, a. [communis, Lat.] that which is enjoyed by different species of animals; belonging equally to more than one; the property of no person; without a proprietor or possessor; vulgar; mean; trifling; frequently seen; usual; easy to be had; of little value; general; public; intended for the uses of every body. In Grammar, applied to such verbs as signify both action and passion. Applied to nouns, such as signify both sexes under one term, as parent signifies both father and mother.

COMMON, f. an open field, free for any inhabitant inhabitant of the lordship wherein the common lies to graze his cattle in.

To COMMON, v. n. to enjoy a right of pasture in an open field in conjunction with others.

COMMONABLE, a. that which may become open or free, applied to ground.

COMMONAGE, f. in Law, the right of pasture in a common; or fishing in another person's water; or of digging turf in the ground of another; the joint right of using any thing equally and together with others.

COMMONALTY, f. [communauté, Fr.] the people of the lower rank; the common people. Figuratively, the major part or bulk of mankind.

COMMONER, f. one of the common people; one of low rank; a person who bears no titles; one who has a seat in the house of commons. In Law, one who has a joint right to pasture, &c. in an open field. In the University, one who wears a square cap with a tassel when under graduate, is of a rank between a battler and gentleman commoner, and eats at the common table.

COMMON-LAW, f. customs, which by long prescription have obtained the force of law, and were received as laws in England, before any statute: was enacted in parliament to alter the same; and are now distinguished from the statute law.

COMMONLY, ad. generally; frequently; usually.

COMMONITION, f. [communio, Lat.] advice; warning.

COMMONNESS, f. frequency, or repetition; participation among, or application to several.

To COMMON-PLACE, v. a. to reduce to, and transcribe under general heads.

COMMON-PLACE-BOOK, f. a book wherein things or extracts are recorded alphabetically, or reduced to general heads, in order to assist a person's memory, or enable him to supply himself with any curious observation on any topic he wants.

COMMON-PLEAS, f. the king's court, now held at Westminster, but formerly moveable; it was erected at the time that Henry III. granted the great charter. In personal and mixed actions, it has a concurrent jurisdiction with the King's Bench; but has no cognizance of the pleas of the crown; the actions come hither by originals: the chief judge is called, Lord Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas, who is assisted by three other judges, all of them created by letters patent.

COMMON-PRAYER, f. is the liturgy, or forms of service, used by the church of England.

COMMONS, f. the vulgar; the lower sort of people; the lower house of parliament, consisting of members chosen by the people. A portion of food or victuals usually eaten at one meal, so called at the universities.

COMMONWEAL, or COMMONWEALTH, [kommonwél, or kommonwélth] f.

in its primary sense, used in Law, the common good; a regular form of government or polity, established by common consent; a form of government in which the supreme power is lodged in the people; a republic; a democracy.

COMMORANT, a. resident, dwelling, tarrying, sojourning.

COMMOTION, f. [commotio, Lat.] tumult, disturbance, sedition, disorder, or confusion, arising from the turbulent dispositions of its members, applied to a state. Figuratively, inward confusion or violence; disorder of mind; perturbation; a violent motion or agitation.

To COMMUNE, v. n. [communio, Lat.] to converse; to talk together; to impart sentiments mutually to each other.

COMMUNICABILITY, f. an open or generous disposition, whereby a person is willing to impart his sentiments to another; the possibility or power of being imparted or communicated to another.

COMMUNICABLE, a. [communicable, Fr.] that which may become the property of, or be related or imparted to, another; used with to.

COMMUNICANT, f. one who partakes of the blessed sacrament.

To COMMUNICATE, v. a. [communico, Lat.] to impart to another; to make another a joint partaker with ourselves; to confer or bestow a possession; to discover one's sentiments or knowledge to another. Neuterly, in Theology, to receive the sacrament of the Lord's Supper; to be connected or joined; to have something common with another.

COMMUNICATIO, f. [communication, Fr.] applied to science, the act of imparting discovering, or revealing. A common inlet or passage, leading from one place to another; the mutual intelligence kept up between persons or places; a conversation, conference, or imparting a person's sentiments in mutual discourse.

COMMUNICATIVENESS, f. readiness, of imparting benefits or knowledge to others.

COMMUNION, f. [communio, Lat.] intercourse; fellowship; common possession; a partaking of the same thing. In Divinity, the common or public celebration of the Lord's Supper.

COMMUNITY, f. [communitas, Lat.] a government; a body of people united together in the same form of government: common participation, possession, or enjoyment, opposed to approbation.

COMMUTABILITY, f. the quality of being the proper object of interchange, or of being capable of exchange.

COMMUTABLE, a. an alteration or change of disposition or sentiment, applied to the mind. A change or form of quality, applied to bodies; the giving one thing in exchange for another; the act of substituting a pecuniary for a corporeal punishment; ransom, or redemption.

COMMUTATION, f. [commutatio, Lat.] change change, alteration, bartering; the exchanging a corporeal for a pecuniary punishment.

COMMUTATIVE, a. [from commuto, Lat.] relating to exchange. Commutative justice is that which is exercised in trade, and is opposed to fraud or extortion in buying or selling.

To COMMUTE, v. a. [from commuto, Lat.] to exchange; to put one thing in the place of another; to buy off; or ransom.

COMPACT, f. [from patium, Lat.] a bargain of agreement entered into between two or more parties; a contract.

To COMPACT, v. a. to unite or join together closely; to consolidate, or render solid by pressing the particles of a body close together; to lease, or enter into a bargain.

COMPACT, a. close, dense, and heavy; having few pores, and those very small. Applied to Style, concise, or containing much matter in few words.

COMPACTLY, ad. in a close, neat manner.

COMPACTNESS, f. firmness; hardness; density.

COMPACTURE, f. the manner in which any thing is joined; a joint or joining.

COMPAGES, f. [Lat.] a composition or system wherein several things are joined or united.

COMPAGINATION, f. union, or joining several parts together.

COMPANION, f. [from compagnon, Fr.] one with whom a person frequently converses, or with whom he is generally seen.

COMPANIONABLE, a. fit for the company of others; agreeable; sociable.

COMPANIONSHIP, f. a body of men forming one company; fellowship or association.

COMPANY, f. [from compagnie, Fr.] several persons assembled in the same room, either for conversation or mutual entertainment; several persons united together to carry on one general and common design; a number of persons united or incorporated by some charter; a body corporate; a corporation. In War, a small body of infantry under one captain. In the Marine, a number of merchant ships going the same voyage, and mutually bound, by charter-party, to stand by and defend each other. To bear or keep company, is to go with a person, or to visit him often.

To COMPANY, v. a. to be often in a person's presence; to go or walk with a person; to attend; to associate with.

COMPARABLE, a. worthy to be compared; equal to, or resembling.

COMPARABLY, ad. in such a manner as is worthy of comparison; in a comparative manner.

COMPARATIVE, a. [from comparativus, Lat.] that which results merely from a comparison with another; that which has the power of forming a comparison, or comparing two things or ideas together, in order to find out their resemblance or difference. In Grammar, the comparative degree, wherein two or more ideas are compared together, and the difference either in excess or diminution is expressed.

COMPARATIVELY, ad. in a comparative manner; according to the distance or likeness found from comparing.

To COMPARARE, v. a. [from comparo, Lat.] to bring two or more things together, in order, by an inspection of them, to find in what they agree or differ, to apply one thing as the measure of another; to liken. When the comparison intends only an illustration of a thing by its likeness, then in or unto is used before the thing brought by way of illustration. But when persons or things are compared together, to discover in what they agree or disagree, or their relative proportions, then with is used.

COMPARE, f. the state of being compared; likeness; estimate or judgment formed on comparison.

COMPARISON, f. [from comparison, Fr.] judging of the difference of two things, by examining, or comparing them together. The state of a thing compared. In Grammar, the formation of an adjective through the various degrees in which the signification of the positive is heightened or diminished, as soft, softer, softest.

To COMPART, v. a. [from compartir, Fr.] to divide, or lay down a general design or plan, in all its different parts, divisions, or subdivisions.

COMPARTMENT, f. [from compartment, Fr.] a design composed of different figures, disposed with symmetry, as ornaments of a parterre, ceiling, or picture; a division of a picture, or design.

COMPARTITION, f. the act of comparing or laying down the several parts or divisions of any plan or design. Figuratively, the part of any plan. In Architecture, the useful and graceful distribution of the whole ground-plot of an edifice into rooms of office, of reception and entertainment.

COMPARTMENT, f. a division, or separate part of a design.

To COMPASS, v. a. [from compasser, Fr.] to surround; to inclose; to stand round in a ring; to besiege or block up; to grasp or inclose in the arms; to obtain, attain, secure, or have.

COMPASS, f. orbit; revolution; extent or limit; inclosure. In Music, the power of the voice, or of an instrument, to sound any particular note. An instrument consisting of a box, including a magnetical needle, which points towards the North, and is used by mariners to steer their ships. Compasser, a mathematical instrument, consisting of two branches, fastened together at the top by a pivot, about which they move as on a centre, and are used in taking distances, drawing circles, and in working problems in the mathematics.

COMPASSION, f. [from compassion, Fr.] a disposition of mind which inclines us to feel the miseries of others with the same pain and sorrow as if they were our own.

COMPASSIONATE, a. easily affected with with sorrow or pain, on viewing the calamities and distresses of others.

To COMPASSIONATE, v. a. to pity, and be moved with sorrow at the sufferings of others.

COMPASSIONATELY, ad. in a pitying, tender, sympathizing manner.

COMPATIBILITY, f. consistency; the power or possibility of coexisting in the same subject, or at the same time; agreement.

COMPATIBLE, a. consistent with; fit for; suitable to; becoming or agreeable to.

COMPATIBLENESS, f. the quality of agreeing with.

COMPATIBLY, ad. fitly; suitably, so as to be applicable to the same subject, and coexist in it at the same time.

COMPATRIOT, f. [compatriote, Fr.] one of the same country.

COMPEER, f. [compère, Fr.] an equal in rank; an associate or companion.

To COMPEER, v. a. to be equal with in quality; to match.

To COMPEL v. a. [compello, Lat.] to make a person do or refrain from some act by force; to extort by force, used with from, before the person suffering the violence.

COMPELLABLE, a. that which may be forced.

COMPELLER, f. he that makes a person do or refrain from an action by force.

COMPEND, f. [compendium, Lat.] in Literature, signifies abridgment, epitome, extract, or summary.

COMPENDIOUS, a. concise; brief, or containing much in few words, applied to style. Near or short, applied to travelling.

COMPENDIOUSLY, ad. in a short or concise manner.

COMPENDIOUSNESS, f. brevity, or shortness; the quality of containing much in a short space, or performing much in a short time.

COMPENDIUM, f. [Lat.] an abridgment of a discourse; a short or concise method of writing on any subject.

COMPENSABLE, a. [from compensa, Lat.] that for which an equivalent may be made; that which may be recompensed.

To COMPENSATE, v. a. [compensa, Lat.] to make amends for; to countervail; to counterbalance.

COMPENSATION, f. amends; recompense; a thing of equal value to another; an equivalent.

COMPENSATIVE, a. that which compensates.

COMPETENCE, or COMPETENCY, f. [from competo, Lat.] such a quantity as is just sufficient, without superfluities; such a fortune as is sufficient to supply the necessaries of life, and is between poverty on one side, and affluence on the other.

COMPETENT, a. [competens, Lat.] suitable; proportionable; sufficient in numbers, quantity, or power, to any undertaking: moderate; qualified or fit for; consistent with; applicable to.

COMPETENTLY, ad. properly; sufficiently; without excess or defect.

COMPETITION, f. the endeavouring to gain something in opposition to another; rivalry; contest; opposition.

COMPETITOR, f. [con and petitor, Lat.] one who claims or endeavours to gain a thing in opposition to another; a rival.

COMPILATION, f. [from compilo, Lat.] a collection from various authors; an assemblage or mass of things heaped together.

To COMPILE, v. a. [compilo, Lat.] to form or collect from various authors. Figuratively, to write; compose; to form from an assemblage of various circumstances or incidents.

COMPILER, f. a collector; one who composes a work from various authors.

COMPLACENCE, or COMPLACENCY, f. [complacentia, Lat.] a satisfaction arising in the mind on viewing some action which is worthy of its approbation; or in contemplating something, which, on account of its amiableness, produces joy; the cause of joy, of rational pleasure and satisfaction; a genteel address, which bespeaks approbation, and causes pleasure; civility, complaisance, politeness, applied to behaviour.

COMPLACENT, a. [complacens, Lat.] affable; kind; civil; polite.

To COMPLAIN, v. n. [complaigndre, Fr.] to find fault with; to charge a person with having been guilty of some crime. Actively, to weep, lament, or bewail.

COMPLAIN, f. [complainte, Fr.] a mournful representation of injuries or pain; grief; the act of finding fault with any thing. Figuratively, the cause of dissatisfaction, or complaining.

COMPLAISANCE, f. [complaisance, Fr.] a civil behaviour, whereby a person complies with the inclinations of another, in order to insinuate himself into his esteem and favour. SYNON. Complaisance is the characteristic of the lover; politens of the courtier; but to be well-bred denotes the gentleman.

COMPLAISANT, a. [complaisant, Fr.] civil; polite; endeavouring to please.

COMPLAISANTLY, ad. in a civil, kind, condescending, and polite manner.

To COMPLAIN, or COMPLAINE, v. a. [complains, Lat.] to level, or make smooth and flat.

COMPLAIN, or COMPLAINE, v. a. [complains, Lat.] to level, or make smooth and flat.

To COMPLAIN, or COMPLAINE, v. a. [complains, Lat.] to level, or make smooth and flat.

COMPLEMENT, f. [complementum, Lat.] that which perfects or completes any thing; a full, complete, or requisite quantity or number.

In Geometry, applied to the arch of a circle, what it wants of 90 degrees. In Navigation, applied to a course, what it wants of 90 deg. 8 points, or a quarter of a circle. In Astronomy, the distance of a star from the zenith.

COMPLETE a. [completus, Lat.] finished; perfect, wanting nothing; without defects; ended; concluded. SYNON. We may easily make a thing complete, and with much pains swift

safe it; after all, it may not be perfect.

To COMPLETE, v. a. to perfect; to finish; to answer perfectly.

COMPLETELY, ad. perfectly; fully; in a perfect manner.

COMPLETENESS, f. perfection; a quality which implies a thing to be finished without defect.

COMPLETION, f. [completus, Lat.] the existence of some circumstance predicted, whereby every part of a prophecy is fulfilled; accomplishment; the greatest height, or perfect state.

COMPLEX, f. [complexus, Lat.] a collection, summary, or the whole of a thing; consisting of several parts.

COMPLEX, a. [complexus, Lat.] compounded; consisting of several parts; including several particulars.

COMPLEXEDNESS, f. composition; containing a variety of circumstances or particulars.

COMPLEXION, f. [complexio, Lat.] the enclosure or involution of one thing in another; the colour of the outward parts of the body, particularly that of the countenance. In Physic, the temperature, habit or disposition of the body. A sanguine complexion is that of hot or warm persons, and is so called from the blood's being thought to be more predominant in such.

COMPLEXIONAL, a. depending merely on the habit or temperature of the body.

COMPLEXIONALLY, ad. by complexion, or by the habit of the body, or predominancy of some of the fluids.

COMPLEXLY, ad. in a compound manner; consisting of several particulars, opposed to simply.

COMPLEXNESS, f. the state or quality of being composed of several particulars different from each other.

COMPLEXURE, f. the compounding or uniting of one thing with others.

COMPLIANCE, f. the yielding consent to a thing proposed; the ready performance of a thing requested; condescending so far to the humours of a person, as to do every thing he can desire, or expect; condescension.

COMPLIANT, part. yielding to the touch; bending with any force; yielding, condescending.

To COMPLICATE, v. a. [complico, Lat.] to join or add one thing or action to another; to compose or make a whole, by the uniting of several things different from each other.

COMPLICATE, a. compounded of a variety of parts.

COMPLICATION, f. the joining, mixing, blending, or involving several things in one another; a whole, consisting of several things.

COMPLIMENT, f. [compliment, Fr.] a profession of great esteem, or an expression of approbation or praise, merely from ceremony and politeness; a mere ceremonious expression.

To COMPLIMENT, v. a. to make use of expressions of respect, from a bare principle of good behavior and ceremony; to speak in praise of a thing or person, contrary to one's real sentiments and opinion.

COMPLIMENTAL, a. expressive of respect and civility.

COMPLIMENTALLY, ad. in a mere ceremonious manner.

COMPLIMENTER, f. a person abounding in compliments.

COMPLINE, f. [complaine, Fr.] the last act of worship at night.

COMPLOT, f. [complot, Fr.] a plot, or ill design, concerted and carried on by two or more persons; a conspiracy or confederacy.

To COMPLOT, v. a. [complotter, Fr.] to join in a design; to bring about an ill design.

COMPLOTTTER, f. one who joins in a plot; a conspirator.

To COMPLY, v. n. [complier, Fr.] to consent to any request; to suit one's self to a person's humours; to yield to.

COMPONENT part. that which composes, or contributes to the forming of a compound body.

To COMPOR'T, v. n. [comporter, Fr.] to suit; to agree with; to act agreeably or suitably to.

COMPOR'T, f. behaviour; manner of looking and acting; conduct.

COMPOR'TABLE, a. consistency, opposed to contradictory.

COMPOR'TMENT, f. behaviour, or conduct.

To COMPOSE, [composere. The f in this word and its derivatives are founded like z] to form a mass, consisting of several things joined together; to form or consist of; to place in a proper form; to join words together in a discourse with art and care; to reduce to a state of calmness, rest, and quiet; to reconcile. In Music, to set any thing to tune; to form a proper collection, order, or disposition of the notes.

COMPOSED, part. calm, serious, sedate, undisturbed.

COMPOSEDLY, ad. in a calm, serious, serene, or sedate manner; free from any perturbation or confusion.

COMPOSEDNESS, f. sedateness; calmness; tranquillity of mind, a freedom from any disturbance or disorder, applied to the mind.

COMPOSER, f. an author or writer on any subject; one that adapts or sets words to music; or forms a tune from a peculiar assemblage of the notes of music.

COMPOSITE, a. [compositus, Lat.] in Architecture, the last of the five orders of columns, so called because its capital is framed from those of different orders, and termed likewise the Italian or Roman order.

COMPOSITION, f. [compositio, Lat.] the act of forming a whole from parts different from each other; the act of combining simple ideas together, in order to form a complex one; the distribution or orderly placing of the several parts of a plan, design, or picture; the work or production of an author; suitableness, or adapting to any particular sentiment, applied to gesture. An agreement; contract; a reconciliation, or terms on which differences or quarrels are settled. In Commerce, a contract, whereby a creditor accepts a part of his debt in compensation for the whole. In Grammar, forming a sentence by joining words together, or prefixing a particle to a word, to increase, diminish, or alter its signification. In Music, the art of disposing notes, so as to form tunes or airs.

COMPOSITOR, f. [compositus, Fr.] in Printing, the person who works at the case, sets up the forms, and prepares the types, by arranging them properly therein, for printing.

COMPOST, f. [compositum, Lat.] a mixture of different soils together, in order to make a manure for assisting the natural earth, so as to amend, improve, and render it more fruitful.

To COMPOST, v. a. to manure; to enrich, or improve ground by a mixture of different soils.

COMPOSITE, [compositus] f. the writing or inditing a work; composition or a production, applied to books. Arrangement, mixture, or order; frame; make; temperament; sedateness. Adjustment, or reconciliation, applied to difference or quarrels.

COMPOTATION, f. [compotatio, Lat.] the act of drinking together.

To COMPOUND, v. a. [compono, Lat.] to mingle several ingredients together; to form by uniting several things together; to place together in different lights, attitudes, or positions; to produce by being united; to reconcile, or put an end to a difference or quarrel, by concessions, or compliance with the demands of an adversary; to pay a part of a debt, for want of a capacity to discharge the whole, and to be cleared, for that reason, from any further demand; to agree on certain terms; to contract.

COMPOUND, a. formed or produced from several ingredients, opposed to simple. In Grammar, formed by joining two or more words.

COMPOUNDABLE, a. that which may be united together so as to form one mass; capable of being united.

COMPOUNDER, f. one who endeavours to bring adverse parties to an agreement; a reconciler. In the University, a person of superior rank or fortune, who is allowed to commute for residence, by paying extraordinary fines.

To COMPREHEND, v. a. [comprehendo, Lat.] to comprise, include, contain, or imply; to have an adequate, clear, and determinate idea of any doctrine or proposition. SYNON. A lover understands the language of the passions. A learned man comprehends the metaphysical questions of the schools. An architect conceives the plan and economy of buildings.

COMPREHENSIBLE, a. [comprehensibilis, Fr.] capable of being perfectly and clearly known.

COMPREHENSIBLY, ad. in a large extent; applied to the acceptance of words.

COMPREHENSION, f. [comprehensio, Lat.] the act or quality of comprising or containing; a summary compendium or abstract; capacity, or the power of the mind to admit several ideas at once.

COMPREHENSIVE, a. able to understand many things at once; comprising much in a narrow compass; extensive.

COMPREHENSIVELY, ad. in a compendious or concise manner.

COMPREHENSIVENESS, f. the quality of including much in a narrow compass.

To COMPRESS, v. a. [compressus, Lat.] to reduce into a narrower compass by force; to squeeze closer together.

COMPRESS, f. [compressus, Lat.] in Chirurgery, a bolster formed of linen cloth, folded in several doubles, laid under a bandage, to prevent a wound from bleeding or swelling; or to retain the remedies applied to it.

COMPRESSIBILITY, f. the quality of being reduced by force into a narrower compass.

COMPRESSIBLE, a. capable of being reduced by force into a narrower compass.

COMPRESSION, f. [compressio, Lat.] the action of bringing the particles of a body nearer together by external force, and thereby decreasing its bulk or dimension, the act of pressing together.

COMPRESSURE, f. the act or force of a body pressing upon another.

To COMPRISE, [comprize] v. a. [compris, Fr.] to contain; to include; to comprehend.

COMPROBATION, f. [comprobatio, Lat.] confirming by a joint testimony of two or more persons.

COMPROMISE, [compromise] f. [compromissum, Lat.] a mutual promise of one or more parties to refer the determination of a dispute or controversy to the arbitration or decision of one or more persons; a compact or bargain, in which some concessions or compliances are made on each side.

To COMPROMISE, [compromize] v. a. to settle, or put an end to a dispute or claim by mutual concessions.

To COMPT, [compt] v. a. [compter, Fr.] to make an estimate; to add up, or find the amount of a row of figures in arithmetic.

COMPTROLLER. See CONTROLLER.

COMPULSATORY, a. [from compulsor, Lat.] having the power of forcing a person against his will.

COMPUSSION, f. [compulsio, Lat.] the act of forcing a free agent to do or abstain from an action, contrary to the preference of his mind; a violence or force; the state of being compelled.

COMPULSIVE, a. [compulsus, Lat.] having the power to force a person to perform or abstain from an action; forcible.

COMPULSIVELY, ad. in a forcible manner; by compulsion; by force.

COMPULSIVENESS, f. the quality of obliging a person to perform or abstain from any act.

act contrary to his inclination.

COMPU LSORILY, ad. in a forcible manner; by force.

COMPU LSORY, a. [compulsaire, Fr.] having the power of commanding and forcing obedience.

COMPU NCTION, f. [compunctio, Lat.] the act of causing a pain, resembling that of pricking; irritation. In Divinity, an inward grief, caused by a consciousness of having offended God; sorrow; anxiety; contrition, or repentance; remorse.

COMPU NCTIVE, a. [compunctum, Lat.] causing remorse; causing sorrow from a consciousness of guilt.

COMPURGA TION, f. the clearing and justifying one man's innocence or veracity by the oath of another.

COMPURGA TOR, f. in Law, a person, who, by oath, clears and justifies another's innocence.

COMPU TABLE, a. capable of being numbered or estimated.

COMPU TATION, f. the act of estimating or counting the value of things; a calculation; a sum or number found by calculation, or an arithmetical process.

To COMPU TE, v. a. [computo, Lat.] to find by an arithmetical operation; to estimate; to reckon; to count.

COMPU TE, f. a reckoning; calculation; the amount or sum total.

COMPU TER, f. one who makes calculations; an accountant.

COMPU TIST, f. one skilled in numbers or calculations.

COMRADE, f. [camarade, Fr.] one who lives in the same house; a person who is jointly concerned with another in an undertaking.

CON, [Lat.] always joined or prefixed to words, signifying together, as concell; sometimes against, as contend; and sometimes something great or immense, as in conflagration. Before a vowel or an b, it drops the n, as in concord, co-habit; and before the labials, b and p, it is changed into an m, as in combustion, compare; and before l and m, it assumes the same letter, as in col-lect, con-mute.

CON, [an abbreviation of contra, Lat. spirit] is used to imply an opposition to any notion; or that a person is on the negative side of a question. New. con. for nemine contradicente, Lat. is used to signify that a motion is passed without any opposition.

To CON, v. a. [connan, Sax.] to know; to learn perfectly.

CONCAMERA TION, f. [concameratio, Lat.] an arch or vault; any thing formed like an arch.

To CONCA TENATE, v. a. [from catena, Lat.] to link together; to join or connect the parts of any thing, that they shall have mutual dependence on each other, like the link of a chain.

CONCATENA TION, f. a series of links. In Philosophy, a connexion of things, which mutually depend on each other, like the links of a chain.

CONCAVA TION, f. the act of scooping a thing, or making it of a hollow or concave form.

CONCA VE, [by some accented on the first syllable] a. [concavus, Lat.] hollow, applied to the inner surface of a circular body, such as that of an egg-shell, of an arch or a ball, opposed to convex. Empty, without any thing to fill the cavity.

CONCA VITY, f. the inner surface of a circular body.

CONCA VO-CONCAVE, a. hollow, or concave on both sides.

CONCA VO-CONVEX, a. hollow, or concave on one side, but convex or protuberant on the other.

CONCA VOUS, a. hollow without angles, applied to the inward surface of a round body.

CONCA VOUSLY, ad. resembling the hollow of the inner surface of a round body.

To CONCEAL, [conceal] v. a. [concelo, Lat.] to hide or keep any thing from the sight or knowledge of others; to cover; to keep secret. SYNON. It requires care and attention to conceal; art and cleverness to dissemble; labour and cunning to disguise.

CONCEALABLE, a. capable of being kept from the sight or knowledge of others; possible to be kept secret.

CONCEALEDNESS, f. the state of being hid or kept from the sight or knowledge of others.

CONCEALMENT, f. the act of hiding from the knowledge or sight of others; the state of being hid or kept secret; a place of retirement from the sight of others.

To CONCEDE, v. a. [concedo, Lat.] to grant or admit a principle or opinion as true; to let a point pass without any dispute.

CONCEIT, [conceit] f. [conceptus, Lat.] a conception, thought or idea; apprehension; understanding; strength of imagination; mere fancy; a pleasant thought or shining sentiment; an opinionative persuasion, or a high opinion of a person's judgment, which exposes him to ridicule; a word of reproach. Out of conceit with, a phrase of a person's being tired, or no longer being fond of a thing.

To CONCEIT, v. a. to fancy; to imagine; to think, generally implying an opinion that has not the sanction of reason.

CONCEITED, part. of a strong imagination; proud, or entertaining too high an opinion of one's abilities.

CONCEITEDLY, ad. in a scornful or whimsical manner; in a manner which discovers too high an opinion, or too great a fondness in a person of his own parts.

CONCEITEDNESS, f. opinionativeness.

CONCEIVABLE, [conceivable] a. that of which a person can form some idea; that which may be understood or believed.

CONCEIVABLENESS, f. the quality of being apprehended by the mind.

CONCEIVABLY, ad. in an intelligible manner; in such a manner as to be apprehended ended by the mind.

To CONCEIVE, [conceive] v. a. [conceivere, Fr.] to form in the mind; to imagine; to form an idea of; to comprehend; to think. Neuterly, to become pregnant.

To CONCENTRATE, v. a. [concentro, Lat.] to drive inwards, or towards the center; to drive into a narrow compass; to condense.

CENTRA'TION, f. forcing into a narrow compass, or driving towards the center; the highest degree of mixture, whereby two or more particles touch by a reception, or forcing one within the other.

To CONCENTRE, [concenter] v. n. [concenter, Fr.] to tend towards the same, or towards one common centre. Actively, to emit towards one centre.

CEN'TRIC, or CEN'TRICAL, a. having one common centre.

CONCEPTACLE, f. [conceptaculum, Lat.] that in which any thing is contained; a reservoir.

CONCEPTIBLE, a. that which may be apprehended or understood; intelligible.

CONCEPTION, f. [conceptio, Lat.] the act of conceiving or becoming pregnant; notion; apprehension; idea. Sentiments; purpose.

CONCEPTIOUS, [conceptivus] a. [conceptivus, Lat.] apt to conceive or become pregnant; fruitful.

To CONCERN, v. a. [concernere, Fr.] to relate, or belong to; to affect with some passion; to make uneasy, or sorrowful; to be of importance to; to be trusted or commissioned to act for a person, used with for. SYNON. Many people make themselves uneasy at that which does not in the least regard them; meddle with what no way concerns them; and at the same time are indifferent to those things which touch them nearly.

CONCERN, f. business; circumstances; engagement; interest; importance.

CONCERNING, prep. [though originally a participle, has the force of a preposition before a noun] about; of; relating to; with relation to.

CONCERNMENT, f. the thing in which a person is interested; an affair; business; influence; relation; importance; the engaging or taking part in an affair; emotion of mind.

To CONCERT, v. a. [concertare, Fr.] to take measures with another to bring a design to pass; to contrive.

CONCERT, f. a communication of designs; an establishment of measures to be pursued by persons engaged in one design. In Music, a number of musicians and fingers performing the same piece.

CONCERTATION, f. [concertatio, Lat.] strife, contest, or contention.

CONCERTATIVE, a. [concertativus, Lat.] quarrelsome; contentious.

CONCESSION, f. [concessio, Lat.] an act of granting or yielding; the thing granted or yielded.

CONCESSIONARY, a. given by indulgence, or allowance, or purely to terminate a dispute.

CONCESSIVELY, ad. by way of concession.

CONCHA, [konka] f. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the second or inward cavity of the auricle or external ear.

CONCHOID, [konkoid] f. in Geometry, a curve line always approaching nearer a straight line, to which it is inclined, but never meets it.

To CONCILIATE, v. a. [concilio, Lat.] to gain; to procure affection; to reconcile.

CONCILIATION, f. [conciliatio, Lat.] the act of procuring esteem; or reconciling.

CONCILIATOR, f. [conciliator, Lat.] one who makes peace between parties at variance; a reconciler.

CONCILIATORY, a. relating to reconciliation.

CONCINNITY, f. [concinnitas, Lat.] decency; fitness.

CONCINNOUS, a. [concinnus, Lat.] comely; becoming; pleasant; agreeable.

CONCISE, a. [concisus, Lat.] short; brief. CONCISELY, ad. in a brief, or short manner; in few words.

CONCISENESS, f. brevity; shortness.

CONCISION, f. [concisio, Lat.] cutting off; total destruction.

CONCITATION, f. [concitatio, Lat.] the act of exciting; agitation; or setting into a ferment or commotion.

CONCLAMATION, f. [conclamatio, Lat.] an outcry. Also, a custom among the Romans, of calling the dead party by his name, for eight days successively; on the ninth, concluding he was past recovery, they carried him forth and buried him.

CONCLAVE, f. [conclave, Lat.] a private or inner apartment; the place wherein the election is held for a pope; a meeting or assembly of all the cardinals that are at Rome for the election of a pope; a close or private assembly.

To CONCLUDE, v. a. [concludo, Lat.] to draw as a conclusion or inference from certain premises; to infer; to judge or determine; to end; to finish; to complete a period, applied to time; to acknowledge as truth.

CONCLUDENT, part. [concludens, Lat.] decisive; following by direct consequence; consequential.

CONCLUSIBLE, a. [conclusus, Lat.] following as a consequence from certain principles; to be inferred.

CONCLUSION, f. [conclusio, Lat.] determination, or putting an end to an affair or transaction; an opinion formed from experience, or from a collection of propositions; the event of experiments. SYNON. The sequel in part forms the story; the conclusion puts the finishing stroke to it.

CONCLUSIVE, a. [conclusus, Lat.] decisive, or that which puts an end to any contest.

CONCLUSIVELY, ad. in a determinate, positive, peremptory manner.

CONCLU.

CONCLUSIVENESS, f. the power of gaining assent, or forcing conviction; regular consequence; or following from any premises, according to the rules of logic.

CONCOAGULATION, f. [con and coagulo, Lat.] a coagulation or curdling, by which several bodies are joined in one mass.

To CONCOCT, v. a. [concoquo, Lat.] in Medicine, to digest in the stomach, so as to form into chyle; to purify; to heighten the quality of a thing by heat.

CONCOCTION, f. [concoctio, Lat.] in Medicine, the change which the food undergoes in the stomach ere it be converted into chyle; maturation, or heightening the powers or qualities of a thing by heat.

CONCOMITANCE, or CONCOMITANCY, f. [from concomitor, Lat.] united to; attending; inseparable from; accompanying.

CONCOMITANT, f. a companion; an attendant.

CONCOMITANTLY, ad. accompanying; in the manner of an attendant.

To CONCOMITATE, v. a. [concomitor, Lat.] to attend; to be joined inseparably with another.

CONCORD, f. [concordia, Lat.] agreement between persons and things; the suitability of one thing to another; peace; union, or mutual kindness. In Grammar, that part wherein words are made to agree in number, person, and gender, &c. In Music, the relation of two sounds, that are always agreeable to the ear, whether applied in succession or concurrence.

CONCORDANCE, f. [concordantia, Lat.] an agreement. A dictionary to the Holy Scriptures, wherein all the words are ranged alphabetically, and the various places where they occur referred to.

CONCORDANT, part. agreeing with; consistent with; correspondent. In Music, consisting of concords or harmonies.

CONCORDATE, f. [concordat, Fr.] a compact; convention; or a society held together by a common discipline, or statutes.

To CONCORPORATE, v. a. to unite, blend, or mix several things together, so as to form one mass, system, &c.

CONCOURSE, [könkurs] f. [concurfus, Lat.] a crowd, or several persons assembled together in one place; the point wherein two bodies meet together; the force or action with which two or more bodies meet together.

CONCREMENT, f. [from concreresco, Lat.] a mass formed by concretion; a collection of separate particles.

CONCRESCENCE, f. [from concreresco, Lat.] the act or quality of growing by the union of separate particles.

To CONCRETE v. a. to form from an union of several particles or bodies; to unite several masses or particles in one body. Neutrally, to coalesce, cohere, or join together, so as to form one mass.

CONCRETE, a. formed by the union or cohesion of several particles or substances. In Logic, a concrete term is that which, while it expresses the quality, expresses, implies, or relates to some subject or substance in which it inheres, and is generally the same as a noun adjective in grammar.

CONCRETE, f. an assemblage or mixture; a body or mass composed of several particles or principles.

CONCRETELY, ad. in such a manner as to include the substance with the quality.

CONCRETENESS, f. curdling; coagulation; or the gathering several fluids into a solid mass.

CONCRETION, f. the act whereby a soft body becomes hard, or the particles of a fluid become fixed, so as not to yield to the touch; the coalition, or uniting of several particles so as to form one mass.

CONCRETIVE, a. that which has the power of uniting several particles together, so as to form one mass; that which has the power of turning a fluid into a solid; that which has the power of producing coagulation, or the curdling of a fluid body.

CONCRETURE, f. a mass formed by the cohesion of several particles.

CONCUBINAGE, f. [concupinage, Fr.] the act of living or cohabiting with a woman, as a wife, without being married.

CONCUBINE, f. [concupina, Lat.] a woman who is kept by a man, and lives with him, though not married to him; a kept mistress.

To CONCULCATE, v. a. [conculco, Lat.] to tread upon, or trample under foot.

CONCUPISCENCE, f. [concupiscentia, Lat.] an inordinate desire of women; lust.

CONCUPISCENT, part. [concupiscens, Lat.] lustful; having an irregular appetite after carnal things.

CONCUPISCENTIAL, [könkupiffenzial] a. relating to concupiscentence, or having an irregular desire after women.

CONCUPISCIBLE, a. [concupiscibilis, Lat.] that which may be desired; that which raises, excites, or exerts desire.

To CONCUR, v. n. [concurro, Lat.] to meet together; to join in one action or design; applied to several persons; to unite with; to be conjoined with; to contribute to the effecting one common event or design.

CONCURRENCE, or CONCURRENCY, f. assistance; union; conjunction; united efforts to promote any design; agreement in any opinion or sentiment.

CONCURRENT, part. [concurrrens, Lat.] acting in conjunction or together; promoting the same design.

CONCURRENT, f. that which contributes to the performance of a design.

CONCUSSION, f. [concussio, Lat.] the act of putting a thing into violent motion; shaking; agitation.

CONCUSSIVE, a. [concussus, Lat.] that which has the power or quality of shaking.

To CONDEMN, [kondem] v. a. [condemno, Lat.] to pass sentence against a person, whereby he is subject to punishment; to censure.

fare, blame, or find fault with.

CONDEMNABLE, a. that which may be blamed, found fault with, or is subject to the sentence of a judge.

CONDEMNATION, f. [condemnatio, Lat.] passing or pronouncing sentence against a person, whereby he is subject to punishment or penalty, either in respect to person, fortune, or life. Figuratively, the state of a person on whom sentence has been passed.

CONDEMNATORY, a. having the force of condemning or subjecting a person to punishment.

CONDEMNER, f. the person who condemns, censures, blames, or finds fault with.

CONDENSABLE, a. that which is capable of being made more solid, or forced into a smaller compass.

To CONDENSATE, v. a. [condenso, Lat.] to make more solid or thick by compression or force, applied to fluids.

CONDENSATE, a. made thicker or more solid by compression, or external force.

CONDENSATION, f. the act of bringing the parts of a body closer to each other, and increasing their contact, whereby the body is rendered more dense, compact and heavy.

To CONDENSE, v. a. [condenso, Lat.] to make any body more thick, compact, or weighty, by increasing the contact of its particles; applied by some only to the effect of cold, but by others used for compression, or the effects of external force, which extinguishes the size of the pores of a body, and renders it, consequently, more solid. Neuterly, to grow thick, applied to the effects of cold on fluids; to become solid and weighty, by shrinking to a narrower compass.

CONDENSE, a. thickened; close; compact; become more solid by the effect of cold, or compression.

CONDENSER, f. a pneumatic engine, by means of which an unusual quantity of air may be forced into a small space, or by which three, four, or five atmospheres may be injected more than a thing would contain naturally.

CONDENSITY, f. the state of a fluid, whose parts are fixed so as not to give way to the touch, by cold, coagulation, or compression. Thickness, applied to consistence.

CONDERS, f. persons who stand on some eminence to give notice to fishers which way a shoal of herrings take. See BAKERS.

To CONDESCEND, v. n. [condescendo, Lat.] to lay aside the dignity of rank, in order to make one's self agreeable to, or on a level with, inferiors; to behave with familiarity to inferiors; to stoop; to submit.

CONDESCENDENCE, f. [condescendence, Fr.] an act whereby a person in authority lays aside the difference of rank in order to converse freely with his inferiors; a granting some favour to a person; or consenting to yield him some advantage, which he could not demand.

CONDESCENDINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to lay aside the claims of authority and dignity; or to yield up a right, or consent to a request, from a principle of good-nature and generosity.

CONDESCENSION, f. the behaviour of a superior, whereby he treats one of lower rank as his equal, and grants him favours he cannot demand.

CONDESCENSIVE, a. courteous; treating inferiors without distance; affable, and ready to serve or grant any favour, or forego a right to serve or oblige another.

CONDIGN, [condign, a. [condignus, Lat.] worthy; suitable to; merited; deserved, or proportionable to; generally applied to the punishments due to a person for his crimes.

CONDIGNLY, [condignly] ad. in a manner suitable to a person's crimes; deservedly.

CONDIGNNESS, [condignness] f. proportion; suitableness to a person's crimes.

To CONDITE, v. a. [condio, Lat.] to preserve or pickle.

CONDITION, f. [conditio, Lat.] a quality or property which determines the nature of a thing; an attribute or accident, in a logical sense. Habit or temperature. A moral quality or virtue. State, or the circumstance of person or fortune. Rank. The terms of any contract, bargain, or agreement. Figuratively, a writing containing the terms of an agreement.

To CONDITION, v. n. to stipulate.

CONDITIONAL, a. to be performed on certain terms, not absolute, but subject to certain limitations.

CONDITIONALLY, ad. on certain terms or limitations.

CONDITIONARY, a. stipulated; bargained; to be done as a means of acquiring any thing.

To CONDITIONATE, v. a. to make conditions for; to regulate by, or perform on certain conditions.

CONDITIONATE, a. established and grounded on certain terms and conditions.

CONDITIONED, part. having qualities either good or bad.

To CONDOLE, v. n. [condoleo, Lat.] to lament with those who grieve for any misery, misfortune, or calamity. Actively, to bewail a misfortune with another.

CONDOLEMENT, f. grief; sorrow; mourning for any loss or misfortune.

CONDOLENCE, f. a sympathizing grief arising from the misfortunes of another, which expresses itself by lamenting with the person in distress.

CONDOLER, f. one who expresses a complimentary concern for the sorrow of another, and the cause which occasions it.

To CONDUCE, v. n. [conduco, Lat.] to promote an end by acting conjointly.

CONDUCTIBLE, a. [conducibilis, Lat.] having a power of conducting to, or promoting a design. Used for two or more causes operating to one end.

CONDUCTIVE, a. that which has a tendency, power, or quality to promote or produce face any end.

CONDUCTIVENESS, f. the quality of promoting or contributing to the production of heat and cold.

CONDUCT, f. [conduite, Fr.] management, or tenor of actions; the act of commanding an army; convoy or escorting with a guard; the guard convoying, securing, or securing; a warrant by which a convoy is appointed; behaviour; or a series of actions regulated by some standard.

To CONDUCT, v. a. to accompany a person in order to show him his way to any place; to direct, lead, or guide; to usher, or introduce; to manage; to head an army, or command a body of troops. СУДОМ. We conduct and guide those who know not the way; we lead those who cannot or care not to go by themselves. We conduct an affair. We conduct a traveller. We lead an infant.

CONDUCTOR, f. [conductor, Lat.] a person, or one who shews another the way; a leader or commander; a manager; or one who manages an affair. In Surgery, an instrument which serves to conduct the knife in the operation of cutting for the stone, and in laying open sinuses and fistulas. It is also called a specul.

CONDUCTRESS, f. a woman who directs or leads a person, or carries on any undertaking.

CONDUIT, [kandit] f. [conduite, Fr.] a canal, or pipes made use of for the conveyance of water at a distance from the reservoir or spring head; an aqueduct; a place furnished with a cock, whence people are publicly supplied with water.

CONE, f. [κωνη, Gr.] in Geometry, a solid body, whose base is a circle, its uppermost part ending in a point: it resembles a sugar-loaf, and may be conceived as formed by the revolution of a triangle on one of its sides, as on a axis.

To CONFABULATE, v. n. to talk easily, or with carelessness together; to chat with a friend.

CONFABULATION, f. [confabulatio, Lat.] easy, familiar, careless, cheerful talk with a person.

CONFABULATORY, a. belonging to entertaining and careiefs conversation.

To CONFECT, v. a. [confectus, Lat.] to preserve fruit, &c. with sugar.

CONFECT, f. a sweet-meat.

CONFECTION, f. the preserving fruit or vegetables, by means of clarified sugar. In Pharmacy, any thing prepared with sugar; a solid or soft electuary; the assembling or mixing of different ingredients.

CONFECTIONARY, f. a place where sweet food from different ingredients is made, and sweets are preserved.

CONFECTOR, f. one who makes and preserves sweets.

CONFEDERACY, f. [confederatio, Lat.] a league, contract, or agreement, entered into between several states and bodies of men for their mutual advantage and defence.

To CONFEDERATE, v. a. [confederare, Lat.] to unite in a league, or agree with, in order to accomplish some design.

CONFEDERATE, a. leagued, or united by some contract to accomplish some design.

CONFEDERATE, f. one who enters into an engagement with another, whereby they are obliged mutually to assist and defend each other; an ally.

CONFEDERATION, f. [confederation, Fr.] a league; an act whereby two or more persons oblige themselves to assist each other; an alliance.

To CONFESR, v. n. [confesro, Lat.] to discourse with a person on some important, grave, and stated subject; to talk with a person on any subject, in order to come to a determination. Actively, to compare the sentiments of one person or author with those of another; to give a thing which could not be claimed; to bestow a favour; to contribute or conduce.

CONFERENCE, f. [conference, Fr.] the act of discoursing with another, in order to settle some point in dispute, or treat upon any subject in a public character; a meeting appointed for the discoursing of some point in debate; comparison, or examination of things by comparing them together.

CONFERRER, f. he that discourses with another on some stated point; he that bestows a favour on another.

To CONFESS, v. a. [confesser, Fr.] to acknowledge the having done something amiss. To disclose a person's sins to a priest; in order to obtain absolution. To own. To avow; to profess. To grant. Not to dispute. To shew; to prove; to attest.

CONFESSEDLY, ad. in such a manner as must extort universal consent; generally owned; avowedly; indisputably.

CONFESSSION, f. the acknowledgement or owning a crime. Profession; avowal. In the Romish church, an acknowledgment of sins in private to a priest, in order to obtain absolution.

CONFESSSIONAL, f. [confessional, Fr.] in the Romish church, a little box or desk, wherein the priest takes the confession of a penitent.

CONFESSSIONARY, f. [confessionaire, Fr.] the confession chair or seat, wherein the priest sits to receive the confession of a penitent.

CONFESSSOR, f. [confessor, Fr.] one who professes a religious sentiment or opinion in the face of danger, and amidst the most cruel tortures. In the Romish Church, a priest, who is authorized to receive the confessions of penitents, and grant them absolution.

CONFEST, a. [a poetical word for confessed] open; generally known; acknowledged, in a good sense. Notorious, in a bad sense.

CONFICIENT, [konficienti] part. [conficiens, Lat.] causing or producing in company with some other person or thing.

CONFIDANT, f. [confidant, Fr.] a person intrusted with the secrets of another; most commonly applied to those who are intrusted with

With affairs of lovers.

To CONFIDE, v. n. [confido, Lat.] to trust in, implying a strong persuasion or assurance of a person's abilities to assist another, or his fidelity in keeping a secret.

CONFIDENCE, f. [confidentia, Lat.] a strong assurance of the fidelity and ability of another. When joined to the reciprocal pronouns himself, &c. a strong assurance of the efficacy of a person's own abilities; a virtuous and assuming boldness.

CONFIDENT, part. [confidens, Lat.] assured of a truth beyond any possibility of doubt; positive; secure of success; without fear of a miscarriage; without suspicion; bold, to a vice.

CONFIDENTLY, ad. in such a manner as to discover no fear of a miscarriage; securely.

CONFIDENTNESS, f. a favourable opinion of one's own judgment; assurance.

CONFIGURATION, f. [configuration, Fr.] the order in which the particles of bodies are united together; the form of a body made by the order in which its particles are united together.

To CONFIGURE, v. n. [configuro, Lat.] to dispose or form by uniting in a particular manner.

CONFINE, f. a limit; border; edge; or utmost verge of a thing or place.

CONFINE, a. [confinis, Lat.] bordering upon, applied to places; it implies that the one begins where the other ends. Touching; adjoining; or contiguous.

To CONFINE, v. n. to border upon; to touch; or be contiguous to.

To CONFINE, v. a. [confiner, Fr.] to bound; to limit; to inclose; to shut up; to restrain; to imprison; to immerge; to keep at home; not to quit, or neglect.

CONFINELESS, a. boundless; without limits, end, or pause.

CONFINEMENT, f. the act of restraining a person from going abroad; the act of inclosing a person in prison; the state of a person in prison, or kept at home without liberty of going abroad; restraint.

CONFINER, f. a person who lives at the extremity, or on the borders of a country; one who deprives another of the liberty of walking abroad; or shuts him up in a prison.

CONFINITY, f. [confinitas, Lat.] nearness; neighbourhood; likeness.

To CONFIRM, v. a. [confirmo, Lat.] to put beyond doubt, by additional proofs; to settle a person in an office; to fix; to complete; to render perfect; to admit to the full privileges of a Christian by imposition of the hands of a bishop.

CONFIRMABLE, a. that which is capable of incontestible evidence.

CONFIRMATION, f. the act of establishing any person or thing in a place or office; an additional or new proof to evince the truth of a thing or opinion beyond doubt or contradiction; a proof which brings conviction; an ecclesiastic rite, whereby a person, arrived to years of discretion, undertakes the performance of every part of the baptismal vow, made for him by his godfathers and godmothers.

CONFIRMATOR, f. [confirmator, Lat.] one who proves a thing beyond doubt.

CONFIRMATORY, a. establishing, or giving such additional proof, as may increase the certainty or probability of any fact or action.

CONFIRMEDNESS, f. a quality implying certainty, when applied to evidence; and inveteracy or strength, not easily to be surmounted, when used of habits.

CONFIRMER, f. one who establishes an opinion or fact by new evidence or proofs; one who establishes or secures a person in the possession of any dignity.

CONFISCABLE, a. [from confisco, Lat.] liable to be seized on as a fine, or in punishment for some crime.

To CONFISCATE, v. a. [confisco, Lat.] to seize on private property, and convert it either to the use of the chief magistrate or of the public, by way of punishment.

CONFISCATION, f. [confiscatio, Lat.] the seizing of private property on account of some crime, and converting it to the use of the chief magistrate or of the public.

CONFITURE, f. [confiture, Fr.] a sweetmeat or confection.

CONFLAGRANT, part. [conflagrans, Lat.] burning together; involved in the same fire.

CONFLAGRATION, f. [conflagratio, Lat.] a general fire spreading over a large space, and involving several things in its flames. Generally used for that fire which shall consume all things, and change the face of nature.

CONFLATION, f. [conflatio, Lat.] the act of blowing several wind instruments at the same time; the casting and melting of metal.

To CONFLICT, v. n. [conflictus, Lat.] to strive, or struggle in order to get victory, applied to persons and things.

CONFLICT, f. [conflictus, Lat.] a combat, or fight between two, seldom used of a general battle; a contest or strife; a struggle between opposite qualities; an agony or pang, where the nature seems to struggle hard against suffering and pain.

CONFLUENCE, f. [confluo, Lat.] an uniting of two or more streams or rivers; the act of crowding or coming in great numbers to one place; a concourse, or a multitude gathered into one place.

CONFLUENT, part. [confluens, Lat.] running one into another, meeting or mixing together.

CONFLUX, f. [confluxio, Lat.] the uniting or union of several streams of rivers. Figuratively, a crowd, a great number of persons collected together.

CONFORM, a. [conformis, Lat.] assuming the same form or quality of another; like.

To CONFORM, v. a. [conformo, Lat.] to reduce to the same form or manner as another; to render one's actions agreeable to any particular rule. Neuterly, to submit or yield obedience to.

CONFORMABLE

CONFORMABLE, a. having the same form; agreeable, suitable, consistent; compliant, or submissive to authority.

CONFORMABLY, ad. agreeably; suitably; with compliance.

CONFORMATION, f. [conformation, Fr.] the particular union or order of the parts of a body, and their disposition to make a whole; the act producing suitableness, or conformity to any thing.

CONFORMIST, f. one who complies with the mode of worship used by the church of England.

CONFORMITY, f. likeness; resemblance; the act of regulating one's actions to some law; consistency; compliance with the worship of the established church.

To CONFOUND, v. a. [confundo, Lat.] to mingle or mix things so that their forms or natures cannot be distinguished; to substitute or make use of one word for another, which conveys different ideas; to puzzle or perplex the mind by indistinct ideas, or words used in an indeterminate manner; to amaze, astonish, and render unable to reply; to destroy.

CONFOUNDED, part. hateful; prodigious; a low word, to express any thing in the superlative degree.

CONFOUNDEDLY, ad. shamefully; hatefully; a low word.

CONFOUNDER, f. one who perplexes, confuses, or destroys.

CONFRATERNITY, f. [confraternitas, Lat.] a brotherhood; or body of men united for some religious purpose.

CONFRICATION, f. [from con and frico, Lat.] the act of rubbing.

To CONFRONT, v. a. [confronter, Fr.] to stand directly opposite to; to stand face to face; to oppose; to set in opposition; to contrast; to compare one thing with another.

CONFRONTATION, f. [confrontation, Fr.] the act of opposing one evidence to another.

To CONFUSE, [confusus; the f in this word, and its derivatives, sounding like z] v. a. [confusus, Lat.] to put in disorder; to make irregular; to perplex by indistinct ideas, or by using words without any determinate figuration.

CONFUSEDLY, ad. in an indistinct manner; mixed, opposed to separate; perplexed, or not clear; without any order; in obscure, indistinct, or unintelligible terms.

CONFUSEDNESS, f. want of distinctness or clearness; want of order or regularity.

CONFUSION, f. an irregular, careless, or disorderly mixture; tumult; the using words without any precise meaning; overthrow; destruction; astonishment; distraction of mind.

CONFUTABLE, a. that which may be shown to be false or groundless.

CONFUTATION, f. [confutatio, Lat.] the act of destroying the arguments of another, by shewing them to be false, inconclusive, or groundless.

To CONFUTE, v. a. [confuto, Lat.] to destroy the force of an argument; to shew the proofs of an adversary to be groundless, inconclusive, sophistical, or false.

CONGE, [könjée] f. [congé, Fr.] an action shewing respect, compliment, or submission, consisting in bowing the body, in men; and in women, in sinking with the knee bent, or making a curtsy; leave, or the action of taking leave. Conge d'église, Fr. i. e. leave of election, in Canon Law, is the king's permission to a dean and chapter to choose a bishop when the see is vacant.

To CONGEAL, [konjéel] v. a. [congeló, Lat.] to change or thicken any fluid by cold. Figuratively, to thicken any fluid, applied generally to the blood. Neuterly, to grow thick.

CONGEALABLE, a. that which may grow thick by cold.

CONGEALMENT, f. the clot or thick mass formed by cold.

CONGELATION, f. the act of freezing, or producing such a change in a fluid body, that it grows thick, or its particles become fixed like those of a solid body.

CONGENEROUS, a. of the same genus or species; arising from the same principle; proceeding from the same cause. Used only by scientific writers.

CONGENIAL, a. [con and genius, Lat.] partaking of the same genus, of the same nature, disposition, or kind.

CONGENIALITY, f. a partaking of the same genus, nature, or disposition.

CONGENIALNESS, f. a sameness of disposition.

CONGER, [in this word the g has a hard sound before e] f. [congrus, Lat.] a large eel, frequenting salt waters.

CONGERBURY, a village in Somersetshire, six miles N. of Axbridge.

CONGRIES, f. [Lat.] a mass consisting of smaller bodies heaped together.

CONGESTION, [konjésh-jun] f. [congestio, Lat.] in Surgery, a collection of matter gathered together in any part of the body.

CONGIARY, f. a gift distributed by the Roman emperors, consisting of corn and oil.

To CONGLACIATE, v. n. [conglaciatus, Lat.] to turn to ice.

CONGLACIATION, f. the changing into ice; the state of a thing changed into ice: vitrifying, or turning into glass.

CONGLETON, a town of Cheshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the river Dane; and is a large mayor-town, though it has nothing but a chapel of ease, the church being two miles distant. Its manufactory is the making of leather gloves; but the most considerable is silk, there being a large silk-mill lately erected here by some Turkey merchants, which employs 700 hands. It is 164 miles N. W. of London.

To CONGLOBATE, v. a. [conglobo, Lat.] to unite in the form of a globe or ball.

CONGLOBATE, part. [conglobatus, Lat.] moulded into a ball.

CONGLOBATELY, ad. in a globular, round, or spherical form.

To CÓNGLO'BE, v. n. [conглоbо, Lat.] to gather into a firm round ball; to gather in a round mass.

To CÓNGLO'MERATE, v. a. [conglomerо, Lat.] to gather several things into a round mass.

CÓNGLO'MERATE, part. [conglomeratus, Lat.] gathered into a round ball or mass, so that the compounding bodies appear distinct. Figuratively, twisted or collected together.

CÓNGLOMERA'TION, f. a collecting into a loose round ball; interweaving, or mixture.

To CÓNGLU'TINATE, v. a. [conglutino, Lat.] to glue, cement, or join fast together by any viscous, sticking, or glutinous substance. Neuterly, to stick or cohere together.

CÓNGLU'TINA'TION, f. the act of sticking together; the act of uniting and fastening the lips of a wound together.

CÓNGLU'TINATIVE, a. having the power of sticking together, or uniting the lips of a wound.

CÓNGLU'TINA'TOR, f. that which has the power of making things cohere, or stick together.

CÓNGRA'TULATE, part. [congratulans, Lat.] rejoicing with another; expressing one's rejoicing with another.

To CÓNGRA'TULATE, v. a. [congratulor, Lat.] to express joy on the good success or advantage of another.

CÓNGRA'TULA'TION, f. the act of expressing joy on account of the success or happiness of another.

To CÓNGRE'ET, v. n. to salute together, implying the making and returning of a compliment.

To CÓNGREGATE, v. a. [congrego, Lat.] to collect several things into the same mass, or several persons into the same place. Neuterly, to assemble, meet, or come together.

CÓNGREGATE, a. collected close together; forming one mass or body.

CÓNGREGA'TION, f. in Physic, that degree of mixture wherein the particles of a fluid meet or touch only in a point; a collection or mass of several particles. In Divinity, an assembly of people met together for religious worship. In Church History, an assembly of several ecclesiastics, constituting and forming a body.

CÓNGREGA'TIONAL, a. belonging to an assembly or congregation.

CÓNGRESS, f. [congr. ssus, Lat.] a shock, or conflict; an appointed meeting for the settling of affairs between different nations.

CÓNGRESSIVE, a. meeting together; encountering.

To CÓNGRU'E, v. n. [congruo, Lat.] to agree; to suit; to import; to become.

CÓNGRUENCE, f. [congruuntia, Lat.] agreement; the suitability or consistency of one thing to another.

CÓNGRU'ITY, f. fitness; suitability of one thing to another; consistency. In Geometry, applied to figures or lines, which meet or correspond exactly when applied to, or laid over each other.

CÓNGRUOUS, a. [congruus, Lat.] agreeable to; consistent with; suited or proportionate.

CÓNGRUOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to agree or be consistent with, applied to sentiments; suitably.

CÓNIC, or CÓNICAL, a. having the form of a cone, sugar-loaf, or round pyramid. Conic section, in Geometry, is the curve line arising from the section of a cone by a plane. Conics, or conic sections, that part of Geometry which treats of cones, and the curves arising from the section of a conic by a plane.

CÓNICAL'LY, ad. in form of a cone, or sugar-loaf.

CÓNICAL'NESS, f. the state or quality which partakes of the properties of a cone.

To CÓNJE'CT, v. a. [conjectum, Lat.] to guess at a thing.

CÓNJE'CTOR, f. a guesser.

CÓNJE'CTURABLE, a. being the object of conjecture; that which may be guessed.

CÓNJE'CTURAL, a. depending on, or determined from, uncertain principles by mere guesses.

CÓNJE'CTURA'LITY, f. that which is inferible only from guesses.

CÓNJE'CTURALLY, ad. by guesses; by conjecture.

CÓNJE'CTURE, f. [conjectura, Lat.] an inference drawn from uncertain principles; a guess; imperfect knowledge, idea, or notion.

To CÓNJE'CTURE, v. a. to guess.

CÓNJE'CTURER, f. a guesser.

CÓNIF'EROUS, a. [conus and fero, Lat.] in Botany, bearing a fruit resembling a cone.

To CÓNJOIN, v. a. [conjoindre, Fr.] to join together; to unite together in friendship; to knit or join together in marriage. Neuterly, to take part with another in any action.

CÓNJOINT, part. united; connected; associate. In Music, applied to two or more sounds heard at the same time.

CÓNJOINT'LY, ad. together; in union, opposed to apart or separate.

CÓNJO'GAL, a. [conjugalis, Lat.] belonging to marriage.

CÓNJO'GALLY, ad. consistently with married people.

To CÓNJO'GATE, v. a. [conjugo, Lat.] to unite; to join in marriage. In Grammar, to decline verbs through their various terminations of tenses, persons, and moods.

CÓNJO'GATE, f. [conjugatus, Lat.] in Grammar, agreeing in derivation with another word, and resembling it in its sense and meaning. Conjugate diameter, or axis, in Conics, is the shortest of two diameters bisecting the other, or a right line bisecting the transverse diameter.

CÓNJO'GATION, f. [conjugatio, Lat.] a couple, pair, or two things of the same sort joined together. The act of uniting, or joining together; union. In Grammar, an orderly distribution distribution of the tenses, persons, and moods of verbs, according to their different terminations or inflections.

CONJUNCT, part. [conjunctus, Lat.] joined with another; concurring; united.

CONJUNCTION, f. [conjunctio, Lat.] the uniting two things together. Figuratively, a league or confederacy. In Astronomy, the meeting of the stars or planets in the same degree of the zodiac. In Grammar, a word used to connect the clauses of a period or sentence together.

CONJUNCTIVELY, ad. in union; operating together, opposed to apart or separate.

CONJUNCTIVENESS, f. the quality of uniting or joining two or more things together.

CONJUNCTLY, ad. jointly; together, opposed to apart.

CONJUNCTURE, f. [conjuncture, Fr.] an union or meeting of several circumstances, or cases; a critical or particular period of time; connection of several things forming a whole; consistency, or an union of qualities which can exist at the same time in the same or different subjects. SYNON. We know people on particular occasions. We should demean ourselves according to the occurrence of the times. It is commonly the conjuncture that determines us which side to take.

CONJURATION, f. the form of obliging a person to give his evidence. See ADJURATION. Magic words, characters, ceremonies, charms, which were supposed to have the power of raising the dead, and devils. A plot; a conspiracy.

To CONJURE, v. a. [conjuro, Lat.] to treat a person with the greatest earnestness, and by the respect he has to some dear person or sacred being.

To CONJURE, v. a. [conjuro, Lat.] to influence by the supposed power of magic or enchantments. Neuterly, to practise enchantment.

CONJURER, f. an enchanter, or a person who makes use of magical charms; an imposter, who pretends to have commerce with the world of spirits, and by that means to be able to foretell the future events of a person's life, to discover thieves, &c.

To CONN, v. a. [connan, Sax.] to learn or get without book. To give. See TO CON.

CONNA'TE, a. [con and natus, Lat.] born with; innate; born at the same time as another.

CONNA'TURAL, a. [con and natura, Lat.] consistent with, or flowing from nature; of the same original or nature.

CONNATURALITY, f. a resemblance of nature; or an essential resemblance and connection.

CONNATURALLY, ad. in such a manner as to be born with, or innate.

CONNATURALNESS, f. the quality of being born with, of being innate or interwoven in our nature.

To CONNECT, v. a. [connecto, Lat.] to join together by some intermediate means, alluding to the union formed by cement; to join together the members of a period, or the arguments of a discourse, in such a manner as they shall have a mutual dependence on each other, like the links of a chain.

CONNECTICUT, one of the Thirteen United States of North America, bounded on the N. E. by the colony of Massachusetts, on the S. by the sea, and on the W. by New York, and is 100 miles in length, and 80 in breadth.

CONNENTION. See CONNEXION.

CONNECTIVE, a. that which has the power of joining different things together; so as they may have a mutual dependence on each other.

CONNECTIVELY, ad. jointly; in union; having mutual dependence on each other, arising from union.

CONNEX, v. a. [connexum, Lat.] to join, link, or fasten several things to each other.

CONNEXION, f. a relation whereby one thing adheres to and depends on another; the act of fastening things together in such a manner that they may stick, as if joined by cement, and depend on each other like the links of a chain; dependence; commerce; union formed by interest.

CONNEXIVE, a. that which has the force of joining or uniting together.

CONNIVANCE, f. the beholding or seeing any fault without taking notice of it, or punishing the committer.

To CONNIVE, v. n. [connives, Lat.] to wink; to pass by a fault without taking notice of it, or punishing the committer.

CONNOISSE'UR, f. [Fr.] one who is perfectly acquainted with any object of knowledge or taste; a perfect judge or critic.

To CONNOTE, v. a. to imply; to signify by implication.

CONNU'BIAL, a. [connubialis, Lat.] relating to marriage.

CONOID, f. [κωνοειδης, Gr.] in Geometry, a solid body resembling a cone, excepting that it has an ellipsis instead of a perfect circle for its base.

To CONQUASSATE, v. a. [conquasso, Lat.] to shake or agitate with a violence. Used only by technical writers.

CONQUASSATION, f. violent motion; agitation.

To CONQUER, v. a. to subdue, overcome, or over-run by force of arms; to surmount; to get the better of any difficulty. Neuterly, to obtain the victory. SYNON. It requires courage and valour to conquer; endeavour and resolution to subdue; patience and perseverance to overcome.

CONQUERABLE, a. easy to be overcome. Figuratively, easily surmounted.

CONQUEROR, f. one who surmounts any difficulty; one who subdues by force of arms.

CONQUEST, f. [conquestus, Fr.] the act of subduing by force of arms; the thing gained by victory; victory or success in arms.

CONSANGUINEO, s. a. [consanguineus, Lat.]

Lat.] near a kin; of the same blood; related by birth.

CONSANGUINITY, f. [consanguinitas, Lat.] relation by blood; relation or descent from one father.

CONSCIENCE, [by some pron. kónsbience] f. [conscientia, Lat.] the faculty or act of judging of the nature of our actions, whether they be good or evil, implying a comparison of them with some standard of moral action; the determination of the mind with respect to the quality of any action, after its commission; the knowledge of our own thoughts, or consciousness; real sentiments; private thoughts, used with in. Scruple or consciousness, used with make.

CONSCIENTIOUS, [conscientiosus] a. [from conscientia, Lat.] scrupulous; examining every thing according to the dictates of conscience, and acting conformably; exactly just.

CONSCIENTIOUSNESS, [conscientiositas] f. exactness or tenderness of conscience; an excess of scrupulousness.

CONSCIONABLE, [conscionable] a. agreeable to the dictates of conscience; just.

CONSCIONABLENESS, [conscionableness] f. equity; reasonableness; agreeableness to, or consistency with, the dictates of conscience.

CONSCIONABLY, [conscionably] ad. in a manner agreeable to the dictates of conscience; justly; reasonably.

CONSCIOUS, [conscius] a. [conscius, Lat.] to be inwardly sensible of a thing whereof it is possible to have a distinct idea. Knowing from recollection or memory; knowing or understanding; bearing witness of, or sensible of, from the instigations of conscience.

CONSCIOUSLY, [consciosus] ad. sensibly; or having the sensation of the operation of some faculty of the mind.

CONSCIOUSNESS, [consciositas] f. the perception or sensation of what passes in a man's own mind; an internal acknowledgment of sense of guilt, or of having performed any particular action.

CONSCRIPT, part. [conscriptus, Lat.] written or registered. Applied to the Roman fathers or senators, whose names were registered in the list of the senate.

CONSCRIPTION, f. [conscriptio, Lat.] an enrolling or registering.

To CONSECRATE, v. a. [consecro, Lat.] to dedicate or set apart to divine uses; to sanctify or appropriate, as pleasing to the Deity.

CONSECRATE, part. [consecratus, Lat.] set apart for divine uses; dedicated to the service of God; sacred.

CONSECRATOR, f. the person who perform the rites by which a thing is appropriated to divine uses.

CONSECRATION, f. the act of appropriating, dedicating, or setting apart any common or profane thing to religious uses, by means of certain ceremonies or rites; the benediction of the bread and wine in the sacrament.

CONSECTARY, a. [consecrarius, Lat.] following as a consequence.

CONSECTARY, f. a proposition which follows from some preceding definition, lemma, axiom, or the like.

CONSECUTION, f. [consecutio, Lat.] a chain of consequences; succession. In Astronomy, the month of consecution is the space between one conjunction of the moon with the sun to another.

CONSECUTIVE, a. [consecutif, Fr.] following in an uninterrupted succession; following; immediately succeeding.

CONSECUTIVELY, ad. after, or following as an effect.

CONSENSION, f. [consensio, Lat.] agreement; accord.

CONSENT, f. [consensus, Lat.] the act of yielding, or compliance with a request; agreement; unity of sentiment; harmony, or agreement of parts. SYNON. We consent to the will of others by permitting; we acquiesce in what is proposed by conforming; we agree to what is said by approving. PROV. They agree like cats and dogs.—They agree like bells, they want nothing but banging.

To CONSENT, v. n. [consentio, Lat.] to agree to; to promote the same end; to yield or comply with a request; to admit.

CONSENTANEOUS, a. [consentaneus, Lat.] agreeable or suitable to; consistent with.

CONSENTANEOUSLY, ad. in a manner agreeable to; consistent with, or suitable to.

CONSENTANEOUSNESS f. consistence; or agreeableness.

CONSENTIENT, [consentient] part. [consentiens, Lat.] universal; unanimous; general; agreeing, or united in opinion.

CONSEQUENCE, f. [consequentia, Lat.] the relation or connection between two propositions, whereof one follows or is deduced from the other; that which follows from or is produced by any cause, or principle; event, effect, importance, moment, or concern.

CONSEQUENT, part. [consequens, Lat.] following from some premises, applied to argument. Following as an effect.

CONSEQUENT, f. the last proposition of an argument, deduced from or included in some preceding proposition; an effect, or that which proceeds from the operation of any cause. Consequent of a ratio, in Arithmetic, is the latter of the two terms, or that to which the antecedent is referred; thus in a, b, or a to b; b is the consequent, and a the antecedent.

CONSEQUENTIAL, [consequencial] a. [consequens, Lat.] produced by a necessary chain of causes and effects, deduced according to the rules of reason or logic.

CONSEQUENTIALLY, [consequencially] ad. deducing consequences, or making inferences, according to the rules of reason or logic; by consequence; eventually; in a regular series.

CONSEQUENTLY, ad. by consequence; necessarily; inevitably, from a necessary conclusion

series of effects to their causes; in consequence.

CONSE'RVABLE, a. [from conseruo, Lat.] capable of being preserved or kept.

CONSE'RVANCY, f. [from conseruo, Lat.] applied to the courts held by the lord mayor for the preservation of the fishery on the river Thames, which are styled courts of conservancy.

CONSERVA'TION, f. [from conseruatio, Lat.] the act of preserving bodies or systems from corruption or decay.

CONSE'RVATIVE, a. [from conseruo, Lat.] having the power of keeping from corruption or decay.

CONSERVA'TOR, f. [Lat.] one who preserves from corruption or decay; an officer established for the preservation of the privileges granted some cities; or a person who is authorized to determine differences arising between the citizens.

CONSE'RVATORY, f. [from conseruo, Lat.] a place wherein any thing is kept in a manner suitable to its nature, as fish in a pond.

CONSE'RVATORY, a. having the power of preserving a thing from corruption or decay.

CONSE'RVÉ, f. a sweet-meat made by boiling fruit in clarified sugar. In Pharmacy, a medicine in the form of an electuary, made of the leaves of flowers, beat with sugar in a mortar; a place to keep and preserve vegetables in.

CONSE'SSOR, f. [Lat.] one who sits with another.

To CONSI'DER, v. a. [considero, Lat.] to think much on a thing; to revolve often in the mind; to meditate on. To view with attention. To determine or resolve after weighing the consequences of an action. To remark; to call to mind; to observe. To respect; not to despise. To requite; to reward for his trouble. Neuterly, to think maturely; to deliberate. To doubt; to hesitate.

CONSI'DERABLE, a. that which is worthy of notice, regard, or attention; important; valuable; respectable; large, or conveying a sense between little and great.

CONSI'DERABLENESS, f. importance; value; dignity; a quality which claims our notice.

CONSI'DERABLY, ad. in a degree deserving some, though not the highest notice; in a great degree.

CONSI'DERATE, a. [consideratus, Lat.] serious; given to consideration or thought; prudent; pitying, or moderate.

CONSI'DERA'TION, f. [consideratio, Lat.] the act of thinking on; mature thought or deliberation; meditation; importance; worthiness of regard; motive of action; influence; reason; ground of concluding; an equivalent.

CONSI'DERER, f. one who employs his thoughts on any subject.

To CONSI'GN, [konin] v. a. [consigno, Lat.] to transfer one's property to another. In Commerce, to send goods, or direct them to another. Figuratively, to commit or entrust, used with to. Neuterly, to yield, submit, or reign. To consent or submit.

CONSIGNA'TION, f. [consignatio, Fr.] the act of transferring property to another. In Commerce, the transmitting or sending goods to another.

CONSI'GNMENT, [koninment] f. the act of transferring; or the writing by which property is transferred, or goods sent to another to be sold.

To CONSI'ST, v. n. [confisso, Lat.] to subsist, or be preserved in existence; to continue in the same state; to be comprised or contained; to be composed; to agree or exist in the subject; to subsist, or have being.

CONSI'STENCE, or CONSI'STENCY, f. the natural state of bodies; the degree of thickness or thinness, applied to fluids; substance, form, make; uniformity of appearance, action, or qualities; free from contradiction, or variety.

CONSI'STENT, part. [confissens, Lat.] not contradictory; not opposite; reconcilable; agreeing; firm, or solid.

CONSI'STENTLY, ad. in such a manner as to imply no contradiction; agreeably; uniformly.

CONSI'STORIAL, a. relating to some court where an ecclesiastic is judge.

CONSI'STORY, f. [confistorium, low Lat.] a court consisting of ecclesiastics; the place where an ecclesiastical court is held; a court held at Rome, consisting of cardinals, at which the pope is president. Figuratively, any solemn assembly.

CONSO'CIATE, [konfusbiate] f. [confociatus, Lat.] one who joins with another in an undertaking; an accomplice.

To CONSO'CIATE, [konfusbiate] v. a. [confocio, Lat.] to unite, or join two things together; to cement, or hold together. Neuterly, to unite, or join with.

CONSOCIA'TION, [konfokofafbon] f. an alliance, or connexion; intimacy, or union.

CONSO'LABLE, a. that which admits comfort.

To CO'NSOLATE, v. a. [consolor, Lat.] to allay the sense of misery; to alluage sorrow; to impart comfort.

CONSOLA'TION, f. [consolatio, Lat.] that which diminishes grief, and alleviates misery; comfort.

CONSOLA'TOR, f. a comforter.

CONSO'LATORY, a. that which affords comfort.

To CONSO'LE, v. a. [consolor, Lat.] to cheer; to comfort; to lessen the sense of misery; to diminish a person's grief.

CONSO'LE, f. [console, Fr.] in Architecture, an ornament cut upon the key of an arch, which has a projecture, and occasionally serves to support little cornices, figures, beasts, or vases.

CONSO'LER, f. the person or thing which administers comfort.

CONSO'LIDANT, part. in Surgery, having the property of closing or uniting wounds.

To CONSO'LIDATE, v. a. to form into a compact a compact or hard body; to harden. Newly, to grow firm, hard, or solid.

CONSOLIDATION, f. the act of uniting into one mass; the act of uniting two parliamentary bills together.

CONSONANCE, or CONSONANCY, f. [from consonans, Lat.] in Music, the sounding of two notes together; and the union and agreement of two sounds. Figuratively, consistency or agreement of opinion or sentiments.

CONSONANT, a. [from consonans, Lat.] agreeable; consistent; according; reconcilable.

CONSONANT, f. [from consonans, Lat.] in Grammar, a letter which cannot be perfectly sounded by itself.

CONSONANTLY, ad. in a consistent manner; suitably; agreeably.

CONSONANTNESS, f. the quality of agreeing with; consistency.

CONSONOUS, a. [from consonus, Lat.] agreeing in sound; harmonious.

CONSORT, f. [from confort, Lat.] a companion, generally applied to signify one who bears the lot assigned by Providence to another, and appropriated to a person joined in marriage to another; an assembly; consultation; concurrence; union.

To CONSORT, v. n. to unite, join, or associate, followed by with. Actively, to join, or to marry; to mix; to accompany.

CONSPICUITY, f. brightness; easiness to be seen even at a distance; the plainness of any truth or proposition.

CONSPICUOUS, a. [from conspicuus, Lat.] easy to be seen; to be seen at a distance. Figuratively, eminent, famous, distinguished; easily discovered; manifest.

CONSPICUOUSLY, ad. easily to be seen, or discerned by the sight; remarkable for some excellence; eminently; famously; remarkably.

CONSPIRACY, f. [from conspiratio, Lat.] a private agreement between two or more persons to commit some crime; a plot. In Law, it signifies an agreement between two or more, falsely to indict, or procure to be indicted, an innocent person of felony. A conspiracy to maintain suits and quarrels; of victuallers, to sell their victuals at a certain price; and of labourers and artificers, to raise their wages, is also punishable by law.

CONSPIRANT, part. [from conspirans, Lat.] joining with another in a plot, or other bad design.

CONSPIRATION, f. [from conspiratio, Lat.] See CONSPIRACY, which is most used.

CONSPIRATOR, f. [from conspirator, Lat.] one who has secretly engaged to carry on a plot, or some bad design with another.

To CONSPIRE, v. n. [from conspiro, Lat.] to enter into an agreement with others to carry on a plot, or other bad design. To agree together.

CONSPIRING, part. tending mutually to produce one design. In Mechanics, conspiring powers are such as do not act in directions opposite to each other.

CONSTABLE, f. [it is supposed from comes stabuli, Lat. master of the horse] an officer in various manners. Lord High Constable was anciently an officer of the crown, both of England and France, whose authority was so very extensive, that the office has long since been laid aside in both kingdoms, except on particular occasions, as the king's coronation. The function of the Constable of England consisted in the care of the common peace of the land, in deeds of arms, and in matters of war. The first constable was created by the Conqueror; the office continued hereditary till the 13th of Henry VIII. when it was laid aside, as being so powerful as to become troublesome to the king. From the Lord High Constable are derived those inferior ones, since called the Constables of hundreds and franchises, ordained in the 13th of Edward I. by the statute of Winchester, for the conservation of the peace, and view of armour, which appointed, that two constables should be chosen in every hundred. These are what we now call High Constables; and under these it was found necessary to appoint others, in every town, called Petty Constables. We have also constables denominated from particular places; as, Constable of the Tower, of Dover castle, of Windfor castle, of the castle of Caernarvon, and many other castles in Wales, whose office is the same with that of the Castellans, or governors of castles.

CONSTABLESHIP, f. the office of a constable.

CONSTANCY, f. [from constantia, Lat.] a state which admits of no change or alteration, opposed to mutability; consistency; resolution; steadiness to any principle in spite of threats, dangers, promises or rewards; a firm, an inviolable attachment to a person, including an unalterable affection; veracity, or the consistency of a narrative with the nature of things.

SYNON. Rakes pride themselves more in being fickle than in the steadiness of their engagements. If the affections of the ladies do not last for ever, it is less owing to a want of constancy to the persons they love, than to a want of resolution in the object of their affections.

CONSTANT, a. firm; strongly and immoveably attached to any principle or person; assiduous, or without intermission.

CONSTANTINOPLE, one of the largest and most celebrated cities of Europe, standing at the eastern extremity of Romania, and capital of the Ottoman empire. It is seated on a small neck of land, which advances towards Natolia, from which it is separated by a channel of a mile in breadth. The sea of Marmora washes its walls on the S. and a gulph of the channel of Constantinople does the same on the N. It is delightfully situated between the Black-Sea and the Archipelago, from whence it is supplied with all necessaries. Constantine the Great, being obliged to reside in the East, chose this place for his abode, and rebuilt it after the model of Rome. It was taken by the Turks in May 1453, who have kept possession of it ever since. The imperial imperial palace, or seraglio, which stands in the city, on the point of the triangle, towards the canal and harbour, together with the gardens, take up about a mile and a half in circuit: it is rather a collection of several palaces and apartments, joined together, according to the fancy of the different emperors; than an uniform structure. It is covered with lead, as are all the palaces of the Sultan. Its principal entrance is of marble, and called the Porte (in Turkish Capi) whence the denomination of the OTTOMAN PORT is given to the Turkish empire. It is said the harbour will easily hold 1200 ships. The number of houses must needs be prodigious, since one fire has burnt down 30,000 in a day, without greatly changing the aspect of the city. However, in general, they are but mean, especially on the out-side, where there are few or no windows, and the streets being narrow, gives them a melancholy look. They reckon that there are 3770 streets, small and great; but they are seldom or never clean; and the people are infested with the plague almost every year. The inhabitants are half Turks, two thirds of the other half Christians, and the rest Jews. Here are a great number of ancient monuments still remaining, and particularly the superb temple of Sophia, which is turned into a mosque, and far surpasses all the rest. The street called Adrimople, is the longest and broadest in the city, and the Bazars, or Bezeiteins, are the markets for selling all sorts of merchandize. There are a great number of young girls brought from Hungary, Greece, Candia, Russia, Mingrelia, and Georgia, for the service of the Turks, who generally buy them for their seraglios. The great square, near the mosque of Sultan Bajazet, is the place for public diversions, where the jugglers and mountebanks play a great variety of tricks. The circumference of this city is by some said to be 15 miles, and by Mr. Tournefort 23 miles; to which, if we add the suburbs, it may be 34 miles in compass. The suburb called Pera, is charmingly situated, and is the place where the ambassadors of England, France, Venice, and Holland, reside. This city is built in the form of a triangle; and as the ground rises gradually, there is a view of the whole town from the sea. The public buildings, such as the palaces, the mosques, bagnios, and caravansaries for the entertainment of strangers, are many of them very magnificent. It is 1500 miles S. E. of London. Lon. 29. 20. E. lat. 41. 4. N.

CONSTANTLY, ad. in an invariable, consistent, or unalterable manner; without ceasing; perpetually.

To CONSTITUTE, v. n. [constitutus, Lat.] to shine with a collected lustre, or general light.

CONSTELLATION, f. in Astronomy, a system of several stars that are seen in the heavens, near to one another. Astronomers, for the better distinguishing and observing the stars, have reduced the constellations to the form of animals, as men, bulls, bears, &c. or to the images of some things known, as of a crown, a harp, a balance, &c. or gave them the names of those, whose memory, in consideration of some noble exploit, they had a mind to perpetuate.

CONSTERNATION, f. [consternatio, Lat.] amazement, or wonder, occasioned by some unexpected, great and noble object.

To CONSTITUTE, v. n. [constituo, Lat.] to crowd together, or reduce into a narrower compass; to thicken any fluid body; to stuff up or stop any passage. In Physics, to bind, or render cohesive.

CONSTIPATION, f. the act of crowding into a narrow compass; the forcing the particles of a body closer than they were before; the act of thickening, applied to fluids; stoppage or obstruction caused by fullness; cohesiveness.

CONSTITUENT, a. [constituens, Lat.] that which makes any thing be what it is; essential; original; necessary to the existence of a thing; that of which any thing consists.

CONSTITUENT, f. [constituens, Lat.] the person or thing which contributes to the formation of a thing; one who authorizes or deposes another to act for him; that which is necessary or essential to the being or subsistence of a thing.

To CONSTITUTE, v. a. [constituo, Lat.] to give existence to a thing; to give a thing its particular nature and properties; to make a thing to be what it is. Applied to law, to enact, pass, or establish.

CONSTITUTER, f. the person who appoints another to act for him.

CONSTITUTION, f. [constitutio, Lat.] the act of establishing; disposing; producing the particular texture of the parts of a body; the habit or temperament of a body arising from a peculiar disposition and quality of its parts; temper of mind; an established form of government; particular law; established usage; institution.

CONSTITUTIONAL, a. flowing from the particular temperament or habit of a person's body, or from the peculiar temper and disposition of his mind; implanted in the very nature of a thing; consistent with the form of government; legal.

To CONSTRAIN, v. a. [constrindre, Fr.] to force a person to perform or refrain from some action; to violate; to ravish; to confine; including the idea of force or pressure.

CONSTRINABLE, a. liable to force, or compulsion.

CONSTRAINER, f. the person that forces or compels.

CONSTRINT, f. the act of over-ruling the will or desire; compulsion or force; confinement. Figuratively, reserve. SYNON. The duty of a child to its parent obliges it to assist him in his old age. The weaker and softer sex is that which can least brook constraint.

To CONSTRICT, v. a. [constringo, Lat.] to contract or bind close; to draw the parts of any any thing cloſer to each other; to cramp.

CONSTRIC'TION, f. [conſtrictio, Lat.] the drawing the parts into a narrower compaſs, or cloſe together; contraction.

CONSTRIC'TOR, f. [Lat.] that which contracts. In Anatomy, applied to thoſe muſcles which ſhut up or cloſe ſome of the canals or tubes of the body.

To CONSTRINGE, v. a. [conſtringo, Lat.] to bind, or force the parts of a body cloſer together.

CONSTRINGENT, part. [conſtringens, Lat.] having the quality of binding or making the parts of a body approach nearer to each other.

To CONSTRUC'T, v. a. [conſtruetus, Lat.] to form from different materials; to build; to compile, or conſtitute.

CONSTRU'CTION, f. [conſtructio, Lat.] the act of forming from an aſſemblage of different things, joined together with art and regularity; the form of a building; ſtructure; the manner in which things are laid together. In Grammar, the ranging or placing the words of a ſentence, according to the rules, or ſo as to convey a complete meaning or ſenſe. Figuratively, the ſenſe, meaning, or interpretation of a word; judgment; mental representation. Conſtruction of Equations, is the reducing a known equation into lines and ſchemes, whereby the truth of the canon, rule, or equation, may be demonſtrated geometrically.

CONSTRU'CTURE, f. an edifice; a building; a pile or frame compoſed of ſeveral things placed together with regularity and art.

To CO'NSTRUE, v. a. [conſtruo, Lat.] to place words in a grammatical order, and explain their meaning.

CONSUBSTA'NTIAL, [konſubſtántſial] a. [konſubſtantialis, Lat.] having the ſame ſubſtance or eſſence; of the ſame kind or nature, applied to material bodies.

CONSUBSTA'NTIALITY, [konſubſtanſbidítity] f. the exiſtence of more than one in the ſame eſſence.

To CONSUBSTA'NTIATE, [konſubſtántſiate] v. a. [con and ſubſtantia, Lat.] to unite in one common ſubſtance or nature.

CONSUBSTA'NTIATION, [konſubſtántſiátſion] f. the union of the body and blood of Chriſt with the bread, after conſecration, in the ſacrament, according to the Lutherans.

CO'NSUL, f. [Lat.] the title of the chief magiſtrates at Rome, which were created on the expulſion of the Tarquins; they ruled one year; they were presidents in the ſenate, commanded the armies of the republic, and decided the differences between the citizens. A perſon commiſſioned to judge between merchants in foreign parts, take care of their intereſts, and protect their commerce.

CO'NSULAR, a. [conſularis, Lat.] relating or belonging to a conſul.

CO'NSULATE, f. [conſulatus, Lat.] the office of a conſul; the time during which a perſon exerciſes the office of a conſul.

CO'NSULSHIP, f. the office of a conſul.

To CONSU'LT, v. n. [conſulto, Lat.] to deliberate together. Actively, to apply to for advice; to act with regard or reſpect to; to act ſo as to promote ſome end. Figuratively, to plan or contrive; to examine into the ſentiments of an author.

CONSULTA'TION, f. [conſultatio, Lat.] the act of taking the advice of one or more perſons; an aſſembly of ſeveral perſons meeting together to give their opinions on any ſubject.

CONSU'ALTER, f. one who applies to another for counſel, advice or intelligence.

CONSUM'ABLE, a. that which may be diminiſhed, altered, waſted, or deſtroyed.

To CONSUME, v. a. [conſumo, Lat.] to waſte by ſeparating the particles of a body; to diminiſh; to leſten a perſon's fortune or money by expences; to deſtroy.

CONSUMER, f. one who ſpends, waſtes or deſtroys.

To CONSUMMATE, v. a. [conſommer, Fr.] to perfect or finiſh; to complete, or render complete; to end.

CONSUMMATE, part. [conſummatus, Lat.] perfect; complete; finiſhed; without defect of any circumſtance or particular required for its completion or perfection.

CONSUMMA'TION, f. [conſummatio, Lat.] the completion or concluſion of any action or undertaking; the final determination of all things.

CONSUMPTION, f. [conſumptio, Lat.] the act of conſuming, waſting, or deſtroying; the ſtate of waſting, decaying, or perishing. In Medicine, a decay occaſioned by want of nourishment, or a preternatural decay of the body by a gradual waſting of the muſcular ſiſh.

CONSUMPTIVE, a. having the quality of waſting, conſuming, or deſtroying; diſeaſed or affected with a conſumption.

CONTABULA'TION, f. [contabulatio, Lat.] a joining of boards or planks together.

CO'NTACT, f. [contactus, Lat.] touch; cloſe union. In Mathematics, it is when one line, plane, or body is made to touch another, and the parts that do thus touch, are called the points or places of contact.

CONTA'CTION, f. the act of joining or touching.

CONTA'GION, f. [contagio, Lat.] the communicating a diſeaſe from one body to another. Peſtilence, or that which affects a perſon with diſeaſes by unwholeſome eſſuvia. Figuratively, the propagation of vice, or the power which vice has to propagate itſelf.

CONTA'GIOUS, a. [from contagio, Lat.] infeſtious; to be communicated from one to another, applied to the manner in which peſtilential diſeaſes or vices are propagated.

CONTA'GIOUSNESS, f. the quality of propagating a diſorder or vice from one perſon to another.

To CONTA'IN, v. a. [contineo, Lat.] to include any fluid within its ſides, applied to a veſſel; to comprize, applied to writings. Figuratively, peratively, to refrain or keep within bounds.

CONTA'INABLE, a. possible to be included within certain bounds; possible to be included within a vessel.

To CONTA'MINATE, v. a. [contamino, Lat.] to defile; to pollute by base mixture.

CONTA'MINATE, part. [contaminatus, Lat.] defiled; polluted; generally applied to the pollution of the marriage-bed.

CONTAMINA'TION, f. the act of pollution; the state of a thing defiled or polluted.

To CONTE'MN, [kontém] v. a. [contemno, Lat.] to despise; to disregard; to slight, neglect, or defy.

CONTE'MNER, f. one who despises, scorns, or has a mean opinion of a thing; one who bears the threats of another without being concerned; a despiser; a scorner.

To CONTE'MPER, v. a. [contempero, Lat.] to moderate, or allay by a mixture of some opposite quality.

CONTE'MPERAMENT, f. temperature or quality resembling another.

To CONTE'MPERATE, v. a. to diminish any quality by the addition of its opposite.

CONTEMPERATION, f. the act of lessening any quality by the mixture of a contrary one; the act of tempering, or moderating; the act of blending opposite humours.

To CONTE'MPLATE, v. a. [contemplar, Lat.] to consider with continued attention and application. Neuterly, to muse; or think with great attention.

CONTE'MPLATION, f. studious or intricate thought on any subject; the act of keeping any idea brought into the mind, for some time, actually in view; the employment of the thoughts about divine things; study or speculation.

CONTE'MPLATIVE, a. given to thought; studious; employed in study.

CONTE'MPLATIVELY, ad. thoughtfully; attentively; with deep attention.

CONTE'MPLATOR, f. [Lat.] one employed in study; a student.

CONTE'MPORARY, [usually pron. kontemp'orari] a. [contemporain, Fr.] living in the same age; born at the same time; existing at the same point of time.

CONTE'MPT, f. [contemptus, Lat.] the act of looking on a thing as an object worthy of scorn, and, on account of its meanness, unfit for approbation; the state of being despised.

CONTE'MPTIBLE, a. worthy of scorn on account of its vileness or insignificance; despised, or thought unworthy of notice.

CONTE'MPTIBLENESS, f. that quality which renders a thing the object of scorn and contempt.

CONTE'MPTIBLY, ad. meanly; in a manner deserving contempt.

CONTE'MPTUOUS, a. using an insolent expression of scorn and disdain, on account of the meanness of a thing, whether it be real or imaginary.

CONTE'MPTUOUSLY, ad. in a manner which expresses a mean and disdainful idea either of a person or thing.

CONTE'MPTUOUSNESS, f. the quality expressive of an insolent disdain of a thing, on account of its real or supposed meanness.

To CONTE'ND, v. n. [contendo, Lat.] to strive or struggle in opposition to another; to vie with; to debate with warmth.

CONTE'NDER, f. one who opposes the opinions of another; an opponent.

CONTE'NT, a. [contentus, Lat.] satisfied with one's present lot, though not pleased with it; submitting without opposition.

To CONTE'NT, v. a. to satisfy so as to stop complaint; to confine one's desires to that which is in our possession; to restrain our actions within certain limits; to give a person his demands, so as to hinder him from making any more; to please; to gratify.

CONTE'NT, f. a disposition of mind whereby a person confines his desires to what he enjoys, without murmuring at his lot, or wishing ardently for more. Applied to writings or opinions, such as are implicitly believed or acquiesced in without examination.

In the plural, that which is contained or included in any vessel or receptacle; the capacity of containing; the purport of any writing; the chief things treated of by any author. SYNON. No restless or turbulent man can ever enjoy true content. Satisfaction hardly ever accompanies immoderate ambition.

CONTENTA'TION, f. satisfaction or content.

CONTE'NTED, part. resigned to the dispensations of Providence; satisfied with one's present lot, without murmuring at its defectiveness, or desiring more.

CONTE'NTION, f. an opposition of sentiments or opinion; a warm espousal of any doctrine or interest in opposition to others; eagerness to bring about a design; emulation.

CONTE'NTIOUS, [konténshious] a. inclined to oppose the sentiments of another; quarrelsome; litigious.

CONTE'NTIOUSLY, [konténshiously] ad. out of a fondness for opposition or contradiction.

CONTE'NTIOUSNESS, [konténshiousness] f. proneness to oppose, contend, or quarrel with.

CONTE'NTLESS, a. dissatisfied with one's present condition; void of resignation to the dispensations of Providence.

CONTE'NTMENT, f. [contentem. nt., Fr.] full satisfaction in present enjoyment, without a wish for more; pleasure; gratification; or delight.

To CONTE'ST, v. a. [contestar, Fr.] to dispute; to oppose an opinion; to call in question; to contend with a person for any right, property, or other subject. Neuterly, to strive, contend, vie, or emulate.

CONTEST, f. a dispute, or opposition of opinions; a difference; a controversy.

CONTE'STABLE, a. that which may be disputed, opposed, or controverted.

CONTE'STABLENESS, f. possibility of being disputed or controverted.

CONTESTA'TION,

CONTESTA'TION, f. the act of opposing the sentiments of another; strife; contradiction.

To CONTE'X, v. a. [contexo, Lat.] to weave together; to unite by interpolation of parts.

CONTEXT, f. [contextus, Lat.] the general tenor and series of a discourse; the parts which precede or follow a sentence quoted.

CONTE'XT, part. woven close together; interwoven.

CONTE'XTURE, f. the peculiar arrangement, order, or disposition of the parts of a body; the composition which is formed from an union of various, and previously separate parts; constitution; the manner in which any thing is woven or formed.

CONIGNA'TION, f. [conignatio, Lat.] a frame of beams or boards joined together; the act of framing or joining the parts of a building together.

CONTIGU'ITY, f. actual touching; a situation in which two things touch each other.

CONTIGUOUS, a. [contiguus, Lat.] meeting so as to touch; bordering, applied to countries or places which join.

CONTIGUOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to touch or join.

CONTIGUOUSNESS, f. touching; nearness, so as to touch.

CONTINENCE, or CO'NTINENCY, f. [continentia, Lat.] restraint, or command over our thoughts and passions; continuance or uninterrupted series; chastity.

CONTINENT, part. [continentes, Lat.] chaste; restrained from an immoderate use even of lawful pleasures; contiguous, or joined to.

CONTINENT, f. a main land, not intersected by the sea, in contradistinction to an island, which is surrounded with it. According to the accounts given by late navigators of the disposition of the terraqueous globe, we may count four continents, of which there are but two well known. The first, called the ancient Continent, comprehends Europe, Asia, and Africa. The second is the new Continent, called America. The third, which is called the Northern, or Arctic Continent, comprehends Greenland, the land of Spitzberg, Nova Zembla, and the lands of Jesso. The fourth comprehends New Guinea, New Zealand, New Holland, and several others, hitherto little known.

To CONTI'NGE, v. n. [continge, Lat.] to touch; to reach; to happen.

CONTI'NGENCE, or CONTI'NGENCY, f. [from contingo, Lat.] the quality of being free to exist or not to exist, applied to future events, and opposed to those which must necessarily happen.

CONTI'NGENT, a. [contingens, Lat.] not necessarily happening; casual.

CONTI'NGENT, f. something casual, or uncertain; a future event which may or may not happen, according as things shall be circumstanced. In Law, it is an use limited in a conveyance, which may or may not happen, according to the contingency mentioned in the limitation of use. And a contingent remainder is when an estate is limited to take place at a time to come, on an uncertain event.

CONTI'NGENTLY, ad. in a contingent, uncertain, casual manner.

CONTI'NGENTNESS, f. the quality which denominates an action or future event to be uncertain with regard to its existence.

CONTI'NUAL, a. [continuus, Lat.] incessant; without interruption; succeeding without any respite or intermission.

CONTI'NUALLY, ad. without any pause or respite; without ceasing.

CONTI'NUANCE, f. an uninterrupted succession, habit, or repeated act of the same kind; abode or dwelling for some time in the same place; duration; perseverance.

CONTI'NUATE, a. [continuuatus, Lat.] intimately, or closely; uninterrupted; unbroken, or incessant.

CONTI'NUA'TION, f. an uninterrupted succession.

CONTI'NUATIVE, a. an expression which denotes continuation, permanency, or duration.

CONTI'NUA'TOR, f. he that keeps a succession without interruption; one who goes on with the work which another has left imperfect, or carries it on.

To CONTI'NUE, v. n. [continuo, Lat.] to remain with a person; to last; to endure; to unite without any intervening substance; to proceed in an action without interruption.

CONTI'NUEDLY, ad. in a manner free from any intermission, respite, pause or cessation; without ceasing.

CONTI'NUER, f. one who perseveres in any action without interruption or ceasing.

CONTI'NU'ITY, f. [continuitas, Lat.] close union; the texture or cohesion of the parts of an animal body.

CONTI'NUOUS, a. [continuus, Lat.] joined together without any chasm or intervening space.

To CONTO'RT, v. a. to wrest, twist, or writhe.

CONTO'RTION, f. the action of twisting; the twisting or wresting of a member of the body out of its place.

CONTO'UR, [contour] f. [contour, Fr.] in Designing and Painting, an outline which limits or determines any figure.

CO'NTRA, prep. [Lat.] used in Commerce, to signify the side of an account contrary to the debt; i. e. the credit side. In Composition, it signifies contrary, or against.

CO'NTRABAND, a. [contrabanda, Ital.] that which is prohibited by the laws of nations; illegal.

To CO'NTRABAND, v. a. to import prohibited goods.

To CONTRA'CT, v. a. [contractus, Lat.] to draw together; to draw into one mass; to comprise; to make a bargain; to betroth, applied to a compact between a man and woman; to acquire; to draw together; to incur; to obtain; to shorten; to abridge; to reduce into a narrower compass. Neuterly, to shrink, or grow short.

CONTRACT, f. an agreement entered into by two parties; a compact; the act of betrothing; a writing which contains the terms or conditions of a bargain or agreement.

CONTRACTEDNESS, f. the quality which denotes a thing to be reduced into a narrower compass; narrowness or smallness of extent.

CONTRACTIBILITY, f. the possibility of being reduced to a less compass by shrinking.

CONTRACTIBLE, a. capable of being reduced to a narrower compass.

CONTRACTIBLENESS, f. the quality of being reduced to a less compass by shrinking, or suffering contraction.

CONTRACTILE, a. having the power of contracting or of shortening itself.

CONTRACTION, f. [contractio, Lat.] the act of shortening a writing, or reducing the substance of it to less compass; the act of shrinking or decreasing in magnitude or dimensions; the state of a thing shrunk, shrivelled, or drawn into a narrower compass. In Anatomy, it means the shrinking up of a fibre, or an assembling of fibres, when extended. As paralytic disorders generally proceed from a too great relaxation of the fibres in the part affected; so, on the other hand, convulsions and spasms proceed from a preternatural contraction of the muscles of the part affected.

To CONTRADICT, v. a. [contradico, Lat.] to oppose, or assert a thing quite opposite or contrary to another; to deny the assertion of another; to oppose; to be opposite, or irreconcilable with.

CONTRADICTER, f. one who opposes the assertions of another, an opponent.

CONTRADICTION, f. the asserting by words that the opinion of another is false; opposition; inconsistency; contrariety; a species of direct opposition.

CONTRADICTIONOUS, [kontradikshious] a. inconsistent, or opposite; inclined to oppose, or to contradict another.

CONTRADICTIONOUSNESS, [kontradikshiousness] f. inconsistency, opposition, or contrariety.

CONTRADICTIONARILY, ad. inconsistently; in such a manner as to be guilty of inconsistencies or contradictions.

CONTRADICTIONARINESS, f. the highest degree of opposition, applied to truths or opinions.

CONTRADICTIONARY, a. [contradictorius, Lat.] opposite to, or inconsistent with.

CONTRADISTINCTION, f. the explanation or determining the sense of a word, by producing one that has an opposite signification.

To CONTRADISTINGUISH, v. a. to distinguish or explain by contrast, or producing a contrary quality.

CONTRAFISSURE, f. in Surgery, a crack or fissure in the skull, in the part opposite to that wherein the blow was received.

To CONTRAINDICATE, v. a. [contra and indico, Lat.] to point out a method contrary to the general tenor of a disease; as when a vomit might seem advisable, the patient's being subject to vomiting shews that it ought by no means to be prescribed.

CONTRAINDICATION, f. in Physic, a symptom which forbids that to be done which the main scope of a disease at first thought seems to point out.

CONTRAMU'RE, f. [contremur, Fr.] in Fortification, an out-wall about, or opposite to, the main wall of a city.

CONTRARIETY, f. [contra and nitens, Lat.] a contrary resistance, reaction, or a resistance to any force.

CONTRAPOSITION, f. [contra and positio, Lat.] the placing opposite, or over-against.

CONTRARIANT, a. [contrariant, Fr.] contradictory; opposite and irreconcilable in sense.

CONTRARIES, f. [plural of contrary] propositions which mutually destroy each other, and cannot both be true at the same time; or opposites, which, being of the same kind, or common nature, subsisting by turns in the same subject, are as remote from each other as possible, and mutually expel each other; such are whiteness and blackness, &c.

CONTRARIETY, f. [contrarietas, low Lat.] opposition; inconsistency; a quality or position opposite to, or destructive of another.

CONTRARILY, ad. in a manner opposite to, inconsistent, or irreconcilable with; differently; in opposite directions.

CONTRARINESS, f. the quality of being opposed to, or inconsistent with.

CONTRARIOUS, a. [contrarius, Lat.] opposite; different in the highest degree.

CONTRARIOUSLY, ad. oppositely; in contrary or opposite directions; in a manner inconsistent.

CONTRARIWISE, ad. on the contrary; in a contrary manner.

CONTRARY, a. [contrarius, Lat.] applied to qualities or truths, which are such opposites to one another, that the former cannot subsist in the same subject, and the latter cannot be both true at the same time; inconsistent; disagreeing; in an opposite direction; or unfavourable, applied to the wind.

CONTRARY, f. [contraries in the plural] a thing which has qualities opposite to those of another; a proposition or truth opposite to another. On the contrary, borrowed from the commercial phrase per contra, signifies on the opposite side, or in opposition to something which has been alleged or offered. To the contrary, to an intention or purpose quite contrary; against; or in opposition to any thing.

CONTRAST, f. [contrast, Fr.] in Painting and Sculpture, an opposition or difference between the position, attitude, &c. of any two figures, or the lines which form objects, by means whereof they cause a variety, and tend to set off each other. In Architecture, the avoiding of the repetition of the same thing, in order order to please by variety; as in the gallery of the Louvre, the pediments are alternately arched and angular.

To CONTRAST, v. a. in Painting, to place in a contrary attitude, &c. in order to set off one figure by another. Figuratively, to set in contrary positions; to set one thing off by coupling it with another.

CONTRAVALLATION, f. [from contra and vallis, Lat.] in Fortification, the means used by an army to defend themselves from the sallies of a town they besiege, consisting of a trench guarded by a parapet, without musketry of the town, and drawn between the besiegers and the town.

To CONTRAVE'NE, v. a. [contra and venio, Lat.] to oppose; to obstruct the performance of a thing; to act contrary to a bargain, contract, or agreement.

CONTRAVENTION, f. an opposition to any law; a violation of, or acting contrary to, a law.

CONTRAYE'RVA, f. a Peruvian root, which strengthens the stomach, dispels flatulencies, and helps digestion; is useful in fevers, and recommended against the plague and other malignant distempers, and is an excellent sudorific.

CONTRI'BUTARY, a. paying a tribute to the same person; concurring to promote a design.

To CONTRI'BUTE, v. a. [contribuo, Lat.] to give or pay a portion of money towards carrying on some common design: Neuterly, to promote, or bear a part or share in the promoting any design.

CONTRI'BUTION, f. the act of paying a share of the expences required to carry on any design; a sum paid by a town taken, or in danger of being taken by an enemy, to prevent its being plundered; a sum of money collected from several persons.

CONTRI'BUTIVE, a. that which promotes any design in conjunction with other things or persons.

CONTRI'BUTOR, f. [from contribuo, Lat.] one who bears a part in the measures taken to accomplish any design; one who pays his share towards raising a sum of money.

CONTRI'BUTORY, a. promoting the same end; paying a share towards raising a common fund, or certain sum.

CONTRISTATION, f. [contristatio, Lat.] the act of making sad; sorrow; heaviness of heart; sadness; gloominess; grief; discontent; melancholy; moan; trouble.

CONTRITE, a. [contritus, Lat.] in its primary signification, bruised, or much worn. In Divinity, sorrowful for sin from a love of God.

CONTRI'TION, f. [contritio, Lat.] in its primary sense, the act of rubbing two bodies against each other, so as to wear off some parts of their surfaces. In Divinity, that penitence or sorrow for sin which arises from the love of God and virtue.

CONTRI'VABLE, a. possible to be discovered, or planned by the mind.

CONTRI'VANCE, f. the projecting or planning the most possible methods to accomplish any design, or attain any end. Figuratively, a plan; a scheme; a plot; an artifice.

To CONTRIV'E, v. a. [contrivere, Fr.] to invent, plan, or project the means of attaining any end, or accomplishing any design. Neuterly, to form, design, or lay a plot.

CONTRIVER, a. an inventor; a projector; one who forms projects for the attaining an end, or accomplishing some design.

CONTRO'L, [the o in this word and its derivatives is pron. long, kontról] f. [controle, Fr.] the account kept by a person as a check upon another. Figuratively, restraint; check; power; authority; dominion.

To CONTRO'L, v. a. to examine the accounts of another by a check kept against him. Figuratively, to restrain; to keep under restraint; to govern; to over-power; to confute.

CONTRO'LLABLE, a. liable to be controlled, over-ruled, or restrained; subject to restraint.

CONTRO'LLER, f. a person who examines public accounts by a check; one who has the power of over-ruling, restraining, or governing the actions of another.

CONTRO'LLERSHIP, f. the office or employment of a controller.

CONTRO'LEMENT, f. the power of restraining the actions or active powers of another; opposition; resistance.

CONTROVE'RSIAL, [kontrovérsial] a. relating to dispute, or opposition of sentiments; that which may be disputed.

CONTROVERSY, f. [controversia, Lat.] an opposition of opinions or sentiments, generally applied to disputes carried on with some warmth in writing or print; a suit at law about the property of a thing; opposition or struggling against the force of a thing.

To CONTROVERT, v. a. [controverti, Lat.] to oppose the sentiments of another in writing.

CONTROVE'RTIBLE, a. that which may give occasion to dispute; that which may be opposed.

CONTROVE'RTIST, f. a person often engaged in disputes with authors.

CONTUMA'CIOUS, [kontumátsious] a. [contumax, Lat.] insolently obstinate, implying a contempt of lawful authority, and acting against it from a spirit of insolent opposition.

CONTUMA'CIOUSLY, [kontumátsiously] ad. in such a manner as shews an insolent obstinacy, or disobedience of lawful authority.

CONTUMACY, f. [contumacia, Lat.] disobedience to lawful authority, including insolence, perverseness, and the highest degree of impudence.

CONTUME'LIOUS, a. [contumeliosus, Lat.] reproachful; full of poignant and sarcastic expressions, including contempt in the use, and invention to aggravate and vex the person it is used against. Figuratively, a person frequently using reproachful language; that which occasions reproach.

CONTUME'LIOUSLY, ad. in a rude, reproachful proachful, contemptuous, or abusive manner.

CONTUMELIOUSNESS, f. that quality which arises from, or denominates any expressions to be rudely reproachful, and abounding with bitterness.

CONTUMELY, f. [contumelia, Lat.] language abounding with the bitterest expressions, intended to subject a person to the reproach of others; and to render him uneasy. Figuratively, infamy, which subjects a person to the reproaches of others.

To CONTUSE, [contuze] v. a. [contusus, Lat.] in its primary signification, to beat together; to bruise. In Surgery, to hurt by a blow, or some blunt body, so as to discolour the skin by an extravasation of the blood, &c. without breaking it, or destroying its continuity.

CONTUSION, f. [contusio, Lat.] the act of beating or bruising. Figuratively, the effect of beating or bruising. In Medicine, a hurt occasioned by a fall, or blow from any blunt weapon, which discolours the skin without cutting it, or destroying its continuity.

CONVALESCENCE, or CONVALESCENCY, f. a recovery of health.

CONVALESCENT, part. [convalescens, Lat.] recovering; or returning from a disorder to a state of health.

To CONVENE, v. a. [convenio, Lat.] to call together by summons; to assemble a number of persons into the same place; to summons to appear, in a Law sense. Neuterly, to come or assemble together.

CONVENIENCE, or CONVENIENCY, f. [convenientia, Lat.] the suitability or fitness of a thing to promote any end; advantage; profit; ease; or freedom from any obstruction, difficulty, or embarrassment.

CONVENIENT, a. [conveniens, Lat.] fit; suitable to effect an end; proper or necessary; free from obstructions. Applied to situation, commodious; feasible.

CONVENIENTLY, ad. suitable with a person's case, interest, or advantage; commodiously; properly.

CONVENT, f. [conventus, Lat.] an assembly of persons dedicating themselves entirely to the service of religion, and without any commerce with the world; the place inhabited by the religious of either sex.

CONVENTICLE, f. [a diminutive of convener] an assembly. Figuratively, a place of worship, generally applied by warm churchmen to the meetings of non-conformists, by way of reproach; a secret assembly for the contrivance of some plot or crime.

CONVENTICLER, f. one who frequents private and unlawful assemblies.

CONVENTION, f. [conventio, Lat.] a treaty, contract, or agreement between two or more parties; also, an assembly, union, coalition. It is also a name given to an extraordinary assembly of parliament, or the states of the realm, held without the king's writ; as was the convention of the estates, who, upon the retreat of K. James II. came to a conclusion, that he had abdicated the throne, and the right of succession devolved to K. William and Q. Mary; whereupon their assembly expired as a convention, and was converted into a parliament.

CONVENTIONAL, [conversibional] a. stipulated; or agreed to by bargain or contract.

CONVENTIONARY, [conversibionary] a. acting according to the articles of some agreement or contract.

CONVENTUAL, a. [conventual, Fr.] belonging to a convent. Substantively, a monk; or one who lives in a convent.

To CONVERGE, v. n. [convergo, Lat.] to meet in a point; to approach nearer to each other till they join in a point, applied to the rays of light, or lines drawn from different surfaces.

CONVERGENT, or CONVERGING, part. [convergens, Lat.] issuing from divers points, and approaching nearer to each other till they meet in a point.

CONVERSABLE, a. [written sometimes conversible, but improperly] [conversable, Fr.] qualified or fit for conversation; fit for company; affable; inclined to communicate knowledge or sentiments to another.

CONVERSABLENESS, f. the quality flowing from affability and good nature, which renders conversation agreeable.

CONVERSABLY, ad. in such a manner as to engage the conversation of others, and entertain them agreeably with discourse.

CONVERSANT, part. used or habituated to. Familiarly acquainted with; intimate; having intercourse with. Used with about, it implies employed; engaged; relating to; having for its object; or concerning.

CONVERSATION, f. [conversatio, Lat.] easy discourse with another; a familiar discourse; intercourse; commerce; behaviour; life; or moral conduct.

CONVERSATIVE, a. fit for conversation, or intercourse with men, opposed to contemplative.

To CONVERSE, v. n. in its primary signification, to live with; to keep company with. Figuratively, to hold intercourse with; to be acquainted with by study; to be used to; to discourse.

CONVERSE, f. conversation, or the sentiments of a person communicated in familiar discourse. Figuratively, familiar acquaintance. In Geometry, the drawing a conclusion from something supposed, and afterwards drawing the proposition supposed as a conclusion from thence.

CONVERSELY, ad. with change of order; in a contrary order; reciprocally.

CONVERSION, f. [conversio, Lat.] the change from one state to another. In Divinity, a change from wickedness to piety, or from a false religion to a true one. In Rhetoric, the retorting of an argument, whereby it is shewn on opposite sides. In Algebra, the reducing an equation, or quantity sought, if in fractions, to one common denominator, omitting the denominators, and continuing the equation in the numerators only.

CONVERSIVE, a. fit for conversation or discourse; discourse; inclined to communicate sentiments by discourse.

To CONVE'RT, v. a. [converto, Lat.] to change into another substance; to change from one religion to another, generally used for a change from a false to a true one; to change the terms of a proposition; to undergo or suffer a change.

CON'VE'RT, f. a person prevailed on to change his religion.

CONVE'RTER, f. a person who persuades another to change his religion.

CONVERTI'BILITY, f. the quality of being an object of conversion; possibility of conversion.

CONVE'RTIBLE, a. that which may be changed; that which may be altered with respect to its qualities; that which may be transmuted; that which may be interchanged, or used instead of another.

CONVE'RTIBLY, ad. in such a manner as to be interchanged, or used one for the other.

CON'VE'X, a. [convexus, Lat.] swelling to the view; protuberant, applied to the external surface of a globe, or circular body. Used substantively, for convexity.

CONVE'XED, part. bending outwardly, applied to the outward surface of any round body.

CONVE'XEDLY, ad. protuberant; in a convex form; or like the outward surface of a globe.

CONVE'XITY, f. bending, or protuberance.

CONVE'XLY, ad. in a convex form.

CONVE'XNESS, f. the quality arising from the external swelling or bending of a round body.

CONVE'XO-CONCAVE, a. hollow on one side, and convex on the other.

To CONVE'Y, v. a. [conveho, Lat.] to move from one place to another; to transport; to transmit; to transfer a right or property to another; to impart; to introduce.

CONVE'YANCE, f. the act of moving a thing from one place to another; a method of sending goods from one place to another. Figuratively, the means or instruments by which any thing is introduced from one place to another; the transferring of property from one to the other; a writing or instrument by which property is transferred.

CONVE'YANCER, f. a lawyer conversant in drawing writings whereby property is transferred from one person to another.

CONVE'YER, f. a person who carries or removes goods from one place to another; one who is engaged in conducting waters from one place to another by means of pipes, channels, &c.

To CONVI'CT, v. a. [convicto, Lat.] to prove guilty of some crime.

CONVI'CT, a. convicted; detected in guilt.

CON'VICT, f. a person proved to be guilty of a crime.

CONVI'CTION, f. the proof of guilt, either by being outlawed, by appearing and confessing, or by inquest; the act of proving a crime; contumacy; consciousness of guilt.

CONVI'CTIVE, a. having the power of convincing.

To CONVIN'CE, v. a. [convinceo, Lat.] to prove any proposition so as to make a person acknowledge its truth; to evince, manifest, or vindicate.

CONVIN'CI'BLE, a. capable of acknowledging the strength of a proof or evidence; capable of being convicted or proved guilty; liable to be confuted.

CONVIN'CNGLY, ad. in such a manner as to make a person see and acknowledge the truth of any proposition or reality of any fact.

CONVIN'CN'GNESS, f. the evidence of any fact or truth.

CONVI'VAL, or CONVI'VIAL, a. relating to an entertainment of several persons.

CONU'NDRUM, f. [a cant word] a low jest or quibble, drawn from the double signification of words, or distant resemblance of things.

To CO'NVOCATE, v. a. [convoco, Lat.] to call several persons together; to summons several persons to meet, or come to an assembly.

CONVO'CATI'ON, f. [convocatio, Lat.] the act of calling several persons to an assembly; an assembly. An assembly of the clergy of England, by their representatives, to consult upon matters ecclesiastical. It is held during the session of parliament, and consists of an upper and lower house. In the upper sit the bishops, and in the lower the inferior clergy, who are represented by their proctors, consisting of all the deans or archdeacons, of one proctor for every chapter, and two for the clergy of each diocese, in all 143 divines, viz. 22 deans, 53 archdeacons, 24 prebendaries, and 44 proctors of the diocesan clergy. The lower house chuses its prolocutor, whose business it is to take care that the members attend, to collect their debates and votes, and to carry their resolutions to the upper house. The Convocation is summoned by the king's writ, directed to the archbishop of each province, requiring him to summon all bishops, deans, archdeacons, &c. Likewise an assembly at Oxford, consisting of the vice-chancellor, doctors, and masters of arts, wherein the conferring of degrees, expulsion of delinquent members, and other affairs relating to the university, considered as a body corporate, are transacted.

To CONVO'KE, v. a. to call together several persons; to summons to an assembly.

To CONVO'LVE, v. a. [convolveo, Lat.] to roll together; or roll one part over another.

CON'VOLUTED, part. [convolutus, Lat.] twisted, writhed, or rolled up, so that one part laps over another.

CONVOLU'TION, f. [convolutio, Lat.] the act of rolling the parts of a thing over one another; the state of a thing rolled up, so as its parts close over each other.

To CONVO'Y, v. a. [convoyer, Fr.] to guard or protect ships by seas, or provisions by land, and, from falling into the hands of an enemy.

CONVOY, f. in Maritime Affairs, one or more ships of war, employed to accompany and escort merchant ships against pirates and other enemies. In Military Matters, it is a body of soldiers appointed to guard any supply of men, money, ammunition or provisions, conveyed by sea into a town, army, or the like, in time of war.

CONUSANCE, f. [connoissance, Fr.] notice; knowledge; or authority of enquiring into an affair.

To CONVULSE, v. a. [convulsus, Lat.] in Medicine, to give involuntary motion or contraction to any parts of the body.

CONVULSION, f. [convulsio, Lat.] in Medicine, a preternatural and violent contraction of the membranous and muscular parts, arising from a spasmodic structure of the membranes surrounding the spinal marrow, and the nerves distributed from it, and an impetuous flow of the nervous fluid into the organs of motion. The term is likewise applied to any violent eruption, earthquake, or subterraneous tremor; also, to sudden commotions or restlessness in a state.

CONVULSIVE, a. [convulsif, Fr.] that which gives an involuntary motion, twitches, or spasms. In Medicine, applied to those motions which should naturally depend on the will, but by some disorder are caused involuntarily.

CONWAY, a town of N. Wales, in Carmarthenshire. It is seated at the mouth of the river Conway, and is a large walled town, with a castle, and the houses are well built and well-inhabited, and yet the market is but small. Near this town corn, timber, and oak-wood are in great plenty; and they clear out the common-lands here from 11 to 12,000 bushels of grain every year. There is a vast quantity of marcasite up the river, with which copper is made; and some think there are veins of copper-ore near it. Formerly it was famous for pearl-fishing, and there is still plenty of shell-fish, but they are now neglected. It is 235 miles N. W. of London.

COOBY, f. in Natural History, a creature that burrows, and breeds in warrens; a COO, v. n. [formed from the sound] to make a mournful noise like a dove.

COOK, f. [coquus, Lat.] a person who provides victuals for the table. A cook is a female employed in dressing victuals.

To COOK, v. a. [coquo, Lat.] to prepare victuals. Figuratively, to prepare any thing in a particular design.

COOKERY, f. the art of dressing victuals.
COOL, a. [koel, Belg.] a lesser degree of heat; approaching to, or somewhat cold. Figuratively, free from anger or any violent passion; not over fond; indifferent.

To COOL, v. a. [koel, Belg.] to lessen heat. Neuterly, to lose heat; to become less hot. Figuratively, to become less eager by the impulse of any passion or inclination.

COOLER, f. that which has the power of diminishing or lessening the degree of heat in any body; a vessel made use of by brewers to cool their sweet wort in.

COOLLY, ad. in such a manner as to be between hot and cold. Figuratively, without heat or passion.

COOLNESS, f. a middle state between excessive heat and excessive cold. Figuratively, applied to the passions, freedom from any violent affection; want of cordial love, or affectionate regard; indifference.

COOM, f. [écume, Fr.] the foam that gathers over an oven's mouth; the matter which works out of the wheels of carriages.

COOMB, f. a dry measure containing four bushels.

COOP, f. [kuype, Belg.] a vessel for keeping liquor; a pen or inclosure to confine poultry in.

To COOP, v. a. to confine, shut up, or inclose in a narrow compass.

COOPE'E, f. [coupee, Fr.] the name of a particular step or motion in dancing.

COOPER, f. one who makes casks, or any vessel whose parts are held together by hoops.

To CO-OPERATE, v. n. [con and opera, Lat.] to labour with another, in order to perfect or finish any work; to concur in producing the same effect.

CO-OPERATION, f. the act by which two or more persons or things contribute to promote the same end.

CO-OPERATIVE, a. concurring to promote the same design, or produce the same effect.

CO-OPERATOR, f. he that endeavours to promote the same end as others.

CO-ORDINATE, a. [con and ordinatus, Lat.] of equal rank, order, or degree with another.

CO-ORDINATELY, ad. in the same order, or rank with another.

CO-ORDINATENESS, f. the state of a thing of a degree or rank equal with another.

CO-ORDINATION, f. the state of holding the same rank or degree.

COOT, or COOTE, f. in Natural History, a water-fowl, frequenting marshes and fens.

COP, f. [cop, Sax.] the top; the top or head of any thing; or any thing rising to a head or point.

COPAL, f. [Span.] a resinous substance, pure, transparent, of a watery colour, and a fragrant smell. It flows out of the trunk of a tree by incision, is inflammable, dissoluble in oil, and used in disorders of the breast.

COPARCENERS, f. [from con and particeps, Lat.] such as have equal portions in the inheritance of their ancestor: Thus, the female issue, in default of male, come equally to the lands of their ancestor; and by the custom of gavel-kind in Kent, the father's lands, at his death, are equally divided among all his sons.

COPARTNER, f. one who has a share in some common stock or affair; one who carries carries on business in conjunction with another; one equally concerned and involved in the same calamity, or enjoying the same advantage with another.

COPA'RTNERSHIP, f. a state wherein a person has an equal share of the profits or loss of trade, or is engaged in the same common design with another.

COPA'YVA, f. [it is sometimes written cupivi, copivi, copaiba, capayva, cupayva] in Medicine, a gum which distils from a tree in the Brasils, and is made use of in disorders of the urinary passages.

COPE, f. [See COP] any thing with which the head is covered; an ornament worn by priests, reaching from the shoulders to the feet; any thing spread over the head.

To COPE, tr. a. to cover, or arch over. To reward; to give in return. To cope with, to contend with; to fight or combat; to oppose.

COP'EL, See COPPEL.

COPENHA'GEN, a large, rich, and strong town, or city, of Denmark, with a famous university. There was a new palace built here in 1730, which is very magnificent; besides which, there are two others, in which the king sometimes resides. The citadel is a regular fort, defended by five good bastions, a double ditch full of water, and several advanced works. The arsenal is furnished with naval stores, sufficient to fit out a whole fleet. The exchange of the East-India company, their arsenal, the king's stables, the college, the orphan-house, the opera-house, and the military-school, are all superb structures. The royal library contains above 40,000 manuscripts and printed books, collected from all parts. It is above five miles in circumference, and is seated on the eastern shore of the Isle of Zealand, upon a fine bay of the Baltic Sea, near the strait called the Sound. It is 300 miles S. W. of Stockholm, 450 N. W. of Vienna, 500 N. E. of London, and 550 N. N. E. of Paris. Lon. 13. 2. E. lat. 55. 51. N.

COPE'NICAN-SYSTEM, f. is that system of the world wherein the sun is supposed at rest in the center, and the planets, with the earth, to move in ellipses round him. The sun and stars are here supposed at rest, and that diurnal motion which they appear to have from east to west, is imputed to the earth's motion from west to east, round its axis.

COPHS, COPHTI, [kofs, kofsi] or COPTS, a name given to such of the Christians of Egypt as are of the sect of the Jacobites. The Copts have a patriarch, stiled the Patriarch of Alexandria, having eleven or twelve bishops under him, but no archbishop. The rest of the clergy, whether secular or regular, are of the order of St. Anthony, St. Paul, and St. Macarius, each of whom have their monasteries. The Copts have seven sacraments, viz. baptism, the eucharist, confirmation, ordination, faith, fasting, and prayer. They deny the Holy Ghost to proceed from the Son; they only allow of three œcumenical councils, those of Nice, Constantinople, and Ephesus. They allow only of one nature, will, and operation in Jesus Christ, after the union of the humanity with the divinity. With regard to their discipline, they circumcise their children before baptism; they ordain deacons at five years of age; they allow of marriage in the second degree, and put away their wives, and espouse others while the first are living; they forbear to eat blood, and believe in a baptism by fire, which, according to some, they confer by applying a red hot iron to their cheeks or forehead.

CO'PIER, f. one who transcribes a writing, or imitates any coin or other original.

CO'PING, f. [coppe, Sax.] in Architecture, the upper tire of masonry, which covers a wall.

CO'PIOUS, a. [copiosus, Lat.] plentiful; abundant; in great quantities; abounding in words and images; not confined.

CO'PIOUSLY, ad. plentifully; in great quantities; large; in a diffusive manner, applied to stile or descriptions.

CO'PIOUSNESS, f. plenty; abundance; great quantities of any thing; diffusiveness; exuberance.

CO'PPED, part. rising or terminating in a point at top.

CO'PPEL, f. [spelt likewise copel, cupel, and cuppel] [cuppe, Sax.] a vessel used by assayers and refiners to try and refine their metals in.

CO'PPER, f. [koper, Belg.] a hard heavy metal of a reddish colour, heavier than iron or tin, but lighter than silver, lead, or gold; the hardest of all metals next to iron, and on that account mixed with silver and gold to give them a proper degree of hardness; it is more liable to rust than any other metal; its ductility is very great, and its divisibility prodigious; for, as Mr. Boyle observes, a single grain of it dissolved in an alkali, will give a sensible colour to more than 500,000 times its weight of water. Copper also signifies a large vessel or boiler fixed in brick work. A copper-plate, is a thin piece of polished copper, engraved with some design.

CO'PPERAS, f. a vitriolic substance, formed of an infusion of copperas-stones, or gold-stones, in water, afterwards evaporated by fire. It is made use of in dying wool and hats black, in making ink, in tanning leather, in making oil of vitriol, and a kind of Spanish brown for painters.

CO'PPER-SMITH, f. a person who makes vessels formed of copper.

CO'PPERY, a. containing copper; made of copper.

CO'PPICE, [it is often written and pron. copfic] f. [copraux, Fr.] low woods cut at stated times; a small wood, consisting of under-wood, or brush-wood.

CO'PPLE-DUST, f. powder used in refining metals, or the gross parts separated by the coppel.

CO'PPLE-STONES, f. lumps or fragments of stone, broken from the adjacent cliffs, and rounded by being bowled and tumbled to and fire by the action of water.

COPSE, f. See COPPICER.

To COPSE, v. a. to preserve under-wood.

COPULA, f. [Lat.] in Logic, the verb which joins the two terms in an affirmative or negative proposition; as, "poverty makes a man despised;" where makes is the copula: "no misery is the object of choice;" where it is the copula.

To COPULATE, v. a. [copulo, Lat.] to unite, join, or link together. Neuterly, to come together, applied to the commerce between animals of different sexes.

COPULATION, f. the embracing of the different sexes.

COPULATIVE, a. [copulativus, Lat.] a Grammatical Term, that signifies such particles or words in a language, that tie, join, and unite words or sentences together. In Logic, these propositions are called copulative, where the subject and predicate are so linked together by copulative conjunctions, that they may be all severally affirmed or denied one of another.

COPY, f. [copia, low Lat.] a writing which consists of the substance of some other, and is wrote, word for word, from some original; an individual book, or manuscript of an author; an instrument by which any thing is conveyed in law; a picture drawn from an original piece; or a line or piece of writing for scholars to go by.

To COPY, v. a. to transcribe a writing or book word for word; to imitate a design or picture. Used neuterly with from, and sometimes with after, before the object of imitation.

COPYHOLD, f. in Law, a tenure by which the tenant hath nothing to shew but the copy of the rolls made by the steward of the lord's court. This tenure the tenant holds in some sort at the will of the lord, though not simply so, but according to the custom of the manor.

COPYHOLDER, f. a person admitted a tenant of any lands or tenements in a manor, which have, time out of mind, been devisable to such as will take the same by copy of court-roll, according to the custom of the said manor.

To COQUE'T, v. a. [coqueter, Fr.] to entertain with amorous discourse; to treat with an appearance of love, without any real affection. Neuterly, to pretend the lover.

COQUETRY, f. [coquetterie, Fr.] a desire of attracting the notice of the other sex; an affection of love, expressed in advances, without being affected with that passion.

COQUETTE, f. [coquette, Fr.] a gay airy girl, who endeavours to attract the notice of the other sex, and by an affectation to tenderness to engage a number of suitors merely from a principle of vanity, and without any inclination to a conjugal state.

CORAGLE, f. [cawragle, Brit.] a boat used by the Welsh fishers, made of a frame of wicker work covered with leather.

CORAL, f. [corallium, Lat.] a plant of a stony nature, growing in the water.

CORALLINE, a. [corallinus, Lat.] consisting of coral; resembling coral.

CORANT, f. [courant, Fr.] a dance consisting of a nimble and sprightly motion.

CORBAN, f. [קרבן, Heb.] a word which signifies a gift, offering, or present made to God, or his temple. When, among the Jews, a man had thus devoted all his substance, he was forbidden to make use of it. If all that he was to give to his wife, or his father and mother, was declared Corban, he was no longer permitted to allow them necessary subsistence.

CORBE, a. [courbe, Fr.] crooked.

CORBELLS, f. [corbeille, Fr.] in Fortification, little baskets filled with earth, and used to shelter the men when firing at the besiegers.

CORBEL, f. in Architecture, the representation of a basket. Also, a short piece of timber, placed in a wall, with its end sticking out six or eight inches, as occasion serves, in the manner of a shouldering piece.

CORD, f. [cort, Brit.] a string made of hemp twitted, generally applied to that which is composed of several strands. In Scripture, "The cords of the wicked," are the snares with which they entangle the weak and innocent. "The cords of sin," are the consequences of crimes and bad habits, which are as it were bands, which it is almost impossible to break. "Let us cast away their cords from us," is to cast off subjection, which, like cords, binds and restrains. "To draw iniquity with cords of vanity," are worldly profits, or pleasurable allurements, which attract as strongly as cords. "The cords of a man," are such motives as are suited to a man as a rational agent, and consist in reasons and exhortations. A cord of wood, is a quantity consisting of a pile of eight feet long, four high, and four broad, being supposed originally to be measured by a cord.

To CORD, v. a. to bind or fasten several things together with a cord.

CORDAGE, f. a quantity of cords; the ropes of a ship.

CORDED, part. made of ropes, or cords. A corded silk is that whose surface is not level, but rises in weals of the size of a small string or cord.

CORDELIERS, [Cordeliers] f. [Fr.] a Franciscan, or religious order of St. Francis; they wear a coarse grey cloth, with a little cowl, or cloak of the same cloth, and a rope-girdle with three knots, from whence they take their name. They are enjoined to live in common. Those who are admitted into the order are first to sell all they have, and give it to the poor. The priests are to fast from the feast of All Saints till the Nativity.

COR'DIAL, f. in Medicine, a draught or potion which encreases the strength of the heart, or that which increases the natural strength, by bringing the serum of the blood into a condition proper for circulation and nutrition.

trition. Figuratively, any thing which occasions joy, gladness, or revives the spirits.

COR'DIAL, a. reviving; strengthening. Applied to the affections, sincere; hearty; without hypocrisy.

COR'DIALITY, f. sincere affection; freedom from hypocrisy.

COR'DIALLY, ad. in a manner free from hypocrisy; in a sincere and affectionate manner.

CORDON, f. [Fr.] the ribbon worn by a knight or member of any order. In Fortification, a row of stones jutting out before the rampart and the basis of the parapet.

CORDWA'NER, f. [cordonnier, Fr.] a person who makes and sells shoes.

CORE, f. [cor, Lat.] the heart; the inner part of any thing.

CORFE-CASTLE, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is seated in a peninsula called Purbeck, on a river, and in a barren soil between two hills, on one of which stands the castle. It has one church, is governed by a mayor and aldermen, and sends two members to parliament. It is 120 miles W. by S. of London.

CORFU a considerable island of Europe, lying near the coast of Epirus, subject to the Venetians, and the most important place they have in these parts; because it commands the Adriatic Sea, for which reason they have always here about 15 galleys, and several other vessels. It formerly belonged to the kingdom of Naples; but the inhabitants submitted to the Venetians about the year 1386. The capital town is of the same name, and seated towards the middle of the eastern coast of the island, over-against Canina. Lon. 19. 3. E. Lat. 39. 40. N.

CORIA'CEOUS, [koridib ouz] a. [coriaceus, Lat.] consisting of, or resembling leather.

CORIA'NDER, f. [coriandrum, Lat.] a plant with a fibrous annual root; it hath an umbellated flower. It is used in medicine as a carminative, and corrector to some cathartics.

CORINTH, a. [from a famous city in Greece of that name] a small fruit commonly called a currant. The Corinthian order, in Architecture, is one of the five orders, and is the most noble, rich, and delicate of them all. The capital of this order is adorned with two rows of leaves, between which little stalks arise, of which 16 volutes are formed, which support the abacus.

CORK, f. [kork, Belg.] in Botany, a species of oak, which is stripped of its bark every eight or ten years, and is so far from being injured thereby, that it is preserved by that means to an hundred years or more. Of the bark are formed bungs for barrels, and stopples for bottles, which likewise go by the name of the tree, and are called corks. In Medicine, it is of service to stop bleeding, being reduced to powder, and put into some astringent liquor; when burned and mixed with the unguentum populneum, it is proper for the piles.

CORKING PIN, f. a pin of a large size.

COR'KY, a. consisting of, or resembling cork.

COR'MORANT, f. [cormorant, Fr.] a bird that preys upon fish. A glutton.

CORN, f. [corn, Sax.] the grain or seeds of plants, separated from the spica, or ear; one species of which is made into bread. There are several species of corn, such as wheat, rye, and barley, millet and rice, oats, maize and lentils, pease, and a number of other kinds, each of which has its usefulness and property. An excrescence or horny substance growing on the toes, from cornu, Lat. a horn. A single particle of gunpowder, or salt.

To CORN, v. a. to form gunpowder into grains or small particles; to salt, or sprinkle meat with salt; so used by the old Saxons.

CORNE'LIAN. See CARNELION.

COR'NEOUS, a. [corneus, Lat.] horny, or resembling horn.

COR'NER, f. [cornel, Brit.] an angle, or space formed by the meeting of two walls. Figuratively, a secret or private place; the extremities.

COR'NER-WISE, ad. from one corner to another; diagonally; with the corner in front.

COR'NET, f. [cornette, Fr.] a horn, or musical wind instrument, used by the ancients, in war; a company or troop, perhaps as many as had one cornet. An officer in the cavalry, who bears the ensign or colours in the troop; he is the third officer in the company, and commands in the absence of the captain and lieutenant. Cornet, in Farriery, is the lowest part of the pattern of a horse.

COR'NICE, f. [corniche, Fr.] in Architecture, the uppermost number of the entablature of a column, or that which crowns the order; likewise all little projectures of masonry or joinery, where there are no columns, as the cornice of a chimney, of a baupetit, &c. Cornice-ring, in Gunnery, the next ring to the muzzle-ring backwards.

CORNI'ULATE, a. [corniculatus, Lat.] in Botany, applied to such plants as, after each flower, produce many horned pods, called siliquae. Corniculate flowers are such hollow flowers as have a kind of spur, or little horn on their upper part.

CORNI'FIC, a. productive of, or making horns.

CORNI'GEROUS, a. horned; bearing, or having horns.

CORNUCOP'IA, f. [Lat.] among the ancients, a horn, out of which a plenty of all things was supposed to grow. It is generally the characteristic of the goddess of plenty, and described in the form of a large horn, adorned with flowers, and filled with fruits.

To CORNU' TE, v. a. [cornutus, Lat.] to confer or bestow horns.

CORNU'TED, part. [cornutus, Lat.] grafted with horns; horned; cuckolded.

CORNU'TO, f. a cuckold.

COR'NWALL, an English county, surrounded rounded on all sides by the sea, except to the E. which joins to Devonshire, from which it is separated by the river Tamer. It is 75 miles in length, and 26 in breadth, but grows narrower gradually towards the land's end. It contains 161 parishes, 27 market-towns, and sends 44 members to parliament. It is remarkable for the stannaries, where they get tin, and to these belong particular laws, immunities, and privileges. And there are particular places which have the coinage of tin, to which all the tin must be carried to be stamped. The other commodities are, blue slate, corn, fruits, cattle, and a little silver. Sometimes a sort of diamonds has been found here, but not so hard as the true. This county was one of the places to which the ancient Britons retreated, whose language they retained for a considerable time, but is now almost extinct, unless at two or three parishes near the land's end. The soil is generally hilly and rocky, covered with shallow earth; though there are many fruitful valleys, particularly near the sea, which they manure with sea-weeds, and fat sand. The air is pretty healthy, though subject to high winds and storms. It has the title of a duchy, and the king's eldest son is duke of Cornwall.

CORNY, a. [from cornu, strong, or hard like a horn; producing grain or corn.

COROLLARY, f. [corollarium, Lat.] an official consequence drawn from something which is proved or demonstrated.

COROMANDEL, the coast so called, is the eastern coast of the peninsula on this side the Ganges, in Asia. It is bounded on the N. by Gokonda, on the E. by the bay of Bengal, on the S. by Madura, and on the W. by Malabar, though some geographers give it different bounds. The country is fertile, healthy, and pleasant. The bulk of the people are Gentoos, and they have various manufactures of coarse cloth.

CORONA, f. [Lat.] in Architecture, a large, flat, strong member of a cornice, so called from its crowning not only the cornice, but likewise the whole order.

CORONAL, f. [from corona, Lat.] a crown; or garland. Adjectively, that which belongs to the crown or top of the head. The coronal artery, in Anatomy, is the first of the cranium, which reaches across from one temple to the other.

CORONARY, a. [coronarius, Lat.] relating to, or seated on, the crown of the head. In Anatomy, applied to those arteries which surround the substance of the heart with blood.

CORONATION, f. the act or solemnity of crowning a king.

CORONER, f. an ancient officer of this Kingdom, so called because he is wholly employed for the king and crown. Coroners are conservators of the peace in the county where they are elected, being usually two for each county. Their authority is judicial and ministerial: judicial, where a person comes to a violent death; to take and enter up appeals of murder, pronounce judgment on outlawries, &c. The ministerial power is, when the coroner executes the king's writ, on exception taken to the sheriff. His authority does not terminate on the demise of the king, as that of judges, &c. does, who act by the king's commission: on default of sheriffs, coroners are to impanel juries, and to return issues on juries not appearing.

CORONET, f. [from corona, Lat.] an inferior crown worn by the nobility; that of a duke is adorned with strawberry leaves; that of a marquis with leaves and pearls placed interchangeably; that of an earl with the pearls raised above the leaves; that of a viscount is surrounded with pearls only; and that of a baron has only four pearls.

CORPORAL, f. [corporal, Fr.] in the army, an inferior, and the lowest officer in the foot, who commands one of the divisions, places and relieves sentinels, keeps good order, and receives the word of the inferiors that pass by his corps. On board ship, an officer, who has the charge of setting the watch and centries, and relieving them: he sees that all the soldiers and sailors keep their arms neat and clean, teaches them how to use them, and has a mate under him.

CORPORAL, a. [corporel, Fr.] relating to the body, in Divinity and Philosophy. When used in opposition to spirit, or its affections, is stiled and spelt corporeal, and then signifies material.

CORPORALITY, f. the quality of consisting of body, or matter.

CORPORALLY, ad. in a sensible or material manner; bodily.

CORPORATE, a. [corporatus, Lat.] united into a body or community.

CORPORATENESS, f. the state of a body corporate or community.

CORPORATION, f. a body politic, authorized by prescription, patent, charter, or by act of parliament, to have a common seal, one head officer or more, able, by their common consent, to grant or receive in law any thing within the compass of their charters; and to sue, and be sued, even as one man. Corporations are either spiritual or temporal: Spiritual, as bishops, deans, archdeacons, parsons, vicars, &c. Temporal, as mayors, commonalty, bailiff, burghesses, &c. And some are of a mixed nature, and composed of temporal and spiritual persons, such as heads of colleges and hospitals.

CORPORATURE, f. [from corpus, Lat.] the state of being embodied.

CORPOREAL, a. [corporeus, Lat.] consisting of matter or body, opposed to spiritual.

CORPOREITY, f. the quality of a thing which has a body.

CORPORIFICATION, f. the act of giving a body to a thing, or rendering it the object of the touch or other senses. In Chemistry, the act of re-uniting spirits into a body, resembling that which they had before their being raised into spirits.

To CORPORIFY, v. a. to thicken or gather ther into a body.

CORPS, [usually pron. kōr] f. [Fr.] a body or collection of soldiers. In Architecture, that part which projects or stands out from a wall, and serves as a ground for some decoration or ornament.

CORPSE, f. [corpus, Lat.] the body, used in contempt; a dead body; a carcase.

CORPULENCE, or CORPULENCY, f. [corpulentia, Lat.] bulkiness of body; fatness; grossness. The most extraordinary instance perhaps of fatness ever known, was that of Edward Bright, of Malden in Essex, who dying in Nov. 1750, weighed 616 pounds; his waistcoat, with great ease, was buttoned round seven men of ordinary size.

CORPULENT, a. [corpulentus, Lat.] fleshy; abounding in fat and flesh.

CORPUS CHRISTI, f. a festival kept the next Thursday after Trinity-Sunday, instituted in honour of the eucharist; to which also one of the colleges in Oxford is dedicated.

CORPUSCULE, f. [corpusculum, Lat.] in Physics, a minute particle, or physical atom, of which a natural body is composed or made up.

CORPUSCULAR, or CORPUSCULARIAN, a. belonging to atoms, or the small particles of bodies. The corpuscularian, or corpuscular, philosophy is that which endeavours to explain the phenomena of nature by the motion, rest, or position of the corpuscles, or minute particles of which bodies consist.

To CORRADE, v. a. [corrado, Lat.] to rub off; to wear away, by rubbing two bodies together.

CORRADIATION, f. the conjunction of rays in one point.

To CORRECT, v. a. [correctum, Lat.] to punish a person for a fault, in order to make him amend. To give a person notice of his faults. In Medicine, to counteract, or lessen the force or ill qualities of one ingredient by another.

CORRECT, a. [correctus, Lat.] that which is perfect; freed from errors or mistakes.

CORRECTION, f. punishment for faults, in order to produce amendment; an amendment; reprehension; censure; or notice of a fault. In Medicine, the lessening any quality of an ingredient by joining it with one of opposite qualities.

CORRECTIVE, a. having the power of counteracting any bad qualities.

CORRECTIVE, f. that which has the power of altering or counteracting any bad quality; limitation; restriction.

CORRECTLY, ad. in such a manner as to be free from faults; exactly.

CORRECTNESS, f. perfection, arising from frequent and accurate alterations.

CORRECTOR, f. he who amends a person by means of punishment. In Medicine, an ingredient in a composition, which guards against, or abates the force of another.

To CORRELATE, v. n. [from con and relatus, Lat.] to have a mutual or reciprocal relation to one another, as father and son.

CORRELATE, f. one that stands in an opposite relation, as father and son.

CORRELATIVE, a. having a reciprocal relation, so that the existence of the one depends on the existence of another.

CORREPTION, f. [corruptum, Lat.] reproof, chiding, reprehension, oburgation.

To CORRESPOND, v. n. [con and respondeo, Lat.] to answer; to match; to suit; to be proportionate, or adequate to another; to keep up an acquaintance with another by sending and receiving letters.

CORRESPONDENCE, or CORRESPONDENCY, f. [from con and respondeo, Lat.] an agreement; the matching and fitting of two things together; an intercourse kept up by letter; friendship; intercourse, or commerce.

CORRESPONDENT, f. a person with whom commerce is carried on, or intelligence kept by mutual messages or letters.

CORRESPONDENT, a. [con and respondeo, Lat.] suiting; fitting; agreeing; answering.

CORRIDOR, f. [Fr.] in Fortification, a road or way, about twenty yards broad, along the edge of a ditch, without side, encompassing the whole fortification, called likewise the covert way. In Architecture, a gallery, or long aisle, round a building, leading to several chambers at a distance from each other.

CORRIGIBLE, a. [from corrigo, Lat.] that which may be altered for the better; that which is a proper object for punishment; corrective; or having the power of amending any error, fault, or bad quality.

CORROBORANT, part. [corroborans, Lat.] having the power of strengthening or giving strength.

To CORROBORATE, v. a. to confirm an assertion; to strengthen or make strong.

CORROBORATION, f. the act of strengthening; the confirmation or establishing a truth by some additional proof.

CORROBORATIVE, a. having the power of increasing strength, or of service in particular bodily weaknesses.

To CORRODE, v. a. [corrado, Lat.] to eat away by degrees, applied to the action of a liquid on some solid body; to prey upon; to consume, or wear away by degrees.

CORRODENT, part. [corradians, Lat.] having the power of separating the particles of a body, applied to the effect of some menstruum or fluid, on solid bodies.

CORROSIBILITY, f. the possibility of being corrosible; the possibility of having its particles divided by some menstruum.

CORROSIBLE, a. [from corrado, Lat.] that which may have its particles consumed, or separated by some menstruum.

CORROSIKENESS, f. the quality of being liable to have its particles separated by a menstruum.

CORROSION, f. the dissolution or separation of the particles of a body by an acid or saline liquor or menstruum.

CORROSIVE

CORRO'SIVE, a. having the power of insinuating itself between, and separating the particles of a body; having the power of vexing, or of making a person uneasy or angry.

CORRO'SIVE, f. that which has the power of consuming, eating, or wasting away; that which has the power of fretting, giving pain, or rendering a person uneasy.

CORRO'SIVELY, ad. in the manner of, or like a corrosive; having the quality of a corrosive.

CORRO'SIVENESS, f. the quality whereby a fluid insinuates itself between the pores of a solid body, separates them, or wastes it away.

CORRUGANT, part. [corrugans, Lat.] having the power of wrinkling, or contracting into wrinkles.

To CORRUGATE, v. a. [corrugo, Lat.] to wrinkle.

CORRUGATION, f. the act of drawing or contracting into wrinkles.

To CORRUPT, v. a. [corruptus, Lat.] to alter the qualities of a body by putrifying. Figuratively, to engage a person to do something contrary to his inclination or conscience by bribes or money; to spoil; to vitiate, or render bad. Neuterly, to grow rotten.

CORRUPT, a. [corruptus, Lat.] vicious; void of moral goodness; lost to piety; biased by bribes. Tainted; rotten; applied to things.

CORRUPTER, f. that which putrifies, or taints. One who, by ill example, or base motives, seduces a person to vice.

CORRUPTIBILITY, f. the possibility of being corrupted, putrified, or rendered worse.

CORRUPTIBLE, a. that which may be putrified or grow rotten; that which may be destroyed or rendered vicious.

CORRUPTION, f. [corruptio, Lat.] the action whereby the body loses all its properties and qualities for a certain time, or whereby its form is altered, and its qualities changed from what they were before; rottenness. In Politics, a state wherein persons act only from lucrative motives; the means by which any person may be rendered vicious; or a thing may be made rotten. In Surgery, the matter contained in an ulcer or wound, called pus by practitioners. In Law, the taint which grows to a person or his heirs, on account of his having been guilty of felony or treason.

CORRUPTIVE, a. having the power or quality of rendering tainted or rotten.

CORRUPTLESS, a. that which cannot be corrupted.

CORRUPTNESS, f. the quality or state of a corrupted body; vice.

CORSAIR, f. [Fr.] an armed vessel, which plunders merchants vessels; a pirate.

CORSE, f. [corps, Fr.] a poetical word for a carcase or dead body.

CORSELET, f. [corselet, Fr.] a little armour for the fore part of the body.

CORSICA, a large island in the Mediterranean Sea, about 88 miles in length, and 40 in breadth. The air is very unwholesome, and the land hilly, full of stones, and cultivated very poorly; however, the valleys produce wheat, and the hills fruits, viz. olives, figs, grapes, almonds and chestnuts. There is a ridge of mountains which divides the island into two parts, the N. and S. The capital is Bastia. It belongs to the French.

CORTICAL, a. [from cortex, Lat.] barky; belonging to the outward part of any thing. In Anatomy, the cortical substance of the brain is its exterior part.

CORTICATED, a. [corticatus, Lat.] resembling the bark of a tree.

CORTICOSE, a. [corticofus, Lat.] full of bark.

CORUSCANT, part. [coruscans, Lat.] glittering by flashes; flashing.

CORUSCATION, f. [coruscatio, Lat.] a quick, sudden, and short darting of splendor; a flash; a glittering light.

CORWEN, a village of Merionethshire, in N. Wales, 10 miles N. E. of Bala.

CORYMBIATED, a. [from corymbus, Lat.] in Botany, abounding or garbished with bunches of berries.

CORYMBIFEROUS, a. [corymbus and fero, Lat.] bearing fruit or berries in bunches.

CORYMBUS, f. [Lat.] in Botany, a round cluster of berries, like those of the ivy, applied to such plants as have a compound discous flower, without any down adhering to their seeds.

COSECANT, f. in Geometry, the secant of an arch, which is the complement of another arch to 90 degrees.

CO'SIER, f. [from couser, old Fr.] a botcher; a low-lived person. A word of contempt.

CO'SINE, f. in Geometry, the part of the diameter intercepted between the center and the right sine, and always equal to the sine of the complement of the arch.

COSMETIC, a. [κοσμητικός, Gr.] having the power of improving the personal charms; beautifying, or heightening beauty.

COSMICAL, a. [κόσμος, Gr.] relating to the world. In Astronomy, rising together, or in the same degree of the ecliptic with the sun.

COSMICALLY, ad. at the same time with the sun.

COSMO'GONY, f. [κόσμος and γένεσις, Gr.] the rise, origin, or creation of the world.

COSMO'GRAPHER, f. [κόσμος and γράφω, Gr.] one who composes a description of the relation, fitness, figure, and disposition of all the parts of the world.

COSMO'GRAPHY, f. [κόσμος and γράφω, Gr.] a description of the several parts of the world; or the art of delineating its several bodies according to their magnitudes, motions, relations, &c. It consists of geography and astronomy.

COSMO'POLITE, or COSMOPO'LITAN, f. a citizen of the world; one who is at home in all companies, and in all countries.

CO'SSACKS, a people inhabiting the confines

finer of Poland, Ruffia, Tartary, and Turkey. They are divided into feveral branches. They live on husbandry, fifhing, and their cattle, but rob their neighbours as often as they have opportunity. Their religion is a mixture of Paganifm, Mahometanifm, and Chriftianity. They are large and well made, have blue eyes, brown hair, and aquiline nofes; the women are handfome, well fhaped, and very complai- fant to ftrangers.

COST, f. [koff, Belg.] the price, or money given for the purchafe of a thing; charge; expence. Figuratively, fumptuousnefs; luxury; lofs; detriment.

To COST, v. n. [preter and participle preter coft] [coufter, Fr.] to be purchafed or bought at a particular fum.

CO'STAL, a. [from cofta, Lat.] belonging to the ribs.

CO'STARD, f. the head or skull. In Gardening, a round bulky apple, fomewhat re- fembling the head.

CO'STIVE, a. [confipatur, Lat.] bound in the body; going feldom to ftool.

CO'STIVENESS, f. in Medicine, a pre- ternatural detention of the excrements, attend- ed with a difficulty of difcharging them.

CO'STLINESS, f. fumptuousnefs; expen- fivenefs; the great value, or fum required for the purchafe of a thing.

CO'STLY, a. requiring a large fum, or much money for its purchafe; expenfive. Fi- guratively, rare; valuable.

CO'STUME, f. among Painters, denotes that every figure in a piece of painting mult be drawn in its proper character.

COT, COTE, or COAT, at the end of Names of places, come generally from the Saxon cot, a cottage.

COT, f. [cot, Sax.] a hut; a cottage.

COTA'NGENT, f. in Geometry, the tan- gent of an arch which is the complement of another to 90 degrees.

COTE'MPORARY, a. [from com and tem- pus, Lat.] living at the fame time with another.

COT-LAND, f. land belonging to a cottage.

COT-QUEAN, f. a perfon who officioufly concerns himfelf with women's affairs.

COT'TAGE. See COT.

COT'TAGER, f. one who dwells in a hut or cottage. In Law, one who lives on a com- mon, without paying rent, and without any lands of his own.

COT'TON, f. [coton, Fr.] the down of the fruit of the cotton-tree. Cotton likewife figni- fies a coarfe kind of cloth made of its threads when fpun.

To COUCH, v. n. [coucher, Fr.] to lie down on a bed; to lie down on the knees bent under, applied to beafts; to lie in wait, or ambush; to lay under as a frutum; to stoop or fink down, through preffure of a heavy burthen, or through pain, fear, or refpect; to include; to comprife; to urge by way of implication; to include by way of analogy or indirectly; to incline a fpear in a proper pofture for attack. In Surgery, to deprefs, or take off a film, which obftructs the fight, called improperly, couching the eye, or couching a patient, inftead of couching a cataract.

COWCH, f. a long feat furnifhed with a mattrafs, on which people lie down for repofe or eafe; a layer or frutum.

COU'CHANT, [koifhong] part. [Fr.] lying down; fquatting. In Heraldry, applied to the pofture of a beaft lying with his belly on the ground, his legs bent under him, and his head looking upwards.

COU'CHEE, [koifbee] f. [Fr.] the time of going to bed, oppofed to leevee.

ÇOU'CHER, f. one who couches perfons for cataracts; an oculift.

COVE, f. [from couvrir, Fr.] a fmall creek or bay; a fhelter, a cover.

CO'VENANT, f. [conventum, Lat.] an agreement between two perfons.

To CO'VENANT, v. n. to bargain; to agree, or ftipulate; to agree with a perfon on certain conditions.

COVENANTE'E, f. in Law, one who is a party to an agreement, or covenant.

COVENA'NTER, f. one who makes an agreement with another.

CO'VINOUS, a. in Law, fraudulent; with an intention to deceive or cheat.

CO'VENTRY, a town in Warwickfhire, which, with Litchfield, is a bifhop's fee. Its market is on Fridays. It is a city and county, containing 19 villages and hamlets, and go- verned by a mayor, two bailiffs, fheriffs, 10 al- dermen, and other officers. It holds pleas for all actions, has a gaol for felons, as well as debtors; and fends two members to parliament. It comprehends 10 wards, 3 parifhes, 2 of which have very lofty fpires, and were fur- rounded with ftrong walls, which were demoli- fhed by the order of king Charles II. in 1662. It has a grammar-fchool, with three mafters, and exhibitions for both Univerfities, and another free fchool for poor boys, befides feveral hospitals, as, one for ten old men, another for 20 blue-coat boys, a third for 8 married cou- ples, and a fourth in Weft-orchard-ftreet. In the market-place ftood the ftatelielt crofs in England, it being 66 feet high, and adorned with the ftatues of feveral kings, but it has been lately taken down. This town is of great extent; but the houfes being moftly very old, and chiefly built with wood and plaifter, with ftories projecting over each other, make but an indifferent appearance. It has a confiderable manufacture in ftuffs, particularly tammies, as alfo ribbands, and has the title of an earldom, It is 91 miles N. W. of London.

To CO'VER, v. a. [couvrir, Fr.] to fpread, or overfread with fomething; to conceal under fomething; to hide by falfe appearances, or fpecious pretexts; to overwhelm or bury; to conceal, as in a wrapper, from human fight; to incubate; to brood on; to copulate with the other fex, applied to horfes.

CO'VER, f. that which is fpread over ano- ther. Figuratively, concealment; a fpecious pretence to conceal or hide a perfon's defigns. ufed used with for. Also, shelter; a place free from danger, used with under.

COVERING, f. dress; any thing spread over another.

COVERLET, f. [couvrelet, Fr.] the uppermost part of the bed-cloaths; or an ornamental covering thrown over the rest of the bed-cloaths.

COVERT, f. [couvert, Fr.] a shelter, or place of defence from danger, a thick, or hiding-place.

COVERT, a. [couvert, Fr.] sheltered; not open, or exposed. Figuratively, secret; private; concealed by some fair pretext, or specious appearance. In Law, under protection or shelter; hence femme couverte, is used for a married woman. Covert way, in Fortification, a space of ground level with the field on the edge of the ditch, three or four fathom broad, ranging round the half moons, or other works.

COVERTLY, ad. in a secret, close, private, or indirect manner.

COVERTNESS, f. the quality of being hidden, unperceived, indirect, or insidious.

COVERTURE, f. shelter; defence against any danger or inconvenience. Figuratively, a specious pretext or appearance to conceal a bad design. In Law, the state or condition of a married woman.

To CO'VET, v. a. [convaiter, Fr.] to desire vehemently what a person is not possessed of; to prosecute, or endeavour to acquire with great eagerness. Neuterly, to have a strong and violent desire.

COVETABLE, a. that which is proper or fit, or worthy to be desired or wished for.

COVETOUS, a. [conviteux, Fr.] excessively desirous of; inordinately eager after the acquiring and preserving of money; avaricious, in a bad sense. Desirous, fond, or eager to possess, used in a good sense.

COVETOUSLY, ad. in a greedy, avaricious manner.

COVETOUSNESS, f. the quality of being inordinately fond of money, or eager after gain.

COVEY, f. [covée, Fr.] a hatch; or an old bird with her young; a number or collection of birds near one another.

COUGH, [koff] f. [kuch, Belg.] in Medicine, a convulsive motion of the diaphragm, muscles of the larynx, thorax, and abdomen, violently shaking and expelling the air drawn into the lungs by inspiration.

To COUGH, [koff] v. n. [kuchen, Belg.] to have the diaphragm or lungs convulsed by the irritation of serous humours, which they endeavour to expel, and by that means cause a noise like an explosion; to make a noise in endeavouring to discharge the trachea or lungs of the lymph with which it is overcharged, on account of the stoppage of perspiration. Actively, to eject by coughing, used with up.

COUGHER, [kiffer] f. a person affected with a cough.

COVIN, or CO'VINE, f. [from convenir, Fr.] an agreement between two or more, in order to cheat a person.

CO'VING, f. [from couvrir, Fr.] in Building, applied to houses projecting over the ground plot, or the turned projecture arched with timber, lathed and plastered.

COULD, [the preterimperfect of CAN] was able; or had in my power to.

CO'ULTER, f. [culter, Lat.] the sharp iron which cuts the earth, perpendicular to the plough-share.

CO'UNCIL, f. [concilium, Lat.] an assembly met together to consider, examine, or deliberate on any subject. Common-council is a court wherein are made all bye-laws that bind the citizens. It consists, like the parliament, of two parts, the upper and the lower; the upper is composed of the lord-mayor and aldermen, and the lower of a number of common-council-men chosen by the several wards, as representatives of the body of citizens. Privy-council may be called the primum mobile of the civil government of Great Britain, bearing part of that great weight of it, which otherwise would lie too heavy upon the king. It is composed of persons eminent for their political knowledge, the number of whom is at the sovereign's pleasure, who are bound by oath to advise the king to the best of their judgment, with all the fidelity and secrecy that becomes their station. Cabinet-council, a select number chosen out of the privy-council, with whom his majesty determines such matters as are most important, and require the utmost secrecy. Council of war is an assembly of the principal officers of an army or fleet, convened by the general or admiral to concert measures for their conduct in their respective operations. Oecumenical or general council is an assembly which represents the whole body of the universal church. Provincial council, an assembly of the prelates of a province under their metropolitan. National council is the assembly of all the prelates in a nation under their primate or metropolitan.

CO'UNCIL-BOARD, f. a table at which matters of state are taken into consideration.

CO'UNSEL, f. [consilium, Lat.] advice; direction; deliberation; prudence, secrecy; scheme; design. In Law, a person who pleads at the bar, an abbreviation of counsellor.

To CO'UNSEL, v. a. [conseiller, Fr.] to give advice, or inform a person of the most advantageous way of regulating any point in his conduct, or ordering any particular measure; to advise any particular measure.

CO'UNSELLABLE, a. ready to follow the advice or persuasion of others.

CO'UNSELLOR, f. one who gives advice to, or endeavours to persuade another; a confidant. Figuratively, one whose province it is to advise in matters of state. In Law, a person who is consulted on any difficulty arising in any writing, who pleads at the bar, and has been admitted as a barrister.

CO'UNSELLORSHIP, f. the office or post of counsellor.

To COUNT, v. a. [compter, Fr.] to number, or tell; to reckon; to esteem; to account, count, or look upon in any particular light; to impute or charge; used with to. Neuterly, to draw as a consequence from; to found or build a scheme or argument upon.

COUNT, f. [compte, Fr.] See COMPT.

COUNT, f. [compte, Fr.] a nobleman who possesses a domain erected into a county, in rank between a duke and baron, and bears on his arms a coronet adorned with three precious stones, and surmounted with three large leaves, whereof those in the middle and extremities advance above the rest.

COUNTABLE, a. that which may be numbered.

COUNTENANCE, f. [contenance, Fr.] the form of the face, or particular cast of the features. Air, or look; confidence of mien. To keep countenance, a composure of the features and complexion wherein they undergo no change. Show; resemblance. Figuratively, protection, patronage, support.

To COUNTENANCE, v. a. to support, favour, or protect. Figuratively, to act suitable to; to keep up the appearance of a thing; to encourage; to appear in defence of.

COUNTENANCER, f. one who appears in behalf of, or encourages a person or design.

COUNTER, f. [comptoir, Fr.] a small piece of money used as a means of reckoning. The table or board on which goods are shewn, or money told in a shop. In Farriery, that part of a horse's forehead that lies between the shoulder and under the neck.

COUNTER, ad. [contre, Fr.] in opposition to; contrary to. This word is often used in composition, and may be placed before any word used in a sense of opposition.

To COUNTERACT, v. a. to destroy the power of any cause, by acting contrary to it.

To COUNTERBALANCE, v. a. to weigh one thing against another. Figuratively, to act against with an opposite effect.

To COUNTERBUFF, v. a. to beat back a thing in motion, in a direction contrary to that in which it moved at first.

To COUNTERCHANGE, v. a. to give and receive; to change one thing for another.

To COUNTERCHARM, v. a. to destroy the effect of a charm by counteracting it.

To COUNTERCHECK, v. a. to stop by a sudden obstruction or opposition.

To COUNTERDRAW, v. a. to copy a design by means of some linen cloth, oiled paper, or some transparent substance, whereon the strokes appearing, are followed or traced with a pencil.

To COUNTERFEIT, v. a. [contrefaire, Fr.] to copy or imitate with an intention to make the thing pass for an original; to imitate; to resemble. Figuratively, to put on the appearance of something really excellent.

COUNTERFEIT, a. made or copied from another, with an intention to pass for an original; forged; fictitious. Figuratively, deceitful; hypocritical.

COUNTERFEIT, f. one who personates another; an impostor.

COUNTERFEITER, f. a forger; one who imitates a thing with an intention to pass the resemblance as an original.

COUNTERFEITLY, ad. with forgery; fictitiously; with dissimulation.

COUNTERGAUGE, f. in Carpentry, a method used in measuring the joints, by transferring the breadth of a mortise to the place in the timber where the tenon is to be, in order to make them fit each other.

COUNTERLIGHT, f. in Painting, a window or light opposite any thing, which makes it appear to a disadvantage.

To COUNTERMAND, v. a. [contremander, Fr.] to order something contrary to what has been commanded; to contradict, or repeal an order. Figuratively, to oppose; to set one's self in opposition to the commands of another.

To COUNTERMARCH, v. a. to march in a direction opposite to that in which an army began; to march back.

COUNTERMARCH, f. in War, a change of the wings and front of a battalion, whereby the men in the front come to be in the rear. Figuratively, a change or alteration of measures, or conduct, opposite to those which preceded.

COUNTERMARK, f. a second or third mark put on a bale of goods belonging to several persons, that it may not be opened but in the presence of them all.

COUNTERMINE, f. in War, a subterraneous passage made by the besieged in search of the enemy's mine, to take out the powder, give air to it, or any other ways frustrate its effects.

To COUNTERMINE, v. a. to dig a passage into an enemy's mine, by which the powder may be taken out, air given to it, or other means used to frustrate its intention. Figuratively, to frustrate a design; to counterwork or defeat by secret measures.

COUNTERMOTION, f. a motion opposite or contrary to another.

COUNTERMURE, f. [contremur, Fr.] a little wall built close to another, to strengthen and secure it.

COUNTERNOISE, f. a sound or noise made in opposition to another, in order to drown it, and hinder its being heard.

COUNTEROPENING, f. an opening, vent, or aperture, opposite to another.

COUNTERPANE, f. [contrepoint, Fr.] a cloth or ornamental covering laid over a bed.

COUNTERPART, f. a part opposite to, or which answers another.

COUNTERPLEA, f. the plea of a respondent to that of another; a reply, in order to oppose the plea of another.

To COUNTERPLOT, v. a. to play one plot against another; to endeavour to hinder the effects of, by forming and carrying on one of a contrary tendency.

COUNTERPLOT, f. a stratagem or artifice opposed to another.

To COUNTERPOISE, [counterpoiser] v. a.
[contre

[centre and poids, Fr.] to place one weight against another; to act against with equal weight. Figuratively, to produce a contrary action by an equal weight; to act with equal power against any person or cause.

COUNTERPOISE, [kónterpoize] f. a weight which is heavy enough to counterbalance another. Figuratively, an equivalent, or thing of equal worth with another.

COUNTERPRESSURE, f. an opposite force or pressure, by which that which presses the contrary way is counterpoised or destroyed.

COUNTERSCARP, f. [contrescarpe, Fr.] in Fortification, that part of the ditch which is next the camp, or the acclivity or exterior part of the ditch next the country, or field; sometimes it is taken for the whole covert-way, or glacis.

To COUNTERSIGN, [kóntersin] v. a. to sign an order or instrument signed before by a king or person of higher rank; thus when a charter is signed by the king, and afterwards by the secretary, the latter is said to counter-sign it.

COUNTER-TENOR, f. one of the mean or middle parts of music, so called because opposite to the tenor.

COUNTERTURN, f. in Dramatic Poetry, the catastrophe, or full growth of a play, which destroys the expectation, embroils the action in new difficulties, and leaves a person distant from that hope in which it found him.

To COUNTERVAİL, v. a. [contra and valet, Lat.] to act with a force opposite to another; to be of equal force with another. Figuratively, to be equal to; to compensate for; to counterbalance.

COUNTERVAİL, f. equal weight or force; power or value sufficient to oppose or hinder any contrary effect, or objection. Figuratively, a compensation, or that which is of equal force with something else.

COUNTERVIEW, f. opposition, or a situation in which two persons front each other. Figuratively, opposition, or a design which is contrary to that of another. In Painting, a contrast, or situation in which two things illustrate or set off each other.

To COUNTERWORK, v. a. to endeavour to hinder another effect by acting against it; to counteract.

COUNTESS, f. [comtesse, Fr.] the wife of a count or earl.

COUNTING-HOUSE, f. a place or room where traders settle and post their books, or keep their accounts.

COUNTLESS, a. that which cannot be numbered or counted.

COUNTRY, [kúntry] f. [contrée, Fr.] a tract of land under one governor. Figuratively, those parts of a kingdom which are at a distance from cities and courts; the place of any person's birth, or dwelling.

COUNTRY, [kúntry] a. rude; uncultivated; rustic. At a distance in situation; or opposite in principles, to the court. Figuratively, rude; untaught; ignorant. Country dance seems to be derived from the French, which signifies that the partners stand opposite to each other; but not from its being a manner of dancing peculiar to the country.

COUNTRYMAN, [kúntryman] f. one born in the same kingdom or shire with another. Figuratively, a person bred at a distance from cities or courts. A farmer; a husbandman.

COUNTY, f. [comté, Fr.] originally signified the estate of a count, or so far as he had any jurisdiction; at present, it is used in the same sense with a shire, both containing a compass, or portion of the realm, into the which all the land is divided for the better government thereof; so that there is no portion of land that is not contained within some county: there are 40 counties in England, and 12 in Wales. Counties or shires are subdivided into rapes, laths, wapentakes, and hundreds, and these into tithings, &c. In all the counties, except Durham, Cumberland, and Westmoreland, officers are appointed every Michaelmas term under the denomination of sheriffs, for the executing justice; other officers of the counties are lord lieutenants, who command the militia, custos rotularum, justices of the peace, bailiffs, high constables, and coroner. There are four of the counties called counties palatine, viz. Lancaster, Chester, Durham, and Ely, which formerly had very great privileges that are now very much abridged.

COUPE'E, [kóopé] f. [Fr.] in dancing, a motion made with the leg towards, while the other is bent and suspended from the ground.

COUPLE, [kúple] f. [couple, Fr.] a chain, or band which holds dogs together; two; a pair. Figuratively, a male and female joined in marriage.

To COUPLE, [kúple] v. a. [copulo, Lat.] to chain or fasten two or more dogs together. Figuratively, to join two or more things of the same kind together; to join two persons together in marriage; to join in embraces, or copulate.

COUPLET, [kúplet] f. two verses rhiming together. Figuratively, a pair.

COURAGE, [kúraje] a manly bravery of mind, which enables a person to run any risks, undergo any difficulties, and confront any dangers, arising from a sense of duty, and a fear of offending him that made us.

COURAGEOUS, [kúrajéous] a. [courageux, Fr.] resolutely bold, and undertaking any enterprize, though attended with dangers, and surrounded with difficulties.

COURAGEOUSLY, [kúrajéoussly] ad. in a manner free from fear, and resolutely opposing difficulties and dangers.

COURANT, [kóoránt] f. [courant, Fr.] any thing which is spread or published quickly; hence courant has been used for the title of a newspaper.

COURIER, f. [courier, Fr.] a messenger sent in haste with dispatches relating to the state; an express.

COURSE, [kóurse] f. a race. Figuratively, the the place where races are run. Passage from place to place; progress. Tilt; act of running in the lists. Track in which a ship sails. A turn, or order of succession, used with in. "Every one in his course." A methodical procedure. "A course of philosophy, chemistry, &c." In Cookery, a number of dishes set at one time on a table. In Architecture, a continued range of stones, level, or of the same height throughout the whole length of a building, without any interruption or aperture. Courses, the main-sails and fore-sail of a ship.

To COURSE, [körse] v. a. to hunt; to pursue game; to pursue with dogs that hunt in view; to exercise in running or galloping. Neuterly, to run; to pass; or make itself a passage; to rove.

COURSER, [körser] f. a swift horse.

COURT, [kört] f. [cour, Fr.] the place where a prince resides; an open space before a house; a small place inclosed with buildings, excepting an avenue which leads to it, and having no other passage at the other end. Likewise, a large hall or room, where justice is publicly administered. Courts are of various kinds; and are either held in the king's name, as all the ordinary courts; or where the precepts are issued in the name of the judge; as the admiral's court. The superior courts are those of the King's Bench, the Common Pleas, the Exchequer, and the Court of Chancery. See them under their respective heads. A court of record has power to hold plea of real, personal, and mixt actions, where the debt is 40s. or above; as the court of King's Bench, &c. A bafe court, or court not of record, is, where it cannot hold plea of debt or damages, amounting to 40s. or where proceedings are not according to the course of the common law; such as the county court, court of hundreds, court baron, &c. Court-Baron is a court held by every lord of a manor within his own precincts, by common law and custom; the former is where the barons or freeholders, being suitors, are the judges; the other is, that where the lord, or his steward, is the judge. Court of Chivalry, or the Marshal's Court, of which the lord high constable and the earl marshal of England, are judges. This court is the fountain of martial law, and the earl marshal is not only one of the judges, but is to set execution done. Court of Conscience, a court in the cities of London and Westminster, and some other places, where all causes where the debt and damages come under 40s. are determined. Court of Delegates, where delegates are appointed by the king's commission, under the great seal, upon an appeal to him; and is granted in three cases; 1. When a sentence is given in an ecclesiastical cause by the archbishop, or his official; 2. When a sentence is given in an ecclesiastical cause in places exempt; and, 3. When sentence is given in the court of admiralty, in suits civil, or marine, by order of the civil law. Court of Hustings, is a court of record, held at Guildhall, for the city of London, before the lord-mayor and aldermen, sheriffs, and recorder, where all pleas real, personal, and mixt, are determined; where all lands, tenements, &c. within the said city, or its bounds, are pleadable in two Hustings; the one called the Hustings of the plea of lands, and the other the Hustings of the common pleas. This is the highest court within the city, in which writs of exigent may be taken out, and outlawries awarded, wherein judgment is given by the recorder. Court-Leet, is a court held by the lord of a manor, wherein all offences, except high treason, are enquired into, and punished. Court-Martial, is appointed for enquiring into, and punishing offences in officers, soldiers, and sailors, in a manner agreeable to the regulations of the mutiny bill. Court of Requests was antiently a court of equity, of the same nature with the chancery, but inferior to it; and has been long since abolished. Figuratively, the retinue or persons which attend on a prince in his palace; any jurisdiction, military, civil, or ecclesiastical. The art of pleasing or insinuation.

To COURT, [kört] v. a. to woo; to endeavour to engage the affections of a woman with a view of marriage. Figuratively, to solicit; to seek after with eagerness; to flatter; to endeavour to please, or to insinuate one's self into the good graces of another.

COURT-HAND, [kört-hand] a large square character, abounding in abbreviations, in which records and law proceedings were formerly wrote.

COURTEOUS, [körtous, or körtous] a. [courtois, Fr.] affable; polite; full of respect and civility.

COURTEOUSLY, [körtoussly or körtoussly] ad. in a respectful, civil, complaisant manner.

COURTEOUSNESS, [körtoussness or körtoussness] f. civil, affable, and complaisant behaviour, tending to gain the affection of another.

COURTESAN, or COURTEZAN, [körtizan or körtizan] f. [courtisane, Fr.] an unchaste woman; a prostitute.

COURTESY, [körtesy or körtesy] f. [courtoisie, Fr.] an affable, and polite address; an act of kindness, civility, or respect. Figuratively, the method in which women shew their respect of ceremony, i. e. by bending the knees and sinking the body. In Law, a tenure, not of right, but purely by the favour and good nature of others. Courtesy of England, is applied to a right which a person has to an inheritance, who marries an heiress, that has a child by him, after both she and the child are dead. Pa ov. Full of courtesy full of craft.

COURTIER, [körtier] f. one who frequents the courts of princes; one who espouses the measures of the court, in opposition to those of the country; one who solicits and endeavours to engage the affections or esteem of another.

COURTLIKE [körtlike] a. elegant; polite; resembling the court.

COURTLINESS, [körtliness] f. elegance of manners, civility of behaviour, and politeness of address.

COURTLY,

COURTLY, [körtly] a. relating to, favouring, or flattering the court. Adverbially, in the manner of courtiers; elegantly.

To COURTESY, [pron. ciirtsey and ciirtive], v. n. to sink the body by bending the knees, applied to the method used by the fair sex, to shew their respect and breeding.

COURTSHIP, [körtfip] f. the act of endeavouring to gain the favour of a superior, or the affections of a woman.

COUSIN, [küzin] f. [coufin, Fr.] a title of relation, applied to those who are born of two sisters, or two brothers. Figuratively, a title given by the king to a nobleman, especially to such as form the privy council.

COW, [in the plural anciently kine or keen, but now cows] f. [cu, Sax.] the female of the larger or black cattle: its young are called calves; the male a bull; and its flesh, when killed, beef.

To COW, v. a. [by a contraction from concedo] to depress, to keep in great subjection, so as to render a person unable to undertake any bold and generous action.

COWARD, f. [coward, Fr.] a person who is usually timorous, or afraid of opposing any danger; a word of reproach. SYNON. The coward will fire up upon the least offence, but succeeds no further. The poltroon is so meanly terrified as through want of courage to take every insult calmly. The coward draws back; the poltroon dares not advance.

COWARDICE, f. an excessive timorousness, which renders a person the contempt of his admirers, and the scorn of his friends.

COWARDLINESS, f. the quality of acting like a coward.

COWARDLY, a. in the manner of a person who is afraid to shew resentment, or oppose his enemy.

COWBRIDGE, a town of Glamorgan-shire, in South-Wales, with a market on Tuesdays. It is called by the Welch Pont-ŷwan, from the stone bridge over the river, which soon after falls into the sea. It is seated in a low bottom, and in a fertile soil. The streets are broad and paved; and it is governed by two bailiffs, 12 aldermen, and 12 common-council. The market is well supplied with pigs, cattle, sheep, and provisions. It is 176 miles W. from London.

To COWER, v. n. [currain, Brit.] to stoop by bending the knees, applied to beasts. Figuratively, to stoop or hang over a thing, applied to the attitude of a human creature.

COWES, a sea-port town of Hampshire, on the N. E. coast of the Isle of Wight, chiefly noted for having a safe harbour for ships. It is 26 miles from London.

COWISH, a. timorous; fearful to a vice.

COWL, f. [cugle, Sax.] a kind of veil worn by monks; a vessel in which water is carried on a pole between two persons.

COW-LEECH, f. one who professes to cure diseased cows.

COWLING, a village in Suffolk, 6 miles

S. E. of Newmarket.

CO'WP, a parliament town of Scotland, in the county of Fife, 10 miles W. of St. Andrews.

CO'WSLIP, f. [caslippa, Sax.] in Botany, a small yellowish flower, a species of the primrose.

CO'XCOMB, [käkxöm] f. an ignorant pretender to knowledge and polite accomplishments.

COXCO'MICAL, a. soppish; conceited; affecting an appearance of learning and politeness, including the idea of vanity.

CO'XWOLD, a town in the North-Riding of Yorkshire. It is 214 miles N. by W. of London.

COY, a. [col, Fr.] modest; reserved; not submitting to the familiarities of a lover, or testifying any approbation of his advances.

To COY, v. n. to behave with reserve and disapprobation of the familiarities of a lover; to condescend with reluctance.

CO'YLY, ad. with reserve; with unwillingness to admit any advances of a lover.

CO'YNESS, f. reserve; unwillingness to admit the advances or familiarities of a lover.

CO'YSTREL, f. a degenerate kind of hawk.

To CO'ZEN, [küzze] v. a. to impose on by feigned appearances; to cheat, trick, or defraud.

CO'ZENAGE [küzzenage] f. imposing upon a person by false appearances, in order to deprive him of his property; a fraud.

CO'ZENER, [küzner] f. one who defrauds another by means of specious pretences, or false appearances.

CRA'B, f. [crabba, Sax.] a roundish, flat, sea shell-fish, which every year divest themselves of their shell, and repair that loss by means of a juice with which they cover their bodies. A wild sour small apple, or the tree that bears it. Figuratively, a sour, cross, morose person. A wooden engine with three claws, used in launching ships, or heaving them into the docks. In Astronomy, one of the signs of the Zodiac. See CANCER.

CRA'BBED, a. applied to the temper and behaviour of a person, sour, morose, void of affability. Figuratively, disagreeable, or unpleasing. Applied to writings, not easy to be understood, difficult, or perplexing.

CRA'BBEDLY, ad. in a peevish, morose, sour, and unfociable manner.

CRA'BBEDNESS, f. applied to the taste, sour, or resembling that of a crab; applied to the looks, crossness; applied to behaviour, moroseness; and applied to writings, difficulty, or hardness to be understood.

CRABS-EYES, f. in Pharmacy and Natural History, are found in two separate bags on each side of the stomach of the crawfish, and are alkaline, absorbent, and in some degree diuretic.

CRACK, f. [krack, Belg.] a sudden bursting, by which the parts of a body are separated from each other. Figuratively, the chink or chasm chasm made by the separation of the parts of a body; the found made by any body in bursting or falling; a found made by a sudden and quick blow; a flaw. Craziness of intellect; a boatt.

To CRACK, v. a. [kraecken, Belg.] to break into chinks; to break or split; to destroy by breaking; to make a flaw in a thing; to craze. Neuterly, to burst; to split; to open in chinks; to fall or run to ruin; to make a loud noise by bursting, or from a sudden blow; to boat, used with of.

CRACK-BRAINED, f. one who is disordered in his intellects, or mad.

CRACKER, f. a noisy, boasting fellow. A quantity of gunpowder confined so as to burst with a noise.

To CRACKLE, v. n. to make a low and frequent noise, resembling that of a bay leaf when burnt.

CRACKNEL, f. a hard, brittle cake.

CRA'CWOW, the capital town or city of Poland, and the most important place therein. The streets are broad and straight, but very nasty; and the houses are above five stories high, built with stone, and covered with shingles. The kings of Poland resided here before they removed to Warsaw. It was burnt to the ground in 1702 by the Swedes, and is not likely to be rebuilt very soon. The regalia are kept here, this being the place where the kings of Poland are crowned; and likewise the supreme courts are held here. It is seated in an extensive plain on the rivers Vistula, Weissel, or Weisser, 112 miles S. W. of Warsaw. Lon. 19. 55. E. lat. 50. 10. N.

CRA'DLE, f. [cradel, Sax.] a small moveable bedstead for children, made of wicker-work, and fitted with pieces of wood underneath, which make the segment of a circle, by means of which it is rocked to and fro. Figuratively, infancy. In Surgery, a kind of case resembling a cradle, in which a limb is laid that has been lately set. In ship-building, a frame of timber raised along the outside of a ship, by the bulge, serving to launch her with greater ease and security.

To CRA'DLE, v. a. to lay or rock in a cradle. Figuratively to lay or compose.

CRAFT, f. [craft, Sax.] a trade or mechanic employ; a kind of low cunning, whereby one person out-wits or over-reaches another.

CRAFTILY, ad. in a cunning manner; in a manner which includes in it more art than honesty.

CRAFTINESS, f. cunning.

CRAFTSMAN, f. an artificer, tradesman, manufacturer, or mechanic.

CRAFTY, a. cunning; full of art, whereby a person over-reaches another, or carries on a design against him without his discovery; it includes the idea of selfishness; and sometimes dishonesty.

CRA'G, [kraeghe, Belg.] a neck, or the small end of the neck, applied to a joint of butcher's meat.

CRA'G, f. [craig, Brit.] a rough, steep rock; the rugged parts of a rock.

CRA'GGED, a. full of ruggedness, or uneven parts.

CRA'GGEDNESS, f. the state of being craggy.

CRA'GGY, a. uneven; broken; rugged.

CRAIL, a parliament-town of Scotland, in the county of Fife, seated on the mouth of the Frith of Forth, 7 miles S. E. of St. Andrews.

To CRAM, v. a. [cramma, Sax.] to stuff by force; or to force more into a thing than it can conveniently contain; to fill with more food than a person can conveniently eat; to thrust down by force, applied to the method used to feed and cram turkeys. Neuterly, to eat more than a person can well bear.

CRA'MBO, f. [a cant word] a play in which one person is obliged to find a rhyme to a word given him by another.

CRAMP, f. [crampon, Fr.] in Medicine, a convulsive or involuntary contraction of the muscular part of the body, attended with great pain. Figuratively, any restraint which hinders a person from exerting either the faculties of his mind or the strength of his body. A piece of iron beat at each end, by which two bodies are held together.

CRAMP, a. attended with difficulties; not easy to be understood; a low term.

To CRAMP, v. a. to contract the muscular parts, and thereby to occasion great pain. Figuratively, to restrain, confine, obstruct, or hinder. To fasten together with cramping irons.

CRA'MP-FISH, f. in Natural History, the torpedo, a fish which not only numbs the hands of those that touch it, but likewise affects them in the same manner when they take it with a line and fishing-rod.

CRA'NBORN, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is well watered with streams, and is situate seated for pleasure, there being a chace which extends almost as far as Salisbury. It is 38 miles N. E. of Dorchester, and 93 $\frac{1}{2}$ W. of London.

CRA'NBROOK, a town in Kent, with a market on Saturdays. It is a large and well-frequented place, and the market is the best in these parts. It is 17 miles S. of Maidstone, and 52 S. E. of London.

CRANE, f. [cran, Sax.] a bird with a long bill, neck, and legs. Also a machine used in building and commerce, for raising large stones and other weights. A syphon, or crooked pipe, for drawing liquors out of a bottle or cask. Likewise, a long piece of iron put in a chimney, to hang pots upon.

CRA'NEAGE, f. the liberty of using a crane at a wharf; also, the money paid for drawing up wares out of a ship, &c. with a crane.

CRA'NIUM, f. [Lat.] in Anatomy, an assemblage of bones, which involve and include the cerebellum and brain, commonly called the skull.

CRANK,

CRANK, f. [krank, Belg.] the end of an iron axis turned square down, and turned again square to the first turning down, so that on the last turning down a leather thong is flipt to tread the treadle-wheel about; or, it is a contrivance of a square form projecting out from an axis or spindle, serving by its rotation to rife and fall the pistons of an engine for rising water. Figuratively, any pleasing conceit or pun formed by wresting a word from its original signification.

CRANK, a. in Sea Language, is applied to a ship, which is said to be crankfided, when she cannot bear her sails, or but small sail, without danger of overfetting; and to be crank by the ground, when her floor or bottom is so narrow that she cannot be brought on ground without danger. Healthy; sprightly.

To CRANKLE, v. n. to run in and out; to run in mazes, meanders, or windings. Actively, to break into windings.

CRANKLES, f. an unequal surface; angles formed by the winding of the stream.

CRANNIED, a. full of holes or chinks.

CRANNY, f. [creneau, Fr.] a chink, crevice, or a narrow hole made in a rock or solid body.

CRAPE, f. [crepa, low Lat.] a light transparent manufacture resembling gauze, made of raw silk gummed and twisted in the mill, wove without crossing, and much used in mourning.

CRAPULENCE, f. [crapula, Lat.] drunkenness; or the disorder of the head occasioned by excessive drinking.

CRAPULOUS, a. [crapulosus, Lat.] drunk; sick or disordered in the head by excessive drinking.

To CRASH, v. n. to make a loud noise, applied to that which is occasioned by the fall of several things at once. Actively, to break or bruise by means of force. Figuratively, to drink, applied to liquor.

CRASH, f. a loud, sudden, mixed sound, occasioned by several things falling, or being dashed together.

CRASIS, f. [Lat.] constitution, or the habit of body formed by due temperature of the humours of the body; health.

CRASS, a. [crassus, Lat.] thick; gross; not easily running, applied to fluids.

CRASSITUDE, f. [crassitudo, Lat.] that state of a fluid which enables it to support solid bodies without sinking; grossness.

CRASTINATION, f. [from crastinus, Lat.] the delaying a thing, which ought to be done immediately, to another time.

CRATCH, f. [creche, Fr.] the pallisadoed frame, in which hay is put; a manger.

CRAVAT, f. a cloth worn round the neck; a neckcloth.

To CRAVE, v. a. [crefan, Sax.] to ask with earnestness and submission. Figuratively, to ask insatiably, or wish for without being satisfied; to require as necessary; to call for as a claim, applied to things.

CRAVEN, a division of the West-riding of Yorkshire, which lies on the river Aire.

CRA'VEN, f. a cock that is conquered, and void of courage. Figuratively, a coward, or one afraid to encounter any danger.

To CRA'VEN, v. a. to render inactive by fear; to render a person a coward, or affect with cowardice.

To CRAUNCH, v. a. [from scrantsen, Belg. whence the vulgar more properly say to scrunch] to crush with the teeth.

CRAW, f. [krac, Dan.] the crop or first stomach in birds, made by the infinitely wise Architect of the world to supply the want of teeth and mastication in birds.

CRA'W-FISH, f. [sometimes written crayfish] [écrevisse, Fr.] in Natural History, a small fresh-water fish, in the form of a lobster.

To CRAWL, v. a. [krielen, Belg.] to move with a slow motion along the ground, like a worm. Figuratively, to move slowly; to move in an abject posture, despised by all.

CRA'WLER, f. an animal which moves with its belly on the ground; any animal moving with a slow or creeping motion.

CRAY'ON, [crayon, Fr.] any colour formed into a roll or pencil, with which pictures or portraits are drawn or coloured. Figuratively, any design or portrait formed with crayons.

To CRAZE, v. a. [écrafer, Fr.] to break. Figuratively, to crush or weaken a claim, or argument; to powder. To disorder the senses or brain of a person; to make a person mad.

CRA'ZEDNESS, f. the state of a thing broken; weakness; madness, applied to the understanding.

CRA'ZINESS, f. the state of being mad; weakness.

CRA'ZY, a. [écrafé, Fr.] broken. Figuratively, weak with age; decrepit; feeble; disordered in mind; lunatic, or mad.

To CREAK, [kreek] v. n. [corrupted from crack] to make a harsh, shrill, and disagreeable noise, like that of a rusty hinge, applied both to things and animals.

CREAM, [crem] f. [cremor, Lat.] the thick, fat, or unctuous substance which rises on the surface of milk when it has stood for some time, used in making butter. Figuratively, the best, essential, or most valuable part of any thing; as, the cream of the jest. Cream-faced implies, pale with fear.

To CREAM, [crem] v. n. to rise in cream. To look pale like cream. Actively, to skim off the cream of milk. Figuratively, to take or collect the flower, best part, or quintessence of any thing.

CREAMY, [kréomy] a. abounding with, or of the nature of cream.

CREASE, [kreese] f. a mark made in a thing by folding or doubling it.

To CREASE, [kreese] v. a. to make a mark in any thing by folding or doubling it.

To CREATE, v. a. [creo, Lat.] to form out of nothing. Figuratively, to cause or produce; to occasion; to confer an honour or dignity. In Law, to give a thing new qualities; or put it into a new state.

CREA'TION,

CREATION, f. the act of forming or giving existence. In its strict sense, it implies the giving existence to a thing which had no pre-existent matter. Figuratively, the act of conferring titles and dignity. The things created; the universe.

CREATIVE, a. having the power to form out of nothing; exerting the act or power of creation.

CREATOR, f. [creator, Lat.] the Being that bestows existence, or forms, without any preceding matter.

CREATURE, [kréature] a being which owes its existence to something else. Any thing created. An animal not human. A general term for man. A word of contempt for a human being. A word of petty tenderness. Figuratively, used for one who owes his fortune to, and is at the devotion of, another.

CREATURELY, [kréaturely] ad. having the qualities of a created thing.

CREBRITUDE, f. [crebritudo, Lat.] frequentness, or the quality of repeating the same thing often.

CRE'DENCE, f. [from credo, Lat.] belief; credit; the act of the mind whereby it assents to the truth of a person's pretensions, and places confidence in his claim to assent. Figuratively, that which gives a person right to belief or credit.

CRE'DENDA, f. [Lat.] things or articles which it is necessary to believe; those propositions or articles which are merely the objects of faith, opposed to agenda, or practical duties.

CRE'DENTIAL, [krédentsial] f. [from credens, Lat.] that which gives a right to belief and credit; that which warrants a person's assuming any authority, and claims the respect due to one of that character.

CRE'DIBI'LITY, f. the claim which a thing may have to be assented to or believed; the quality or evidence which renders a thing fit to be assented to; probability.

CRE'DIBLE, a. [credibilis, Lat.] worthy of credit, assent, or belief.

CRE'DIBLENESS, f. the quality which renders a thing worthy of credit, assent, or belief.

CRE'DIBLY, ad. in such a manner as may be assented to; in such a manner as to claim belief.

CRE'DIT, f. [credit, Fr.] belief of a thing as a truth. Figuratively, honour, esteem, testimony, or reputation for honesty; the lending and expectation of money lent within some limited time; the faith reposed in the government by lending money at interest, which may be transferred, though not redeemable, or is promised to be repaid at a certain time. In Commerce, it signifies something sold on trust; and the credit of a person's account is that on which his payments, whether in cash or other commodities, are registered.

To CRE'DIT, v. a. [credo, Lat.] to believe or assent to what a person says as truth. Figuratively, to reflect honour on a person or thing; to trust or confide in one; to let a person have goods on trust. In Commerce, to discharge a debt, by entering an article on the credit side of an account.

CRE'DITABLE, a. that which may engage confidence or esteem. In Commerce, that which may procure trust; honourable; estimable.

CRE'DITABLENESS, f. reputation; the being generally praised and esteemed.

CRE'DITABLY, ad. in such a manner as to keep one's reputation, or avoid disgrace.

CRE'DITON, a town of Devonshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on a rich soil, between two hills, and is a pretty large place, one being called the East town, and the other the West. The church is a handsome structure, built in the form of a cathedral, to which belongs a free-school, with twelve governors, incorporated by queen Elizabeth. It was unhappily almost destroyed by fire in 1743, and the loss was computed at upwards of 50,000l. There were large contributions gathered for their relief throughout all parts of the kingdom. It is 180½ miles W. by N. of London.

CRE'DITOR, f. [creditor, Lat.] one who lets another have any thing on trust; one to whom a debt is owing. In Book-keeping, that side of an account wherein all things which are delivered are entered: in the Cash-book, it contains a person's payments.

CREDU'LITY, f. [credulitas, Lat.] belief, without examining into the truth of the thing assented to; too great easiness in believing.

CRE'DULOUS, a. [credulus, Lat.] assenting to any thing proposed as an object of belief, without examining into its truth.

CRE'DULOUSNESS, f. the quality of believing without examining.

CREED, f. is a brief summary of the articles of a Christian's belief. There are several ancient forms and scattered remains of creeds to be met with in the records of the primitive church; but the most universal creeds, and those which are allowed by the canons of the church, are the Apostolical, the Atanasian and Nicene Creeds.

To CREEK, v. a. [krecke, Belg.] to make a harsh noise.

CREEK, f. [crecca, Sax.] in Geography, a part of the sea which runs into the land; a port, or bay; a prominence, or jutting, in a winding coast.

CRE'EKY, a. full of creeks and windings. To CREEP, v. n. [preter crept, crepan, Sax.] to move with the belly on the ground, applied to reptiles, or animals which have no legs, such as worms and serpents. Figuratively, to grow on the ground, or upon supporters; applied to vegetables. To move slowly; to move unperceived into any place; to come unexpected, or steal out of a place unperceived and unheard; to behave with abjectness, or meanness.

channels of spirit.

CRE'EPER, f. a plant which runs along the ground, or supports itself by means of some stronger body; an iron used to slide along a grate in kitchens; a kind of patten or clog worn by women in dirty weather.

CRE'EP-HOLE, f. a hole or cavity into which an animal may retire to escape danger. Figuratively, an excuse; means devised to escape shame, or elude the force of law.

CRE'EPINGLY, ad. in a slow motion; after the manner of a reptile.

CREMA'TION, f. [crematio, Lat.] a burning.

CRE'MOR, f. [Lat.] a milky substance; a foit liquor resembling cream.

CRE'NATED, a. [crenatus, Lat.] in Botany, notched; jagged; or sawed on the edges.

CRE'PANE, f. in Farriery, an ulcer in the middle of the fore part of the foot, caused by a bilious, sharp, and biting humour that frets the skin, or by a hurt given by striking the hinder-feet.

To CRE'PITATE, v. n. [crepito, Lat.] to make a small crackling noise.

CREPITATION, f. a small crackling noise, as the burning of thorns, parching of pease, &c.

CREPU'SCLE, f. [crepusculum, Lat.] in Astronomy, the twilight.

CRE'SCENT, a. [crescens, Lat.] growing; increasing; in a state of increase.

CRE'SCENT, f. the moon in her state of increase. In Heraldry, it is a bearing in form of a new moon; and is used either as an honourable bearing, or as a distinction between elder and younger families; being generally assigned to the second son, and his descendants.

CRESS, f. [plural creffes, from crefco, Lat.] a herb used for salad, or eat raw, of which there are several sorts; the garden crefs and the water crefs are the most known.

CRE'SSET, f. [croisset, Fr.] a great light set on a light-house, or watch-tower; a beacon.

CREST, f. [crista, Lat.] in Armoury, the top part of the armour for the head, mounting over the helmet in manner of a comb, or tuft of a cock, deriving its name from Crista, a cock's comb, and was for the most part made of feathers, or the hair of horses tails. In Heraldry, the uppermost part of an armoury, or that part of the casque or helmet next to the mantle. The Crest is deemed a greater mark of nobility than the armoury; being borne at tournaments, to which none were admitted, till they had given good proof of their nobility. Figuratively, pride, spirit, or courage.

CRE'STED, a. [cristatas, Lat.] adorned with a plume or crest; having a comb or tuft on the head.

CREST-FALLEN, a. dispirited; cowed; in a state of dejection.

CRE'STLESS, a. in Heraldry, not honoured with coat-armoury; or of a noble or honourable family.

CRETA'CEOUS, [cretaceus] a. [from creta, Lat.] chalky; abounding with; having the qualities of chalk.

CRE'VICE, f. [from crevice, Fr.] a narrow opening made in a thing by its cracking, generally applied to walls or wainscots.

CREW, f. [crud, Sax.] formerly, a company met together, for any purpose. At present applied to the ship's company; or used to signify a company of contemptible persons, or such as herd together with some bad design.

CRE'WEI, f. [kreuel, Belg.] fine worsted, or yarn twisted and made up in a knot or ball.

CRIB, f. [crybbe, Sax.] the rack in a stable. Figuratively, the stall of an ox; a small habitation or hut. The cards which each party lay out of their hands, and are reckoned for the benefit of the dealer at the game of cribbage.

CRIBBAGE, f. a game at cards, wherein the players endeavour to make pairs, sequents, pairs royal, and one and thirty at playing, and to hold in their hands as many fiftens, pairs, and sequents as they can.

CRIB'BBLE, f. [cribrum, Lat.] a corn-sieve.

CRIC'KEITH, a town in Carnarvonshire, whose market is on Wednesdays. Is 236½ miles from London.

CRICK, f. [criceo, Ital.] the noise made by a door when its hinges are rusty, or want oiling; a painful stiffness in the neck.

CRIC'KET, f. an insect which frequents fire-places or ovens, and is remarkable for a continual chirping or creaking noise; a game which is played with a bat and ball.

CRICKHO'WELL, a town of Brecknockshire, in South Wales, seated on the river Uik, over which there is a bridge. It is 149½ miles distant from London.

CRIC'KLADE, a town in Wiltshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated upon the Isis, which almost surrounds it, and here begins to be navigable. It sends two members to parliament; and is 83½ miles W. of London.

CRIE'R, f. a person authorized to proclaim things that are lost, or those which are to be sold.

CRIM-TA'RTARY, or CRIMEA, is the ancient Taurica Cherfonefus, and is a peninsula, lying on the Black Sea, by which it is bounded on the W. and S. on the E. by Circassia, and on the N. by the Palus Meotis. The Tartars are short and squat, with swarthy complexions, pigs eyes, square and flat faces; their hair is black, and as strong as horse-hair, with very little beards. Their shirts and drawers are cotten-cloth, and over them they have cloaks of felt, or sheep-skins. The women are too much like their husbands to be handsome; however, the men usually make use of the slaves which they steal from their neighbours; and are continually roving from one place to another. The country is naturally fruitful, and the produce would be very great in any other hands, but the Tartars make no other use of it than to feed their cattle. It is between 44 and 46 degrees of latitude, and 40 and 44 of longitude.

CRIME,

CRIME, f. [crimen, Lat.] a voluntary breach of any known law; an offence. SYNON. Faults result from human weakness, being transgressions of the rules of duty. Crimes proceed from the wickedness of the heart, being actions against the rules of nature.

CRIMINAL, a. [criminalis, Lat.] contrary to any known law. Figuratively, faulty; worthy of blame; guilty; subject to some punishment on account of the violation of a law. In Law, that which is opposed to civil.

CRIMINAL, f. a person who is accused of a voluntary breach of a known law; a person who has knowingly and wilfully acted contrary to any law.

CRIMINALLY, ad. in a manner inconsistent with innocence; in a manner which implies guilt; or the wilful breach of some law; in a manner which deserves blame or punishment.

CRIMINATION, f. [crimnatio, Lat.] the act of accusing a person of the breach of some law.

CRIMINOUS, a. [criminosus, Lat.] enormously guilty; iniquitous.

CRIMP, a. [from crimble or crumble] easily broken; crumbling with dryness; easily reduced to powder. Figuratively, not consistent; not of any force. A low word.

To CRIMPLE, v. a. [from rump, crumple, or crimple] to draw together in wrinkles.

CRIMSON, f. [cremosino, Ital.] a deep red colour, mixed with an appearance of blue. Figuratively, in Poetical Language, used for a dark, or any degree of a red colour.

To CRIMSON, v. a. to dye or colour with red or crimson.

CRINCUM, f. [a cant word] a cramp; whim.

CRINGE, f. a low bow, carrying with it the idea of fawning and mean servility.

To CRINGE, v. a. [kriechen, Teut.] to form into wrinkles, or uncouth appearances. Neuterly, to behave in a mean, servile, complaisant manner, in order to gain a person's favour, or avert his anger; to fawn.

To CRINKLE, v. n. [krinckelen, Belg.] to go in and out; to wrinkle. Actively, to draw a thing into wrinkles; to make the surface of a thing uneven.

CRINKLE, f. a wrinkle.

CRINOSITY, f. [crinositas, Lat.] the quality of abounding in hair; hairiness.

CRIPPLE, f. [crupel, Sax.] a person who has not the use of his limbs, especially his legs.

To CRIPPLE, v. a. to make lame, or deprive a person of the use of his limbs.

CRIPPLENESS, f. the state of a person who is lame, or has not the use of his limbs.

CRISIS, f. [κρίσις, Gr.] in Medicine, a change in a disorder, which either determines a patient's death or recovery. Figuratively, in Politics, a period of time, wherein an undertaking is arrived at its greatest height; any particular period of time.

CRISP, a. [crispus, Lat.] curled. Indented, winding. Dry, brittle, or easily broken.

To CRISP, v. a. [crispus, Lat.] to curl, or form a thing into a ring; to twist. Neuterly, to run in and out. To make a thing easy to be broken by frying or drying it.

CRISPNESS, f. the quality of a thing curled; easiness to be broken, owing to dryness. In Cookery, the brittleness of a thing, owing to the hard incrustation formed by a brisk fire.

CRISPY, a. curled. In Cookery, brown and brittle.

CRITERION, f. [κρίτηριον, Gr.] a standard by which the goodness or badness of a thing may be measured and judged.

CRITIC, f. [κρίτικος, Gr.] a person formed by nature, and qualified by art, to point out the perfection and imperfection of any of the productions in the arts or sciences; one who is employed in distinguishing the beauties or defects of an author. Figuratively, a censor, or person apt to find fault either with the writings or actions of another.

CRITIC, a. belonging to criticism; or the art of judging of the performances of an author.

CRITIC, [by some spelt critique, and then pron. kreetek] f. [critique, Fr.] an examination or comment on the works of an author, wherein both taste and learning are used as guides; a criticism; the art of criticism.

CRITICAL, a. able to distinguish the beauties and defects of any production; nice, exact, accurate; with all the judgment and care of a critic; after the manner of a critic; according to the rules of criticism. Captious; inclined to find fault; censorious. In Medicine and Politics, that in which some crisis or important change happens.

CRITICALLY, ad. in a critical manner; in such a manner as to discover beauties or defects; exactly; curiously.

CRITICALNESS, f. exactness, nicety, accuracy; the act of exercising the judgment, in order to discern the faults or perfections of any production.

To CRITICISE, [kritisize] v. n. to write remarks, or point out the beauties and defects of any production. Figuratively, to find fault with. Actively, to censure, blame, or find fault with.

CRITICISM, f. the art or standard of judging well of the merits or demerits of any production. Figuratively, a remark or observation made by a critic.

To CROAK, [krök] v. n. [croacazem, Sax.] to make a hoarse noise, applied to that made by a frog or raven. Figuratively, to caw, to cry, or make a disagreeable murmur.

CROAK, [krök] f. the noise made by a frog, raven, or crow.

CROCEOUS, a. [croceus, Lat.] consisting of, or resembling saffron; yellow, or of a saffron colour.

CROCHES, f. little buds upon the top of a deer's horn.

CROCK, f. [kyuck, Belg.] a cup or earthen vessel; a pot to boil victuals in. Figuratively, the smut occasioned by rubbing the outside of a pot against any thing.

CROCKERY, f. [from krack, Belg.] earthen ware.

CROCODILE, f. [crocodilus, Lat.] an amphibious voracious animal, of the lizard kind, and found in Egypt or the East Indies. It grows sometimes to 25 or 30 feet in length, and about the thickness of a man's body; is covered with hard impenetrable scales, except under the belly, where only it is vulnerable; it runs with great swiftness, but cannot easily turn itself.

CROCUS, f. [Lat.] saffron; also, an early flower. In Chemistry, it denotes any metal oxidized to a red or deep yellow colour.

CROFT, f. [croft, Sax.] a little close joining to a house, used either for corn or pasture.

CROISA'DE, or CROISA'DO, f. [from crois, Fr.] a holy war; a name given to the expeditions of the Christians against the Infidels, for the recovery of Palestine; so called because those who were engaged in them wore a cross on their cloaths, and bore one on their forehead.

CROISES, f. [croisés, Fr.] pilgrims bound for the Holy Land, or those who had been already there.

CROMARTIE, a capital town of the shire of Cromartie, in Scotland, seated on the German Ocean, at the mouth of the frith of the same name, 18 miles N. E. of Inverness.

CROMER, a town of Norfolk, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated near the sea-side, and was formerly more considerable than it is at present; for it had two churches, one of which, with several houses, were swallowed up by the sea. The inhabitants are now chiefly fishermen. The town has been walled round, some remains of which are still to be seen; but it at present consists of only about 200 houses, straggling here and there, without form or order. It is 127 miles N. E. of London.

CROMWELL (OLIVER) was the son of Mr. Robert Cromwell, who was the second son of Sir Henry Cromwell, of Hinchingswode, in the county of Huntingdon, by Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Richard Stewart, of the isle of Ely, knight. He was born in the parish of St. John, in the ancient borough of Huntingdon, on April 24 or 25, 1599, in the 41st year of the reign of Elizabeth. He was sent to school under the care of Dr. Thomas Beard, master of the school at Huntingdon. He from thence moved to Sidney college in Cambridge, where he was admitted April 23, in 1616, under the tuition of Mr. Richard Howlet, who, by a strict attention to his pupil's disposition, very luckily discovered, that he was less addicted to speculation than to action. His father dying, he returned home, where his conduct was far from being regular, inasmuch that it grieved his mother, who was a notable and prudent woman, much uneasiness. She was advised by some near relations to send him up to London, and to place him in Lincoln's-inn, which she accordingly did, but without any extraordinary effects, since it only served to bring him acquainted with the vices of the town, by way of addition to those to which he had been addicted in the country. It does not at all appear that he applied himself to the study of the law, which was what his friends aimed at; on the contrary, he continued to pursue his pleasures, and give himself up to wine, women, and play; in which last, though he was sometimes fortunate, yet taking all his expenses together, they so much exceeded his income, that he quickly dissipated all that his father left him. But after a few years spent in this manner, he saw plainly the consequence of his follies, renounced them suddenly, and began to lead a very grave and sober life, and entered into a close friendship with several eminent divines, who looked upon his reformation as very extraordinary, and spoke of him as a man of sense and great abilities. As he was nearly related to Mr. Hampden of Buckinghamshire; to the Barringtons of Essex, and other considerable families, they interested themselves in his favour, and were very desirous of seeing him settled in the world; in order to which, a marriage was proposed, which soon after took effect. The lady he married was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir James Bouchier, of Essex, knight, a woman of spirit and parts, and being descended from an ancient family, did not want a considerable portion of pride. Mr. Cromwell soon after returned to his own country, and settled at Huntingdon, till the death of his uncle Sir Thomas Stuart, who left an estate of between 4 and 5000. a year, induced him to remove into the isle of Ely. It was about this time that he began to converse mostly with those who were then stiled Puritans, and by degrees affect their notions, with great warmth and violence. He was elected a member of the third parliament in the reign of Charles I. which met Jan. 20, in 1628, and was of the committee for religion, where he distinguished himself by his zeal against popery, and by complaining of Dr. Neile, then bishop of Winchester, licensing books, which had a very dangerous tendency. After the dissolution of that parliament, he returned again into the country, where he continued to express much concern for religion, to frequent silenced ministers, and to invite them often to lectures and sermons at his house, by which he again brought his affairs into a very indifferent situation; so that he judged it necessary to try what industry might do towards repairing these breaches, which led him to take a farm at St. Ives, and this he kept about five years; though indeed, instead of repairing, it helped to run out the rest of his fortune. He had prayers in the morning and afternoon, and he gave public notice that he was ready to make restitution to any from whom he had won money at play; and he actually did return 500. to Mr. Calton, from whom he won it several years before. When the earl of Bedford, and some other persons of high distinction, tion, who had estates in Lincolnshire, were desirous of having the fens drained, Cromwell violently opposed it, which gave occasion to Mr. Hampden to recommend him to his friends in parliament as a person capable of conducting great things. He had the address to get himself chosen for Cambridge, a place in which he was not known, and was very zealous in promoting the remonstrance which was carried on Nov. 14, 1641, which laid the basis of the civil war. In 1642 Mr. Cromwell raised a troop of horse, which he commanded, by virtue of a commission from the earl of Essex, and acted very vigorously, so that he was promoted to the rank of colonel, and had 1000 horse under his command, and was some time afterwards lieutenant-general of the horse. In the battle of Marston-Moor, July 3, 1644, it was universally allowed that his cavalry had the greatest share in gaining the battle. In the winter, when the parliament sat, Cromwell and his friends carried what was then called the self-denying ordinance, that excluded the members of either house from having any commands in the army; however, Cromwell was at first occasionally, and at last absolutely exempted. Upon the introduction of the new model, as it was called, the chief command of the army was given to Sir Thomas Fairfax; and from being lieutenant-general of horse, Cromwell became lieutenant-general of the army, of which, while another had the title, he seems to have had the direction. In 1646 the earl of Essex died suddenly; and Cromwell turned his thoughts entirely to make the army the supreme power, which he accordingly effected, and turned out those members of the house who would not act by his direction. As to the circumstances of the beheading the king and the public transactions of those times, they are so well known, that I shall pass them slightly over. Cromwell had the command of the forces in Ireland, and the title of Lord Lieutenant was bestowed upon him; and by the month of June 1650, all Ireland was, in a manner, subdued, and that in so short a space, as nine months. He left Ireton his deputy there, and came over to England. On June 26, 1650, he was appointed general and commander in chief of all the forces of the commonwealth, and set out on his march against the Scots, who had received Charles II. On September 3, 1651, he totally defeated the king's forces at Worcester; he then came up to London, and was congratulated by the house of commons, the council of state, the lord mayor, &c. On the 19th of April, 1653, he called a council of officers, to debate about the government; while they were sitting, colonel Ingoldby came and informed them, that the parliament had framed a bill to continue themselves till Nov. 5; in the next year, proposing to fill up the house by new elections; whereupon the general marched directly to Westminster, with about 300 men, placed his soldiers about the house, entered first himself, and after staying for some time talking to them, he ordered the soldiers to see the house cleared of all members, and having caused the doors to be locked up, went away to Whitehall. On December 16, the same year, Cromwell was invested in the court of Chancery in Westminster-hall, with great solemnity, with the title of Protector of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, being then in the 54th year of his age. He applied himself immediately to the settling of public affairs, both foreign and domestic, and concluded a peace with the States of Holland, in which Denmark was included. He also made peace with Sweden; and both France and Spain contended so earnestly for his friendship, that they made themselves ridiculous. As to domestic affairs, he filled the courts of Westminster with able judges, professed an unalterable resolution of maintaining liberty of conscience, and dismissed from their commands such officers as he could not confide in. He gave the command of all the forces in Scotland to general Monk, and sent his own son Henry to govern Ireland. He, by an ordinance, dated April 12, 1654, united England and Scotland, fixing the number of representatives for the latter at thirty, and soon after he did the same by Ireland. He shewed a great regard to justice, in causing the brother of the ambassador from Portugal to be executed for murder. He called a parliament to meet on Sept. 3, which was accordingly opened on that day, to which the Protector went in great state. He received this house of commons in the painted chamber, where he made them a very long speech. When they came to their house, after electing Mr. William Lenthall their speaker, they fell to debating whether the supreme legislative power of the kingdom should be in a single person or a parliament. This so alarmed the Protector, that on the 12th of the same month, he caused a guard to be set at the painted chamber, where he gave them a sharp reproof, and none were permitted to go into the house afterward before they had taken an oath to be faithful to the Protector and his government. The Protector finding this parliament would give him no money, and that they were about to take away his power, dissolved them. He restored to the city their militia. This year, 1655, there were some conspiracies, for which several persons suffered death, and the Protector from henceforth made no difficulty of supporting his authority, in any manner, and by any means. In the spring of this year he sent a powerful fleet under the command of admiral Penn, and a great body of land forces, commanded by general Venables, in hopes to make himself master of great part of the Spanish West-Indies; and though they failed in their main design, yet they made themselves masters of Jamaica, and admiral Blake did great things in the Mediterranean; so that the Protector's reputation was very high abroad. The writs were issued out for the parliament to meet Sept. 17, 1656, at which time they met accordingly, but there was a guard posted at the door of the house who suffered none to enter till they had swallowed lowed the oaths that were ready prepared for them; by which about 200 were excluded. In the spring of the year 1657, a kind of legislative government was brought upon the carpet, and it was agreed to offer Cromwell the title of king. Finding it disagreeable to his best friends, he told them he could not, with a good conscience, accept the title of king; but his highness resolved upon a new inauguration, which was accordingly, with great solemnity, performed, June 26, 1657, in Westminster-hall, with all the splendor of a coronation. On Jan. 20, 1658, the commons met, as the other house also did, pursuant to the writs of summons issued by the Lord Protector; and all show of force was withdrawn; but the two houses being at variance, the Protector dissolved them Feb. 4, with great bitterness of speech, and deep sorrow of heart. This year Dunkirk, which was taken chiefly by the valour of the English, was delivered into the hands of Lockhart, his ambassador. His favourite daughter, Mrs. Cleypole, was about this time taken ill, and died Aug. 6. He was from that time wholly altered, grew daily more reserved and suspicious, not indeed without reason; for he found a general discontent prevail through the nation. At Hampton court he fell into a kind of low fever, which soon degenerated into a chronic ague. Being removed to London, he became much worse, grew first lethargic, then comatose, from whence he recovered a little, but was not capable of giving any distinct notions about public affairs. He died Sept. 1658, in the 60th year of his age. A very sumptuous funeral was ordered at the public expense, and performed from Somerset-house with a splendour superior to any that has been bestowed upon crowned heads. The Protector had several children, of whom six were to be men and women, viz. two sons and four daughters. 1. Richard Cromwell, born October 1626, and died July 13, 1674, at Chestnut in Hertfordshire; 2. Henry Cromwell, born Jan. 20, 1627, died March 1674; 3. Bridget, who first married commander-general Ireton, and after his decease married general Fleetwood. 4. Elizabeth, born 1652; she married John Cleypole, Esq; a Southamptonshire gentleman, whom the Protector made master of the horse, created a baronet, July 16, 1657, and appointed one of his lords. 5. Mary, who was married to the Lord Viscount Fauconberg, Nov. 1657, who was raised to the dignity of an earl by king William, and died on the last day of the year 1700. 6. Frances, his youngest daughter, was twice married, first to Mr. Rowland Rich, grandson to the earl of Warwick, and died Feb. 11, 1657, who died the 16th of February following. She afterwards married Sir John Rich of Chippenham in Cambridgeshire; by which she left several children, and lived to a great age.

CRONE, f. [kronie, Belg.] an old ewe. Figuratively, an old woman.

CRO'NET, f. in Farriery, the hair which grows over the top of a horse's hoof.

CRO'NY, f. an old and very intimate acquaintance or confident. A cant word.

CROOK, f. [croac, Fr.] any thing bent; a sheep hook; a meander or winding.

To CROOK, v. a. [crocher, Fr.] to bend, or turn any thing so as to resemble a hook.

CROOK'ED, a. [croché, Fr.] bent, opposed to straight; formed into an angle or hook; winding. Figuratively, perverse, or bad. SVNON. By crooked is understood any deviation from natural straightness. Deformed implies any part of the body being imperfect or unnatural. Thus a man is crooked if any ways twisted or bent from the natural shape, and deformed if he has an eye, a finger, or a toe too little or too much.

CROOK'EDLY, ad. not straight; in an untoward, perverse, or uncomplying manner.

CROOK'EDNESS, f. the bending of a body. Figuratively, a deformity of the body, arising from any of its limbs being distorted or out of shape. Applied to the mind or temper, perversity, or a disposition which is not easily pleased.

CROOK'HORN, a town of Somersetshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on a branch of the river Parret, on the confines of Dorsetshire, and the market is good for corn, sheep, and provisions. It is 13½ miles W. by S. of London.

CROP, f. [crop, Sax.] the craw, or first stomach of birds, wherein their food is prepared for digestion.

CROP, f. [croppa, Sax.] the highest part, end, or top of a thing. Figuratively, corn collected in a harvest; the product of a field; any thing cut off.

To CROP, v. a. to cut off the tops or ends of any thing; to mow, reap, or lop. Figuratively, to shorten or consume in eating. Neuterly, to yield a harvest.

CRO'PFULL, a. filled; satiated with food.

CRO'PPER, f. in Natural History, a kind of pigeon, remarkable for swelling its crop.

CROPSICK, a. sick, or disordered by intemperate eating or drinking.

CRO'SIER, [crucier, f. [crozier, Fr.] the pastoral staff of a bishop, so called from its having a cross on the top.

CRO'SLET, f. a small cross.

CROSS, f. [croix, F.] an instrument made of two pieces of wood, cutting or crossing each other at right angles, on which malefactors were executed among the Romans. The sign made by the priest on the forehead of a person when baptized, by drawing two marks, which cross each other, with his fingers dipped in water; one line drawn athwart another. Figuratively, any thing which is contrary to a person's wishes, and is a trial of his patience.

CROSS, a. that which falls athwart. Figuratively, opposite to a person's wishes and expectations; perverse; not complying; peevish; displeas'd with trifles; not easily persuaded; reciprocal on each side; interchanging.

changing.

CROSS, prep. athwart, so as to intersect from one side to another. In Riding, so as to have one leg on each side of a horse. "Cross his back."

To CROSS, v. a. to lay one line so as to form angles with another; to sign with a cross; to mark or conceal; to go over a river. Figuratively, to oppose the designs of another, and thereby render him peevish; to contradict; to dober; to preclude.

CROSS-BAR-SHOT, f. a round shot or bullet with a bar put through it.

CROSS-BITE, f. a cheat, which frustrates a person's designs.

CROSS-BOW, f. an engine or instrument made of a bow fixed across a piece of wood, used in shooting deer, pigeons, &c. It will carry a bullet a considerable distance, and do execution.

CROSS-GRAINED, a. in Joinery, applied to wood, from whence a bough or branch has shot out, the grain of the branch shooting forward, and crossing that of the trunk. Figuratively, hard to please; peevish; perverse; troublesome; vexatious.

CROSSLY, ad. athwart, so as to intersect or form angles. Figuratively, opposite, contrary, untowardly.

CROSSNESS, f. transverseness; intersection; perverseness; peevishness.

CROSS-ROW, f. the alphabet; so named from a cross being placed at the beginning of it.

CROSS-STAFF, f. an instrument used by seamen to take the meridian altitude of the sun or stars, called likewise a fore-staff.

CROSS-WIND, f. a wind blowing either from the right or left across a ship's way.

CROSS-WAY, f. a small path intersecting a main road.

CROTCHET, f. [crochet, Fr.] in Music, one of the notes and marks of time, so called from its resembling a hook, thus 9; it is equal to half a minim or double quaver. In Printing, two opposite lines serving to include any sentence or word that may be left out, without spoiling the sense of a period, marked [thus.] In Building, a support, or piece of wood fitted into another to sustain it. Figuratively, a fancy, odd conceit, or device.

To CROUCH, v. n. [crocher, Fr.] to stoop low, applied to the posture of beasts, when they bend their legs, and approach with their bellies towards the ground, in testimony of obedience and submission. Figuratively, to bend or stoop to a person in a fawning and servile manner.

CROUP, [krûp] f. [cruppe, Fr.] the rump of a fowl; the buttocks of a horse.

CROW, [krô] f. [cræwe, Sax.] a black bird, of the carnivorous kind, or feeding on carrion. To pluck a crow, is to contend with a person. Sometimes it is used for a contention about some worthless thing, or trifling subject. In Mechanics, a strong iron bar, used as a lever to lift up the ends of great heavy timber, force open doors, &c. The noise made by a cock.

CROW. The crow thinks her own bird the fairest. So the Ethiopians are said to paint the Devil white. Every one is partial to, and well conceited of his own art, his own compositions, his own children, his own country, &c.

To CROW, [krô] v. n. [preter, I crew, crowed, or have crewed, cræwan, Sax.] to make a loud shrill noise, applied to that made by a cock. Figuratively, to boast, bully, or assume a superiority over another.

CROWCOMB, a village in Somersetshire, 8 miles N. of Taunton.

CROWD, f. [crudb, Sax.] a great number of people squeezed or close together; a great number of any thing of the same sort adjacent to each other. Figuratively, the vulgar or lower sort of people. Also a fiddle.

To CROWD, v. a. to fill a place with a great and confused multitude of people; to force a great many things in a confused manner into the same place; to press close together; to incumber, or oppress by multitudes. In the Marine, to crowd sail, is to spread all the sails wide upon the yard for the sake of expedition, or quickening the motion of a ship. Neuterly, to go in great multitudes; to thrust among a multitude of others.

CROWDER, f. a fiddler. A low word.
CROW-FOOT, f. in Botany, the ranunculus. In War, a caltrop, or piece of iron, with four points, two, three, or four inches long, used for incommoding the cavalry.

CROWLAND, a town in Lincolnshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated in the Fens, in a dirty soil, and had formerly an abbey of very great note. There is no coming at it but by narrow causeways, which will not admit a cart. It has three streets, separated from each other by water-courses, whose banks are supported by piles, and set with willow-trees. Their chief trade is in fish and fowl, which are here in great plenty; that is, in the adjacent pools and marshes. It is 93 miles N. by W. of London.

CROWLE, a village of Lincolnshire, in the Isle of Axholm. It is 169 miles from London.

CROWN, f. [corona, Lat.] an ornament worn on the head by kings, princes, and noblemen, as a mark of their dignity. It was at first only a fillet tied round the head, but was afterwards made of leaves and flowers and rich stuffs, and sometimes ornamented with jewels of great value. The Jewish high-priest wore a crown, which was girt about his mitre, on the lower part of his bonnet. The Romans had various kinds of crowns, which they bestowed as rewards of military merit; as, 1. The oval Crown, bestowed on generals who were entitled to the honours of the lesser triumph, called ovation. 2. The naval or resplendent Crown, composed of a circle of gold, with ornaments, representing beaks of ships, and given to the captain who first grappled, or the soldiers who first boarded an enemy's ship. 3. The Corona Villaris or Castrensis, was a circle of gold raised with jewels or palfades; the reward reward of him who first entered the enemy's encampments. 4. The mural Crown, a circle of gold indented and embattled; given to him who first mounted the wall of a besieged place, and there planted a standard. 5. The civic Crown, made of the branch of a green oak, and given to him who had saved the life of a citizen. 6. The triumphal Crown, consisting of a wreath of the leaves of laurel, but afterwards made of gold, for those generals who had the honour of a triumph. 7. The crown called Myrmidonis, or Gramineæ, made of grass growing on the place; the reward of a general who had delivered a Roman army from a siege.

The Crown of Law, given by the Greeks to their athletes; and by the Romans to those who had negotiated or concluded a peace with an enemy. They had likewise other crowns given to those who excelled, as poets, orators, &c. These crowns were marks of nobility to the winners; and, upon competitions for rank and dignity, often determined the preference of their favour. Figuratively, a garland of flowers, &c. worn on the head as a mark of honour or merit; a reward for some meritorious deed; royalty; a monarchy; the top of a mountain, but of the head particularly; that part of a hat or cap which covers the head; a piece of money, valued at five shillings in England; honour; ornament; completion or accomplishment.

TO CROWN, v. a. to place a crown on a person's head; to surround the head as with a crown. Figuratively, to dignify or adorn; to perfect; to complete; to finish.

CROWN-GLASS, f. the finest sort of window-glass.

CROWN-OFFICE, f. a court or office under the King's-bench, so called because the King is immediately concerned in what is transacted therein.

CROWN-POST, f. in Building, a post which in some buildings stands upright in the middle between two rafters. In Architecture, the uppermost member of the cornice, called cornice, and larmier.

CROWN-WHEEL, f. the upper wheel of a watch next to, and driven by, the balance.

CROWN-WORKS, f. in Fortification, an outwork running into the field, in order to cover the main hill, and cover the other works of a fort, &c.

CROYDON, a town in Surry, with a market on Saturdays. Its situation is low, near the spring-head of the river Wandel, and is in a manner, surrounded with hills. It is very large, and is chiefly noted for being the seat of the archbishop of Canterbury. It has a large handsome church, an hospital, and a school. It is 9 miles S. of London.

CROYL-STONE, f. in Natural History, a crystallized caulk, in which the crystals are well.

CRUCIAL, [crucialis] a. in form of a cross. facial incision, in Anatomy, incision or cut in the fleshy part, in form of a cross.

CRUCIBLE, f. [crucibulum, low Lat.] a little vessel made either of earth or iron, without a handle, used by refiners, chemists, and others, to melt metals, &c. in. It derives its name from its being formerly marked with a cross.

CRUCIFIX, f. [crucifixus, Lat.] a cross whereon the crucifixion of Christ is represented.

CRUCIFI'XION, f. the act of nailing to a cross.

TO CRUCIFY, v. a. [crucifigo, Lat.] to fasten a person, by nailing his hands and feet on a cross.

CRUDE, a. [crudus, Lat.] raw, applied to flesh not dressed; unchanged or unaltered by any process or preparation. Figuratively, unfinished; immature; not brought to perfection; not reduced to order, or properly examined or modified by the mind; imperfect, unpolished, inadequate, and unrefined, applied to ideas.

CRUDELY, ad. without any preparation; without examination or consideration; gross, applied to ideas.

CRUDENESS, f. unripeness; imperfection; indigestion.

CRUDITY, f. rawness; indigestion; or a thing in its indigested state; the state of a disease, wherein the morbid matter is not yet come to a head, but increases the disorder.

CRUEL, a. [crudelis, Lat.] void of compas-sion, mercy, or pity, and delighted in the sufferings, and increasing the sufferings of others. Figuratively, implacable, inveterate, and causing the greatest degree of torture.

CRUELLY, a. in an inhuman, barbarous and savage manner, wherein the sufferings and tortures of others are beheld with delight, and increased with joy.

CRUELTY, f. a savage disposition, delighting in the misfortunes and sufferings of another, and in increasing them.

CRUENTATE, a. [cruentatus, Lat.] smeared with blood.

CRU'ET, f. [krucke, Belg.] a phial for vine-gar or oil.

CRUISE, f. [kruicke, Belg.] a small cup.

CRUISE, [croise, Fr.] a cross, the original cruisers bearing the cross] a voyage made by a ship up and down a coast, in order to guard it from any attack, or to intercept such of the enemy's vessels as are near it.

TO CRUISE, [kruize] v. n. to rove about at sea in search of an enemy's vessels; to sail to and fro, without any certain course or destination.

CRU'ISER, [krüzer] f. a vessel that sails to and fro, in quest of an enemy's ship.

CRUM, or CRUMB, f. [cruma, Sax.] the soft part of bread. Figuratively, a small particle, or bit.

TO CRUMBLE, v. a. [from the noun] to break into small particles or pieces. Neuterly, to fall into small pieces.

CRUM'MY, a. resembling the crum of bread; soft. Figuratively, plump, or fleshy.

CRUMP, a. [crump, Sax.] crooked, or deformed.

deformed.

To CRUMPLE, v. a. [krimpen, Belg.] to contract; to draw into wrinkles; to squeeze together in order to discover the wrinkles.

CRUMPLING, f. a small degenerate apple.

CRUPPER, f. [croupe, Fr.] that part of horse-furniture which reaches from the saddle to the tail.

CRURAL, a. [cruralis, Lat.] belonging to, or situated in the leg.

CRUSA'DE, or CRUSA'DO, f. See CROISADE.

CRUSE. See CRUISE.

To CRUSH, v. a. [ecroser, Fr.] to break to pieces, or to make the two opposite sides of a vessel meet by external violence; to overwhelm; to beat down; to depress; to subdue; or destroy by force.

CRUSH, f. collision; destruction.

CRUST, f. [crusta, Lat.] the hard external surface or coat of a thing; a collection of matter grown hard; the case which contains the fruit or meat of a pie or pudding; the outer hard part of bread; a waste piece of bread.

To CRUST, v. a. to cover with a hard case; to foul with soil, or dirt. Neuterly, to have its external surface hardened.

CRUSTA'CEOUS, a. [krustásbeous] covered with shell, applied to fish.

CRUSTILY, ad. in a morose, furly, or peevish manner.

CRUSTINESS, f. the hardness of the outside of bread. Figuratively, peevishness, moroseness.

CRUSTY, a. covered with a hard surface or coat. Figuratively, not easily prevailed on; morose; peevish.

CRUTCH, f. [criece, Sax.] a support, composed of a round piece of wood, in which a long staff is fixed, placed under the arm-pits, and used by cripples or lame persons to walk with.

To CRUTCH, v. a. to support, as with crutches.

To CRY, v. n. [crier, Fr.] to speak with vehemence and loudness; to speak to with great importunity and sorrow; to proclaim, or publish; to exclaim; to speak with a mournful tone of voice, attended with tears; to make a noise or squalling like an infant; to weep, or shed tears. In Hunting, to yelp, applied to the noise made by a hound in full scent. To cry out, to scream, or make a shriek when in danger; to complain loudly; to blame or censure; to be in labour. Actively, to proclaim any thing that is lost, or to be sold. To cry down, to depreciate, to under-value; to blame, or detract from; to forbid; to overbear. To cry up, to praise, or increase the value of a thing by applause.

CRY, f. [cri, Fr.] lamentation; a mournful shriek or scream; clamour or outcry; an exclamation of triumph and wonder; a proclamation; the hawkers proclamation of wares to be sold in the street, as, "the cries of London;" acclamation; popular favour; impor-unate call; the method of utterance made use of by different animals to express their wants, &c. In Hunting, the yelping of dogs. Figuratively, a pack of hounds; a confused inarticulate noise. SYNON. Children commonly cry; grown persons generally weep. 'Tis not the noise we make that denotes a greater or less measure of grief; for the secret weeper may be more distressed than one who cries aloud.

CRY'AL, f. the heron.

CRY'ER, f. [See CRIZER] a kind of hawk, called the falcon gentle, an enemy to pigeons.

CRYPTIC, or CRYPTICAL, a. [from κρυπτος, Gr.] dark; abstruse; secret; occult; hidden; not made public.

CRYPTOGRAPHY, f. [κρυπτος and γραφω, Gr.] the art of writing in secret characters.

CRY'STAL, f. [κρύσταλλος, Gr.] in Natural History, a hard, transparent, colourless stone, composed of simple plates, giving fire with steel, not fermenting with acid menstrua, calcining in a strong fire, of a regular angular figure, supped by some to be formed of dew, coagulated by nitre. Crystal glass is that which is carried to a degree of perfection beyond the common glass, was originally manufactured at Venice only, but introduced into this kingdom by Mr. Bowles, who has brought it to so much perfection, that it not only rivals, but even surpasses that of Venice. In Chemistry, applied to express salts, or other matters, shot or congealed in the manner of a crystal.

CRY'STAL, a. consisting or made of crystal. Figuratively, bright, clear, transparent.

CRY'STALLINE, a. [crystallinus, Lat.] consisting of crystal. Figuratively, bright, clear; transparent. Crystalline humour, in Anatomy, the second humour of the eye, lying immediately next the aqueous behind the uvea.

CRYSTALLIZATION, f. in Chemistry, a combination of saline particles in the form of a crystal.

To CRY'STALLIZE, v. a. to form into a mass resembling that of crystals. Neuterly, to coagulate, or shoot into angular shapes, resembling a crystal.

CUB, f. [Etymology uncertain] the young of a bear or fox; sometimes applied to that of a whale. Figuratively, the offspring of a human creature, by way of reproach.

To CUB, v. a. to bring forth, applied to a fox or bear.

CUBA, an island of N. America, at the entrance of the gulph of Mexico, about 700 miles in length, and 87 in breadth. It was discovered by Christopher Columbus, in 1494. The Spaniards are entirely masters of it, they having rooted out the ancient inhabitants. The soil is not extremely fertile, but there are pastures sufficient to feed a great number of bees, sheep, and hogs, which were originally brought thither. There are several sorts forts of mines in the mountains, and forests full of game. The produce is sugar-canes, ginger, cassia, wild cinnamon, and very good tobacco, called by the Spaniards Cigarros. Havannah is the capital town, and is seated on the western side of the isle, next Florida. The galleons that return annually to Spain rendezvous at Havannah. This island is about 180 miles S. of Florida, 50 W. of Hispaniola, and 75 N. of Jamaica.

CUBATURE, f. the finding the solid contents of a body.

CUBE, f. [κῦβος, Gr.] in Geometry, a solid body, consisting of six equal square sides. In Arithmetic, a number arising from the multiplication of a square number by its root.

CUBIC, or CUBICAL, a. belonging to, or having the properties of, a cube.

CUBICALNESS, the state or quality of being cubical.

CUBIFORM, a. in the shape or form of a cube.

CUBIT, f. [κῦβίτις, Lat.] a measure in use among the ancients, which was the distance from the elbow bending inwards to the extremity of the middle finger, fixed by some to 1 foot 9 inches, and $\frac{888}{1000}$ of an inch, English measure; by others, to 1 $\frac{824}{1000}$ foot; the reason of this variety is, that in Scripture there were two kinds of cubits, one measuring according to the first computation, and the other according to the latter.

CUBITAL, a. containing the length or measure of a cubit.

CUBLEY, a village in Derbyshire, 6 miles S. of Ashburn.

CUCKFIELD, a town of Suffex, with a market on Fridays. It is seated in a dirty part of the country, and the market is but small. It is 40 miles S. by W. of London.

CUCKING-STOOL, f. a chair in which women are plunged into the water, as a punishment for scolding.

CUCKOLD, f. [coem, Fr.] one married to a woman that violates the marriage bed.

To CUCKOLD, v. a. to lie with another man's wife; to lie with another man, though married.

CUCKOLDLY, ad. after the manner of a cuckold. Figuratively, mean or base.

CUCKOLDOM, f. the act of lying with another man's wife; the state or condition of a cuckold.

CUCKOO, or CUCKOW, f. [cucucou, Brit.] in Natural History, a bird which appears in the spring, said to suck the eggs of other birds, and lay her own to be hatched in their stead; hence it was usual to give the husband a sign of the approach of an adulterer by crying cuckoo, and in process of time it was usual to call the person whose bed was defiled a cuckold. This bird is remarkable for the uniformity of its note, and its name seems, in most languages, to be derived from it. Figuratively, used as a word of reproach or contempt.

CUCKOO-SPITTLE, f. the frothy substance or dew found about the joints of lavender and rosemary.

CUCULLATE, or CUCULLATED, a. [cucullatus, Lat.] hooded; covered with a hood or cowl; resembling a hood.

CUCUMBER, f. [vulgarly pron. cocucumber] [cucumis, Lat.] a well known plant and fruit. Besides the use of cucumbers as a food, their seed is one of the four greater cold seeds of the shops, and is almost an universal ingredient in emulsions, and of great service in fevers and nephretic complaints.

CUCURBITACEOUS, [hukurbitsæous] a. [from cucurbita, Lat.] in Botany, applied to those plants which resemble a gourd; such as the pompon and melon.

CUCURBITE, f. a chymical vessel or glass made in the shape of a gourd, and commonly called a body.

CUD, f. [cud, Sax.] the inside of the throat; the food kept by a cow in the first stomach, which it chews a second time.

CUDDEN, or CUDDY, f. a clown; a stupid, rustic fellow.

To CUDDL, v. n. [a low word] to lie close; to squat.

CUDGEL, f. [kudse, Belg.] a stick, made use of to strike with, lighter than a club, and shorter than a pole.

To CUDGEL, v. a. to beat with a stick.

CUDGEL-PROOF, a. able to resist a blow given by a stick or cudgel.

CUE, f. [queue, Fr.] the tail or end of any thing; the last words of a speech, which a player looks upon as a sign for him to begin to speak. A hint. The part which a person is to play in his turn.

CURPO, f. [Span.] without the upper coat or cloak.

CUFF, f. [zuffa, Ital.] a box given on the ear, or the head, with the fist. To strike with the talons, or wings, applied to birds.

To CUFF, v. n. to fight; to scuffle. Actively, to strike with the fist, or talons.

CUFF, f. [coeffe, Fr.] that part of the sleeve which is turned back again from the wrist towards the shoulder.

CUINAGE, f. the making up twine in peculiar forms for carriage.

CUIRASS, [keuirafs] f. [cuirasse, Fr.] a part of defensive armour made of iron well hammered, covering the body from the neck to the girdle.

CUIRA'SSIER, [keurafsier] f. a soldier dressed in his armour, or cuirass.

CUISH, f. [cuisse, Fr.] the armour which covers the thighs.

CULDE'ES, [colidel, Lat.] in Church history, a sort of monkish priests, formerly inhabiting Scotland and Ireland. Being remarkable for the religious exercises of preaching and praying, they were called by way of eminence, Cultores Dei; from whence is derived the word Culdees.

CULINARY, a. [from culina, Lat.] belonging to the kitchen; or used in cookery.

To CULL, v. a. [cueillir, Fr.] to pick or choose from a number,

CULLEN,

C'ULLEN, a parliamt town of Scotland, seated on the sea-coast of the county of Banff, 40 miles W. of Aberdeen.

C'ULLER, f. one who chooses a thing from a great many others.

C'ULLION, f. [coglionis, Ital.] a low, mean, or dirty scoundrel; a word of great contempt.

C'ULLY, f. [coglione, Ital.] a man deceived or seduced by sharpers or prostitutes.

To C'ULLY, v. a. to make a fool of a person; to deceive or impose upon.

CULMI'FEROUS, a. [culmus and fero, Lat.] in Botany, applied to such plants as have a smooth jointed stalk, usually hollow; are wrapped about at each joint with single, narrow, sharp-pointed leaves, and have their seeds contained in chaffy husks; such as wheat, barley, &c.

To C'ULMINATE, v. n. [from culmen, Lat.] in Astronomy, to be at its greatest altitude; to be vertical, or in its meridian.

CULMINA'TION, f. in Astronomy, the transit or passage of a star over the meridian, or that point of its orbit wherein it is at its greatest altitude.

CULMSTOCK, a village in Devonshire, 5 miles S. of Wellington.

CULPAB'ILITY, f. the quality which subjects a thing to blame, or renders it an object of blame.

CULPABLE, a. [culpabilis, Lat.] worthy of or deserving blame, including the idea of some voluntary fault of a slighter kind.

CULPABLENESS, f. the quality which renders a person an object of blame.

CULPABLY, ad. in such a manner as to deserve blame.

CULPRIT, f. a word used by a judge at the trial of a person, who, when the person arraigned pleads not guilty, answers, "Culprit, God send thee a good deliverance." In Law, a malefactor, or criminal.

CULROSS, a parliament town of Scotland, seated on the river Forth, in the county of Monteith, 33 miles N. E. of Edinburgh.

CUL'TER, or COUL'TER, f. [culter, Lat.] the iron of a plough which cuts the ground perpendicular before the plough-share.

To C'ULTIVATE, v. a. [cultiver, Fr.] to heighten the fruitfulness of the earth by manuring it, or by other methods of husbandry. Figuratively, to improve the understanding by education and study.

CULTIVA'TION, f. the act of improving soils by husbandry. Figuratively, the improvement of the understanding by education and study; improvement in any science.

CUL'TURE, f. [cultura, Lat.] the act of cultivating or tilling the ground. Figuratively, the improvement of the mind by education and study; improvement in any branch of learning.

To C'ULTURE, v. a. to cultivate; to manure, till, or improve soil by labour, and other methods of husbandry.

CUL'VER, f. [culfre, Sax.] a pigeon.

CUL'VERIN, f. [coulevrin, Fr.] a slender piece of ordnance, or artillery, from 5 one half to 5 inches bore, from 13 to 12 feet long, and carrying a shot from 5 one fourth to 3 three fourth inches diameter.

To C'UMBER, v. a. [kumberen, Belg.] to hinder a person from acting by its weight; to put a person to difficulty in managing a thing, by its weight or length. Figuratively, to load with something useless; to disturb, distress, or involve in difficulties; to distract or perplex with variety of employments.

C'UMBER, f. [kumber, Belg.] hindrance; unmanageableness caused by bulk.

CUMBERLAND, a county of England, 75 miles in length, and 27 in breadth, and is bounded on the N. by Scotland and part of Northumberland, on the W. by the Irish sea, on the S. by Lancashire, and on the E. by Westmoreland, Durham, and Northumberland. It contains one city, 14 market-towns, 38 parishes, and sends 6 members to parliament.

The air is sharp and cold, and the land for the most part hilly. It yields plenty of fish, flesh, and fowls, with abundance of large salmon.

The principal mountains are, Skiddow, which is very high, from whence runs a ridge of mountains, called the Fells, to the most northern part of the county; it is watered by several rivers, besides lakes and meers, and part of the Picts wall runs through this county.

In this county, near Kewick, are mines of black lead, which, if not the only ones in the world, are certainly the best. Besides which there are mines of coal, copper, and lapis calaminaris. Carlisle is the principal town.

CUMBERSOME, a. occasioning great trouble and vexation. Figuratively, burthensome; occasioning perplexity; unwieldy, or not easily managed, on account of its length or weight.

CUM'BROUS, a. troublesome, vexatious; causing uneasiness.

To C'UMULATE, v. a. to lay one thing upon another; to heap together.

CUNCTA'TION, f. [cunctatio, Lat.] the act of deferring the doing of a thing to another time which ought to be done immediately.

To C'UND, v. n. [konnen, Belg.] to give notice. Obsolete. See CONDER, or BALKER.

C'UNEAL, a. [cuneus, Lat.] relating to, or having the shape of, a wedge.

C'UNEATED, part. [cuneatus, Lat.] made in the form of a wedge.

C'UNNER, f. a kind of fish, less than an oyster, which sticks close to the rocks.

C'UNNING, a. [from connan, Sax.] learned, knowing, or of an extensive knowledge. Performed with art or skill; curious. Figuratively, sly; designing; crafty; over-reaching another by superior wit and understanding.

C'UNNING, f. [cunninge, Sax.] artifice; deceit; superior talents employed in deceiving others; art; skill; knowledge.

C'UNNINGHAM, a shire of Scotland, lying on the river Clyde, opposite to the isle of Bute.

Date.

CUNNINGLY, ad. in a sly, crafty manner.

CUNNINGNESS, f. craftiness; slyness.

CUP, f. [cup, Sax.] a small vessel, with a foot, to drink in. Figuratively, the liquor contained in a cup. In the plural, a merry bout or entertainment of drinking. Any thing hollow like a cup, as the hulk of an acorn, the bell of a flower.

To CUP, v. n. to supply with liquor. A sense now obsolete. To bleed a person after having fixed a cupping-glass to the part.

CUPBOARD, f. [cup and board, Sax.] a case or receptacle; a place fitted with shelves and a door, in which victuals or earthen ware are placed, distinguished from a closet, which is considerably longer.

To CUPBOARD, v. a. to put in a cup-board. Figuratively, to board.

CUPOLA, f. [Ital.] in Architecture, a spherical vault, or the round of the top of the dome of a church, which resembles a cup inverted; called by some a lantern.

CUPPER, f. one who applies a cupping-glass, and scarifies a person.

CUPPING, f. in Surgery, the applying a cupping-glass for the discharge of blood, and other humours, by the skin.

CUPPING-GLASS, f. a glass vessel, which having its air rarified, gives room for that contained in the part to which it is applied to expand itself, and bring with it such humours as it is involved in, which are afterwards discharged by a scarifier, or instrument fitted with the points of several lancets, which by means of a spring enter the skin at the same time.

CUPREOUS, a. [cupreus, Lat.] coppery, or consisting of copper.

CUR, f. [corre, Belg.] a degenerate, worthless dog. Figuratively, used as a term of reproach for a man.

CURABLE, a. that which may be healed.

CURABLENESS, f. the possibility of being healed.

CURACY, f. the employment of a clergyman, who does the duty of the person who has the benefice, for a certain salary.

CURATE, f. a clergyman who performs the duties of another for a salary; a parish priest.

CURATIVE, a. relating to the cure of a disease; recovering, or able to recover from a disorder.

CURATOR, f. [Lat.] one who has the care and superintendance of a thing, place, or person.

CURB, f. [coarber, Fr.] in Farriery, an iron chain fastened to the upper part of the branches of a bridle, in a hole called the eye, and running over the beard of a horse, used to manage a hard-mouthed horse. Figuratively, a restraint put on the inclinations of a person. It is also a large swelling that runs along the inside of a horse's hoof, in the great sinews behind, above the top of the horn, which makes him go lame, after he has been heated.

To CURB, v. a. to manage, or guide a horse by means of a curb. Figuratively, to check, or restrain the passions or inclinations.

CURD, f. [krnyden, Belg.] the thickening or clotting of any liquor, generally applied to that of milk, which is occasioned by mixing runnet with it.

To CURDLE, v. n. to grow into clots; to grow thick, like milk mixed with runnet. Actively, to make a thing grow thick, clot, or coagulate, by mixing some acid with it.

CURDY, a. coagulated; clotted.

CURE, f. [curo, Lat.] a remedy; the healing of a wound, or recovering from a disease; the benefice or employment of a clergyman or curate. SYNON. Cure seems to have no other object than stubborn disorders, and those which proceed from constitution; whereas remedy has a view to slight complaints, and such as are of short duration.

To CURE, v. a. [curo, Lat.] to heal a wound; to restore to health; to recover from a disease. In Cookery, to preserve from sinking, or corrupting; to salt.

CURELESS, a. without cure or remedy; not to be cured.

CURER, f. a healer or physician.

CURFEW, f. [couvre-feu, Fr.] an evening bell, on the sound of which every man was obliged to put out his fire, and extinguish his candle, in the time of the Conqueror. Figuratively, any bell which tolls constantly in the night-time; a cover for a fire, or a fire-place.

CURIOUSITY, f. a propensity or disposition of the soul, which inclines it to enquire after new objects, and to delight in viewing them; a nice experiment; an object of curiosity, or a rarity.

CURIOUS, a. [curiosus, Lat.] inquisitive, or disposed to enquire into novelties, whether they respect truths or objects of sight; attentive to, or diligent. Accurate, or careful to avoid an impropriety or mistake. Exact; nice; artful; elegant; neat; rigid; severe.

CURIOUSLY, ad. in an inquisitive, exact, accurate, elegant, laboured, or high-finished manner; captiously.

CURL, f. a ringlet of hair formed into a ring, or making many concentric circles. Figuratively, a wave; undulation; or waving line.

CURL, v. a. [cyrlan, Sax.] to make the hair twist in circles or ringlets; to writhe, or twist round; to dress with curls; to raise in waves or in a spiral form. Neuterly, to form itself into ringlets; to form circular lines; to twist itself.

CURLEW, f. [courlieu, Fr.] a water-fowl, with a long beak, of a grey colour, with red and black spots.

CURMUDGEON, f. [a corrupt pronunciation and spelling of caur mechant, Fr. a bad heart] one who is void of generosity; a niggardly or avaricious person; a miser.

CURMUDGEONLY,

CURMU'DGEONLY, ad. in an avaricious, niggardly, covetous manner.

CURRANT, f. in Botany; the tree so called, and the berry of it; likewise a small dried grape; properly written corinth.

CURRENCY, f. circulation; passing from hand to hand, and acknowledged as legal, applied to coin or money, whether in metal or paper. General reception; fluency, readiness of utterance; constant flow; uninterrupted course; general esteem and repute.

CURRENT, a. [currents, Lat.] passing from hand to hand; established or legal, applied to money. Generally received, not contradicted, applied to opinions. Popular, or established by a majority; fashionable; passable, or to be admitted; what is now passing. In Commerce, account current, is that which is opened by two persons that have dealings with each other, wherein the different debts and credits of each are registered on opposite sides, in order to form a balance between them.

CURRENT, f. in Hydrography, a running stream. In Navigation, a progressive motion of the water of the sea, by which a ship may be retarded in her course, or carried more swiftly, when moving in the same direction as the current. SYNON. A stream issues from a head, and moves forward with a continuity of parts. A current is a certain progressive motion of some fluid body. These words in the literal sense are applied to water. Thus we say the stream of a river, the current of the sea.

CURRENTLY, ad. in a constant motion; without opposition; without ceasing.

CURRENTNESS, f. circulation; general reception; easiness of pronunciation.

CURRIER, f. [coriarius, Lat.] one who dresses leather.

CURRISH, a. like a cur; snappish; quarrelsome.

To CURRY, v. a. [from curium, Lat.] to dress leather with oil, tallow, &c. To rub a horse with a sharp-pointed instrument or comb, in order to smooth his hide, promote circulation, and increase his flesh. Figuratively, to tickle, to flatter. To curry favour with, is to endeavour to gain the esteem or friendship of another by trivial offices, and small compliances.

CURRYCOMB, f. an iron instrument set with iron teeth or wires, used to dress a horse.

To CURSE, v. a. [cursum, Sax.] to wish a person ill; to devote to destruction. Figuratively, to afflict or torment.

CURSE, f. the action of wishing any tremendous evil to another. The act of devoting to temporal or eternal torments; affliction; torment; or misery.

CURSED, part. under a curse. Figuratively, hateful; unholy; vexatious.

CURSEDNESS, f. the state of being under a curse.

CURSITOR, f. [Lat.] an officer, or clerk belonging to Chancery, who makes out original writs. There are 24, having each particular shires allotted them, for which they make such original writs as are required, and are called clerks of course in the oath of the clerks of Chancery.

CURSORILY, ad. in a hasty manner; without care or attention.

CURSORINESS, f. haste; slowness of attention.

CURSORY, a. [cursorius, Lat.] hasty; quick; careless; transient.

CURST, a. [korst, Belg.] froward; snarling; peevish; delighting in mischief.

CURT, a. [curtus, Lat.] short.

To CURTAIL, v. a. [curto, Lat.] to cut off; to shorten by cutting. Figuratively, to retrench, applied to expences.

CURTAIL-DOG, f. a dog whose tail is cut off, and is thence rendered unfit for coursing; perhaps the original, from whence Cur is formed by contraction.

CURTAIL-DOUBLE, f. a musical wind instrument like the bassoon, which plays the bass to the hautboy.

CURTAIN, f. [curtina, Lat.] a cloth hung before a window, and running on a string or iron rod, by which means it is spread or contracted, made use of to exclude the light, air, or to hide any thing. In Fortification, that part of a wall or rampart which lies between two bastions.

To CURTAIN, v. a. to furnish, or hang with curtains.

CURTATE DISTANCE, f. in Astronomy, the distance of the sun's place, and that of a planet reduced to the ecliptic.

CURTATION, f. [curtatio, Lat.] in Astronomy, a little part cut off from the line of a planet's interval or distance from the sun.

CURVATED, a. [curvatus, Lat.] bent.

CURVATION, f. the act of bending or crooking.

CURVE, a. [curvus, Lat.] crooked, bent, formed, or forced from a perpendicular or straight surface to an angular one.

CURVE, f. any thing bent; a bending. In Geometry, a line whose points are placed and extend different ways, running on continually in all directions, and may be cut by a right line in more points than one.

To CURVE, v. a. to bend; to crook; to bend back, or fold.

To CURVET, v. a. [curvettare, Ital.] to bound, or leap; to frisk; to grow wanton, or licentious.

CURVET, f. in the Menage, a leap or bound. Figuratively, a frolic or prank.

CURVIL'NEAR, a. [curvus and linea, Lat.] consisting of, or composed of one or more crooked lines.

CURVITY, f. crookedness.

CUSHION, f. [kussen, Belg.] a case of silk, velvet, or worsted, stuffed with wool, feathers, or horse-hair, placed on the seat of a chair, to render the sitting easy.

CUSHIONED, a. supported by cushions; seated on a cushion.

CUSP, f. [cuspis, Lat.] in Astronomy, the horns horns of the moon, or any other planet.

CUSPATED, or CUSPIDATED, a. [from cuspis, Lat.] in Botany, applied to the leaves or petals of a flower, which end in a point, called (pear-shaped by Miller.

CUSTARD, f. [custard, Brit.] a kind of pastry made with milk, eggs, and sugar, which are thickened into a mass, either by baking in an oven, or boiling over a fire.

CUSTODY, f. [custodia, Lat.] confinement in prison; restraint of liberty. Figuratively, the charge or keeping of a person; defence; preservation; security.

CUSTOM, f. [costume, Fr.] repeated and habitual practice of any action; fashion, or method adopted by the majority; an established manner; a good run of trade; a tribute or tax paid to the government on goods imported or exported. Custom-house is the place where these taxes are paid. Among Lawyers, it is a law or right not written, established by long use, and the consent of our ancestors, has been, and daily is, practised. SYNON. Fashion introduces itself, and extends daily. Custom establishes itself, and gains authority. The first forms a mode; the second a usage. Each is a kind of law independent on reason, with respect to that which relates to our outward actions. Customs relate to the general practice of the people; manners to their way of life; and fashions to their dress.

CUSTOMABLE, a. that which is frequently, or commonly practised.

CUSTOMARY, ad. commonly; generally.

CUSTOMARINESS, f. frequency of repetition, or practice.

CUSTOMARY, a. habitual; usual.

CUSTOMED, a. usual; common; generally practised.

CUSTOMER, f. one who purchases any thing of a tradesman.

CUSTOS, f. [Lat.] a keeper, or person who has the charge of any thing. So, Custos is a clerk belonging to the Common Pleas, who has the charge of writs and records

[Nisi prius]; there is also one in the Court of King's Bench, who files such writs as are filed, and all warrants of attorney, and scribes or makes out records of Nisi prius.

Officer Rotatorum, one who has the custody of the records of the sessions of peace; he is of justice of the peace, and of the quorum, of the county where he has his office. Custos vacationum, one who acts as an ecclesiastical officer during the vacancy of a see. Custos vacationum, one appointed by the king to take care of the rents and profits of a vacant see.

CUSTREL, f. a buckler-bearer; a vessel holding wine.

To CUT, v. a. [preter and participle past: cut] [from cousteau, Fr.] to penetrate, or to hew with a sharp-edged instrument; to hew; to wound; or pierce with any uneasy or poignant sensation. In Gaming, to separate a pack of cards, by taking off some of from the others. To intersect; to cross. Figuratively, to excel, or surpass. To cut off, to destroy; to rescind; to intercept; to obviate; to withhold; to preclude; to interrupt; to abbreviate. To cut out, to shape; to form; to contrive; to fit; to debar; to excel. To cut up, to carve, or divide a joint or fowl properly.

CUT, part. prepared, or fit for use, alluding to hewn timber.

CUT, f. the action or effect of a sharp or edged instrument; a channel made by art; a small piece, or shred, separated by an edge tool from a larger substance; a lot; a short way, by which some winding is cut off, or avoided; a picture taken from a copper-plate, or carved wood. Fashion; form; shape.

CUTA'NEOUS, a. relating to the skin.

CUTICLE, f. [cuticula, Lat.] the first and outermost covering of the body, commonly called the scarf-skin, which rises on the application of a blister-plaster. Figuratively, a thin skin formed on the surface of any liquor.

CUTI'CLAR, a. belonging to the cuticle, or skin.

CUT'GLASS, f. [couteau, Fr.] a broad cutting sword.

CUT'LER, f. [couteurier, Fr.] one who makes and sells knives.

CUT-PURSE, f. one who robs a person of his money by cutting his purse; a common practice before the invention of breeches, when men wore their purses at their girdles; a thief; a robber.

CUTTER, f. a person or instrument which cuts any thing; a small nimble sailing vessel; the fore-teeth.

CUT-THROAT, f. a murderer.

CUT-THROAT, a. cruel, barbarous.

CUTTING, f. a shred, or piece separated by means of a knife, or sharp instrument. In Surgery, it signifies the extracting the stone out of the bladder. In the Menage, it is when the feet of a horse interfere, or when, with the shoe of one hoof, he beats off the skin from the pattern joint of another hoof. In Painting, it is the laying one strong lively colour over another, without any shade or softening.

CUTTLE-FISH, f. [cuttlewisch, Belg.] in Natural History, a fish, which, when pursued by a fish of prey, emits a black liquor, by which it darkens the water and escapes.

CYCLE, f. [κύκλος, Gr.] in Chronology, is a certain period or series of years, which regularly proceed from the first to the last, and then return again to the first, and circulate perpetually. The cycle of the sun consists of 28 years; that of the moon is a period of 19 years. The cycle of the Roman indiction is completed in 15 years.

CYCLOID, f. [κυκλοΐδης, Gr.] a geometrical curve, formed by the line which a nail, in the circumference of a wheel, makes in the air, while the wheel revolves in a right line.

CYCLO'IDAL, a. relating to a cycloid. The cycloidal space is that contained between a cycloid and its substance.

CYCLOPÆ'DIA, f. [κύκλος and παίδία, Gr.] a circle of knowledge; a course of science.

CY'GNET,

CY'GNET, f. [from cygnus, Lat.] a young swan.

CY'LINDER, f. [κύλινδρον, Gr.] in Geometry, a round solid, having its basis circular, equal, and parallel, in the form of a rolling stone, used by gardeners.

CYLI'NDRIC, or CYLI'NDRICAL, a. partaking of the nature, or in the form of a cylinder.

CY'MAR, f. [properly written finar] a slight loose covering or scarf.

CYMA'TIUM, f. [κυμάτιον, Gr.] in Architecture, a member, or moulding of the cornice, the profile of which is waved, or convex at top, and convex at bottom.

CY'MBAL, f. [cymbalum, Lat.] a musical instrument used by the ancients, supposed to be made of brass, and in the form of a kettle-drum, though somewhat less.

CYNA'NTHROPY, f. [κύων and ἀνθρωπος, Gr.] a species of madness, in which persons resemble a dog; the species of madness contracted by the bite of a mad dog.

CYNEGE'TICS, f. [κυνηγητική, Gr.] the art of hunting; the art of training dogs for hunting.

CY'NIC, or CY'NICAL, a. [κυνικός, Gr.] snarling; brutal, or partaking of the qualities of a Cynic philosopher; who was remarkable for his contempt of riches, and rigorous representation of vice.

CY'NIC, f. a philosopher who valued himself for his contempt of every thing, except morality; a sect founded by Diogenes.

CY'NOSURE, f. [κυνόσουρα, Gr.] in Astronomy, the name given by the Greeks to Urfa Minor, or the Little Bear; the polar star, by which sailors steer.

CY'PRESS-TREE, f. [cypressus, Lat.] a tall straight tree, whose fruit is of no use; its leaves are bitter, and the very smell and shade of it are dangerous. Hence, the Romans looked on it as a fatal tree, and made use of it at funerals, and in mournful ceremonies. The wood of it is always green, very heavy, of a good smell, and never rots, or is worm-eaten.

CY'PRUS, f. [so called from the place where it was made] a thin transparent stuff, used for sieves, &c.

CY'PRUS, an island of Asia, in the Mediterranean Sea, near the coast of Syria and Naxos. It was taken by the Turks from the Venetians in 1570. It is divided into four provinces, namely, Paphia to the E. Salaminia to the W. Amathusia to the S. and Lapithia to the N. This island brings in the Turks 1250l. annually, though the governor is changed every year. The exports of the island are, silks, wool, amber, and wine: the imports are, French and Venetian broad cloths, and sometimes a few bales of English manufactory, cutlery wares, toys, sugar, tin, lead, and all sorts of silks. But the people are so miserably poor, that there is no great consumption of any of these things.

CYST, f. [κύστις, Gr.] in Surgery, a bag containing some morbid matter.

CY'STIC, a. in Surgery, contained in a bag.

CYSTOTOMY, f. [κύστις and τμήσις, Gr.] the act of opening encysted tumours, or cutting the bag in which any morbid matter is contained.

CZAR, [zar] f. [Sclav.] written more properly tzar, the title of the emperor of Russia.

CZARI'NA [zarčina] f. the title of the empress of Russia.

D

D, The fourth letter of the alphabet, is a consonant, differing but little in sound from T. In the Roman, Saxon, and our alphabet, it is of the same shape, and seems formed from the Delta of the Greeks. It is pronounced by applying the tip of the tongue to the fore part of the palate, and then separating them by a gentle breathing, the lips being open at the same time. The sound of D in the English is uniform, and is never mute, except in the words Wednesday and bankerchief. D, as a numeral, denotes 500; and with a dash over it thus \overline{D} , 5000. In abbreviations, it has various significations; thus D stands for doctor, as M. D. for doctor of medicine; D. T. doctor of theology; D. D. doctor of divinity.

To DAB, v. a. [dauber, Fr.] to touch gently with something soft or moist.

DAB, f. a small lump, generally applied to something moist; a blow with something moist or soft. In low language, a person expert in any thing. In Natural History, a small flat fish.

To DA'B'BLE, v. a. [dabbelen, Belg.] to smear, moisten, or daub with something wet; to play in the water; to do any thing in a slight or superficial manner.

DA'BBLER, f. one that plays in water. Figuratively, one who performs a thing superficially; one who never makes himself a complete master of any subject, or branch of science.

DA'B-CHICK, f. a water-fowl.

DA CA'PO, f. an Italian term in Music, meaning that the first part of the tune should be repeated at the conclusion.

DACE, f. [derceau, Fr.] a small river-fish resembling a roach, but something less.

DA'CTYL, f. [dactylus, Lat.] a foot in Latin and Greek poetry, consisting of one long and two short syllables.

DAD, or DA'DDY, f. [dad, Brit.] a child's way of expressing father.

DÆ'DAL, a. [dædalus, Lat.] various; variegated; skillful.

DA'FFODIL, DAFFODI'LLY, or DA'FODOWNDI'LLY, f. in Botany, the narcissus.

To DAFT, v. a. to toss aside; to throw away slightly.

DAG, f. [dague, Fr.] a dagger; a hand gun.

To DAG, v. a. [dag, Sax.] to dirt or blemish the lower parts of a garment.

DA'GGER,

DA'GGER, f. [dague, Fr.] a short sword. In Fencing Schools, a blunt blade of iron with a basket hilt, used for defence. In Printing, the obelisk, used as a mark of reference, and of this form [†].

DAGGERS-DRA'WING, f. the act of drawing a dagger. Figuratively, quarrelsomeness, or readiness to fight.

To DA'GGLE. See DRAGGLE.

DA'ILY, a. [daglic, Sax.] happening, done, or repeated every day. Figuratively, constantly, or frequently.

DA'INTILY, ad. in a curious, elegant, or delicate manner; deliciously; pleasantly.

DA'INTINESS, f. delicacy, softness; elegance; nicety; squeamishness; or the not being easily pleased either with food, or the productions of art.

DA'INTY, a. pleasing to the taste, and purchased with great cost. Figuratively, of delicate or exquisite sensibility; squeamish; not easily pleased with food; scrupulous; elegant; well or nicely formed; nice, or affected.

DA'INTY, f. some rare food of exquisite taste. A word of fondness.

DA'IRY, f. [from doy, an old word for milk] the employment of making several kinds of food from milk; pasturage; a milk farm, or place where milk is kept, and butter or cheese made.

DA'IRY-MAID, f. a woman-servant, who has the care of the dairy, and makes butter or cheese.

DA'ISY, [diizy] f. [dais, Fr.] in Botany, a spring flower called the bellis.

DALE, f. a low or hollow place between hills; a vale or valley. SYNON. Valleys are, for the most part winding; and as they receive waters from the hills on each side, are generally converted into meads. A fine vale, with beautiful inclosures, bounded by rising woods, is a delightful prospect. Dales are much easier to be ploughed than hilly lands.

DALLIANCE, f. acts of fondness between lovers. Figuratively, the carelessness of a married couple. Delay, or deferring a thing.

DALLIER, f. a trifler; a person who practices acts of fondness.

DALKE'ITH, a town of Scotland, in Mid-Lothian, six miles S. E. of Edinburgh.

To DA'LLY, v. n. [dallen, Belg.] to trifle; to play the fool; to amuse one's self, and lose time in idle play; to exchange carefesses of fondness; to sport; to frolic; to delay.

DAL'TON, a town in Lancashire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the spring-head of a river, in a champaign country, not far from the sea; and the ancient castle is made use of to keep the records and prisoners for debt in the liberty of Furnes. It is 273½ miles N. N. W. of London.

DAM, f. [from dame, which, according to Chaucer, formerly signified a mother] the mother, applied most commonly to beasts; but figuratively, and by way of reproach, applied to persons.

DAM, f. [dam, Belg.] a mole, bank, or any other obstruction to confine water.

To DAM, v. a. [demman, Sax.] to confine water by moles or other obstructions. Figuratively, to damp; to extinguish, obstruct, or intercept.

DAM'AGE, f. [domage, Fr.] mischief; hurt; detriment; loss. In Common Law, it is what the jurors, upon a trial, allow the party who appears to have suffered wrong.

To DA'MAGE, v. a. to spoil, hurt, or impair any thing; to affect a person with loss, or hinder him in the prosecution of his business. Neuterly, to impair; to lose of its worth by time.

DA'MAGEABLE, a. that which may be impaired or spoiled by time; mischievous or hurtful.

DA'MASCENE, or DA'MSON, f. in Gardening, a small round black plumb, of a rough and astringent taste.

DA'MASK, f. [from Damascus, the place where it was invented] a manufacture of linen or silk woven with raised flowers; likewise a very fine steel, at Damascus in Syria, used for sword and cutlass blades, and of a very fine temper. Figuratively, a red colour, alluding to that of the damask rose.

To DA'MASK, v. a. to weave linen or silk in raised figures; to variegate, diversify, or embellish. To adorn steel-work with figures.

DAMASK-ROSE, f. a red rose.

DA'MASKEENING, f. the art of adorning iron and steel, by cutting and carving holes in them, and filling them up with gold or silver wire.

DAME, f. [dame, Fr.] originally applied to a person who was mistress of a family, and of a noble birth, as it is at present used in Law; but commonly used now for a farmer's wife, or one of the lower sort. Figuratively, women in general.

To DAMN, [dam] v. a. [damno, Lat.] to doom, devote, or curse to eternal torments; to condemn; to explode or render any performance unpopular, by hissing or criticising.

DAM'NABLE, a. deserving, or justly condemned to eternal punishment. Sometimes used, indecently, in a ludicrous sense, for pernicious, or odious.

DAM'NABLY, ad. in such a manner as to incur eternal punishment.

DAMNA'TION, f. exclusion from divine mercy; the state of a person who is sentenced to eternal punishment.

DAMNATORY, a. [damnatorius, Lat.] containing the sentence to eternal punishment.

DAM'NED, part. hateful; detestable; abominable; doomed to everlasting punishment.

DAMNI'FIC, a. procuring loss; mischievous.

To DA'MNIFY, v. a. [damnifico, Lat.] to cause loss, to spoil, hurt, or impair.

DAM'NINGNESS, f. tendency to subject a person to eternal punishments.

DAMP,

DAMP, a. [dampe, Belg.] moist; inclining to wet; moistened by the air or vapours. Figuratively, dejected; full of sorrow, on account of some sudden disappointment or unexpected calamity.

DAMP, f. a fog, or mist; a moist, noxious vapour. Figuratively, dejection or sorrow, arising from some sudden calamity.

To DAMP, v. a. to wet or moisten; to chill; or diminish heat by water. Figuratively, to lessen any quality; to smother, check, or depress any ardour or passion. To weaken; to abandon.

DAMPISHNESS, f. tendency to wetness, or moisture, arising from fogs, vapours, &c.

DAMPNESS, f. a cold moisture, or fogginess.

DAMPY, a. moist or wet.

DAMSEL, f. [d moiselle, Fr.] originally used for a young gentlewoman or lady of distinction; an attendant of the higher rank; but at present for a young country lass.

DAN, f. [dominus, Lat.] a title of dignity or honour, formerly used for master.

To DANCE, v. n. [danse, Fr.] to move in a graceful attitude, according to an air sung, or played. Actively, to make a person dance, or skip. To dance attendance, is to wait in an humble and suppliant manner on a person.

DANCE, f. [danse, Fr.] an agreeable motion of the body and feet, adjusted by art to the measure or tune of a musical instrument or the voice.

DANCER, f. one who practises dancing.

DANCING-MASTER, f. one who teaches the art of dancing.

DANDELION, f. [dent de lion, Fr. lion's tooth] in Botany, the name of a plant, which grows in the fields.

DANDIPRAT, f. [dandrin, Fr.] a little fellow, used sometimes as a word of fondness, and sometimes as a word of reproach.

To DANDLE, v. a. [dandelen, Belg.] to keep a child in motion, either on the knee or otherwise, to quiet it. Figuratively, to treat with too much fondness; to use like a child.

DANDLER, f. a person that fondles a child.

DANDRUFF, f. the dirt or scurf which sticks to the head.

DANEGETL, f. a tax, or tribute, on every hide of land, imposed on the Saxons, our ancestors, by the Danes, on their frequent invasions, as the arbitrary terms of peace, and their departure. But after their expulsion it was imposed as a continual yearly tax upon the whole nation, under king Ethelred. It was levied by William I. and II. but was released by Henry I. and finally abolished by king Stephen.

DANEWORT, f. in Botany, a species of elder, likewise called the dwarf-elder.

DANGER, f. [danger, Fr.] hazard; risk; or a condition which is liable to mischief or calamity. SYNON. The avaricious man, spurred on by interest, fears no danger; hazard; his health and happiness; runs every risk that attends his profession, and gladly ventures his all in search of that which, if obtained, he would not have the spirit to enjoy.

To DANGER, v. a. to expose to loss, calamity, or misery.

DANGERLESS, a. out of a possibility of meeting with any calamity or accident.

DANGEROUS, a. exposed to accidents, loss, harm or mischief.

DANGEROUSNESS, f. a condition which exposes to accidents, calamity, or death.

To DANGLE, v. n. to hang loose, so as to be put in motion by the wind, breath, or a shake. Figuratively, to hang as a dependent upon a person.

DANGLER, f. a person who frequents the company of women merely to pass or kill time.

DANK, a. [from lancken, Teut.] moist; wetfish.

DANKISH, a. somewhat moist or wet.

DANTZICK, one of the largest, richest, and strangest towns of Europe, capital of Regal Prussia, and of Pomerella in Poland, with a famous harbour, a bishop's see, and an university. It is encompassed with a wall and fortifications of great extent. The houses are well built of stone or brick, six or seven stories high; and the granaries, containing vast quantities of grain and naval stores, are still higher, to which the ships lie close, and take in their lading. The arsenal is well provided, and the exchange is a handsome structure. It is reckoned to contain 200,000 inhabitants, tho' there died of the plague, in 1709, above 30,000 persons. The college is provided with very learned professors. It carries on a great trade, particularly in corn, timber, and naval stores, which are chiefly purchased by the Dutch. It is a free hantic town, governed by its own laws, and magistrates, and all extraordinary affairs are decided by the council; but if any thing very important happens, it is carried before the grand chancellor of Poland, or the diet. The established religion is the Lutheran; but there are Papists, Calvinists, and Anabaptists, who are all tolerated. The jurisdiction of this town extends about 50 miles round it: and they maintain a garrison at their own expence.

It is seated on the western banks of the river Weiffel, or Vistula, near the Gulph of Angil in the Baltic Sea; 30 miles S. E. of Maricaburg, and 140 N. of Warsaw. Lon. 19. 5. E. lat. 54. 22. N.

To DAP, v. a. [from dip] in Angling, to let fall or put gently into the water.

DAPPER a. [dapper, Belg.] small of stature, and full of spirit and vivacity. It is usually spoken in contempt.

DAPPERLING, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPIFER, f. the dignity or office of grand master of a prince's household. In Germany, the elector of Bavaria assumes the title of Arch-dapifer of the empire, whose office is, at the coronation of the emperor, to carry the first dish of meat to table on horse-back.

DAPPLE, a. spotted or speckled.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, f. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

D A R

DA'PPLE, a. marked, variegated, or clouded with different colours.

To DA'PPLE, v. a. to streak, or diversify with a different colour.

DAR, or DART, f. a fish found in the Severn.

To DARE, v. n. [preter, I durst, or have lord, deurran, Sax.] to undertake a thing without being discouraged by the dangers which attend it. Actively, to challenge, or provoke a person to fight.

DARE, f. a provocation, or calling on a person to fight; a challenge; defiance.

DA'REFUL, a. full of defiance; without fear.

DA'RING, a. bold; adventurous; courageously undertaking an affair notwithstanding the dangers attending it.

DA'RINGLY, ad. in a bold, courageous, outrageous or impudent manner.

DA'RINGNESS, f. boldness.

DARK, a. [dearc, Sax.] without light. Not bright; dull, applied to colours. Opaque, not to be seen through; not having light in itself. Figuratively, not easy to be understood; obscure; ignorant; not enlightened with knowledge or revelation. Gloomy; not cheerful, applied to the temper.

DARK, f. want of light, by which all objects become invisible. Figuratively, obscurity; the condition of a person not known or famous; want of knowledge; ignorance.

To DA'RKEN, v. a. [adarcian, Sax.] to deprive of, or shut out, the light; to cloud, perplex; to render the mind unable to distinguish the qualities of objects; to grow towards night; to grow dark or gloomy.

DA'KING, part. hid in the dark; concealed from sight.

DA'KILLY, ad. in a situation void of light; obscurely.

DA'KNESS, f. a state wherein light is absent, and objects which are discovered by the light become invisible; opakeness. Obscurity, or difficult to be understood, applied to books.

The infernal gloom; wickedness; the empire of Satan. SYNON. Considering them in a figurative sense, darkness implies a state of life in which we are shut up from the world; as the state of a hermit; state of a recluse. By obscurity is understood a state of retirement, as when we retreat into the country far from the observation of the public eye.

DA'RKING, or DO'RKING, a town of Surrey, with a market on Thursdays. The market is noted for corn and provisions, and more particularly for fowls. It is 23 miles S. W. of London.

DA'RKsome, a. gloomy; obscure.

DA'RLING, f. [deorling, Sax.] a person more beloved than any other; a favourite.

DA'RLINGTON, a town in the county of Durham, with a market on Mondays. It is a pretty large place, consisting of several streets, and has a spacious market-place. It is 23½ miles N. by W. of London.

DA'RMSTADT, a town of Germany, in the circle of the Upper Rhine, and capital of the landgraviate of Hesse-Darmstadt, with a handsome castle, where its own prince generally resides. There have been lately built several handsome houses, and suburbs; and there is likewise a good college. It is seated on a river of the same name, 15 miles S. of Franckfort, and 30 N. W. of Heidelberg. Lon. 8.40. E. lat. 49.50. N.

D A T

To DARN, v. a. to mend holes by stitches, in imitation of the fabric of the stuff.

DA'RNEL, f. a weed growing in corn-fields.

To DA'RRAIN, v. a. to prepare for battle; to range troops for battle.

DART, f. [dard, Fr.] a small lance or weapon thrown by the hand.

To DART, v. a. to cast or throw a dart; to wound at a distance; to emit, or cast. Neuterly, to fly as a dart.

DA'RTFORD, a town in Kent, with a market on Saturdays. It is on the road to Rochester, and is accommodated with good inns. It is 15½ miles E. by S. of London.

DA'RTMOUTH, a sea-port town of Devonshire, with a market on Fridays. It has a commodious harbour, and is a well-frequented and inhabited place, having a considerable trade by sea. It is a mayor-town, taken out of several parishes, and is large and well built, containing three churches; but the streets are narrow and bad, though they are all paved. It has the title of an earldom, and sends two members to parliament. It is 20½ miles W. by S. of London.

To DASH, [of uncertain etymology] v. a. to throw one thing with violence and suddenness against another; to break by throwing with violence; to besprinkle; to wet by bearing the water with a stick, or by flinging a stone or other thing into it; to mingle or mix with another liquor; to obliterate or cancel a writing, by drawing a careless stroke over it with a pen; to make a person ashamed; to confound. Neuterly, to fly in waves or sparkles over the surface or brim of a vessel or bank; to fly in sparkles or sheets, attended with a loud noise, applied to water.

DASH, f. the stroke occasioned by flinging one body forcibly against another; a stroke made with a pen; a blow; a mixture of another liquor.

DA'STARD, f. [adastriga, Sax.] a coward; a person infamously fearful.

To DA'STARD, v. a. to terrify; to affect with fear.

To DA'STARDIZE, v. a. to intimidate; to render cowardly with fear.

DA'STARDLY, a. cowardly; mean; timorous.

DA'STARDY, f. cowardliness.

DATE, f. [datum, Lat.] the time or day in which a writing is signed or written, or an event happens; the time appointed for a thing to be done; continuance; the fruit of the palm-tree.

To DATE, v. a. to set down the time in which which a thing is done; or a writing performed.

DA'VELESS, a. without any fixed term or period.

DA'TIVE, f. [dativus, Lat.] the case of a noun which signifies the person to whom any thing is given or done; as we have no cases in English, this relation is generally expressed by prefixing to before the noun, but after verbs of giving, the particle is omitted. In Law, such executors as are appointed by a judge's decree.

To DAUB, v. a. [dauber, Fr.] to smear with something sticking; to soil, or make dirty. Figuratively, to paint coarsely; to cover with something which disguises; to cover with something gaudy; to flatter grossly.

DAU'BER, f. one who soils or smears a thing; a coarse painter.

DA'VENTRY, or DAI'NTRY, a town of Northamptonshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on the side of a hill, and is a pretty handsome town on the great road to Chester and Carlisle; and the market is well supplied with horses, cattle, sheep, corn, and provisions. It is 72 miles N. W. of London.

DA'VID'S, ST. an episcopal town of Pembrokehire, in S. Wales; but has neither market nor fair, and is seated in a barren soil on the river Ilen, not a mile from the sea-shore. It was once a considerable place, and had walls which are now demolished; but it is small at present, and thinly inhabited; however, the cathedral is a pretty good structure. From the cape, near this place, there is a prospect into Ireland. It is 255½ miles W. by N. of London.

DA'VID'S, ST. a town and fort of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, and on the coast of Coromandel. It is an English factory, and one of the strongest places they have in the East-Indies. The fort stands close to the river, and the territory belonging to it is 8 miles on the sea-shore, and 4 within land. It produces good long cloths, chints, calicoes, and muslins. Each house has a garden, and there are plenty of black cattle, but small. The river and sea abound with good fish. It is 80 miles S. of Fort St. George. Lon. 79. 55. E. lat. 11. 30. N.

DAUGHTER, [daughter, f. [chter, Sax.] the female offspring of a man or woman. A daughter-in-law. A woman.

To DAUNT, v. a. [damito, Lat.] to discourage; to damp a person's courage.

DAUNTLESS, a. without fear or discouragement.

DAUNTLESSNESS, f. a condition void of fear.

DAUPHIN, f. a title given to the eldest son of France, on account of the province of Dauphiny, which, in 1243, was given to Philip of Valois, on this condition, by Humbert, dauphin of the Viennois.

To DAWN, v. n. [degian, Sax.] to grow light; to advance towards day. Figuratively, to glimmer, or afford an obscure light to the understanding; to give some indication of greater and approaching splendor.

DAWN, f. the first appearance of day or light. Figuratively, a beginning.

DAY, f. [dag, Sax.] that space of time wherein it is light; but a natural or civil day is that space of time wherein the earth performs one rotation on its axis, so as its different parts shall successively enjoy the light of the sun; this consists of a period of 24 hours. Figuratively, light; sunshine. Any time specified and distinguished from other time; an age; the time. In this sense it is usually plural. Life: in this sense it is commonly plural; as, "He never in his days broke his word." The day of contest; the battle. Unappointed time. To day, on this day. Days of grace, in Commerce, are certain days allowed by custom, for the payment of a bill of exchange, &c. after it is become due. Three days of grace are allowed in England; ten in France and Dantzic; eight at Naples; six at Venice, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and Antwerp; four at Frankfort; five at Leipzig; twelve at Hamburg; six in Portugal; fourteen in Spain; thirty in Genoa, &c.

DAYBOOK, f. a book wherein tradesmen enter all the occurrences of the day, in the order they happen; called likewise a waste book.

DAY-LA'BOUR, f. a portion of labour exacted of a person every day, and implies the idea of hardship and fatigue.

DAY-LA'BOURER, f. a person who is hired to work by the day; a hard-working and slaving person.

DA'YSMAN, f. a person chosen to determine or decide a dispute between others.

DAY-SPRING, f. the first appearance of light in the morning; the dawn; the day-break.

DAY-STAR, f. the morning-star. Figuratively, the light shed by the day-star; the light of the gospel which is spread by Christ, the day-star of righteousness.

To DAZE, v. a. [dwas, Sax.] to overpower with light.

DA'ZIED, a. adorned or over-grown with dazies.

To DA'ZZLE, v. a. [See DAZE] to overpower the eyes, and injure the sight with too great a degree of light or splendor. Neuterly, to be overpowered, or lose the use of sight for a time, by too much light, or too great an application to reading.

DEA'CON, [dekon, f. [diaconus, Lat.] a lower degree of clergy, rather a novice, or state of probation for one year, after which a person is admitted into full orders, or ordained a priest.

DEA'CONESS, [dekoness, f. a female in the ancient church, who administered such offices to those of her own sex, which it was not decent for the men to do, such as the baptism of adult women, &c.

DEAD, [ded, f. [dead, Belg.] without, or deprived of life, applied to those persons whose souls are separated from their bodies. Figuratively, tively, without sense or motion; hence a deep sleep, which imitates the want of sense and motion in a dead body, is called a dead sleep. Unactive, dull, applied to colours. Ufless; unaffected; void of ardour or warmth; gloomy; still; obscure; obtuse. Tufless or vapid, applied to liquors. Uninhabited, or not interperfed with houfes. "A dead wall." Withered. "A dead bough or plant. The dead, dead men. PROV. He that waits for a dead man's shoes may go long enough for feet.

DEAD, [ded] f. time in which there is remarkable stillness or gloom; as midnight.

To DEAD, [ded] or DEA'DEN, [deden] v. a. to deprive a thing of any quality or sensation. Figuratively, to make liquors vapid, unactive or spiritless.

DEA'D-LIFT, [ded-lifti] f. a pressing necessity, call, or exigence; a last resort.

DEA'DLY, [dedly] a. that which kills; murderous; mortal; inveterate.

DEA'DLY, [dedly] ad. in a manner resembling the dead. "Looked deadly pale." Irreconcilably; irremediably. Sometimes used in a figurative discourse, only to enforce the significance of a word, implying very much; prodigiously; exceedingly. "Though deadly weary."

DEA'DNESS, [dedness] f. want of warmth or ardour. Figuratively, languor, or faintness. Unactive; loss of spirit, applied to liquors.

DEA'D-RECKONING, [ded-reckning] f. Estimation, the conjecture made by seamen of the place where the ship is, by keeping an account of her way by the log, by knowing the course they have steered by the compass, and by rectifying all with an allowance for leeway, without any observation of the sun, moon, or stars.

DEAF, [def] a. [deaf, Sax.] wanting the use of hearing, or having it greatly impaired. Figuratively, regardless, unattentive.

DEAF, or DEAF'FEN, [def, or deffen] v. a. to deprive of hearing.

DEAF'LY, [deffy] ad. [deaflic, Sax.] without any sense of sounds; imperfectly heard.

DEAF'NESS, [deffness] f. the state of a person who has entirely lost, or has the sense of hearing greatly impaired. Figuratively, inattention, or entire disregard.

DEAL, a sea-port town in Kent, whose market is on Thursdays. It is seated near the sea, and is a member of Sandwich, governed by a mayor and jurats. It has a church, a chapel, three long but narrow streets. No manufacture is carried on here, the trades-people depend on the sea-faring men who resort thither. This place is defended by a castle built by Henry VIII. and near it are two villages, the Downs, where ships usually ride at anchor on their way out or coming home. It is 72 miles E. of London.

DEAL, [deal] f. [deal, Sax.] a part or portion. It is a general word for expressing much, and with great. The office, or practice of distributing cards to those who are engaged in any game. Fir, or pine-wood, from deyl, Belg.

To DEAL, [deet] v. a. [deelen, Belg.] to distribute, or dispose of to different persons; to scatter promiscuously; to give to several persons in order, one after another. Neuterly, to transact business; to trade; to act; to sell; to be conversant in; to practise; to behave towards; to treat; sometimes to contend with, or approve.

DEA'LER, [deeler] f. one who trades in any particular commodity; one who has to do with or practises any thing; one who distributes cards.

DEA'LING, [deeling] f. practice; action; behaviour; treatment; business; or trade.

DEAN, a town of Gloucestershire, with a market on Mondays. It had its name from the forest of Dean, in which it is seated, 112 miles W. S. W. of London.

DEAN, [deen] f. [a Greek word signifying ten, because at first always presiding over ten prebendaries, or canons, at least] a person in collegiate churches or, chapels, who is president of the chapter.

DEA'NERY, [deenery] f. the government, authority, revenue, or residence of a dean.

DEAR, [deer] a. [dear, Sax.] an object of great love, and of warm affection; beloved. Figuratively, valuable; of high price; costly; scarce; not plentiful.

DEAR, [deer] f. a word of endearment.

DEAR-BOUGHT, purchased at a high rate; bought at too high a price.

DEA'R'LING, or DA'R'LING, f. [dearling, Sax.] a person cherished with great affection.

DE'ARLY, [dearly] ad. with great affection. Used with pay or buy, at a high price; at too great a price.

To DEARN, v. a. [dyrcan, Sax.] See DARN.

DEA'R'NESS, [deerness] f. fondness; a warm or great degree of affection; scarcity; costliness; a high, or too high a price.

DEARTH, [dearth] f. [from dear] scarcity; want; need; famine; barrenness.

DEATH, [deatb] f. [deatb, Sax.] the departure of the soul from the body; loss of sensibility, motion, and all the functions of animal life. Figuratively, mortality; destruction; the manner of dying; the image of mortality represented by a skeleton; the state of the dead; murder, or depriving a person of life by violent and unlawful means; the cause of death. In Law, there is a natural and civil death; natural, where nature itself expires; civil, where a person is not naturally dead but adjudged so by law. Thus, if a person for whose life an estate is granted, remains beyond sea, or is otherwise absent for seven years, and no proof made of his being living, he shall be accounted naturally dead. SYNON. Departure is still more refined, and carries with it an idea of the passage from one life to another. Death more common, and signifies precisely extinction of life. Decease, more studied, studied, is a term somewhat bordering upon the law, and implies the refuge of mortality. The second of these words is made use of with respect to all sorts of animals; the other two to man only.

DE'ATH-BED, [dēb-bed] f. the bed on which a person dies.

DE'ATHFUL, [dēbful] a. pregnant with death; mortal; fatal; destructive.

DE'ATHLESS, [dēbless] a. not subject to death; immortal.

DE'ATHLIKE, [dēblike] a. [deatblic, Sax.] resembling death, either in its horrors, or in its insensibility, or motionless state.

DE'ATH'S-DOOR, [dēb's-door] f. [πίλας-ἄδης, Gr.] a near approach to death, on the brink or verge of dying.

DE'ATH'S-MAN, [dēb's-man] f. an executioner.

DE'ATH-WATCH, [dēb-watch] f. something that is foolishly reported to make a ticking noise in a wall, &c. against the death of some friend; but is only a small insect, &c. making a noise like the beating of a watch, described by Dr. Derham in the Philosophical Transactions. It very much resembles a louse both in shape and colour; but is more nimble; is common in every house in the warm months; but in the cold season, hides itself in dry dusty places.

DEAURA'TION, f. [deauratio, Lat.] the gilding or covering any thing with gold or silver.

To DEBA'R, v. a. to hinder or restrain a person from the enjoyment of a thing.

To DEBA'RK, v. a. [debarquer, Fr.] to come out of a ship upon shore.

To DEBA'SE, v. a. to reduce from a higher to a lower value; to adulterate metal or liquor by the addition of something less valuable; to spoil, or render less perfect by mean and unworthy additions.

DEBA'SEMENT, f. the act of debasing, or degrading a thing by the mixture of something mean or worthless.

DEBA'SER, f. the person who lessens the value of a thing by some mixture; one who adulterates metals or liquors.

DEBA'TABLE, a. that which may be disputed, or give occasion for controversy.

DEBA'TE, f. [debat, Fr.] a dispute concerning the meaning or the truth of any proposition; a quarrel or contest.

To DEBA'TE, v. a. [debatte, Fr.] to controvert or dispute; to produce the arguments which may be brought to support any side of a question. Neuterly, to deliberate.

DEBA'TEFUL, a. fond of dispute or contradiction. Quarrelsome or contentious, when applied to persons. Contested, or occasioning disputes, when applied to things.

DEBA'TER, f. a disputant; or one fond of dispute.

To DEBAU'CH, v. a. [debaucher, Fr.] to seduce a person, or prevail on him to do something amiss; to corrupt a person's morals, so as to make him lewd; to corrupt by intemperance in meat or drink, but especially the latter.

DEBAU'CH, f. intemperance in meat or drink; lewdness.

DEBAUCHE'E, [dēb'she'] f. [debauché, Fr.] a person given to intemperance in drink, or lewdness.

DEBAU'CHMENT, f. the act of corrupting the morals of a person, whether it respects temperance or chastity.

To DEBE'L, or to DEBE'LLATE, v. a. to conquer; to overcome in war.

DE'BENHAM, a town of Suffolk, with a market on Fridays. It is seated near the head of the river Deben, on the side of a hill, 8½ miles N. E. of London.

DEBENTURE, f. is a term used at the custom-house, for a kind of certificate signed by the officers of the customs, and entitles a merchant exporting goods, to the receipt of a bounty or drawback; which debentures for foreign goods are to be paid within one month after demand.

To DEBI'LITATE, v. a. [debilito, Lat.] to deprive of strength; to weaken, or render weak.

DEBILITA'TION, f. the act of depriving a person of strength, or rendering him weak.

DEBI'LITY, f. loss of strength; weakness; want of strength to bear any weight, or to accomplish an undertaking.

DEBONA'IR, a. [debonnaire, Fr.] lively; affable; genteel; civil; well-bred; elegant.

DEBONA'I'RLY, ad. with an elegant or genteel air; civilly; sprightly.

DEBT, [det] f. [debitum, Lat.] that which one person owes to another. That which any one is obliged to do or suffer.

DE'BTOR, [dētōr] f. [debitor, Lat.] he that owes another money; one who has taken goods of another on trust; that side of an account which contains the articles which a person has had on trust.

DEBULLI'TION, [debullitio, Lat.] f. the bubbling of water over the sides of the vessel which contains it.

DE'CADE, f. [from deka, Gr.] a number amounting to, or consisting of ten.

DECA'DENCY, f. [decadence, Fr.] decay.

DE'CAGON, f. [deka and gonia, Gr.] in Geometry, a figure having ten equal sides and angles.

DE'CALOGUE, [dekälög] f. [δεκάλογος, Gr.] the ten commandments given by God to Moses.

DECA'MERON, f. a book, discourse, or other matter, divided into ten distinct parts.

To DECA'MP, v. n. [decamper, Fr.] to shift a camp; to remove from a place.

DECA'MPMENT, f. the act of moving from a place.

To DECA'NT, v. a. [decanto, Lat.] to pour liquor off gently.

DECANTA'TION, f. [decantation, Fr.] the act of pouring liquor off the lees.

DECA'NTER, f. a bottle of white glass, used to contain liquors.

To DECAPITATE, v. a. [decapito, Lat.] to behead.

To DECAY, v. n. [decbeoir, Fr.] to lose of its value, substance, strength, or perfection; to be gradually impaired. Actively, to impair; to consume gradually; or waste the substance of a thing.

DECA'Y, f. a gradual loss of substance, qualities, value, or perfection; the effects or marks of consumption or decline.

DECA'YER, f. that which causes decay.
DECEASE, [defesse] f. [decessus, Lat.] death; departure from life.

To DECEASE, v. n. [decedo, Lat.]
DECEIT, [defet] f. [deceptio, Lat.] a means by which a thing is passed upon a person for what it is not, as when falsehood is made to pass for truth. A fraud; cheat; artifice.

DECEITFUL, [defetful] a. full of fraud or artifice; meaning different from what a person expresses; not to be confided in.

DECEITFULLY, [defetfully] ad. in a fraudulent, insincere manner.

DECEITFULNESS, [defetfulness] f. the quality of imposing on a person to his hurt.

DECEIVABLE, [defetuable] a. subject or exposed to fraud or imposture; subject to, or capable of, leading a person into an error.

DECEIVABLENESS, f. the possibility of being imposed upon by false pretences.

To DECEIVE, [defeeve] v. a. [decipio, Lat.] to make a person believe something false, or intended to his damage or hurt; to impose on a person's credulity by false appearances; to lead into an error or mistake. Figuratively, to disappoint.

DECEIVER, [defeever] f. one who leads another into a mistake; one who imposes on the credulity of another.

DECEMBER, f. [Lat.] the last or twelfth month of the year, according to the modern computation of time.

DECEMPEDAL, a. [decem and pes, Lat.] measuring ten feet.

DECEMVIRATE, f. the decemviri, among the Romans, were ten noblemen chosen to govern the commonwealth, instead of two consuls.

DECENT, or DE'CENCY, f. [decencia, Lat.] a method of address or action proper and becoming a person's sex, character, or rank. Figuratively, modesty.

DECENNIAL, a. [from decennium, Lat.] continuing the space of ten years.

DECENT, a. [decens, Lat.] becoming; fit or suitable; neat.

DECENTLY, ad. in a proper manner; consistent with character, rank, or the rules of good breeding. Figuratively, modestly.

DECEPTIBILITY, f. [from deceptio, Lat.] liability to be led into an error or mistake; liability to be imposed on.

DECEPTIBLE, a. liable to be deceived, imposed on, or led into an error.

DECEPTION, f. [deceptio, Lat.] the act or means of imposing on a person, or leading him into an error; the state of a person imposed on, or in a mistake; a cheat, fraud, or fallacy, by which a person takes a thing to be what it is not.

DECEPTIOUS, a. apt to impose upon; or lead a person into an error.

DECE'PTORY, a. containing the means of imposing on the credulity of a person; or of leading him into a mistake.

DECE'RPT, a. [decerptus, Lat.] diminished; taken off.

DECE'RPTION, f. the act of lessening, taking off, parting, or dividing anything.

DECERTA'TION, f. [decertatio, Lat.] contention, strife, or dispute.

DECE'SSION, f. [decessio, Lat.] a departure; a going away.

To DECIDE, v. a. [decido, Lat.] to put an end to, or determine a dispute or event.

DECI'DER, f. the person who determines a quarrel or cause.

DECI'DUOUS, a. [deciduus, Lat.] falling off. In Botany, soon withering; not lasting the whole year.

DECI'DUOUSNESS, f. aptness to fall. In Botany, the quality of fading or withering every year.

DE'CEIMAL, a. [decimus, Lat.] numbered, multiplied, or increasing by tens. Decimal arithmetic is that which computes by decimal fractions. A decimal fraction is that whose denominator is always one, with one or more cyphers; thus an unit may be imagined to be equally divided into 10 parts, and each of these into 10 more; so that by a continual decimal subdivision, the unit may be supposed to be divided into 10, 100, 1000, &c. equal parts. But denominators of this sort of fractions are always known; they are seldom expressed in writing; but the fraction is distinguished by a point placed before it thus, .6 .46 .869 for $\frac{6}{10}$ $\frac{46}{100}$ $\frac{869}{1000}$. The same is observed in mixed numbers, as 678.9 for $678\frac{9}{10}$ 67.89 for $67\frac{89}{100}$ 6.789 for $6\frac{789}{1000}$, &c. And as cyphers placed after integers increase their value decimally, so being placed before a decimal, they decrease their value decimally; but being placed before integers, and after fractions, neither of them is increased or diminished.

To DE'CEIMATE, v. a. [decimo, Lat.] to tythe; to take the tenth.

DECIMA'TION, f. the act of tything, of taking the tenth, whether by lot or otherwise; a selection of every tenth soldier by lot, for punishment in a general mutiny.

To DECI'PHER, [deffer] v. a. [decipherer, Fr.] to explain any thing written in cyphers. Figuratively, to describe, or give a characteristic representation of a thing; to unfold; to unravel.

DECI'PHERER, [defferer] f. one who explains any thing written in cyphers.

DECI'SION, f. the determination of a dispute or difference; the result of an event.

DECI'SIVE, a. having the power of determining a difference; or settling the result of an event that is uncertain.

DECI'SIVELY, a. in a conclusive manner, so as to put an end to a dispute, or to determine the fate of an undertaking.

DECI'SIVENESS, f. the power of determining any difference, or settling any event.

DECI'SORY, a. able to determine or put beyond dispute.

To DECK, v. a. [decken, Belg.] to cover by way of ornament. To adorn with dress; to embellish.

DECK, f. [from decken, Dan.] is the planked floor of a ship from stem to stern, whereon the guns are laid, and the men walk to and fro. Great ships have three decks, 1st, 2d, and 3d, counting from the lowermost. Half-deck reaches from the main-mast to the stern of the ship. Quarter-deck is that aloft the steerage, reaching to the round-house. Flush-deck is that which lies even in a right line fore and aft, from stem to stern. A rope-deck is that made of cordage interwoven and stretched over a vessel, through which they may annoy an enemy that boards them. It is only used in small vessels that have no deck.

DE'CKER, f. a dresser; one who adorns; one who covers a table, or lays a cloth.

To DECLAIM, v. a. [declamo, Lat.] to speak in a florid manner, like an orator, or rhetorician; to speak much against a thing; to run a thing down, used with against.

DECLAIMER, f. one who makes a florid speech in order to fire the imagination, or move the passions; an orator.

DECLAMATION, f. [declamatio, Lat.] a florid or rhetorical discourse addressed to the passions. Figuratively, an ostentatious display of rhetoric or oratory.

DECLAMATOR, f. [declamator, Lat.] one who speaks against a thing, person, or opinion; an orator; a rhetorician.

DECLAMATORY, a. [declamatorius, Lat.] relating to the practice of declaiming; treated in the manner of a rhetorician; appealing to the passions; merely rhetorical flourish.

DECLARABLE, a. that which may be declared; capable of proof.

DECLARATION, f. [declaratio, Fr.] the discovery of a thing by words; explanation; affirmation. In Law, the shewing forth, or laying out an action personal in any suit; sometimes used both in personal and real actions.

DECLARATIVE, a. explaining; making proclamation; express.

DECLARATORY, a. expressive; affirmative.

To DECLARE, v. a. [declaro, Lat.] to explain, or free from obscurity. To make known; to manifest; to publish or proclaim.

DECLARER, f. one who makes any thing known.

DECLINATION, f. [declinatio, Lat.] a gradual decay, or decrease from a greater degree of strength or power to a less; descent; declination or declivity. In Grammar, the variation or change of the last syllable of a noun, whilst it continues to signify the same thing.

DECLINABLE, a. having a variety of endings, according to the different relations it stands for.

DECLINATION, f. [declinatio, Lat.] descent; a change from a more to a less perfect state; decay; the act of bending down. A variation from a perpendicular or right line; an oblique direction; variation from a fixed point, such as that of the needle from the north. In Astronomy, the distance of the sun, or a star from the equator, either north or south. In Grammar, the inflexion, or declining a noun through all its various terminations. Declination of a plane, in Dialling, is an arch of the horizon, comprehended either between the plane and the prime vertical circle, if counted from east to west, or between the meridian and plane, if reckoned from the north or south.

DECLINATOR, or DECLINATORY, f. an instrument used in Dialling, to determine the declination, reclination, and inclination of planes.

To DECLINE, v. a. [declino, Lat.] to bend or lean downwards. Figuratively, to go astray; to shun, or avoid to do a thing; to sink; to be impaired; to decay. Actively, to bend downwards; to shun; to elude the force of an argument; to mention all the different terminations of a declinable word.

DECLINE, f. decay, owing either to age, time, disease, or other causes.

DECLIVITY, f. [declivitas, Lat.] gradual descent of a hill, or other eminence.

DECLIVOUS, a. [declivus, Lat.] gradually descending.

To DECOCT, v. a. [decoctum, Lat.] to prepare for use by boiling. In Pharmacy, to boil in water, so as to draw out the strength or virtue of a thing; to boil till it grows thick.

DECOCTIBLE, a. that which may be boiled, or may be prepared by boiling.

DECOCTION, f. [decoctum, Lat.] the act of boiling any thing to extract its virtues. Figuratively, the strained liquor of a plant, or other ingredient, boiled in water.

DECOCTURE, f. a preparation or substance formed from boiling ingredients in water.

DECOLLATION, f. [decollatio, Lat.] the act of beheading.

DECOMPOSITE, a. [decompositus, Lat.] compounded a second time; compounded of a thing already compounded.

DECOMPOSITION, f. the act of compounding things which were compounded before.

To DECOMPOUND, v. a. [decompono, Lat.] to compose of things already compounded; to compound a second time; to form by a second composition.

DECOMPOUND, a. composed of words, things, or ideas already compounded; compounded a second time.

To DECORATE, v. a. [decoro, Lat.] to set off or adorn with ornaments.

DECORATION, f. an ornament, or a thing which, by being added, gives both grace and beauty to another.

DECORATOR,

DECORATOR, f. one who adorns or embellishes.

DECOROUS, a. [decorus, Lat.] suitable, agreeable to the character, dignity, or perfection of a person or thing; becoming.

To DECORTICATE, v. a. [decortico, Lat.] to strip off the bark or husk; to peel.

DECORTICATION, f. the act of stripping a thing of its bark or husk.

DECORUM, f. [Lat.] a behaviour proper or suitable to the character and abilities of a person, consisting likewise of a due observance of the established rules of politeness.

To DECOY, v. a. [from koy, Belg.] to lure or entice into a cage; to draw into a snare. Figuratively, to seduce a person by allurement.

DECOY, f. a place adapted for drawing wild fowl into snares. Figuratively, allurement; temptation; a snare. A decoy-duck is one that is trained to bring others into a snare.

To DECREASE, [d-kreĕs] v. n. [decreſco, Lat.] to become less either in length, weight, heat, or bulk; to diminish. Actively, to make less.

DECREASE, [dekreĕs] f. the state of growing less; decay. In Astronomy, the time; the change made in the face of the moon from its full, till it returns to full again.

To DECRETE, v. n. [decretum, Lat.] to establish by law; to resolve. Actively, to pass, or dispose of a thing by law.

DECRETE, f. [decretum, Lat.] a law; an established rule. In Law, the determination of a suit.

DECREMENT, f. [decrementum, Lat.] the loss of becoming less; the quantity lost by decay.

DECREPIT, a. [decrepitus, Lat.] wasted, worn out, and enfeebled by age.

To DECREPITATE, v. a. [decrepo, Lat.] to scalden salts on the fire till they cease to bubble or make a noise.

DECREPITATION, f. the crackling noise made by salt when put over a fire in a scalden.

DECREPITNESS, or DECREPITUDE, the weakness attending old age; the last stage of decay.

DECRESCENT, part. [decreſcens, Lat.] growing less; in a state of decay.

DECRETAL, a. [decretum, Lat.] appertaining, belonging, or relating to a decree. A crystal epistle is that which the pope decrees thereby himself, or by the advice of cardinals, his being consulted thereon by some particular person.

DECRETAL, f. a letter or rescript of the pope, by which some point in the ecclesiastical law is solved or determined; a book of decrees or laws.

DECRETIST, f. one who studies or professes the knowledge of decretals.

DECRETORY, a. judicial; final; decisive; critical, or that time in which some definite event will happen.

DE'CRIMAL, f. the endeavouring to lessen any thing in the esteem of the public; censure; condemnation.

To DECRY', v. a. [decrier, Fr.] to censure, blame, or inveigh against a thing; to endeavour to lessen the esteem the public has for a thing.

DECU'MBENCE, or DECU'MBENCY, f. [from decumbo, Lat.] the act or posture of lying down.

DECU'MBITURE, f. the time at which a person takes to his bed in a disease.

DE'CUPLÉ, a. [decuplus, Lat.] tenfold; the same number repeated ten times.

DECU'RION, f. [decurio, Lat.] an officer who had the command of ten persons.

DECU'RSION, f. [d curſus, Lat.] the act of running or flowing down.

DECURTA'TION, f. the act of cutting short, or shortening.

To DUCU'SSATE, v. a. [decuſſo, Lat.] to interfect, or cross at right angles.

DECUSSA'TION, f. the act of crossing, or the state of being crossed at right angles; the point in which two lines cross each other.

DE'DDINGTON, a town in Oxfordshire, with a market on Tuesdays. It is seated on a rising ground, in a fertile soil, 16 miles N. of Oxford, and 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ W. N. W. of London.

To DEDE'CORATE, v. a. [d'decoro, Lat.] to disgrace; to bring a reproach upon.

DEDE'COROUS, a. [d'decus, Lat.] disgraceful; reproachful.

DE'DHAM, a town of Essex, which has a market on Tuesdays. It has one old large church, which has a remarkable fine steeple, of the Gothic order, and a great deal of carved work about it, but much injured by time; here is also a presbyterian meeting-house, and three very good schools. The streets, though not paved, are very clean, occasioned by their lying pretty high. It is 58 miles N. E. of London.

To DE'DICATE, v. a. [dedico, Lat.] to devote, appropriate, or set a thing aside for divine uses. Figuratively, to appropriate peculiarly to a design or purpose; to inscribe to a patron.

DE'DICATED, part. or a. [d'dicatus, Lat.] appropriated or devoted to a particular use.

DEDICA'TION, f. [dedicatio, Lat.] the act of consecrating or appropriating some place or thing solely to divine uses; the address of an author to his patron.

DEDICATOR, f. one who ascribes a work to a patron.

DE'DICATORY, a. composing, belonging to, or in the style of a dedication.

DEDI'TION, f. [deditio, Lat.] the act of surrendering to an enemy.

To DEDU'CE, v. a. [deduco, Lat.] to describe in a continual or connected series, so that one thing shall introduce another; to infer by reason from certain propositions which are premised.

DEDU'CEMENT, f. that which is collected or inferred from any premises.

DEDU'CIBLE.

DEDUCIBLE, a. to be inferred or discovered from principles laid down.

DEDUCIVE, a. performing the act of deduction; inferring or collecting from principles or propositions already laid down.

To DEDUCT, v. a. [deduco, Lat.] to subtract, or take away.

DEDUCTION, f. a consequence or inference drawn by reason from some principles laid down; that which is subtracted or taken away from any sum or number, &c.

DEDUCTIVE, a. that which may be deduced or inferred from any proposition laid down or premised.

DEDUCTIVELY, ad. by way of inference, or collecting one truth from another.

DEED, f. [deed, Sax.] an action, or thing done; an exploit; written evidence of any legal act; fact; reality.

DEE'DLESS, a. unactive; without doing any thing.

To DEEM, v. n. [part. deemed, formerly dempt, deman, Sax.] to judge; to think; to determine on due consideration.

DEEMSTER, f. [from deem] a judge; a word still used in Guernsey and Jersey.

DEEP, a. [deep, Sax.] that which has length measured downward from its surface. Applied to situation, low; below the surface, or measured from the surface downwards. Figuratively, piercing far; far from the entrance. "Deep ambush'd in her silent den." Dryd. Not to be discovered at first sight; not obvious, "The sense lies deep." Locke. Sagacious, penetrating, profound, learned. "He's meditating with two deep divines." Shak. Artful, grave. Dark, applied to colours.

DEEP, f. [diepte, Belg.] the sea. Joined to nights, the most advanced and stillest part thereof; midnight.

To DEE'PEN, v. a. to sink far below the surface. Applied to colours, to darken; to cloud; to make a shade darker. To increase the dolefulness of a sound.

DEE'PING, a town of Lincolnshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is seated on the river Weland, in a fenny ground, 89½ miles N. of London.

DEE'PLY, ad. to a great distance below the surface; with great study, application and penetration, opposed to superficially. Sorrowfully; profoundly; with a great degree of sorrow, melancholy, or sadness, when used with words expressing grief. In a high degree; excessively; vastly.

DEEP-MOUTHED, a. having a hoarse, loud voice, or uttering a hollow, loud sound.

DEE'PNES, f. distance, or space measured from the surface downwards.

DEER, f. [deer, Sax.] in Natural History, a class of animals, the males of which have their heads adorned with branching horns, and are kept for hunting; when killed, their flesh is called venison; and their species are various.

To DEFA'CE, v. a. [defaire, Fr.] to destroy; to ruin; to disfigure.

DEFA'CEMENT, f. the act of disfiguring.

DEFA'CKER, f. one who destroys or disfigures any thing.

DE FA'CTO, f. something actual and in fact, or really existing, in contradistinction to de jure, where a thing is only so in justice, but not in fact.

DEFA'ILANCE, f. [defaillance, Fr.] failure; miscarriage; disappointment.

To DEFA'LCATE, v. a. [defalquer, Fr.] to cut or lop off; to take away or abridge part of a person's pension or salary. Most commonly applied to money affairs.

DEFALC'ATION, f. diminution; abridgment of any customary allowance.

To DEFA'LK, v. a. to lop or cut off; to abridge.

DEFAMA'TION, f. [defamatio, Lat.] the speaking slanderous words of another, for which the slanderer is punishable according to the nature of the offence, either by action at common law, or in the ecclesiastical court.

SYNON. There are those accustomed to detractio who would fly the thoughts of defamatio, little imagining that both are equally bad, being two different means, only working to the same end.

DEFA'MATORY, a. tending to lessen the character, or ruin the reputation of another.

To DEFA'ME, v. a. [defamo, Lat.] to utter words against a person or thing, with an intent to lessen his reputation, or render it infamous.

DEFA'MER, f. one who asserts things injurious to the reputation of another, with an intention to render him infamous.

DEFA'ULT, f. [defaut, Fr.] omission of what ought to be done; neglect; fault. In Law, it is a non-appearance in court at a day assigned. If a plaintiff fails to appear at his trial, he is non-suited; if a defendant makes default, judgment will go against him by default. Jurors making default in their appearance, are to lose and forfeit issue.

To DEFA'ULT, v. a. to fail; or not perform something promised or contracted.

DEFE'ASANCE, [deféissance] f. [defaillance, Fr.] the act of annulling, or rendering a contract void.

DEFE'ASIBLE, [deféissible] a. [from defaire, Fr.] that which may be annulled, abrogated, set aside, or made void.

DEFE'AT, [deféit] f. [from defaire, Fr.] the overthrow of an army; an act of destruction; deprivation.

To DEFE'AT, [deféit] v. a. to beat, or overthrow an army. Figuratively, to frustrate; to disappoint.

DEFE'ATURE, [deféiture] f. the act of disfiguring, or spoiling the features of a person.

To DE'FECATE, v. a. [defæco, Lat.] to purge, or clear liquors from dregs or foulnesses. Figuratively, to clear truth from any thing which renders it obscure; to purify from any gross mixture; to brighten.

DE'FECATE, a. [defæcatus, Lat.] cleared, or purified from lees or foulnesses.

DEFECA'TION, f. [defæcatio, Lat.] the act of clearing or purifying from foulness.

DEFE'CT,

DEFECT, f. [defectus, Lat.] the absence of something which a thing ought to have; failing; want; a mistake or error, applied to the understanding. A fault, applied to moral conduct. SYNON. Fault includes in its idea relation to the maker: so that while it implies some real want in the finishing of the work, it denotes also that it was owing to the workman. Defect expresses something imperfect in the thing, without any relation to the maker of it.

To DEFECT, v. n. [defectum, Lat.] to be deficient.

DEFECTIBILITY, f. a state of failing; deficiency; imperfection.

DEFECTIBLE, a. imperfect; deficient; wanting in something which a thing ought to have.

DEFECTION, f. [defectio, Lat.] failure; apostasy; rebellion.

DEFECTIVE, a. [defectivus, Lat.] not having all the qualities or powers which are requisite; faulty; blameable. Defective nouns, or verbs, in Grammar, are such as have not some cases, numbers, persons, tenses, or moods.

DEFECTIVENESS, f. wanting something which a person or thing ought to have; a state of imperfection.

DEFENCE f. [defensio, Lat.] the method used to secure a person against the attack of an enemy; guard; protection; security; resistance; vindication; justification; or the reply made by a person in order to clear himself from a crime laid to his charge.

DEFENCELESS, a. destitute of the means of repelling; unable to resist.

To DEFEND, v. a. [defendo, Lat.] to protect; to support; to secure; to forbid. To vindicate or justify. To maintain a place or cause against those that attack it.

DEFENDABLE, a. that which may be maintained or secured against the attacks of an enemy; that which may be vindicated or justified.

DEFENDANT, f. he that endeavours to beat off an enemy, or to hinder a place from falling into his hands. In Law, the person who is prosecuted or sued.

DEFENDER, f. one who protects a place or person against an enemy; one who endeavours to answer the objections raised against any truth or doctrine. Defender of the Faith, a title peculiar to the king of Great Britain, first given by pope Leo X. to Henry VIII. for writing against Luther.

DEFENSATIVE, f. that which is made use of to secure a person or place against the attack of an enemy; defence; guard.

DEFENSIBLE, a. capable of resisting an enemy; vindicating from any crime or aspersion.

DEFENSIVE, a. [defensif, Fr.] only proper for defence.

DEFENSIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to guard against the designs or attacks of an enemy.

To DEFER, v. n. [defero, Lat.] to put off to another time; to delay. To refer to another's judgment.

DEFERENCE, f. [deference, Fr.] regard or respect paid to rank, age, or superior talents; complaisance; submission.

DEFERENT, a. [deferens, Lat.] that which carries or conveys. In Anatomy, the term is applied to certain vessels in the body, that serve for the conveyance of humours from one part to another.

DEFIANCE, f. [diffiance, Fr.] a challenge or call upon a person to make good an accusation; a contemptuous disregard.

DEFICIENCE, or DEFICIENCY, [deficiencia or defisibiency] f. [from deficio, Lat.] the want of something which a person or thing should have; an imperfection; or defect.

DEFICIENT, [defisibiens] a. [deficiens, Lat.] imperfect.

DEFIER, f. a challenger; a contemner; one who dares a person to make good a charge.

To DEFILE, v. a. [afylan, Sax.] to render a thing foul, unclean, or impure; to pollute.

To DEFILE, v. n. [defiler, Fr.] to march or separate in files, applied to an army.

DEFILE, f. [diffile, Fr.] a narrow pass where few men can march abreast.

DEFILEMENT, f. that which renders a thing foul or nasty; that which pollutes or corrupts the virtue of a person.

DEFILER, f. one who pollutes the chastity of a person.

DEFINABLE, a. that which may be defined; that which may be ascertained.

To DEFINE, v. a. [definio, Lat.] to explain a thing or word by the enumeration of its properties or qualities, so as to distinguish it from every thing of the same kind.

DEFINER, f. a person who explains the nature of a thing or word by enumerating all its properties.

DEFINITE, a. [definitus, Lat.] exact, certain, limited, bounded. In Grammar, it is an article that has a precise determinate signification; such as the article the in the English, le and la in French, &c, which fix and ascertain the noun they belong to, to some particular, as the king, le roy; whereas in quality of king, de roy, the articles of and de mark nothing precise, and are therefore indefinite.

DEFINITION, f. [definitio, Lat.] an enumeration of all the simple ideas of which a complex word or idea consists. In Rhetoric, a short explanation of a thing.

DEFINITIVE, a. [definitivus, Lat.] express; positive; decisive; free from ambiguity, doubt, or uncertainty.

DEFINITIVELY, ad. in a positive, express, or decisive manner.

DEFINITIVENESS, f. decisiveness; or a state free from ambiguity or doubt.

DEFLAGRABILITY, f. [from deflagro, Lat.] the quality of taking fire and burning entirely away.

DEFLAGRATION, f. [deflagratio, Lat.] in Chemistry, the act of setting fire to a thing, which which will burn till it is entirely consumed.

 To DEFLECT, v. n. [deflecto, Lat.] to turn aside from its due direction; to bend.
 DEFLECTION, f. [from deflecto, Lat.] the act of deviating or turning aside from its proper course, point, or direction.
 DEFLEXURE, f. [from deflecto, Lat.] a bending downwards; the act or state of a thing turned aside.
 DEFLORATION, f. [defloratus, Lat.] the act of deflouring, or violating, the chastity of a virgin.
 To DEFLOUR, v. a. [deflorer, Fr.] to violate a virgin by acts of immodesty. Figuratively, to take away the beauty or grace of a thing.
 DEFLOURER, f. a ravisher; or one who violates the chastity of a virgin.
 DEFLUXION, f. [defluxio, Lat.] the act of flowing down.
 DEFOEDATION, f. [from defœdus, Lat.] the act of rendering foul and filthy.
 DEFORCEMENT, f. in Law, the act of with-holding lands or tenements from the right owner.
 To DEFORM, v. a. [deformo, Lat.] to disfigure, or spoil the beauty or shape of any thing; to make disagreeable to the sight.
 DEFORMATION, f. [deformatio, Lat.] the act of spoiling the shape or beauty of a thing, or making it disagreeable to the sight.
 DEFORMED, a. [deformis, Lat.] void of symmetry of parts, straightness of shape, or pleasantness of appearance; disfigured; crooked.
 DEFORMEDLY, ad. in an ugly manner.
 DEFORMITY, f. [deformitas, Lat.] the appearance of a thing which has lost its beauty, gracefulness, or regularity. Ridiculousness. Figuratively, deviation from the standard of moral perfection and obedience.
 To DEFRAUD, v. a. [defraudo, Lat.] to deprive a person of his property by some false appearance, fraud, or trick.
 DEFRAUDER, f. a person who deprives another of what belongs to him, by some trick, or false appearance.
 To DEFRAUD, v. a. [defrauer, Fr.] to pay or discharge expences.
 DEFT, a. [doeft, Sax.] neat; handsome; spruce; proper. Dextrous. Sprightly; nimble; active.
 DEFTLY, ad. in a skilful manner.
 DEFUNCT, a. [defunctus, Lat.] dead; expired.
 DEFUNCT, f. one who is dead.
 To DEFY, v. a. [deffer, Fr.] to challenge to fight; to treat with contempt.
 DEGENERACY, f. [degeneratio, Lat.] the acting unworthy of one's ancestors. Figuratively, the leaving of a moral conduct for an immoral one; meanness.
 To DEGENERATE, v. n. [degenero, Lat.] to fall from the reputation or virtues of one's ancestors; to sink from a noble to a base state. To grow wild or base, applied to vegetables.
 DEGENERATE, a. [degener, Lat.] unlike one's ancestors in virtues; unworthy; corrupted; having lost its value.

 DEGENERATENESS, f. corruption, depravity.
 DEGENERATION, f. a deviation from the virtues of one's ancestors; a sinking from a state of excellence to one of less worth.
 To DEGLUTINATE, v. a. [degluer, Fr.] to unglue or soften.
 DEGLUTINATION, f. the act of ungluing, or softening.
 DEGLUTITION, f. [deglutitio, Lat.] the act or power of swallowing.
 DEGRADATION, f. [degradation, Fr.] the act of depriving a man of any office, employ, or dignity. Figuratively, deprivation, or a change from a more perfect and honourable to a low and mean state. In Painting, the lessening and confusing of the figures in a picture or landscape, as they would appear to the eye at a supposed distance.
 To DEGRADE, v. a. [degrader, Fr.] to deprive a person of any office, or dignity; to lessen the value of a thing.
 DEGREE, f. [degré, Fr.] quality, rank, condition, or dignity; state or condition of a thing, which may be either heightened or lowered, increased or diminished; measure; proportion; or quantity. In Geometry, the 360th part of the circumference of a circle. In Chemistry, a greater or less intenseness of heat. In Canon Law, an interval of kinship, from whence nearness or remoteness of blood are computed. In Music, the little intervals which compose the concords. In the University, a dignity or title conferred on persons who are of a certain standing, and have performed the exercises required by the statutes, which entitles them to certain privileges, precedence, &c.
 By DEGREES, ad. gradually.
 To DEHORT, v. a. [dehortor, Lat.] to dissuade; to advise to the contrary.
 DEHORTATION, f. a dissuasion; arguments used to keep a person from assenting to any doctrine, or from committing any action.
 DEICIDE, f. [deus and caedo, Lat.] the crime of murdering a deity or god, applied only to the death of our blessed Saviour.
 To DEJECT, v. a. [dejecio, Lat.] to cast down, or render sorrowful or melancholy.
 DEJECTED, part. or a. [dejectus, Lat.] cast down; afflicted with some disappointment; mournful; melancholy.
 DEJECTEDLY, ad. in a dull, sorrowful, or mournful manner.
 DEJECTEDNESS, f. the state of a person who grieves and is cast down on account of some great loss or disappointment.
 DEJECTION, f. a lowness of spirits; affliction; loss, or an impaired state. SYNON. Dejection is commonly caused by great affliction, and is too often a state of despair. Melancholy is generally the effect of constitution; its cloudy ideas overpower and banish all that are cheerful. Low-spiritedness is involuntary, and often proceeds from a weakness of nerves; excess of joy, fatigue, bad digestion will occasion it.
Dullness,

Della, on the contrary, is voluntary, it arises frequently from discontent, disappointment, and from any other circumstance that may dispel the mind.

DEIFICATION, f. the act of ascribing divine honours to a person, and worshipping him as a god.

DEIFORM, a. [deus and forma, Lat.] of a god-like form.

To DEIFY, v. a. [déifier, Fr.] to make a god; to adore as a god; to rank among the deities. Figuratively, to praise too much; to treat a person unbecomingly a mortal.

To DEIGN, [dein] v. n. [daigner, Fr.] to condescend; to vouchsafe. Actively, to grant a favour; to permit.

DEIGNING, [deigning] f. a condescension; permission; granting a favour.

DEISM, f. [déisme, Fr.] the doctrine or opinion of those, who own the belief of a God, but deny his having ever given, or the probability of his ever giving, a revelation.

DEIST, f. [déiste, Fr.] a person who believes the existence of God, but denies all revelation in general.

DEISTICAL, a. belonging to the opinion of those who denies all revealed religion.

DEITY, f. [deitas, Lat.] divinity; the nature and essence of God; an idol or supposed deity; an heathen god.

DELAPOSED, part. [delapsus, Lat.] in Physics, hearing or falling down.

DELATION, f. the act of carrying, or conveying. An accusation, charge, impeachment, or information.

DELATOR, f. [delator, Lat.] an accuser, or informer.

To DELA'Y, v. a. [delayer, Fr.] to defer or put off the doing of a thing till another time; to hinder; to frustrate. Neuterly, to stop; to cease from action.

DELAY, f. the act of deferring or putting off the performance of an act to some other time. Figuratively; a stay; a stop.

DELA'YER, f. one who defers the doing of a thing; a pater off.

DELECTABLE, a. [delectabilis, Lat.] affording pleasure or delight to the senses.

DELECTABLENESS, f. pleasantness.

DELECTABLY, ad. in such a manner as affords pleasure.

To DE'LEGATE, v. a. [delego, Lat.] to send away; to intrust; to communicate authority. In Law, to appoint judges to determine a particular cause.

DE'LEGATE, f. [delegatus, Lat.] any person authorized to act for another. In Law, applied to persons appointed by the king's commission to sit on an appeal to him in the court of Chancery.

DE'LEGATE, a. [delegatus, Lat.] deputed or authorized to judge or transact business for another.

DELEGATION, f. [delegatio, Lat.] the act of appointing; the assignment of a debt to another. In Law, commission given a judge to determine some cause, which would not otherwise come before him.

DELETERIOUS, a. [deleterius, Lat.] noxious; deadly; fatal; applied, by naturalists, to such things as are of a pernicious nature.

DELET'ERY, a. [deleterius, Lat.] destructive; deadly; poisonous.

DEL'F, or DEL'FE, f. [from delwan, Sax.] a mine; a quarry; or large cavity formed by digging. Glazed earthen ware, imitating china, so called from being made at Delftland.

To DEL'IBERATE, v. n. [delibero, Lat.] to weigh in the mind; to ponder upon. Figuratively, to hesitate.

DEL'IBERATE, a. [deliberatus, Lat.] circumspect; discreet; wary; considering the nature of a thing before the making a choice. Figuratively, slow; tedious.

DEL'IBERATELY, ad. in a circumspect, wary, or discreet manner.

DEL'IBERATENESS, f. circumspection; coolness; caution.

DEL'IBERATION, f. [deliberatio, Lat.] the act of considering things before an undertaking or making choice.

DEL'IBERATIVE, a. [deliberativus, Lat.] relating to consideration, or premeditation; with thought or caution.

DE'LICACY, f. daintiness; or taste shewn in eating; any thing which affects the senses with great pleasure, elegant softness of form; nicety, or minute accuracy. Genteel neatness, applied to dress. Politeness of behaviour; indulgence, which produces weakness; tenderness; weakness of constitution; a disposition which is shocked with any excess.

DE'LICATE, a. [delicatus, Fr.] fine, or consisting of minute parts; beautiful or pleasing to the eye; nice or pleasing to the taste; dainty, or nice in the choice of food; choice; select; polite; or rigorously observant of the maxims of good breeding; soft, effeminate, or unable to bear hardships; pure; free from foulness; clear. SYNON. To conceive things that are fine, we need only sufficient comprehension; but it requires taste to conceive that which is delicate. The first is within the reach of many persons, the second but of few.

DE'LICATELY, ad. in a beautiful manner. Finely, opposed to coarsely. Daintily; luxuriously. Choicely; politely; effeminately.

DE'LICATENESS, f. softness; effeminacy; too great an affectation of elegance.

DE'LICATES, f. niceties, rarities, applied to food.

DEL'ICIOUS, [deliciosus] a. [delicious, Fr.] giving exquisite pleasure to the senses, or to the mind.

DEL'ICIOUSLY, [deliciosus] ad. in an elegant or luxurious manner, applied to food or dress; in such a manner as to convey a rapturous pleasure.

DEL'ICIOUSNESS, [deliciosus] f. the quality of affording exquisite pleasure to the senses, or to the mind.

DELIG'ATION, f. [deligatio, Lat.] the confining the parts of a thing together by binding.

DELIGHT,

DELIGHT, [delit] f. [from delector, Lat.] that which affords an agreeable pleasure or satisfaction to the mind or the senses.

To DELIGHT, [delit] v. a. [delector, Lat.] to take pleasure in the frequent repetition or enjoyment of a thing; to satisfy. Neuterly, to be pleased, satisfied or contented.

DELIGHTFUL, [delitful] a. that which affords great pleasure to the mind.

DELIGHTFULLY, [delitfully] ad. in such a manner as to charm, or afford pleasure, satisfaction, and content.

DELIGHTFULNESS, [delitfulness] f. pleasure, satisfaction, gratification, arising from the frequent repetition, sight, or enjoyment of a thing.

DELIGHTSOME, [delitfome] a. affording great pleasure.

DELIGHTSOMENESS, [delitfomeness] f. the quality of affording with great pleasure.

To DELINEATE, v. a. [delineo, Lat.] to draw the first sketch; to design; to paint a resemblance. Figuratively, to describe in a lively and accurate manner.

DELINEATION, f. the first draught of a thing. Figuratively, a description.

DELINQUENCY, f. [delinquentia, Lat.] a failure; or the omission of a duty; a thing done willfully against any known law.

DELINQUENT, f. [delinquens, Lat.] one who has committed some crime or fault; an offender.

To DELIQUATE, v. n. [deliquo, Lat.] to melt; to be dissolved.

DELIQUATION, f. [deliquatio, Lat.] the act of melting or dissolving; a solution, or the state of a thing melted.

DELIQUUM, f. [Lat.] in Chemistry, the act of distilling by means of fire; but more properly the dissolving or melting a salt or calx, by suspending it in a moist place.

DELIRIOUS, a. [delirius, Lat.] light-headed; raving from the violence of some disorder. Figuratively, doating.

DELIRIUM, f. [Lat.] in Physic, a kind of phrenzy, or madness, caused generally in fevers, by too impetuous a motion of the blood, so far altering the secretion of the brain, as to disorder the whole nervous system.

To DELIVER, v. a. [delivrer, Fr.] to give a person a thing which was given for that purpose by another. Joined with into, to surrender or give up. Joined to from, to free from any danger or calamity. To pronounce, to relate, applied to discourse or reading. To bring into the world, used with of. Actively, to surrender, to put into a person's hands, or leave to his discretion. To deliver down, or over, to transmit or convey any transaction by means of writing. To deliver up, to surrender, to give up, or expose.

DELIVERANCE, f. [delivrance, Fr.] the act of giving or surrendering a thing to another; the act of freeing a person from captivity, imprisonment, danger, or distress; the act or manner of pronouncing or speaking; the act of bringing children into the world.

DELIVERER, f. one who gives a thing into the hands of another, or conveys it to the place ordered; one who frees another from danger, distress, captivity, or imprisonment; one who pronounces a set speech.

DELIVERY, f. the act of giving or surrendering a thing to another; a release from danger, bondage, imprisonment, or distress; pronunciation, or manner of speaking.

DELL, f. [dal, Belg.] a pit; a valley, any cavity in the earth. Obsolete.

DELU'DABLE, a. liable to be deceived, imposed on, or drawn aside.

To DELUDE, v. a. [deludo, Lat.] to beguile; to deceive or seduce by false pretences. Figuratively, to disappoint.

DELUDER, f. one who deceives, imposes on, beguiles, or seduces another by false appearances or pretences.

To DELVE, v. a. [delfan, Belg.] to dig, or open the ground with a spade. Figuratively, to sound one's opinion; to fathom; to get to the bottom of an affair.

DELVER, f. a digger, or one who opens the ground with a spade, or pick-axe, &c.

DELUGE, f. [deluge, Fr.] a flood or inundation of water covering the earth, either in the whole or in part, particularly applied to Noah's flood, being a general inundation, sent by God to punish the corruption of the then world, by destroying every living thing, Noah and his family, and the animals with them in the ark, only excepted. The time of this flood is fixed, by the best chronologers, to the year of the world 1656, before Christ 2348. From this flood, the state of the world is divided into diluvian and antediluvian. Figuratively, the overflowing of a river beyond its natural bounds; any sudden and irresistible calamity; any corruption, or deprivation, which spreads far and quickly.

To DELUGE, v. a. to drown, or lay entirely under water; to overflow with water. Figuratively, to overwhelm with any great and increasing calamity.

DELUSION, f. [delusio, Lat.] the act of imposing on a person by some false appearance. Figuratively, a false appearance, or illusion, which leads a person into an error or mistake.

DELUSIVE, a. [delusus, Lat.] capable of deceiving or imposing upon.

DELUSORY, [from delusus, Lat.] apt to deceive.

DEMAGOGUE, [demagog] f. the ring-leader or head of a faction, or tumult of the common people.

DEMAIN, DEMEAN, or DEMESNE, f. [domain, Fr.] in Law, that land which a man holds originally of himself, opposed to fee, or that which is held of a superior lord.

DEMAND, f. [demande, Fr.] the asking of a thing with authority; claim; enquiry after, in order to buy. In Law, the asking of what is due.

To DEMAND, v. a. [demande, Fr.] to claim; to ask for with authority; to ask or question. In Law, to prosecute in a real action.

DEMANDABLE,

DEMA'NDABLE, a. that which may be claimed as a due, or asked for with authority.

DEMA'NDANT, f. in Law, the plaintiff in a real action.

DEMA'NDER, f. one who claims a thing; one who asks with authority; one that asks for a thing in order to purchase it; one who asks for a debt.

To DEME'AN, [demein] v. a. [demeser, Fr.] to behave. Figuratively, to lessen, debase, or undervalue; to do any thing below one's character or rank.

DEME'ANOUR, [demeinour] f. [from demeser, Fr.] behaviour; carriage; the manner of acting.

DEMENTA'TION, f. madness or losing one's reason.

DEME'RIT, f. [demérite, Fr.] the want of merit; behaviour deserving blame or punishment. Anciently the same as merit.

To DEME'RIT, v. a. [demeriter, Fr.] to act contrary to one's duty, and thereby deserve both blame and disgrace.

DEME'RSION, f. [demerfio, Lat.] the act of plunging under the water, or drowning. In Chemistry, the putting any thing into a dissolving liquor or menstruum.

DEMI, [demi, Fr.] an inseparable particle; half; one part of a thing, which is divided equally in two.

DEMI-BA'STION, f. in Fortification, that which has only one face, and one flank.

DEMI-CA'NON, in Gunnery, a cannon which carries a ball of thirty pound weight; the diameter of its bore is six inches 2-8ths.

DEMI-CU'LVERINE, f. in Gunnery, is a lesser sort of culverine than the common.

DEMI-GOD, f. among the ancient pagans, was one who was not a god by birth, but who, by his heroic exploits, was raised to that dignity.

DEMI'SE, [demiſe] f. [demiſe, Fr.] death; decease.

To DEMI'SE, [demiſe] v. a. [demiſſe, Fr.] to leave, bequeath, or dispose of by will.

DEMI'SSION, f. [demiſſio, Lat.] degradation; diminution of dignity; lessening the value of a thing by some mean action.

DEMOCRACY, f. [δημοκρατία, Gr.] a form of government, wherein the supreme power is lodged in the people.

DEMOCRATICAL, a. belonging to that sort of government wherein the supreme power is lodged in the people.

To DEMO'LISH, v. a. [demolior, Lat.] to pull down, raze, or destroy.

DEMOLISHER, f. one who destroys or pulls down.

DEMOLI'TION, f. the act of pulling down or destroying; destruction.

DE'MON, f. [dæmon, Lat.] a name the ancients gave to certain spirits, who, they imagined, had the power of doing good or evil to mankind; they likewise called them Genii: which see.

DEMO'NIAC, or DEMONI'ACAL, a. belonging to, or possessed by the devil.

DEMO'NIAC, f. a person possessed by the devil, or some evil spirit.

DEMONO'LOGY, f. [δαίμων and λόγος, Gr.] a discourse on the nature and practices of evil spirits.

DEMO'NSTRABLE, a. [demonstrabilis, Lat.] that which may admit of demonstration, or be proved beyond a contradiction.

To DEMO'NSTRATE, v. a. [demonstro, Lat.] to prove so as to convince the most prejudiced, and render in the highest manner certain.

DEMONSTRATION, f. [demonstratio, Lat.] undeniable proof of the truth of a proposition, founded on self-evident principles.

DEMO'NSTRATIVE, a. [demonstrativus, Lat.] convincing; undeniably; self-evident.

DEMO'NSTRATIVELY, ad. in such a clear and evident manner as to demand assent.

DEMONSTRATOR, f. one who proves a thing by demonstration; one who explains, teaches, or renders a thing plain to the meanest capacity; a lecturer.

DEMONSTRATORY, a. having the power of demonstration.

DEMU'LCENT, part. [demulcens, Lat.] in Phycic, softening; mollifying.

To DEMU'R, v. n. [dimoror, Lat.] to delay a process in law by doubts and objections; to pause thro' uncertainty; to hesitate; to doubt; to deliberate; to suspend one's assent, choice, or judgment. Actively, to doubt, or question the truth of a proposition or assertion.

*DEMU'R, f. doubt, arising from uncertainty or want of sufficient proof; hesitation; suspense of judgment, choice, or opinion.

DEMU'RE, a. [des mœurs, Fr.] behaving in a precise, grave, or affected manner.

To DEMU'RE, v. n. to look precisely; to behave with affected modesty.

DEMU'RELY, ad. in an affected, grave, precise, or modest manner.

DEMU'RENESS, f. affected modesty or gravity; preciseness.

DEMU'RRAGE, f. [from demeurer, Fr.] in Commerce, an allowance made to masters of ships, for their stay in a port beyond the time appointed.

DEMU'RRER, f. in Law, a kind of pause made in an action, for a court to take time to consider of some point of difficulty.

DEMY', f. [demi, Fr.] the title of a person on the foundation of Magdalen College, Oxford, who does not enjoy either the privileges or the salary of a fellow, and is of the same import as a scholar at colleges. Applied likewise to signify a larger-sized paper.

DEN, f. [den, Sax.] a cavern, or hollow place under ground; the cave of a wild beast.

DENA'Y, f. denial; refusal.

DE'NBIGH, [Dénby] the capital of Denbighshire, in N. Wales, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on the side of a rocky hill, on a branch of the river Cluyd, and was formerly a place of great strength, with an impregnable castle, now demolished. It is pretty large, well built, and inhabited by tanners and glovers, and has the title of an earldom. It sends sends one member to parliament; and the market is good for corn, cattle, and provisions. It is 208 miles N. W. of London.

DENBIGHSHIRE, [Denbysire] a county of N. Wales, 39 miles in length, and 15 in breadth; bounded on the E. by Flintshire and Shropshire, on the W. by Carnarvonshire, and on the S. by Merionethshire, and on the N. by the Irish Sea. It contains 57 parishes, and 4 market-towns. It has some good pastures, and feeds a great number of horned cattle, sheep, and goats. The air is good, but sharp, and the soil hilly, intermixed with fruitful valleys. Among the hills, are stones called Druid-stones, and small pillars, with inscriptions, which no one hitherto has been able to read.

DENDRO'LOGY, f. [δένδρον and λόγος, Gr.] a discourse or natural history of trees.

DENI'ABLE, a. that which may be refused to be granted, when asked, or to be believed, when proposed.

DENI'AL, f. the refusing to give or believe; the persisting in one's innocence, opposed to the confession of guilt; abjuration, or renouncing.

DENI'ER, f. one who refuses to grant a thing requested, or to assent to a truth proposed for his assent; one who will not acknowledge or own.

DENI'ER, [denier] a French coin, the twelfth part of a sou.

To DE'NIGRATE, v. a. [denigro, Lat.] to make black, or to blacken.

DENIGRA'TION, f. [denigratio, Lat.] the act of making a thing black.

DENIZA'TION, f. the act of enfranchizing a foreigner, by which means he enjoys many of the privileges of a natural subject.

DE'NIZEN, or DE'NISON, f. [dinafddyn, Brit.] in Law, an alien enfranchised by the king's letters patent; which enables him in several respects to act as a subject, viz. to purchase and possess lands, and enjoy any office or dignity; yet not so fully as by naturalization, which enables a man to inherit by descent, which a denizen cannot do. If a denizen purchase lands, his issue, born afterwards, may inherit them, but those he had before shall not.

To DE'NIZEN, v. a. to enfranchise; to make free. Figuratively, to protect, or encourage.

DENMARK, a kingdom of Europe, bounded on the E. by the Baltick Sea, on the W. and N. by the Ocean, and on the S. by Germany. The country is generally flat, and the soil a barren sand. The air is rendered foggy by the neighbourhood of the seas and lakes, of which it is full. Denmark, properly so called, consists of Jutland and the islands of Zealand and Funen, with the little isles about them; but the king of Denmark's dominions contain the kingdom of Norway, the duchies of Holstein, Oldenburg, and Delmenhorst. There is no considerable river, and the winter continues 7 or 8 months. In summer the heat is very considerable, and the days are long. The commodities are corn, pulse, but chiefly horses, and large bees. The kingdom of Denmark was formerly elective, but since 1660 it was rendered hereditary, even to the daughters, partly by consent, and partly by force; at which time the nobility lost most of their privileges. They have very few laws, and those are so plain that they have little need of lawyers, for causes are soon tried. They allow but of one apothecary in a town, except at Copenhagen, where there are two. Their shops are visited by the physicians once a-week, and all the perfished drugs are destroyed. The inhabitants are protestants since the year 1523, when they embraced the confession of Augsburg. The forces which the king of Denmark has usually on foot are near 40,000, but most of them are in the pay of other princes. The revenues are computed at 500,000*l.* a-year, which arise from the crown lands and duties. The produce of Norway consists in pitch, tar, fish, oil, and deal-boards. Copenhagen is the capital town.

To DENO'MINATE, v. a. [denomino, Lat.] to name; to give a name to.

DENOMINA'TION, f. [denominatio, Lat.] a name given to a thing, pointing out some peculiar quality belonging to it.

DENOMINA'TOR, f. the person or thing which affixes a particular appellation to a thing. In Fractions, the number below the line, shewing the number of parts which any integer is supposed to be divided into; thus, in $\frac{6}{8}$; 8, the denominator, shews, that the integer is divided into 8 parts; and 6, the numerator, that you take 6 of those eight parts.

DENOTA'TION, f. [denotatio, Lat.] the act of ascertaining that a particular thing is to be signified or understood by a certain sign, or that a thing belongs to a particular person.

To DENO'TE, v. a. [denoto, Lat.] to mark; to be a sign of; to imply, signify, or betoken.

To DENOU'NCE, v. a. [denonce, Fr.] to threaten by proclamation, or some external sign. Figuratively, in Law, to inform, or give information against.

DENOU'NCEMENT, f. the act of proclaiming any threat, or future and impending evil.

DENOUN'CKER, f. one who declares some menace, or impending calamity or punishment.

DENSE, a. [densus, Lat.] close; compact; thick; having few or very small pores between its particles.

DEN'SITY, f. [densitas, Lat.] thickness; solidity; compactness; the closeness, near approach, or adhesion of the parts of a body.

DENT, f. [dent, Fr.] a mark made in the surface of a thing by thrusting the parts inward.

DEN'TAL, a. [dentalis, Lat.] belonging or relating to the teeth. In Grammar, applied to those letters which are pronounced principally pally by means of the teeth. In Natural History, a small shell-fish.

DENTELLATED, a. in Botany, notched; jagged; formed like the teeth of a saw on the edges.

DENTE'LLI, f. [Ital.] in Architecture, the same as modillions.

DENTI'LATED, part. [denticulatus, Lat.] set with small teeth.

DENTICULATION, f. [denticulatio, Lat.] in Natural History, set with small teeth; notched, or jagged.

DENTIFRICE, f. [dens and frico, Lat.] in Medicine, a powder to cleanse or fasten the teeth.

DENTI'TION, f. [dentiatio, Lat.] the act, or time, of breeding teeth.

To DENU'DATE, v. a. [denudo, Lat.] to strip, or make naked. Figuratively, to divest.

DENU'DATION, f. the act of stripping, or making naked.

To DENU'DE, v. a. [denudo, Lat.] to make naked; to pull off a person's cloaths. Figuratively, to strip or divest a thing of its natural covering.

DENUNCIATION, f. [denunciatio, Lat.] the act of publishing any menace; or threatening any calamity or punishment.

DENUNCIATOR, f. [denunciator, Lat.] the person who proclaims any threat. In Law, one who lodges an information against another.

To DENY, v. a. [denego, Lat.] to contradict an accusation; to refuse to grant a thing requested; to disown; to renounce.

To DEOBSTRU'CT, v. a. [deobstruo, Lat.] to clear from impediments; to free a passage from such things as stop it up.

DEOBSTRUENT, f. [deobstruens, Lat.] in pharmacy, a medicine which, by its dissolving vicidities, opens the pores or passages of the human body.

DEODAND, f. [Deo dandum, Lat.] a thing given or forfeited to God for the pacifying his wrath, in case of any misfortune, by which any Christian comes to a violent death, without the fault of a reasonable creature; as a horse should strike his keeper, and so kill him; the horse is to be sold, and the price distributed to the poor, as an expiation of that fatal event.

To DEOPPILATE, v. a. [de and oppilo, Lat.] to clear a passage from any obstructions.

DEOPPILATION, f. the act of opening passages, or clearing them from obstructions.

DEOPPILATIVE, a. having the power to clear the passages from obstructions.

To DEPA'INT, v. a. [depeindre, Fr.] to give the resemblance of a thing by colours or painting; to describe.

To DEPA'RT, v. n. [departir, Fr.] to go from a place; to revolt; to quit; to retire, or apostatize; to die.

DEPART, f. [departi, Fr.] the act of going away, by quitting a place or person. Figuratively, death. Among Refiners, a method of separating metals blended together in one mass.

DEPA'RTER, f. a refiner; one who purifies metals.

DEPA'RTMENT, f. [departement, Fr.] a peculiar province or employment allotted to a particular person.

DEPA'RTURE, f. the act of going away from a person or place. Figuratively, death; the act of forsaking, or quitting, used with from.

To DEPA'STURE, v. a. [from depascor, Lat.] to graze; to eat up or consume by feeding.

To DEPAU'PERATE, v. a. [depaupero, Lat.] to make poor; to render ground barren.

DEPE'CTIBLE, a. [from depecto, Lat.] tough; clammy; viscid; thick, or tenacious.

To DEPEND, v. n. [dependo, Lat.] to proceed from; to be in a state of subjection; to be supported or maintained by another; to be yet undetermined; to confide in, or rely on.

DEPENDENCE, f. [dependance, Fr.] the state of a thing hanging from a supporter; connexion; the state of being subject to, or at the disposal of, another. Figuratively, reliance; trust; confidence; accident.

DEPENDENT, a. [dependant, Fr.] subject to, or in the power and disposal of another.

DEPENDENT, f. [dependant, Fr.] one who is subject to, at the disposal of, or maintained by, another.

DEPE'NDER, f. one who confides in another.

DEPERDI'TION, f. [from desperdo, Lat.] loss; entire destruction.

To DEPHLE'GM, or DEPHLE'GMATE, [dephlegma or dephlegmate] v. a. [dephlegmo, low Lat.] to clear a fluid from its phlegm or water.

DEPHLEGMA'TION, [dephlegmation] f. in Chemistry, the act of purifying or clearing a fluid of its phlegm or water.

To DEPI'CT, v. a. [depictum, Lat.] to paint, or represent the likeness of a thing in colours; to describe in words.

DEPI'LATORY, f. in Medicine, a plaister, or other application made use of to take away hair.

DEPLE'TION, f. [from depleo, Lat.] in Physic, the act of emptying.

DEPLO'RABLENESS, f. the state of being an object of grief; misery, wretchedness.

DEPLO'RABLY, ad. lamentably; miserably; in such a manner as to occasion or demand sorrow.

To DEPLO'RE, v. a. [deploro, Lat.] to lament, mourn, or express sorrow for any calamity, loss, or misfortune.

DEPLORER, f. one who laments or grieves for a loss or calamity.

DEPLUMA'TION, f. [deplumatio, Lat.] the act of plucking off feathers. In Surgery, the swelling of the eyelids, attended with the falling off of the hairs from the eye-brows.

DEPONENT, f. [deponens, Lat.] in Law, one who gives his testimony in a court of justice; an evidence, or witness. In Grammar, such

such verbs as have an active signification, though they have no active voice; so called, because deponunt, i. e. they lay aside the force of a verb passive; as fatetur, I confess.

To DEPO'PULATE, v. a. [depopulor, Lat.] to unpeople; to lay waste a country.

DEPOPULATION, f. the act of unpeopling, or rendering a country waste by destroying the inhabitants.

DEPOPULA'TOR, f. one who kills or destroys the inhabitants of a country.

To DEPO'RT, v. a. [deporter, Fr.] to carry away; to behave or demean one's self.

DEPO'RT, f. demeanour; behaviour; carriage.

DEPORTA'TION, f. [deportatio, Lat.] transportation, whereby a person had some remote place assigned for his residence, with a prohibition of stirring from it on pain of death.

DEPARTMENT, f. [departement, Fr.] conduct; demeanour.

To DEPO'SE, [depoze] v. a. [depono, Lat.] to lay down; to deprive a person of a post or dignity; to give testimony in a court of justice.

DEPO'SITARY, [depozitary] f. [depositarius, Lat.] one who is entrusted with the charge or keeping of a thing.

To DEPO'SIT, [depozit] v. a. [deponitum, Lat.] to lay up or lodge in any place; to give as a pledge or security; to place at interest.

DEPO'SITE, [depozit] f. [depositum, Lat.] any thing committed to the care, charge, or trust of another; a pledge; a pawn, or security given for the performance of any contract.

DEPOSI'TION, [depozisjon] f. the act of giving testimony on oath; the act of dethroning a prince. In Canon Law, the solemn depriving a clergyman of his orders for some crime.

DEPOSITORY, [depozitory] f. the place where any thing is lodged. Depository is properly used of persons, and depository of things.

DEPRAVA'TION, f. [depravatio, Lat.] the act of spoiling, corrupting, or rendering a thing less perfect or valuable.

To DEPRA'VE, v. a. [d.pravo, Lat.] to corrupt; to spoil; to rob a thing of its perfections; to seduce from goodness.

DEPRA'VEDNESS, f. loss of purity, goodness, or perfection.

DEPRA'VE'R, f. a corrupter, or one who makes either a person or thing bad.

DEPRAVITY, f. corruption; a change from perfection to imperfection, or from virtue to vice.

To DE'PRECATE, v. n. [deprecor, Lat.] to pray earnestly for the averting some imminent punishment; to ask pardon for a crime; to request or petition with importunity and humilitv.

DEPRECA'TION, f. [deprecatio, Lat.] the act of petitioning; a begging pardon; prayer; prayer against any evil, or for averting any punishment.

DE'PRECATIVE, or DE'PRECATORY, a. that which is used as an apology or excuse.

DEPRECA'TOR, f. [deprecator, Lat.] one who sues for another; an intercessor; one who apologizes for the faults of another, in order to free him from the punishment due to him.

To DEP'RECIATE, [d presbiare] v. a. [depratio, Lat.] to speak meanly of a thing, in order to lessen its esteem or value.

To DE'PREDATE, v. a. [depredor, Lat.] to rob, plunder, or pillage; to seize as prey or booty; to consume, devour, or destroy.

DEPREDA'TION, f. [depredatio, Lat.] the act of spoiling, robbing, or seizing on as a prey or plunder; waste; consumption.

DEPREDA'TOR, f. [depredator, Lat.] a robber; a spoiler. Figuratively, a devourer, or consumer.

To DEP'REHE'ND, v. a. [deprehendo, Lat.] to detect; to catch unawares; to take in the fact. Figuratively, to discover, or find out something difficult, or not obvious.

DEPREHE'NSIBLE, a. [deprehenibilis, Lat.] that which may be detected; that which may be discovered, perceived, or understood.

DEPREHE'NSIBLENESS, f. possibility of being detected, discovered, or understood.

DEPREHE'NSION, f. [deprehenfio, Lat.] detection; the act of taking in the fact, or taking unawares; a discovery.

To DEP'RESS, v. a. [depressus, Lat.] to press down; to let downwards. Figuratively, to humble, or deject, applied to the mind.

DEP'RESSION, f. [depressio, Lat.] the act of pressing down; the sinking or falling in of a turnace. Figuratively, degrading; abasement; or humbling. Depression, in Algebra, applied to equations, is the bringing them to the lowest terms by division. In Astronomy, the distance of a star from the horizon, measuring from the horizon downwards. In Geography, the depression of the pole, is the travelling or sailing to much from the pole nearer to the horizon.

DEP'RESSOR, f. [depressor, Lat.] one that keeps or presses down; an oppressor. In Anatomy, applied to such muscles as bring or press down those parts which they are fattened to.

DEPRIVA'TION, f. [de and privatio, Lat.] the act of taking away the quality or existence of a thing.

To DEPRI'VE, v. a. [de and privo, Lat.] to take away that which is enjoyed by another; to release, to free from. In Law, to turn a clergyman out of a benefice for some crime.

DE'PTFORD, a town of Kent, considerable for its fine docks for building ships, and for the king's yard, and store-houses for the use of the navy. It had a victualling-house built in 1745, which in 1749 was burnt down with great quantities of provisions and other stores. It is $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles E. from London.

DEP'TH, f. [disp, Belg.] the space measured from the surface of a thing downwards; quantity of water opposed to a shoal; the sea; the abyss. Figuratively, the height or middle of a season, or night. Profoundness, difficulty, obscurity, applied to learning.

DEPU'LSION, f. [d pulfio, Lat.] the act of beating, or driving away.

DEPU'LSORY,

DEPU'LSORY, a. [from depulsus, Lat.] thrusting away.

To DEPURATE, v. a. [depurar, Fr.] to purify; to cleanse from any impurities.

DEPURATE, a. cleansed, or freed from dregs or foulness. Figuratively, pure, not tainted or corrupted.

DEPURATION, f. [deperatio, Lat.] the act of separating the impure parts of any thing from the pure ones. In Surgery, the cleansing a wound from its foulness.

To DEPU'RE, v. a. [depurar, Fr.] to cleanse from dregs or foulness; to purge a thing from any noxious qualities.

DEPUTATION, f. [deputation, Fr.] the sending some select persons out of a body to a prince or solemn assembly, to treat of matters in their behalf or name; the commission of treating in behalf of others.

To DEPU'TE, v. a. [deputer, Fr.] to send with a special commission; to appoint persons to negotiate a public or private affair with a prince, state, or private person.

DEPUTY, f. [deputé, Fr.] one that is commissioned to transact an affair for, or discharge the duties of, another; a lieutenant; a viceroi. In Law, a person who exercises an office in the right of another, who is accountable for his mistakes or behaviour.

To DEQUA'NTITATE, v. a. [from de and quantitas, Lat.] to lessen the quantity of a thing.

DER, a term used in the beginning of the names of places. It is generally to be derived from the Saxon word deor, a wild beast, unless the place stands upon a river, when it may be rather fetched from the British dur, water.

To DERAI'GN, [derain] v. a. [deranger, Fr.] in Law, to prove. In its primary signification, to disorder, or confuse.

DERA'Y, f. [from derayer, Fr.] tumult; confusion. Merriment; jollity.

DE'RBY, or DA'RBY, f. the county-town of Derbyshire, with three markets, on Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays. It is seated on the river Derwent, over which there is a handsome stone bridge, and a small brook runs through the town, under several bridges. It is a large, populous, and well-frequented place, containing five parish-churches, whereof All Saints is the chief, whose steeple is as high as most in the kingdom. The shire-hall is a fine-building, where the assizes are kept. It has the title of an earldom, and sends two members to parliament. In 1734 there was a machine erected here by Sir Thomas Lombe, for the manufacturing of silk, the model of which he brought from Italy. The town is governed by a mayor, 9 aldermen, and other officers, but it is a place of no great trade except in corn. The rebels came as far as this town in 1745, and then returned back into Scotland. It is 36 miles N. of Coventry, and 126 N. W. by N. of London. The town is well built, and adorned with many handsome buildings.

DERBYSHIRE, an English county, 54 miles in length, and 24 in breadth, bounded on the E. by Nottinghamshire, on the S. by Leicestershire, on the W. by Staffordshire, and on the N. by Yorkshire. It contains 106 parishes, and 11 market towns. The air in general is pretty good and temperate, except among the mountains of the Peak, where it is sharp and cold. The N. and W. parts are hilly and stony, but in the S. there is some very rich land. The produce is lead, iron, coals, and mill-stones, besides what is common to other counties. The Peak-country is taken notice of for several caves and holes, commonly called the Wonders of the Peak, of which notice will be taken in their proper place. The principal rivers are the Trent, the Dove, and the Derwent. In some parts they have a manufactory of knit stockings.

DE'REHAM, a town of Norfolk, with a market on Fridays. It is pretty large, and the market is noted for woollen yarn. It is 100½ miles N. N. E. of London.

DERELICTION, f. [derelictio, Lat.] the utter forsaking or abandoning a person.

DERELICTS, f. [derelictus, Lat.] in Law, such goods as are wilfully thrown away and disowned by a person.

To DERI'DE, v. a. [derideo, Lat.] to laugh at, mock, or turn to scorn with great contempt.

DERI'DER, f. a person who mocks or ridicules a thing with great contempt.

DERI'SION, f. the act of ridiculing, mocking, or laughing at with great contempt.

DERI'SIVE, a. ridiculing; mocking.

DERI'SORY, a. [derisorius, Lat.] mocking; ridiculing.

DERI'VABLE, a. that which may be obtained by descent, or communicated from one to another.

DERI'VATION, f. [derivatio, Lat.] the draining water from its course or channel. In Grammar, the tracing a word from its original. In Genealogy, descent. Figuratively, the tracing any thing from its source. In Medicine, the drawing a humour from one part of the body to another which is near it.

DERI'VATIVE, a. [derivativus, Lat.] derived or taken from another.

DERI'VATIVE, f. the thing or word which is derived from another.

DERI'VATIVELY, ad. after a derivative manner; not originally.

To DERI'VE, v. a. [derivo, Lat.] to drain; to let out water, or turn its course. Figuratively, to deduce, or trace from its original or source; to communicate, as the source of a river to one of its branches, or a cause to its effect; to descend to a person, or to communicate by a descent of blood. In Grammar, to trace a word from its origin. Neuterly, to proceed, come, or descend from.

DERI'VER, f. one who partakes by descent, pedigree, or communication.

DERNIE'R, [dernier] a. [Fr.] last; used with resort.

To DE'ROGATE, v. a. [derogo, Lat.] to lessen the value of a family or profession; to degenerate; generate; to undervalue the esteem or worth of a thing.

DEROGATION, f. [derogatio, Lat.] an act done contrary to, or inconsistent with any law, by which means its force and value are lessened; the act of disparaging or lessening the value of a thing.

DEROGATIVE, a. lessening the value of a thing, or the esteem and reputation of a person.

DEROGATORILY, ad. in such a manner as to lessen the value of a thing, or the esteem and reputation of a person.

DEROGATORINESS, f. the quality of lessening the value of a thing.

DEROGATORY, a. [derogatorius, Lat.] that which lessens or takes away from the value of a person or thing.

DERVIS, or DERVISE, f. a kind of monks among the Turks, who profess extreme poverty, and lead a very austere life.

DESART. See DESERT.

DESCANT, f. [discento, Ital.] a comment on any subject; disputation; a disquisition branched out into several heads. It is commonly used as a word of censure or contempt.

To DESCANT, v. n. to sing in parts. Figuratively, to discourse at large; or to criticize minutely on the actions of another; to point out faults with great minuteness; to censure.

To DESCEND, v. n. [descendo, Lat.] to come or go from a higher to a lower place; to go gradually downwards, or below the surface of a thing; to sink; to invade an enemy's country; to proceed as from a successor, or as a cause does from an effect. Actively, to walk, or roll downwards from a higher place or situation.

DESCENDANT, or DESCENDENT, f. [descendens, Lat.] one who belongs to another as a relation; the offspring or posterity of a person.

DESCENDENT, a. coming or moving from a higher to a lower situation; sinking; proceeding from another as an ancestor or original.

DESCENSION, f. a sinking from a higher to a lower situation. In Astronomy, it is divided into right or oblique. Right descension is a point or arch of the equator, which descends with a star or sign in a right sphere. Oblique descension is that which descends in an oblique sphere.

DESCENSIONAL, a. relating to descent. In Astronomy, descensional difference is the difference between the oblique and right descension of a star.

DESCENT, f. [descensus, Lat.] the act of passing from a higher to a lower place; or towards the centre of the earth; a slope, or sloping situation. Invasion, or attack on an enemy's country or coasts; birth; extraction. Lineal descent is that which is conveyed down in a right line from the grand-father to the father, from the father to the son, &c. Collateral descent is that which springs out of the side of the line of blood, as from a man to his brother, nephew, &c. Figuratively, one step or generation in the line of a family.

To DESCRIBE, v. a. [describo, Lat.] to mark out any thing by the mention of its properties. In Painting, to form the resemblance of a thing. In Logic, to convey an idea of a thing in a loose manner, without enumerating all its properties. In Geometry, to draw or make a figure. Figuratively, to convey some notion of a thing by words.

DESCRIBER, f. one who relates a matter of fact; the manner of performing an action; a battle, &c.

DESCRIVER, f. one who discovers or describes a thing at a distance.

DESCRIPTION, f. [descriptio, Lat.] the act of conveying the idea of a person or thing by mentioning some of their properties. In Logic, a collection of the most remarkable properties of a thing, without including the essential difference, and the general nature or genus; the sentence or passage in which a thing is described; the qualities expressed in representing a thing.

To DESCRY, v. a. [descrier, Fr.] to reconnoitre; to examine or view at a distance; to discover or discern by the sight a thing hidden or concealed.

DESCRY, f. discovery, or the thing discovered.

To DESECRATE, v. a. [desecro, Lat.] to convert a thing to an use different from that to which it was originally consecrated.

DESECRATION, f. the converting of a thing consecrated to some common use.

DESERT, [dézert] f. [desertum, Lat.] a place not inhabited or built; a waste place; a solitude.

DESERT, [dézert] a. [desertus, Lat.] wild; waste; uncultivated; uninhabited.

To DESERT, [dézert] v. a. [desero, Lat.] to quit; to forsake; to abandon a person who has a reliance on one; used as a word of reproach; to leave a station or place; to run away from an army or company, applied to soldiers.

DESE'RT, f. See DESERT.

DESE'RT, [dézert] f. the behaviour, conduct, or actions of a person, considered with respect to rewards or punishments; a claim to praise or reward. Figuratively, excellence, or virtue; degree of merit.

DESE'RTER, [dézertier] f. [desertor, Lat.] one who leaves or abandons a person who can claim his assistance; one who abandons, quits, or leaves his post, or the army to which he belongs.

DESE'RTION, [dézertion] f. the act of abandoning or forsaking a person, cause, post, or place in an army.

DESE'RTLESS, [dézertless] a. without merit.

To DESE'ERVE, [dézerve] v. a. [deservir, Fr.] to be an object of approbation or disapprobation, reward or punishment, on account of one's actions or behaviour; to be worthy; or a proper object of reward.

DESE'RVEDLY, [dézervedly] ad. not without

entreason or foundation; according to a person's behaviour, whether good or ill.

DESERVER, [dexerter] f. a man who is a proper object of approbation and reward.

DESICCANT, [desikant] part. [desiccans, Lat.] in Medicine, of a drying nature or quality.

To DESICCATE, [desikate] v. a. [desiccō, Lat.] to dry up moisture.

DESICCATION, [desikation] f. the act of drying up moisture.

DESICCATIVE, [desikative] a. that which has the power of drying.

To DESIDERATE, v. a. [desidero, Lat.] to want; to miss. A word scarcely used.

DESIDIOSE, a. [desidiosus, Lat.] idle; lazy; heavy.

To DESIGN, [desin] v. a. [designo, Lat.] to purpose or intend; to form or order for a particular purpose; to plan, project, contrive, or form an idea in the mind.

DESIGN, [desin] f. an intention or purpose; a plan of action; a scheme or contrivance; the plan or representation of the order, general distribution, and construction of a painting, poem, books, building, &c.

DESIGNABLE, [desinable] a. that which can be ascertained, described, or expressed.

DESIGNATION, f. [designatio, Lat.] the describing a person or thing by some remote sign; appointment or direction; import, or signification; intension.

DESIGNEDLY, [desinedly] ad. purposely; in a manner agreeable to the intention or previous purpose of a person, opposed to accidentally.

DESIGNER, [desiner] f. a person who premeditates or contrives something ill; a person who invents a draught, or original, for some artist to copy by.

DESIGNING, [desining] part. contriving, meditating, or intending something amiss, or prejudicial to the interests of another.

DESIGNLESS, [desinless] a. without design; without any bad intention.

DESIGNMENT, [desinment] f. an intended expedition against an enemy; a plot; the idea, or sketch of a work.

DESIRABLE, [desirable] a. worthy of desire or longing.

To DESIRE, [dexire] v. a. [desiro, Fr.] to wish, or covet some absent good; to appear to long for a thing; to ask; to entreat.

DESIRER, [dexirer] f. one who covets an absent good.

DESIROUS, [desirous] a. full of longing; earnestly wishing.

To DESIST, v. n. [desisto, Lat.] to cease from doing a thing which is begun; to stop.

DESISTANCE, f. the act of stopping or ceasing from some action begun.

DESITIVE, a. [desitivus, Lat.] ending or concluded. A desitive proposition is that which implies the ending or conclusion of something.

DESK, f. [diseb, Belg.] an inclining, or sloping-board or table.

DESOLATE, a. [desolatus, Lat.] without inhabitants; laid waste; solitary, or unrequented.

To DESOLATE, v. a. [desolo, Lat.] to deprive of inhabitants; to lay waste.

DESOLATELY, ad. in an unfrequented manner; in a desolate manner.

DESOLATION, f. the act of destroying or removing the inhabitants from a place; the act of laying a place waste; a place wasted and forsaken; gloominess; sadness.

DESPAIR, f. [desespoir, Fr.] an utter abandoning of the hopes of any future good; loss of hope; that which deprives a person of hope; a passion excited by imagining that the object or subject of desire is not to be attained, or that a thing to be undertaken is beyond our abilities to perform. In Theology, the utter loss of confidence in the mercies of God.

To DESPAIR, v. n. [despero, Lat.] to abandon, relinquish, or give a thing over as unattainable; to cease to hope.

DESPA'IRER, f. one who looks on a thing as unattainable, one who is without hope.

DESPA'IRINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to discover no hope.

To DESPA'TCH, v. a. See To DISPATCH.

DESPERATE, a. [desperatus, Lat.] without hope, or looking on a thing as impossible or unattainable; without any regard to safety, arising from despair. Figuratively, not to be retrieved or surmounted, applied to things. Mad, furious with despair, applied to persons. Violent, applied to things.

DESPERATELY, ad. in the manner of a person grown furious by despair.

DESPERATENESS, f. madness; fury; acting without any regard to safety or security.

DESPERATION, f. a state void of all hope.

DESPICABLE, a. [despicabilis, Lat.] deserving contempt on account of something sordid, mean, base, and vile.

DESPICABLENESS, f. the quality which renders a person or thing the object of contempt.

DESPICABLE, a. [despicabilis, Lat.] liable to be contemned; mean; base.

DESPICABLY, ad. in a mean, sordid, vile, or contemptible manner.

To DESPISE, [despize] v. a. [despicio, Lat.] to scorn or contemn with pride and disdain; to slight; to disregard.

DESPISER, [despizer] f. one who looks on a person or thing with scorn or contempt.

DESPITE, f. [dépit, Fr.] malice; anger on account of some real or supposed injury; hatred; defiance. An act of malice or resentment; something done in order to counteract the designs of another, through malice, revenge, or resentment.

To DESPITE, v. a. to counteract the designs of another, through a principle of malice or resentment.

DESPITEFUL, a. full of malice or spleen; acting contrary to the designs of another, purely to make him uneasy, or unhappy.

DESPITEFULNESS, f. malice, or an endeavour deavour to render a person extremely miserable through malice and resentment.

To DESPOL'L, v. a. [despolio, Lat.] to rob; to deprive a person of what he is possessed of by some act of violence. Figuratively, to deprive a person of some post or honour.

DESPOLIATION, f. the act of depriving a person of something in his possession.

To DESPOND, v. a. [despondo, Lat.] to become melancholy, through a persuasion that something desired is unattainable, or that something to be done is impossible. In Divinity, to lose all hope of the divine mercy.

DESPONDENCY, f. the state of a person who imagines a thing desired cannot be attained, or that a thing to be done is impossible.

DESPONDENT, a. [despondens, Lat.] without any hopes of succeeding in what one undertakes, or of attaining what is ardently desired.

DE'SPOT, f. [δеспότης, Gr.] an uncontrollable prince. Only used when applied to those of Dacia.

DESPO'TIC, or DESPO'TICAL, a. [despotique, Fr.] absolute; arbitrary; supreme; of unlimited or absolute power.

DESPO'TICALNESS, f. the quality of exercising power or authority without any restraint or controul.

DESPO'TISM, [despotizm] f. [despotisme, Fr.] absolute power, applied to such governments wherein the power of the prince is arbitrary.

To DESPU'MATE. v. a. [despumo, Lat.] to skim the froth off.

DESPUMATION, f. in Pharmacy, the act of clearing any liquor by skimming off the froth or foam.

DESEQUAMA'TION, f. [de & squama, Lat.] in Surgery, the act of scaling carious bones.

DESSERT, f. [dessert, Fr.] the last course at an entertainment; the fruit or sweet-meats set on the table after the meat. This is the proper spelling, and not desfert.

To DE'STINATE, v. a. [destino, Lat.] to design or form for any particular purpose or end.

DESTINATION, f. the purpose or ultimate end for which any thing is designed.

To DESTINE, v. a. [destino, Lat.] to doom; to appoint to any state or condition without alteration, or by an absolute necessity; to order to any end or purpose; to devote to punishment or misery; to fix an event unalterably.

DESTINY, f. [destinée, Fr.] in Mythology, the power who determines the lot of mortals; fate fixed by some unalterable decree; doom; fortune.

DESTITUTE, a. [desstitutus, Lat.] deprived of; in want of; abandoned by.

DESTITUTION, f. want; defect; or a state wherein something is deficient or wanting.

To DESTROY, v. a. [destruo, Lat.] to demolish, or reduce to ruin; to kill; to lay waste, or make desolate; to deprive a thing of its present qualities or properties.

DESTROYER, f. one who lays a town waste; one who deprives animals of life; one who defaces a thing by some act of violence.

DESTRU'CTIBLE, a. [from destruo, Lat.] liable to be destroyed, defaced, or demolished.

DESTRUCTI'BLITY, f. possibility, or liability to be destroyed.

DESTRU'CTION, f. [destrutio, Lat.] the act of ruining, destroying, demolishing, or laying waste; murder; the state of a thing ruined, demolished, or destroyed; the cause of destruction. In Theology, eternal death.

DESTRU'CTIVE, a. [destruivus, low Lat.] that which demolishes, or reduces to ruins.

DESTRU'CTIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to destroy, demolish, or ruin.

DESTRU'CTIVENESS, f. the quality which destroys, ruins, or lays waste.

DESUDA'TION, f. [desudatio, Lat.] a profuse or inordinate sweating.

DESULTORY, or DESULTO'RIOUS, a. [desultorius, Lat.] unfixed; unsettled; removed from one thing or idea to another.

To DESUME, v. a. [desumo, Lat.] to take from any thing; to borrow.

To DETA'CH, v. a. [détacher, Fr.] to separate or part something which was joined before; to send out, or draw off a part of a greater body of forces.

DETA'CHED, part. drawn off; separated from; disengaged.

DETA'CHMENT, f. a body of troops separated and sent from the main army.

To DETA'IL, v. a. [détailler, Fr.] to relate a fact with its minute and particular circumstances.

DETA'IL, f. [détail, Fr.] an account containing all the minute circumstances of an action, or subject.

To DE'FAIN, v. a. [détineo, Lat.] to keep that which is due to another; to keep a person, or hinder him from departing or going farther; to keep a person in custody.

DETA'INDER, f. in Law, a writ for holding or keeping a person in custody.

DETA'INER, f. he that does not pay a thing due, or with-holds another person's right; he that hinders the departure or progress of a person or thing.

To DETE'CT, v. a. [deteetum, Lat.] to discover, or find out any secret crime or artifice; to find out or surprize a person in the commission, or after the commission of a crime; to lay open the artifices of a person, or sophistry of an argument.

DETE'CTER, f. a discoverer of some criminal; one who lays open the sophistry or subtrefuges of an author.

DETE'CTION, f. the discovery of a criminal, crime, or fault.

DETE'NTION, f. the keeping or with-holding what is due, or belongs to another. Figuratively, confinement, or restraint.

To DETE'R, v. a. [deterreo, Lat.] to discourage, or keep a person from doing a thing either by frightening him by menaces, or by laying its consequences before him.

DETE'RMENT, f. that which discourages a person

DET

a person from doing or undertaking a thing; the cause or obstacle which hinders a person from undertaking a thing.

To DETERGE, v. a. [detergo, Lat.] to cleanse a sore from its pus, matter, or foulness; to cleanse the body by purges.

DETERGENT, a. [detergens, Lat.] in Medicine, having the power of cleansing.

DETERMINABLE, a. that which may be ascertained or decided.

To DETERMINE, v. a. [determino, Lat.] to limit; to settle; to fix; to determine.

DETERMINATE, a. [determinatus, Lat.] limited; fixed; settled; decisive; resolved.

DETERMINATELY, ad. resolutely fixed; firmly resolved.

DETERMINATION, f. absolute direction to a certain end. Figuratively, a resolution formed after mature deliberation; the decision of some contested point or dispute.

DETERMINATIVE, a. having the power to direct to a certain end; that which restrains the signification of a word.

DETERMINATOR, f. one who determines, ascertains, or decides a controversy.

To DETERMINE, v. a. [determino, Lat.] to fix or settle a thing, or point, in debate or dispute; to conclude; to bound; to confine; to decide; to confine or restrain within limits; to ascertain the sense of an expression; to influence the choice; to resolve; to put an end to; to destroy. Neuterly, to conclude; to end; to come to a decision; to resolve, or come to a resolution.

DETERSION, f. [deterfio, Lat.] in Surgery, the act of cleansing a wound.

DETERSIVE, a. [deterfif, Fr.] having the power to cleanse.

DETERSIVE, f. in Medicine, that which cleanses a wound, or frees the body from humours by purging.

To DETEST, v. a. [detestor, Lat.] to hate a thing with some vehemence, on account of its evil and pernicious qualities.

DETESTABLE, a. that which is hated with great vehemence, on account of its villainy or perniciousness.

DETESTABLY, ad. in such a manner as few or deserves the greatest loathing, abhorrence, aversion or hatred.

DETESTATION, f. [detestatio, Fr.] the act of abhorring, disliking, or hating a thing, on account of its evil.

DETESTER, f. one who has a very great hatred, aversion, or loathing.

To DETHRONE, v. a. [de and thronus, Lat.] to depose a king; to deprive him of royalty.

DETI'NUE, f. [dete'ne, Fr.] a writ laying a point a person, who refuses to deliver a thing up which was given him to keep for another.

DETONATION, f. [detonatio, Lat.] the loud noise made by some bodies which begin to heat in a crucible, somewhat resembling the explosion of gunpowder. In Chemistry, the operation of expelling the impure, volatile, and sulphureous parts from antimony.

To DETONIZE, v. a. [from detono, Lat.]

DEV

in Chemistry, to calcine with detonation.

To DETORT, v. a. [detortum, Lat.] to wrest a word or expression from its original meaning or design.

To DETRACT, v. a. [detractum, Lat.] to lessen the reputation of another by calumny, or speaking ill of him.

DETRACTER, f. one who lessens the reputation of another.

DETRACTION, f. [detractio, Lat.] the impairing or lessening the reputation or esteem of another, by speaking ill of him.

DETRACTORY, a. lessening the value of a thing, or reputation of a person.

DETRACTRESS, f. a woman who lessens the reputation of others.

DETRIMENT, f. [detrimentum, Lat.] that which affects a thing or person with loss or damage.

DETRIMENTAL, a. causing harm, mischief, loss, or damage.

To DETRUDE, v. a. [detrudo, Lat.] to thrust down, to force into a lower place.

DETRUSION, f. the act of forcing a thing downwards.

DEVASTATION, f. [devastatio, Lat.] the act of laying waste; demolishing buildings; or unpeopling towns.

DEUCE, f. [deux, Fr.] in Gaming, a card with two marks, or a die with two spots.

To DEVELOP, v. a. [developo, Fr.] to take off any covering which conceals a thing; to lay open any stratagem or artifice.

To DEVEST, v. a. [de and vestis, Lat.] to make a person naked, or take off his cloaths.

Figuratively, to deprive of an advantage, or some good; to free from any thing bad.

DEVE'X, a. [de'vexus, Lat.] bending down; declivous.

To DEVIATE, v. n. [de and via, Lat.] to leave the right or common way. Figuratively, to err; to go astray. In Divinity, to sin, by not walking in the way prescribed by the divine commandments.

DEVIATION, f. the act of quitting the right way. Figuratively, the acting contrary to some established rule; sin; offence; a wandering.

DEVI'CE, f. [devise, Fr.] a contrivance or stratagem; a project; a scheme or plan. In Heraldry, an emblem, which has some resemblance to a person's name; the representation of some natural body, with a motto or sentence.

Invention; genius.

DEVIL, f. [diabolus, Sax.] in its primary signification, a calumniator, or false accuser; but peculiarly applied to signify the fallen angel, who was the tempter and seducer of mankind.

Figuratively, a wicked person. In Scripture, an idol; an emissary; or one of the wicked spirits subject to Satan. Prov. He that hath shipped the Devil must make the best of him.—

What is gotten over the Devil's back is spent under his belly; i. e. what is got by oppression, or extortion, is many times spent in riot and luxury.

DEVILISH, a. partaking of the malicious, mischievous, or other wicked qualities of the Devil.

DEVILISHLY,

DE'VILISHLY, ad. in an entirely wicked or mischievous manner; in a manner suitable to the wickedness of the Devil; diabolically.

DE'VIOUS, a. [devius, Lat.] out of the common track; wandering; rambling; roving; erring.

To DEVI'SE, [devise] v. a. [deviser, Fr.] to invent or contrive, implying a great deal of art. Neuterly, to plan, contrive, or form schemes. In Law, to bequeath, or leave by will.

DEVI'SE, [devise] f. [devise, Fr.] in Law, the act of giving or bequeathing by will; contrivance.

DEVI'SER, [devizer] f. one who projects, or contrives; one who leaves or bequeaths by will.

DEVI'ZES, a town in Wiltshire, with a market on Thursdays. It is seated on a hill; and formerly was a place of great note; is at present pretty large; and sends two members to parliament. It is 88½ miles W. of London.

DEVO'ID, a. [vide, Fr.] empty; vacant. Figuratively, destitute, or free from any quality, either good or bad.

DEVO'IR, f. [Fr.] in its primary sense, a duty, or act of service, but now obsolete.

To DEVO'LVE, v. a. [devolvo, Lat.] to roll from a higher to a lower place. To remove from one person to another. Neuterly, to fall or descend to, in order of succession.

DEVOLU'TION, f. [devolutio, Lat.] the rolling of a thing from a higher to a lower place. Removal, or succession from one person or order to another.

DEVONSHIRE, an English county, 73 miles in length, and 53 in breadth, bounded by the Irish Sea on the N. by Somersetshire and Dorsetshire on the E. by the English Channel on the S. and by Cornwall on the W. It contains 394 parishes, and 38 market-towns. The air is pretty temperate in the valleys, but sharp and cold on the hills. It has mines of tin, copper, and other metals. The sea coasts abound in herrings, pilchards, and other salt-water fish. The hills are barren, but the lower grounds are fruitful when manured. Besides the common productions, it is noted for cyder and perry. The chief rivers are, the Ex, the Touridge, the Tame, and the Taw.

DEVORATION, f. [devoratio, Lat.] the act of devouring.

To DEVO'TE, v. a. [devotus, Lat.] to dedicate or set apart to a religious or any other particular purpose; to abandon to evil; to doom to destruction.

DEVO'TEDNESS, f. the state of a thing devoted, dedicated, set apart, or destined to a particular end or purpose.

DEVOTE'E, f. [devot, Fr.] one extravagantly or erroneously religious; a bigot.

DEVOT'ION, f. [devotio, Lat.] the state of a thing consecrated or dedicated; a religious and fervent exercise of some public act of religion; or a temper or disposition of the mind rightly affected with such exercises. Figuratively, prayer; a strong and fervent affection for a person. An act of reverence, respect, or ceremony. Disposal; power; state of dependence on any one.

DEVOT'IONAL, a. relating to religious worship; pious; zealous.

DEVOT'IONALIST, f. a person who is superstitiously religious.

To DEVO'UR, v. a. [devero, Lat.] to eat up ravenously. Figuratively, to destroy with rapidity or quickness; to swallow up, or reduce to nothing.

DEVO'URER, f. one that consumes or eats up ravenously.

DEVO'UT, a. [devotus, Lat.] pious; religious; fervent in performing acts of worship; filled with pious thoughts; full of zeal; or expressive of ardent piety.

DEVO'UTLY, ad. in a pious manner; with fervent zeal and piety.

DEUSE, f. [derived by Junius from Dufus, the name of a species of evil spirits] the devil, used in ludicrous language. See DEUCE.

DEUTERO'NOMY, f. [δεύτερος νόμος, Gr.] a canonical book of the Old Testament, being the last of the Pentateuch, or five books of Moses.

DEW, f. [deaw, Sax.] in Natural History, a light, thin, insensible mist, or rain, raised from the earth after the sun has descended below the horizon, by the heat it has communicated to the earth during the day; which mist, meeting with the cold in the atmosphere, is condensed and precipitated on the earth again.

To DEW, v. a. to wet or moisten with dew.

DEWBESP'ENT, part. sprinkled with dew.

DE'WDROP, f. a drop of dew that sparkles in the sun.

DE'WLAPE, f. [so called from its lapping or brushing off the dew] the flesh which hangs down from the throat of cows, bulls, or oxen.

DE'WSBURY, a village in the W. riding of Yorkshire, 8 miles S. W. of Leeds.

DE'W-WORM, f. in Natural History, a worm found in dew, called likewise the lebworm.

DE'WY, a. resembling, or partaking of the nature of dew; moist with dew.

DE'XTER, a. [Lat.] in Heraldry, the right side.

DEXTE'RITY, f. [dexteritas, Lat.] readiness; activity; quickness of contrivance.

DEXTE'ROUS, a. [dexter, Lat.] expert; active; or quick; subtle; full of expedients; skilful in management; fertile in invention.

DEXTE'ROUSLY, ad. expertly; readily; quickly; skilfully.

DE'XTRAL, a. [dexter, Lat.] on the right side.

DEXTRA'LITY, f. the state of being on the right side.

DEY, f. the sovereign prince of Algiers, as the Bey is of Tunis.

DIABE'TES, f. [διαβήτης, Gr.] in Physic, the discharge of any liquor through the urinary passages almost as soon as it is drunk, without any or little alteration, and under the appearance ance of water, attended with insatiable thirst.

DIABOLIC, or DIABOLICAL, a. [diabolus, Lat.] partaking of the qualities of the devil; extremely impious and wicked.

DIACODIUM, f. [διακώδιον, Gr.] in Pharmacy, a syrup prepared from the heads of white poppies dried without their seeds.

DIACOSTICS, f. [διακοστικά, Gr.] in Philosophy, the consideration or doctrine of refracted sounds as they pass through different mediums, i. e. either through a dense into a rare, or through a rare into a dense one.

DI'ADEM, f. [diadema, Lat.] formerly a bandage of silk encompassing the heads of kings, and tied behind. It was sometimes enriched with pearls, and sometimes with the leaves of some evergreens. In Heraldry, certain circles or rims, binding or inclosing the crowns of princes, and to bear the globes, crosses, or flower de luces for their crests.

DIAD'EMED, part. adorned with a diadem; wearing a crown, crowned.

DI'ADROM, f. [διαδρομή, Gr.] the time in which any motion is performed; the time in which a pendulum forms a single vibration.

DI'E'RESIS, f. [διέρσις, Gr.] in Grammar, the division of a diphthong, or one syllable into two; as, acr.

DIAGNO'STIC, f. [from διαγνώσκω, Gr.] in Medicine, a sign by which a disease may be discovered, or distinguished from another.

DIAGONAL, f. [διαγώνιος, Gr.] drawn across a figure from one corner or angle to another.

DIAGONAL, f. a right line drawn across a parallelogram or other figure, from one angle or corner to another, so as to divide it into equal parts.

DIAGONALLY; ad. in a cross direction, and reaching from one corner to another.

DI'AGRAM, f. [διαγράμμα, Gr.] in Geometry, a scheme drawn for explaining any figure or its properties.

DI'AL, f. [from dies, Lat.] a plate marked with two sets of figures beginning at one, and ending with twelve, used to shew the time of the day by clocks, or by the shadow of the sun.

DI'ALECT, f. [διάλεκτος, Gr.] the subdivision of a language; the stile or manner of expression used in a province, as it differs from that of the whole kingdom. Figuratively, stile; manner of expression; language, or speech.

DIALECTIC, f. [διαλεκτική, Gr.] the art of reasoning, or logic.

DIALECTICAL, a. belonging to logic.

DI'ALING, f. the art or science of drawing and constructing all manner of dials.

DI'ALIST, f. one who constructs or makes dials.

DI'ALOGIST, f. one who composes, or one who is introduced as a speaker in a dialogue.

DI'ALOGUE, [dialog] f. [διάλογος, Gr.] a conference or debate on any subject, whether real or feigned.

To DI'ALOGUE, [dialog] v. a. to hold conversation or converse with; to discourse.

DI'ALYSIS, f. [διάλυσις, Gr.] in Grammar, the parting or separating two vowels, which would otherwise make a diphthong.

DI'AMETER, f. [διά and μέτρον, Gr.] the line which passes through the center of a circle or other figure, and divides it into two equal parts.

DI'AMETRAL, a. describing, or relating to, a diameter.

DI'AMETRALLY, ad. according to the direction of a diameter.

DIAME'TRICAL, a. or DIAME'TRICALLY, ad. now used instead of DIAMETRAL, or DIAMETRALLY; which see.

DI'AMOND, [generally pron. dimond] f. [diamant, Fr.] in Natural History, the most valuable and hardest of all gems, when pure, perfectly clear and pellucid, and distinguished by its vivid splendor, and the brightness of its reflections, from all other substances. It is extremely various in shape and size, being found in the greatest quantity very small; and the larger ones are seldom met with. It bears the force of the strongest fires without hurt, except the concentrated solar rays, which only injure it, when directed to its weaker parts. The places where we have diamonds are the East-Indies and the Brazils.

DI'ANA, in the Heathen mythology, was the goddess of hunting, daughter of Jupiter and Latona, and sister to Phœbus or the sun: in hell she was called Hecate; on earth, Diana; and Phœbe, or the moon, in heaven.

DI'APASE, f. in Music, the same as Diapason.

DIAPA'SON, f. [διαπασών, Gr.] in Music, an interval including an octave. Among musical instrument makers, it signifies a rule or scale, whereby they adjust the pipes of their organs, and cut the holes of their flutes, &c.

DI'APER, f. [diapre, Fr.] a kind of linen cloth, woven in figures. A napkin; a towel.

To DI'APER, v. a. to variegate; diversify, or flower; to draw flowers on cloths.

DIAPHANE'TY, [diaphanité] f. transparency, or the quality of transmitting light.

DI'APHANOUS, [diaphanous] a. [διά and φαίνω, Gr.] transparent; giving passage to the rays of light; that which may be seen through.

DIAPHORE'SIS, [diaphoresis] f. [διαφορσις, Gr.] in Medicine, a discharge made through the skin, whether sensible or insensible.

DIAPHORE'TIC, [diaphoretik] a. [διαφορητικός, Gr.] in Medicine, that which causes a discharge through the skin, or a sweat.

DI'APHRAGM, [diaphragm] f. [διαφράγμα, Gr.] in Anatomy, a nervous muscle, vulgarly called the midriff, and by anatomists, septum transversale, or cross wall, from its dividing the breast or thorax from the abdomen.

DIARRHO'E'A [diartha] f. [διάρροια, Gr.] in Medicine, a flux of the belly, or profuse evacuation of liquid excrements by stool.

DIARRHO'E'TIC, [diarthik] a. in Medicine, promoting a looseness; causing a discharge by stool; purging.

DI'ARY,

DIARY, f. [diarium, Lat.] an account of the transactions of a person every day; a journal.

DIASCO'RDIVM, f. in Pharmacy, a celebrated composition, so called from scordium, its principal ingredient. It is excellent in all kinds of fluxes, and a great strengthener to both the stomach and bowels.

DIASTOLE, f. [διαστολή, Gr.] in Anatomy, the motion of the heart or arteries, whereby those parts dilate or distend themselves. In Grammar, diastole signifies the lengthening a syllable which is naturally short.

DIASTYLE, f. [διά and στάσις, Gr.] in ancient architecture, an edifice whose columns stand at such a distance from each other, that eight modules, or four diameters, are allowed for the intercolumniation.

DIATESSE'RON, f. [διά and τίσσορα, Gr.] in Pharmacy, a medicine so called, because composed of four ingredients, viz. roots of aristolochia, gentian, bay-berries, and myrrh. In Music, an interval composed of one greater tone, one lesser tone, and one greater semitone, called by moderns, a perfect fourth.

DIATONIC, f. [διά and τόνος, Gr.] the ordinary species of music, which proceeds by different tones, either in ascending or descending, and contains only the greater and lesser tones, together with the greater semi-tone.

DIBBLE, f. a small spade, or pointed instrument, used by gardeners for making holes in the ground in planting.

DICACITY, f. [dicacitas, Lat.] pertness, acuteness, loquacity.

DICE, f. the plural of DIE; which see.

DICER, f. one who plays at dice.

DICHOTOMY, [dikotomy] in Logic, the distribution or division of ideas into pairs. In Astronomy, that phasis or appearance of the moon wherein she is bisected, or shews but half her disk.

To DICTATE, v. a. [dicto, Lat.] to deliver a command to another; to speak with authority; to deliver a speech in words which is to be taken down in writing.

DICTATE, f. [dictatum, Lat.] a rule or mandate delivered by some person of authority.

DICTATION, f. the act or practice of prescribing, giving orders, or laying down rules of conduct.

DICTATOR, f. [dictator, Lat.] a Roman magistrate, invested with a consular and sovereign authority, having the power of life and death, to proclaim war, raise or discharge forces without consent of the senate, and remaining in his office for six months, till Sylla and Cæsar erected it into a perpetual tyranny. Figuratively, one who by his credit and authority directs and regulates the conduct of others.

DICTATORIAL, a. after the manner of a dictator; imperious.

DICTATORSHIP, f. the office of a dictator. Figuratively, imperiousness, or authority carried too high.

DICTION, f. [dictio, Lat.] the peculiar manner which an author has of expressing himself, whether it respect the arrangement of his words, or the use of rhetorical figures.

DICTIONARY, [dictionary] f. [dictionarium, Lat.] the words of any language in their alphabetical order, with explanations of their meaning, or definition. A lexicon; a vocabulary.

DIDA'CTIC, or DIDA'CTICAL, a. [διδασκτικός, Gr.] containing precepts or rules.

DIDAPPER, f. [duyck-dupper, Belg.] in Natural History, a bird remarkable for its diving.

To DIDDER, v. a. [diddern, Teut.] a provincial term signifying to shiver or quake with cold.

To DIE, v. n. [deadian, Sax.] to lose life; to expire; to lose all the animal functions, and have the soul separated from the body. It has by before an instrument of death; of before a disease; for commonly before a privative, and of before a positive cause. To be punished with death. Figuratively, to be lost, perish, or be entirely laid aside. To sink, faint, or lose its vital functions. To languish, or be overcome with pleasure and tenderness. To vanish or disappear. To languish with affection, in the stile of lovers. To wither, applied to vegetables. To grow spiritless, tasteless, or vapid, applied to liquors.

DIE, f. [plural dice, dis, Brit.] a small cube, marked on each of its sides with specks or dots, from one to six, which is used by gamesters to play with. Figuratively, hazard, or chance; any cubic body.

DIE, f. [plural dies] the stamp used in coining, or the mold in which medals are cast.

DIET, f. [διαίτα, Gr.] food; provision for satisfying hunger; a regular course of food ordered and directed in order to cure some chronic distemper.

To DIET, v. a. to feed or eat according to the rules and prescriptions of medical writers.

DIET, f. [of diet, Teut. a multitude, or dies, Lat. an appointed day] an assembly of the states or circles of the Empire, meeting to deliberate on some public affair.

DIETARY, a. belonging to the rules of medical diet.

DIETER, f. one who prescribes rules for eating.

DIETE'TIC, or DIETE'TICAL, a. [διαητητικός, Gr.] belonging to food; or relating to medical cautions about the use of food.

DIEU ET MON DROIT, i. e. God and my right, the motto of the royal arms of England, first assumed by Richard I. to insinuate that he did not hold his empire in vassalage of any mortal.

To DIFFER, v. n. [differo, Lat.] to have properties or qualities which are not the same as those of another person or thing; to oppose a person in opinion; to be of another opinion; to contend.

DIFFERENCE, f. [differentia, Lat.] the state of being distinct from some other thing; a dispute; debate; controversy; or opposition of of sentiments; the property which distinguishes one thing from another. In Arithmetic, the remainder after one quantity is taken from another. In Heraldry, something added to, or altered in a coat, whereby the younger families are distinguished from the elder, or to show how far they are removed from the principal house. Ascensional difference, in Astronomy, is an arch of the equator, contained between the fix of the clock circle, and the sun's horary circle. Difference of longitude of two places, is an arch of the meridian intercepted between the two places.

To D I F F E R E N C E, v. a. to make one thing not the same as another; to distinguish one thing from another.

D I F F E R E N T, a. [differens, Lat.] distinct; of contrary qualities; unlike.

D I F F E R E N T I A L, [differensialis] a. in Geometry, an infinitely small quantity, or particle of a quantity, so small as to be less than any assignable one. Differential method, is that of finding an infinite small quantity, which, taken an infinite number of times, is equal to a given quantity.

D I F F E R E N T L Y, ad. in a different manner.

D I F F E R I N G L Y, ad. in a various manner. D I F F I C U L T, a. [difficulté, Fr.] hard to be done, understood, or pleased.

D I F F I C U L T Y, f. [difficultas, Lat.] that which requires pains, care, and attention. Figuratively, distress; opposition; perplexity, or uneasiness with respect to circumstances. Objections or points not easily answered, or understood.

To D I F F I D E, v. n. [diffido, Lat.] to distrust, or repose no confidence in.

D I F F I D E N C E, f. [diffidentia, Lat.] want of trust, confidence, or courage.

D I F F I D E N T, part. or a. [diffidens, Lat.] wanting in confidence; suspicious; timorous.

D I F F L U E N C E, or D I F F L U E N C Y, f. [from diffuso, Lat.] the quality of falling away on all sides, opposed to consistency or solidity.

D I F F L U E N T, part. [diffuens, Lat.] flowing away.

D I F F O R M, a. [from forma, Lat.] contrary to uniform; irregular.

D I F F R A N C H I S E M E N T, f. [from franchise, Fr.] the act of taking away the privileges or charter of a city.

To D I F F U S E, [difficere] v. a. [diffusus, Lat.] to pour a liquid on a plain surface, so as it may spread itself every way. Figuratively, to spread; scatter; disperse.

D I F F U S E, a. [diffusus, Lat.] scattered or spread widely. Applied to stile, or the manner of a composition, copious, opposed to concise.

D I F F U S E D L Y, ad. in a copious, liberal, and extensive manner; spread every way.

D I F F U S E D N E S S, f. the state of being spread abroad; copiousness of stile.

D I F F U S E L Y, ad. widely, extensively. Applied to stile, copiously.

D I F F U S I O N, f. the state of being spread abroad. Copiousness or exuberance; applied to stile.

D I F F U S I V E, a. having the quality of spreading abroad; scattered or spread abroad.

D I F F U S I V E L Y, ad. widely, extensively.

D I F F U S I V E N E S S, f. extension; dispersion; the power or quality of being spread abroad. Applied to stile, want of conciseness.

To D I G, v. a. [pret. part. pass. dug or digged] [dic, Sax.] to open, or make a hole in the earth with a spade. Figuratively, to pierce with a pointed instrument, &c. To dig up, to throw up or uncover that which is buried under the earth.

D I G E S T, f. [digesta, Lat.] a collection of the civil law, ranged under proper titles by the order of the emperor Justinian.

To D I G E S T, v. n. [digestum, Lat.] to distribute or range methodically into different classes; to concoct or dissolve food in the stomach; to reduce to any plan or scheme; to receive a thing favourably, without loathing or reluctance; to receive and enjoy. In Chemistry, to soften by heat, boiling, or by putting a thing into a dunghill. In Surgery, to ripen humour, or prepare it for evacuation.

D I G E S T E R, f. one whose food easily turns into chyle; a vessel to boil any bony substances to a fluid state.

D I G E S T I O N, f. in Medicine, that change which the food undergoes in the stomach, in order to render it fit to supply the continual loss sustained by perspiration, the animal functions, or exercise. In Chemistry, it is a dissolution of any substance by artificial heat.

D I G E S T I V E, a. having the power to dissolve, alter, change, or turn the food into chyle; capable of dissolving by its heat.

D I G E S T I V E, f. in Surgery, an application which ripens and prepares the matter of wounds for suppuration.

D I G G E R, f. one who opens the ground with a spade.

To D I G H T, v. a. [dibtan, Sax.] to dress, embellish, or adorn.

D I G I T, f. [digitus, Lat.] three fourths of an inch in long measure. In Astronomy, the 12th part of the diameter of the sun and moon.

D I G I T A T E D, a. [digitatus, Lat.] branched out into divisions resembling fingers. In Botany, a digitated leaf is one which consists of several simple leaves growing on one foot-stalk, as the cinquefoil; or that which has many deep gashes, cuts, or segments, as the hop.

D I G N I F I C A T I O N, f. the act of conferring honour; the preferring to some honourable rank.

D I G N I F I E D, a. enjoying some honourable post, rank, or preferment, applied peculiarly to the clergy.

To D I G N I F Y, v. a. [from dignus and facio, Lat.] to advance, prefer, or exalt to some place which demands honour and reverence; to honour; to adorn; to render respectable.

D I G N I T A R Y, f. [from dignus, Lat.] in the Canon Law, is a clergyman advanced to some some rank above a parochial priest, or canon; such is a bishop, dean, arch-deacon, &c.

DIGNITY, f. [dignitas, Lat.] rank, pre-ferment, or post; grandeur, or a majestic appearance. Among the clergy, a promotion or preferment to which any jurisdiction is annexed.

To DIGRE'SS, v. n. [digressus, Lat.] to depart from the main scope of a discourse, or intention of an argument; to wander; to go out of the right way or common track; to err.

DIGRESSION, f. [digressio, Lat.] a passage which has no connection with the main scope of a discourse; deviation, or quitting the true path.

DIKE, f. [dic, Sax.] a channel made to receive water; a mound to hinder inundations, or to keep water from overflowing.

To DILACERATE, v. a. [dilacero, Lat.] to tear; to force in twain; to rend.

DILACERATION, f. [dilaceratio, Lat.] the act of forcing, tearing, or rending.

To DILANIATE, v. a. [dilanio, Lat.] to tear; to rend in pieces in a butcherly and savage manner.

DILAPIDATION, f. [dilapidatio, Lat.] in Law, is where an incumbent on a church benefice suffers the parsonage house, or the out-house, to fall down, or be in decay, for want of necessary reparation; for which the bishop may sequester the profits of such benefice for that purpose.

DILATABILITY, f. the quality of admitting or suffering extension.

DILATABLE, a. that which may be stretched or extended.

DILATATION, f. [dilatatio, Lat.] the act of extending or stretching into a greater space.

To DILATE, v. a. [dilato, Lat.] to extend, spread out, enlarge, or stretch. Figuratively, to relate a thing with all its minute circumstances. Neuterly, to grow wider; to widen.

DILATOR, f. that which widens or extends any passage.

DILATORINESS, f. the quality of deferring a thing from one time to another through sloth.

DILATORY, a. [dilatorius, Lat.] putting off the doing of a thing from time to time through sloth.

DILEMMA, f. [διλεμμα, Gr.] in Logic, an argument consisting of two or more propositions, so disposed, that grant which you will, you will be pressed by the conclusion. Figuratively, a difficult choice, or troublesome alternative.

DILIGENCE, f. [diligentia, Lat.] constant endeavour; unremitting labour, or practice.

DILIGENT, a. [diligens, Lat.] assiduous; persevering; constant.

DILIGENTLY, ad. with constant labour, caution, and care.

DILTON-MARSH, a town in Wiltshire, 3 miles N. of Weyminster.

DILUCID, a. [dilucidus, Lat.] clear, plain, pure, and transparent; obvious.

To DILUCIDATE, v. n. [dilucido, Lat.]

to make a proposition clear and easy to be understood; to explain; to free from obscurity.

DILUCIDATION, f. [dilucidatio, Lat.] the making a sentence clear and easy to be understood; an explanation.

DILUENT, a. [diluens, Lat.] having the power to make thin, or attenuate.

DILUENT, f. [diluens, Lat.] that which makes thin or fluid.

To DILUTE, v. a. [diluo, Lat.] to make a liquor thin by the mixture of some other.

DILUTER, f. that which renders a body liquid; or, if it were so before, that which renders it thinner, or more liquid.

DILUTION, f. [dilutio, Lat.] the act of rendering a liquid more thin or weak by the addition of some other.

DILUVIAN, a. [from diluvium, Lat.] relating to, or resembling the deluge.

DIM, a. [dimme, Sax.] having something which obstructs the sight and hinders it from seeing clearly. Figuratively, deprived of its splendor or brightness; grown dark.

To DIM, v. a. to darken, or obstruct the sight, so as to hinder it from seeing objects in their full splendor. Figuratively, to make less bright; to render darkish.

DIMENSION, f. [dimensio, Lat.] the extension of a body considered as measured; size; space contained in any body. The three dimensions are length, breadth, and thickness, or depth. In Algebra, the powers of the roots, or the values of the unknown quantities of equations.

DIMENSIONLESS, a. without any dimensions; of no certain bulk.

DIMENSIVE, a. that which marks the boundaries or out-lines; that which describes the measure or space occupied by a body.

To DIMINISH, v. a. [diminuo, Lat.] to make a thing less by cutting off or destroying some of its parts. Figuratively, to impair; lessen; to degrade, or render less honourable. Neuterly, to grow less, or be impaired.

DIMINISHINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to detract from, or lessen the character and reputation of another.

DIMINUTION, f. [diminutio, Lat.] the act of rendering a thing less by cutting off or destroying some of its parts; the state of growing less either in bulk or weight. Figuratively, loss, or causing loss of reputation or dignity to another; discredit. In Architecture, the contraction of a column, as it ascends, whereby its upper part is made smaller than the lower.

DIMINUTIVE, a. [diminutivus, Lat.] small of size, bulk, or dimensions.

DIMINUTIVE, f. in Grammar, a word used to express smallness, or littleness.

DIMINUTIVELY, ad. in a diminutive or small manner.

DIMINUTIVENESS, f. smallness, applied to size.

DIMISSORY, a. [dimissorius, low Lat.] that by which a person is dismissed to the jurisdiction of another.

DIMITTY,

DIMITTY, f. [demittes, Fr.] a sort of cotton stuff, very like fustian. They came originally from Smyrna.

DIMLY, ad. [dimlic, Sax.] in a dull, obscure, dark manner; without a clear perception, applied to the sight or understanding; deprived of its light, brightness, or splendor.

DIMNESS, f. [dimnes, Sax.] dulness of sight. Want of apprehension, applied to the mind.

DIMPLE, f. [from dint, a hole, dintle, a little hole, hence dimple] a small hollow, or sinking of the surface of the cheek or chin.

To DIMPLE, v. n. to appear with little hollows or inequalities of surface.

DIMPLED, part. or a. having dimples in the cheek or chin.

DIMPLY, a. full of dimples, or little dents, or inequalities of surface.

DIN, f. [dyn, Sax.] a large noise; a violent and continued sound; an uproar, or shout.

To DIN, v. a. [dynam, Sax.] to stun, or deafen with frequent noise and clamour.

To DINE, v. n. [diner, Fr.] to eat one's chief or second meal about the middle of the day. Actively, to give a dinner to.

DINETICAL a. [δινητικός, Gr.] whirling round; vertiginous.

To DING, v. a. [preter. ding] [dringen, Belg.] to dash with force or violence. Neuterly, to dasher, bounce, huff, or become insolent and imperious. A low word.

DING-DONG, f. a word by which the sound of bells is mimicked.

DINGLE, f. [a diminutive from dun, or den, Sax. a hollow] a hollow between hills; a dale or vale.

DINGWALL, a parliament town of Scotland, in the shire of Ross, seated on the Frith of Cromarty, 15 miles W. of Cromarty.

DINING-ROOM, f. the principal apartment of a house, wherein entertainments are made.

DINNER, f. [diner, Fr.] the chief meal, or that which is eaten about the middle of the day.

DINT, f. [dynt, Sax.] a blow or stroke; violence; force; power.

DINUMERATION, f. [dinumeratio, Lat.] the act of numbering out singly.

DIOCESAN, f. a bishop considered in the relation he stands in to his inferior clergy.

DIOCESE, f. [διοικήσις, Gr.] the circuit of every bishop's jurisdiction. England, with regard to its ecclesiastical state, is divided into six provinces, viz. Canterbury and York; and each province into subordinate dioceses, of which there are twenty-two in England, and four in Wales.

DIOPTRIC, or DIOPTRICAL, a. [from διωπτρικός, Gr.] affording a medium for the light, or assisting the sight in the view of distant objects.

DIOPTRICS, f. the science of refraction, or that part of optics which considers the different refractions of light, in its passage through different mediums; as air, water, glass, &c.

DIORTHO'SIS, f. [διόρθωσις, Gr.] a chirographical operation, by which crooked or distorted members are made straight, or reduced to their proper shape.

To DIP, v. a. [particip. dipped or dipr] [dippan, Sax.] to put into any liquor so as to cover it therewith; to moisten, or wet; to mortgage, or engage as a pledge or security. Neuterly, to sink; to immerge, or plunge into any liquor; to take a cursory or slight view; to read a page or two in a book.

DIPE'TALOUS, a. [δις and πέταλον, Gr.] in Botany, applied to such flowers as have two leaves.

DIPHTHONG, [diftbong, or diphtbong] f. [διφθόγγος, Gr.] the joining two vowels together, so as to form one sound; as, vain, Cæsar.

DIPLOE, f. in Anatomy, the inner plate, or lamina of the skull.

DIPLO'MA, f. [διπλωμα, Gr.] a letter or writing conferring some privilege, or title; so called, because formerly written on waxed tables, which were folded together.

DIPPER, f. one who dips in the water. Figuratively, one that takes a slight or superficial view of an author.

DIPPING-NEEDLE, f. a long straight piece of steel, equally poised on its centre, and afterwards touched with a load-stone, so contrived as to swing in a vertical plane, about an axis parallel to the horizon, in order to discover the exact tendency of the power of magnetism. It was invented by one Robert Norman, a compass-maker of Wapping, in 1576, and was by Mr. Whiston applied to discover the longitude, but without success.

DIP'TOTE, f. [διπτωτα, Gr.] in Grammar, applied to such nouns as have only two cases.

DIP'TYCH, [diptyk] f. [diptycha, Lat.] a register of bishops and martyrs.

DIRE, a. [dirus, Lat.] dreadful, or affecting a beholder with horror.

DIRE'CT, a. [directus, Lat.] straight. In Astronomy, appearing to the eye to move progressively through the Zodiac, opposed to retrograde. In Pedigree or Genealogy, from grandfather to grandson, &c. applied to collateral.

To DIRE'CT, v. a. [directum, Lat.] to go in a straight line; to aim or point against a mark; to regulate, or adjust; to prescribe measures, or a certain course; to order.

DIRE'CTION, f. [directio, Lat.] tendency or aim at a certain point; motion impressed by a certain impulse; orders; command; the superscription of a letter, or parcel.

DIRE'CTIVE, a. having the power of directing, informing, or shewing the way.

DIRE'CTLY, a. in a straight line; without going about; immediately; presently; soon. Without delay, applied to time. Without circumlocution or evasion, applied to language, or argument.

DIRE'CTNESS, f. the quality of proceeding in, or not deviating from, a straight line; the nearest way.

DIRE'CTOR,

DIRE'CTOR, f. [director, Lat.] one who presides in an assembly or public company; one who is intrusted with the guidance, superintendence, or management of any design, or work. Figuratively, a person who regulates the conduct of another; an instructor; one who is consulted in cases of conscience. In Surgery, an instrument used to guide the hand in some operation.

DIRE'CTORY, f. that which directs; a book published by the non-conformists, to regulate the behaviour and rites of their brethren in divine worship.

DIREFUL, a. full of terror; very terrible; dismal.

DIREFULNESS, f. the quality which affects the mind with dread on the sight of something ghastly or terrible object.

DIRGE, f. [dirge, Teut.] a mournful song sung at the funerals of persons.

DIRK, f. a kind of dagger used in the Highlands of Scotland.

DIRT, f. [dyrt, Belg.] mud; or the filth which is found in streets or highways; any thing which soils. Figuratively, meanness.

DIRTILY, ad. in such a manner as to daub or soil. Figuratively, dishonestly; meanly; shamefully.

DIRTINESS, f. filthiness; foulness. Figuratively, dishonesty; meanness; baseness.

DIRTY, a. foul; daubed; or made nasty with dirt. Figuratively, dishonest; mean.

To DIRTY, v. a. to soil; to smear or daub with dirt. Figuratively, to scandalize, or disgrace.

DIRUPTION, f. [diruptio, Lat.] the act of bursting or breaking asunder.

DIS, an inseparable particle, used in composition and implying a negation or privation; as dis-oblige, dis-obey, &c. or to signify a separation, detachment, &c. as dis-uniting, dis-arm, dis-tributing, &c.

DIS, a town in Norfolk, with a market on Fridays. It is seated on the river Wavenay, on the side of a hill, and the market is supplied with yarn, and provisions. It is a neat flourishing town, with one large church, a Presbyterian and a Quaker's meeting. It has about 600 good houses; and the streets are well paved, pretty wide, and always clean. In the town are carried on manufactories of sail-cloth, hose, and the making of stays. It is 19 miles S. of Norwich, and 91½ N. N. E. of London.

DISABILITY, f. the want of sufficient power to accomplish any design; or want of sufficient abilities to understand any proposition or doctrine; want of proper qualifications.

To DISABLE, v. a. to deprive of natural force or power; to weaken. Figuratively, to impair, or diminish. To render inactive or unfit for action. To rob of power, influence, efficacy, usefulness, or pleasure.

To DISABUSE, [disabusere] v. a. to free a person from some mistake or error.

DISACCOMMODATION, f. the state of being unfit or unprepared.

To DISACCO'RD, v. a. to disagree.

DISADVANTAGE, f. the want of fame, credit, honour, or any thing necessary to give a person pre-eminence; loss, injury; a state unprepared for defence.

DISADVANTAGEOUS, a. contrary to interest or profit; contrary to convenience.

DISADVANTAGEOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as is inconsistent with interest or profit; in a manner not favourable, or suitable to any useful end.

DISADVANTAGEOUSNESS, f. opposition or contrariety to profit, convenience, or interest.

To DISAFFE'CT, v. a. to alienate, turn aside, or weaken the affections of a person.

DISAFFE'CTED, part. or a. alienated; having lost all affection or zeal for a person or interest. Generally applied to those who are enemies to an establishment or government.

DISAFFE'CTEDLY, ad. in a disloyal manner.

DISAFFE'CTEDNESS, f. the quality of being no friend or well-wisher to an establishment or government.

DISAFFE'CTION, f. want of zeal for the government, or ardour for a reigning prince.

DISAFFIRMANCE, f. a contumacy, or the denial of something affirmed.

To DISAFFO'REST, v. a. to throw open to common use; to reduce from the privileges of a forest to that of common ground.

To DISAGRE'E, v. n. to differ with respect to qualities; to differ with respect to opinion; to be in a state of opposition.

DISAGREE'ABLE, a. contrary to, or inconsistent with; unpleasing to the taste, sight, or other senses.

DISAGREEMENT, f. difference of qualities; contrariety of sentiment; contention or strife.

To DISALLOW, [the ow is pron. as in bow] v. a. to deny the authority of a person or thing; to consider as unlawful; to refuse countenancing an action. Neuterly, to refuse permission; to deny; not to grant.

DISALLOWABLE, a. that which is not suffered, permitted, owned, or countenanced.

DISALLOWANCE, f. the refusal of permission or countenance; the looking on a thing as unlawful.

To DISANCHOR, [disanker] v. a. to drive a ship from its anchor.

To DISANIMATE, v. a. to kill, or deprive of life. Figuratively, to discourage, or dishearten.

DISANIMATION, f. the loss of life; death.

To DISANNU'L, v. a. to deprive of authority; to abolish; to disallow. Johnson calls this an ungrammatical and barbarous word.

To DISAPPE'AR, [disappeér] v. n. to be lost to view, or to vanish out of sight.

To DISAPPOINT, v. a. to hinder a person from enjoying or receiving what he expected; to frustrate an expectation.

DISAPPOINTMENT, f. the not receiving a thing a thing expected.

DISAPPROBATION, f. an act of dislike, arising from something disagreeable to a person's taste, or not consistent with his choice or judgment.

To DISAPPROVE, v. a. [disapprover, Fr.] to dislike; to shew that a thing wants merit to engage our love, or secure esteem.

To DISARM, v. a. [d-fermer, Fr.] to take away arms from a person.

To DISARRAY, v. a. to undress; or pull off a person's cloaths.

DISARRAY, f. disorder; confusion; loss of order in battle; undress.

DISASTER, f. [disastre, Fr.] misfortune; an incident occasioning grief, by its being unexpected and undesired.

DISASTROUS, a. unlucky; unfortunate; calamitous; or afflicted by the happening of some sudden and unexpected misfortune.

DISASTROUSLY, ad. in an unlucky, unfortunate, or afflicting manner.

To DISAVOUCH, v. n. to refuse; to deny, or disown.

To DISAVOW, [the ow is pron. as in row] v. a. to disown; to deny the knowledge of a person or thing; to refuse concurring in a design or undertaking; to lay aside; decline.

DISAVOWAL, f. denial; disowning; absence.

DISAVOWMENT, f. denial.

To DISAUGHTORIZE, v. a. to lessen the credit of a thing, or render it suspicious.

To DISBAN, v. n. to dismiss from an army; to disband soldiers. Figuratively, to discharge from service, or annihilate. Neuterly, to quit the service of the army; to break up or separate.

To DISBAR, v. a. [debarquer, Fr.] to bring to land from a ship; to put on shore from some vessel.

DISBELIEF, [d'ibelief] f. refusal of giving assent to a thing which is proposed to be believed.

To DISBELIEVE, [d'ibelieus] v. a. to withhold, or refuse assenting to a thing proposed as true; to deny the truth of a doctrine or proposition.

DISBELIEVER, [d'ibeliever] f. one who refuses to assent to a thing proposed to him as true; one who refuses to believe a truth or doctrine; an infidel.

To DISBRANCH, v. a. to separate, or cut off a branch from a tree. Figuratively, to disjoin, or separate.

To DISBU, v. a. in Gardening, to take away such branches or twigs as are newly put forth and ill-placed.

To DISBURDEN, v. a. to free from any pressing and troublesome weight or load; to clear from any impediment; to communicate one's afflictions to another, and thereby lessen their pressure. Neuterly, to ease the mind of some pressing affliction.

To DISBURSE, v. a. [debourser, Fr.] to spend, or lay out money.

DISBURSEMENT, f. [deboursement, Fr.]

the spending or laying out money.

DISBURSER, f. one that lays out money, or defrays the expences of an undertaking.

DISCALCEATED, a. [discalceatus, Lat.] without shoes; with naked feet.

To DISCANDY, v. n. to dissolve or melt.

To DISCARD, v. n. to discharge from any service or employment. To refuse any further acquaintance, applied to lovers.

DISCARNATE, a. stripped of flesh.

To DISCASE, v. a. to pull off one's cloaths; to strip.

To DISCERN, v. a. [discerno, Lat.] to discern, discover, or perceive by the sight; to distinguish; to make a difference between.

DISCERNER, f. a discoverer, or one who discerns; a judge; one capable of distinguishing the differences of things.

DISCERNIBLE, a. that which may be seen or discovered by the eye or judgment; distinguishing; apparent.

DISCERNIBLENESS, f. the possibility of being discovered by the sight, or perceived by the mind.

DISCERNIBLY, ad. in such a manner as may be distinguished or perceived.

DISCERNING, part. or a. having the power of making a distinction between things, or perceiving those qualities or properties in which they differ; judicious. SYNON. The discerning man is clear-sighted and judicious; sees through the artifices of mankind with half an eye; and will not suffer himself to be deceived; his great abilities consist in distinguishing.

DISCERNINGLY, ad. with discretion or prudence, arising from a knowledge of the qualities in which things or persons differ from each other.

DISCERNMENT, f. judgment; or the power of distinguishing the qualities in which things or persons differ from each other. SYNON. When choice, or determination with respect to the goodness or beauty of objects is in question, we should have recourse to those who have discernment.

To DISCERP, v. a. [discerpo, Lat.] to tear in pieces.

DISCERPTION, f. [discerpio, Lat.] the act of pulling to pieces.

To DISCHARGE, v. a. [decharger, Fr.] to free from any load or employment; to turn away from a service, or out of a post. Figuratively, to shoot off a gun; to clear, or pay a debt; to free from an obligation; to clear from an accusation; to perform or execute an office; to disband an army, or dismiss from attendance; to obliterate, or destroy.

DISCHARGE, f. vent; explosion; the matter vented; the disappearance, vanishing, or destroying of a colour; dismissal from an office or employment; the payment of a debt; performance of a duty; exemption, or acquittance.

DISCHARGER, f. one who performs a duty; makes a payment; dismisses a servant; frees free from attendance or captivity.

DISCIPLE, f. [discipulus, Lat.] a scholar, or one who attends the lectures, and professes the tenets of another. In Scripture sense, the followers of Jesus Christ, in general, were called Disciples; but in a more restrained sense, the Disciple denotes those alone who were his immediate followers, and attendants on his person, of whom there were seventy or seventy-two.

DISCIPLESHIP, f. the state or condition of a scholar, or one who follows the principles of any particular teacher.

DISCIPLINABLE, a. [disciplinabilis, Lat.] capable of instruction or improvement; fit to be punished, for not attending to the instructions of a master.

DISCIPLINABLENESS, f. capacity of receiving, and improving by instruction.

DISCIPLINARIAN, a. belonging to discipline.

DISCIPLINARIAN, f. one who rules, or teaches with great strictness or rigour; one who will not permit a person to deviate from his doctrine; a dissenter, so called from their supposed clamour against the church, for want of rigour in its discipline.

DISCIPLINARY, a. [from disciplina, Lat.] belonging to discipline, or a regular course of instruction or education.

DISCIPLINE, f. [disciplina, Lat.] instruction, education, or the method taken to adorn the mind, and infuse virtuous habits. Figuratively, rule, or method of government; military order, government, maxims, or regulations; a state of subjection, or obedience; any thing taught; a doctrine, art, or science; punishment, correction, or chastisement for transgressing the rules of conduct, or neglecting to make a proper use of instruction.

To DISCIPLINE, v. a. to communicate the rudiments of learning; to instruct or educate; to regulate; or keep in order; to punish, correct, or chastise for breach of command, or neglect of instruction; to reform.

To DISCLAIM, v. a. to disown; to deny having any knowledge of, or acquaintance with; to withdraw a claim.

DISCLAIMER, f. one who disowns or renounces. In law, a plea containing an express denial or refusal.

To DISCLOSE, [disclosure] v. a. [disclosed, Lat.] to uncover, or discover a thing which has been hid; to reveal what should be, or is hid or secret. SYNON. So great an itch have some persons for prattling, that they tell every individual what they hear. Confidants too often disclose the intrigues they are entrusted with. The disclosure of a secret has often done more harm than any one thing whatever; as it is impossible to smother what once has been blazed abroad.

DISCLOSER, [discloser] f. one who discovers something hidden, or reveals some secret.

DISCLOSURE, [disclosure] f. the making a thing seen which was hidden from sight; the revealing a secret.

To DISCOLOUR, [discolour] v. a. to spoil the colour of a thing; to stain, or daub.

DISCOLORATION, [discoloration] f. a stain, or change of colour for the worse.

To DISCOMFIT, v. a. [discomfire, Fr.] to overcome, beat, or rout an enemy in battle.

DISCOMFIT, f. a defeat; a rout, or overthrow of an enemy.

DISCOMFUTURE, f. overthrow; defeat; ruin.

DISCOMFORT, f. a great degree of uneasiness; melancholy; despair.

To DISCOMFORT, v. a. to make a person uneasy; to grieve, afflict, sadden, or deprive of comfort.

DISCOMFORTABLE, a. refusing comfort, or rejecting consolation; occasioning sadness, or melancholy.

To DISCOMME'ND, v. a. to blame; to disapprove, or censure.

DISCOMME'NDABLE, a. deserving blame or censure.

DISCOMMENDATION, f. blame; censure; reproach.

DISCOMMENDER, f. one who blames, or censures.

To DISCOMMO'DE, v. a. to put to an inconvenience; to rumple, or disorder dress.

DISCOMMO'DIOUS, f. inconvenient; attended with trouble; displeasing.

DISCOMMO'DITY, f. inconvenience; disadvantage; hurt, or mischief.

To DISCOMPOSE, [discompose] v. a. [from dis and compono, Lat.] to put into confusion, or disorder; to ruffle, applied to the temper or mind; to rumple cloaths; to vex.

DISCOMPOSE, [discompose] f. disorder; perturbation, or disquiet of mind, arising from some disagreeable circumstance.

To DISCONCERT, v. a. to unsettle, disorder, or discompose the mind; to frustrate, or defeat an undertaking or design.

DISCONFORMITY, f. want of agreement; inconsistency; or opposition of sentiments.

DISCONGRUITY, f. disagreement; difference; inconsistency.

DISCONSULATE, a. without comfort; without hope; melancholy; or grieved on account of some affliction; refusing comfort.

DISCONSULATELY, ad. in a comfortless manner.

DISCONSULATENESS, f. the state of a person under affliction; refusing comfort.

DISCONTENT, f. want of content; being unsatisfied with one's present condition.

DISCONTENTED, a. uneasy; unsatisfied with one's present condition; malevolent.

DISCONTENTEDNESS, f. uneasiness; the not being pleased or satisfied with one's present condition; the not receiving a full satisfaction at the sight of an object.

DISCONTENTMENT, f. the state of being dissatisfied, or uneasy.

DISCONTINUANCE, f. want of union, or adhesion; the separation of the parts of any body.

sly. Cessation; intermission; or stop, applied to action. In Law, an interruption, or a breaking off something begun.

DISCONTINUATION, f. the breaking of continuity; breach of union, or separation the parts of a thing.

To DISCONTINUE, v. a. [discontinuer,] to break off; to separate; to lose an established privilege or custom. Actively, to leave off; cease from any action which is begun.

DISCONTINUITY, f. want of cohesion; rickling off union.

DISCORD, f. [discordia, Lat.] a state where persons mutually endeavour to hurt each other, and are lost to all the tender sentiments of humanity and benevolence; disagreement. Figuratively, difference, contrariety, or opposition of qualities.

To DISCORD, v. n. [discordo, Lat.] to disagree; to produce a disagreeable and unpleasing sound when joined together.

DISCORDANCE, or DISCORDANCY, f. disagreement; opposition; inconsistency.

DISCORDANT, a. [discordans, Lat.] inconsistent; disagreeing; or at variance with another; opposite, or contrary.

DISCORDANTLY, ad. in such a manner as to be at variance, or inconsistent with another. Not harmonizing or agreeing with another, applied to sounds; peevishly.

To DISCOVER, v. a. [decouvrir, Fr.] to bring a thing seen by removing the covering which concealed it from sight; to make known; to find out something unknown; to disclose, or to bring to light something which is secret, and was supposed to be kept so.

DISCOVERABLE, a. that which may be discovered either by application of the mind, or by the external senses; apparent; obvious.

DISCOVERER, f. one who finds out a thing, place, or position not known before.

DISCOVERY, f. the act of finding out something hidden; shewing any thing concealed or covered.

To DISCOURSE, v. a. to dissuade; to persuade; to abide from any vice, undertaking, or person.

DISCOUNT, f. a sum allowed a person in payment, before the bill or debt becomes due, which is generally as much as the interest would amount to for the space the bill is to run from the time of payment, or of discounting that allowance.

To DISCOUNT, v. a. to give a person a discount of money for a bill before due, allowing a discount for the time which it has to run; to deduct, or abate a person a certain sum for a discount in payment, on the purchase of any commodity.

To DISCOURTAINANCE, v. a. to discourage by cold treatment, or indifference; to bring one's disapprobation of any measure, by the means of behaviour, or by taking such measures as may defeat it. Figuratively, to abash, or to bring to shame.

DISCOURTAINANCE, f. coldness, or indifference of treatment and behaviour; unfriendly aspect or regard.

DISCOURTAINANCER, f. one who discourages by cold treatment, by an unfavourable aspect, or by want of warm and cordial affection.

To DISCOURAGE, [diskouraje] v. a. to dishearten; to deprive of courage or vigour; to deter from any attempt; used with from, and improperly with to.

DISCOURAGER, [diskourajer] f. one who damps, or checks the courage or vigour of a person; one who deters, or frightens a person from an attempt.

DISCOURAGEMENT, [diskourajement] f. the act of frightening, or deterring a person from any attempt, by representing the dangers attending it, or by involving him in difficulties; any impediment or difficulty which renders a person unwilling to undertake a design.

DISCOURSE, [diskourse] f. [discours, Fr.] in Logic, an act or operation of the mind, whereby it proceeds from a thing known to one unknown, or from premises to consequences; conversation or talk, wherein persons mutually convey their ideas and sentiments to each other; speech; a treatise, or dissertation written or uttered.

To DISCOURSE, [diskourse] v. a. to converse, or talk with another; to treat a subject in a solemn or set manner; to reason, or proceed from propositions to their consequences.

DISCOURSE, [diskourser] f. a speaker, or writer on any subject.

DISCOURSIVE, [diskourseve] a. passing, or advancing from a known thing to an unknown, or from premises to consequences; partaking of the nature of dialogue or conversation.

DISCOURTEOUS, [diskourteous, or diskourteous] a. void of civility, or complaisance.

DISCOURTESY, [diskourtesy, or diskourtesy] f. an act of rudeness, disrespect, or incivility.

DISCOURTEOUSLY, [diskourteously, or diskourteously] ad. in an uncivil, rude manner.

DISCOUS, a. in Botany, applied to such flowers as consist of many florets, forming a broad, plain, or flat surface, such as the flor solis, &c.

DISCREDIT, f. [dis and credit, Fr.] disgrace; ignominy; infamy; or that which involves a person in shame or infamy; the imputation of a fault, which lessens the fame of a person, and deprives him of the esteem he enjoyed before.

To DISCREDIT, v. a. [discrediter, Fr.] to destroy the reputation of a person or thing; to render a thing suspicious which is believed to be true; to hinder a rumour from spreading, by shewing it to be false.

DISCREET, a. [discret, Fr.] able to distinguish, and taking time to distinguish between things and their consequences; acting with prudence and caution; modest; not forward.

DISCREETLY, ad. prudently; cautiously; in such a manner as shews deliberation and regard regard for the differences of things and their consequences.

DISCREETNESS, f. the quality of acting agreeable to the differences or nature of things; a conduct guided by deliberation and prudence.

DISCRETE, a. [discretus, Lat.] applied to quantity, that which is not continued or joined together; separate; distinct. Applied to propositions, such as contain truths or sentiments set in contrast to each other, and joined by a disjunctive conjunction; as, "I resign my life, but not my honour," is a discrete proposition. Discrete proportion is when the ratio between two pair of numbers, or quantities, is the same; but the proportion between all the four numbers is not the same. Thus 6 : 8 :: 3 : 4; the ratio between 6 and 8 is the same as that between 3 and 4; but 6 is not to 2 as 3 is to 4; and therefore the proportion is not continued between all the four numbers, as in the continued proportionals, 3 : 6 :: 12 : 24.

DISCRETION, f. [discretio, Lat.] prudent behaviour, arising from a knowledge of, and acting agreeable to, the difference of things. Figuratively, an uncontrolled power, or one which is to be limited by no conditions.

DISCRETIONARY, [discretionary] a. left to act without any other restraint or guide than a person's own prudence and discretion.

DISCRETIVE PROPOSITIONS, f. in Logic, are those where various judgments are denoted by the particles but, notwithstanding, &c. either expressed or understood; as, travellers may change their climates, but not their temper. In Grammar, disjunctive conjunctions are such as imply opposition; as, not a man, but a beast.

DISCRIMINABLE, a. distinguishable by some outward marks.

To DISCRIMINATE, v. a. [discrimino, Lat.] to distinguish, or mark with some note, which shews a difference; to separate, or select.

DISCRIMINATENESS, f. distinction; or obvious difference, which renders a separation and distinction easy.

DISCRIMINATION, f. [discriminatio, Lat.] the state of a thing separated from others, and distinguished for peculiar uses; distinction, or the method of rectifying the consciousness a person has of the difference between certain things.

DISCRIMINATIVE, a. that which constitutes, or which has regard to the difference between things.

DISCRIMINOUS, a. [discriminosus, Lat.] full of danger.

DISCUMBENCY, f. [discumbens, Lat.] the posture of lying along at meals, after the Roman manner.

To DISCUMBER, v. a. to disengage, or free from any thing which is a load, or hinders a person from a free use of his limbs.

DISCURSIVE, a. [discursif, Fr.] in perpetual motion or agitation. In Logic, proceeding from things known to things unknown.

DISCURSIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to deduce one thing from another, or a thing unknown from one that is known.

DISCURSORY, a. [discursor, Lat.] deducing things unknown from those which are known; argumentative.

DISCUS, f. [Lat.] in Antiquity, a round shield consecrated to the memory of some hero, and hung up in temples in commemoration of some great exploit. Likewise an instrument used by the Romans in their games.

To DISCUSS, v. a. [discussum, Lat.] to examine; to get over, or explain a difficulty by meditation or debate. In Surgery, to disperse any humour or swelling.

DISCUSSER, f. one who determines a point, or explains a difficulty.

DISCUSSION, f. the explaining a difficulty; the examining into some knotty point or sentiment. In Surgery, the removing or dispersion of any humour or swelling by insensible perspiration.

DISCUSSIVE, a. having the power to disperse any humour.

DISCUTIENT, [discutient] f. [discutiens, Lat.] in Physic, a medicine which opens the pores, attenuates the fluids, and disperses humours, by insensible perspiration, or otherwise.

To DISDAIN, v. a. [de daigner, Fr.] to reject with scorn; to refuse, or decline with abhorrence, as unworthy one's character.

DISDAIN, f. contempt, as unworthy of one's choice; abhorrence; or contemptuous anger and indignation. SYNON. Haughtiness is seldom seen but in persons of weak understanding, and those who have had a bad education. There is a sort of vain people who look upon disdain as a personal accomplishment; and who use it on all occasions as a test of the merit they pretend to.

DISDAINFUL, a. abounding with indignation; haughty; scornful.

DISDAINFULLY, ad. in a contemptuous manner; with proud or haughty scorn.

DISDAINFULNESS, f. contempt proceeding from a mean opinion of a person or thing, including haughtiness and pride.

DISEASE, [disease] f. the state of a living body wherein it is prevented from the exercise of any of its functions, whether vital, natural, or animal, attended with a sensation of uneasiness. In Botany, the state of a plant, wherein it is rendered incapable of answering the several purposes for which it was formed. SYNON. Diseases, such as the plague, fever, &c. are sometimes so epidemic as to lay waste more than the sword. Distempers among cattle are generally infectious. Divine displeasure hath often shewn itself by a general sickness among men and beasts.

To DISEASE, [disease] v. a. to affect the body so as to render the exercise of any of its functions uneasy, or impracticable.

DISEASEDNESS, [diseasedness] f. a state wherein an animal is rendered incapable of performing such functions as are necessary to health and life, and for which their frame seems to have been intended.

To DISEMBARK, v. a. to carry from a ship ship or other vessel to land. Neuterly, to go on shore from a ship.

DISEMBO'DIED, a. stripped or divested of body.

To DISEMBO'GUE, [disembög] v. a. to discharge at its mouth into the sea, applied to rivers. Neuterly, to flow.

DISEMBO'WELLED, part. taken from the bowels.

To DISEMBRO'IL, v. n. [d. brouiller, Fr.] to free from confusion, disorder, perplexity, or from quarrels which occasion public commotions.

To DISENABLE, v. a. to deprive of power; to weaken, or render a person unable to perform an undertaking. See DISABLE.

To DISENCHANT, v. a. to free from the power of any spell, charm, or enchantment.

To DISENCUMBER, v. a. to free from any thing which hinders a person from exercising the powers of his understanding or body, and oppresses him with a sensation of burthenedness or uneasiness; to free from any hindrance or obstruction.

DISENCUMBRANCE, f. freedom from hindrance, perplexity, or uneasiness, owing to any thing which prevents a person from exercising his strength, or the faculty of his mind, freely.

To DISENGAGE, v. a. to separate from any thing which is joined to a thing; to separate from any thing which is an incumbrance; to clear from impediments or obstructions; to withdraw, or divert the mind from any thing which powerfully attracts its attention or affection. Neuterly, to set ourselves free from.

DISENGAGED, a. at leisure; not fixed to any particular object, or obliged to attend any particular person.

DISENGAGEMENT, f. release or freedom from any obligation, attendance, or affection, which influences the mind.

To DISENTANGLE, v. a. to set free from an obstacle or impediment which hinders the mind or body from a proper use of their respective powers and abilities. Figuratively, to free from perplexity.

To DISENTHRONE, v. a. to depose; or drive from the throne.

To DISENTRAN'CE, v. a. to free from a tangle; to raise from a swoon.

To DISESPOUSE, [dispospouze] v. a. to break a marriage-contract.

DISESTEE'M f. want of esteem; a slight; loss of credit or esteem; something less than contempt.

To DISESTEE'M, v. a. to regard slightly; to consider in a light which lessens esteem or approbation, but does not rise to contempt.

DISFA'VOUR, f. a circumstance which impedes or hinders an undertaking; want of countenance, or such a concurrence as may render a design successful; a state wherein a person meets with no encouragement or assistance from another.

To DISFA'VOUR, v. a. to discountenance, or hinder a design from taking effect for want of assistance or encouragement.

DISFIGURATIO'N, f. the act of spoiling the form of a thing or person, or rendering them ugly or disagreeable; the state of a thing whose natural form and beauty is spoiled. Figuratively, deformity.

To DISFIGURE, v. a. to change any thing to a worse form; to render a thing less beautiful, or less agreeable.

DISFIGUREMENT, f. change from beauty to ugliness, or from a pleasing form to one which is less so.

To DISFRA'NCHISE, v. a. to deprive a place of its charter, privileges, or immunities; or a person of his freedom as a citizen.

DISFRA'NCHISEMENT, f. the act of depriving a person or place of privileges or immunities.

To DISGO'RGE, v. a. [degorger, Fr.] to vomit, or discharge by the mouth. Figuratively, to discharge or pour out with violence.

DISGRA'CE, f. [disgrace, Fr.] shame; infamy; a state wherein a person or thing has lost its honour, esteem, and those qualities which rendered it worthy of respect; the state of a person who is out of favour. SYNON. He who has the folly or the misfortune to do any thing disgraceful, should be very careful not to give himself any unbecoming airs.

To DISGRA'CE, v. a. to deprive of honour, esteem, or high employment.

DISGRA'CEFUL, a. full of dishonour or those circumstances and qualities which make a person an object of reproach.

DISGRA'CEFULNESS, f. shamefulness.

DISGRA'CEFULLY, ad. in such a manner as will subject a person to dishonour, shame, or reproach.

DISGRACER, f. one who deprives another of some honourable employment; one who exposes another to shame and dishonour.

To DISGUISE, [disguize] v. a. [disguiser, Fr.] to conceal a person by means of some strange dress. Figuratively, to dissemble, or conceal by a false appearance; to disguise or change the form of a thing; to intoxicate and render unseemly by drinking.

DISGUISE, [disguize] f. a dress made use of to elude the notice of those we are acquainted with, or to conceal a person; a false appearance made use of to cover or conceal some design. SYNON. In order to mask it is necessary to cover the face with a false visage; but to disguise, it is sufficient to change the common appearance.

DISGUI'SER, [disguizer] f. one who alters the natural appearance of a person; one who masks or conceals his real designs under some false and specious appearance.

DISGU'ST, f. [degout, Fr.] an aversion arising from the disagreeableness of a thing to the palate; distaste; displeasure, arising from some disagreeable action or behaviour.

To DISGU'ST, v. a. [degouter, Fr.] to raise an aversion or nauousness in the stomach.

with by a disagreeable taste; to raise an aversion or dislike by some disagreeable or offensive action.

DISGU'STFUL, a. abounding with such qualities as produce aversion or dislike.

DISH, f. [dife, Sax.] a broad shallow vessel with a rim, either of silver, pewter, gold, china or earthen ware, used for holding and carrying joints, or other victuals, to table, and differing from a plate in size.

To DISH, v. a. to serve meat up elegantly, or place it in a dish. To dish out, to adorn, deck, or set off; a low phrase.

DISHABI'LLÉ, f. [deshabille, Fr.] an undress; a loose and negligent dress.

DISHABI'LLÉ, a. loosely and negligently dressed.

To DISHEA'RTEN, [disharten] v. a. to deprive a person of courage and alacrity; to terrify; to make a person imagine a thing to be impracticable, or that some approaching evil is unavoidable.

DISHE'RISON, f. the act of debarring a person from an inheritance.

To DISHE'RIT, v. a. to debar a person from succeeding to an inheritance; to cut off from an inheritance.

To DISHE'VEL, v. a. [decbeveler, Fr.] to spread hair in a loose, negligent, and disorderly manner.

DISHO'NEST, a. void of honesty; fraudulent; or inconsistent with justice. Figuratively, reproachful or shameful.

DISHO'NESTLY, ad. in such a manner as is inconsistent with honour and honesty.

DISHO'NESTY, f. want of probity; the act of doing any thing to cheat or defraud another of his property; unchasteness.

DISHO'NOUR, f. that which affects a person with disgrace. Figuratively, reproach, which deprives a person of reputation.

To DISHO'NOUR, v. a. to bring to shame; to disgrace; to blast the character of a person; to violate a person's chastity; to treat with indignity.

DISHO'NOURABLE, a. void of respect, reverence, or esteem; shameful; reproachful.

DISHO'NOURER, f. one who treats a person with indignity; one who violates the chastity of a female.

DISINCLINA'TION, f. want of affection; want of propensity.

To DISINCLINE, v. a. to lessen one's affections for a thing or person.

DISINGENU'ITY, f. unfairness; low and mean artifice.

DISINGE'NUOUS, a. not of an open and frank disposition; mean; sly; cunning or subtle.

DISINGE'NUOUSLY, ad. in an unfair, sly, or crafty manner.

DISINGE'NUOUSNESS, f. a behaviour wherein a person endeavours to secure his ends by concealing his designs, and using low craft and mean subtrefuges in order to accomplish them.

DISINHE'RISON. See DISHERISON.

To DISINHE'RIT, v. a. to cut off from a right to, or deprive of, an inheritance.

To DISINTE'R, v. a. to take a body out of a grave.

DISINTE'RESSED. See DISINTE'RESTED.

DISI'NTEREST, f. that which is contrary to a person's success or prosperity; a disadvantage or loss. Indifference to, or disregard of, profit or private advantage.

DISI'NTERESTED, a. not influenced by any views of private lucre or advantage; superior to any selfish motives.

To DISJOI'N, v. a. [disjoindre, Fr.] to separate or divide things united; to part.

To DISJOI'NT, v. a. to put out of joint; to separate things at the place where they are cemented or joined together; to carve or cut in pieces, by separating the joints from each other; to make incoherent; to destroy the connection of words or sentences. Neuterly, to fall asunder, or in pieces.

DISJU'NCTION, f. [disjunctio, Lat.] separation; or the act of dividing things or persons.

DISJU'NCTIVE, a. [disjunctivus, Lat.] disuniting; not proper for union. In Grammar, applied to such particles as denote a separation or contrast: "I love him or I fear him:" the word or, is a disjunctive conjunction. In Logic, applied to such propositions whose parts are opposed to each other by disjunctive particles, thus: "Quantity is either length, breadth, or depth."

DISJU'NCTIVELY, ad. distinctly; separately.

DISK, f. [discus, Lat.] in Astronomy, the appearance of the body of the sun or planets, which is divided by astronomers into twelve parts. In Optics, the magnitude of the glass of a telescope, or the width of its aperture. In Botany, the central or middle part of radiated flowers, composed of several florets placed perpendicularly, and sometimes called the pelvis or basin.

DISKI'NDNESS, f. want of kindness, affection, or benevolence; an act whereby a thing or person receives damage or detriment, and is supposed to be derived from ill-will, or alienated affection.

DISLI'KE, f. want of approbation or esteem, shewed by a person's behaviour and actions.

To DISLI'KE, v. a. to disapprove; to look on as improper, or faulty. To shew disgust or disesteem.

To DISLI'KEN, v. a. to change the appearance of a thing, or make it look different from what it was before.

DISLI'KENESS, f. the quality which makes a thing appear different to what it was before; the quality which makes a difference between things.

DISLI'KER, f. one who disapproves a person or thing.

To DISLOCATE, v. a. [dis and locus, Lat.] to put out of its proper place; to disjoint.

DISLOCA'TION,

DISLOCATION, f. the act of putting things out of their proper places. In Surgery, a joint put out, or the forcing a bone from the socket; a luxation.

To DISLODGE, v. a. to remove from a place or settlement by force; to drive an army from a post; to remove an army to other quarters. Neuterly, to decamp, or go away to another place.

DISLOYAL, a. [desloyal, Fr.] false or disobedient to a sovereign.

DISLOYALLY, ad. in a faithless, disobedient, or rebellious manner.

DISLOYALTY, f. want of fidelity to a sovereign.

DISMAL, [dizmal] a. [dies malus, Lat. evil day] that which affects the mind with sorrow; melancholy; gloomy; sorrowful.

DISMALLY, [dizmally] ad. in such a manner as to excite horror, sorrow, or melancholy.

DISMALNESS, [dizmalness] f. the quality which excites horror, melancholy, or sorrow.

To DISMANTLE, v. a. to strip a person of any dress which served him as an ornament, or defence; to smoothe; to unfold; to destroy the outworks or defences of a place; to break down or destroy anything external.

To DISMASK, v. a. to pull off a mask; to uncover.

To DISMAY, v. a. [desmayar, Span.] to enlarge, and dishearten with fear.

DISMAYED, [desmayo, Span.] loss of courage, occasioned by some frightful object or apprehension.

DISMAYEDNESS, f. the state of mind arising from the sight of some frightful object, the apprehension of some danger.

DISME, f. [disme, Fr.] a tenth; the tenth part; tythe.

To DISMEMBER, v. a. to divide one member from another; to cut or tear to pieces.

To DISMISS, v. a. [dismissus, Lat.] to send away; to discharge from attendance; to leave to depart; to discharge from service, or from an employment.

DISMISSIION, f. [dismissio, Lat.] the act of sending away; an honourable discharge from office; deprivation; or the being turned out of an office.

To DISMORTGAGE, v. a. to redeem or clear a mortgage by paying the money on any lands or estate.

DISMOUNT, v. a. [demonter, Fr.] to dismount; to lose any preferment, or post of office; to dislodge or force cannon from their positions. Neuterly, to alight from an horse; to descend from an eminence or high place.

DISOBEDIENCE, f. a wilful acting contrary to the commands or prohibitions of a superior.

DISOBEDIENT, part. or a. guilty of acting contrary to the laws, or the commands of a superior.

To DISOBEY, v. a. to act contrary to the will or commands of a superior; to break the laws, by doing something which is forbidden, or refusing to do something that is commanded.

DISOBLIGATION, f. an act which alienates the affections of a person, or changes a friend into an enemy; an act which occasions disgust or dislike.

To DISOBLIGE, [pron. disobleeje] v. a. to do something which offends another; to displease.

DISOBLIGING, part. or a. unpleasing; void of those qualities which attract friendship; offensive.

DISOBLIGINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to displease.

DISOBLIGINGNESS, f. readiness to displease.

DISORBED, part. cast from its proper orbit or path, within which it performs its revolutions.

DISORDER, f. [desordre, Fr.] want of method, or regular distribution; tumult, or confusion; breach or violation of laws; disease, generally used for some slight disease.

To DISORDER, v. a. to throw into confusion; to destroy the regular distribution of a thing; to ruffle, or confuse; to make sick, or affect with some slight disease; to discompose.

DISORDERED, part. not complying with law or order, applied to the morals. Indisposed, or affected with a slight disease, applied to the body. Confused, tumultuous, or rebellious, applied to states. Ruffled, applied to dress.

DISORDERLY, ad. in a manner inconsistent with law or virtue, applied to morals. In an irregular or tumultuous manner, applied to the motion of the animal spirits or fluids. In a manner wanting method, applied to the placing of things, to the distribution of ideas, or the arrangement of arguments in learned productions.

DISORDERLY, a. acting inconsistent with law or virtue; confused, or not regularly placed; tumultuous.

DISORDINATE, a. not living by the rules of virtue.

DISORDINATELY, ad. in such a manner as to exceed the bounds of temperance, or to transgress the rules of morality.

To DISOWN, v. a. to renounce; to deny. To DISPAND, v. a. to display.

To DISPARAGE, v. a. [dispar, Lat.] to match with a person or thing which is not equal; to disgrace, by joining a thing of superior excellence with one below it; to disgrace or injure by comparison with something of less value; to treat with contempt and dishonour; to expose; to blame, censure, or reproach.

DISPARAGEMENT, f. disgrace or dishonour done to a person or thing, by comparing them with something of inferior excellence and dignity; disgrace; or reproach.

DISPARAGER, f. one who treats a person or thing with indignity, and endeavours to lessen their value by comparing or uniting them with something of less value, or below them.

DISPARA'TES, f. [disparata, Lat.] in Logic, things so unlike, that they cannot be compared together.

DISPA'RITY, f. [dispar, Lat.] opposition or difference of qualities; difference in degree, whether it respects rank or excellence; unlikeness; dissimilitude.

To DISPA'RT, v. a. to divide in two; to separate; to break.

DISPA'SSION, f. freedom from the passions or affections of the mind.

DISPA'SSIONATE, a. free from the turbulence of anger, or other passions; calm, cool, and temperate.

To DISPA'TCH, v. a. [depecher, Fr.] to send a person or thing away hastily. Figuratively, to send out of the world by a violent death; to murder; to perform business quickly or expeditiously.

DISPA'TCH, f. quickness or expedition in performing. Figuratively, conduct; management. An express.

DISPA'TCHFUL, a. full of haste, expedition, or quickness in the performance of business.

To DISPE'L, v. a. [dispello, Lat.] to disperse; to clear away any obstruction by scattering or dissipating it.

DISPEN'SARY, f. the place where medicines are sold, and physicians bills are made up, at a low price, for the benefit of the poor; a book containing forms or receipts for making medicines.

DISPENSA'TION, f. [dispensatio, Lat.] the act of distributing to several things or parts; the economy observed by Providence in governing particular states, or in the general distribution of rewards and punishments to all mankind; a permission to do something contrary to the laws; or a relaxation and suspension of their force for a certain time, or on a peculiar occasion.

DISPENSA'TOR, f. [dispensator, Lat.] one employed in distributing.

DISPEN'SATORY. f. See DISPEN'SARY.

To DISPEN'SE, v. a. [dispenser, Fr.] to distribute, or give among several persons; to excuse from a duty.

DISPEN'SE, f. excuse; dispensation.

DISPEN'SER, f. one who distributes.

To DISPE'OPLE, [dispeuple] v. a. to deprive a country of its inhabitants.

DISPE'OPLER, [dispepler] f. one who deprives a country of its inhabitants.

To DISPE'RSE, v. a. [dispersus, Lat.] to scatter; to drive to different parts; to separate a body of men or multitude. SYNON. To disperse is always voluntary; to scatter is frequently involuntary. When a family of children are come to years of maturity, they generally disperse themselves into various parts.

DISPE'RSEDLY, ad. in a separate manner; separately.

DISPE'RSEDNESS, f. the state of things or persons which are divided or separated.

DISPE'RSE, f. one who spreads abroad or makes public, by communicating to many.

DISPE'RSION, f. [dispersio, Lat.] the act of scattering or spreading.

To DISPI'RIT, v. a. to strike with fear; or to repress the courage of a person by some menace, or ill treatment; to exhaust the spirits, or deprive a person of his natural alacrity and vigour.

DISPI'RITEDNESS, f. want of alacrity, vigour, or vivacity.

To DISPLA'CE, v. a. to put out of a place; to remove from one place to another; to supersede.

DISPLA'CENCY, f. [displacencia, Lat.] actions or behaviour which occasion displeasure, disgust, or any thing displeasing.

To DISPLA'NT, v. a. to remove a plant to some other place. Figuratively, to drive a people away from a settlement.

To DISPLA'Y, v. a. [deplorer, Fr.] to spread abroad or wide; to shew to the fight, or to the understanding; to explain a thing minutely; to set ostentatiously in view. In Carving, to cut up a crane, &c.

DISPLA'Y, f. the act of exhibiting a thing to view, in order to discover its beauties and excellencies.

DISPLA'YED, part. in Heraldry, applied to a bird in an erect posture, with its wings expanded or stretched out.

DISPLE'ASANT, [displezant] a. disagreeable, or offensive to the senses.

To DISPLE'ASE, [displeze] v. a. to offend, or make angry; to do a thing which will raise the ill-will of a person, or forfeit his esteem. To disgust, or raise an aversion, applied to the senses.

DISPLE'ASINGNESS, [displezingness] f. the quality of creating dislike, or being disagreeable either to the senses or judgment.

DISPLE'ASURE, [displezure] f. a disagreeable sensation; that which will offend a person; anger proceeding from some offence given, or from something which was disagreeable; a state of disgrace, wherein a person has lost the favour of another.

To DISPLO'DE, v. a. [displodo, Lat.] to vent or discharge with a loud noise.

DISPO'RT, f. play; sport; pastime; diversion.

DISPO'SAL, [disposal] f. the act of regulating any thing; distribution; dispensation; the right of bestowing.

To DISPO'SE, [dispoze] v. a. [disposer, Fr.] to employ, or apply to any use; to bestow or give; to spend or lay out money; to turn to any particular end; to adopt, fit, or form for any purpose; to influence the mind; to regulate, or adjust; to place in any condition; to sell; to get rid of.

DISPO'SER, [dispozer] f. a person who has the management of an affair or money; he that gives, bestows or regulates; a director; one who distributes without controul, and in an arbitrary trary manner.

DISPOSITION, [dispozitsjon] f. [dispozitio, Lat.] a regular arrangement, distribution, or order of the parts of a thing, or system, which discovers art, method, and prudence; natural finds, or tendency; propensity, bent, or temper of the mind; affections of kindness or ill-will. Applied to the mind, when the power and ability of doing any thing is forward and ready on every occasion to break into action.

To DISPOSSESS, [dispozets] v. a. to turn a person out of a place, of which he is master.

DISPRAISE, [dispráize] f. blame, or the act of finding fault; censure; reproach.

To DISPRAISE [dispráize] v. a. to blame; to find fault with; to censure.

DISPRAISER, [dispráizer] f. one who blames, or finds fault.

DISPRAISINGLY, [dispráizingly] ad. with blame, or censure.

To DISPREAD, [dispréd] v. a. to spread abroad; to spread different ways.

DISPROOF, f. confutation; or the proving a thing to be false.

DISPROFIT, f. loss; damage; that by which a thing is rendered less valuable, or a person receives loss.

DISPROPORTION, f. the disagreement between the quality or quantity of different things, or the parts of the same thing.

To DISPROPORTION, v. a. to join things which do not suit, or disagree with each other in quantity or quality.

DISPROPORTIONABLE, a. disagreeing in quantity; not well suited, or proportioned to something else.

DISPROPORTIONABLENESS, f. the want of agreement, with respect to quantity, size, or symmetry.

DISPROPORTIONAL, a. unsuitable, or disagreeing in quantity, quality, or value, with something else.

DISPROPORTIONATE, a. disagreeing in quality or value with something else; wanting symmetry.

DISPROPORTIONATELY, ad. wanting symmetry.

To DISPROVE, [disprove] v. a. to confute an assertion; to shew a thing or practice to be inconsistent with truth, law, or morality.

DISPROVER, [dispruver] f. one who confutes, or proves a thing or argument to be false or erroneous.

DISPUNISHABLE, a. in Law, without some penal clause or article subjecting a person to make good any loss or damage.

DISPUTABLE, a. that which may admit of arguments both for and against it; liable to dispute; lawful to be contested.

DISPUTANT, f. [disputans, Lat.] one who argues against, or opposes the opinions of another.

DISPUTATION, f. [disputatio, Lat.] the art of opposing the sentiments of others; controversy or arguments produced either in favour of each's own sentiments, or in opposition to those of another.

DISPUTATIOUS, [disputáblous] a. fond of opposing the opinions of others; given to debate, or cavilling.

DISPUTATIVE, a. disposed to oppose the opinions of others; fond of controversy.

To DISPUTE, v. n. [disputo, Lat.] to oppose the sentiments or opinion of another; to deny and argue against any received opinion. Actively, to contend for a thing either by words or actions; to oppose, or question; to discuss a question; to think on.

DISPUTE, f. the act of opposing, or bringing arguments against the opinion of another; controversy.

DISPUTER, f. one engaged in, or fond of, controversy.

DISQUALIFICATION, f. that which renders a person unfit for an employ.

To DISQUALIFY, v. a. to make unfit; to disable by some natural, or legal impediment; to exempt or disable from any right, claim, or practice, by law.

DISQUIET, f. uneasiness; restlessness; want of ease of mind; anxiety.

DISQUIET, a. uneasy, or disturbed in mind.

To DISQUIET, v. a. to disturb the mind of a person by some disagreeable and calamitous object; to vex; to make uneasy.

DISQUIETER, f. a disturber; or one who renders another uneasy in mind.

DISQUIETLY, ad. anxiously; in such a manner as to disturb or make uneasy.

DISQUIETNESS, f. the state of a person who is displeased with his present condition, involved in troubles and dangers, or affrighted by some impending evil.

DISQUIETUDE, f. uneasiness, or disturbance of mind; anxiety; want of tranquillity.

DISQUISITION, [disquisitsjon] f. [disquisitio, Lat.] an act of the mind, whereby it examines into a subject in order to understand its importance, to foresee its consequences, and to find out what may be urged either for or against it; a strict examination of a thing or matter.

DISREGARD, f. slight notice; contempt; neglect; disregard.

To DISREGARD, v. a. to take no notice of; to slight; to neglect; to contemn.

DISREGARDFUL, a. negligent; contemptuous; or making a small account either of persons or things.

DISREGARDFULLY, ad. in a negligent, contemptuous, or slighting manner.

DISRELISH, f. a bad taste; disgust, or dislike, applied to the taste.

To DISRELISH, v. a. to make a thing nauseous; to affect the taste with a disagreeable sensation. Figuratively, to dislike; to want a taste for.

DISREPUTATION, f. disgrace; or that which will lessen a person's character or fame.

DISREPUTE, f. an ill character; loss of reputation or esteem; reproach.

DISRESPECT, f. incivility; want of esteem; a behaviour which approaches to rudeness.

DISRESPECTFUL, a. uncivil; without esteem; unmannerly.

DISRESPECTFULLY, ad. in an uncivil, irreverent, or unmannerly manner.

To DISROBE, v. a. to undress or strip a person of cloaths. Figuratively, to lay aside; to divest, applied to the mind.

DISRUPTION, f. the act of breaking or bursting asunder; a breach, or rent.

DISSATISFACTION, f. the state of a person who is not contented with his present condition, but wants something to complete his wish or happiness; discontent.

DISSATISFACTORYNESS, f. inability or want of power to give content.

DISSATISFACTORY, a. that which is not able to produce content.

To DISSATISFY, v. a. to discontent; to displease; to want some quality requisite to please or content.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissecō, Lat.] in Anatomy, to divide the parts of an animal body with a knife, in order to consider each of them apart. Figuratively, to divide and examine a subject minutely.

DISSECTION, f. in Anatomy, the act of cutting or dividing the several parts of an animal body asunder, in order to examine into their nature and respective uses; to divide the several parts of a plant, leaf, or any piece of work, in order to examine into the mutual connection of their several parts, compositions, and workmanship.

To DISSEIZE, [disseize] v. a. to eject, dispossess, or unjustly deprive a man of his estate.

DISSEIZOR, [disseizor] f. one who deprives or dispossesses another of his right.

DISSEIZIN, [disseizin] f. in Law, is an unlawful dispossessing a person of his lands or tenements.

To DISSEMBLE, v. a. [dissemulo, Lat.] to hide or conceal under a false appearance; to pretend that to be which is not. Neuterly, to play the hypocrite.

DISSEMBLER, f. one who conceals his real designs, temper, or disposition, under a false and specious appearance; an hypocrite.

DISSEMBLINGLY, ad. in an hypocritical manner; in such a manner as to conceal one's real sentiments under a false and specious appearance.

To DISSEMINATE, v. a. [dissemino, Lat.] to scatter seed; to sow. Figuratively, to spread abroad or propagate a report.

DISSEMINATION, f. [disseminatio, Lat.] the act of sowing; the act of spreading abroad or propagating a report.

DISSEMINATOR, f. he that sows. Figuratively, one who propagates a doctrine.

DISSENTION, f. [dissentio, Lat.] difference or disagreement in opinion or politics; contention; or warm opposition.

DISSENTIOUS, [dissentiosus] a. disposed to strife; quarrelsome; fractious.

To DISSENT, v. n. [dissentio, Lat.] to disagree in opinion; to think differently; to be of a contrary nature; to differ.

DISSENT, f. disagreement; difference of opinion; avowal or declaration of difference of opinion.

DISSENTANEOUS, a. disagreeable; inconsistent.

DISSENTER, f. one who disagrees, or declares his disagreement with respect to an opinion; one who separates from the communion of the church of England.

DISSERTATION, f. [dissertatio, Lat.] a set discourse or treatise.

DISSESVICE, f. harm; hurt; a prejudice or ill turn done to a person or thing.

DISSESVICEABLE, a. that which will hinder the advantage of a person or thing; injurious; hurtful.

DISSESVICEABLENESS, f. that which hinders the accomplishing some end; hurt; mischief; damage; injury; harm.

To DISSEVER, v. a. [the particle dis added to sever, does not alter its signification; an impropriety observed in some other words of our language, viz. disannul, &c.] to break or part in two; to separate; to divide.

DISSIMILAR, a. [dissimilis, Lat.] differing in quality or shape from the thing which it is compared with; unlike; of a different kind or nature.

DISSIMILARITY, f. unlikeness in quality, temper, or disposition.

DISSIMILITUDE, f. difference of form or quality; want of resemblance with a thing compared.

DISSIMULATION, f. [dissimulatio, Lat.] the act of putting on a false appearance in order to conceal one's intention or disposition; then used in a bad sense.

DISSIPABLE, a. easily separated and scattered.

To DISSIPATE, v. a. [dissipatus, Lat.] to separate any collection, and disperse the parts at a distance; to divide the attention between a diversity of objects, and thereby render it impossible to fix to any with intenseness; to squander wealth; to spend a fortune.

DISSIPATION, f. [dissipatio, Lat.] the act of separating the parts which form any collection, mass, or body; the state of the parts of a body separated, and at a distance from each other. Figuratively, inattention.

To DISSOCIATE, [dissociate] v. a. [dissocio, Lat.] to separate things or persons which are united.

DISSOLVABLE, [dissolvabile] a. [dissolvens, Lat.] that which is capable of having its parts separated by moisture, or the action of some fluid. Dissoluble is more generally used.

DISSOLUBLE, a. [dissolubilis, Lat.] capable of having its parts separated.

DISSOLUBILITY, f. the possibility of having its parts separated or liquified by moisture or heat.

To DISSOLVE, [dissolve] v. a. [dissolvo, Lat.] to destroy the form of a thing by separating its parts with moisture, or heat; to melt, or liquify; to destroy & to separate; to break the the ties of any thing; to part persons who are united by any bonds; to clear up a doubt or difficulty. To break up or discharge an assembly.

DISSOLVENT, [dissolvent] a. [dissolvens, Lat.] having the power of separating, or breaking the union of the particles of a body.

DISSOLVENT, [dissolvens] f. that which separates the parts of any thing.

DISSOLVER, [dissolver] f. that which has the power of melting, liquifying, or breaking the union of the particles of any thing.

DISSOLUTE, a. [dissolutus, Lat.] dissolved in, or abandoned to, pleasure; loose; wanton; or unrestrained by the rules of morality, the orders of government, or the laws of religion.

DISSOLUTELY, ad. in such a manner as is inconsistent with virtue, government, or religion.

DISSOLUTENESS, f. looseness of manners; a conduct subjected to no restraint; wantonness; wickedness.

DISSOLUTION, f. the act of separating the particles of a body, or liquifying and melting by heat and moisture; the destruction of any thing by the separation of its parts; the substance or body formed by melting a thing; death, or the separation of the body and soul; the act of breaking up, dissolving, or putting an end to an assembly. Licentiousness; or disregard of virtue or religion, more commonly stiled dissoluteness.

DISSONANCE, f. [dissonans, Lat.] a mixture of harsh and unharmonious sounds; discord.

DISSONANT, a. [dissonans, Lat.] sounding harsh and disagreeable to the ear. Figuratively, inconsistent; disagreeing, used with from, but most properly with to.

To DISSUADE, [dissuade v. a. [dissuadeo, Lat.] to make use of arguments to hinder a person from doing something which he intends; to represent a thing as improper, or disadvantageous.

DISSUADER, [dissuader] f. one who endeavours, by argument, to divert a person from a design or undertaking.

DISSUASION, f. an argument or motive made use of to divert or hinder a person from closing with any design, or engaging in an undertaking.

DISSUASIVE, [dissuasive] a. tending to divert from any purpose or design.

DISSUASIVE, [dissuasive] f. a motive or argument made use of to prevail on a person to decline a design or pursuit.

DISSYLLABLE, f. [dis and συλλαβή, Gr.] in Grammar, a word of two syllables.

DI'STAFF, f. [distaef, Sax.] the staff or stick, on the extremity of which the tow or hemp is fastened for spinning.

To DISTA'IN, v. a. to mark a thing with a different colour; to spoil the colour of a thing. Figuratively, to blot; to mark with infamy; to pollute, or defile.

DISTANCE, f. [distantia, Lat.] the space or length of ground between any two objects, applied to place or situation; a space marked in a course wherein race-horses run. The space between a thing present and one past or future, applied to time. Distinction, applied to ideas. A modest and respectful behaviour, opposed to familiarity. A withdrawing of affection; reserve; coolness.

To DISTANCE, v. a. to remove from the view; to place farther from a person; to leave behind at a race the length of a distance-post. Figuratively, to surpass a person in the abilities of the mind.

DISTANT, a. [distant, Lat.] far from, applied to place. Apart, separate, asunder, applied to situation, or the space between two or more bodies. Removed from the present instant, applied to time past or future.

To DISTA'STE, v. a. to occasion a disagreeable or nauseous taste; to affect the taste with a disagreeable sensation; to dislike.

DISTA'STEFUL, a. affecting the palate, or organ of taste, with a nauseous or disagreeable sensation; that which gives offence, or is unpleasing; shewing ill-will, or disgust.

DISTE'MPER, f. a disproportionate mixture of ingredients. In Medicine, some disorder of the animal machine, occasioned by the redundancy of some morbid humours; a disorder of the mind, arising from the predominance of any passion or appetite; want of due balance between contraries; ill-humour. Tumultuous disorder or confusion, applied to states.

To DISTE'MPER, v. a. to weaken health; to affect with some disease; to disorder; to fill the mind with perturbation or confusion. To render rebellious, or disaffected, applied to states.

DISTE'MPERATURE, f. excess of heat, cold, or other qualities. Violent commotions, applied to government. Perturbation of mind; confusion; mixture of contrary qualities or extremes.

To DISTE'ND, v. a. [distendo, Lat.] to stretch by filling; to stretch out in breadth.

DISTENT, f. the space through which any thing is spread or stretched; breadth.

DISTENTION, f. [distentio, Lat.] the act of stretching; breadth, or the space which is occupied by a thing distended; the act of separating one thing from another.

DI'STICH, [distik] f. [distichon, Lat.] in Poetry, a couplet; a couple of lines; a poem consisting only of two verses; a theme or subject treated of and comprised in two lines.

To DISTI'L, v. n. [distillo, Lat.] to drop, or fall by drops. To drop or fall gently, applied to fluids; to extract the virtues of ingredients by means of a still.

DISTILLA'TION, f. [distillatio, Lat.] the act of separating the oily, watery, or spirituous parts of ingredients inclosed in a still, by means of fire, or by the heat of dung; the act of falling in drops; that which descends in drops from a still.

DISTI'LLATORY, a. belonging to, or used in, distilling.

DISTI'LLER,

DISTILLER, f. one who makes and sells distilled liquors.

DISTILLERY, f. the business, trade, or employment of a distiller.

DISTINCT, a. [distinctus, Lat.] different both in number and kind; separate; apart; *a*under; cleared and unconfused; marked out, so as to be distinguished from any other.

DISTINCTION, f. [distinctio, Lat.] a note which shews the difference between two or more objects; a mark of superiority; that by which one thing or person differs from another; difference made between persons of various ages, sexes, or ranks; division into different parts; discernment; judgment; high rank, or set above others by honour or title.

DISTINCTIVE, a. that which manifests or marks the difference between persons or things; having the power to distinguish or perceive the difference between things; judicious.

DISTINCTIVELY, ad. in right order; without confusion.

DISTINCTLY, ad. without confusing one part with another; plainly; clearly.

DISTINCTNESS, f. a nice or accurate observation of the difference between things; a separation of things either externally or in the mind, which renders their difference from each other easily perceived.

To DISTINGUISH, [the si in the last syllable of this word and its derivatives has the sound of ui—distinguisib] v. a. [distinguo, Lat.] to note the difference between things; to separate from others by some mark of honour; to divide by notes, shewing the difference between things in other respects like each other; to perceive; to discern critically; to constitute a difference; to specify.

DISTINGUISHABLE, a. that which may be separated or easily known, on account of its difference from another; worthy of note or regard.

DISTINGUISHED, a. eminent or extraordinary; easily to be seen from others on account of some remarkable difference or excellence.

DISTINGUISHER, f. one who sees and notes the difference of things with accuracy; a judicious observer.

DISTINGUISHINGLY, ad. with some mark which renders a difference remarkable.

DISTINGUISHMENT, f. the observation of the difference between things.

To DISTORT, v. a. [distortus, Lat.] to twist; to deform by uncouth or irregular motions; to put out of its natural state and condition. To wrest an expression from its true meaning.

DISTORTION, f. [distortio, Lat.] in Medicine, a contraction of one side of the mouth, by a convulsion of the muscles of one side of the face; an irregular motion by which any of the parts of animal bodies are rendered deformed.

To DISTRACT, [participle passive *distra*cted, formerly distraumbt] [distraho, Lat.]

to pull a thing different ways at the same time; to separate; to part. To draw or turn to different points; to fill and attract the mind with different views or considerations; to make a person mad.

DISTRACTEDLY, ad. after the manner of a madman.

DISTRACTEDNESS, f. the state of a person who is mad from too great a variety of pursuits.

DISTRACTION, f. [distraho, Lat.] separation; division. Confusion, applied to politics. A state in which the attention is called to different, and sometimes contrary objects; perturbation of mind; madness.

To DISTRAIN, v. a. [distraho, Lat.] in Law, to seize the property of another for debt. Neuterly, to make a seizure.

DISTRAINER, f. he that seizes for debt.

DISTRAINT, f. in Law, the act of seizing, or that which is seized, for debt.

DISTRESS, f. [destrisse, Fr.] in Law, any thing seized or distrained for rent unpaid, or duty unperformed; the act of making a seizure. Figuratively, any calamity or loss which reduces a person to great inconvenience or misery; the state or condition of a person who has not the necessaries to supply the calls of nature.

To DISTRESS, v. a. in Law, to seize for rent unpaid.

DISTRESSFUL, a. miserable; wretched; involved in calamities which deprive a person of the comforts and conveniences of life.

To DISTRIBUTE, v. a. [distribuo, Lat.] to divide amongst different or several persons; to dispose of set in order.

DISTRIBUTER, f. one who bestows or distributes.

DISTRIBUTION, f. the sharing or dividing amongst many; the act of giving charity; the thing given in alms. In Logic, the distinction of an universal whole into several kinds of species.

DISTRIBUTIVE, a. that which is employed in assigning portions to others; that which distinguishes a general term into its various species.

DISTRIBUTIVELY, ad. singly; particularly. In Logic, in a manner which expresses singly all the particulars included in a general term.

DISTRICT, f. [districtus, Lat.] in Law, circuit, or territory, in which a person may be compelled to appearance; the circuit or territory within which a person's jurisdiction or authority is confined; a region or country.

To DISTRUST, v. a. to suspect; to look on a person as one who ought not to be confided in; to be diffident.

DISTRUST, f. loss of credit; want of confidence in another; suspicion of a person's fidelity or ability; diffidence.

DISTRUSTFUL, a. suspicious; diffident of the fidelity or ability of another.

DISTRUSTFULLY, ad. in a manner which shews suspicion or diffidence.

DISTRUSTFULNESS,

DISTRUSTFULNESS, f. the state of being suspicious of the fidelity or ability of another; want of confidence.

To DISTURB, v. a. [disturbo, low Lat.] to perplex, disquiet, make uneasy, or deprive of tranquillity; to confound; to interrupt or hinder the continuation of any action.

DISTURBANCE, f. interruption, or that which causes any stop, or hinders the continuation of an action; confusion or disorder of mind. Tumult, uproar, or violation of the peace, applied to government.

DISTURBER, f. one who breaks the peace, causes tumults or public disorders, or affects the mind of another with confusion, trouble, anxiety, and uneasiness.

DISUNION, f. separation or disjunction. Figuratively, breach of concord, or disagreement between friends, whereby they separate or withdraw from each other.

To DISUNITE, v. a. to part or divide that which was united before; to separate or part friends or allies.

DISUNITY, f. the state of actual separation.

DISUSAGE, [disusage] f. the leaving off a practice or custom by degrees.

DISUSE, f. want of custom or practice; the discontinuing a custom or practice.

To DISUSE, [disicere] v. a. to cease to make use of, or practise; to lay aside or quit a custom or practice.

DITCH, f. [dic, Sax.] a trench made to separate and defend grounds; any long, narrow cavity, formed in the ground for holding water. In Fortification, a trench formed by digging between the scarp and counterscarp of a fort, and is either dry or filled with water.

DITCHING, a village in Suffex, formerly a market-town, 6 miles N. W. of Lewes.

DITHYRAMBIC, f. [dithyrambus, Lat.] a species of poetry, full of transport and poetical rage, so named from the Dithyrambus or ode formerly sung in honour of Bacchus, and partaking of all the warmth of ebriety.

DITTY, f. [dicbt, Belg.] a poem set to music; a song.

DIVAN, f. [Arab.] a council-chamber, wherein justice is administered among the eastern nations; a council of eastern princes.

To DIVARICATE, v. a. [divaricatus, Lat.] to part in two. Neuterly, to become parted, or to divide into two.

DIVARICATION, f. a partition of a thing into two. Figuratively, division or difference of opinions.

To DIVE, v. n. [dippan, Sax.] to go voluntarily under water; to go under water, and remain there some time, in quest of something lost. Figuratively, to make strict enquiry or examination; to go to the bottom of any question, science, or doctrine.

DIVER, f. one who professes to go under water, in quest of things lost by shipwreck, &c. Figuratively, one who makes himself master of any branch of science; one who goes to the bottom of an affair.

To DIVERGE, v. n. [divergo, Lat.] to recede farther from each other, applied to the rays of light which proceed from one point.

DIVERGENT, part. or a. [divergens, Lat.] in Geometry, applied to those lines which constantly recede from each other.

DIVERS, a. [diversus, Lat.] sundry; several; more than one. It is now out of use.

DIVERSE, a. [diversus, Lat.] different in form or nature; various; in different directions, or contrary ways.

DIVERSIFICATION, f. the act of changing forms or qualities; variation; a mixture of different colours; alteration.

To DIVERSIFY, v. a. [diversifier, Fr.] to make different from another, or from itself; to vary; to mark with various colours.

DIVERSION, f. the act of turning a thing aside from its course; something which unbends the mind, by taking it off from intense application or care; something lighter than amusement, and less forcible than pleasure; sport; the public exhibition of shews, plays, operas, &c. which unbend the mind. In War, the act of drawing off an enemy from some design, by an attack made at some other place.

DIVERSITY, f. [diversitas, Lat.] difference which distinguishes things from each other; variety; variegation, or a composition of different colours. SYNON. Diversity supposes a change which taste is always in search of, in order to discover some novelty that may enliven and delight it; variety supposes a plurality of things differing from each other in likeness, which cheers the imagination, apt to be clogged with too great a uniformity.

DIVERSELY, ad. in different ways, methods, or manners; in different directions, or towards different points.

To DIVERT, v. a. [diverto, Lat.] to turn aside from any direction or course; to seduce, or turn aside from a rule of conduct. To please, or unbend the mind by public sports, or other things, which afford pleasure. In War, to draw forces to a different part. Used by Shakespeare in the sense of to subvert; to destroy. SYNON. We are gay by disposition, merry through turn of mind, diverting by our way of acting. We should take care not to be diverting at the expence of our character.

DIVERTER, f. any thing that unbends the mind, and alleviates its fatigue.

DIVERTISEMENT, f. [divertissement, Fr.] diversion; delight; pleasure. A word now not much in use.

DIVERTIVE, a. having the power to unbend and recreate the mind.

To DIVEST, v. a. [di and vestis, Lat.] to strip or deprive of.

To DIVIDE, v. a. [divido, Lat.] to separate a thing or whole into several parts; to stand between things as a partition, to hinder them from joining or meeting; to part one person from another; to separate friends by discord; to to give or distribute among several persons.

DIVIDEND, f. [divido, Lat.] in Arithmetic, the number proposed to be divided in equal parts. It must always be greater than the divisor. In Stocks and Companies, it is a share or proportion of the interest of stocks erected on public funds; as the South-sea, &c. In the University, it is that part or share which the fellows equally divide among themselves of their yearly stipend. In Trade, it is when a man's effects are taken by statute, inventoried and valued, and, after all charges are deducted, the remainder is divided among the several creditors in proportion to their debts.

DIVIDER, f. that which separates any thing into parts; one who distributes to others; the person who separates friends by promoting discord between them.

DIVINATION, f. [divinatio, Lat.] the act of foretelling future events, which are of a secret and hidden nature, and cannot be known by the bare exercise of reason. SYNON. Divination brings hidden things to light; prediction foretels what will come to pass. The first regards things present and past; the objects of the second are things to come.

DIVINE, a. [divinus, Lat.] partaking of the nature of, or proceeding from, God. Figuratively, excellent; extraordinary; seemingly beyond the nature of mankind.

DIVINE, f. a minister of the gospel; a clergyman, or one who is peculiarly dedicated to the service of the church, and performance of the rites in public worship.

To DIVINE, v. a. [divino, Lat.] to foretell some future event by means of omens, &c. To foresee, foreknow, or presage. Neuterly, to utter a prediction; to conjecture or guess.

DIVINELY, ad. in a divine or heavenly manner; by the operation of God; excellently; in a supreme or superlative degree.

DIVINER, f. one who professes to foretell or discover future events by means of external signs, or supernatural influence.

DIVINITY, f. [divinitas, Lat.] a partaking of the nature and excellence of God; Godhead. Figuratively, God, the supreme Being, the creator and preserver of all things; a false deity or idol. The science conversant about God, heavenly things, and the duties we more immediately owe to him; something supernatural.

DIVISIBILITY, f. [divisibilitè, Fr.] the quality of admitting division, either mentally or actually.

DIVISIBLE, [divisibilis] a. [divisibilis, Lat.] capable of being actually or mentally divided into parts.

DIVISIBLENESS, f. the quality of being divided.

DIVISION, f. is the art of dividing any thing into parts. In Arithmetic, it is one of the four fundamental rules, whereby we find how often a less number, called the divisor, is contained in a greater, called the dividend; the number of times which the divisor is contained in the dividend being termed the quotient. In Natural Philosophy, or Mechanics, it is the taking a thing to pieces, that we may have a more complete conception of the whole. This is frequently necessary in very complex beings, or a piece of curious mechanism, the several parts of which cannot be surveyed at one view. In Music, it is the dividing the interval of an octave into a number of less intervals. In Rhetoric, it is the arrangement of a discourse into several heads. In War, the Divisions of a battalion are the several parts into which it is divided in marching. At Sea, it is the third part of a fleet of men of war, and sometimes the ninth, which last happens when the fleet is divided into three squadrons, for then each squadron is distributed into three divisions. In an engagement, the order of battle is to place all the squadrons and all the divisions on each side in one line; and this order is kept as long as the wind and other circumstances will permit.

DIVISOR, [divisor] f. [divisor, Lat.] in Arithmetic, the dividing number, or that by which the dividend is divided, and which shews how many parts it is to be divided into.

DIVORCE, f. [divortium, Lat.] a breach or dissolution of the bond of marriage, or the legal separation of man and wife. The usual divorces among us are of two kinds, viz. a mensâ & thora, from bed and board; and a vinculo matrimonii, from the bond or tie of marriage. The first does not dissolve the marriage, since the cause thereof is subsequent to it; and at the same time supposes the marriage to be lawful. This divorce may be on account of adultery in either of the parties, for the cruelty of the husband, &c. As this divorce dissolves not the marriage, so it does not debar the woman of her dower, nor bastardize her issue, or make void any estate for the life of the husband and wife. A divorce a vinculo matrimonii, entirely dissolves the marriage, as the cause is a pre-contract with some other person, consanguinity or affinity within the Levitical degrees, impotency, impuberty, &c. In this case, the dower is gone, and the children begotten between the parties divorced are bastards. On this divorce the parties are at liberty to marry again; and in divorces for adultery, several acts of parliament have allowed the innocent party marriage with another person. Divorces are only to be had by consent of Parliament.

To DIVORCE, v. a. to separate a husband or wife from each other; to abolish and annul the marriage contract. Figuratively, to force asunder, or to separate by violence; to take away by force.

DIVORCEMENT, f. the abrogating, annulling, or setting aside, the marriage contract, and separating a man and wife from each other.

DIVORCER, f. the person who causes the legal separation of a man and his wife.

DIURETIC;

D O C

DIURETIC, a. [διουρητικός, Gr.] having the power to provoke urine.

DIURNAL, a. [diurnus, Lat.] relating to the day; constituting the day; performed in the space of a day; or daily.

DIURNAL, f. [diurnal, Fr.] a journal, or day-book.

DIURNALLY, ad. daily, or every day.

DIUTURNITY, f. [diuturnitas, Lat.] the length of duration, or long continuance of any being.

To DIVULGE, v. a. [divulgo, Lat.] to publish; to make known or public; to proclaim, or manifest.

DIVULGER, f. a publisher; one who exposes to public view; one that reveals a secret.

DIVULSION, f. [divulso, Lat.] the act of pulling away, plucking, or sending one thing from another.

To DI'ZEN, v. a. [a corruption probably from To DIGHT] to dress, deck, or spruce up. A low word.

DI'ZZINESS, f. giddiness, or a swimming in the head.

DI'ZZY, a. [diffig, Sax.] giddy, having a swimming in the head, or a sensation of turning round. Figuratively, giddy, thoughtless.

To DI'ZZY, v. a. to make giddy.

To DO, v. a. [preter. did, part. pass. done] [do, Sax.] to perform, act, or practise. To execute or discharge, applied to a message; to cause; to transact; to have recourse to, used as a sudden and passionate question. To perform; to exert; to deal; to gain a point; to put; to finish; to conclude; to settle. What to do with, signifies to bestow, to employ, to dispose of, or what use to make of. "He knows not what to do with his money." Neuterly, to cease to be concerned with. "I have done with him." To fare; to be conditioned with respect to health or sickness. To be able to succeed, or perfect a design. "We shall do without him." Addit. Sometimes, however, it is used to save the repetition of another verb. "I shall come, but if I do not, go away;" i. e. if I come not. Sometimes it is used as a word of peremptory and positive command; as, "Help me; do;" Or to encrease the emphasis of the verb which follows it; "But I do love her." Shak. And sometimes by way of opposition; "I did love him, but scorn him now."

DO'CIBLE, a. [docibilis, Lat.] submitting to instruction; easy to be taught; tractable.

DO'CILE, a. [docilis, Lat.] teachable; easily taught; tractable.

DOCILITY, f. [docilitas, Lat.] aptness to receive instruction; readiness to be taught.

DOCK, f. in Law, an expedient for cutting off an estate-tail in lands or tenements, that the owner may be enabled to sell, give, or bequeath the same. In Maritime affairs, it is a pit, great pond, or creek, by the side of an harbour, made convenient either for the building or repairing of ships: and is of two sorts; the dry-dock, where the water is kept out by great flood-gates; and a wet-dock, a place where a ship may be hauled into out of the tide's way. Among sportsmen, it is the fleshy part of a beast's chin, between the middle and the buttocks. Also the stump of a horse's tail that remains after docking.

D O F

To DOCK, v. a. to cut a tail off, or short; to cut any thing short; to lay a ship in a dock. In Law, to cut off an entail; to lessen the charge of a bill.

DOCKET, f. a direction tied or fastened to goods; a summary or abridgement of a larger writing.

DOCTOR, f. [doctōr, Lat.] one so well versed in any science as to be able to teach it; a person who has taken the highest degree of music, law, physic, or divinity.

DOCTORAL, a. [doctoralis, Lat.] belonging to a doctor's degree.

DOCTORALLY, ad. after the manner of a doctor or physician.

DOCTORSHIP, f. the office or rank of a doctor.

DOCTRINAL, [sometimes accented on the second syllable] a. [doctrina, Lat.] belonging to or containing doctrine or instruction formerly taught.

DOCTRINALLY, ad. positively; in the form of precepts or instructions.

DOCTRINE, f. [doctrina, Lat.] the principles or positions of any sect or master; the thesis or maxims delivered in a discourse; any thing taught; the act of teaching.

DOCUMENT, f. [documentum, Lat.] an instruction, admonition, precept, or direction; a precept of some dogmatical or positive person, or master; vouchers, or original writings, produced in support of any charge or accusation.

DO'DDER, f. is the name of a very singular plant; when it first shoots from the seed it has little roots, which pierce the earth near the roots of other plants; but the capillaments, of which it is formed, soon after clinging about these plants, the roots wither away. From this time it propagates itself along the stalks of the plant, entangling itself about them in a very complicated manner. It has no leaves.

DO'DDERED, a. overgrown with dodder; wasted, or decayed.

DODECAGON, f. [δωδεκα and γωνία] a figure having twelve sides.

To DODGE, [probably corrupted from dog] v. a. to use craft, evasions, or low shifts; to shift place as another approaches. Figuratively, to play fast and loose; to raise high expectations and baffle them; to shuffle, or baffle.

DO'DMAN, f. a kind of shell-fish, which casts its shell like the lobster, and is likewise called the bodmandod.

DOE, [dō] f. [do, Sax.] a she-deer, the female of a buck.

DO'ER, [dōer] [from To Do] f. one who performs any thing whether good or bad; a performer; one who practises.

To DOFF, [from do off] v. a. to strip; to put off dress; to put away, or get rid of; to de-lay, lay, or shift off. This word is obsolete in all its senses, and seldom used but by rustics.

DOG, f. [dogge, Belg.] a domestic animal, the species of which are remarkably various, comprizing the mastiff, spaniel, bull-dog, hound, greyhound, terrier, &c. the larger sort being used as guards, and the less for sports. In Astronomy, the name of a constellation, called likewise Sirius, or Canicula. Figuratively, used as a term of reproach for a man. When added to the names of other animals, it signifies a male of the species, as a dog-fox, a dog-otter. Used as a particle, and added to another word, it signifies something worthless, as a dog-rose. To send or give to the dogs, is a phrase implying, to be ruined, made away with by extravagance, or destroyed.

To DOG, v. a. to hunt, or pursue like a hound.

DOG-BOLT, a. wretched; miserable.

DOG-CHEAP, a. extremely cheap, as cheap as dogs-meat.

DOG-DAYS, f. the days in which the dog-star rises and sets with the sun; which, on account of their great heat, are supposed to be very unwholesome or unhealthy.

DOGE, f. [dog, Ital.] the title of the supreme magistrate of the republics of Venice and Genoa.

DOG-FLY, f. a voracious, biting fly.

DOGGED, [dog-ed] a. fullen; four; morose; or ill-humoured.

DOGGEDLY, [dog-edly] ad. in a sour, morose; or ill-humoured manner.

DOGGEDNESS, [dog-edness] f. a disposition of mind wherein a person is not moved to pleasantry by any objects of mirth, or pleased by offices of kindness and civility; dullness; moroseness.

DOGGER, [dog-er] f. a small ship, or fishing-vessel, built after the Dutch fashion, with a narrow stern, commonly but one mast, and a well in the middle for keeping fish alive: principally used in fishing on the Dogger Bank, from whence it derives its name.

DOGGEREL, [doggerel] f. in Poetry, applied to such compositions as have neither accuracy with respect to their rhimes, harmony with regard to their metre, dignity of expression, fertility of invention, or elevation of sentiment.

DOGMA, f. [dogma, Lat.] an established principle, axiom, or maxim.

DOGMA'TIC, or DOGMA'TICAL, a. positive; strongly attached to any particular notion or opinion; authoritative, or imperious in forcing one's opinions as indubitable truths on others.

DOGMA'TICALLY, ad. in a positive, imperious, or peremptory manner.

DOGMA'TICALNESS, f. the quality of being positive of the truth of one's own opinions, and endeavouring to force them magisterially or imperiously on others.

DOGMATIST, f. one who advances his opinions as infallible, supports them with great obstinacy, and magisterially demands the assent of others to them.

To DOG'MATIZE, v. n. to advance any opinion positively, and endeavour to propagate it imperiously.

DOGMATI'ZER, f. one who advances opinions with an air of insolent confidence.

DOG-SLEEP, f. a pretended or dissimulated sleep.

DOGS-MEAT, f. carrion, or horse-flesh, fold for the food of dogs.

DOG-STAR, f. the star which rises and sets with the sun during the dog-days.

DOG-TEETH, f. in Anatomy, the four teeth, two in each jaw, which are situated between the incisors and the grinders; they are by some called the eye-teeth.

DOG-TRICK, f. an ill turn; furly and brutal treatment.

DOG-TROT, f. a gentle trot, resembling that of a dog.

DO'ILY, f. a coarse woollen stuff, supposed to be so called from the name of the inventor.

DO'INGS, f. [plural, and seldom used in the singular, from Do the verb] any thing performed, whether good or bad. Performances; exploits; behaviour; conduct; bustle; tumult; merriment. Seldom used but in a ludicrous sense.

DOIT, f. [duyt, Belg.] a small piece of money current in Holland.

DOLE, f. [dæl, Sax.] the act of dividing into shares or portions. In Law, a portion or share. Portion, or condition, applied to the circumstances or incidents happening to a person. Grief, sorrow, misery, from doleo, Lat. to grieve. "In equal scale weighing delight and doic." Shak.

To DOLE, v. a. [dælan, Sax.] to divide in portions or shares; to deal out, or distribute.

DOLE, f. in Husbandry, a void space left in tilling. See DALE.

DO'LEFUL, a. dismal; sorrowful; having the external appearance of sorrow; melancholy.

DO'LEFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to shew or cause sorrow.

DO'LEFULNESS, f. the quality which shews or expresses grief, or causes it in others.

DO'LEGELLY, a town of Merionethshire, in North Wales, with a market on Tuesdays. It is seated on the river Avon, in a vale so called, and at the foot of the great rock Cader-Idris, which is extremely high. It has a good manufacture of Welch cotton; and is 205 miles N. W. of London.

DO'LESOME, a. full of grief; extremely sorrowful, applied to persons. Gloomy, dull, or affecting a person with melancholy.

DO'LESOMELY, ad. in such a manner as to affect a person with deep sorrow.

DO'LESOMENESS, f. the quality of affecting a person with extreme sorrow.

DOLL, f. a contraction of DOROTHY, and applied to a wooden image, clothed either with the dress of a female or male, used by children as a play-thing.

DO'LLAR,

DOLLAR, f. [daler, Belg.] a silver coin current in several parts of Germany and Holland, of the value of 4s. 6d. sterling. There are various species of them; as the six-dollar, semi-dollar, quarter-dollar, &c.

DOLORIFIC, a. [dolorificus, Lat.] that which causes grief or pain.

DOLOROUS, a. [dolor, Lat.] mournful or sorrowful, applied to persons. Affecting with grief or pain, applied to things.

DOLOUR, f. [dolor, Lat.] grief or sorrow; pain or pang.

DOLPHIN, [dolphin] f. [delphin, Lat.] the name of a large sea-fish. In Astronomy, a constellation of the northern hemisphere, consisting of eighteen stars.

DOLT, f. [dol, Teut.] a fool, or person of dull apprehension; a blockhead.

DOLTISH, a. stupid; like a fool or blockhead.

DOLTON, a village in Devonshire, 6 miles S. by E. of Torrington.

DOMAIN, f. [domaine, Fr.] land possessed by one as a proprietor, heir, or governor.

DOME, f. [domus, Lat.] a house, or building, generally applied to a stately building, or to one set apart for divine service. In Architecture, a roof of a spherical form, resembling the bell of a great clock, raised over the middle of a building, called a cupola.

DOMESTIC, or DOMESTICAL, a. [domesticus, Lat.] belonging to a house, or the management of a family; fit to inhabit a house, applied to animals. Private, not open. Applied to wars, intestine, or civil; opposed to those carried on in a foreign country.

DOMESTIC, f. a servant who lives in the same house with his master; generally applied to the servants of persons of distinction.

TO DOMINATE, v. a. [dominatus, Lat.] to prevail over others.

DOMINATION, f. [dominatio, Lat.] exercise of power; government; tyranny.

DOMINATOR, f. [dominator, Lat.] the presiding, ruling, or governing power.

TO DOMINEER, v. n. [dominor, Lat.] to exert authority or power in an insolent, arbitrary, and tyrannical manner.

DOMINICA, f. Palm-Sunday.

DOMINICAL, a. noting the Lord's day, or Sunday. The dominical letter, in Chronology, is that which denotes the Sunday in almanacks, &c. throughout the year: of these letters there are consequently seven, beginning with the first letter of the alphabet; and as in leap-years there is an intercalary day, there are then two, the first of which denotes every Sunday till the intercalary day, and the second all the Sundays which follow after it.

DOMINICANS, an order of religious, called in France Jacobins, and in England Black Friars, or preaching Friars. This order, founded by St. Dominic, a native of Spain, was approved of by Innocent III. in 1215, and confirmed by a bull of Honorius III. in 1216, under St. Austin's rules, and the founder's particular constitutions:

DOMINION, f. [dominio, Lat.] the exercise of power and authority. The space of ground or territory subject to a person, applied to place. Predominancy; preference; an order of angels.

DOMINO, f. a hood worn by a canon of a cathedral. Also a dress in form of a gown, worn at masquerades.

DON, f. [dominus, Lat.] the Spanish title for a gentleman.

TO DON, v. a. to put on; to invest one with. Obsolete.

DONARY, f. [donarium, Lat.] a thing given for sacred uses.

DONA'TION, f. [donatio, Lat.] the act of giving any thing voluntary or unasked; the grant by which any thing is given.

DONATISTS, schismatics in the ancient church of Africa, who took their name from their leader Donatus. He taught that baptism administered by heretics was null; that every church but the African was become prostituted; and that he was to be the restorer of religion.

DONATIVE, f. [donatif, Fr.] a gift, largess, or some considerable present. In the Canon Law, it is a benefice given by the patron to a priest without presentation to the ordinary, and without institution or induction. The king may found a church or chapel, and exempt it from the jurisdiction of the ordinary; or by letters patent he may license a common person to found such a church, and ordain it to be made a donative. There can be no lapse of such a benefice, though the bishop may compel such person to nominate a clerk by ecclesiastical censures, and the clerk must be qualified as other clerks of churches are.

DONCASTER, a town in the West Riding of Yorkshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is a large, well-built corporation-town, and has good manufactures in stockings, knit-waistcoats, and gloves; and the market is good for cattle, corn, and provisions. It is 16 miles N. by W. of London.

DONE, participle of Do.

DONE, an interjection made use of by the party, who accepts of, or agrees to, a wager proposed by another person; and implies, it is as good as done, or let it be done, or let it be so.

DONNINGTON, a town in Lincolnshire, whose market is on Saturdays. It is 110½ miles from London.

DONJON, f. in Fortification, signifies a strong tower or redoubt of a fortress, whither the garrison may retreat in case of necessity, and capitulate with greater advantages.

DONOR, f. [donor, Lat.] one who gives a thing to another.

DOODLE, f. [a cant word, perhaps corrupted from do little] a trifter; an idler.

TO DOOM, v. a. [deum, Sax.] to judge; to pass sentence against; to condemn; to destitute; to command judicially, or by uncontrollable authority.

DO'OM,

DOOM, f. [dom, Sax.] the sentence or condemnation of a judge; the great judgment at the last day; the state to which a person is destined; fate, or destruction. Sentence, or the last determination of the judgment with respect to the condition of a person.

DOO'MSDAY, f. [domesday, Sax.] the last day, when judgment is to be passed upon all mankind; the day of judgment. The day in which a person is condemned, or is to be executed. Domesday or Doomsday book, denominated Liber Judiciarius vel Censualis Angliæ; that is, the judicial book, or book of the survey of England, composed in the time of William the Conqueror, from a survey of the several counties, hundreds, tithings, &c. The intent or design of this book was, to be a register, by which sentence may be given in the tenures of estates, and from which that noted question; whether lands be ancient demesne or not, is still decided. The book is still remaining in the Exchequer, fair and legible, consisting of two volumes, a greater and lesser: the greater comprehends all the counties of England, except Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, Durham, and part of Lancashire, which were never surveyed, and except Essex, Suffolk, and Norfolk, which are contained in the lesser volume.

DOOR, f. [dor, Sax.] a vacant place left in a building, through which persons may enter or go out. This is generally applied to private houses; but the entrance into cities, palaces, or the mansions of the nobility, is called a gate. Figuratively, a house, passage, avenue, inlet, or any means by which an approach or entrance may be made. Out of Doors, is sometimes used for a thing abolished, laid aside, quite gone, vanished, exploded or sent away. At the door, implies something near, impending, or imminent: "Death is at the door." At the door of a person, signifies something that may be charged or imputed to a person: "The fault lies wholly at my door." Dryd. Next door to, implies approaching to, bordering on.

DOOR-CASE, f. the frame in which doors are hung.

DORCHESTER, the capital town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Wednesdays and Saturdays. 'It is a town of great antiquity, and was much larger than it is at present. The houses are well-built, and it has three handsome streets. It sends two members to parliament, is the place where the assizes are held, and gives title to a marquis. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, a recorder, and 24 common-council-men; has 3 churches, and was formerly a city. It is 120 miles W. by S. of London.

DORCHESTER, a town in Oxfordshire, whose market is now disused. It was formerly of much greater account than it is at present; however, it is provided with some very good inns; and the church is a large handsome structure. It was formerly a bishop's see. It is 49½ miles W. N. W. of London.

DORIC ORDER, f. in Architecture, the second of the five orders, being that between the Tuscan and Ionic. The characters of the Doric order, as now managed, are the height of its columns, which is eight diameters: the frieze, which is adorned with triglyphs, drops, and metopes; its capital, which is without volutes; and its admitting of cimatiums.

DOR'KING. See DARKING.

DOR'MANT, a. [dormant, Fr.] sleeping; in a sleeping posture. Secret, or private, opposed to public. Leaning; not perpendicular.

DOR'MITORY, f. [dormitorium, Lat.] a place furnished for sleeping in with a great many beds. In old records, a burial-place.

DOR'MOUSE, f. [dormio and moufe, Lat.] a mouse which passes a great part of the winter in sleep.

DORN, f. [dorn, Teut.] in Natural History, a fish, perhaps the same as the thorn-back.

DORR, f. [tor, Teut.] in Natural History, an insect so called from its sound, and named likewise the hedge-chaser.

DOR'SEL, or DOR'SER, f. [dorsum, Lat.] a pannier or bag hung on each side of a horse, for holding things of a small bulk.

DORSETSHIRE, a county of England, 52 miles in length, and 27 in breadth. It is bounded on the N. by Wiltshire and Somersetshire, on the S. by the English Channel, on the W. by Devonshire, and on the E. by Hampshire. It contains 248 parishes, and 22 market-towns, 9 of which send members to parliament. It produces all the commodities common to other counties; besides which, it has both linen and woollen manufactures. The air is good, but sharp on the hills, and on the sea-coast it is mild and pleasant. The soil is sandy, except in some rich meadows, plains, and valleys. There are many hills, which feed great numbers of sheep; and on the sea-coasts there is plenty of fish. The principal rivers are the Stour, the Frome, and the Piddle. It gives the title of Duke to the Sackville family.

DORSI'FEROUS, or DORSI'PAROUS, a. [dorsum and fero, or pario, Lat.] bearing or bringing forth on the back. In Botany, applied to plants of the capillary kind, without stalk, which bear their seeds on the back-side of their leaves; such as the fern, &c. In Natural History, applied to the American frog, which brings forth her young at her back.

DOR'STONE, a village in Herefordshire, 13 miles W. of Hereford.

DOR'TURE, f. [dortoir, Fr.] a place to sleep in; a bed-chamber.

DOSE, f. [dosis, Gr.] in Phycic, as much of any medicine as is proper for a person to take at one time. As much of any liquor as a person can bear; sometimes used for that quantity which intoxicates a person.

DO'SSIL, f. a pledget; or a small lump or quantity of lint to be laid on a sore.

DOT, f. a small point or spot made to mark any thing, by pressing the tip of a pen on the paper in writing, and resembling the mark mark at the end of this sentence [.] .

To DOT, v. a. to make round spots in writing.

DOTAGE, f. want or weakness of understanding; excessive fondness for any person or thing; generally applied to persons in years.

DO'TAL, a. relating to the portion of a woman; constituting her dowry.

DO'TARD, f. a person whose understanding is impaired by age.

To DOTE, v. n. [doten, Belg.] to have one's understanding impaired by age or passion. Actively, to regard with excessive fondness.

DO'TER, f. one whose understanding is impaired by years; one who loves a person or thing with excessive fondness.

DO'TINGLY, ad. with an excess of love or fondness.

DO'TTARD, f. in Gardening, a tree kept from growing to its full height by cutting.

DO'TTEREL, f. in Natural History, a bird which mimicks gestures.

DOUBLE, [dubble, Fr.] two things of the same sort, joined in pairs, and answering each other. Twice as much, applied to quantity; the same number repeated. Having twice the effect or influence, applied to power. Deceitful, acting two parts, one openly, and a different one in private. It is used in composition for two ways, as double-edged, having an edge on each side; or for twice the number or quantity; double-dyed, i. e. twice dyed.

To DOUB'LE, [dubble] v. n. to encrease to twice the quantity, number, value, or strength; to turn back, or wind, in running. To play tricks; to use sleights. Actively, among sailors, to pass round a cape or promontory; to fold; to repeat the same word; to encrease by addition.

DOUBLE, [dubble] f. twice the quantity, number, value, or quality; strong beer, so called from its being twice as strong as the common sort. A trick; a shift; an artifice. In Hunting, a turning back or winding made by game.

DOUBLE-DE'ALER, [dubble-deeler] f. one who is deceitful, by acting two parts at the same time, one to a person's face, and the other behind his back.

DOUBLE-DE'ALING, [dubble-deeling] f. an artifice; dissimulation; the acting two different parts, by pretending friendship to a person's face, and at the same time being intimate with his enemy; low, insidious, and fraudulent; cunning.

DOUBLE-MI'NDED, [dubble-minded] a. deceitful; acting two contrary parts; professing contrary designs.

DOUB'LENESS, [dubbleness] f. the state of a thing repeated twice; the state of a thing folded, or made twice its natural size.

DOUBLE-TO'NGUED, [double-tong'd] a. giving contrary accounts of the same thing; deceitful.

DOUB'BLER, [dubler] f. one who is guilty of deceit or dissimulation; one who encreases any thing by repetition, addition, or folding.

DOUB'LET, [dubler] f. an under or inner garment, so called from its affording double the warmth of another.

DOUBLO'N, [dooblon, Fr.] a. a Spanish coin, valued at two pistoles.

DOUB'LY, [dubly] ad. in a twofold manner; in twice the quantity; to twice the degree.

To DOUBT, [dout] v. n. [doubter, Fr.] to be unable to determine the reality, truth, or possibility of a thing, on account of the equality of the arguments on each side; to fear; to suspect; to hesitate; to desist or keep from action through suspense. Actively, to fear; to suspect; to distrust.

DOUBT, [dout] f. uncertainty; suspense; a state of the mind wherein it remains undetermined. Figuratively, a question or some point undetermined and unsettled; a scruple; perplexity; suspicion; a difficulty proposed to the understanding. SYNON. We are in uncertainty with respect to the success of our proceedings; in doubt what step to take; in suspence when we are held from acting by a delay of certainty. Uncertainty requires caution; doubt, consideration; suspence, patience.

DOUB'TER, [doutier] f. one who is not able to determine the truth or probability of a thing; one who is in an uncertain state of mind.

DOUB'TFUL, [doutful] a. full of uncertainty; not settled in opinion. Ambiguous, or not clear, applied to the meaning of words; not determined in the mind on account of the quality of the proofs for and against; not secure; suspicious; timorous.

DOUB'TFULLY, [doutfully] ad. with uncertainty and irresolution; with ambiguity, or want of clearness.

DOUB'TFULNESS, [doutfulness] f. a state of the mind, wherein it is unable to determine certainty, reality, or truth, for want of preponderating proofs; uncertainty. That which may admit of various and contrary senses, applied to words.

DOUB'TINGLY, [doutingly] ad. in such a manner as to be uncertain with respect to the reality or truth of a thing; in such a manner as to be fearful of some future ill.

DOUB'TLESS, [doutless] a. without any fear or apprehension of danger or ill; without doubt; certainly. Used adverbially, it implies without doubt, question, or uncertainty.

DOVE, f. [duva, Sax.] a wild pigeon, generally applied to the female of the species. The dove is the symbol of simplicity and innocence.

DO'VE-COT, f. a small building in which pigeons are kept; a pigeon-house.

DO'VE'R, a sea-port town in the county of Kent, with two markets, on Wednesdays and Saturdays. It is one of the cinque ports, and a corporation, consisting of a mayor, and 12 jurats. It sends two members to parliament, and is the station of the packet-boats, that, in time

D O W

Time of peace, pass between Dover and Calais, from which it is distant only 21 miles. The castle is built on a high hill E. of the town, and is very strong, containing barracks for 3000 men. The houses, which are about 500, are low, some built with brick, and others with flint-stone. The inhabitants are chiefly supported by the shipping, and by ship-building, rope-making, and a small manufactory of facking. It is 72 miles S. E. by E. of London.

DOVE-TAIL, f. in Carpentry, a form or manner of joining boards or timber, by letting one piece into another, in form of a wedge reversed, or a dove's tail. This is one of the strongest kinds of joinings.

DOUGH, [dō] f. [dob, Sax.] the paste made for bread or pies before it is baked.

DOUGHTY, [dōty] a. [dobtig, Sax.] brave, noble, illustrious, in ancient authors. Obstinate brave; stiff. Used by moderns to convey some ludicrous or ironical idea of strength and courage.

DO'UGHY, [dōcy] a. not baked; not baked enough. Figuratively, soft; not confirmed by years or education in the love of virtue.

To DOUSE, v. a. [dōis, Gr.] to plunge suddenly over head in the water; to give a person a box on the ear. Neuterly, to fall suddenly into the water.

DOUSE, f. a box on the ear; a low and cant word.

DO'WAGER, f. [dou.irière. Fr.] a widow who has a jointure; a title given to the widows of kings, or other nobility.

DO'WDY, f. an aukward, ill-dressed, and clownish woman.

DO'WER, f. that portion which the law allows a widow out of the estates of her husband, after his decease.

DO'WERED, part. portioned.

DO'WERLESS, a. without a portion.

DO'WLASS, f. a coarse kind of linen.

DOWN, [formerly spelt down] [doun, Dan.] soft feathers, generally those which grow on the breasts of birds or fowls. Figuratively, that which softens or alleviates any uneasy sensation; soft wool, or tender hair.

DOWN, f. [dun, Sax.] a large open plain or valley. In the plural, used for a road near the coast of Deal in Kent, which is passed by shipping homeward and outward bound, and is a general place for men of war to rendezvous.

DOWN, prep. from a higher to a lower situation; along a descent, from a rising ground to the plain on which it stands. Towards the mouth, applied to a river.

DOWN, ad. on the ground; from a higher to a lower situation; tending to the ground, or towards the center. Out of sight, or below the horizon, applied to the situation of the sun, moon, &c. "The moon is down." Shak. To boil down, is to exhaust all its strength, or so as to macerate, or boil to pieces. Uj and down, every where, or without any confinement to place.

D O Z

DOWN, [To go] to be digested; to be received.

To DOWN, v. a. to knock; to subdue; to suppress.

DOWN, interj. to fling a person on the ground, or make him fall by means of a blow; to demolish or destroy a building.

DO'WNFALL, [dōwnfaul] f. ruin, applied to buildings. Calamity, disgrace, or change from a state of dignity, affluence, and power, to one of indigence, misery, and disgrace.

DO'WNHAM, a town of Norfolk, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on the river Ouse, over which there is a bridge, and is noted for the prodigious quantity of butter that is brought hither, and sent to Cambridge up the Ouse, from whence it is conveyed in the Cambridge waggons to London, and generally known there by the name of Cambridge butter. It is 86 miles N. by E. of London.

DO'WNTON, or DU'NKTON, a town of Wiltshire, with a market on Fridays. It is seated on the river Avon, and is an ancient corporation, sending two members to parliament. It is 83 miles W. S. W. of London.

DO'WNLOOKED, a. with the eyes cast down or looking towards the ground, the natural expression of sorrow.

DO'WNRIGHT, [dōwnri] ad. straight down; in a straight or perpendicular line; in plain terms; completely. Without any dissimulation, flattery, or ceremony.

DO'WNRIGHT, [dōwnri] a. plain; open; professed; without disguise or dissimulation; directly tending to the point; without circumlocution; artless; without ceremony; honestly; surlily.

DO'WNSITTING, the act of going to rest, alluding to the eastern custom of lying on the ground; rest; repose.

DO'WNWARD, or DO'WNWARDS, ad. [dunweard, Sax.] towards the center, or towards the ground; from a higher to a lower situation. In a course of succession from father to son, &c. applied to descent or genealogy.

DO'WNWARD, a. moving from a higher to a lower situation; declining; bending, or sloping towards the ground.

DO'WNY, a. covered with soft and short feathers, or with a nap; made of soft feathers or down; soft; tender; soothing.

DO'WRY, f. is properly the money or fortune which a wife brings to her husband in marriage; and differs from dower.

DOXO'LOGY, f. [δῶξα and λόγος, Gr.] a short verse or sentence, including praise and thanksgiving to God; such as "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost."

DO'XY, f. a strumpet; a prostitute.

To DO'ZE, v. n. [zōz, Sax.] to slumber; to be listless; to be in a state of sleepiness; to be stupid; or make dull.

DO'ZENS, [dōzain. Fr.] a collection of twelve things, or persons.

DO'ZINES

DOZINESS, f. sleepiness, drowsiness; a strong inclination or propensity to sleep.

DOZY, a. inclined to sleep, drowsy, sleepy.

DRAB, f. [drabbe, Sax.] a common prostitute, a loose or unchaste woman; a thick cloth made of wool.

DRACHM, [dram] f. [drachma, Lat.] an ancient silver coin worth about seven pence three farthings sterling; the 16th part of an ounce Avoirdupois weight. Among Apothecaries the 8th part of an ounce, weighing either three scruples or 60 grains. An ancient Jewish coin, having on one side a harp, and on the reverse a bunch of grapes, called by the Jews half a shekel, but by the Greeks a drachm.

DRACUNCULUS, f. [Lat.] a worm breeding between the skin and the flesh in hot countries, and reported to grow to the length of several yards.

DRAFFY, a. abounding in dregs or sediments. Figuratively, worthless, or only fit to be flung away.

DRAFT, f. See DRAUGHT.

DRAFT, a. a corruption of DRAUGHT.

To DRAG, v. a. [dragan, Sax.] to pull along the ground by main force; to draw along contemptuously, and as unworthy any notice; to pull along with violence. Neuterly, to hang so low as to trail upon the ground.

DRAG, f. [drag, Sax.] an instrument with hooks, used to catch hold of things under water.

To DRA'GGLE, v. a. to make dirty by trailing along the ground. Neuterly, to grow or become dirty by drawing along the ground.

DRA'G-NET, f. a net which is drawn along the bottom of the water.

DRA'GON, f. [dragon, Fr.] a serpent, whether real or imaginary, supposed to be furnished with wings, and to grow to an enormous size. Figuratively, one of a fierce and violent temper.

DRA'GON'S BLOOD, f. a moderately heavy resin, of which there are two kinds; the one firm and compact, brought to us in small leaves, wrapped up in long and narrow leaves, and are called the Drops or Tears of Dragon's Blood. The other is brought in larger masses or cakes of an irregular figure; this is less compact, less pure, and of a much less value than the other. The genuine Dragon's Blood is the fruit of a tall tree of the palm kind, common in the island of Java, and some other parts of the East Indies.

DRA'GOON, f. [dragen, Teut.] a soldier who serves both on foot and horseback.

To DRAIN, v. a. [trainer, Fr.] to draw off water or other fluids gradually; to empty a vessel by gradually drawing off what it contains; to dry, by setting in such a posture or position as the fluid must necessarily run out.

DRAIN, f. a channel through which waters are gradually exhausted or drawn; a watercourse; a sluice.

DRAKE, f. [dreck, Belg.] a water-fowl, the male of a duck. A small piece of cannon.

DRAM, f. in Weight, the eighth part of an ounce. Such a quantity of distilled or spirituous liquors as is usually drank at once. Spirituous liquors.

DRA'MA, f. [δραμα, Gr.] a poem accommodated to action; in which the action is not related, but represented; and in which therefore such rules are to be observed as make the representation probable. The principal species of the drama are two, comedy and tragedy. Some others there are of less note; as pastoral, satire, tragi-comedy, opera, &c.

DRAMA'TIC, or DRAMATICAL, a. represented by action or on the stage.

DRAMA'TICALLY, ad. after the manner of a poem acted on the stage.

DRA'MATIST, f. the author or composer of a dramatic piece acted on the stage.

DRA'PER, f. one who sells either linen or woollen cloth.

DRA'PERY, f. the trade or art of making cloth; cloth made either of linen or woollen. In Painting and Sculpture, the representation of the garments or cloathing of any figure.

DRA'STIC, a. powerful, vigorous, efficacious. In Medicine, a remedy which works soon or with speed.

DRAUGHT, f. [pronounced and corruptly written droff] refuse; swill; a scum of a pot; pot-liquor, or the liquor given to hogs.

DRAUGHT, [drafi] f. [dragbt, Belg.] the act of drinking. A quantity of liquor drank at once. Liquor drank for pleasure. The action of moving or dragging carriages. The quality of being drawn or moved by pulling. The representation of a person or thing by painting. A sketch or plan of some building or picture. A picture. In Fishing, the act of catching fish by a drag-net. The act of drawing or shooting a bow. In War, forces drawn off from the main army. A sink or drain. The depth which a vessel sinks into the water. In Commerce, a bill drawn by one person on another for money. In the plural, a game played on a chequered table, with round pieces of box and ebony.

To DRAW, v. a. [preter, drew; partic. pass. drawn] [dragan, Sax.] to pull along upon the ground from one place to another. To pull up, or raise from a deep place. To drag. To suck. To attract; to draw towards itself. To breathe, or inhale, applied to air. To take from a cask or vessel. To pull a sword out of the scabbard; to unsheath. To take bread out of an oven. To unclose, if close before, but to close together, if open, applied to curtains. To let out any liquid. To extract. To convey secretly. To protract or lengthen. To derive. To deduce as from postulates. In Painting, to represent the likeness of any person or thing, either by a pencil, pen, or colours. To

To imply, infer, or introduce a consequence. To induce or persuade. To win; to gain. To receive; to take up. To extort; to force. To writ; to distort. To entice; to seduce, to inveigle; to prevail on by fondness, used with in. In Commerce, to address a bill for a sum of money to a person. In Military Affairs, to detach or separate from the main body; to prepare for action; to range in battle array. To draw up, to form in writing; to compose. To contract or shrink. To draw back, to retreat or retire; to retract a design, or decline an undertaking. To draw off, to extract by distillation; to drain out by a vent; to decline an engagement or make a retreat. In Cookery, to disembowel; to take out the guts of poultry.

DRAW, f. the act of drawing; the lot or chance taken or drawn.

DRAWBACK, f. money paid back or abated for ready payment. Figuratively, a deduction, or diminution of the value or qualities of a thing. In Commerce, certain duties either of the customs or excise, allowed upon the exportation of some of our own manufactures, or on foreign merchandizes that have paid a duty on importation.

DRAWBRIDGE, f. a bridge moving on hinges, and by means of chains lifted up or let down at pleasure, in order to preserve or destroy the communication between two places, or a country and some fort.

DRAWWER, f. applied to persons, one employed in fetching water from a well, or cask. In public houses, one who draws liquors from casks. One who forms the resemblance of a person on paper or canvas, with a pen, pencil, or brush. Applied to things, that which has the power of attracting towards itself. In Surgery, that which discharges humours. A box which slides in a groove or case.

DRAWWING, f. the act of taking or forming the likeness of a thing or person with a pen or pencil; a picture drawn or formed with a pen or pencil.

DRAWING-ROOM, f. a room to which company retire after an entertainment; a room set apart for the reception of company at court. Figuratively, the persons or company assembled in a drawing-room.

DRAWWELL, f. a well out of which water is raised by means of a bucket and rope.

To DRAWL, v. n. to pronounce one's words with a slow, disagreeable whine.

DRAY, or DRA'Y-CART, f. a low cart, used by brewers to convey their beer.

DRA'Y-MAN, f. one who drives a dray.

DRA'Y-PLOUGH, [dray-plow] f. a plough resembling a dray.

DRA'YTON, a town of Shropshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It has a good market for hories and cattle. It is 17 miles E. by N. of Shrewsbury, and 154 N. W. of London.

DRA'ZEL, f. a fluttish, mean, dirty woman.

DREAD, [dred] f. [dread, Sax.] terror, or fear; the sensation, occasioned by the sight of some terrible or dangerous object; awful or venerable in the highest degree.

To DREAD, [dred] v. a. [dreadan, Sax.] to fear to an excessive degree.

DREA'DER, [dredder] f. one who lives in continual fear or apprehension of some danger.

DREA'DFUL, [dredful] a. causing excessive fear; frightful.

DREA'DFULLY, [dredfully] ad. in such a manner as to cause fear or terror.

DREA'DFULNESS, [dredfulness] f. that quality which causes excessive fear or terror.

DREA'DLESS, [dredless] a. void of fear; undaunted.

DREA'DLESSNESS, [dredlessness] f. a disposition of mind that is void of fear; intrepidity; undauntedness.

DREAM, [dream] f. [droom, Belg.] the images which appear to the mind during sleep. Figuratively, a chimera; a groundless fancy, or conceit, which has no existence but in the imagination.

To DREAM, [dream] v. n. to have ideas in the mind, while the outward senses are stopped during sleep, which are neither suggested by any external object or known occasion, nor are under the rule of the understanding; to think, to imagine, to fancy, without reason.

DREAMER, [dreemer] f. one who perceives things during sleep, without the suggestion of external objects; a person fond of conceits; a fanciful man.

DREAMLESS, [dreamless] a. without dreams.

DREAR, [dreer] a. [dreorig, Sax.] affecting with melancholy; mournful.

DRE'ARY, [dreery] a. [dreorig, Sax.] full of sorrow, or mournful, applied to persons. Gloomy, dismal, or affecting with melancholy, applied to places.

DREDGE, f. a thick strong net, fastened to three spalls of iron, and drawn at a boat's stern, gathering whatever it meets with at the bottom of the water, used for catching oysters, and is a species of the drag-net.

To DREDGE, v. a. to fish with a dredge. In Cookery, to strew flour over meat while roasting.

DRE'DGER, f. one who fishes with a dredge; a box with small holes at the top, used for strewing flour on meat when roasting.

DRE'GGINESS, [drig-iness] f. fullness of lees or dregs. Foulness, applied to liquor; abounding with a rosy sediment.

DRE'GGISH, [drig-ish] ad. abounding with lees or sediment.

DRE'GGY, [drig-y] a. muddy, foul, full of sediment.

DREGS, f. [it has no singular] [dregten, Sax.] the bottom, lees, or foul part of any liquor. Figuratively, the refuse, sweeping, or worthless part of any thing; the dross or meanest part of a people.

To DRENCH, v. a. [drenchan, Sax.] to soak soak or bathe; to plunge all over in some liquor; to wash; to steep; to moisten; or make very wet; to administer physic by violence.

DRENCH, f. a draught, or swill, used by way of contempt; a potion, or drink prepared of several physical ingredients for a sick horse; physic which must be given by force.

DRENCHER, f. one who dips or soaks any thing; one who administers physic by force.

DRESDEN, a town of Germany, and capital of Saxony, where the elector always resides. It is divided by the river Elbe into the Old and New Towns, which are joined together by a bridge supported by nineteen piers, and is 685 paces long. Both towns are surrounded with strong fortifications. All the houses are built of square free-stone, and are almost all of the same height. The situation of this city is but low, and yet there is a fine prospect all around it. It is 75 miles N. W. of Prague. Lon. 13. 33. E. lat. 51. 12. N.

DRESS, v. a. [dresser, Fr.] to put on cloaths; to adorn, deck, or set out with cloaths. Figuratively, to cloath, or represent in a favourable light. In Surgery, to apply a plaster or other remedy to a wound. To curry, or rub, applied to horses. To rectify; to adjust. To trim, applied to lamps. To prepare victuals fit for eating, applied to cookery. To curl, to comb out, or otherwise adorn hair or perukes.

DRESS, f. that which a person wears to cover his body from the inclemency of the weather; cloaths, or splendid attire; the skill or taste in choosing or wearing cloaths.

DRESSER, f. one employed in putting on a person's cloaths; a broad and long kind of a table or shelf, in a kitchen, used to prepare victuals.

DRESSING, f. in Surgery, the plaster or other remedy, applied to a fore.

DRI'BBLE, v. n. by successive alterations from drip, of dripan, Sax.] to fall in drops. To let the spittle fall from one's mouth; to slaver like an infant, or an idiot. Actively, to throw down, or scatter in drops.

DRI'BLET, f. a small sum of money.

DRI'ER, f. in Medicine, that which has the quality of absorbing moisture.

DRI'FIELD, a village in the East Riding of Yorkshire, 195 miles from London.

DRIFT, f. the force which impels or drives a person or thing; violence; course; a raft, or any thing driven at random, or in a body; a stratum, layer, or covering of any matter blown together by the wind. A snow-drift, i. e. a deep body of snow. The tendency, or particular design of an action; the scope or tenor of a discourse.

To DRIFT, v. a. to drive or force along; to throw together on heaps; to amass.

To DRILL, v. a. [drillen, Belg.] to make a hole with an auger, gimblet, or drill; to bore; to drain, or make its passage through small holes or interstices.

DRILL, f. an instrument used to bore holes in wood, iron, or brass.

To DRINK, v. n. [preter drank, or drunk, participle passive, drunk, or drunken] [drincan, Sax.] to swallow liquors. Figuratively, to swallow an immoderate quantity of liquors. To drink so, to falst in drinking; to wish well in drinking. Figuratively, to suck up, or absorb. To hear; to see.

DRINK, f. liquor to be swallowed, opposed to meat, or solid food; any particular kind of liquor.

DRINKABLE, a. that which may be drank.

DRINKER, f. one who is fond of swallowing quantities of intoxicating liquors

DRINK-MONEY, f. money given to regale a person with, by purchasing liquors.

To DRIP, v. n. [drippen, Belg.] to fall in drops. To let fall in drops, applied to the fat which falls from meat while roasting. Actively, to let fall in drops, to drop as fat in roasting.

DRIP, f. that which falls in drops.

DRIP'PING, f. the fat which drops from meat while roasting, called also kitchen-stuff.

To DRIVE, v. a. [preter drove, particip. pass. driven, or drove] [drifan, Sax.] to make a person or thing move by violence; to send to any place by force; to convey animals, or make them walk from one place to another; to compel; to enforce, or push home a proof or argument. To distress; to straiten. To drive trade, to carry it on. To conduct a carriage. To let drive at, to intend; to mean; to endeavour to accomplish; to aim, or strike at with fury. To purify by motion.

To DRIV'EL, v. n. [a corruption from dribble] to let the spittle fall out of one's mouth like an infant or idiot.

DRIV'EL, f. slaver, spittle, or moisture dropped from the mouth.

DRIV'ELLER, f. a fool or idiot, so called from their letting the slaver drop from their mouths.

DRIV'ELLING, part. doating; weak in the understanding; foolish.

DRIV'ER, f. the person or thing which communicates motion by force; one who guides and conveys beasts from one place to another; one who manages and guides the cattle which draw any carriage.

To DRIZ'ZLE, v. a. [drifelen, Teut.] to shed in small drops, or a wet mist, like dew. Neuterly, to let fall in small slow drops.

DRIZ'ZLY, a. descending in small, slow drops; descending in a mist; resembling a mist, or moist vapour.

DROITWICH, a town of Worcestershire, with a market on Fridays. It is seated on the river Salwarp, and is of great note for its salt pits, from whence they make fine white salt. It is 118½ miles W. N. W. of London.

DROLE, a. [drble, Fr.] comical; exciting laughter.

DROLE, or DROLL, f. [droler, Fr.] a person whose business and employ it is to raise mirth by antic gestures, or comical jests; a merry-merry-andrew, or jack-pudding; a farce, composed to excite laughter.

To DROLL, v. n. to play the buffoon.

DRO'LLERY, f. jeit; ridicule; or an endeavour to make a thing the object of mirth, ridicule, or laughter.

DRO'MEDARY, f. [from δρομος, Gr.] In Natural History, a sort of camel, said to travel 100 miles a day. It is smaller, slenderer, and nimbler than the common camel, having either one or two hairy excrescences on its back, and is capable of great fatigue. Its hair is soft and short; it has no fangs or fore-teeth, nor horn on its feet, which are covered with a fleshy skin; it is about seven feet and a half high, from the ground to the top of its head.

DRONE, f. the male bee which hatches the young, makes no honey, has no sting, and is driven from the hive when the hatching time is over. Figuratively, an inactive, useless, or sluggish person.

To DRONE, v. n. to live an inactive, useless, and dull life, like that of a drone.

DRO'NFIELD, a pretty market-town in Derbyshire, seated in a bottom, with a market on Thursdays, and a free school. It is 15.5 miles N. N. W. of London.

DRO'NISH, a. like a drone; useless; sluggish and inactive.

To DROOP, v. n. [droef, Belg.] to languish with sorrow; to hang down the head with sorrow. Figuratively, to grow faint, weak, or dispirited; to sink; to lean downwards; to decline, beautifully applied by Milton.

DROP, f. [droppa, Sax.] a small portion or particle of water, or other fluid in a spherical form; as much liquor as falls at once when there is not a continued stream; a diamond hanging loose from the ear; so called from its resembling the form of a drop of any fluid in its descent. Drops, the plural, in Architecture, are ornaments in the Doric entablature, representing drops, or little bells, immediately under the triglyphs. In Phycic, any spirituous medicine to be taken in drops.

To DROP, v. a. [droppan, Sax.] to pour in small round particles; to let fall; to let go; to let a thing fall from the hand; to utter slightly, or without caution; to insert or introduce by way of digression; to intermit, cease, or decline; to lose in its progress; to bedrop, or speckle. Neuterly, to fall in separate particles of a roundish form; to let drops fall; to consume in drops; to fall, or come from a higher to a lower situation; to fall without violence; to die suddenly. To drop in, to come unexpectedly by.

DRO'PPING, f. any liquor which has fallen in drops.

DROP-SERE'NE, f. [gutta serena, Lat.] In Phycic, a disease of the eye, consisting of an entire loss of sight, without any apparent fault or disorder of the part.

DRO'PSIED, part. affected with a dropsey.

DROP-STONE, f. a spar formed into the shape of a drop.

DRO'PSY, f. [anciently wrote hydrpsisy, whence dropisy, or dropisy] [hydrpsis, Lat.] in Phycic, a preternatural collection or extravasation of aqueous serum or water in any part of the body, which greatly distends the vessels, is attended with a weakness of digestion, and a continual thirst.

DROSS, f. [droes, Sax.] the scum, sediment, or gross parts of any metal; the crust or ruff of a metal. Figuratively, the refuse or most worthless part of any thing.

DRO'SSINESS, f. the impurity of metals; foulness; ruff.

DRO'SSY, a. full of impurities, foulness, or impure particles. Figuratively, as worthless as dross.

DROVE, f. a number of cattle under the guidance of one or more persons, any collection of animals. Figuratively, a great crowd or multitude.

DRO'VER, f. one who fats cattle for sale, and sends them to market.

DROUGHT, [drou] f. [drugode, Sax.] applied to the weather, dry weather, want of rain; thirst, or great want or desire of drink.

DROU'GHTINESS, [drouinisi] f. the state of a soil which wants rain; the state of a person affected with thirst.

DROU'GHTY, [droudy] a. wanting rain; parched with heat; thirsty, or wanting drink.

To DROWN, v. a. [drunenian, Sax.] to plunge and suffocate under water; to plunge, or overwhelm in water; to overflow, or cover with water. Figuratively, to immerge, plunge in, or overwhelm with any thing; to die, or be suffocated under the water.

To DROWSE, [drouze] v. a. [droofen, Belg.] to make heavy with, or strongly inclined to, sleep. Neuterly, to sleep.

DRO'WSINESS, [drouzinesi] f. a strong propensity and inclination to sleep. Figuratively, slothfulness, or inactivity.

DRO'WSY, [drouzy] a. strongly inclined to sleep; heavy with sleep. Figuratively, causing sleep, dull, or stupid.

To DRUB, v. a. [druber, Dan.] to beat soundly with a stick; to thresh, thump, or cudgel. A word of contempt.

DRUB, f. a thump, knock, or blow; a sound beating.

To DRUDGE, v. n. [drughen, Sax.] to work hard at mean and servile employments; to slave.

DRUDGE, f. one employed in mean, hard, and fatiguing labour; a mere slave.

DRU'DG'ERY, f. low, mean, servile, hard, and fatiguing labour.

DRU'DG'INGLY, ad. in a laborious, fatiguing, and toilsome manner.

DRUG, f. [drogue, Fr.] an ingredient used in phycic or dying. Figuratively, any thing of small or no value.

To DRUG, v. a. to mix with physical ingredients; to taint with something disagreeable.

DRU'GGERMAN, f. [druguman, Fr.] in Commerce, a name given in the Levant to the the interpreters kept by the ambassadors of the Christian nations residing at the Porte, to assist them in their treaties.

DRUGGET, f. in Commerce, a sort of thin stuff, sometimes all wool, sometimes half wool, half thread, and sometimes corded, but usually plain, and wove on a worsted chain.

DRUGGIST, f. one who sells physical ingredients by wholesale.

DRUID, f. [derio, Sax.] the priests and ministers of religion amongst the Britons, Celtic Gauls, and Germans. They were in Britain the first and most distinguished order in the island, chosen out of the best families; and the honours of their birth, added to those of their function, procured them the highest veneration. They were versed in astronomy, geometry, natural philosophy, politics, and geography; had the administration of all sacred things; were the interpreters of the gods, and supreme judges in all causes, whether ecclesiastic or civil. From their determination was no appeal; and whoever refused to acquiesce in their decisions, was reckoned impious, and excommunicated. They were generally governed by a single person, called an Arch-druid, who presided in all their assemblies. Once a year they used to retire, or rather assemble, in a wood, in the center of the island, at which time they used to receive applications from all parts, and hear causes. Their peculiar opinions are not well ascertained by writers, though it is agreed by all, that they held the immortality of the soul, and its transmigration; that nothing could appease the gods more powerfully than human sacrifices; and that there was one supreme Deity, who presided over all others.

DRUM, f. [drumme, Erfc.] a warlike instrument made of thin pieces of oak, bent in a cylindrical form, covered at each end with vellum, or parchment, which stretches by means of braces running from one extremity to the other; and made to sound by beating one of the ends with sticks generally made of brass wood. Kettle-drum is that whose body is made of brass or copper, in the form of a kettle, and covered at the top with parchment like the common one. The drum of the ear, is a small membrane in the inner part of that organ, which is so stretched as to convey the sensation of sound, by the vibration which sounding bodies cause upon it.

To DRUM, v. n. to beat a march, &c. on a drum with a stick. To beat, or vibrate, applied to the motion of the heart.

DRUM-MAJOR, f. the chief drummer of a regiment. Every regiment has a drum-major, who has the command over the other drums. They are distinguished from the soldiers by cloaths of a different fashion: when the battalion is drawn up, their post is on the flanks; and on a march, between the divisions.

DRUMMER, f. he that beats the drum; every company of foot has one, and sometimes two.

DRUNK, a. [from Drink] intoxicated, or deprived of the use of the understanding, by immoderate drinking. Figuratively, soaked; beautifully applied to inanimate things. SYNON. Half a pint of wine will make some men drunk, when others shall drink a gallon without being the least fuddled. Good success will sometimes so intoxicate a person as to take him off from his business, and render him disagreeable to all his acquaintance.

DRUNKARD, f. one given to the excessive use of strong liquors.

DRUNKEN, part. [from Drink] intoxicated with liquor; given to habitual drunkenness; frequently intoxicated with liquor.

DRUNKENLY, ad. after the manner of one intoxicated with strong liquors.

DRUNKENNESS, f. intoxication, or ebriety; the habit of getting drunk. Figuratively, an intoxication or disorder of the mind. PROV. What jobberness conceals, drunkenness reveals.—He that kills a man when he is drunk, must be hanged when he is sober.

DRY, a. [drig, Sax.] without wet or moisture. Without rain, applied to the seasons. Thirsty, or a thirst for want of drink. Figuratively, barren; plain; hard; acrid; severe.

To DRY, v. a. to free from, or exhale moisture or wet; to wipe away moisture, used with up; to drain; to drink up. Neuterly, to grow dry.

DRYADES, in the Heathen Mythology, were a sort of deities or nymphs, which the ancients thought inhabited groves or woods. They differed from the Hamadryades; these last being attached to some particular tree, wherewith they were born, and with which they died; whereas the Dryades were the goddesses of trees and woods in general.

DRY-EYED, a. without tears; without having the eyes moistened with tears.

DRY'LY, ad. without moisture. Figuratively, in a cold or indifferent manner. With great reserve, applied to treatment or behaviour; in a sarcastical or ironical manner. Without any embellishment, applied to style.

DRY'NESS, f. want of moisture; want of rain; want of juice. Figuratively, want of embellishment, applied to style, or set discourses.

DRY'-NURSE, f. one who brings up a child without suckling.

To DRY'-NURSE, v. a. to bring up an infant without suckling.

DRY'SHOD, a. without wetting the feet; without treading in the water above the shoes.

DU'AL, a. [dualis, Lat.] expressing or including only two. In the Hebrew, or Greek language, a variation of a noun which only signifies two, a distinction which the modern languages seem deficient in.

To DUB, v. a. [addubba till riddara, Icelandic, to dub a knight. Addubba, in its primary signification, implies to strike, knights being made by a blow given with a sword] to create or make a man a knight; to confer any title or dignity.

DUB, f. a blow, or knock.
 DU'BIUS, a. [dubius, Lat.] not settled in an opinion, applied to persons. Not fully proved, or that which has equal probability on either side, applied to opinions.

DU'BIOSLY, ad. in such a manner as will admit of different senses.

DU'BIOSNESS, f. uncertainty.

DU'BITABLE, a. that which may be questioned or doubted; that which a person may decline assenting to.

DU'BITATION, f. [dubitatio, Lat.] the act of doubting, or questioning the truth of a thing.

DU'BLIN, the capital of Ireland, in the county of the same name, and province of Leinster. It is a rich, handsome, and populous city, with an archbishop's see, a parliament, and an university; and is the same for Ireland, as London is for England; and the buildings are daily increasing in the same manner; it being the residence of the Viceroy or Lord-Lieutenant. The compass of the walls is not great; but it has four large suburbs, the principal of which is Oxmanton or Oxmanby, to the N. of the river Liffy, and joined to the city by a bridge. The cathedral-church, called St Patrick's, lies in the S. suburb, and is very ancient and handsome; besides which there are about 12 more. The college, or university, is in the E. suburb, and was founded by Q. Elizabeth in 1591, and contains about 600 students. Dublin is seated in view of the sea on one side, and a fine country on the other, and would have had a commodious and secure harbour, if the mouth had not been so choaked up, that vessels of burthen cannot come to the town. It is seated on the river Liffy, 60 miles W. of Holyhead, in Wales, and 330 N. W. of London.

DU'CAL, a. belonging to a duke.

DU'CAT, f. [so called because struck in the dominions of a Duke] a foreign coin, current on the continent; when of silver, valued at four shillings and six-pence, but when of gold, at nine shillings and six-pence.

DUCATO'ON, f. a foreign coin struck chiefly in Italy; when of silver, valued at four shillings and eight-pence sterling; and in gold, which is current in Holland, is worth about one pound nineteen shillings and two-pence.

DUCK, f. [ducken, Belg.] a water-fowl, both wild and tame. Figuratively, used as a word of great fondness and endearment. "My dainty duck." Sbat. A sudden bending down, or declining of the head.

To DUCK, v. n. to plunge one's head or dive under water; to drop down one's head; to bow low; to cringe; to make obeisance. To plunge a person under water by way of punishment.

DU'CKING, f. the plunging or dipping a person in water; a punishment inflicted by the mob on a pickpocket. At sea, it is a way of punishing offenders, by binding the male-factor with a rope to the end of the yard, from whence he is violently let down into the sea once, twice, or thrice, according to his offence, which, if it be very great, he is drawn underneath the keel of the ship, which they call keel-hauling.

DU'CKING-STOOL, f. a chair in which women are plunged under water for scolding.

DU'CK-LEGGED, a. having legs like a duck; having short legs.

DU'CKLING, f. a young duck.

DUCT, f. [ductus, Lat.] guidance or direction. In Anatomy, any canal, or tube in an animal body, through which the humours or fluids are conveyed.

DU'CTILE, a. [ductilis, Lat.] easy to be bent; easy to be drawn out in length. Tractable, complying, or yielding, applied to the mind.

DU'CTILENESS, f. the quality of being drawn out in length.

DUCTILITY, f. in Physics, a property of certain bodies, whereby they become capable of being pressed, beaten, stretched, or drawn out to a great length without breaking. Tractableness, compliance, applied to the mind, or to persons.

DU'DGEON, f. [dolch, Teut.] a small dagger. "On the blade of thy dudgeon." Sbat. Quarrel, ill-will, malice, jars, or commotions; from dolg, Sax. a wound.

DU'DLEY, a town in Worcestershire, with a considerable market on Saturdays for provisions. The inhabitants have a great manufacture for nails and other iron wares; and there are two churches placed at each end of the longest street. It is 120 miles N. W. of London.

DUE, [particip. pass. of owe] [dû, Fr.] that which a person has a right to demand as a debt, as stipulated in a compact, or otherwise; that which a person ought to pay, or which a thing might lay claim to.

DUE, ad. among Sailors, directly, exactly, without turning aside.

DUE, f. that which belongs to, or may be claimed by a person; right; just title to a thing. In the plural, custom, or taxes.

DU'EL, f. [duellum, Lat.] is a single combat at a time and place appointed, in consequence of a challenge; it must be premeditated, otherwise it is called a renewancer. If a person be killed in a duel, both the principal and the seconds are guilty of murder, whether the seconds entree or not.

To DU'EL, v. n. to fight in single combat. Actively, to attack, or fight with singly.

L'U'ELLER, f. one who engages another in single combat.

DUE'NNA, f. [Span.] an old woman, kept as a domestic in Spain, in order to pry into the actions, or to take care of the conduct, of a young lady.

DUE'T, f. a term in Music for a song or air composed for two voices or instruments.

DUG, f. [duggias, It.] a pap, nipple, or teat, generally applied to that of a beast; and to that of a human creature only by way of reproach.

proach and contempt; though formerly it was applied to a human creature in a good sense.

DUKE, f. [dux, Lat.] is either the title of a sovereign prince, as the Duke of Savoy, Parma, &c. the Grand Duke of Tuscany, Mucocoy, &c. or it is the title of honour and nobility next below princes. The commanders of armies in time of war, the governors of provinces, and wardens of marches, in times of peace, were called Duces, under the latter emperors. At present, Duke is a mere title of dignity, without giving any domain, or territory, or conferring jurisdiction over the place from whence the title is taken. A duke is created by patent, enclature of sword, mantle of state, imposition of a cap, and coronet of gold on his head, and a verge of gold put into his hand. His title is Grace; and in the stile of the heralds, most high, potent, high-born, and noble prince. Their eldest sons are, by the courtesy of England, stiled marquises, and their youngest lords, with the addition of their christian names, as Lord George, Lord Robert, &c. and take place of viscounts, though not so privileged by the laws of the land.

DUKEDOM, f. the dominion of a duke.

DULBRAINED, a. slow of apprehension; stupid; wanting sagacity.

DULCET, a. [dulcis, Lat.] sweet to the taste; agreeable to the ear.

DULCIFICATION, f. in Pharmacy, the sweetening or rendering insipid any matter impregnated with salts, by washing it often in water; the act of rendering any thing which is acid, sweet, by mixing it with sugar.

TO DULCIFY, v. a. [dulcifer, Fr.] to sweeten, to free from salts, sourness, or acrimony of any sort.

DULCIMER, f. [dulcimello, Ital.] a musical instrument, strung with wires, resembling a harpichord, and played on with iron or brass plectra.

TO DULCORATE, v. a. [dulcis, Lat.] to sweeten; to render less acrimonious.

DULCORATION, f. the act of sweetening.

DULL, a. [dwl, Brit.] slow of apprehension, applied to the understanding. Blunt, applied to the edge of any instrument. Not quick, or not easily perceiving objects, applied to the senses. Slow, applied to motion. Not bright, or wanting vigour. Drowsy, sleepy, or melancholy.

TO DULL, v. a. to blunt the edge of an instrument; to sully the brightness of some shining body; to make a person sad or melancholy; to damp vigour; to stop, or retard motion.

DULLIARD, f. a person of slow apprehension; a blockhead.

DULLY, ad. in a stupid or foolish manner; in a slow, sluggish, or melancholy manner.

DULNESS, f. weakness of understanding; slowness of apprehension; drowsiness; or strong propensity to sleep. Dimness, or want of lustre, applied to the change made in a shining body. Bluntness, or want of edge, applied to instruments.

DULVERTON, a town of Somersetshire, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated on a branch of the river Ex, and 164 miles W. by S. of London.

DULY, ad. in such a manner as a thing or person might claim; properly; fitly; regularly; punctually.

DUMB, [dum, Sax.] mute; not able to speak; deprived of speech; not using words; refusing to speak.

DUMBAR'TON, the shire of. See LENNOX.

DUMBAR'TON, the capital town of a shire of the same name, in Scotland, seated at the confluence of the rivers Leven and Clyde, fifteen miles N. W. of Glasgow. It was once considerable for its trade, which is now much decayed; but is still remarkable for its cattle, which is thought to be one of the strongest in Europe.

TO DUMBFOUND, [dumfound] v. a. to confuse a person so as to render him unable to speak. A low word.

DUMBLA'IN, a town of Scotland, in the shire of Monteth, remarkable for a battle commonly called the battle of Sheriff-Moor, between the Duke of Argyle and the rebels, commanded by the earl of Mar, in 1715, and in which the latter were defeated. It is 30 miles N. W. of Edinburgh.

DUMBLY, [dimly] ad. mutely; silently; without speaking.

DUMBNESS, [dumness] f. incapacity of speaking; forbearance; silence.

DUMFERMLING, a parliament town of Scotland, in the county of Fife. It was remarkable for its magnificent abbey, and a royal palace, in which King Charles I. was born. The ruins of the abbey are yet to be seen. It is 15 miles N. W. of Edinburgh.

DUMFRIES, the shire of, contains Nithsdale and Annandale, which see. It sends one member to parliament, and one for the burgh of Sanquhar, &c.

DUMFRIES, the capital of a county of the same name, in Scotland, seated between two hills on the river Nith, over which there is a handsome stone-bridge of 9 arches. It is a place of pretty good trade, 8 miles N. of Solway-Frith, and 30 W. N. W. of Carlisle.

DUMP, f. [dam, Belg.] sullen, and silent sorrow; melancholy; absence of mind; a piece of leaden coin or medal, with which children amuse themselves.

DUM'PISH, a. sad; silently and sullenly sorrowful; melancholy.

DUM'PLING, f. a kind of small and coarse pudding.

DUN, a. [dun, Sax.] a colour partaking of a mixture of brown and black; dark; gloomy.

TO DUN, v. a. [dunan, Sax.] to demand a debt with vehemence and frequent importunity.

DUN, f. one who asks a person for a debt with a clamour, and incessant importunity.

DUNBAR, a town of Scotland, in the shire of East-Lothian, seated near the German Sea, where there is a good harbour, which was formerly formerly defended by a castle built on a rock, whose ruins are still remaining. It is remarkable for a victory gained here by Cromwell over the Scots in 1650. It is 25 miles E. of Edinburgh.

DUNCE, f. [dom, Belg.] one who has not a capacity for receiving instruction.

DUNDE'E, a town of Scotland, in the shire of Angus. It is a handsome town, with two churches, one of which has a very high steeple; and has a good harbour for ships of burthen. It is seated on the N. side of the frith of Tay, 14 miles N. W. of St. Andrew's.

DUNDRY, a village in Somersetshire, 5 miles S. W. of Britol.

DUNG, f. [dineg, Sax.] the excrement of animals used in manure, or in fattening ground.

To DUNG, v. a. to manure with dung.

DUNGEON, f. [donjon, Fr.] a close prison, generally applied to a dark or subterraneous one.

DUNGHILL, f. a heap of dung. Figuratively, any mean or vile abode; a situation a meanness; a man descended from mean parentage; a cock of a spurious and degenerate kind, not fit for fighting.

DUNGHILL, a. sprung from the dunghill. Figuratively, mean, base, or worthless.

DUNGY, a. abounding in dung, resembling dung.

DUNHO'LM, a village in Nottinghamshire, 6 miles E. of Tuxford.

DUNKE'LD, a town of Scotland, in the shire of Perth; formerly a bishop's see, but the cathedral is now half ruined. It is seated on the river Tay, at the foot of mount Grampus, 12 miles N. of Perth.

DUNNER, f. a person employed in collecting petty debts, and making use of vehement importunity for that purpose.

DUNMO'W, a town of Essex, with a market on Saturdays. It is a pretty large town, pleasantly and commodiously situated on an easy ascent; and the market is good for corn and provisions. It is 40 miles N. E. of London.

DUODECIMO, f. [Lat.] a thing divided into twelve parts; hence a book is said to be in duodecimo when twelve of its leaves make just a sheet of paper.

DUNS, a town of Scotland, in the shire of Mers, of which it is the capital. It is a small place, seated at the foot of a mountain, and is remarkable for being the birth-place of Dunscoatus, called the Subtle Doctor. It is 12 miles W. of Berwick upon Tweed.

DUNSTABLE, a town of Bedfordshire, with a market on Wednesdays. It is seated on a hill, on a dry chalky ground. It has four streets which regard the four cardinal points; and is full of good inns, standing on the road from London to Chester. The church is the remainder of a priory, and opposite to it is a farm-house, which was once a royal palace. It is 33½ miles N. W. of London.

DUNSTER, a town of Somersetshire, with a market on Fridays. It is 158½ miles W. of London.

DU'NWICH, a town of Suffolk, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated at the top of a loofe cliff, and was formerly of good account, having been a bishop's see, but is now only the remains of a town, all but two parishes being swallowed up by the sea. However, it is a corporation, and sends two members to parliament. Their only business is fishing for herrings, mackerel, soles, sprats, and other sea-fish. It is 99 miles N. of London.

DUPE, f. [from duppe, a foolish bird that suffers itself to be caught] a credulous person, or one who is imposed on and deceived on account of his credulity.

To DUPE, v. a. to trick or cheat a person of too great credulity.

DU'PLE, a. [duplus, Lat.] double; the same thing or number repeated.

To DUPLICATE, v. a. [duplico, Lat.] to double; to increase, or enlarge by the repetition of the same number; to fold together.

DUPLICATE, a. in Arithmetic, applied to proportion, the ratio or proportion of squares.

DUPLICATE, f. the exact copy or counterpart of a letter, book, or deed; a thing of the same kind as another.

DUPLICATION, f. the act of doubling; the act of folding together; a fold or doubling.

DUPLICITY, f. [duplicitas, Lat.] doubleness; the division of things or ideas into pairs; the quality of being twice as much as another; deceit, or double-dealing, opposed to simplicity.

DURABILITY, f. [durabilitas, Lat.] the power of bearing the injuries of time and weather, without being destroyed; the property of lasting or continuing a long while.

DURABLE, a. [durabilis, Lat.] not easily destroyed by length of time, or violence of weather; lasting; permanent.

DURABLENESS, f. the property of continuing or lasting long.

DURABLY, ad. in a lasting manner.

DURANCE, f. [duressse, low Fr.] the state of a person confined in a prison; confinement; imprisonment; duration, or the length of time which any thing continues.

DURATION, f. [duratio, Lat.] distance or length, applied to time.

DURRESSE, f. [Fr.] hardship; imprisonment. In Law, a plea used by way of exception to a bond sealed to a person by one cast in prison at his suit, or otherwise hardly used.

DUR'HAM, the capital of the bishopric of Durham, with a market on Saturdays. It is a bishop's see, and pleasantly and commodiously seated on an easy ascent, and almost surrounded by the river Wear, over which there are two large stone bridges. It is surrounded by a wall, and has a castle, now the bishop's palace, seated on the highest part of the hill. It is a handsome and compact place, containing six parish churches, besides its cathedral, but the suburbs are straggling. It is well inhabited, supplied with commodities of all sorts, and beautified with handiome buildings, both public and private, particularly the cathedral, which is somewhat like Westminster-Abbey. Adjoining to this are the house, of the dean and prebends. It sends two members to parliament; is 14 miles S. of Newcastle, and 257 N. by W. of London.

supplied

DURHAM, a county in England, commonly called the Bishopric of Durham, thirty-five miles in length, and thirty-four in breadth; bounded on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by the river Teefe, which divides it from Yorkshire, on the W. by Cumberland and Westmoreland, and on the N. by Northumberland. It contains 113 parishes, and 9 market-towns. The air is good, but cold upon the hills on the N. and W. sides, which are very thinly inhabited, being generally barren. The eastern part is a good country, and pretty fruitful. The particular commodities are coal, iron, and lead; and the principal rivers are the Teefe, the Wear, the Tame, and the Tyne. It sends but two members to parliament, besides those for Durham.

DURSLEY, a town of Gloucestershire, with a market on Thursdays. It is seated near a branch of the river Severn, and formerly had a castle, now in ruins; is a pretty good place, and inhabited by clothiers; 18 miles S. W. of Gloucester, and 107½ W. of London.

DURING, part. [from dure] for the time any thing lasts; while any thing continues unaltered.

DUSK, a. [duster, Teut.] want of daylight; approaching to darkness; blackish; or of a dark colour.

DUSKISH, a. inclining to darkness; tending to blackness; dark-coloured.

DUSKISHLY, ad. darkly; in such a manner as to afford but little light.

DUSKY, a. tending to darkness. Tending to blackness, applied to colour. Figuratively, gloomy, sad, melancholy, applied to the mind.

DUST, f. [duft, Sax.] earth, or other matter reduced to small particles. Figuratively, the state of dissolution to which bodies are reduced after being long buried. A mean, low, and dejected state, alluding to the custom of the Jews, who, in the time of affliction, sat in the duft, and covered their heads with it likewise.

DUSTY, a. filled, coloured, covered, or spread with dust.

DUTCHESS, or DUCHESS, f. [duchesse, Fr.] the lady of a duke.

DUTCHY, or DUCHY, f. a territory which gives title to, or has a duke for its sovereign. Dutchy-court is that wherein all matters pertaining to the dutchy of Lancaster are decided by the decree of the Chancellor.

DUTEOUS, a. obedient; or performing those offices which parents or superiors can claim; obsequious, or complying; enjoined by, or arising from those relations a person stands in with respect to others.

DU'TIFUL, a. obedient; submissive to, or performing the offices due to parents or superiors; respectful; reverential.

DU'TIFULLY, ad. in an obedient, submissive, or respectful manner.

DU'TIFULNESS, f. obedience; submission to just authority; the act of performing the offices which flow from our relations as children or subjects; reverence; respect.

DU'TY, f. any action or course of actions, which flow from the relations we stand in to God or man; that which a man is bound to perform by any natural or legal obligation. In Commerce, a tax or custom paid for any commodity, and levied by the government. SYNON. Duty means something conscientious, and springs from law; obligation, something absolute in practice, and springs from custom. We are said to fail in our duty, and to dispense with an obligation.

DWARF, f. [dwerg, Sax.] a man below the common size or stature. In Gardening, a low fruit-tree, kept short by pruning.

To DWARF, v. a. in Botany, to hinder from growing to its natural size, by pruning; to lessen; to make little; to shorten.

DWARFISH, a. below the natural size; small; very short.

DWARFISHLY, ad. like a dwarf. DWARFISHNESS, f. shortness of stature; extreme lideness.

To DWELL, v. n. [preter dwelt, or dwelled; duala, old Teut. is to stay or delay; duelia, Ill. to stay in a place] to inhabit or live in a place, or house. Figuratively, to continue in a state or condition; to fix the eyes immovably on an object. To treat of in a copious manner; to continue long in speaking. SYNON. To live relates to the particular place where we inhabit; dwelt to the building in which we reside. We live in London, in Middlesex, in the country; we dwelt in a large house, a cottage, or a furnished lodging.

DWELLER, f. a person who resides constantly in a place; an inhabitant.

DWELLING, f. the place of a person's habitation, residence, or abode.

To DWINDLE, v. a. [dwinan, Sax.] to decrease, consume, or grow less by degrees.

DYE, f. a colour given to a thing; a stain.

To DYE, v. a. [deagan, Sax.] to tinge or colour a thing.

DY'ER, f. one who follows the trade of colouring silks, stuffs, &c.

DY'ING, part. [of die] expiring; giving up the ghost; giving a new colour.

DYNASTY, f. [δυναστία, Gr.] in History, a race or succession of kings in the same line; government; sovereignty.

DYSCRASY, f. [δυσκρασία, Gr.] an ill temperament, habit, mixture of the blood, or other fluids in an animal body.

DY'SENTERY, f. [δυσεντερία, Gr.] in Medicine, a looseness, wherein very ill humours are discharged by stool, attended with blood, blood.

DYSPEPSY, f. [δυσπεψία, Gr.] a bad digestion.

DY'SPHONY, f. [δυσφωνία, Gr.] a difficulty in speaking.

DYSPNOEA, f. [δυσπνοία, Gr.] a difficulty of breathing.

DY'SURY, f. [δυσουρία, Gr.] difficulty in making urine, or water.

E.

E, The fifth letter of the Alphabet, and the second vowel, has different pronunciations in most languages. In English, it has two sounds; long as scène, and short as mèn. E is the most frequent vowel in the English language; for it not only is used like the rest, in the beginning or end of words, but has the peculiar quality of lengthening the foregoing vowel, as cæn, cæne; mæn, mæne; gæp, gæpe; gläd, gläde; bröd, bröde; cbin, cbine; wibp, wibpe; tbîn, tbîne; näd, näde; sün, tüne; plüm, plüme. Yet it sometimes occurs final, where yet the foregoing vowel is not lengthened, as göne, knowledge, edge, give. Anciently, almost every word ended with e; as for can, canne, for year, yeare; for great, greate; for need, neede; for flock, stocke. Eu has the found of e long: the e is commonly lengthened rather by the immediate addition of a than by the apposition of e to the end of the word; as mæn, mæan; sell, seäl; mæt, mæat; nêt, nêat. As a numeral, E stands for 250. In Music, it denotes the tone e-la-mi. In the Calendar, it is the fifth of the Dominical letters. On the Compass, it makes the East point, as E. S. E. i. e. East South East. Among Writers or Authors, it stands for example, or exempli, as e. gr. exempli gratia, or for example.

EACH, [ecch] [pron.] [etc, Sax.] either of two; every one of any number. To each the correspondent word is other, whether it be used of two, or a greater number.

EAD, or ED, [Sax.] in compound words, and cadig in the simple, denote happiness or blessedness. Thus, Eadward, or Edward, is a happy preserver. Eadgar, happy power.

EA'GER, [éger] a. [eagor, Sax.] earnest, ardent, longing; impetuous; hot, or vehement of disposition; quick; busy. Keen; severe; biting, applied to the air. Brittle; inflexible, not ductile, when used by artists. Sharp, or sour, applied to the taste.

EA'GERLY, [égerly] ad. with great ardour of desire; impatiently; sharply; quickly.

EA'GERNESS, [égerne's] f. warmth of desire; impetuosity; quickness; an extreme longing, or impatience for the enjoyment of something.

EA'GLE, [égle] f. [aigle, Fr.] a bird of prey, which builds on the tops of mountains; is remarkable for the strength of its sight; and reckoned to be the king of the feathered race. It is used in heraldry, spread, to represent a prince of the Roman Empire. The standard of the ancient Romans.

EA'GLET, [égle't] f. [a diminutive of eagle] a young eagle.

EA'GRE, [éger] a. [æger, Run. the ocean] a tide swelling above another tide.

EA'LDERMAN, [élderman] f. [Sax.] the name of a Saxon Magistrate, the same as our Alderman; which see.

EAR, [eer] f. [earc, Sax.] the organ of hearing, or that part where animals receive the impreihon of sounds. In Music, a kind of peculiar and internal taste, whereby we are able to judge of the harmony of sounds. Used with about, it signifies the whole head or person. "The city beaten down about their ears." Knolles. Joined to up, all over, or entirely. "Up to the ears in love." L'E-strange. To lend an ear, to listen to with attention; to regard or favour. In Botany, a long string or cluster of flowers or seeds produced by certain plants. "An ear of corn." To fall together by the ears, to scuffle, to fight. To set together by the ears, to promote strife or quarrels.

To EAR, [eer] v. a. [erian, Sax.] to plow, or manure ground. Neuterly, to shoot into ears.

EA'RED, [éred] part. having ears, or handles; having ears, or ripe corn.

EARL, [erl] f. [eorl, Sax.] a title of the third rank among the nobility, though anciently the highest in the nation. Earl marshal of England is a great officer, who anciently had several courts under his jurisdiction; as the court of chivalry, and the court of honour. Under him also is the herald's office, or college of arms. He has some pre-eminence in the court of Marshalsea, where he may sit in judgment against those who offend within the verge of the king's court. This office has for several ages been hereditary in the most noble family of Howard.

EA'RLDOM, [érl-dom] f. the jurisdiction of an earl, or county from whence an earl receives his title.

EA'RLINESS, [érliness] f. the being soon; or the priority or equality of any action compared to something else, opposed to later.

EA'RLESS, [érlless] a. without ears.

EARLS-COLNE, a village in Essex, four miles S. E. of Halstead.

EA'RLY, [érlly] a. [ær, Sax.] soon, in comparison with something else; as, in the morning, with respect to the sun rising; in time, with respect to creation, a period appointed, or the space of continuance; in the season, in comparison with other products.

EA'RLY, [érlly] ad. soon, betimes. In youth, or infancy, applied to age.

To EARN, [ern] v. a. [earnian, Sax.] to gain as the reward of wages or labour, or other performances; to deserve; to obtain.

EA'RNEST, [érne'st] a. ardent; warm, or importunate in any application; intent; fixed; eager,

EA'RNEST,

EA'RNEST, [érnest] f. [cornest, Sax.] seriousness; a serious affair, opposed to a jest; a reality, opposed to a fiction. Pledge; hansel; something given by way of security and obligation; a token or specimen of something future; money given in order to confirm or bind a bargain.

EA'RNESTLY, [érnestly] ad. with great importunity; warmly; affectionately; zealously; eagerly.

EA'RNESTNESS, [érnestness] f. eagerness; vehemence; warmth; solicitude; care.

EA'R-RING, [éar-ring] f. jewels worn in the ear; a ring worn in the ear.

EA'R-SHOT, [éar-shot] f. that space or distance within which any thing may be heard.

EARTH, [ertb] f. [corib, Sax.] in Natural Philosophy, one of the four peripatetic elements, a simple, dry, and cold substance, and an ingredient in the composition of all natural bodies. In Chemistry, the fourth of the chemical elements, supposed to be the basis or substratum of all bodies. In Natural History, a fossil or terrestrial matter, whereof our globe consists, which is neither dissoluble by fire, water, or air, is not transparent, and generally contains some degree of oil, or fatty substance. The terraqueous globe; this world, or present state of existence. The five genera of earths are, boles, clays, marls, oclars, and tripelas. Figuratively, the inhabitants of the earth.

To EARTH, [ertb] v. a. [cardian, Sax.] to hide under ground; to cover with earth. Neuterly, to go or hide itself under ground.

EARTH-BORN, [ertb-born] a. sprung from the earth. Figuratively, descended from mean parents.

EARTHEN, [éarpen] a. made of earth or clay.

EARTHLING, [éarbling] f. an inhabitant of the earth; a poor frail creature.

EARTHLY, [éartbly] a. belonging to the earth; this present state of existence; gross; opposed to spiritual; corporeal, opposed to mental.

EARTHQUAKE, [éartquake] f. a tremor or shaking of the earth, caused by the explosion of some subterraneous combustible matters.

EARTHY, [éartby] a. consisting, composed of, or inhabiting the earth. Gross, opposed to spiritual.

EA'R-WAX, [éar-wax] f. the excrementitious or viscous substance with which the ear is filled.

EA'RWIG, [éar-wig] f. [ear and wiga, Sax.] a heath-winged insect, of a long body, having several legs, a fork at its tail, and of a dirty black colour, in gardens very prejudicial to carnations and fruit-trees.

EASE, [éaze] f. [aife, Fr.] freedom from care or disturbance, applied to the mind. Freedom from pain, applied to the body. Rest, or cessation from labour, in order to recover from fatigue. An elegant negligence, applied to literary compositions. SYNON. We say a ready entrance, when no one stops the passage; an easy entrance, when the passage is large and commodious. For the same reason we say of a woman without reserve, that she is easy of access; and of a shoe that does not pinch, that it is easy.

To EASE, [éaze] v. a. to free from pain; to release from labour; to free from any thing which causes a disagreeable sensation either in the body or mind.

EA'SEFUL, [éazeiful] a. affording relaxation from toil or fatigue; alleviating, diminishing, or removing pain; fit for rest.

EA'SEL, [éazel] an instrument used by painters to fet their pictures on for the more ready performance of their work.

EA'SILY, [éazily] ad. without difficulty, labour, impediment or pain.

EA'SINESS, [éaziness] f. a relative term, implying that a person's abilities are sufficient, or more than sufficient, to accomplish any undertaking; to solve any point in learning, or to prosecute any design proposed; freedom from difficulty; the quality of being soon persuaded to do or believe; compliance without opposition; credulity without suspicion or examination; freedom from disturbance, or from any painful sensation.

EA'SINGWOLD, a town in the N. Riding of Yorkshire, whose market is on Friday. It is 210½ miles N. of London.

EAST, [éast] f. [east, Sax.] the quarter from whence the sun rises.

EA'STBOURN, a town of Suffex, seated near the sea; and is chiefly noted for the plenty of birds hereabout, called Wheatears. It is 64½ miles S. S. E. of London.

EA'ST-BRENT, a village in Somersetshire, 4 miles N. of Huntspil.

EA'ST-DEAN, a village in Suffex, five miles N. of Chichester.

EA'STER, [éifster] f. [eastre, Sax.] the time when Christians celebrate the resurrection of Christ from the grave. The word used to denote this season has no relation to this solemnity, but took its rise from Eaſtre, the name of the Saxon deity or goddess whose festival was celebrated about this time of the year; and after its abolishment by Christianity, the name was retained, and to this day used to signify the festival of Christ's resurrection, as mentioned above.

EA'STERN, [éifstern] a. situated, looking, or tending towards the east, or that point of the compass in which the sun rises.

EAST-GRI'NSTEAD, a town in Suffex, with a market on Thursdays. It is a borough, has a handsome church, and sends two members to parliament. The assizes for the county are sometimes held here. It is 29 miles S. of London.

EAST-HA'RLING, a town in Norfolk, whose market is on Tuesdays. It is 88 miles from London.

EAST-ILSLEY, a town in Berkshire, seated between two hills among fruitful corn-fields, fields, and excellent downs, for feeding sheep. This place is not contemptible; has a market every Wednesday in the summer, chiefly for sheep. It is 53½ miles W. of London.

EASTLOOE, a town of Cornwall, with a market on Saturdays. It is seated pretty commodiously on a creek of the sea, over which there is a large stone bridge, supported by many arches, which leads to Westlooe, standing between two hills. They are both corporations, and send members to parliament. The chief benefit which the inhabitants have is in their fishery. It is 23½ miles W. by S. of London.

EASTMEON, a village in Hampshire, five miles S. E. of Petersfield.

EASTWARD, [eastward] a. [eastward, Sax.] towards the east, or that point of the compass where the sun rises when in the equinoctial points.

EASY, [easy] a. to be performed without fatigue, incumbrance, or difficulty; free from disturbance or anxiety; believing without enquiry or opposition; credulous; complying; free from bodily pain; without formality; elegantly negligent.

To EAT, [eat] v. a. [preter ate or eat, participle eat, or eaten] [etan, Sax.] to devour or consume by the mouth. Figuratively, to corrode or destroy, applied to the action of some corrosive substance; to consume prodigally; to retract or unlay a thing when joined to word. Neuterly, to go to meals; to feed; to take food; to consume by corroding.

EATABLE, [etable] a. fit for food, or capable of being chewed and swallowed.

EATER, [eter] f. a person who chews and swallows any food; that which corrodes.

EATON, a town of Buckinghamshire, lying near Windsor. It is seated on the banks of the Thames, over which there is a handsome bridge between it and Windsor, and is famous for a school and college founded by Henry VI. King's college in Cambridge admits of no other students for fellows but what have been brought up here. It is 20 miles W. of London.

EAVES, [eaves] f. [efese, Sax.] the edges of a roof which hang over a house.

To EAVES-DROP, [eaves-drop] v. a. to catch what drops from the eaves of a house. Figuratively, to listen under the windows of a person's house, in order to discover secrets.

EAVES-DROPPER, [eaves-dropper] f. one who listens under a person's windows, in order to discover the secrets of a family.

EBB, f. [ebba, Sax.] the flowing back or retreat of water towards the sea; a shrinking of water in a river, by the turn of its tide. Figuratively, decay; decline; waste; a low condition.

To EBB, v. n. to flow back towards the sea. Figuratively, to decline; to decay; to waste.

E'BIONITES, f. a sect of heretics, who rose in the very beginning of the church; they are distinguished into two kinds; the one believed that Jesus Christ was born of a virgin, and all the other parts of the Christian religion, but added the Jewish ceremonies to it; and the others believed him to be born after the manner of other men, and denied his divinity.

E'BEN, E'BON, or E'BONY, f. [ebenum, Lat.] in Natural History, a kind of wood, brought from the Indies, of a black colour, exceedingly hard and heavy, susceptible of a very fine polish, and on that account used in Mosaic and inlaid works.

EBRIETY, f. [ebrietas, Lat.] intoxication occasioned by strong liquors; drunkenness.

EBRIOSITY, f. [ebriositas, Lat.] habitual drunkenness.

EBULLITION, f. [ebullitio, Lat.] the act of boiling with heat. Figuratively, an intestine motion of the particles of the body; the commotion, struggle, fermentation or effervescence occasioned by the mingling together any alkaline and acid liquor.

ECCE'NTRIC, or ECCE'NTRICAL, [ekfentrik, or ekfentrikal] a. [eccentricus, Lat.] departing or deviating from a center; not having the same center. Figuratively, not answering the same design; not answering the end intended. Irregular; not consistent with any rule, or established custom.

ECCE'NTRICITY, [ekfentrisity] f. the departing from, or the state of a thing with a different center from another; excursion from an employment, or proper sphere of action; an improper situation. In Astronomy, applied to the earth, the distance between the focus and the center of its elliptic orbit.

ECCHY'MOSIS, [eky'mosis] f. [ἐκχυμωσις, Gr.] in Surgery, extravasation of blood from a vein in the arm betwixt the flesh and skin.

E'CCLESHAL, a town in Staffordshire, whose market is on Fridays. It is 14½ miles N. N. W. of London.

ECCLESIASTES, f. a canonical book of the Old Testament, the design of which is to shew the vanity of sublunary things.

ECCLESIASTIC, or ECCLESIASTICAL, a. [ecclesiasticus, Lat.] relating or appropriated to the service of the church.

ECCLESIASTIC, f. a person devoted to the service of the church; a clergyman.

ECCEPROTICS, [ekoprotiki] f. [ἐκ πρότερον, Gr.] in Phytic, medicines which purge gently.

E'CHINATE, or E'CHINATED, [ekimate or ekinated] part. or a. [from echinus, Lat.] bristled like a hedge-hog; set with prickles.

ECHINUS, [ekinus] f. [Lat.] a hedge-hog; a shell-fish set with prickles. In Botany, the prickly head or cover of the seed or top of any plant. In Architecture, a member or ornament near the bottom of the Ionic and other capitals, next to the abacus, taking its name from the roughness of its carving, resembling the prickly rind of a chestnut, or the prickly coat of a hedge-hog; it is called ovolo by the Italians, and eggs and anchors by English workmen, because carved with anchors, darts, and ovals, or eggs.

E'CHO, [eko] f. [ἠχώ, Gr.] a sound re-verberated

verberated or reflected to the ear from some solid body. In Music, it is the repeating some parts of the strain in a very low or soft tone. By the Poets, Eccho is supposed to be a nymph, who pined into a sound.

To E'CHO, [ékō] v. n. to resound; to be sounded back a second time. Actively, to multiply a sound.

ECLAIRCI'SSEMENT, [éklaifsetzəmōng] f. [Fr.] the act of clearing up, or explaining any affair by word of mouth.

ÉCLA'IT, [ékliáw] f. [Fr.] splendor; lustre, or glory.

ECLE'CTIC, a. [éklekthikós, Gr.] selecting; or having a power of choosing or preferring.

ECLIPSE, f. [ékliψis, Gr.] in Astronomy, a darkening of one of the luminaries, by the interposition of some opaque body between it and the eye, or between it and the moon. The sun is eclipsed by the moon's intervening between the earth and the sun. An eclipse of the moon is when the atmosphere of the earth, being between the sun and moon, hinders the light of the sun from falling upon, and being reflected by, the moon: if the light of the sun is kept off from the whole body of the moon, it is a total eclipse; if from a part only, it is a partial one. A state of darkness, or want of knowledge, applied to the mind.

To ECLIPSE, v. a. to darken any luminary. Figuratively, to destroy any light; to drown a lesser light by superior splendour; to cloud; to obscure; to disgrace.

ECLIPTIC, f. [ékliptikós, Gr.] in Astronomy, is a great circle of the sphere, supposed to be drawn through the middle of the zodiac, making an angle with the equinoctial of about 23° 30', which is the sun's greatest declination; or, more strictly speaking, it is the path or way, among the fixed stars, that the earth appears to describe to an eye placed in the sun. Some call it the way of the sun; because the sun, in his apparent annual motion, never deviates from it, as all the other planets do, more or less. It is called ecliptic, by reason all eclipses happen when the planets are in or near its nodes. In Geography, it is a great circle on the terrestrial globe, not only answering to, but falling within, the plane of the celestial ecliptic.

E'CLOGUÉ, [éklogé] f. [éklogé, Gr.] a pastoral poem, whose scenes are confined to rural life, and whose personages are shepherds.

ECONOMY. See OECONOMY.

ECPHRA'TICS, [ékphráktiks] f. [ék and φράττω, Gr.] such medicines as open the vessels through which the humours are to pass, or which render tough humours thin, and thereby promote their discharge.

E'CASTASY, f. [ékcastis, Gr.] any sudden passion of the mind, by which the thoughts are for a time absorbed; excessive joy or rapture; enthusiasm.

E'CASTIED, a. enraptured; elevated; or absorbed.

ECSTA'TIC, or ECSTA'TICAL, a. en-raptured; or elevated to an ecstasy. Tending to external objects.

E'CTYPE, f. [ékτυπος, Gr.] a copy.

E'CURIS, [ékúris] f. [Fr.] a covered place wherein horses are housed.

To E'DDER, v. a. to bind or interweave a fence.

E'DDER, f. such fence wood as is commonly put upon the top of fences, and binds or interweaves each other.

E'DDY, f. [ed and ea, Sax.] water which is beat and returns back again to the place from whence it flowed. Figuratively, a whirlpool; a circular motion; a whirlwind.

E'DDY, a. whirling, moving in a circular manner. Eddy water, among Mariners, implies dead water.

EDE'MATOSE, a. [o'dhéma, Gr.] swelling; full of humours. See OEDEMATOUS.

E'DGAR, (son of Edmund) succeeded his brother in 959, when he was 16 years of age. His reign was one continued calm, without any wars or commotions, which was owing to his vast preparations both by sea and land, so that none dared to attack him, and, without striking a stroke, obliged the kings of Wales, Ireland, and the isle of Man, to acknowledge him for their sovereign; and it is said, that he was rowed down the river Dee by 8 kings his vassals, he himself sitting at the helm. There was another circumstance also which tended to keep things quiet during all Edgá's reign; and that was his being the greatest patron of the monks, who had it in their power to preserve peace. He recalled Dunstan, and made him archbishop of Canterbury. The secular priests were expelled the monasteries, and the regulars put in their room; these latter were also again put in possession of the ecclesiastical benefices, and the seculars ejected. He contrived a good expedient to clear the country of wolves, which were then very numerous, and made terrible havock among the flocks. Instead of the tributes of gold, silver, and cattle, paid him by the Welch, he ordered them, in 961, to bring him every year 300 wolves heads; and published, throughout England, a general pardon to all criminals, on condition they brought him, by such a time, a certain number of wolves tongues, in proportion to their several crimes; so that in 3 years time there was not one left. He also freed the nation from the worst kind of wolves, corrupt and unjust judges and magistrates. This king married Elfrida, the daughter of the earl of Devonshire; the story contains somewhat extraordinary. Edgar hearing that Ordgar earl of Devonshire had a daughter named Elfrida esteemed the greatest beauty in England, he was resolved to make her his wife, if she answered the description, and sent earl Ethelwold, his favourite, to bring him an account. Ethelwold, upon seeing the young lady, fell desperately in love with her himself, and privately married her. Upon his return he told the king there was nothing extraordinary in her, whereupon the king laid aside his design of marrying her. Ethelwold one day represented to the king, that, though Elfrida was not fit for a king, yet she was to great a fortune that it would be a vast advantage to a subject, and to get the king's leave to marry her; upon which his marriage was solemnized publicly. However, Edgar was informed of Ethelwold's treachery; upon this he was resolved to see her himself, and going into those parts where Ethelwold kept her, upon some pretence or other he told Ethelwold he desired to see his wife. Ethelwold was quite confounded at this, but he could not prevent it. As soon as the king saw her, he was quite enamoured with her beauty, and was resolved to be revenged on the perfidious earl. Soon after Ethelwold was found murdered in a wood. Edgar shortly after was married to Elfrida, by whom he left one son, Ethelred, who succeeded his brother Edward. Edgar died 975, in the 32d year of his age, having reigned about 16 years after Edwy's death: he was buried at Glastonbury. Edgar was a prince of a very mixed character, in which the vicious passions very often predominated. Though we grant him to have been a sound politician, an excellent legislator, and a monarch whose abilities were employed for the benefit of his country, we must own at the same time that he ascended the throne of Mercia by the most flagrant injustice; that he was superstitious in his religion, lawless in his passion, and bloody in his revenge; for, exclusive of the vengeance upon Ethelwold, he destroyed the whole isle of Thanet with fire and sword, because a few of the inhabitants had been concerned in plundering some merchants from York. He extended his liberality to men of learning and genius; his court was hospitable and magnificent, and generally filled with a concourse of foreigners, who were charmed with his elegance and politeness; and, from the tranquillity of his reign, he acquired the denomination of Edgar the Pacific.

EDGE, f. [coge, Sax.] the sharp side of any cutting instrument; a narrow part arising from one which is broader; the extremity, border, or outside of a thing; intenseness of desire; keenness; acrimony of temper. To set the teeth on edge, means to cause a tingling pain in the teeth.

To EDGE, v. a. to sharpen, or make an instrument cut better; to border or put something round the extremities of a thing; to exasperate; to excite; to put in such a position as to make way or give room: to advance beyond a line, or situation. Neuterly, to advance, or move forward against any obstacle, or body moving in an opposite direction; to go close upon a wind, and sail slow.

E'DGED, part. sharp, opposed to blunt.

E'DGING, f. something added by way of ornament; a narrow lace. In Gardening, rows of shrubs or plants, placed round the extremities of a bed, instead of borders.

E'DGELESS, a. not fit to cut with; blunt.

E'DGEWISE, ad. with the edge placed in a particular direction.

E'DGWORTH, or E'DGWARE, a town in Middlesex, with a market on Thursdays. It is 8 miles N. W. of London.

E'DIBLE, a. [edo, Lat.] fit to be eaten; fit for food.

E'DICT, f. [edictum, Lat.] in matters of civil policy, is an order or instrument signed and sealed by a prince, to serve as a law to his subjects.

EDIFICA'TION, [edificatio, Lat.] improvement; the act of advancing a person in religion.

E'DIFICE, f. [edificium, Lat.] a building or house, generally applied to signify some large or pompous building.

EDIF'ER, f. one who improves another by instruction.

To E'DIFY, v. a. [edifico, Lat.] to build; to improve by instruction; to instruct, or teach.

E'DILE, f. [edilis, Lat.] the title of an officer among the Romans, who resembled the city-marshal in London, or a surveyor.

E'DINBURGH, the capital of Scotland, where, for some ages before the Union, the kings of Scotland had their usual residence at Holyrood-house. It consists principally of one street, with lanes or wynds running from it; the ground rising gradually from Holyrood-house to the Canongate-head, which is the suburb, and from thence to the castle, which is the highest part of the city. The principal street, besides this, is called the Cowgate, and is on the S. side of the other: from this several lanes run up the hill, towards the university, and Herriot's hospital. From the castle to the palace is usually reckoned a Scotch mile in length, but in breadth the city is no where above half a mile. The houses are built of stone, and are, in the high-street, six or seven stories high, each story being a distinct house; and near the Parliament-clofe they are 14 stories high, or upwards; but then they are built on the side of a hill, and on the other side they are of the common height. It has a lake on the N. side, and every where else is surrounded by a strong wall. The castle is very strong both by nature and art, and was kept by the king's forces in the last rebellion, though the city itself was taken. The harbour of this city is at Leith, a pretty large town, to which there is a fine walk from Edinburgh. It is seated in the most plentiful part of this kingdom; and water is conveyed to it, by leaden pipes, from excellent springs. The other remarkable buildings are, the parliament house, with a large court called the Parliament-clofe, in the middle of which is the statue of king Charles II. On the W. side of it is the council-house, and to the S. the sessions-house, where the supreme courts of judicature are held. The high-church, which was the cathedral, is now divided into four, which, with the rest, and the chapel in the castle, make twelve in all. Herriot's-hospital is a stately structure, designed for the education of 140 boys. The college is on the S. side, which has large precincts, inclosed with high walls, and divided into three courts; the public schools are large and commodious; and here are houses for the professors. It was built by king James VI. and has a very good library. The common burying-place of the city is Gray-Friars-church-yard, where there are abundance of fine monuments. The castle is seated at the W. end, and is inaccessible, except on the side next the city. The palace called Holy-rood-house was formerly an abbey, and is a handsome, convenient structure. This city is governed by a Lord-Provost, four bailiffs, and a common-council. It sends two members to parliament, one for the city, and another for the shire. It is 37 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles N. N. W. of London. Lon. 3. 2. W. lat. 55. 57. N.

EDITION, f. [editio, Lat.] the publication or impression of a book.

E'DITOR, f. one who prepares a manuscript for the press, and corrects the errors of the proof-sheet while it is printing.

EDMUND I. the eldest of Edward the Elder's legitimate sons, was about 18 years of age when he came to the crown of England. No sooner had Edmund began his reign, but the restless Dane prepared for a revolt; and Anlaff, who had fled to Ireland after his late defeat, returned: being furnished with troops from Olaus, king of Norway, he recovered Northumberland, and marched into Mercia; and by the assistance of his countrymen got possession of several places which Edw. had taken from them. K. Edmund marched towards the north, and engaged Anlaff near Chester, and was preparing to renew the fight next day; but the archbishops of Canterbury and York, who were in the two armies, obtained a treaty to be concluded by break of day, by which Edmund yielded up to the Dane all the country north of Watling-street. K. Edmund did not like this treaty, but was forced by the nobles to comply with it. Some time after, Anlaff and Reginald, who had likewise been elected kings, the Mercians, Danes, and the king of Cumberland, with one consent, took up arms, in order to shake off the English yoke. As soon as Edmund had intelligence of these proceedings, he marched into Mercia, and took some towns, and put the Danes into such consternation, that the two kings fled out of the island. The Danes upon this threw down their arms, and swore allegiance to Edmund. Then he subdued Cumberland, and gave it to the king of Scotland to fix him in his interest; but reserved the sovereignty of it to himself, and obliged the Scotch king to do him homage for it. Edmund did not long enjoy the fruit of his victories: as he was celebrating the festival of the conversion of the Saxons, at Pucklekirk, in Gloucestershire, one Leolf, a notorious robber, who had been banished for his crimes, impudently came and seated himself in the hall where the king was at dinner. Edmund, provoked at his insolence, ordered him to be seized; but observing he was drawing his dagger to defend himself, the king started up in a great rage, and taking hold of him by the hair, dragged him out of the hall; and whilst he was wholly engaged in venting his passion, the infamous Leolf stabbed him to the heart with a dagger, so that he fell dead on the spot, in the 8th year of his reign, A. D. 948, leaving behind him two sons, Edwy and Edgar, by Elgiva his wife. Some of this king's laws are still in being, which shew how much he regarded the good of his subjects. Among the rest he ordered, that in gangs of robbers the oldest of them should be hanged; which was the first law in England that punished robbery with death, the punishment before being only pecuniary. Though Edmund reigned but about eight years, yet in that short period, he exhibited specimens of extraordinary courage, ability, and regard for the welfare of his subjects.

EDMUND, surnamed Ironside, succeeded Ethelred II. in 1016. Upon his father's death, the city of London, all the lords that were there, proclaimed him king of England, whilst the Danes, and all the places in their possession, declared for Canute; but a great many of the English who were among them came over to Edmund. Canute's first attempt was upon London, as being Edmund's chief support, which he besieged three times, but without success. Before the last of these sieges a great battle was fought, in which both kings eminently displayed their courage and conduct, and the two armies parted at last with equal loss on both sides; though the English were in danger of being worsted, by a stratagem of the false Edric, who was now on the side of the Danes: he cut off the head of a soldier who resembled Edmund, held it upon the top of his lance, in sight of the English, and cried, "Fly, fly, you scoundrels; behold the head of your king in whom you trust!" This would infallibly have occasioned their defeat, if Edmund had not shewed himself with his helmet off, and so revived the courage of his soldiers, which by Edric's artifice began to droop. The battle lasted till night, and Edmund prepared to renew it the next morning; but Canute marched off in the night, and went and besieged London a third time. Five pitched battles were fought with various success; in the last, Edric, who had reconciled himself to Edmund, went over to the Danes with the body of forces he commanded, which put the English into such a consternation, that they threw down their arms and fled. Nevertheless, Edmund drew together a very powerful army, and marched towards Gloucester, in quest of the enemy; Canute advanced towards him, in order to give him battle. The two kings stood in view of each other, at the head of their respective armies. At last Edmund proposed to Canute, that, in order to prevent the effusion of blood, they two should decide the quarrel by single combat. The circumstances relating to this affair are very uncertain. However, the result was, that a peace

